God adorned (zayyana) the heavens with the twelve signs of the zodiac, and they are the Ram, the Bull, the Twins, the Crab, the Lion, the Ears of Corn (Virgo), the Scales, the Scorpion, the Archer, the Sea Goat, the Water Bearer, and the Fish. He adorned the hearts of the believers with twelve characteristics: the mind, attention, explanation, intelligence, knowledge, certainty, understanding, insight, the life of the heart, hope, fear and life. As long as these signs of the zodiac exist the world will be in order and abundance. Similarly, as long as these characteristics exist in the heart of the Gnostic (‘ārīf), there will be the light of the gnostic and the sweetness of worship.⁶¹

Al-Wasītī shows how the microcosm, man, is illuminated directly by God.

God created the spirits (arwāḥ) before the bodies (ajsād). He illuminated them by His attributes (ṣifāt) and addressed them by means of His essence (dhāt), so they are illuminated and receive light by means of the light of His sanctity (qudus). He told of it in His words God is the light of the heavens and the earth because He is the illuminator (munawwir) of the spirits (arwāḥ) by the perfection of His light.⁶²

The interrelationship between the corporeal (jismānī) and the spiritual (rūḥānī) forms the basis of the cosmology and hermeneutical theory that al-Ghazālī develops in his Mishkāt al-anwār. As discussed in Part I of this work, the theory states that what exists in one world serves as a similitude for what exists in the other and that the similitudes of the Qur’ān can be understood by understanding the relationship between these two worlds. Al-Ghazālī gives many examples of this, one of the most significant being that of man. Man was created “in the form of the Merciful,” an allusion to a ḥadīth which al-Ghazālī understands as referring to man as a microcosm of the universe.

God showed beneficence to Adam. He gave him an abridged form (ṣūrat mukhtaṣar) that brings together every sort of things found in the cosmos. It is as if Adam is everything in the cosmos, or an abridged transcription (muskha mukhtaṣar) of the world.⁶³

The Mishkāt al-anwār is divided into three parts. The first part is the discussion of the mystery of understanding God is the light of the heavens and the earth. The second part describes the two elements necessary for this understanding.

One of them is the hermeneutical theory of using similitudes which we have already discussed. The other is the structure of man himself and the relationship between the corporeal and spiritual worlds within him. This is described, according to al-Ghazālī, in the similitude of the elements of the niche, which represent the layers (ṭabaqāt) of the spirits (arwāḥ) of the human clay (al-ṭīn al-bashariyya) and the degrees (marātib) of their lights.⁶⁴ Unlike most Šūfī commentators, Al-Ghazālī is careful to link his interpretation to salafī interpretations, in this case those of Ibn Mas'ūd, whom he quotes as saying, “the similitude of his/His light in the heart of the believers is like a niche,” and Ubayy b. Ka'b, whom he quotes as saying, “the similitude of a light in the heart of one who has faith.”⁶⁵

According to al-Ghazālī, the first of the “luminous human spirits” (al-arwāḥ al-bashariyya al-nūrāniyya) is the sensory spirit (al-rūḥ al-ḥassās) which is found in animals and infants. It is like the niche because its lights come out of the different openings of the body such as the two eyes, ears, and nostrils, etc. The second is the imaginal spirit (al-rūḥ al-khayālī) which is capable of remembering and is found in older children, adults, and some animals. It is like glass, a dense substance which can be purified to channel light. The third is the rational spirit (al-rūḥ al-'aqlī) which comprehends meanings outside of the senses and imagination and is found only in human beings. It is like the lamp. The fourth is the reflective spirit (al-rūḥ al-fikrī) which combines part of the rational knowledge to derive a higher form of knowledge. It is like the tree because it begins from this root and then branches out. The fifth is the sanctified prophetic spirit (al-rūḥ al-qudsī al-nabawī) which belongs only to the prophets and some friends of God (awliyā') and is beyond the intellect ('aql). It is the oil which would well-nigh shine even if no fire touched it because there are those among the friends of God who could almost do without the help of the prophets, and there are prophets who could almost do without the help of the angels.⁶⁶

The third part of the Mishkāṭ al-anwār applies al-Ghazālī's understanding of the Light Verse to classify different types of people, by means of an interpretation of the ḥadīth “God has seventy veils of light and darkness. If He were to unveil them, the glories of His face would burn up everyone whose eyes perceived Him.” The third part synthesizes the points made in the first two parts by demonstrating how the perceptions of the lower spirits of man lead to faulty conclusions regarding the nature of God. Al-Ghazālī defines three kinds of people who are veiled from the truth in various ways.

To summarize his categories briefly, the first type are atheists (mulḥida) veiled by darkness; they include materialists and egotists, the latter being further subdivided into hedonists, predators, materialistic people, and status seekers.

The second type are those people who are veiled by light and darkness. Their veils correspond to the levels of the spirit that al-Ghazālī has described as the elements of the niche. Some of them are veiled by sensory darkness, meaning that they can only understand God as an object perceived by the senses. The objects which they perceive as divinities range from precious substances such as gold or silver, to beautiful human beings, to fire, the stars or the sun, or unlimited light.

More advanced than those are individuals veiled by imaginal darkness, who can only understand God as an imagined being sitting on a throne, having a body, existing in a certain place, etc. Finally, there are those who are veiled by the darkness of faulty rational comparisons who can only understand God in relation to their own attributes.⁶⁷

The third type are those veiled by lights.⁶⁸ Among these are those who understand that God's attributes cannot be compared to those of humans. More advanced would be those who recognize God as the Mover (muḥarrrik) of the furthest celestial sphere which envelops the lower celestial spheres moved by angels. Most advanced are those who recognize that the "Mover" must still only be an angel obeying the Lord who "is a mover of everything by means of command ('amr'), not direct contact."⁶⁹ Those who have arrived (wāṣilūn) have found God to be beyond any of these descriptions. Like Ibrāhīm, they recognize that all their previous understandings of God are faulty.

Therefore, they have turned their faces from the one who moves the heavens, from the one who moves the furthest celestial body, from the one who commands moving them, to Him who originates the heavens, originates the furthest celestial body, and originates the one who commands moving the heavens. They have arrived at an existent thing that is incomparable with everything that their sight had perceived. Hence, the august glories of His face – the First, the Highest – burn up everything perceived by the sights and insights of the observers. Thus, they find Him too holy for and incomparable with all that we described earlier.⁷⁰

Some who reach this stage remain as perceivers and yet what they perceive completely disappears. Others, the elect of the elect (khawāṣṣ al-khawāṣṣ), cease to observe themselves as well; in other words, the perceiver himself disappears, as in Everything is being annihilated except His face (28:88).⁷¹ This self-disclosure of God (tajallī) occurs in stages for some, as was the case with Ibrāhīm, and for others all at once, as was the case with Muḥammad.⁷²

Al-Ghazālī's interpretation of the niche was clearly influenced by Ibn Sīnā's interpretation in Al-Ishārāt wa 'l-tanbīhāt,⁷³ but while the similarities between the two interpretations are undeniable, al-Ghazālī makes significant modifications. While the five elements described in Ibn Sīnā's version are all parts of the intellect ('aql) which only man possesses, al-Ghazālī's version calls the faculties "spirit" (rūḥ) which opens up the metaphor to include all types of perception, even those shared with animals.⁷⁴ This change enables al-Ghazālī to classify faulty notions of God based on whether the possessor of those beliefs is bound by the limitations of animal or human perceptions.

Al-Kāshānī's interpretation of the Light Verse suggests a familiarity with the interpretations of both al-Ghazālī and Ibn Sīnā. He explains the elements of the niche as the integrated physical and spiritual elements of man which combine to enable him to achieve perfection. The niche represents the dark body (jasad) which is illuminated by the lamp of the spirit (rūḥ). The glass represents the heart which is both illuminated by the spirit and illuminates things other than itself.

The glass is likened to a glittering star because of its openness, its extreme luminosity, its high position, and the plenitude of its rays, as this is the state (ḥāl) of the heart (qalb).⁷⁵

The glass of the heart is lit from a blessed olive tree which is the sanctified soul (al-naḥs al-quḍsiyya) whose faculties grow up out of the earth of the body through the space of the heart to the heaven of the spirit. Its fruits are morals, works, and perceptions. Every kind of mystic knowledge and states are dependent upon it. It is neither of the east nor the west because “the soul is more subtle and luminous than the body and more dense than the spirit.” Its oil is preparedness (isti'dād) which would well-nigh shine even if no fire, the Active Intelligence (al-'aql al-fa'āl) touched it.⁷⁶

Al-Nisābūrī's commentary on the niche is interesting in that it gives two different levels of interpretation, one of which corresponds to the “world of horizons” and the other of which corresponds to the “world of souls.”⁷⁷ The first interpretation refers to the macrocosm, the Cosmos.

The niche is the world of bodies (aḥsām). The glass is the Throne, the lamp is the Footstool, and the tree is the Tree of the Kingdom (malakūt) which is the inward part (bāṭin) of the world of bodies. It rises neither to the east of eternity and timelessness nor to the west of annihilation (fanā) and nonexistence. Rather it is created for the everlastingness in which annihilation never occurs.

Whose oil, which is the world of spirits (arwāḥ), would well-nigh shine, i.e., become manifest from nonexistence into the world of engendered form ('ālam al-ṣūrat al-mutawallida) by means of the pairing (iztidwāj) of the world of the unseen with [the world] of witnessing even if no fire, the fire of the divine power, touched it and that is because of the nearness of its character to existence.

Light upon light. The first is the light of the merciful attribute and the second is the light of the Throne, as in His saying, The Merciful sat upon the throne (20:5). His words, God guides whom He wills to his/His light is an allusion (ishāra) to the fact that the emanation (ḥayḍ) of the light of mercifulness is divided amongst everything which God wills to bring into existence from the Throne to that which is under the earth.⁷⁸

The second interpretation refers to the microcosm, man. Like his predecessors, al-Nisābūrī understands the different elements of the niche as referring to the various faculties of man which must be developed in order to achieve perfection, a state in which man realizes the nature of the mysterious relationship between God and man. While a significant portion of the Mishkāṭ al-anwār is devoted to the explanation of this concept, al-Nīsābūrī merely alludes to it through the famous ḥadīth of supererogatory acts, a ḥadīth understood by Ṣūfīs as referring to the states of annihilation (fanāʾ) and subsistence (baqāʾ).⁷⁹

The niche is the body, the glass is the heart, the lamp is the innermost heart (sirr), and the tree is the tree of spirituality (al-rūḥāniyya) which has been created for subsistence (baqāʾ) as has been described.⁸⁰ The oil is the human spirit (al-rūḥ al-insāniyya) which is profoundly receptive to the light of gnosis (ʿirfān) and the fire is the fire of God's self-disclosure (tajallī) and guidance in eternity. When it is combined with the light of the intellect (ʿaql) it becomes light upon light. When the lamp of the innermost heart (sirr) of whom He wills becomes illuminated by the light of timelessness, the glass of the heart and the niche of the body become illuminated. Their rays emerge from the aperture of the physical senses (ḥawāss) and the earth of humanity (al-bashariyya) is illuminated, just as He said, the earth will shine with the light of its Lord (39:69). This is the station (maqām) of the ḥadīth, "I am his hearing, his seeing..."⁸¹

Al-Nīsābūrī's interpretation seems to suggest that, having experienced annihilation (fanāʾ) and subsistence (baqāʾ), the perfected man is both illuminated by the light he receives through the fire of God's self-disclosure (tajallī) and in turn illuminates others by this light which emerges from the "aperture of the physical senses (ḥawāss)."

In the interpretations of Ibn Sīnā, al-Ghazālī, al-Kāshānī and al-Nīsābūrī, each and every element of the Qur'ānic verse is explained by a single term. The similarities and differences in the resulting interpretations can be seen in Table 9.1. Another approach seen in Ṣūfī interpretations of the Light Verse has more in common with that of the interpretation of Ja'far al-Šādiq previously quoted. Here, the words open up to larger meanings rather than one-to-one correspondences and often refer to states in the believer. The believer is both created from light and engaged in an ongoing process of receiving light. To reach the higher states of light upon light the believer must be determined in his resolve to avoid man's natural tendency towards laziness, to allow himself to respond to the different states through which he travels, using the tension within and between them to motivate himself to continue in his exertions. This is how the phrase neither of the east nor the west was understood by Ja'far al-Šādiq:

Neither the fear which imposes despair nor the hope which brings about delight. One should stand between fear and hope.⁸²

Al-Qushayrī writes,

The allusion (ishāra) in it is to the fact that the fear in their hearts should not be separate from the hope so that one would come close to despair. Neither should their hope be separate from fear so that one would come close to complacency. Rather the two should be balanced so that one

Table 9.1 A comparison of interpretations of the elements of the niche in the Light Verse (Qurʾān 24:35)

	Ibn Sīnā	Al-Ghazālī	Al-Kāshānī	Al-Nisābūrī
				Macrocosm	Microcosm
niche	material intellect (ʿaql ḥayālīyya)	sensory spirit (rūḥ ḥassās)	Body (jasad)	world of bodies (aḡsām)	Body (jasad)
glass	habitual intellect (ʿaql biʾl-malakā)	imaginal spirit (rūḥ khayālī)	heart (qalb)	the throne	heart (qalb)
lamp	actual intellect (ʿaql biʾl-fiʾl)	rational spirit (rūḥ ʿaqlī)	Spirit (rūḥ)	the footstool	innermost heart (sirr)
tree	Contemplation (fikra)	reflective spirit (rūḥ fikrī)	holy soul (naḡs qudsīyya)	the tree of the kingdom (malakūt)	the tree of spirituality (rūḥāniyya)
oil	Conjecture (ḥads)	holy spirit (rūḥ qudsī)	Preparedness (istʾidād)	world of spirits (arwāḥ)	human spirit (rūḥ insāniyya)
fire	Active Intellect (ʿaql faʿʿāl)	(not specified)	Active Intellect (ʿaql faʿʿāl)	divine power (qudra ilāhiyya)	God's self-disclosure (tajallī)

does not prevail over the other. Their awe (hayba) should come together with their intimacy (uns), their contracted state (qabḍ) with their expanded state (bast), their consciousness (ṣaḥw) with their effacement (maḥw), their subsistence (baqā') with their annihilation (fanā'), their performance of the courtesies (ādāb) of the religious law with their realization of the all-comprehensive reality (jawām'ī'l-haqīqa).⁸³

The believer's states are part of a dynamic process which combines both the believer's efforts and God's grace. Light upon light appears to him in his different states until he reaches a stage where words can no longer describe what has been unveiled to him. Al-Qushayrī is usually thought of as a moderate Ṣūfī, but what he describes at the end of this passage appears to hint at something like the concept of the unity of God as interpreted in al-Ghazālī's Mishkāt al-anwār.

It is said that the effect of the light of the heart is the continuance of a state of agitation which does not allow one to remain lazy. One comes to his journey by the use of his reflection (fikr) and God nourishes him by the light of the success He grants until none of the obstacles to spiritual effort (ijtihād) can hold him back, neither love of leadership, nor the inclination to evil, nor indulgence. When the truth of one's forgetfulness is disclosed and vision takes hold of his situation, knowledge will be most certainly obtained. Then he will continue to increase in certainty (yaqīn) upon certainty based on what he sees in the interaction of contraction (qabḍ) and expansion (bast). The reward and compensation is in the increase of unveiling (kashf) upon the increase in effort and the obtainment of ecstasy (wajḍ) when performing the litany (wird).

Then after it there is the light of interaction (mu'āmala), then the light of the mutual waystation (munāzala), and the broad daylight of the connection (muwāṣala). The suns of the declaration of unity (tawḥīd) shine and there are no clouds in the sky of their secrets and no fog in its air. God said, light upon light, God guides whom He wills to His light.

It is said that the light of appeal (muṭālaba) appears in the heart and prompts its owner to settle his account. When he has seen his record and his prior disobedience, the light of examination (mu'āyana) comes to him and he reverts to blaming himself and drinks cups of remorse. Then he rises up from this by persistence in his goal and purification from what remained with him from the times of his lassitude. When he has become upright in that which was revealed by the light of observation (murāqaba), then he knows that God watches over him. After this is the light of beholding (muhāḍara) which are flashes (lawā'ih) that appear in the innermost hearts (sarā'ir). Then after that is the light of unveiling (mukāshafa) and that is by means of the self-disclosure (tajallī) of the attributes (ṣifāt). Then after it is the light of witnessing (mushāhada) and his night becomes day, his stars moons, and his moons full moons, and his full moons suns.

Then after this are the lights of the declaration of oneness (tawhīd) and at the same time disengagement (tajrīd) is realized by the qualities of single-mindedness (tafrīd). Then no expression (ibāra) can encompass it and no allusion (ishāra) can comprehend it. Explanations at that point become silent, evidence is effaced and the witnessing of another is absurd. This is the point when the sun will be wrapped up, when the stars will become dull, when the mountains will be set moving, and when the pregnant camels will be neglected (81:4) and when the heavens will be split asunder (84:1) and split open (82:1). All of these are different parts of the universe and that which was from nonexistence in them will end up in nonexistence. That which subsists through them is other than them and that which exists through them is other than them. Unity (aḥadiyya) is exalted, everlastingness is sublime, perpetuity (daymūmiyya) is sanctified, and the divinity is unblemished.⁸⁴

Al-Qushayrī breaks through the common understanding of the metaphor of light here by focusing on its qualities of energy and movement. Rather than accepting the simple equivalence of light as guidance, he gives us the unusual image of light as something agitating to the heart. What al-Qushayrī is talking about becomes less clear as he moves from the heart to the innermost secret (sirr, pl. sarā'ir) and he gives up on language entirely when it comes to the state of annihilation.

Al-Maybudī's commentary also recalls the interpretation of Ja'far al-Šādiq, in his comments on the lights of Muḥammad and the believer.

Know that the inner lights are different in their respective degrees. The first is the light of submission (islām) and with the submission is the light of sincerity. Another light is faith (imān) and with faith is the light of truthfulness. Another light is doing beautiful acts (iḥsān) and with doing beautiful acts is the light of certainty. The splendor of submission is in the light of sincerity and the splendor of faith is in the light of truthfulness and the splendor of doing beautiful acts is in the light of certainty. These are waystations (manāzil) on the path of the religious law and stations (maqāmāt) of the general believers. There is another light and state (ḥāl) as well for the people of truth (ahl al-ḥaqīqat) and the brave youths (javān-mardān) of the way, the light of perspicacity (firāsāt) and with perspicacity is the light of unveiling (mukāshifat). There is also the light of uprightness and the light of witnessing (mushāhadat). There is also the light of declaring God's unity (tawhīd) and with declaring God's unity there is the light of nearness (qurbat) in the presence of "withness" (indiyyat).

Until the servant has been in these stations, he will be captive to his own way. From here the allurement of God (ḥaqq) begins again, a divine attraction (jadhba) which unites and connects the lights, the light of grandeur, the light of majesty, the light of subtlety, the light of beauty, the light of awe, the light of jealousy, the light of nearness, the light of divinity, and the light of he-ness (huwiyyat). These are those of which the Lord of the Worlds said, light upon light.

The situation reaches the point where servanthood (‘ubūdiyyat) becomes invisible in the light of lordship (rubūdiyyat). In all the world these lights have only reached perfection and nearness to the possessor of majesty in the Arab Muṣṭafā. Everyone has a part of these but he has the whole because he is entirely perfect, the totality of beauty and the qibla of virtues.⁸⁵

The similitude of his light. One group of commentators has said that the pronoun “his” refers to Muṣṭafā, since his character was light, his robe of honor light, his lineage light, his birth light, his witnessing light, his interactions light, and his miracle light. He himself was in his own essence light upon light. His superiority was such that in his face was the light of mercy, in his eyes the light of admonition, in his speech the light of wisdom, in the space between his shoulders the light of prophecy, in his palms the light of munificence, in his feet the light of service, in his hair the light of beauty, in his disposition the light of humility, in his breast the light of contentment, in his secret the light of purity, in his essence the light of obedience, in his obedience the light of declaring the unity of God (tawḥīd), in his declaring the unity of God the light of realization (tahqīq), in his realization the light of God’s good fortune (tawfīq), in his silence the light of exaltation, in his exaltation the light of declaring surrender (taslīm). A poem:

A sword of Indian steel drawn from amongst the swords of God.⁸⁶

Al-Maybudī combines this style of interpretation with the relating of aḥādīth and traditions from the Companions and the Followers of the Prophet which illustrate the light possessed by believers. More so than any of the other commentators studied here, al-Maybudī uses and develops the literary quality of this material. The first ḥadīth he cites is an appealing anecdote from the Prophet concerning the superior light of those believers who have suffered the most.

It is related that Abū Sa‘īd al-Khudrī⁸⁷ said: I was among a group of poor emigrants, some of whom were veiling others from their nakedness. We were listening to the recitation of the Qur’ān. The Prophet came up and stood over us. The reciter saw him and became silent. He greeted him, saying, “What are you doing?” We said, “O Messenger of God, the reciter is reciting to us and we are listening to his recitation.” The Messenger of God said, “Praise be to God who has made those in my community towards whom I have been commanded to make myself patient.” Then he sat down amidst us in order to occupy himself with us . . . The faces [of the poor emigrants] became illuminated . . . The Prophet said, “Rejoice you who have nothing! You will enter the garden in perfect light before the wealthy believers by half of a day whose reckoning will be five hundred years.”⁸⁸

The next ḥadīth which al-Maybudī cites is, “God created His creation in darkness, then cast some of His light upon them.”⁸⁹ Al-Maybudī expands the imagery of the ḥadīth and links the primordial event it describes to the possibility of states in the believer in this world.

The similitude of this light is such that Muṣṭafā has said, “God created the creation in darkness then sprinkled upon them some of His light.” Mankind was a handful of dust remaining in their own darkness, a darkness whose quality had become bewilderment, remaining unaware in the veil of creation. Everything in the pre-eternal heavens received the rain of the lights of eternity. The dust became narcissus, the stone became the jewel, the color of the heavens and the earth followed in each other's footsteps. It is said that the quality of “dustness” is everything which is darkness but a quality is everything which should be bright and pure. A subtle substance (laṭīfa) became joined to that quality, and the expression for that subtle substance is found in “He sprinkled upon them some of His light.” They asked, “O Messenger of God, what are the signs of this light?”⁹⁰ He said, When the light is made to enter the heart, the breast expands.” When the standard of the just sultan enters the city, no seat remains for the crowd. When the breast becomes open with the divine light, the aspiration (himma) becomes high, the sad becomes tranquil, and the enemy the friend. Dispersion becomes union (jam') in the heart, the carpet of subsistence (baqā') is spread out while the mat of annihilation (fanā') is rolled up, and the cloister of the anxiety is bolted while the garden of union (wiṣāl) is opened.⁹¹

Al-Maybudī's last illustration is a long story which he says is taken from the traditions concerning an unnamed scholar among the Followers of the Prophet. The scholar had been captured while participating in one of the military campaigns against the Roman army and remained among the Romans for some time. One day he was present with some 30,000 Romans who had gathered in the desert to hear a bishop who came out of his monastery once every four years to give advice to the people. The bishop ascended the pulpit but stood there without speaking. Finally he told his audience that he was unable to speak to them because of the Muslim amongst them. The people did not know who this was and the Muslim was afraid to identify himself, but the bishop was able to find him by looking closely into the faces of the people. He asked him to come and speak with him.

[The narrator of this tale said]: He said to me, “You are a Muslim?”

I said, “Yes, I am a Muslim.”

He said, “Are you among those who are knowledgeable or ignorant?”

I said, “Regarding that which I know I am knowledgeable and that which I do not know I am a student. I am not one of the ignorant.”

He said, "I have three questions I would like to ask you and have you answer."

I said, "I will give you the answers on the condition that you tell me how you recognized me and on the condition that I may ask you three questions." The two made a pact and a promise.

[The narrator continued.] Then the bishop put his mouth to my ear and softly whispered in a voice hidden from the Romans, "I knew you by the light of your faith. I recognized the light of faith and unity in you which shone from your face." Then in a loud voice he questioned me. "Your messenger has said to you that Paradise is a tree of which every lofty chamber is a branch. What is the similitude of that in the world?"

I said, "The similitude of that tree in the world is the sun, with an orb every ray of which is a branch."

The bishop said, "You have spoken truly." He asked the second question: "Your messenger said that the people of Paradise consume food and drink but no defilement comes out of them. What is the similitude of that in the world?"

I said, "The embryo in the womb of its mother who eats but does not defecate."

The bishop said, "You have spoken truly." He asked the third question. "The messenger of God said that on the Day of Resurrection every morsel, atom and grain of alms will be like a great mountain on the Scales. What is the similitude of that in the world?"

I said, "When the sun rises at daybreak or sets in the evening it causes the ruins of a house which is in reality short to appear tall."

The bishop said, "You have spoken truly."

Then the Muslim asked him, "What is the number of the doors of the Gardens?"

He said, "Eight."

He said, "What are the numbers of the doors of Hell?"

He said, "Seven."

He said, "What is it that is written on the door of the Garden?"

The Muslim said that when he asked this of him, the bishop was unable to give an answer. The Romans called out to him to give an answer so that this stranger would not say that the bishop did not know. The bishop said, "If this answer is forced, it will not bode well for the belt (zunnār)⁹² and the cross." He tore open his belt and threw down his cross and said in a loud voice, "It is written on the door of the Garden that there is no God but God and Muḥammad is the messenger of God!"⁹³

When the Romans heard this they began to throw rocks and insults at the bishop. The bishop wept and called out to tell the people that 700 angels were coming to carry 700 martyrs to their deaths, and it did come to pass that 700 Romans joined the bishop that day in becoming Muslims and were killed by their fellow Romans. Al-Maybudī tells us that the point of this tale is that the light of one believer who declared the unity of God shone amongst the handful of fighters and infidels so that the bishop saw and did what he did.⁹⁴

In this story the inner light of the believer is not merely a metaphor for faith, but a perceptible light which can be seen, at least by some.

What unites the very different styles of the Ṣūfī commentaries cited here is the way in which they avoid using the word “light” in this Qur’ānic verse as a simple metaphor for “guidance” or something similar. The issue, as Izutsu explains in an article on metaphorical thinking in Iranian Ṣūfism, has to do with the relationship between language and one’s understanding of reality. Aristotle defines metaphor in his Poetics as a linguistic sign functioning in a dual role by pointing simultaneously to a literal or conventional meaning and to another figurative meaning or non-conventional. Izutsu suggests that this is a problematic definition for Ṣūfīs because, for them, what would ordinarily be the figurative meaning is, in fact, the more literal or “real” meaning and correspondingly, the conventional meaning is the more figurative. He is not saying that Ṣūfīs never use metaphors in the Aristotelian sense of the term, but he distinguishes these from what he calls “archetypal metaphors” like light and darkness. Archetypal metaphors are not artificially or artistically created but rather are the result of mystic experience. When the mystic experiences spiritual light, he is not perceiving something similar to light, but rather sees a light far more powerful and “real” than physical light. The mystic does not choose a metaphor to describe his visionary experience; the metaphor or symbol does not point to something other than itself but rather is an indicator of its own self and the mystic has merely perceived this reality. Seen from the outside, the mystic’s description of this reality appears to be a metaphor, but this is only because the observer has not grasped the true nature of things.⁹⁵

The use of the word “light” in the manner described by Izutsu does seem to occur in many of the Ṣūfī interpretations cited here. However, the interpretations are best characterized as expressing more than one type of language use, by both an acceptance and elaboration of the meaning of “light” as “guidance” and a description of another, more literal, meaning similar to the Prophet’s statement, “I see a light.” The acceptance of interpretations based on this literal understanding of “light” will depend on the reader’s acceptance or rejection of subjective mystical experience.

CONCLUSION

Although the styles of the Şūfī commentaries studied here are quite different, there is a shared hermeneutical base of assumptions concerning the nature of the Qur’ānic text, the way in which knowledge of its meanings is acquired, and the nature of the self who seeks understanding. The first of these assumptions is that the Qur’ān is a multi-layered and ambiguous text open to endless interpretation, a concept most frequently illustrated by the metaphor of the ocean and its treasures. However, this insistence upon the infinite possibilities of the text is not considered license justifying the production of any and all interpretations. The fact that the ocean can be a dangerous place corresponds, in this metaphor, to the dangers that Şūfīs identify in attempting to understand God’s words. Al-Ghazālī, as we have seen, suggests that those who are not good swimmers should not even try. Al-Simnānī’s use of the ḥadīth prohibiting interpretation by mere personal opinion (ra’y) locates the possibility for error at each level of interpretation.

The problem that open-ended interpretation presents is seen as both spiritual and political by Şūfīs in that it comprises both a fundamental danger to one’s eternal soul and a more immediate danger in this world from other Muslims who consider Şūfī interpretations as a distortion of the true meanings of the Qur’ānic text. Al-Ghazālī’s defense of Şūfī interpretation in his Fayṣal al-tafrīq is an attempt to protect Şūfīs from the serious legal reprisals connected to the charge of disbelief (taḳfīr). The weaknesses of his arguments in this book result from the fact that he attempts to rebut his opponents on their own terms rather than questioning their basic assumptions. His strongest argument, found in the Iḥyā’ ‘ulūm al-dīn, is the simplest, namely that restricting the meaning of the Qur’ān to what has been transmitted from the Companions and Followers amounts to an unacceptable restriction of the Qur’ān’s potentiality. Although most obvious in al-Ghazālī, the political tension that Şūfī interpretations created is apparent in other writings studied here as well, in the use of the terms “common people” (‘awāmm) and “elite” (khawāṣṣ), a somewhat defensive dichotomy reflecting judgment on if not outright disdain for those who disagree with Şūfī concepts and methodology. The references to the Ibn Mas’ūd ḥadīth and the traditions from ‘Alī and Ja’far al-Şādiq serve to legitimize the Şūfī approach by showing its conformity with the views of the Companions and Followers.

The second shared assumption of Ṣūfī interpretation concerns knowledge which is obtained by means other than the study of the transmitted interpretive tradition and rational thought. According to Ibn Taymiyya, the weakness of Ṣūfī interpretation is its reliance on subjective knowledge¹ and consequent vulnerability to error. Ibn Taymiyya's insistence on the importance of referring all interpretations to the Qur'ān and the words of the Prophet and his Companions and Followers is not so much a rejection of all knowledge by interior experience – although he does reject the validity of ecstatic states – but a rejection of the privileging of that experience over other, more public forms of knowledge. In contrast, the Ṣūfīs studied here use the language and discourse of the more publicly debatable areas of philosophy, theology, and the transmitted tradition, but always with the underlying assumption that knowledge of the deeper meanings of the Qur'ān is an essentially private experience. Unlike the revelations sent to the prophets, the knowledge which comes to individuals directly from God (‘ilm ladunī) is not necessarily beneficial to disclose, a fact illustrated in the story of Mūsā and al-Khaḍīr: Al-Khaḍīr refuses to explain himself to Mūsā until they part. The communication between the two, which in Ṣūfī interpretations is understood as suggestive of the master–disciple relationship, is oral and private rather than written and public. In his comments on the Qur'ān 3:7, al-Qushayrī states that those who receive knowledge of the deeper meanings of the Qur'ān say what they have been commanded to say and, likewise, keep silent when commanded to do so.

The third assumption upon which Ṣūfī interpretation rests concerns the nature of the self seeking understanding of the meanings of the Qur'ān. Interpretation based on interior experience is ever changing because the self is in constant flux as it moves through different states and stations. In his interpretation of light upon light, al-Qushayrī describes the heart as agitated by light; knowledge is received by means of a series of interactions between the guidance sent to the self and the efforts it sends out. The subjectivity of the states and stations the self moves through make them unverifiable to anyone other than the individual experiencing them, paving the way to criticisms such as that of Ibn al-Jawzī who dismisses these states altogether as “a delirium without any basis.”² The problem of outside verification of the knowledge obtained by means of states is acknowledged by the Ṣūfīs as well; while acknowledging the reality of these states generally they also acknowledge the possibility of individual delusion and error. Qur'ānic interpretations based on experience are problematic because they may be misunderstood by those who have not experienced a similar state, as well as by the interpreter himself if he misunderstands the nature of his own experience.

In order to see things as they truly are, the attitude of the self and the efforts it makes are as important as the states it experiences. Mūsā's long and tiring journey searching for the wise man al-Khaḍīr and the frustration and confusion he experiences being with him is repeatedly referred to in Ṣūfī commentaries as a journey of discipline, of learning proper behavior (ta'dīb). As al-Ghazālī explains in his Jawāhir al-Qur'ān, it is arrogance to think that knowledge of the Qur'ān's deeper meanings can come without intense and persistent spiritual disciplines and efforts. In addition to the toil of the journey, there is a further demand placed on Mūsā, himself a prophet, of unquestioning acceptance of al-Khaḍīr's bizarre and troubling actions, a requirement he is unable to fulfill. Maryam's story, on the other hand, represents the self who does possess the necessary attitude of complete and utter subservience towards God and His will, an attitude which in turn frees her from concern for anything else. The most important and difficult kind of knowledge to obtain, then, for the Ṣūfīs is a kind of knowledge that comes not from the strivings of the intellect but, rather, as the result of God's grace and a deeper kind of struggle within man. In his Kitāb al-luma' Abū Naṣr al-Sarrāj characterizes this struggle in a corporeal way as the sacrifice of one's very lifeblood.

While the hermeneutics of these works is similar, the language and methods of discourse used are very different. Allegoresis is the most controversial type of Ṣūfī interpretation because it appears to abandon the obvious sense of Qur'ānic verses. The strictures against abandoning the obvious sense are behind al-Ghazālī's various attempts to justify and define acceptable interpretation, and to explain the theory of correspondences between the spiritual and the material world, and between the macrocosm of the universe and the microcosm of man. The method seems artificial when it consists of lists of these equivalences but substantive when the correspondences are more fully described and developed.

This kind of allegoresis, or finding correspondences (taṭbīq) as al-Kāshānī calls it, is different from symbolic Ṣūfī interpretations which arise from and remain with the tangible imagery and narratives of the Qur'ān. Here, the sensorial and emotional aspects of the text are emphasized and engaged with in kind: light illuminates, fire burns, and flood waters rage while people have doubts, desires, and longings. Symbolic interpretation uses both concrete and affective language, making use of metaphor, poetry, wordplay, narrative, and myth in a way that is unique among Qur'ānic commentaries. This is not to say that this kind of language use does not appear in other commentaries; al-Ṭabarī and others, for example, cite pre-Islamic and early Islamic poetry frequently in order to explain the meanings of obscure or ambiguous words, but the purpose is etymological while the affective and aesthetic elements of the poetry is ignored. Similarly, anecdotes, narratives, and homilies are very much part of the style of the early traditions transmitted from the Companions and Followers of the Prophet and continued to be cited in many commentaries. Al-Qurṭubī is a good example of a commentator who very much appreciates the appealing and entertaining qualities of this material, ignoring his otherwise rigorous standards of authentication to include it. But new stories, such as those told about Ṣūfī shaykhs, and new homilies, such as al-Maybudī's discussion of the journeys of Mūsā, are rare in this genre, perhaps considered more appropriately confined to the area of preaching. In Ṣūfī interpretation, poetry, metaphor, storytelling, and myth are accepted wholeheartedly, and if anything, take precedence over more explanatory language. The connection between other genres of Ṣūfī writing and the Qur'ān becomes clearer when one recognizes that these kinds of language acts represent an integral part of the Ṣūfī response to the Qur'ānic text.

CONCLUSION

As important as allegoresis and symbolic interpretation are in Ṣūfī commentaries, Ṣūfī interpretations characterized by close attention paid to words and phrases are equally prominent. Sometimes this takes the form of “rigorous fidelity to the text” as Chodkiewski defines it in the writings of Ibn ‘Arabī. In the texts studied here, the fact that al-Khaḍīr switches pronouns in speaking to Mūsā, from “I wanted” to “We wanted” to “Your Lord wanted” is considered highly significant and commented on accordingly. The approach can also be meditative and didactic, as in the attention paid to unusual words such as ‘ilm ladunī and muḥarrar. Unlike the allegorical approach, which raises concerns about reading alien concepts into the Qur’ānic text, this approach remains very much within the text. Many of these interpretations, like the symbolic interpretations, constitute a literary form of commentary that has not always been recognized as such.

APPENDIX

Commentators on the Qur'ān

To contextualize the work of Ṣūfī commentators, several commentaries have been referred to throughout this study. The following provides brief biographical information and descriptions of the style and contents of these commentaries.

Al-Ṭabarī

Abū Ja'far Muḥammad b. Jarīr al-Ṭabarī was born in Ṭabaristān in northern Iran but spent most of his life in Baghdād, where he died in 923.¹ According to one story, he first arrived in Baghdād hoping to study with Aḥmad b. Ḥanbal but found that he had recently died. Al-Ṭabarī himself attempted to establish a separate school of law based on his own principles, but apparently it was not distinct enough from Shāf'ism to survive his death. Instead, his fame rests upon two monumental works: his history of the world, Mukhtaṣar ta'rīkh al-rusul wa'l-mulūk wa'l-khulafā', and his Qur'ānic commentary, Jāmi' al-bayān 'an ta'wīl āy Qur'ān. The commentary marks the beginning of the classical period of Qur'ānic commentaries, and is important for the vast amount of information it contains from the earliest sources of Islam.

In the edition used for this study, the Jāmi' al-bayān comprises thirty parts printed in twelve volumes.² Al-Ṭabarī usually begins his exegesis by paraphrasing a verse with the use of synonyms, prefaced by the phrase, “He (God) says” (yaqūla) or “He (or it) means” (ya'nī). He then provides philological information on the verse, including variant readings, definitions and etymologies of problematic words, and solutions to grammatical difficulties. The comments are based on named or unnamed reciters of the Qur'ān (al-qurrā'), Arabists (ahl al-'arabiyya), grammarians (naḥwiyyūn), and evidence from Arab speech patterns (taqūlu al-'arab) and poems. After establishing the basic meaning of the text, al-Ṭabarī addresses intratextual and extratextual problems of meaning, noting differences of opinion. The sources that al-Ṭabarī uses to solve these problems of meaning are the Qur'ān itself, the aḥādīth of the Prophet, and the exegetical Traditions attributed to his Companions and Followers. Al-Ṭabarī's commentary is often referred to as the first and foremost example of “interpretation by the transmitted tradition” (tafsīr bi'l-ma'thūr) because of the enormous quantity of aḥādīth and Traditions which he includes. When quoting aḥādīth he often gives numerous versions with different chains of transmission (asānīd). He also supplies the full chain of transmission for Traditions related from the Companions and Followers, chains which end with al-Ṭabarī himself.³ After quoting the aḥādīth and Traditions, al-Ṭabarī usually expresses his preferred interpretation, sometimes providing his reasoning, and sometimes not.

Al-Zamakhsharī

Abū'l-Qāsim Maḥmūd b. 'Umar al-Zamakhsharī was born in the province of Khwārazm south of the Aral Sea and died there in 1144 after years of studying and teaching which took him to such cities as Baghdad and Mecca.⁴ He was a particularly sought after teacher in the areas of Arabic grammar and philology. His best known work is his tafsīr, Al-Kashshāf 'an ḥaqā'iq al-tanzīl, a work which was greatly admired and quoted for its linguistic insights while censured for its Mu'tazilī views. 'Abd Allāh b. 'Umar al-Bayḍāwī (d. 1286 or 1293) produced a commentary entitled Anwār al-tanzīl wa-asrār al-ta'wīl which is mostly an abridged version of al-Zamakhsharī's work purged of its suspect theology. Fakhr al-Dīn al-Rāzī appears to have used Al-Kashshāf 'an ḥaqā'iq al-tanzīl as a basis for his own commentary,⁵ as did al-Nisābūrī.⁶

Al-Zamakhsharī's commentary comprises four volumes.⁷ He is far more selective than al-Ṭabarī in the aḥādīth and Traditions he chooses to include; those he does cite are often quoted anonymously and without any chain of transmission (isnād), introduced merely by "it has been said" (qīla) or "it has been related" (ruwīya). The result is little repetition and a far more condensed style, although he demonstrates an interest, like al-Ṭabarī, in expanding Qur'ānic narratives by providing details such as names of people and places, and story background. Johns has noted al-Zamakhsharī's fondness for this material, and the similarity between his accounts and those found in al-Tha'labī's Qīṣaṣ al-anbiyā'.⁸ More so than al-Ṭabarī, al-Zamakhsharī makes the occasional tentative step towards homiletics by suggesting lessons to be learned from certain Qur'ānic verses.

Al-Zamakhsharī's commentary is punctuated by the questions that he asks of the text using classic kalām speech: "For if you were to say..." (fa-in qulta), "I would say..." (qultu). The questions pertain to linguistic, narrative, or theological issues. His discussions of linguistic issues are more involved and subtle than al-Ṭabarī's, and are often used to support theological concerns, namely, the rejection of anthropomorphic interpretations and the affirmation of the miraculous nature (ijāz) of the Qur'ān.

Fakhr al-Dīn al-Rāzī

Abū 'Abd Allāh Muḥammad b. 'Umar b. al-Ḥusayn Fakhr al-Dīn al-Rāzī was born in the Persian town of Rayy five years after the death of al-Zamakhsharī. The years after finishing his studies were difficult ones, as his outspokenness provoked the antagonism of Mu'tazilīs and Karrāmiyya⁹ in the areas through which he traveled. He finally found patronage, wealth, and prestige in Heart where he spent most of his life before dying in 1210.¹⁰ Although still a thorn in the side of some, al-Rāzī was a popular preacher and sought after teacher. He seems to have possessed a genuine piety combined with both intellectual virtuosity and an abrasive personality. He is often labeled a philosopher–theologian because of his interest in both areas of Islamic thought.

Al-Rāzī's connection to Šūfism is unclear. We know that Ibn 'Arabi sent him a letter inviting him to consider the differences between mystical and rational knowledge.¹¹ According to several biographical sources, he is said to have met the Šūfī teacher Najm al-Dīn Kubrā and asked to become his disciple, but the outcome of this meeting is uncertain. Wherever al-Rāzī's ultimate loyalties lie, his interest in philosophy, theology, and Šūfism are all apparent in his tafsīr, which is known as either Maḥāṭiḥ al-ghayb or Kitāb al-tafsīr al-kabīr, and is considered his most important work. Ibn Taymiyya scoffed at the work, saying that it contained everything except tafsīr, whereas its admirers insisted that it contained everything else in addition to tafsīr. It is an encyclopedic work, similar in length to al-Ṭabarī's tafsīr.

Al-Rāzī usually begins his discussion of a verse by examining its place within the larger context of the sūra or the Qur'ān as a whole, finding evidence of the inimitability (i'jāz) of the Qur'ān in the ordering and sequencing of its verses. After addressing such contextual issues, al-Rāzī sometimes points out the lessons to be learned by a verse before proceeding to his summaries of the transmitted exegetical Traditions. Like al-Zamakhsharī, he does not always identify the salafī sources for this material, but he is more likely to present the full range of interpretations. Al-Rāzī is inclined to draw attention to the majority opinion particularly when he is about to disagree with it. He also demonstrates his independence from traditional exegetical discourse by including such authorities as Ibn Sīnā and Abū Ḥamid al-Ghazālī, although the traditional authorities he cites far outweigh the nontraditional.

Al-Rāzī uses al-Zamakhsharī's Al-Kashshaf 'an ḥaqā'iq al-tanzīl as a basis for his philological and grammatical comments, although in an abridged form and not uncritically.¹² Al-Rāzī addresses the theological issues raised by the Qur'ānic text far more insistently and comprehensively than al-Zamakhsharī, and he searches for answers in a far more expanded intellectual universe, calling upon the ideas of Mu'tazilīs, philosophers, and Šūfis in addition to their more orthodox Sūnnī counterparts. Structurally, he conducts these discussions by dividing his commentary on individual verses into various "issues" (masā'il), "questions" (as'ila), "aspects" (wujūh), "topics" (mabāḥith), and "parts" (aqsām), an arrangement his biographer al-Šafadī says he was the first one to use.¹³

Al-Qurṭubī

Abū 'Abd Allāh Muḥammad b. Aḥmad b. Abī Bakr b. Faraj al-Anṣārī al-Khazrajī al-Andalusī al-Qurṭubī was born on the other side of the classical Muslim world, in Spain, although, like his predecessors, he traveled widely in his studies before settling in Egypt where he died in 1272.¹⁴ He was an expert not only in tafsir, but also ḥadīth and Mālikī law. The best known of his works is his Qur'ānic commentary entitled Al-Jāmi' li-ahkām al-Qur'ān wa'l-mubayyin li-mā taḍammāna min al-sunna wa-āyāt al-furqān. It is approximately the same size as the commentaries of al-Ṭabarī and al-Rāzī, comprising twenty slim volumes.¹⁵

Al-Qurṭubī's commentary is renowned for the large number of aḥādīth he includes therein, many of which are not found in al-Ṭabarī. Al-Ṭabarī limits his aḥādīth and Traditions to those which directly comment on Qur'ānic verses, whereas al-Qurṭubī includes others as well which are thematically related. While he is sometimes meticulous in addressing the authenticity of this material, he makes surprisingly frequent use of the more controversial isrā'iliyāt material found in the works of Abū Ishāq al-Tha'labī (d. 1036).¹⁶

Al-Qurṭubī also makes extensive use of the works of post-salafī exegetes, demonstrating the virtuosity of a keen mind well aware of the complex issues which divided these exegetes as well as the Muslim community at large, and he often displays a jurist's desire to define the boundaries of acceptable thought and practice. Like al-Rāzī, he frequently divides his commentary according to the issues (masā'il) raised by one or more verses, although he does not resort to anything like al-Rāzī's extensive subdivisions and his writing style is far more straightforward and clear. Al-Qurṭubī is markedly less interested in theological issues than al-Rāzī; of greater concern to him are the legal ramifications of the Qur'ānic text. His mastery of the many disciplines employed in tafsir, however, is undeniable, and Calder has suggested that it was al-Qurṭubī who most fully realized the possibilities of the genre.¹⁷

Ibn Taymiyya

Taqī al-Dīn Aḥmad b. Taymiyya was a Ḥanbalī theologian and jurist who led an eventful life as an outspoken activist.¹⁸ Born in Ḥarrān, Syria in 1263, he was forced at the early age of five to flee with his family from the Mongols to Damascus where he lived most of his life. Coming from a family of renowned Ḥanbalī scholars, he took over his father's directorship of the Sukkariyya mosque and madrasa at the age of twenty and later taught at the oldest Ḥanbalī madrasa in Damascus, the Ḥanbaliyya.

Ibn Taymiyya's long career of controversial activism began at the age of thirty when he was briefly imprisoned for organizing a protest against the authorities' inaction with regards to a prominent Christian accused of insulting the Prophet. As was to be the case in the many incarcerations to follow, he spent his time in prison writing, producing his first great work. In the years that followed, Ibn Taymiyya's influence grew as he exhorted the people of Damascus to jihād against the Mongols and their Shī'ī supporters, and as he accompanied the fighting armies. Apparently unconcerned with his own safety or well-being, Ibn Taymiyya wrote treatise after treatise attacking any doctrine or practice, however popular, which he felt degraded the original, pure message of Islam. The objects of his polemics included kalām, philosophy, popular saint worship, antinomian Ṣūfīs, the followers of Ibn 'Arabī, and Shī'īs. He died in a prison in Damascus in 1328.

Ibn Taymiyya's relationship to Ṣūfism is complicated. He appears to have been a member of the Qādiriyya order¹⁹ and wrote of his respect for several individual Ṣūfīs.²⁰ However, he was fiercely opposed to many aspects of Ṣūfī doctrine and practice based on his assessment of their heretical nature. The extent of Ibn Taymiyya's criticism is such that, using his creedal criteria, few of the major writings of Ṣūfism would be considered sound. Nonetheless, he seems to have desired to reform the tradition from within by carefully separating the sound from the false in both Ṣūfī doctrine and practice. He writes approvingly of the moral and ethical focus of Ṣūfī writings while rejecting what he perceives to be faulty conclusions regarding the nature of the relationship between man and God. These faulty conclusions, according to Ibn Taymiyya, are the result of turning away from the teachings of the Prophet and the pious first generations (salaf), substituting their wisdom with the inferior tools of kalām and philosophy, and concepts based on excessive emotional states.²¹

Ibn Taymiyya managed to write profusely on many different subjects, producing creeds, legal judgments, polemical and exegetical works. In the last category, he wrote the hermeneutical work Muqaddima fī uṣūl al-tafsīr and commentaries on a few Qur'ānic sūras and āyāt. These commentaries reflect the epistemological principle laid out in his Muqaddima that knowledge is either the result of authentic transmission (naql muṣaddaq) or verifiable deduction (istidlāl muḥaqqaq). Although Ibn Taymiyya is most often associated with the term "transmitted interpretation" (tafsīr bi'l-ma'thūr), it is the use of deduction (istidlāl) which is most striking in his exegesis. Al-Ṭabarī's commentary on Sūrat al-Ikhlāṣ consists of about four pages of transmitted material from the first generations of Muslims (salaf). This material is expanded to almost 300 pages in Ibn Taymiyya's commentary with his original arguments and reformulations, all firmly based on salafī views.²² Ibn Taymiyya's exegetical works read more like treatises than line by line commentary.

The style is quite different than the famous commentary of Ibn Taymiyya's student, Ibn Kathīr (d. 1373), Tafsīr al-Qur'ān al-'azīm. While Ibn Kathīr explicitly adopts the methodology of Ibn Taymiyya, even copying a portion of his Muqaddima into his introduction,²³ he is much more sparing in his use of deduction in his commentary, confining himself almost exclusively to the process of sifting through the transmitted material and selecting what he deems most authentic. When he ventures beyond this, it is usually to serve as a spokesperson for the more independent thought of his teacher.

GLOSSARY OF TERMS

Terms related to human faculties

‘aql Intellect, reason.

istī’dād The preparedness or aptitude of individual human souls.

laṭā’if (s. laṭīf) (1) Subtle interpretations of the Qur’ān or (2) subtle faculties in humans.

nafs Soul.

al-nafs al-ammāra The demanding soul.

al-nafs al-lawwāma The blaming or reproachful soul.

al-nafs al-muṭma’inna The soul at peace.

qalb Heart.

rūḥ Spirit.

sirr Secret or innermost heart.

Terms related to knowledge or ways of seeking knowledge adab (pl. ādāb) Disciplined and refined ways of acting and speaking.

dhawq Tasting.

ḥāl (pl. aḥwāl) State.

ijtihād The process of seeking understanding of the Qur’ān based on an individual’s independent investigation and judgment.

ilhām Inspiration.

‘ilm al-aḥwāl Knowledge that comes from spiritual states.

‘ilm badīhī Intuitive knowledge of self-evident truths.

‘ilm qarūrī Necessary knowledge (as opposed to acquired knowledge); knowledge that comes without the need for reflection or examination of proofs; sensory knowledge.

‘ilm kasbī (or iktisābī) Knowledge that is acquired through study.

‘ilm ladunī Knowledge that comes to individuals directly from God.

kashf The process of obtaining knowledge by “unveiling.”

riyāḍa Spiritual discipline.

wahy A kind of revelation that is not restricted to prophets.

Terms related to the interpretation and interpreters of the Qur'ān bāṭin The inner or esoteric meaning of Qur'ānic verses.

bāṭiniyya A derogatory name used to describe those who reject the exoteric sense of Qur'ānic verses.

ḍarb al-mithāl The creating of similitudes or parables; making analogies.

ḥadīth (pl. aḥādīth) The sayings of the Prophet Muḥammad.

ishāra Allusion; a silent signal or gesture.

laṭā'if (1) Subtle interpretations of the Qur'ān or (2) subtle faculties in humans.

majāz Figurative expression or metaphor.

muḥkamāt Clear and unambiguous verses in the Qur'ān.

mutashābihāt Ambiguous verses in the Qur'ān that can be interpreted in different ways.

muṭṭala' A high place from which one can view things clearly, meaning either (1) the vantage point from which one views the Resurrection or (2) one of four aspects of the Qur'ān described in a ḥadīth.

al-rāsikhūn fī'l-ilm Those firmly rooted in knowledge who are qualified to interpret the Qur'ān.

al-salaf al-sāliḥ The pious first generations after the Prophet Muḥammad whose comments on the meaning of the Qur'ān form the basis of the exegetical tradition.

tafsīr Commentary on the Qur'ān.

tafsīr bi'l-ma'thūr Commentary on the Qur'ān based on the aḥādīth and the interpretations of the pious first generations (al-salaf al-sāliḥ).

tafsīr bi'l-ra'y A term usually used to refer to blameworthy commentary on the Qur'ān based on mere opinion, but also sometimes used to refer positively to exegesis based on reasoning.

taṭbiq To make or find correspondences between two things.

ta'wīl A term originally synonymous with tafsīr but which came to mean (1) interpretation of anthropomorphic or other Qur'ānic verses that are ambiguous in meaning or (2) esoteric interpretation of the Qur'ān.

'ulamā' Religious scholars.

ẓāhir (1) The obvious or apparent sense of Qur'ānic verses or (2) the exoteric meaning of the Qur'ān.

NOTES

INTRODUCTION

- 1 I. Goldziher, Die Richtungen der islamischen Koranauslegung, Leiden: E.J. Brill, 1952, pp. 180–262.
- 2 Ibid., p. 180.
- 3 L. Massignon, Essai sur les origines du lexique technique de la Mystique Musulmane, Paris: J. Vrin, 1968.
- 4 P. Nwyia, Exégèse Coranique et Language Mystique, Beirut: Dar El-Masreq, 1970.
- 5 The experiential methodology of the early Šūfis is noted as well in the study of Sahl al-Tustarī by G. Böwering, The Mystical Vision of Existence in Classical Islam, Berlin: Walter De Gruyter, 1980 and P. Heath's analysis of Ibn 'Arabī in "Creative Hermeneutics: A Comparative Analysis of Three Islamic Approaches," Arabica, 36, 1989, pp. 173–210.
- 6 H. Corbin, Creative Imagination in the Sufism of Ibn 'Arabī, Princeton, NJ: Princeton University Press, 1969.
- 7 T. Izutsu, Creation and the Timeless Order of Things, Ashland, OR: White Cloud Press, 1994.
- 8 W. Chittick, Imaginal Worlds: Ibn al-'Arabī and the Problem of Religious Diversity, Albany, NY: SUNY Press, 1994.
- 9 Ibid., pp. 25–6.
- 10 F. Rahman, "Dream, Imagination, and 'Ālam al-mithāl," in The Dream and Human Societies, eds G.E. Grunebaum and R. Caillois, Berkeley, CA: University of California Press, 1966, p. 415.
- 11 L. Lewisohn, Beyond Faith and Infidelity, Richmond, Surrey: Curzon Press, 1995, 19, 175–6.
- 12 H. Dabashi, "Historical Conditions of Persian Sufism during the Seljuk Period," in Classical Persian Sufism: From its Origins to Rumi, ed. Leonard Lewisohn, London: Khaniqahi Nimatullahi Publications, 1993, pp. 137–74.
- 13 M. Sells, "The Bewildered Tongue: The Semantics of Mystical Union in Islam," in Mystical Union in Judaism, Christianity, and Islam, eds M. Idel and B. McGinn, New York: Continuum, 1996, p. 88.
- 14 J.C. Bürgel, The Feather of Simurgh: The "Licit Magic" of the Arts in Medieval Islam, New York: New York University Press, 1988.
- 15 C. Ernst, The Shambhala Guide to Sufism, Boston, MA: Shambhala, 1997, pp. 18–31.

1 THE QUR'ĀN AS THE OCEAN OF ALL KNOWLEDGE

- 1 Quoted in Abū Naṣr al-Sarrāj, Kitāb al-luma' fī taṣawwuf, London: Luzac, 1963, p. 73.
- 2 Quoted in Al-Ghazālī, Ihyā' 'ulūm al-dīn, Beirut: Al-Dār al-Kutub al-Ilmiyya, 1989, vol. 5, p. 99; and Rūzbihān al-Baqlī's 'Arā'is al-bayān, vol. 1, Lucknow, 1898, p. 3.

- 3 Said to be an elixer used to change silver into gold.
- 4 Al-Ghazālī, Jawwār al-Qurʾān wa duraruh, Beirut: Dār al-Afāq al-Jadīda, 1983, pp. 8–9. There is an English translation of this work by Abul Quasem, The Jewels of the Qurʾān, London: Kegan Paul International, 1983.
- 5 Al-Kāshānī, Taʾwīlāt, published as Tafsīr al-Qurʾān al-karīm and attributed incorrectly to Ibn ʿArabī, Beirut: Dār al-Yaqzāt al-ʿArabiyya, 1968, vol. 1, p. 3.
- 6 In verses such as Qurʾān 6:120, 6:151, 7:33, 31:20, 57:3.
- 7 For biographical information on al-Tabarī, see the Appendix.
- 8 Al-Tabarī, Jāmiʿ al-bayān ʿan taʾwīl āy al-Qurʾān, Egypt: Muṣṭafā al-Bābī al-Halabī, 1954–7, p. 12. There is an English translation of al-Tabarī’s introduction to his tafsīr in The Commentary on the Qurʾān, translated by J. Cooper, Oxford: Oxford University Press, 1987. The ḥadīth of Ibn Masʿūd is also recorded in Al-Musnad al-Ṣaḥīḥ ʿalāʾl-taqāsīm waʾl anwāʾ of Abū Bakr Muḥammad b. Ḥibbān (d. 965), Beirut: Muʾassasāt al-Risālā, 1984–91, vol. 1, p. 243.
- 9 Al-Tabarī, Jāmiʿ al-bayān, vol. 1, pp. 11–42.
- 10 ʿUmar b. al-Khaṭṭāb (d. 644), the second caliph.
- 11 Al-Tabarī, Jāmiʿ al-bayān, vol. 1, p. 32. Lane understands the meaning of muṭṭalaʾ in this saying of ʿUmar as the “place whence one will look down on the day of resurrection,” Arabic-English Lexicon, vol. 2, Cambridge: The Islamic Texts Society, 1984, p. 1870.
- 12 For an analysis of the different ways in which the word taʾwīl is used in the Qurʾān, see Tabatabaʾī’s “The Concept of Al-Taʾwīl in the Qurʾān,” Message of Thaqaalayn 2, 1995, 21–40.
- 13 Al-Tustarī, Tafsīr al-Tustarī, Beirut: Dār al-Kutub al-ʿIlmiyya, 2002, p. 16. A similar interpretation, cited later, is attributed to ʿAlī (d. 661).
- 14 G. Böwering, The Mystical Vision of Existence in Classical Islam: The Qurʾānic Hermeneutics of the Ṣūfī Sahl al-Tustarī, Berlin: Walter De Gruyter, 1980, p. 232.
- 15 Abū Ṭālib al-Makkī, Qūt al-qulūb, Cairo: Dār al-Rashād, 1991, p. 102.
- 16 Al-Ghazālī, Iḥyāʾ, vol. 5, p. 129.
- 17 Rūzbihān, ʿArāʾis al-bayān fī ḥaqāʾiq al-Qurʾān, vol. 1, pp. 2–3.
- 18 Al-Nisābūrī, Gharāʾib al-Qurʾān wa ragḥāʾib al-furqān, Cairo: Muṣṭafā al-Bābī al-Halabī, 1962–70, vol. 1, p. 26.
- 19 Ibid.
- 20 Al-Kāshānī, Taʾwīlāt, p. 4.
- 21 Al-Simnānī, Tafsīr najm al-Qurʾān, quoted in J. Elias, The Throne Carrier of God, Albany, NY: SUNY Press, 1995, pp. 107–8. The English translation here is that of Elias based on his reading of manuscript editions of al-Simnānī’s Tafsīr in Istanbul and Damascus.
- 22 Ibid., 108. Elias is paraphrasing al-Simnānī here.
- 23 The cosmological terms which al-Simnānī uses in his interpretation have a long history in Ṣūfism and can be traced to several sources (see L. Gardet’s “Ālam al-Djabarūt, Ālam al-malakūt, Ālam al-mithāl” and R. Arnaldez’s “Lāhūt and Nāsūt,” in The Encyclopaedia of Islam, new ed, Leiden: Brill, 1960–2002). Elias suggests that al-Simnānī may have been the first to use these terms consistently in a hierarchical fashion (Elias, The Throne Carrier of God, pp. 154–7). The word “Kingdom” (malakūt) is Qurʾānic (6:75, 7:185, 23:88, and 36:83), and the word “Omnipotence” (jabarūt) occurs in the aḥādīth, but with meanings not clearly related to levels of existence. The terms “humanity” (nāsūt) and “divinity” (lāhūt) are not used in either the Qurʾān or the aḥādīth. The Ṣūfī al-Hallāj (d. 922) used these terms, perhaps adopting them from Arab Christians or Imāmī theologians (Arnaldez, vol. 5, p. 613). Abū Ṭālib al-Makkī used all four of these terms along with a fifth realm of Ipseity (ḥāhūt) (C. Glassé, The Concise Encyclopedia of Islam, San Francisco, CA: Harper and Row, 1989, pp. 128–32). The five realms were also discussed by the followers and systematizers of Ibn ʿArabī’s thought in what was called the Five Divine Presences (al-ḥaḍarāt al-ilāhiyyat al-khams) (W. Chittick, “The Five Divine Presences,” The Muslim World, 72, 1982, 107–28).

- 24 Both men are claimed in most of the lineages of Sūfī orders, and are considered to be the first and sixth imams by the Ismāʿīlī and Twelver Shīʿīs.
- 25 Rūzbihān, ʿArāʾis al-bayān fī ḥaqāʾiq al-Qurʾān, vol. 1, p. 4. Al-Sulamī quotes a slightly different version in his Ḥaqāʾiq al-tafsīr (Beirut: Dār al-Kutub al-ʿIlmiyya, 2001, vol. 1, p. 22–3).
- 26 Abū Ṭālib al-Makkī, Qūt al-qulūb, p. 94; Al-Ghazālī, Ihyāʾ, vol. 5, p. 87.
- 27 Al-Ghazālī, Ihyāʾ, vol. 5, pp. 93–4, 129; The version of this tradition in al-Sulamī and Rūzbihān is a little different: “It is related from Abū Juḥayfa (d. 693) that he asked ‘Alī whether he had any revelation (waḥy) from the Messenger of God other than the Qurʾān. ‘Alī said, ‘By the One who created the seed and the breath of life, no, except for that God gives a servant understanding of His Book’ ” (Al-Sulamī, Ḥaqāʾiq al-tafsīr, vol. 1, p. 20 and Rūzbihān, ʿArāʾis al-bayān fī ḥaqāʾiq al-Qurʾān, vol. 1, p. 3).
- 28 Abū Ṭālib al-Makkī, Qūt al-qulūb, p. 101; Al-Ghazālī, Ihyāʾ, vol. 5, pp. 129–30.
- 29 Al-Ghazālī, Ihyāʾ, vol. 5, pp. 135.
- 30 Al-Sulamī, Ziyādāt ḥaqāʾiq al-tafsīr, Beirut: Dār al-Mashriq, 1986, p. 2; Rūzbihān’s version substitutes verification (taḥaqquq) for taḥqīq (ʿArāʾis al-bayān fī ḥaqāʾiq al-Qurʾān, vol. 1, p. 14).
- 31 Ibid.
- 32 Al-Sulamī, Ḥaqāʾiq al-tafsīr, vol. 1, p. 22 and Rūzbihān, ʿArāʾis al-bayān fī ḥaqāʾiq al-Qurʾān, vol. 1, p. 4. In Al-Sulamī’s version, ʿibāra reads ʿibāda, which makes less sense.

2 THE QURʾĀNIC TEXT AND AMBIGUITY: VERSE 3:7

- 1 Abū Jaʿfar al-Ṭabarī, Jāmiʿ al-bayān ʿan taʾwīl āy al-Qurʾān, Egypt: Muṣṭafā al-Bābī, al-Ḥalabī, 1954–7, vol. 3, pp. 172–5. For a discussion of various medieval definitions of the mutashābihāt, see L. Kinberg’s “Muḥkamāt and Mutashābihāt (Koran 3/7): Implication of a Koranic Pair of Terms in Medieval Exegesis,” Arabica, 35, 1988, 143–72.
- 2 Al-Ṭabarī, Jāmiʿ al-bayān, vol. 3, pp. 174–5.
- 3 Ibid., vol. 3, pp. 173–4.
- 4 Abūʾl-Qāsim al-Qushayrī, Laṭāʾif al-ishārāt, vol. 1, Cairo: Dār al-Kutub al-ʿArabī, 1980, vol. 3, p. 232.
- 5 Rashid al-Dīn al-Maybudī, Kashf al-asrār wa ʿuddat al-abrār, Tehran: Amīr Kabīr, 1982–3, vol. 3, p. 34.
- 6 Rūzbihān al-Baqlī, ʿArāʾis al-bayān fī ḥaqāʾiq al-Qurʾān, Lucknow, 1898, vol. 1, pp. 68–9.
- 7 See E.W. Lane, Arabic-English Lexicon, vol. 2, Cambridge: Islamic Texts Society, 1984, p. 2648.
- 8 Scholars of Rūzbihān’s writings have translated the term iltibās in different ways. In his En Islam Iranien, Corbin translates it as “amphibolie,” Paris: Gallimard, 1972. C. Ernst finds this “an excessively abstract overtranslation” which “fails to convey the sense of the root L-B-S as ‘clothing’.” He prefers the phrase “clothing with divinity,” “when the context makes it clear that iltibās means a theophany clothed in visible form” (Ruzbihan Baqlī: Mysticism and the Rhetoric of Sainthood in Persian Sufism, Richmond, UK: Curzon Press, 1995, p. 104, n. 56). In ʿAbd al-Razzāq al-Kāshānī’s glossary of Sūfī technical terms (A Glossary of Sufi Technical Terms, London: Octagon Press, 1991, p. 45), al-labs, the noun derived from the first form verb labasa, is defined as “the elemental form (al-ṣurāt al-ʿunsuriyya) that clothes (talbisu) spiritual realities (al-ḥaqāʾiq al-rūḥāniyya). He also cites the following Qurʾānic verse containing the verb labasa, a verse which replies to the unbelievers who ask why an angel is not sent down to them:

If We had made him [the Messenger] an angel, We would have made him [appear] as a man and We would have certainly confused (labasnā) them just as they are already in confusion (yalbisūna).

(6:9)

- 9 Al-Kāshānī, Ta'wīlāt, published as Tafsīr al-Qur'ān al-karīm and attributed incorrectly to Ibn 'Arabī, Beirut: Dār al-Yaqẓat al-'Arabiyya, 1968, vol. 1, p. 167.
- 10 See W. Chittick, The Sufī Path of Knowledge: Ibn al-'Arabī's Metaphysics of Imagination, Albany, NY: SUNY Press, 1989, pp. 89–94.
- 11 Al-Ṭabarī, Jāmi' al-bayān, vol. 3, pp. 174–5; Abū Hāmid Muḥammad Al-Ghazālī, Al-Mustasfā min 'ilm al-uṣūl, Beirut: Mu'assasāt al-Risāla, 1997, p. 203; Al-Qurtubī, Al-Jāmi' li-aḥkām al-Qur'ān wa'l-mubayyin li-mā taḍammāna min al-sunna wa-āyāt al-furqān, Beirut: Dār al-Kutub al-'Arabī, 1980, vol. 4, p. 18.
- 12 Al-Ṭabarī, Jāmi' al-bayān, vol. 3, p. 175.
- 13 Ibid.
- 14 Ibid., vol. 3, p. 183.
- 15 Ibid., pp. 178–80. This is one of three interpretations al-Ṭabarī lists for those in whose hearts is a turning away.
- 16 For biographical information on al-Zamakhsharī, see the Appendix.
- 17 Maḥmūd b. 'Umar Abū'l-Qāsim al-Zamakhsharī, Al-Kashshāf 'an ḥaqā'iq al-tanzīl, Egypt: Muṣṭafā al-Bābī al-Ḥalabī, 1966, vol. 1, p. 412.
- 18 For biographical information on Fakhr al-Dīn al-Rāzī, see the Appendix.
- 19 Fakhr al-Dīn al-Rāzī, Al-Tafsīr al-kabīr, Beirut: Dār Ihya' al-Turāth al-'Arabī, 1980, vol. 7, pp. 183–4.
- 20 Ibid., vol. 7, p. 184–5. See also al-Zamakhsharī, Kashshāf 'an ḥaqā'iq al-tanzīl, vol. 1, p. 412.
- 21 Fakhr al-Dīn al-Rāzī, Al-Tafsīr al-kabīr, vol. 7, pp. 181–2.
- 22 Ibid., vol. 7, p. 186.
- 23 Ibid., pp. 187–91.
- 24 Ibid., p. 191.
- 25 Abū Hāmid Muḥammad al-Ghazālī, “The Canons of Ta'wil,” translated by N. Heer in Windows on the House of Islam: Muslim Sources of Spirituality and Religious Life, ed. John Renard, Berkeley, CA: University of California Press, 1998, p. 53.
- 26 Ibid., p. 54.
- 27 For biographical information on Ibn Taymiyya, see the Appendix.
- 28 See B. Abrahamov's “Ibn Taymiyya on the Agreement of Reason with Tradition” (Muslim World, 82, 1992, 256–72), which discusses Ibn Taymiyya's response to al-Rāzī in his Dar' ta'arūḍ al-'aql wa'l-naql.
- 29 Abū Hāmid Muḥammad al-Ghazālī, Ijām al-'awāmm 'an 'ilm al-kalām, Beirut: Dār al-Kitāb al-'Arabī, 1985, p. 60.
- 30 Ibid., pp. 67–8.
- 31 Al-Qushayrī, Laṭā'if al-ishārāt, vol. 1, p. 232.
- 32 Ibid., p. 233.
- 33 Ibid.
- 34 Rūzbihān, 'Arā'is al-bayān, vol. 1, p. 69.
- 35 Ibid., pp. 69–70.
- 36 As mentioned earlier, al-Rūzbihān uses the term “verifiers” (muḥaqqiqūn) to refer to theologians. Al-Kāshānī is following the usage of Ibn 'Arabī: “In general the Shaykh al-Akbar applies the term ‘Verifiers’ (al-muḥaqqiqūn) to the highest category of the friends of God. They follow no one's authority (taqlīd), since in themselves they have ‘verified’ (taḥqīq) and ‘realized’ (taḥaqquq) – through unveiling and finding – the truth (ḥaqq) and reality (ḥaqīqa) of all things, i.e. the Real Himself (al-ḥaqq).” (W. Chittick, Sufī Path of Knowledge, p. 389, n. 11.)
- 37 Al-Kāshānī, Ta'wīlāt, vol. 1, p. 167.
- 38 The word rabbāniyyūn appears in the Qur'ān in 3:79, 5:44, and 5:63. Sibawayh defines the rabbānī as one who devotes himself to the knowledge of the Lord exclusively (see Lane, Arabic-English Lexicon, vol. 1, pp. 1006–7 and M. Asad, The Message of the Qur'ān, Gibraltar: Dar al-Andalus, 1980, p. 79, n. 62). Al-Tustarī appears to be

- coining the words nūrāniyyūn and dhātiyyūn using the same Arabic word form. Cf. G. Böwering, who translates these three words as “those who perceive God as Lord,” “those who perceive God as Light,” and “those who perceive God as Essence” (The Mystical Vision of Existence in Classical Islam: The Qur’ānic Hermeneutics of the Ṣūfī Sahl at-Tustarī, Berlin: Walter De Gruyter, 1980, p. 228). See also Böwering on al-Tustarī’s commentary on 3:79 in the same work, pp. 228–9.
- 39 Abū Muḥammad Sahl b. ‘Abd Allah Al-Tustarī, Tafsīr al-Tustarī, Beirut: Dār al-kutub al ‘Ilmiyya, 2002, p. 46. Qur’ānic verse 18:65 refers to the wise man Mūsā meets on a journey, identified in the ḥadīth as al-Khaḍir.
- 40 The phrase occurs in the Qur’ān sixteen times. See H. Kassis’ Concordance of the Qur’ān, Berkeley, CA: University of California Press, 1983, pp. 732–3.
- 41 Lane, Arabic-English Lexicon, vol. 2, p. 2643.
- 42 Qishr (pl. qushūr) is a word that is used for an outer covering such as the husk of wheat, the shell of nuts, or the rind of fruit.
- 43 Al-Kāshānī, Ta’wīlāt, vol. 1, p. 168.
- 44 The Day of the Covenant is a concept understood from Qur’ānic verse 7:172: When your Lord took the seeds of their future progeny from the loins of the children of Ādam and made them testify regarding themselves, “Am I not your Lord?” (alastu bi-rabbikum) They said, “Yes. we testify.” Lest you say on the Day of Resurrection, “We were not aware of this.” According to A. Schimmel, “The goal of the mystic is to return to the experience of the ‘Day of Alastu,’ when only God existed, before He led future creatures out of the abyss of not-being and endowed them with life, love, and understanding so that they might face Him again at the end of time,” (Mystical Dimensions of Islam, Chapel Hill, NC: University of North Carolina Press, 1975, p. 24).
- 45 Al-Nisābūrī, Al-Gharāib al-Qur’ān wa ragḥā’ib al-furqān, Cairo: Muṣṭafā al-Bābī al-Ḥalabī, 1962–70, vol. 3, p. 138.

3 UNCOVERING MEANING: KNOWLEDGE AND SPIRITUAL PRACTICE

- 1 Abū Naṣr al-Sarrāj (d. 988), so far as we know, was the author of only one book, Kitāb al-luma’ fi’l-taṣawwuf, a highly influential work which served both as a defense of Ṣūfism and a manual for its followers. It was used by al-Qushayrī for his Risāla and al-Ghazālī for his Ihyā’ ‘ulūm al-dīn (P. Lory, “Al-Sarrāj,” in The Encyclopedia of Islam, eds C.E. Bosworth, E. vab Donzel, W.P. Heinrichs, and G. Leconte, Leiden: E.J. Brill, new ed. 1960–2002).
- 2 Abū Naṣr al-Sarrāj, Kitāb al-luma’ fi’l-taṣawwuf, London: Luzac, 1963, pp. 13–4. The Arabic text of Kitāb al-luma’ is edited by R.A. Nicholson and followed by his abridged English translation. The Kitāb al-luma’ has also been translated into German by R. Gramlich as Schlaglichter über das Sufitum, Stuttgart: Franz Steiner Verlag, 1990.
- 3 Abū Naṣr al-Sarrāj, Kitāb al-luma’, pp. 13–4.
- 4 Ibid., pp. 14–5.
- 5 Ibid., p. 15.
- 6 Abū Ḥamid Muḥammad al-Ghazālī, Jawāhir al-Qur’ān wa duraruh, Beirut: Dār al-Afāq al-Jadīda, 1983, pp. 32–3.
- 7 Al-Sulamī, Tabaqāt al-ṣūfiyya, ed. Sharība, Cairo, 1372, p. 119 (quoting a saying from Abū Hafṣ al-Haddād, d. 880 or 884), cited in G. Böwering, “The Adab Literature of Classical Sufism: Anṣarī’s Code of Conduct,” in Moral Conduct and Authority: The Place of Adab in South Asian Islam, ed. B. Daly Metcalf, Berkeley, CA: University of California Press, 1984, p. 67.
- 8 Abū Naṣr al-Sarrāj, Kitāb al-luma’, p. 73.
- 9 Abū Ṭālib al-Makki, Qūt al-qulūb, Cairo: Dār al-Rashād, 1991, p. 97; Abū Ḥamid Muḥammad Al-Ghazālī, Ihyā’ ‘ulūm al-dīn, Beirut: Al-Dār al-Kutub al-‘Ilmiyya, 1989,

- vol. 5, p. 122; Abd al Razzāq Al-Kāshānī Ta'wīlāt (Ta'wīl al-Qur'ān), published as Tafsīr al-Qur'ān al-karīm and attributed incorrectly to Ibn 'Arabī, Beirut: Dār al-Yaqzāt al-'Arabīyya, 1968, p. 4.
- 10 Abū Ṭālib al-Makkī, Qūt al-qulūb, p. 95; Al-Ghazālī, Ihyā', vol. 5, pp. 85–6.
- 11 Abū Naṣr al-Sarrā, Kitāb al-luma', p. 80. This three stage approach to reading the Qur'ān also appears in Abū Ṭālib al-Makkī's Qūt al-qulūb in a somewhat different version, pp. 96–7; and in al-Ghazālī, Ihyā' vol. 5, pp. 121–2.
- 12 Abū Ṭālib al-Makkī, Qūt al-qulūb, p. 100; Al-Ghazālī, Ihyā', vol. 5, p. 123.
- 13 Abū Ṭālib al-Makkī, Qūt al-qulūb, p. 97; Al-Ghazālī, Ihyā', vol. 5, pp. 122–3.
- 14 Al-Kāshānī, Ta'wīlāt, vol. 1, p. 4; Al-Kāshānī's version of the tradition from Ja'far al-Sādiq echoes the ḥadīth from Ibn Mas'ūd. It is said that Ja'far fell down in a faint during prayer and when asked about it he said, "I kept on repeating the verse until I heard it from the Speaker of it and I saw that which comes to me sometimes from the secrets of the realities of the depths (buṭūn), the lights of the splendors of the heights (muṭṭala'āt) beyond what is attached to externals (ẓawāhir) or limits (ḥudūd) with a clearly delineated limit (ḥadd)," pp. 4–5.
- 15 R. Gramlich's German translation of the Qūt al-qulūb entitled Die Nahrung der Herzen details each passage borrowed by al-Ghazālī in his Ihyā' 'ulūm al-dīn, Stuttgart: Franz Steiner Verlag, 1992–5.
- 16 Abul Quasem has translated this portion of the Ihyā' 'ulūm al-dīn in The Recitation and Interpretation of the Qur'ān, London: Kegan Paul International, 1982.
- 17 Al-Ghazālī, Ihyā', vol. 5, pp. 25–79.
- 18 Ibid., pp. 80–3; Cf. Abū Ṭālib al-Makkī, Qūt al-qulūb, pp. 97–8.
- 19 Literally, "bring to his heart (yuhḍiru fī qalbihi)."
- 20 Al-Ghazālī, Ihyā', vol. 5, pp. 84–5.
- 21 Ibid., pp. 85–7.
- 22 Ibid., pp. 87–92.
- 23 Al-Qushayrī, Laṭā'if al-ishārāt, Cairo: Dār al-Kutub al-'Arabī, 1968–71, vol. 1, p. 232.
- 24 Al-Ghazālī, Ihyā', vol. 5, pp. 92–100.
- 25 'Abd Allāh b. al-'Abbās (d. c.687) is the Companion of the Prophet most often quoted in commentaries on the Qur'ān.
- 26 Mujāhid b. Jubayr al-Makkī (d. 722) was a student of Ibn 'Abbās and is one of the best-known commentators from the Meccan school of the Followers.
- 27 Al-Ghazālī, Ihyā', vol. 5, pp. 100–7.
- 28 Ibid., pp. 107–10.
- 29 Ibid., pp. 110–21.
- 30 Ibid., pp. 121–4. Cf. Abū Ṭālib al-Makkī, Qūt al-qulūb, pp. 96–7.
- 31 Al-Ghazālī, Ihyā', vol. 5, pp. 124–7. Just as al-Ghazālī reworked the material for this passage of his Ihyā' from Abū Ṭālib al-Makkī's Qūt al-qulūb, the material was rewritten once again and included in the Persian Javāhir al-tafsīr of Husayn Va'iz-i Kashifī (d. 1504–5). Never mentioning al-Ghazālī by name, Kashifī selected, changed, and added poetry to his translation and embellishment of al-Ghazālī's ten external courtesies and ten inner practices for reading and understanding the Qur'ān (K. Sands, "On the Popularity of Husayn Va'iz-i Kashifī's Mavāhib-i 'aliyya: A Persian Commentary on the Qur'an," Iranian Studies, 36, 2003, pp. 474–5)

4 METHODS OF INTERPRETATION

- 1 Abū Naṣr al-Sarrāj, Kitāb al-luma' fī 'l-taṣawwuf, ed. Reynold A. Nicholson, Gibb Memorial series, no. 22, London: Luzac, 1963, p. 90.
- 2 Ibid., pp. 90–1.
- 3 Ibid., p. 91.

- 4 Ibid.
- 5 Ibid.
- 6 Abū Ḥamid Muḥammad al-Ghazālī, Al-Ghazālī: The Niche of Lights, A parallel English Arabic Text Translated, Introduced, and Annotated by David Buchman, Provo, UT: Brigham Young University Press, 1998, p. 25. The edition used here contains a complete English translation by D. Buchman that faces the Arabic text. The translations given here are my own unless otherwise specified. Another English trans. is that of W.H.T. Gairdner, Al-Ghazzālī's Mishkat al-anwar, Lahore: Sh. Muhammad Ashraf, 1991.
- 7 Al-Ghazālī, Al-Ghazālī: The Niche of Lights, p. 29.
- 8 Ibid., pp. 25–6.
- 9 Ibid., p. 27.
- 10 The reference is to Qur'ānic verses 6:76–9: When the night covered (Ibrāhīm), he saw a star. He said, "This is my Lord," but when it set he said, "I do not love that which sets." When he saw the moon appear, he said, "This is my Lord," but when it set he said, "If my Lord does not guide me, I will surely be among the people who lose their way." When he saw the sun appear, he said, "This is my Lord. This is the greatest." But when it set, he said, "O my people, I am free of your polytheism. Surely, I have turned my face to the One who created the heavens and the earth, in pure faith. I will never be one of the polytheists."
- 11 Al-Ghazālī, Al-Ghazālī: The Niche of Lights, pp. 27–8.
- 12 Has the story of Mūsā reached you? When he saw a fire and said to his family, "Wait. I perceive a fire. Maybe I can bring you a firebrand from it or find some guidance at the fire." Then, when he came to it, a voice was heard, "O Mūsā, surely I am your Lord. So take off your shoes in the holy valley Ṭuwā (20: 9–12).
- 13 Al-Ghazālī, Al-Ghazālī: The Niche of Lights, p. 30.
- 14 Ibid., pp. 29–32.
- 15 Abū Ḥamid Muḥammad al-Ghazālī, Jawāhir al-Qur'ān wa duraruh, Beirut: Dār al-Afāq al-Jadīda, 1983, p. 33.
- 16 M. Abul Quasem points this out in his translation of the Jawāhir al-Qur'ān (The Jewels of the Qur'ān, London: Kegan Paul International, 1982, p. 57, n. 112). The passage from al-Zamakhsharī's Al-Kashshāf 'an ḥaqā'iq al-tanzīl (Egypt: Muṣṭafā al-Bābī al-Halabī, 1966–8) is found in vol. 3, pp. 445–6.
- 17 W. Chittick, The Sufi Path of Knowledge: Ibn al-'Arabi's Metaphysics of Imagination, Albany, NY: SUNY Press, 1989, pp. 199–202.
- 18 W. Chittick, Imaginal Worlds: Ibn al-'Arabi and the Problem of Religious Diversity, Albany, NY: SUNY Press, 1994, pp. 67–73.
- 19 Ibid., pp. 73–76; Chittick, Sufi Path of Knowledge pp. 231, 245.
- 20 W. Chittick, Imaginal Worlds, pp. 76–7.
- 21 W. Chittick, Sufi Path of Knowledge, p. 199.
- 22 Ibid., p. 244–50; M. Chodkiewicz, An Ocean Without a Shore: Ibn Arabi, the Book and the Law, Albany, NY: SUNY Press, 1993, p. 35.
- 23 The distinction made by Abū Naṣr al-Sarrāj between the method of understanding (fahm) and the method of allusion (ishāra) seems to have been ignored by later Sūfis, for whom allusion (ishāra) described all Sūfi commentary. This is particularly apparent in al-Qushayrī's commentary entitled Lata'if al-ishārāt, where he uses the term continually, in spite of the fact that his commentary more closely corresponds to Abū Naṣr al-Sarrāj's method of understanding (fahm).
- 24 W. Chittick, The Self-Disclosure of God: Principles of Ibn al-'Arabi's Cosmology, Albany, NY: SUNY Press, 1998, pp. 118–19.
- 25 Ibid., pp. 398–9, n. 35.
- 26 Chodkiewicz, An Ocean Without a Shore, pp. 19–57; Chittick, Sufi Path of Knowledge, pp. 242–4.

- 27 Chodkiewicz, An Ocean Without a Shore, p. 37.
- 28 Ibid., pp. 19–20.
- 29 For a discussion of the different definitions of these terms as they were understood towards the end of the classical period, see Jalāl al-Dīn al-Suyūṭī, Al-Itqān fī ‘ulūm al-Qur’ān, Lahore: Suhail Academy, 1980, pp. 173–4.
- 30 Nizām al-Dīn Al-Nīsābūrī, Gharā’ib al-Qur’ān wa raghā’ib al-furqān, ed. Ibrāhīm ‘Aṭwah ‘Iwāḍ, vol. 1 Cairo: Muṣṭafā al-Bābī al-Ḥalabī, 1962–70, p. 52. This section introduces his commentary on Surat al-Fātiḥa.
- 31 Prior to P. Lory’s more extensive analysis of al-Kāshānī’s commentary, Goldziher had suggested that ta’wīl was al-Kāshānī’s word for the interpretation of passages whose literal meaning was obscure, and that taṭbīq was his word for the symbolic interpretation of passages whose unambiguous literal meaning remains intact. Lory, on the basis of his more complete reading of al-Kāshānī, states that al-Kāshānī used ta’wīl as the broader term for all forms of esoteric interpretation, and taṭbīq for the specific type of esoteric interpretation which uncovers the correspondences between Qur’anic symbols and man’s spiritual psychology and development (I. Goldziher, Die Richtungen der islamischen Koranauslegung, Leiden: E.J. Brill, 1952, p. 243; P. Lory, Les Commentaires ésotériques du Coran d’après ‘Abd ar-Razzāq al-Qāshānī, Paris: Les Deux Océans, 1980, pp. 29–33).
- 32 By using the verb “to behold” (iṭṭala’a), al-Kāshānī is making a reference to the Ibn Mas’ūd ḥadīth regarding levels of meaning in the Qur’ān. The noun “lookout point” (muṭṭalī) used in this ḥadīth comes from the same root as the verb iṭṭala’a.
- 33 Al-Kāshānī, Ta’wīlāt, published as Tafsīr al-Qur’ān al-karīm and attributed incorrectly to Ibn ‘Arabī, Beirut: Dār al-Yaqẓat al-‘Arabiyya, 1968, vol. 1: 5.
- 34 Abū Naṣr al-Sarrāj, Kitāb al-luma’, pp. 107–8.
- 35 Abū Muḥammad b. abī Naṣr Rūzbihān al-Baqlī, Arā’is al-bayān fī ḥaqā’iq al-Qur’ān, Lucknow, 1989, vol. 1, p. 3.
- 36 This ḥadīth, which is not mentioned in any of the canonical books of ḥadīth, appears to be a variation on the seven ḥarḥs of the Qur’ān mentioned in the ḥadīth attributed to Ibn Mas’ūd and recorded by al-Ṭabarī.
- 37 ‘Alā al-Dawla Al-Simnānī, “Muqaddima tafsīr al-Qur’ān li-‘Alā’ al-dawla al-Simnānī,” ed. Paul Nwyia Al-Abḥāth, 26, 1973–77, pp. 146–57. Part of the Muqaddima has been analyzed by H. Corbin in The Man of Light in Iranian Sufism, trans. Nancy Pearson, Boulder, CO: Shambhala, 1978, pp. 121–31. J. Elias analyzes the concept of the seven subtle substances in The Throne Carrier of God: The Life and Thought of ‘Ala ad-dawla as-Simnani, Albany, NY: SUNY Press, 1995, pp. 79–99.
- 38 Al-Simnānī, “Muqaddima tafsīr al-Qur’ān, p. 146.
- 39 Ibid., p. 147.
- 40 Ibid., p. 149–50.
- 41 Ibid., p. 152–4.

5 ATTACKING AND DEFENDING ŠUFĪ QUR’ĀNIC INTERPRETATION

- 1 Quoted in al-Ṭabarī’s Qur’ānic commentary Jāmi’ al-bayān ‘an ta’wīl āy al-Qur’ān, Egypt: Muṣṭafā al-Bābī al-Ḥalabī, 1954–7, vol. 1, p. 34.
- 2 Ibid.
- 3 Ibid., vol. 1, pp. 33–4, 41.
- 4 Ibid., p. 35.
- 5 Ibid., p. 41.

- 6 Abū Ḥamid Muḥammad al-Ghazālī, Iḥyā' 'ulūm al-dīn, Beirut: Al-Dār al-Kutub al-ʿIlmiyya, 1989, vol. 5, p. 136. This section is translated in its entirety in M. Abul Quasem's The Recitation and Interpretation of the Qur'an: Al-Ghazālī's Theory, London: Kegan Paul International, 1982.
- 7 Al-Ghazālī, Iḥyā', vol. 5, p. 140.
- 8 Ibid., pp. 137–41.
- 9 Ibid., pp. 141–4.
- 10 Ibid., pp. 144–5.
- 11 For biographical information on al-Qurṭubī, see the Appendix.
- 12 Muḥammad b. Aḥmad 'Abd Allāh al-Anṣārī Al-Qurṭubī, Al-Jāmi' li-aḥkām al-Qur'ān wa'l-mubayyin li-mā taḍammāna min al-sunna wa-āyāt al-furqān, vol. 1, Beirut: Dār al-Kutub al-ʿArabī, 1968–71, pp. 33–4. In his article "Al-Qurṭubī" in Encyclopedia of Islam, new ed., R. Arnaldez compares the passage on the manner of reading the Book of God in the introduction to al-Qurṭubī's tafsīr to a passage in al-Ghazālī's Iḥyā' 'ulūm al-dīn, which is similar in style but not in content. Al-Qurṭubī's borrowing from al-Ghazālī here suggests he was working directly from the Iḥyā', adapting parts of al-Ghazālī's writing to reflect his somewhat different point of view. The passage from al-Ghazālī is also copied without attribution in the introduction to al-Nisābūrī's Gharā'ib al-Qur'ān wa raghā'ib al-furqān, Cairo: Muṣṭafā al-Bābī al-Ḥalabī, 1962–70, vol. 1, p. 57.
- 13 Al-Ghazālī, Iḥyā', vol. 5, p. 129.
- 14 For Ibn al-Jawzī's connection to Sūfism see G. Makdisi's "The Hanbali School and Sufism," Humaniora Islamica, 2, 1974, 61–71.
- 15 Abū'l-Faraj Ibn al-Jawzī, Mukhtaṣar kitāb talbīs Iblīs, Beirut: Mu'assasāt al-Risāla, 1992, pp. 148, 268–79; There is a partial English translation of this work by D.S. Margoliouth entitled "The Devil's Delusion" in Islamic Culture in 10, 1936, pp. 229–68 and 11, 1937, pp. 393–403.
- 16 Ibn al-Jawzī, Mukhtaṣar kitāb talbīs Iblīs, p. 271.
- 17 Ibid., p. 274.
- 18 Ibid., p. 273.
- 19 Aḥmad Taqī al-Dīn Ibn Taymiyya, Al-radd 'alā al-manṭiqiyyīn, Bombay: Al-Maṭba'at al-Qayyima, 1949, pp. 509–10.
- 20 Ibid., pp. 510–11.
- 21 Ibid., p. 511. Ibn Taymiyya does not mention who said this.
- 22 The English translation here is that of T. Michel from his "Ibn Taymiyya's Sharḥ on the Futūḥ al-ghayb of 'Abd al-Qādir al-Jīlānī," Hamdard Islamicus, 4, 1981, p. 8.
- 23 Abū Ishāq Aḥmad al-Tha'labī (d. 1045) wrote a book entitled Qatā' l-Qur'ān with the stories of men and jinn who died upon hearing a recitation of the Qur'ān. B. Wesimüller has prepared a critical edition and German translation of this text, Die vom Koran Getöten: At-Ta'labīs Qatā' l-Qur'ān nach der Istanbuler und den Leidener Handschriften with commentary (Würzburg: Ergon Verlag, 2002). See also Kermani's comments on the text, in which he emphasizes that the deaths are described as occurring not from bliss, but from an intense fear of God and His judgment (Gott ist schön: Das ästhetische Erleben des Koran, Munich: Verlag C.H. Beck, 1999).
- 24 Ibn al-Jawzī, Mukhtaṣar kitāb talbīs Iblīs, pp. 206–16.
- 25 This is T.E. Homer's translation from "Ibn Taymiyya's Al-Ṣūfiyyah wa-al-fuqarā'," Arabica, 32, 1985, 225–8.
- 26 The concept of ecstasy (wajd) is related to the concept of fanā' (annihilation), which Ibn Taymiyya discusses in detail in a number of his works. According to J. Pavlin, who has made a study of these works, Ibn Taymiyya does not reject the concept entirely but attempts to redefine it according to the pietism of the Hanbalī madhab. He describes three types of fanā', a classification that separates those states and beliefs that he

- judges to be praiseworthy from those that he considers to be deficient and blameworthy. ("The Salafi-ization of the Fanā': Ibn Taymiyya and the Annihilation of the Self," Paper presented at the Middle East Studies Association Annual Meeting, Washington, DC, Nov. 19–22, 1999.)
- 27 Ibn al-Jawzī, Mukhtaṣar kitāb talbīs Iblīs, p. 150.
 - 28 Ibid., pp. 149–51.
 - 29 Ibid.
 - 30 Ibn Taymiyya, Muqaddam fī uṣūl al-tafsīr, Cairo: Maktaba al-Turāth al-Islāmiyya, 1988. For an English translation of this work, see Muqaddam fī uṣūl al-tafsīr: An Introduction to the Principles of Tafseer, trans. M. Ansari, Birmingham, UK: Al-Hidaayah Publishing, 1993. An excerpt of the work is also translated by J. McAuliffe in "Ibn Taymiyya: Treatise on the Principles of Tafsīr," Windows on the House of Islam: Muslim Sources on Spirituality and Religious Life, Berkeley, CA University of California Press, 1998, 35–43.
 - 31 On al-Ghazālī's rejections of the Companions' opinions as ḥujja, see his Al-Mustasfā min 'ilm al-uṣūl, vol. 1, Beirut: Mu'assasāt al-Risāla, 1997, pp. 400–9.
 - 32 Ibn Taymiyya, Muqaddam fī uṣūl al-tafsīr, pp. 93–102.
 - 33 Ibid., pp. 46–7.
 - 34 Ibid., pp. 46–7, 96–8, 100–2.
 - 35 In "The Principles of Ibn Taymiyya's Qur'ānic Interpretation," D. Syafruddin suggests that it is not the hierarchy of sources that make Ibn Taymiyya's methodology unique, but rather the assumptions behind it (M.A. Thesis, Institute of Islamic Studies, McGill University, Montreal, 1994), pp. 113–8.
 - 36 Ibn Taymiyya, Muqaddam fī uṣūl al-tafsīr, pp. 83–92. Although Ibn Taymiyya's criticism of al-Sulamī is somewhat mild here, G. Böwering states that Ibn Taymiyya issued highly critical judgments against his tafsīr in his Fatāwā ("The Qur'ān Commentary of al-Sulamī," Islamic Studies Presented to Charles J. Adams, ed. W.B. Hallaq and D.P. Little, Leiden: E.J. Brill, 1991, p. 41–56), p. 52.
 - 37 Al-Ghazālī, Fayṣal al-tafrīqa bayna al-Islām wa'l-zandaqa, Dār al-Nashr al-Maghribiyya, 1983. There is an English translation of this by R.J. McCarthy in Freedom and Fulfillment, Boston, MA: Twayne, 1980, pp. 45–174.
 - 38 Two people who would disagree here with al-Ghazālī, for entirely different reasons are Ibn Taymiyya and Ibn 'Arabī. We have already mentioned that Ibn Taymiyya insists that the literal sense of the Qur'ānic text must never be abandoned because reason properly applied will never contradict the Qur'ān or authentic aḥādīth (B. Abrahamov, "Ibn Taymiyya on the Agreement of Reason with Tradition," Muslim World, 82, 1992, 256–72). Ibn 'Arabī also insists that the literal sense must never be abandoned, but for a different reason: perfect knowledge combines both the faculties of the intellect and imagination, both of which are needed to understand God's revelation (W. Chittick, The Sufi Path of Knowledge: Ibn al-'Arabī's Metaphysics of Imagination, Albany, NY: SUNY Press, 1998, pp. 199–202).
 - 39 Al-Ghazālī, Fayṣal al-tafrīqa, pp. 9–15.
 - 40 Aḥmad ibn Ḥanbal (d. 855) was the founder of the Ḥanbalī School of Law. Al-Ghazālī states that there were three aḥādīth which Ibn Ḥanbal interpreted metaphorically, but cites only two of these interpretations. One example will suffice here. The Prophet said, "The believer's heart is between the two fingers of the Merciful." Ibn Ḥanbal interpreted these fingers as the touch of the angel and the devil, by means of which God upsets the hearts of men.
 - 41 Traditions based on multiple transmission (bi-tawātur). Al-Ghazālī, Fayṣal al-tafrīqa, pp. 18–21.
 - 42 Ibid., pp. 23–5.
 - 43 Ibid., pp. 21–3.
 - 44 Al-Ghazālī, Iḥyā', vol. 10, pp. 517–22.

- 45 Al-Ghazālī, The Niche of Lights, A Parallel English-Arabic text translated, introduced and annotated by David Buchman, Prov, UT: Brigham Young University Press, 1998, pp. 27–8.
- 46 Ibid., pp. 30, 32–4.
- 47 Ibid., p. 23.
- 48 Ibid., p. 28.
- 49 In his Al-Ibāna ‘an uṣūl al-diyāna (Beirut, 1994), al-Ash‘arī states that one must not abandon the literal sense of the Qur‘ān without proof (hujja), pp. 105–6. This work has been translated into English by W.C. Klein (Al-Ash‘arī’s Al-Ibānah ‘an ḥaqā’iq al-tanzīl, Egypt, 1966).
- 50 Mālik b. Anas (d. 796) is the imām of the school of Mālikīs.
- 51 Qur‘ān 20:5.
- 52 Istawā is the verb used in Qur‘ān 20:5, translated here as “sits firm.”
- 53 Muwaffaq al-Dīn ‘Abd Allāh Ibn Qudāma, Ibn Qudāma’s Censure of Speculative Theology: An edition and translation of Ibn Qudāma’s Taḥrīm an-naẓar fī kutub ahl al-kalām, trans. G. Makdisi, London: Luzac, 1962, p. 30.
- 54 Al-Rāzī, Al-Taḥfīr al-kabīr, Beirut: Dār Iḥyā, al-Turāth al-‘Arabī, 1980, vol. 7, pp. 187–8.
- 55 For the chronology of al-Ghazālī’s works, see G.F. Hourani’s “The Chronology of al-Ghazālī’s Writings,” Journal of the American Oriental Society, 79, 1959, 225–33.
- 56 Al-Ghazālī, Iljām al-awāmm ‘an ‘ilm al-kalām, Beirut: Dār al-Kitāb al-‘Arabī, 1985, pp. 60–68.
- 57 Al-Ghazālī, Iḥyā, vol. 5, pp. 142–3. Cf. al-Qurṭubī, Al-Jāmi‘ li-aḥkām, vol. 1, pp. 33–4 and al-Nīsābūrī, Gharā’ib al-Qur‘ān, vol. 1, pp. 56–7.
- 58 When al-Qurṭubī quotes this passage from al-Ghazālī in the introduction to his own taḥfīr, he adds a significant phrase, “it is prohibited because it is an analogy (qiyās) in language that is not permitted,” Al-Qurṭubī, Al-Jāmi‘ li-aḥkām, vol. 1, p. 33.
- 59 According to Hourani, the Mishkāt al-anwār is generally considered to be a late work of al-Ghazālī’s, based on its developed mystical doctrine. However, based on references within the writings of al-Ghazālī to his other works, it is unclear whether it was written before or after Fayṣal al-tafrīqā. In any event, Iḥyā ‘ulūm al-dīn is considered the earliest book of the books discussed here.
- 60 Elsewhere, al-Ghazālī defines the ḥashawīyya as those “believing themselves bound to a blind and routine submission to the criterion of human authority and to the literal meaning of the revealed books” (Iqtīṣād fī’l iṭtiqād, quoted in A.S. Halkin, “The Hashawīyya,” Journal of the American Oriental Society, 54, 1934, 12). According to Halkin, the term was a derogatory term originally directed towards traditionalists (aṣḥāb al-ḥadīth) and Ḥanbalīs themselves (Halkin, pp. 1–28).
- 61 Al-Ghazālī is saying that this tradition is either from the Prophet or from ‘Alī.
- 62 The root of this verb is the same as that for the noun “similitude” (mithāl). Literally, it could be translated as, “he made himself similar to.”
- 63 Al-Ghazālī, Mishkāt al-anwār, pp. 32–3. “Taking heed” (ītibār) and “crossing over” (ubūr) come from the same root as dream or vision interpretation (ta’bīr).
- 64 ‘Alā’ al-Dawla Al-Simnānī, “Muqaddima tafsīr al-Qur‘ān li-’Alā al-dawla al-Simnānī,” Al-Abḥāth, 1973–71, vol. 26, p. 151.
- 65 Ibid., pp. 155–6. Some of the terms used here are difficult to understand without a broader overview of al-Simnānī’s thought. Al-Simnānī is describing the descent of evermore subtle understandings of the Qur‘ān, all of which may be denied at different spiritual levels. This descent can be understood in terms of his system of emanation, for which see J. Elias, The Throne Carrier of God: The Life and Thought of ‘Ala ad-dawla as-Simnani, Albany, NY: SUNY Press, 1995, pp. 72–77.
- 66 Al-Simnānī, “Muqaddima tafsīr al-Qur‘ān,” p. 156.

6 ŠUFĪ COMMENTATORS ON THE QUR'ĀN

- 1 Norman Calder, "Tafsīr from Ṭabarī to ibn Kathīr: Problems in the description of the genre, illustrated with reference to the story of Abraham," in Approaches to the Qur'ān, ed. G.R. Hawting and A.A. Shareef, London: Routledge, 1993, pp. 101–40.
- 2 Ibid., p. 101.
- 3 Calder includes orthography, lexis, syntax, rhetoric, and symbol/allegory in the category of instrumental structures; and prophetic history, theology, eschatology, law and Šūfism in the category of ideological structures (Ibid., pp. 105–6).
- 4 Ibid., pp. 134 and 134–5, nn. 2–3.
- 5 The Šūfī commentaries that address each sūra of the Qur'ān do not comment on each and every verse. Some are even more selective, such as the commentary of al-Ghazālī on the Verse of Light which addresses only one verse and one ḥadīth.
- 6 See I. Goldziher's chapter "Koranauslegung der islamischen Mystik" in his Die Richtungen der islamischen Koranauslegung, Leiden: E.J. Brill, 1952, pp. 180–262; and A. Rippin in his articles on "Tafsīr" for The Encyclopedia of Islam, new ed. and The Encyclopedia of Religion.
- 7 A. Habil, "Traditional esoteric commentaries on the Quran," in Islamic Spirituality: Foundations, ed. S.H. Nasr, New York: Crossroad, 1987, p. 25.
- 8 For the life and works of al-Tustarī, see G. Böwering, The Mystical Vision of Existence: The Qur'ānic Hermeneutics of the Šūfī Sahl at-Tustarī, Berlin: Walter De Gruyter, 1980, pp. 7–75.
- 9 Ibid., pp. 100–9. The edition used for this study was published under the title Tafsīr al-Tustarī in Beirut 2002. Although the editor, Muḥammad Bāsīl 'Uyūn al-Sūd, has added notes identifying aḥādīth, and authors and works cited, the text appears to be the same as the edition entitled Tafsīr al-Qur'ān al-aẓīm published in Cairo in 1911. Selected passages of this work have been translated into English by M. Sells in Early Islamic Mysticism: Sufi, Qur'an, Mi'raj, Poetic and Theological Writings, New York: Paulist Press, 1996, pp. 89–96.
- 10 G. Böwering, Mystical Vision of Existence, pp. 128–9.
- 11 Ibid., pp. 129–30, 262.
- 12 Ibid., p. 129.
- 13 Information on the life and works of al-Sulamī can be found in several of G. Böwering's works: "The Qur'ān Commentary of al-Sulamī," in Islamic Studies Presented to Charles J. Adams, eds W. Hallaq and D. Little, Leiden: E.J. Brill, 1991, pp. 41–6; "The Major Sources on Sulamī's Minor Qur'ān Commentary," Oriens, 35, 1996, pp. 35–56; Mystical Vision of Existence, pp. 110–2, and the introduction by Böwering to Al-Sulamī's Ziyādāt ḥaqā'iq al-tafsīr (The Minor Qur'ān Commentary), Beirut: Dār al-Mashriq, 1986, pp. 15–21.
- 14 Al-Sulamī, Ḥaqā'iq al-tafsīr, ed. S. 'Umrān, Beirut: Dār al-Kutub al-'Ilmiyya, 2001.
- 15 L. Massignon copied the comments attributed to al-Hallāj in his Essai sur les origines du lexique technique de la Mystique Musulmane, Paris: J. Vrin, 1968, pp. 359–412 and P. Nwyia copied the comments attributed to Ja'far al-Šādiq in "Le Tafsīr mystique attribué à Ja'far al-Šādiq," Melanges De L'Universite Saint Joseph, 1968, vol. 43, pp. 179–230. A few passages from the latter have been translated into English by M. Sells, Early Islamic Mysticism, pp. 75–89. A significant amount of material from the Ḥaqā'iq al-tafsīr is quoted in Rūzbihān al-Baqlī's commentary 'Arā'is al-bayān fī ḥaqā'iq al-Qur'ān', Lucknow, 1898.
- 16 Al-Sulamī, Ziyādāt ḥaqā'iq al-tafsīr (The Minor Qur'ān Commentary).
- 17 Böwering, "The Major Sources of Sulamī's Minor Qur'ān Commentary," p. 39. The inclusion of material attributed to Ja'far al-Šādiq has intrigued scholars since Massignon first noted it in his Essai (pp. 201–6) because it raises the question of

- the relationship between Sūfism and Shī'ism in the early stages of Islam. How much Ja'far al-Šādiq's approach to interpretation influenced both Šūfis and Shī'is is difficult to determine. Šūfī exegesis came to be characterized by symbolic and literary interpretation based on mystical experiences, but the hallmark of Shī'ī exegesis was allegorical interpretation which found hidden Qur'ānic references to 'Alī, Fāṭima, and their descendants. Only one of the manuscripts of Sulamī's Ḥaqā'iq contains anything like the latter, and this in only one passage which identifies five beings which received five of God's names: Muḥammad, 'Alī, Fāṭima, Ḥasan, and Ḥusayn (Sells, Early Islamic Mysticism, 77–8). On the basis of an analysis of the isnads given for Ja'far al-Šādiq's sayings in al-Sulamī's works and the absence of this material in any previous Šūfī works, Böwering concludes that al-Sulamī was the first Šūfī to incorporate the body of teachings attributed to Ja'far al-Šādiq into Sūfism. Ibn Taymiyya accused al-Sulamī of lying about what Ja'far al-Šādiq said. (M. al-Dhahabī, Al-tafsīr wa'l-mufasssīrūn, Cairo: Dār al-Kutub al-ḥadītha, 1967, p. 386.) Other Shī'ī sources were used earlier than al-Sulamī, such as the first four imams and other Shī'ī authorities quoted by al-Tustarī in his tafsīr. (Böwering, Mystical Vision, p. 67.) On the existence of mystical esotericism in early Shī'ism, see M. Amir-Moezzi, The Divine Guide in Early Shī'ism: The Sources of Esotericism in Islam, trans. D. Streight, Albany, NY: SUNY, 1994.
- 18 Böwering, "The Qur'ān Commentary of al-Sulamī," p. 52.
 - 19 Böwering, "The Major Sources of Sulamī's Minor Qur'ān Commentary," p. 40.
 - 20 Böwering, "The Qur'ān Commentary of al-Sulamī," p. 56, and Mystical Vision, p. 110.
 - 21 Ibid., p. 51. Cf. Mystical Vision, pp. 136–7.
 - 22 Nwyia, Exégèse Coranique, et Language Mystique: Nouvel essai sur le lexique technique des mystiques musulmans, Beirut: Dar El-Masreq, 1970, p. 178.
 - 23 Quoted by I. Basyūnī in his introduction to al-Qushayrī's Laṭā'if al-ishārāt, p. 16.
 - 24 Abū'l-Faraj Ibn al-Jawzī, Mukhtaṣar kitāb talbīs ilbīs, Beirut: Mu'assasāt al-Risāla, 1992, pp. 149–51, 280–2.
 - 25 See Basyūnī's introduction to al-Qushayrī's Laṭā'if al-ishārāt, p. 16, and Böwering, "The Qur'ān Commentary of al-Sulamī," p. 52.
 - 26 Information on the life and works of al-Qushayrī can be found in R. Ahmad, "Abu al-Qāsim al-Qushayrī as a Theologian and Commentator," Islamic Quarterly, 12, 1968, 71–119; Basyūnī's introduction to al-Qushayrī's Laṭā'if al-ishārāt, pp. 19–27, and H. Halm's "Al-Qushayrī" in The Encyclopedia of Islam, new ed.
 - 27 Al-Qushayrī, Laṭā'if al-ishārāt.
 - 28 Ibid., Introduction by Basyūnī, p. 42.
 - 29 Ibid.
 - 30 Ibid., pp. 43–4 and Ahmad, "Abu al-Qāsim al-Qushayrī," pp. 60–5.
 - 31 Ibid., pp. 47–9.
 - 32 In his Takrīj abyāt laṭā'if al-ishārāt l-imam al-Qushayrī wa dirāsāt al-minhaj al-Qushayrī fī l-istashād al-adab (Cairo: Al-Sa'āda, 1986), A.A. Muṣṭafā states that al-Qushayrī borrows some 4,000 lines from Jāhiliyya and 'Abbāsīd poetry, adapting them to his own themes and purposes by spiritualizing their sensual references.
 - 33 Information on the life and works of al-Ghazālī can be found in M. Watt's "Al-Ghazālī" in The Encyclopedia of Islam and The Encyclopedia of Religion. For an excellent review of scholarly research on al-Ghazālī, see D. Buchman's introduction to Al-Ghazālī: The Niche of Lights, Provo, UT: Brigham Young University Press, 1998.
 - 34 N. Heer, "Abū Ḥamid al-Ghazālī's Esoteric Exegesis of the Koran," in Classical Persian Sufism: From its Origins to Rumi, ed. L. Lewisohn, London: Khaneqahi Nimatullahi Publications, 1993, p. 235.
 - 35 The edition used here is a parallel English-Arabic text with English translation by Buchman. An earlier English translation was published by W.H.T. Gairdner, Lahore: Sh. Muhammad Ashraf, 1991 (originally published in 1924).

- 36 Quoted in F. Kholeif's A Study on Fakhr al-Dīn al-Rāzī and His Controversies in Transoxiana, Beirut: Dar El-Machreq, 1966, p. 13.
- 37 Rashid al-Dīn al-Maybudī, Kashf al-asrār wa-uddat al-abrār, ed. 'A.A. Hikmat, Tehran: Amīr Kabīr, 1982–3.
- 38 M.M. Rokni, Laṭāyif-i az Qur'ān-i karīm, Mashhad: Mu'assasah-i chāp va intisharāt-i āstān-I quds-I rāvi, 1996, pp. 31–6.
- 39 Al-Maybudī, Kashf al-asrār, vol. 1, p. 1. There are no independent extant copies of al-Anṣārī's commentary.
- 40 Ibid.
- 41 Bowering, Mystical Vision, p. 36.
- 42 Rokni, Laṭāyif-i az Qur'ān-i karīm, pp. 115–21. In addition to Rokni's work in Persian on Maybudī, Annabel Keeler will be publishing a monograph in English based on her PhD dissertation entitled "Persian Sufism and Exegesis: Maybudī's Commentary on the Qur'ān, the Kashf al-asrār" (University of Cambridge, 2001).
- 43 Šābiqūn is a Qur'ānic term used in verses 9:100, 23:61, 35:32.
- 44 A.J. Arberry, Shiraz: Persian City of Saints and Poets, Norman, OK: University of Oklahoma Press, 1960, p. 90. Information on the life and works of Rūzbihān can be found in C. Ernst, "Rūzbihān Baqlī" in The Encyclopedia of Islam, new ed. and Rūzbihān Baqlī: Mysticism and the Rhetoric of Sainthood in Persian Sufism, Richmond, UK: Curzon Press, 1995, pp. 1–15; and L. Massignon, "La Vie et les oeuvres de Ruzbehan Baqli," in Opera minora, ed. Y. Moubarac, Beirut: Dār al-Ma'ārif, 1963, vol. 2, pp. 451–65.
- 45 Translated into English by C. Ernst in The Unveiling of Secrets: Diary of a Sufi Master, Chapel Hill, NC: Parvardigar Press, 1997; and analyzed in Ernst's Rūzbihān Baqlī.
- 46 Discussed by H. Corbin in En Islam iranien, Paris: Gallimard, 1972, vol. 3, pp. 45–64.
- 47 Discussed by C. Ernst as Words of Ecstasy in Sufism, Albany, NY: SUNY Press, 1985, pp. 14–21, 85–94.
- 48 Rūzbihān al-Baqlī, Arā'is al-bayān fi haqā'iq al-Qur'ān, Lucknow, 1898.
- 49 A. Godlas, "Psychology and Transformation in the Sufi Qur'ān Commentary of Rūzbihān al-Baqlī," Sufi Illuminations, 1, 1996, p. 55, n. 4.
- 50 Quoted in C. Ernst, "The Symbolism of Birds and Flight in the Writings of Ruzbihan Baqli," in The Legacy of Mediaeval Persian Sufism, ed. L. Lewisohn, London: Khaneqahi Nimatullahi, 1992, p. 356.
- 51 Ibid., pp. 355–6.
- 52 Quoted in Ernst, Rūzbihān Baqlī, p. xi.
- 53 A. Schimmel, Mystical Dimensions of Islam, Chapel Hill, NC: University of North Carolina Press, 1975, p. 298.
- 54 See P. Lory, Les Commentaires ésotériques du Coran d'après 'Abd ar-Razzāq al-Qāshānī, Paris: Les Deux Océans, 1980, pp. 20–2 and D.B. Macdonald, "'Abd al-Razzāq al-Kāshānī," The Encyclopedia of Islam, new ed.
- 55 On the term "school of Ibn 'Arabī" and the followers to which it refers, see W. Chittick, "The School of Ibn 'Arabī," History of Islamic Philosophy, ed. S.H. Nasr and O. Leaman, London: Routledge, 1996, vol. 1, pp. 510–23.
- 56 The edition used for this study was published as Tafsīr al-Qur'ān al-karīm and attributed to Ibn 'Arabī, Beirut, 1968. The authenticity of the work is discussed in P. Lory, Les Commentaires ésotériques, pp. 19–20 and J. Morris, "Ibn Arabi and His Interpreters. Part II (Conclusion): Influences and Interpretations," Journal of the American Oriental Society, 107, 1987, p. 101, n.73. Translations of portions of the commentary have been paraphrased and translated into English in M. Ayoub's The Qur'ān and its Interpreters, Albany, NY: SUNY Press, 1992 (but attributed to Ibn 'Arabī); and S. Murata's The Tao of Islam: A Sourcebook of Gender Relationships in Islamic Thought, Albany, NY: SUNY Press, 1992.
- 57 W. Chittick, The Sufi Path of Knowledge: Ibn al-'Arabī's Metaphysics of Imagination, Albany, NY: SUNY Press, 1998, pp. xvi–xx.

- 58 Morris, "Ibn 'Arabi and His Interpreters. Part II," 103–4.
- 59 Ibid., pp. 102–3.
- 60 Ibid., pp. 105. It is the philosophical underpinning of this kind of technique which R. Ahmad has in mind when he suggests that there are two types of Ṣūfī commentary, symbolic (ishārī or ramzī) and speculative (naẓarī), "Qur'ānic Exegesis and Classical Tafsīr," The Islamic Quarterly, 12, 1968, 104–5.
- 61 Lory, Les Commentaires ésotériques, pp. 28–33.
- 62 Ibid., pp. 3–5. These passages have been translated in Part I. A French translation of the entire introduction can be found in Lory, pp. 149–53.
- 63 Information on the life and works of al-Nīsābūrī can be found in al-Dhahabī, Al-Tafsīr wa'l-mufasssīrūn, Cairo: Dār al-kutub al-ḥadītha, 1967, vol. 1, pp. 321–2.
- 64 Al-Nīsābūrī, Gharā'ib al-Qur'ān wa ragḥā'ib al-furqān, Cairo, 1962–70. Portions of this commentary have been paraphrased and translated into English in Ayoub, The Qur'ān and Its Interpreters.
- 65 Al-Nīsābūrī, Gharā'ib al-Qur'ān, vol. 30, p. 223.
- 66 J. Elias, The Throne Carrier of God: The Life and Thought of 'Ala' ad-dawla as-Simnani, Albany, NY: SUNY Press, 1995, pp. 203–6. Elias gives additional information for many of the manuscripts of these tafsīrs.
- 67 Cf. al-Suyūtī's list of the fifteen types of knowledge required for the commentator, the last of which is "bestowed knowledge" (ilm al-mawhibā), which is the knowledge that God bequeaths to those who act on what they know," Al-Itqān fī 'ulūm al-Qur'ān, Egypt, 1954–7, pp. 180–1.

7 QUR'ĀNIC VERSES 18:60–82: THE STORY OF MŪSĀ AND AL-KHAḌĪR

- 1 A.J. Wensinck, in his article "al-Khaḍīr" in The Encyclopedia of Islam, new ed., identifies the common elements as follows. In the Gilgamesh epic, Gilgamesh travels looking for his ancestor who lives at the mouth of the rivers and has been given eternal life. In the Alexander romance, Alexander is accompanied by his cook Andreas in his search for the spring of life. At one point in their difficult journey, Andreas washes a salted fish in a spring that causes it to come alive and swim away. Andreas jumps in after it and attains immortality. In the Jewish legend, the prophet Elijah travels with Rabbi Joshua ben Levi, with the condition that he accepts his actions unconditionally. Elijah performs a series of seemingly outrageous acts that are ultimately explained to the perplexed Joshua (vol. 4; pp. 902b–3a).
- 2 A.J. Wensinck, "Ilyās," Shorter Encyclopedia of Islam, p. 164b, following the earlier opinions of Y.L. Zunz, Abraham Geiger, and Israel Friedländer. For the references for these earlier opinions, see B.M. Wheeler, "The Jewish Origins of Qur'ān 18:65–82? Reexamining Arent Jan Wensinck, Theory," Journal of the American Oriental Society, 118, 1998, 155. This article has been rewritten into a chapter in Wheeler's Moses in the Quran and Islamic Exegesis, London: RoutledgeCurzon, 2002, pp. 10–36.
- 3 Wheeler, "The Jewish Origins of the Qur'ān 18:65–82?" pp. 153–71.
- 4 Abū Ja'far al-Tabarī, Jāmi' al-bayān 'an ta'wīl āy Qur'ān, vol. 15, Egypt: Muṣṭafa al-Bābī al-Halabī, 1954–7, p. 278.
- 5 Ibid., vol. 15, p. 277.
- 6 Ibid., p. 280.
- 7 Ibid.
- 8 Ibid., p. 283.
- 9 Ibid., pp. 278–9.
- 10 Ibid., p. 279.
- 11 Ibid., p. 281.

- 12 Al-Tabarī, The History of al-Ṭabarī (Taʾrīkh al-rusul waʾl-mulūk): The Children of Israel, vol. 3, p. 5. L. Massignon in “Elie et son rôle transhistorique, Khadiriya, en Islam” (Opera Minora, ed. Y. Moubarac, Beirut: Dār al-Maʿārif, 1963, vol.1, pp. 142–61), notes the common pairing of Khadīr and Ilyās and the fact that they are sometimes even identified with one another in Muslim sources. He explores the role of al-Khadīr in the devotional life of Muslims and finds his alleged immortality and sainthood, and his reported apparitions and acts of intercession functioning as a symbol of messianic hope for the poor and oppressed similar to the role of Elijah in Judaism and Christianity.
- 13 Al-Qurtubī, Al-Jāmiʿ li-aḥkām al-Qurʾān waʾl-mubayyin li-mā taḍammāna min al-sunna wa-āyāt al-furqān, Beirut: Dār al-Kutub al-ʿArabī, 1980, vol. 11, pp. 41–5.
- 14 H. Corbin, inspired by al-Khadīr’s role as a spiritual master in the life of Ibn ʿArabī and other Ṣūfīs, uses concepts from both Ṣūfism and Jungian analytical psychology to analyze the spiritual experience that he believes represents the act of recognizing oneself as a disciple of al-Khadīr. He views al-Khadīr as both a person and an archetype who leads each of his disciples throughout the ages to their own theophanies (Creative Imagination in the Ṣūfism of Ibn ʿArabī, trans. R. Manheim, Princeton, NJ: Princeton University Press, 1969, pp. 53–67).
- 15 C. Ernst, The Shambhala Guide to Sufism, Boston, MA: Shambhala, 1997, p. 23.
- 16 The complete verse reads, And your Lord revealed to the bees, “Take houses for yourselves from the mountains, trees, and from what they build.”
- 17 The complete verse reads, And We revealed to the mother of Mūsā, “Nurse him, but when you are afraid for him, cast him into the river. Do not be afraid nor grieve, for We will return him to you and We will make him one of the messengers.”
- 18 Al-Sulamī, Ziyādāt ḥaqāʾiq al-tafsīr (The Minor Commentary), Beirut: Dār al-Mashriq, 1986, p. 84. Quoted in Rūzbihān al-Baqlī’s ʿArāʾis al-bayān fī ḥaqāʾiq al-Qurʾān (Lucknow, 1898) without the chain of transmission (isnād), vol. 1, p. 592. This interpretation is not included in the edition of Al-Tustarī’s tafsīr used for this study.
- 19 Al-Sulamī, Ḥaqāʾiq al-tafsīr, Beirut: Dār al-Kutub al-ʿIlmiyya, 2001, vol.1, p. 414 and Rūzbihān, ʿArāʾis al-bayān, vol. 1, p. 591. The use of the word kashf to describe the unveiling of certain realities has its basis in the Qurʾānic verses You were heedless of this but now We have removed (kashafnā) your veil (50:22) and That which is imminent becomes imminent. No one but God can unveil (kāshifa) it (53:57–58). In his Risāla, al-Qushayrī describes three stages of increasing nearness to the truth: presence of the heart before God’s signs (muḥāḍara), unveiling (mukāshafa), and direct witnessing (mushāhada). For this and other examples of the term kashf in Ṣūfism, see L. Gardet’s article “Kashf” in The Encyclopedia of Islam, new ed.
- 20 Abūʾl-ʿAbbās al-Qāsim b. Maḥdī al-Sayyārī.
- 21 Al-Sulamī, Ḥaqāʾiq al-tafsīr, vol. 1, p. 414 and Rūzbihān, ʿArāʾis al-bayān, vol. 1, p. 591.
- 22 Al-Sulamī, Ziyādāt ḥaqāʾiq al-tafsīr, pp. 84–5.
- 23 Al-Qushayrī, Latāʾif al-ishārāt, Cairo: Dār al-Kutub al-ʿArabī, 1968–71, vol. 4, pp. 79–80.
- 24 Al-Rāzī, Al-Tafsīr al-kabīr, vol. 21, Beirut, 1980, p. 148.
- 25 Ibid.
- 26 The terms are found in Islamic theology as far back as the Ashʿarī scholars Abu Bakr al-Bāqallānī (d. 1013) and ʿAbd al-Qāhir b. Ṭāhir al-Baghdādī (d. 1037–8). See F. Rosenthal’s Knowledge Triumphant: The Concept of Knowledge in Medieval Islam, Leiden: E.J. Brill, 1970, pp. 216–18, 227–30 and A.J. Wensinck’s The Muslim Creed: Its Genesis and Historical Development, New York: Barnes and Noble, 1965, p. 250f.
- 27 Al-Rāzī, Al-Tafsīr al-kabīr, vol. 21, p. 149.
- 28 Al-Rāzī’s use of the phrase “considerative types of knowledge (al-ʿulūm al-naẓariyya)” is confusing because he appears to be using it as a synonym for “necessary types of knowledge (al-‘ulūm al-ḍarūriyya). It is possible that he is using the adjective naẓarī in its broadest sense to refer to consideration (naẓar) by the five physical senses and the intellect before it engages in the processes of inference or deduction. But then he uses the noun “consideration” (naẓar) in the opposite category, to describe an acquired form of knowledge. It is this second usage that is the more common, and the term speculative knowledge (‘ilm naẓarī) is often used as a synonym for acquired (muktasab or kasbī) knowledge. See Rosenthal Knowledge Triumphant, pp. 216–18, 227–30 and Wensinck, The Muslim Creed, p. 250f.

- 29 Al-Rāzī, Al-Tafsīr al-kabīr, vol. 21, p. 150.
- 30 M. Watt, following Miguel Asin, does not consider Al-Risālat al-laduniyya to be an authentic work of al-Ghazālī. He quotes Asin’s observation concerning the similarity between the work and the Risāla fīl-naḥs wa’l-rūḥ of Ibn ‘Arabī: Asin judged the terminology and ideology of the latter work to be distinctly that of Ibn ‘Arabī’s and therefore judged Al-Risālat al-laduniyya as incorrectly attributed to al-Ghazālī. Watt judges the work as inauthentic on this basis and his own assessment that the work is uncharacteristic of al-Ghazālī’s thought as demonstrated in works of indisputable authenticity. According to Watt, in Al-Risālat al-laduniyya, al-Ghazālī gives precedence to reason (‘aql) over revelation, and he makes a distinction between revelation (waḥy) and inspiration (ilhām). The first idea is contrary to the precedence given to revelation in al-Ghazālī’s Al-Munqidh min al-ḍalāl and the second idea is not discussed there or in the Mishkāṭ al-anwār, an omission Watt finds puzzling if this distinction was part of al-Ghazālī’s belief (“The Authenticity of the Works Attributed to al-Ghazālī,” Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society, 1952, pp. 33–4). In response to Asin’s textual evidence, the mention of a treatise by al-Ghazālī on ‘ilm ladunnī in al-Rāzī’s tafsīr demonstrates that a book on this topic attributed to al-Ghazālī existed before 1209, the year of al-Rāzī’s death, at which time Ibn ‘Arabī was in his early forties. It seems unlikely then, that Ibn ‘Arabī’s Al-Risāla fīl-naḥs wa’l-rūḥ could have been the source of the treatise mentioned here. The additional arguments made by Watt on the basis of the content of the Risāla al-laduniyya are not, in my opinion, sufficient to disprove the authenticity of the work. Al-Ghazālī is not elevating the human faculty of the intellect over revelation in Al-Risāla al-laduniyya, but rather the Universal Intellect. The distinction between revelation and inspiration is found in early Ṣūfism, so its adoption by al-Ghazālī is unsurprising and is not inconsistent with the ideas found in his Iḥyā’ ‘ulūm al-dīn.
- 31 Al-Ghazālī, Al-Risālat al-laduniyya, Cairo, n.d., pp. 19–26. A English translation of this treatise was done by M. Smith, “Al-Risālat Al-Laduniyya,” Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society, 1938, 177–200, 353–74.
- 32 The notion of the Universal Soul (al-naḥs al-kullī) and the Universal Intellect (al-‘aql al-kullī) are found in the Neoplatonic teachings of Plotinus, as Smith points out in the introduction to her translation of this treatise, pp. 181–6. Al-Ghazālī understands these metaphysical concepts as the equivalent of the Qur’anic terms “Tablet” (lawḥ) (Al-Ghazālī, Al-Risālat al-laduniyya, p. 25) and “Pen” (qalam) (Smith’s introduction p. 196, n. 6).
- 33 Cf. Ibn Sīnā in his Fī ithbāt al-nubuwwāt (Beirut: Dār al-Nahār li’l-Nashr, 1968), where he writes, “Revelation is the emanation and the angel is the received emanating power that descends on the prophets as if it were an emanation continuous with the universal intellect” (p. 45; English translation taken from M. Marmura, “On the Proof of Prophecies and the Interpretation of the Prophets’ Symbols and Metaphors,” in Medieval Political Philosophy: A Sourcebook, eds. R. Lerner and M. Mahdi, Ithaca, NY: Cornell University Press, 1963, p. 115); for an analysis of Ibn Sīnā’s ideas on the nature of prophecy and the Intellect as a cause of human thought, see H.A. Davidson’s Alfarabi, Avicenna, and Averroes, on Intellect: Their Cosmologies, Theories of the Active Intellect, and Theories of Human Intellect, Oxford: Oxford University Press,

- 1992, pp. 83–94, 116–23). Davidson demonstrates the influence of Ibn Sīnā on al-Ghazālī's Mishkāṭ al-anwār (pp. 129–44), an influence that is also apparent in Al-Risālat al-laduniyya. Curiously, a copy of Al-Risālat al-laduniyya exists in a manuscript attributed to Ibn Sīnā in a library in Istanbul. It is listed as Al-ʿIlm al-ladunī in G.C. Anawati's comprehensive bibliography of works attributed to Ibn Sīnā (Mu'allafāt Ibn Sīnā, Cairo: Dār al-Ma'ārif, 1950, p. 231) and has been published as such in H. ʿĀṣī's Al-tafsīr al-Qurʾānī wa'l lughat al-ṣūfiyya fī falsafa Ibn Sīnā, Beirut: Al-Mu'assasāt al-Jāmi'iyya li'l-Dirāsāt wa'l-Nashr wa'l-Tazī', 1983. Neither Anawati nor ʿĀṣī mention that it is the same work as the work attributed to al-Ghazālī.
- 34 We have already seen that al-Ghazālī recommends in his Fayṣal al-tafriqa that the Ṣūfī who claims to be released from the obligations of religious law should be killed (Dār al-Nashr al-Maghribiyya, 1983), p. 28.
- 35 Al-Qurṭubī, Al-Jāmi' li-ahkām al-Qurʾān, vol. 11, pp. 40–1.
- 36 Ibid., vol. 11, pp. 28–32.
- 37 Material which al-Maybūdī uses as well in his discussion of the same topic in his Kashf al-asrār wa'uddat al-abrār, Tehran: Amīr Kabīr, 1982–3, vol. 20, p. 232, as part of his commentary on the miraculous and instantaneous transporting of the throne of the Queen of Saba' to the court of Sulaymān (Qurʾān 27:38).
- 38 Fāris b. ʿIsā al-Dīnawārī al-Baghdādī (d. 951).
- 39 Al-Sulamī, Ḥaqāʾiq al-tafsīr, vol. 1, p. 415 and Rūzbihān, ʿArāʾis al-bayān vol. 1, p. 593.
- 40 Abū'l-Ḥusayn al-Ḥuṣrī (d. 981).
- 41 Al-Sulamī, Ḥaqāʾiq al-tafsīr, vol. 1, p. 415 and Rūzbihān, ʿArāʾis al-bayān, vol. 1, p. 593.
- 42 Al-Qushayrī, Laṭāʾif al-ishārāt, vol. 4, p. 78.
- 43 Ibid., vol. 4, p. 83.
- 44 Al-Thaʿlabī, Qīṣaṣ al-anbiyāʾ: Musammā bi'l-ʿArāʾis al-majālis, Egypt: Maktabat al-Jumhūriyya al-ʿArabiyya, 195?, p. 123.
- 45 Al-Thaʿlabī's ʿArāʾis al-majālis is considered to be the first independent collection of stories of the prophets (T. Nagel, "Qīṣaṣ al-Anbiyā'" in The Encyclopedia of Islam, new ed. and W.M. Thackston, Introduction to The Tales of the Prophets of al-Kisāʾi, Boston, MA: Twayne Publishers, 1978, p. xvi). This material from Jews and Christians was considered problematic fairly early on in the Muslim community. G. Newby has suggested that the isrāʾīliyyāt narratives included in al-Ṭabarī's tafsīr already represent "the remains of a moribund tradition" that found a more congenial home in the genre of qīṣaṣ al-anbiyāʾ because of its less exacting standards ("Tafsir Israʾiliyat," Journal of the American Academy of Religion, 47, 1979, 685–97). Al-Thaʿlabī's tafsīr, Al-Kashf wa'l-bayān ʿan tafsīr al-Qurʾān, was criticized for its use of the same kind of material. Ibn Taymiyya praised the exegete al-Baghawī (d. sometime between 1117 and 1122) for writing an abridged version of al-Thaʿlabī's tafsīr purged of the "inferior traditions and heretical opinions," thereby producing a tafsīr that Ibn Taymiyya judged superior to those of al-Zamakhsharī and al-Qurṭubī, two exegetes who quoted al-Thaʿlabī frequently (quoted in P.G. Riddell, "The Transmission of Narrative-Based Exegesis in Islam" in Islam: Essays on Scripture, Thought and Society, eds P.G. Riddell and T. Street, Leiden: E.J. Brill, 1997, p. 67).
- 46 R. Arnaldez states that al-Qurṭubī made very little use of this material ("Al-Qurṭubī" in The Encyclopedia of Islam, new ed., vol. 5, p. 531b), but the index to al-Qurṭubī's tafsīr, Fahāris al-Jāmi' li-ahkām al-Qurʾān (Beirut: Dār al-Kutub al-ʿIlmiyya, 1988) cites something like 250 citations from al-Thaʿlabī alone, and as mentioned in the previous note, Ibn Taymiyya criticized al-Qurṭubī for using this material. One example of al-Qurṭubī's use of al-Thaʿlabī's material will demonstrate what is at issue here. It is a comment on Mūsā's reaction to al-Khaḍir's killing of the boy.

When Mūsā said, "Have you killed an innocent soul...?" al-Khaḍir become angry. He ripped off the left shoulder of the boy and then peeled the skin off of it. There, on the bone of the shoulder, was written, ‘An infidel who will never believe in God’ (Al-Qurṭubī, Al-Jāmi‘ li-ahkām al-Qur‘ān, vol.11:21, Al-Tha‘labī, Qīṣaṣ al-anbiyā’, p. 127).

This tradition would seem to warrant questioning because it contradicts the chronology of the Qur’anic narrative in which al-Khaḍīr refuses to explain his actions until they part. Al-Qurṭubī demonstrates his critical method with regard to traditions elsewhere in his tafsīr, but here he is silent, and one wonders whether his choice to include this material is based on his appreciation of the entertaining manner in which it is written. The genre of the stories of the prophets (qīṣaṣ al-anbiyā’) was closely connected to the preaching profession where the importance of keeping the attention of one’s audience with a story well told was understood.

- 47 In his Risāla al-Qushayrī calls the station of desire (irāda) the first station of those who seek God (Principles of Sufism, trans. B. von Schlegell, Berkeley, CA: Mizan Press, 1992, p. 175).
- 48 Al-Maybudī, Kashf al-asrār, vol. 16, pp. 726–8.
- 49 Ibid., pp. 728–9.
- 50 Ibid., p. 729.
- 51 A reference to Qur’ān 89:27–8: O soul at peace return to your Lord, well pleased and well-pleasing. The Ṣūfīs believed in a potential progression of the soul from that which commands evil (al-naḥs al-ammāra) as in Qur’ān 12:53, truly the soul commands evil unless my Lord has mercy, to the soul which blames (al-naḥs al-lawwāma) as in Qur’ān 75:2, Nay, I call to witness the blaming soul, to the soul at peace (al-naḥs al-muṭma’inna) (A. Schimmel, Mystical Dimensions of Islam, Chapel Hill, NC: University of North Carolina Press, 1975, p. 112). For al-Kāshānī’s definition of these three stages see note 61.
- 52 Al-Maybudī, Kashf al-asrār, vol. 16, pp. 729–30.
- 53 The expression “the one who was carried (maḥmūl)” is also used in al-Qushayrī.
- 54 Rūzbihān, ‘Arā’is al-bayān, vol. 1, p. 590.
- 55 A reference to the Qur’ān 25:53, It is He who has let forth the two seas. This one is sweet and thirst-quenching, and the other is salty and bitter, and 35:12, The two seas are not alike. This one is sweet, thirst-quenching and pleasant to drink and the other is salty and bitter.
- 56 Al-Kāshānī, Ta’wīlāt, published as Tafsīr al-Qur’ān al-karīm and attributed incorrectly to Ibn ‘Arabī, Beirut: Dār al-Yaqẓat al-‘Arabiyya, 1968, vol. 1, p. 766.
- 57 Al-Kāshānī, as has been mentioned, was a follower of the ideas of Ibn ‘Arabī, but in this passage his allegiance to Ibn Sīnā is far more apparent. Ibn ‘Arabī adopted some of Ibn Sīnā’s terminology and concepts, but adapted them to his own thought far more extensively than al-Kāshānī does here; al-Kāshānī’s interpretation of the Mūsā and al-Khaḍīr story follows Ibn Sīnā’s theories of the soul and knowledge closely. Summaries of these theories can be found in S.M. Afnan’s Avicenna: His Life and Works (London: George Allen and Unwin, 1958), pp. 136–67 and P. Heath’s Allegory and Philosophy in Avicenna (Ibn Sina): With a Translation of the Book of the Prophet Muhammad’s Ascent to Heaven, Philadelphia: University of Pennsylvania Press, 1992, pp. 53–106.
- 58 Elsewhere al-Kāshānī uses the term Holy Spirit (rūḥ al-quḍus) to describe al-Khaḍīr (Iṣṭilāḥāt al-ṣufiyya, London: Octagon Press, 1991, p. 160). In Ibn Sīnā’s terminology, the “holy intellect (al-aql al-quḍī)” refers to a soul which is blessed with the highest level of intellectual aptitude, an aptitude reserved for prophets (Heath, Allegory and Philosophy in Avicenna, pp. 89–90).
- 59 Al-Kāshānī, Ta’wīlāt, vol. 1, p. 768–9. Ibn Sīnā also made spiritual discipline a pre-requisite for obtaining higher knowledge in his Al-Ishārāt wa’l-tanbihāt (Tehran, 1958), although he does not mention emulation of another nor does he use the term “heart (qalb).”

- 60 Ibn Sīnā understood the human soul as comprised of three parts: the vegetative (nabāṭī) or natural (ṭabīʿī) soul which governs the natural processes of the body; the animal (ḥayawānī) soul which governs instinctive and voluntary movement, the latter being based on desire or anger, and perception through five external and five internal senses; and the rational (nāṭīqa) soul, unique to man, which is made up of the practical (ʿamalī) and theoretical (naẓarī) intellects which enable men to seek moral and intellectual perfection (Afnan, Avicenna, pp. 136–9; Heath, Allegory and Philosophy in Avicenna, pp. 60–5).
- 61 Al-Kāshānī, Taʾwīlāt, vol. 1, pp. 769, 772. We have already mentioned the different stages of the soul in al-Maybudī's allegorical interpretation. Al-Kāshānī defines these three stages as follows. "The commanding soul (al-naḥs al-ammāra) is that which leans towards the bodily nature (al-ṭabīʿa al-badaniyya) and commands one to sensual pleasures and lusts and pulls the heart (qalb) in a downward direction. It is the resting place of evil and the source of blameworthy morals and bad actions. God said, truly the soul commands evil (12:53). The blaming soul (al-naḥs al-lawwāma) is that which has been illuminated by the light of the heart to the extent that it awakens from the habit of forgetfulness. It becomes watchful and begins to improve its state, wavering between the two directions of lordliness and creatureliness. Whenever something bad emanates from its unjust temperament, the light of divine awakening overtakes it and it begins to blame itself and to turn from it, asking for forgiveness and returning to the door of the Forgiving and the Compassionate. Because of this, God mentions it in oaths: Nay, I call to witness the blaming soul (75:2). The soul at peace (al-naḥs al-muṭmaʿinna) is that whose illumination has been perfected by the light of the heart so that it has lost its blameworthy qualities and become shaped by praiseworthy morals. It has turned towards the direction of the heart altogether, following it in rising up to the abode of the world of holiness (ʿālam al-quḍus), freed from the abode of uncleanness, diligent in acts of obedience, dwelling in the presence of the highest of degrees until its Lord addresses it, 'O soul at peace, return to your Lord, well pleased and well-pleasing. Enter among my servants and enter my Garden (85:27–30)" of the absolute (tajarrud)" (Iṣṭilāḥāt al-ṣuḥfiyya, pp. 77–8).
- 62 Al-Kāshānī, Taʾwīlāt, vol. 1, pp. 770, 772.
- 63 Ibid., p. 770.
- 64 According to Ibn Sīnā, the rational soul is made up of the practical and theoretical faculties or intellects. The practical intellect mediates between the vegetal and animal souls and the theoretical intellect, using the rationality of the latter to control the appetites and passions of the former by fostering ethical behavior. The practical intellect deals with the particulars of the external material world while the theoretical intellect has the potential to understand universal concepts received from the Active Intelligence (al-ʿaql al-faʿāl), either through a slow process of applied logic or immediate intuition (ḥads), a potential which may or may not be actualized. Al-Kāshānī adopted Ibn Sīnā's conception of the practical and theoretical intellects (P. Lory, Les Commentaires ésotériques du Coran d'après 'Abd ar-Razzāq al-Qāshānī, Paris: Les Deux Océans, 1980, p. 76) and viewed the Active Intelligence as the equivalent of the angel Gabriel or the Holy Spirit (rūḥ al-quḍus) (p. 55).
- 65 Al-Kāshānī, Taʾwīlāt, vol. 1, p. 773. Elsewhere, al-Kāshānī states that the heart (qalb) is what the philosopher (al-ḥakīm) calls the rational soul (al-naḥs al-nāṭīqa) (Iṣṭilāḥāt al-ṣuḥfiyya, p. 141).
- 66 Al-Nisābūrī, Gharāʾib al-Qurʾān wa ragḥāʾib al-furqān, Cairo: Muṣṭafā al-Bābī al-Ḥalabī, 1962–70, vol. 16, p. 17.
- 67 Ibid., p. 18.
- 68 Al-Sulamī, Haqāʾiq al-tafsīr, vol. 1, p. 417; Rūzbihān, ʿArāʾis al-bayān, vol. 1, p. 595; Al-Maybudī, Kashf al-asrār, vol. 16, p. 730.
- 69 Ibid.
- 70 Cf. Ibn ʿAṭā's interpretation of "We wanted" where the "we" refers to al-Khaḍīr and Mūsā.

- 71 Al-Maybudī adds a comment here: “For whoever is able to sacrifice his own qualities (ṣifāt) on the holy path, We will paint the secrets of the different types of knowledge of the real in his heart for We taught him knowledge from Our very presence (min ladunnā) (vol. 16, p. 728).
- 72 Rūzbihān understands this first station as one of mystical union, while al-Ḥallāj describes it as the total mastery (istilāʾ) of God.
- 73 Ibid., vol. 1, p. 595.
- 74 M. Chodkiewicz, An Ocean Without Shore: Ibn Arabi, the Book, and the Law, Albany, NY: SUNY Press, 1993, pp. 30, 45.

8 QURʾĀNIC VERSES ON MARYAM

- 1 J.I. Smith and Y. Haddad, “The Virgin Mary in Islamic Tradition and Commentary,” The Muslim World, 79, 1989, p. 162.
- 2 H. Corbin, Creative Imagination in the Sufism of Ibn ʿArabi, trans. R. Manheim, Princeton, NJ: Princeton University Press, 1969, pp. 145, 153, 170; The Man of Light in Iranian Sufism, trans. N. Pearson, Boulder, CO: Shambhala, 1978, p. 131; and Spiritual Body and Celestial Earth: From Mazdean Iran to Shiʿite Iran, trans. N. Pearson, Princeton, NJ: Princeton University Press, 1977, p. 309.
- 3 Al-Ṭabarī, Jāmiʿ al-bayān ʿan taʾwīl āy Qurʾān, Egypt: Muṣṭafā al-Bābī al-Ḥalabī, 1954–7, vol. 3, p. 325.
- 4 Ibid., pp. 325–6; al-Zamakhsharī, Kashshāf ʿan ḥaqāʾiq al-tanzīl, vol. 1, Egypt: Muṣṭafā al-Bābī al-Ḥalabī, 1966–8, p. 425; al-Qurṭubī, Al-Jāmiʿ li-aḥkām al-Qurʾān, vol. 4, Beirut: Dār al-kutub al-ʿArabī, 1980, pp. 65–6.
- 5 Al-Sulamī, Ḥaqāʾiq al-tafsīr, vol. 1, Beirut: Dār al-Kutub al-ʿIlmiyya, 2001, p. 98 and Jaʿfar al-Ṣādiq, “Le Tafsir Mystique attribue a Gaʿfar Sadiq,” Melanges De L’Universite Saint Joseph, 43, 1968, p. 192.
- 6 Al-Tustarī, Tafsīr al-Tustarī, Beirut: Dār al-Kutub al-ʿIlmiyya, 2002, p. 48.
- 7 Al-Qushayrī, Laṭāʾif al-ishārāt, Cairo: Dār al-Kutub al-ʿArabī, 1968–71, vol. 1, p. 249.
- 8 Quoted in F. Rosenthal, The Muslim Concept of Freedom Prior to the Nineteenth Century, Leiden: E.J. Brill, 1960, p. 110.
- 9 Ibid., p. 111.
- 10 In his Kitāb al-taʾarruf, Abū Bakr al-Kalābādhī mentions Abū Bakr Qaḥṭubī as a Ṣūfī who wrote a book on the sciences of allusion (The Doctrine of the Sufis Kitāb al-taʾrruf li-madḥhab ahl al-taṣawwuf, trans. A. Arberry, Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1977), p. 13.
- 11 Al-Maybudī, Kashf al-asrār wa ʿuddat al-abrār, Tehran: Amīr Kabīr, 1982–3, pp. 109–10.
- 12 A discussion based on the ḥadīth saying that many men have reached perfection but among women, only these four.
- 13 Al-Ṭabarī, Jāmiʿ al-bayān, vol. 3, pp. 263–4.
- 14 Al-Qurṭubī, Al-Jāmiʿ li-aḥkām al-Qurʾān, vol. 4, pp. 82–4.
- 15 Rūzbihān, ʿArāʾis al-bayān fī ḥaqāʾiq al-Qurʾān, Lucknow, vol. 1, p. 1898, p. 83.
- 16 Ibid., vol. 12, p. 333.
- 17 See Qurʾān 7:54, 13:2, 16:12, 22:65 and 31:20, etc.
- 18 See Qurʾān 2:116, 30:26, and 33:35, etc.
- 19 A. Schimmel, Mystical Dimensions of Islam, Chapel Hill, NC: University of North Carolina Press, 1975, p. 112 and S. Murata, The Tao of Islam: A Sourcebook of Gender Relationships in Islamic Thought, Albany: SUNY Press, 1992, pp. 313–4.
- 20 Al-Ṭabarī, Jāmiʿ al-bayān, pp. 3:241–7.
- 21 Al-Qushayrī, Laṭāʾif al-ishārāt, vol. 1, p. 250 and al-Maybudī, Kashf al-asrār, vol. 2, p. 111. This quote also appears in al-Qushayrī’s Risāla, where al-Qushayrī states that

- he heard it from his teacher, Abū 'Alī al-Daqqāq (Rosenthal, Muslim Concept of Freedom, p. 112).
- 22 Rūzbihān, Ar'ā'is al-bayān, vol. 1, pp. 80–1.
 - 23 Al-Qushayrī, Laṭā'if al-ishārāt, vol. 1, p. 251.
 - 24 Ibid., vol. 1, p. 250.
 - 25 Rūzbihān, Ar'ā'is al-bayān, vol. 1, p. 81.
 - 26 Al-Kāshānī, Ta'wīlāt, published as Tafsīr al-Qur'ān al-karīm and attributed incorrectly to Ibn 'Arabī, Beirut: Dār al-Yaqẓat al-'Arabiyya, 1968, vol. 1, p. 182.
 - 27 Al-Nisābūrī, Gharā'ib al-Qur'ān wa raghā'ib al-furqān, Cairo: Muṣṭafā al-Bābī al-Ḥalabī, 1962–70, vol. 3, p. 186.
 - 28 Ibid.
 - 29 Al-Sulamī, Haqā'iq al-tafsīr, vol. 1, Beirut: Dār al-Kutub al-'Ilmiyya, 2001, p. 98 and Ja'far al-Šādiq, Le Tafsīr Mystique, p. 192.
 - 30 Al-Qushayrī, Laṭā'if al-ishārāt, vol. 1, p. 251.
 - 31 Ibid., p. 251.
 - 32 Rūzbihān, Ar'ā'is al-bayān, vol. 1, p. 81.
 - 33 Ibid.
 - 34 Al-Qushayrī, Laṭā'if al-ishārāt, vol. 1, p. 252.
 - 35 Ibid.
 - 36 Al-Maybudī, Kashf al-asrār, vol. 2, p. 111.
 - 37 Al-Nisābūrī, Gharā'ib al-Qur'ān, vol. 3, p. 186.
 - 38 Al-Ṭabarī, Jāmi' al-bayān, vol. 16, p. 71.
 - 39 Al-Qushayrī, Laṭā'if al-ishārāt, vol. 4, p. 97.
 - 40 Ja'far al-Šādiq, Le Tafsīr Mystique, p. 208.
 - 41 Rūzbihān, Ar'ā'is al-bayān, vol. 2, p. 8 and quoted anonymously in al-Sulamī, Haqā'iq al-tafsīr, vol. 1, p. 424.
 - 42 Al-Maybudī, Kashf al-asrār, vol. 6, p. 42.
 - 43 Ibid., vol. 2, p. 89.
 - 44 For a discussion of the idea of preparedness (isti'dād) in the thought of Ibn 'Arabī, see W. Chittick, The Sufi Path of Knowledge: Ibn al-'Arabī's Metaphysics of Imagination, Albany, NY: SUNY Press, 1989, pp. 91–4. For the concept as discussed in the thought of Šadr al-Dīn Qunawī (d. 1274) and Sa'īd al-Dīn Farghānī (d. 1296), see S. Murata, The Tao of Islam, pp. 107ff.
 - 45 Translated by S. Murata, The Tao of Islam, pp. 275–6.
 - 46 Translated by S. Murata, The Tao of Islam, p. 43.
 - 47 Al-Kāshānī, Ta'wīlāt, vol. 2, p. 89.
 - 48 Ibid., p. 670.
 - 49 Rūzbihān, Ar'ā'is al-bayān, vol. 2, p. 7.
 - 50 Ibid.
 - 51 Ibid.
 - 52 Ibid., vol. 1, p. 69.
 - 53 Quoted in Corbin, Creative Imagination, p. 272.
 - 54 Schimmel, Mystical Dimensions, p. 290.
 - 55 H. Corbin, En Islam Iranien, vol. 2, Paris: Gallimard, 1972, pp. 9–146 and Rūzbihān, Le Jasmin des Fideles d'amour (Kitab-e 'Abhar al-'ashiqin), trans. H. Corbin and M. Mo'in, Teheran: L'Institute Franco-Iranien, 1958, p. 114.
 - 56 Rūzbihān, Ar'ā'is al-bayān, vol. 2, p. 7.
 - 57 Quoted in and translated by C. Ernst, Words of Ecstasy in Sufism, Albany, NY: SUNY Press, 1985, p. 27. The material from al-Ḥallāj that Rūzbihān is commenting on is, "I wonder at You and me. You annihilated me out of myself into You. You made me near to Yourself, so that I thought that I was You and You were me." The quote from al-Ḥallāj is from his Diwān and Rūzbihān's comments are from his Sharḥ-i shathīyāt.

9 QUR'ĀN 24:35 (THE LIGHT VERSE)

- 1 I. Goldziher, Die Richtungen der islamischen Koranlegung, Leiden: E.J. Brill, 1952, pp. 180–5.
- 2 Al-Ṭabarī, Jāmi' al-bayān 'an ta'wīl āy Qur'ān, Egypt, 1954–7, vol. 18, p. 135. God is called “the Guide (hādī)” in Qur'ānic verses 22:54 and 25:31.
- 3 Al-Ṭabarī, Jāmi' al-bayān, vol. 18, p. 135.
- 4 Al-Rāzī, Al-Tafsīr al-kabīr, Beirut, 1980, vol. 23, p. 224; al-Qurṭubī, Al-Jāmi' li-aḥkām al-Qur'an, Beirut: Dār al-Kutub al-'Arabī, vol. 12, p. 257.
- 5 Al-Ṭabarī, Jāmi' al-bayān, vol. 18, p. 135.
- 6 Al-Zamakhsharī, Al-Kashshāf 'an ḥaqā'iq al-tanzīl, Egypt, 1966, vol. 3, p. 67.
- 7 See the section on the attributes of God in L. Gardet's article, “Allāh” in Encyclopedia of Islam, new ed.
- 8 Al-Rāzī, Al-Tafsīr al-kabīr, vol. 7, pp. 181–2.
- 9 Al-Rāzī appears to have used al-Zamakhsharī's al-Kashshāf 'an ḥaqā'iq al-tanzīl as a basis for his philological and grammatical comments, although in an abridged form and not uncritically (Ceylan, Theology and Tafsīr in the Major Works of Fakhr al-Dīn al-Rāzī, Kuala Lumpur: International Institute of Islamic Thought and Civilization, 1996, pp. 16, 19–20; A.H. Johns, “Solomon and the Queen of Sheba: Fakhr al-Dīn al-Rāzī's Treatment of the Qur'ānic Telling of the Story,” Abr-Nahrain, 24, 1986, 76–80.
- 10 Al-Rāzī, Al-Tafsīr al-kabīr, vol. 7, pp. 223–4.
- 11 Qur'ān 2:257, God is the friend of those who believe. He brings them out of the shadows into the light; 6:122, Why, is he who was dead and We gave him life and made a light for him like him who is in the depths of darkness from which he cannot come out?; and 42:52, But We made it a light by which We guide those whom We will of Our servants.
- 12 Al-Rāzī, Al-Tafsīr al-kabīr, vol. 23, p. 224.
- 13 Ibid., vol. 23, pp. 224–30.
- 14 F. Rosenthal understands al-Rāzī's exegesis as a rebuttal to al-Ghazālī's view (Triumphant Knowledge: The Concept of Knowledge in Medieval Islam, Leiden: E.J. Brill, 1970, p. 160), but this reading does not take into account the fact that al-Rāzī states that there is no contradiction between his own preferred view and that of al-Ghazālī.
- 15 W. Heinrichs, “On the Genesis of the Ḥaqīqa-Majāz Dichotomy,” Studia Islamica, 59, 1984, 136–7 and “Contacts Between Scriptural Hermeneutics and Literary Theory,” Zeitschrift für Geschichte der Arabisch-Islamischen Wissenschaften, 7, 1991–2, 256–7.
- 16 Al-Rāzī, Al-Tafsīr al-kabīr, vol. 7, pp. 181–231 and Sharḥ asmā' Allāh ta'āla wa'l-ṣifāt, Cairo: Maktaba al-Kulliyāt al-Azhariyya, 1976, pp. 346–8.
- 17 Ibn Taymiyya Al-tafsīr al-kabīr, Beirut: Dār al-Kutub al-'Ilmiyya, 1988, vol. 5, p. 422.
- 18 This is what the Ash'arīs and Ḥanbalīs called themselves because they believed that they alone affirmed God's attributes.
- 19 The jahmiyya were an early sect said to have been founded by Jahm b. Ṣafwān (d. 746) who, like the Mu'tazila, denied the distinct existence of God's attributes and therefore resorted to their interpretation (ta'wīl).
- 20 Ibn Taymiyya, Al-Tafsīr al-kabīr, vol. 5, p. 421. Cf. al-Rāzī, in his Sharḥ al-asmā': Know that light is the name of that mode of being (kayfiyya) which has darkness as its opposite, and it is impossible that God (al-ḥaqq) could be that for several reasons. The first is that this mode of being comes and goes but it is inconceivable that God (al-ḥaqq) could be like that. The second reason is that bodies (aṣṣām) are alike in corporeality but different with regards to light and darkness, so that light is a mode of being in need of a body in which to exist, but the Necessary Existent (wājib al-wujūd) could never be like that. The third reason is that light is the contrary to darkness, and far be it from God to have an opposite or an antagonist. The fourth reason is that God said, the similitude of His light, so He attributed light to Himself. If He were a light then this attribution of a thing to Himself would be inconceivable. Therefore, God is not a light, nor is He a thing qualified by this mode of being because this mode of being can only be understood as established in bodies, pp. 346–7. See also al-Razī's Al-Tafsīr al-kabīr, vol. 23, p. 223.

- 21 Ibn Taymiyya, Al-Tafsīr al-kabīr, vol. 5, p. 430.
- 22 Ibid., p. 429.
- 23 Ibid., pp. 435–8, 440.
- 24 Ibn Taymiyya's view on the Light Verse bears further investigation. According to J. Pavlin, in his Bughtat al-Murtadd Ibn Taymiyya refers to the hadīth that says, "His veil is light," to justify interpreting the word "light" and to reject the literal reading that equates God with light ("The Medieval Debate over Quranic Hermeneutics: Ibn Taymiyyah's Discussion of al-Ghazālī's Metaphysics in the Bughtat al-Murtadd, Paper presented at the American Academy of Religion Annual Meeting, Atlanta, GA, Nov. 22–25, 2003).
- 25 D. Buchman has done an admirable job of locating the Ṣūfī maxims and aḥādīth in Mishkāt al-anwār. See his translations for these references, which will not be repeated here.
- 26 Al-Ghazālī, Al-Ghazālī: The Niche of Lights, trans. D. Buchman, Provo, UT: Brigham Young University Press, 1998, pp. 1–2. The English translations of Mishkāt al-anwār quoted in this chapter are those of Buchman, although I have added some of the transliterated Arabic.
- 27 Ibid., p. 4.
- 28 Ibid., pp. 5–13.
- 29 Ibid., p. 18.
- 30 Ibid.
- 31 Ibid.
- 32 For these and other criticisms Ibn Taymiyya made of the Ṣūfīs, see W. Chittick, "Rūmī and waḥdat al-wujūd" in Poetry and Mysticism in Islam: The Heritage of Rūmī, eds. A. Banani, R. Hovannisian, and G. Sabagh, Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1984, pp. 85–7; A. Knysh, Ibn 'Arabī in the Later Islamic Tradition: The Making of a Polemical Image in Medieval Islam, Albany, NY: SUNY Press, 1999, pp. 87–111; and T. Michel, A Muslim Theologian's Response to Christianity: Ibn Taymiyya's Al-Jawab al-Sahih, Delmar: Caravan, 1984, pp. 5–14, 24–39.
- 33 Al-Ghazālī, The Niche of Lights, p. 24.
- 34 Ibid., p. 20.
- 35 For example, G. Böwering writes, "Ibn al-'Arabī's theory transformed the early Ṣūfīs' psychological experience of mystical union into an ontological speculation on the unity of being, propelling the idea of tawḥīd to a dynamic conclusion" ("Ibn al-'Arabī's Concept of Time," in God is Beautiful and He Loves Beauty, Bern: Peter Lang, 1994), p. 75. In his "Bewildered Tongue: The Semantics of Mystical Union in Islam," Sells remarks that "The move from the dialogical language of union found in Hallaj and Bistami to the mystical dialectic of Ibn 'Arabī need not be seen, as it often has been seen, as a decadent movement from genuine experience to intellectual abstraction... Mystical union transforms philosophical and other objective or scientific discourse, even as the philosophical language offers a new dimension of critical self-awareness and logical precision to the mystical" (in Mystical Union in Judaism, Christianity, and Islam, eds M. Idel and B. McGinn, New York: Continuum, 1996), p. 116. One of Ibn 'Arabī's critics, Sa'd al-Dīn Taftāzānī (d. 1389 or 1390), acknowledged an outward similarity between the metaphysical views of al-Ghazālī and Ibn 'Arabī and his followers, but insisted that a closer examination of their works demonstrated the orthodoxy of the former and errors of the latter. He criticized Ibn 'Arabī and his followers for distorting the Ṣūfī concepts of annihilation (fanā) and subsistence (baqā'), mistakenly - understanding subjective mystical experience as indicative of the objective reality of things (Knysht, Ibn 'Arabī in the Later Islamic Tradition, pp. 150–3). The differences between the metaphysical theories of al-Ghazālī and Ibn 'Arabī is an area which warrants further investigation, but the fact remains that al-Ghazālī preceded Ibn 'Arabī in making ontological statements based on mystical experience and adopting philosophical and theological language and terminology to systematize the view of reality alluded to in earlier Ṣūfī statements and writings.

- 36 Ibn Sīnā, Fī ithbāt al-nubuwwāt li-Ibn Sīnā, Beirut: Dār al-Nahār li'l-Nashr, 1968, p. 49. The English translation here is M. Marmura's, "On the Proof of Prophecies and the Interpretation of the Prophets' Symbols and Metaphors," in Medieval Political Philosophy: A Sourcebook, ed. R. Lerner and M. Mahdi, Ithaca, NY: Cornell University press, 1963, p. 116.
 - 37 Al-Ghazālī, Ihyā' 'ulūm al-dīn, vol. 5, Beirut: Al-Dār al-Kutub al-Ilmiyya, 1989, pp. 173–4. W. Chittick indicates that this same verse drew the attention of Ibn 'Arabī who cites it more often than any other verse to show what Chittick calls the "radical ambiguity of existence," The Sufi Path of Knowledge: Ibn al-'Arabī's Metaphysics of Imagination, Albany, NY: SUNY Press, 1989, pp. 113–4.
 - 38 Al-Rāzī, Al-Tafsīr al-kabīr, vol. 23, pp. 232–5.
 - 39 Ibid., p. 235.
 - 40 Al-Qurṭubī, Al-Jāmi' li-aḥkām al-Qur'ān, vol. 12, p. 206. The aḥādīth al-Qurṭubī is referring to here are those quoted in Ibn Taymiyya's discussion of the Light Verse: "O God, praise be to You, light of the heavens and the earth and what is in them," and the Prophet's reply to the question of how he saw his lord, "I see a light."
 - 41 Ibid., p. 263.
 - 42 Ibid., p. 264.
 - 43 Ibn Taymiyya, Al-Tafsīr al-kabīr, vol. 5, p. 422. Cf. al-Rāzī: The portion of the servant in [God's name "light"]: Know that the light of the heart is an expression for knowledge of God who said, Anyone for whom God does not appoint a light has no light (24:40). The shaykhs have said that light is that which illuminates the hearts of the sincere by its declaration of God's unity and illuminates the innermost hearts of the lovers by its confirmation. It is said that it is that which beautifies human beings by giving form (taṣwīr) and the innermost hearts (asrār) by illumination. It is said that it is that which enlivens the hearts of the Gnostics by the light of its knowledge and enlivens the souls of the worshippers by the light of its worship (Sharḥ al-asmā' p. 348).
 - 44 Ibn Taymiyya is referring to Abū 'Abd al-Raḥmān al-Sulamī's Haqā'iq al-tafsīr.
 - 45 Ibn Taymiyya's choice of words here shows that he is following the teachings of Aḥmad b. Ḥanbal with regards to using material that is judged weak in transmission. Elsewhere Ibn Taymiyya quotes Ibn Ḥanbal as saying, " 'If a tradition deals with ḥalāl and ḥarām (legal matters), we are strict regarding chains of transmission; and if it deals with targhīb and tarhīb we are lenient.' Ibn Taymiyya points out that this is one of the reasons why the 'ulamā use al-ḥadīth al-ḍa'īf (weak tradition) for fadā'il al-'amal (virtuous deeds). By so doing, they do not intend, however, to make them the basis of legally suggested deeds (istiḥbāb), for istiḥbāb is an Islamic legal matter that should be based on an Islamic legal argument (dalīl shar'ī)," (D. Syafruddin, "The Principles of Ibn Taymiyya's Quranic Interpretation, M.S. Thesis, Institute of Islamic Studies, McGill University, Montreal, 1994, p. 68); the quote from Ibn Ḥanbal is found in Ibn Taymiyya's Majmū' fatāwā Ibn Taymiyya: al-ḥadīth, Beirut, 198–, vol. 18, p. 65).
 - 46 The qarāmiṭa was a movement appearing in the late ninth century which combined esoteric doctrines and practices with programs for social justice.
 - 47 Ibn Taymiyya, Al-Tafsīr al-kabīr, vol. 5, p. 423.
 - 48 One of the epithets of Muḥammad which means "the chosen one."

- 49 Al-Sulamī, Ḥaqāʾiq al-tafsīr, vol. 2, Beirut: Dār al-Kutub al-ʿIlmiyya, 2001, p. 47; Jaʿfar al-Šādiq, “Le Tafsīr Mystique attribue a Gaʿfar Sadiq,” Melanges De L’Universite Saint Joseph, 43, 1968, pp. 211–12; and Rūzbihān, ʿArāʾis al-bayān vol. 2, p. 84.
- 50 The Arabic in al-Ṭabarī here literally means, “entrance” (madkhal) and “exit” (makhraj). Al-Rāzī writes that al-Rabʿī asked Abūʿl-ʿĀliya (d. 708–9 or 714) about these words and he replied that they meant one’s private and public affairs (sirruhu wa ʿalāniyatahu), 23:237.
- 51 Al-Ṭabarī, Jāmiʿ al-bayān, vol. 18, p. 138.
- 52 Al-Tustarī, Tafsīr al-Tustarī, Beirut: Dār al-Kutub al-ʿIlmiyya, 2002, pp. 40–1. The English translation here is that of M. Sells, Early Islamic Mysticism: Sufi, Qurʾan, Miʾraj, Poetic and Theological Writings, New York: Paulist Press, 1996, p. 11.
- 53 Al-Tustarī, Tafsīr al-Tustarī, p. 69. The full English translation of this passage can be found in M. Sells, Early Islamic Mysticism, pp. 93–4 and is discussed in G. Böwering, The Mystical Vision of Existence in Classical Islam: The Qurʾānic Hermeneutics of the Šūfī Sahl at-Tustarī, Berlin: Walter De Gruyter, 1980, pp. 153–4.
- 54 On the basis of his reading of al-Tustarī’s entire Qurʾānic commentary, Böwering summarizes al-Tustarī’s vision of the relationship between God, Muḥammad, and man as follows: “God is light that issues forth in its radiance and articulates itself in the primordial light of Muḥammad the primal man and archetypal mystic. This divine light pervades the whole universe of this-worldly and other-worldly realities and represents the hidden marrow of their existence... The primordial Muḥammad represents the crystal which draws the divine light upon itself, absorbs it in its core (the heart of Muḥammad), projects it unto mankind in the Qurʾānic scripture, and enlightens the soul of mystic man... Man issues as an infinitely small particle of divine light in pre-existential eternity and achieves his final fulfillment as he is engulfed by the divine light in post-existential eternity” (Mystical Vision, pp. 264–5). The concept of the Muḥammadan light (nūr Muḥammadi) was a controversial one, with some scholars such as al-Ghazālī and Ibn Taymiyya rejecting the notion of Muḥammad’s pre-existence, interpreting instead the primordial creation of Muḥammad as referring only to his pre-destination. A less controversial term which later Šūfīs adopted to describe Muḥammad’s primordial nature was the Muḥammadan reality (ḥaqīqa Muḥammadiyya), a term often discussed with reference to the Light Verse (U. Rubin, “Nūr Muḥammadi in The Encyclopedia of Islam, new ed.).
- 55 Al-Ḥallāj, Diwān al-Ḥallāj, Kohn: Al-Kamel Verlag, 1997, pp. 119–22.
- 56 Quoted in al-Sulamī, Ziyādāt ḥaqāʾiq al-tafsīr (The Minor Commentary), Beirut: Dār al-Mashriq, 1986, p. 105.
- 57 Ibid., p. 106.
- 58 Al-Ḥallāj quoted in al-Sulamī, Ḥaqāʾiq al-tafsīr, vol. 2, p. 49; L. Massignon, Essai sur les origines du lexique technique de la Mystique Musulmane, Paris: J. Vrin, 1968, p. 385; and Rūzbihān, ʿArāʾis al-bayān, vol. 2, p. 85.
- 59 Al-Sulamī, Ḥaqāʾiq al-tafsīr, vol. 2, p. 49; Massignon, Essai, p. 385.
- 60 Al-Sulamī, Ḥaqāʾiq al-tafsīr, vol. 2, p. 50; Massignon, Essai, pp. 385–6; and al-Maybudī, Kashf al-asrār, vol. 6, pp. 546–7.
- 61 Quoted in al-Sulamī, Ḥaqāʾiq al-tafsīr, vol. 2, p. 45 and Rūzbihān, ʿArāʾis al-bayān, vol. 2, p. 83.
- 62 Al-Sulamī Ḥaqāʾiq al-tafsīr, vol. 2, p. 49 and Rūzbihān, ʿArāʾis al-bayān, vol. 2, p. 85.
- 63 Al-Ghazālī, The Niche of Lights, p. 31.
- 64 Ibid., p. 25.
- 65 Ibid.
- 66 Ibid., pp. 36–7.
- 67 Ibid., pp. 45–50. See H. Landolt’s article “Ghazālī and ‘Religionswissenschaft’: Some Notes on the Mishkāt al-anwār for Professor Charles J. Adams” (Asiatische

- Studien*, 45, 1991, 19–72) for his suggestions for the identification of the various groups al-Ghazālī refers to in the Veils of Light passage.
- 68 Al-Ghazālī, The Niche of Lights, pp. 50–1.
- 69 Ibid., p. 51.
- 70 Ibid.
- 71 The state of annihilation (fanāʾ) described in Part I of the Mishkāt al-anwār.
- 72 Al-Ghazālī, The Niche of Lights, pp. 51–2. The issue of whether al-Ghazālī is accepting here the very philosophical theories which he criticized elsewhere has been discussed by such Arab philosophers as Ibn Tufayl (d. 1185) and Ibn Rushd (d. 1198) and modern Western scholars such as W.H.T. Gairdner and M. Watt. Based on the Neoplatonic content of the third section of al-Ghazālī's work, Watt doubted its authenticity. For an excellent summary of and references to previous studies of the Mishkāt, studies which have primarily focused on the problems of this third section, see Buchman's Introduction to The Niche of Lights, pp. xxvii–xxxii.
- 73 Ibn Sīnā, Al-ishārāt wa'l-tanbihāt, Tehran: Matba'at al-Haydarī, 1958, vol. 2, pp. 353–4. An English translation of this can be found in M. Ha'iri Yazdī's The Principles of Epistemology in Islamic Philosophy: Knowledge by Presence, Albany, NY: SUNY Press, 1992, pp. 193–4, n. 16.
- 74 In the first section of the Mishkāt al-anwār al-Ghazālī uses the term “intellect” (ʿaql) which is the term common to all five elements of Ibn Sīnā's interpretation of the niche, but then switches to the term “spirit” (rūḥ) in the second section when presenting his own interpretation of the niche. The term “spirit” is one which Ibn Sīnā uses more generally to refer to either the vegetable, animal, or human souls within man, as opposed to the “intellect” (ʿaql) which is reserved for humans alone.
- 75 Al-Kāshānī, Taʾwīlāt, published as Tafsīr al-Qurʾān al-karīm and attributed incorrectly to Ibn ʿArabī, Beirut: Dār al-Yaqzāt al-ʿArabīyya, 1968, vol. 2, p. 140. In his Iṣṭilāḥāt al-suḥūfīyya (A Glossary of Sufi Technical Terms, London: Octagon Press, 1991), Kāshānī writes that the “heart” is what is meant by the philosophical term “rational soul” (al-naḥs al-nāṭīqa), p. 141.
- 76 Al-Kāshānī, Taʾwīlāt, vol. 2, p. 141.
- 77 Al-Nīsābūrī, Gharāʾib al-Qurʾān wa raghāʾib al-furqān, vol. 18, Cairo: Muṣṭafā al-Bābī al-Ḥalabī, 1962–70, p. 199. The reference is to Qurʾān 41:53, which was used by al-Simnānī as well to describe the correspondences between the macrocosm and the microcosm, as detailed in Part I of this study.
- 78 Al-Nīsābūrī, Gharāʾib al-Qurʾān, vol. 18, pp. 199–20. The last line is a reference to Qurʾān 20:5–6: The Merciful sat upon the throne. To Him belongs what is in the heavens and the earth, and what is between them, and what is under the earth.
- 79 The ḥadīth, which appears in al-Bukhārī, Riqāq 38, is translated in full by W.A. Graham in his Divine Word and Prophetic Word in Early Islam: A Reconsideration of the Sources, with Special Reference to the Divine Saying or Ḥadīth Qudsī (The Hague: Mouton and Co., 1977):

God said, “Whoever treats a friend of Mine as an enemy, on him I declare war. My servant draws near to Me by means of nothing dearer to Me than that which I have established as a duty for him. And my servant continues drawing nearer to Me through supererogatory acts until I love him; and when I love him, I become his ear with which he hears, his eye with which he sees, his hand with which he grasps, and his foot with which he walks. And if he asks Me [for something], I give it to him. If indeed he seeks My help, I help him. I have never hesitated to do anything as I hesitate [to take] the soul of the man of faith who hates death, for I hate to harm him.”

(p. 173)

Graham provides numerous references for Şūfī works which cite this ḥadīth, pp. 173–4.

- 80 Presumably al-Nisābūrī is referring to a previous discussion in his commentary.
- 81 Al-Nisābūrī, Gharā'ib al-Qur'ān, vol. 18, p. 120.
- 82 Al-Sulamī, Ḥaqā'iq al-tafsīr, vol. 2, p. 45 and Ja'far al-Şādiq, “Le Tafsir Mystique,” p. 212.
- 83 Al-Qushayrī, Laṭā'if al-ishārāt, vol. 4, p. 284.
- 84 Ibid., pp. 285–6.
- 85 Al-Maybudī, Kashf al-asrār, vol. 6, pp. 542–3.
- 86 Ibid., p. 546.
- 87 A Companion of the Prophet who died c.682–3.
- 88 Al-Maybudī, Kashf al-asrār, vol. 6, p. 543.
- 89 Al-Ghazālī refers to this ḥadīth in a passage from his autobiography explaining the experience which led him to Şūfism:

At length God Most High cured me of that sickness. My soul regained its health and equilibrium and once again I accepted the self-evident data of reason and relied on them with safety and certainty. But that was not achieved by constructing a proof or putting together an argument. On the contrary, it was the effect of a light which God Most High cast into my breast. And that light is the key to most knowledge... And it is this of which the apostle – God's blessing and peace be upon him – said: “God Most High created men in darkness, then sprinkled on them some of His light. From that light then, the unveiling of truth must be sought.”

(trans. by R.J. McCarthy, Freedom and Fulfillment, Boston, MA: Twayne, 1980, p. 66)

- 90 In a similar passage of his commentary al-Maybudī writes,

A shaykh was asked, “What is the sign of that light?” He replied, “Its sign is that through that light the servant knows God without finding Him, loves Him without seeing Him, turns away from being occupied with and remembering himself through being occupied with and remembering Him. He finds ease and rest in His lane, he tells secrets to His friends and asks favors from them. By day he is busy with religion's work, by night intoxicated with certainty's tidings. By day he dwells with creatures of good character, by night with the Real, fixed in sincerity.”

(Kashf al-asrār, vol. 7, p. 455; English translation here by S. Murata, Tao of Islam, A Sourcebook of Gender Relationships in Islamic Thought, Albany, NY: SUNY Press, 1992 p. 27)

- 91 Al-Maybudī, Kashf al-asrār, vol. 6, pp. 543–4.
- 92 The zunnār was a belt or girdle worn about the waist by Eastern Christians.
- 93 Al-Maybudī, Kashf al-asrār, vol. 6, p. 545.
- 94 Ibid., p. 546.
- 95 T. Izutsu, Creation and the Timeless Order of Things, Ashland, OR: White Cloud Press, 1994.

CONCLUSION

- 1 I use the term “subjectivity” here, following B. Weiss in his article “Exotericism and Objectivity in Islamic Jurisprudence” in Islamic Law and Jurisprudence, ed. N. Heer, Seattle: University of Washington Press, 1990. Weiss points out the public nature of rational argument and transmitted material in Islamic theology and law as compared to the private world of experience upon which Ṣūfism is based.

- 2 Ibn al-Jawzī, Mukhtasar kitāb talbīs ilbīs, Beirut: Mu'assasāt al-Risāla, 1992, p. 150.

APPENDIX: COMMENTATORS ON THE QUR'ĀN

- 1 Information on the life and works of al-Ṭabarī can be found in C. Bosworth, "Al-Ṭabarī" in The Encyclopedia of Islam, new ed.; J. McAuliffe, Qur'ānic Christians: An Analysis of Classical and Modern Exegesis, Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1991, pp. 38–45; and F. Rosenthal's General Introduction to The History of al-Ṭabarī, vol. 1 Albany, NY: SUNY Press, 1989, pp. 5–134.
- 2 Al-Ṭabarī, Jāmi' al-bayān 'an ta'wīl āy Qur'ān, Egypt: Muṣṭafā al-Bābi al-Ḥalabi, 1954–7.
- 3 Bosworth notes that sources introduced by words such as haddathanā, akhbaranā, or kataba indicate that al-Ṭabarī had the recognized license (ijāza) to transmit those sources. Where he had no such authority, he used words such as qāla, dhakara, rawā, and huddithu, "Al-Ṭabarī," Encyclopedia of Islam.
- 4 Information on the life and works of al-Zamakhsharī can be found in C. Brockelmann, "Al-Zamakhsharī" in The Encyclopedia of Islam, new ed. and McAuliffe, Qur'ānic Christians, pp. 49–54.
- 5 Y. Ceylan, Theology and Tafṣīr in the Major Works of Fakhr al-Dīn al-Rāzī, Kuala Lumpur: International Institute of Islamic Thought and Civilization, 1996, pp. 16, 19–20 and A.H. Johns, "Solomon and the Queen of Sheba: Fakhr al-Dīn al-Rāzī's Treatment of the Qur'ānic Telling of the Story," Abr-Nahrain, 24, 1986, 76–80.
- 6 M. Ayoub, The Qur'an and its Interpreters, vol. 1, Albany, NY: SUNY Press, 1984, p. 6.
- 7 Al-Zamakhsharī, Al-Kashshāf 'an ḥaqā'iq al-tanzīl, Egypt, 1966.
- 8 Johns, "Solomon and the Queen of Sheba," p. 77.
- 9 Because few of their works remain, the views of the Karrāmiyya are known primarily through their opponents, who accused them of literalism and anthropomorphism. Al-Rāzī's polemical writings concerning them constitute the last traces of them before their disappearance after the Mongol invasions. See C. Bosworth, "Karrāmiyya" in The Encyclopedia of Islam, new ed.
- 10 Biographical information on al-Rāzī can be found in G. Anawati, "Al-Rāzī" in The Encyclopedia of Islam, new ed.; Ceylan, Theology and Tafṣīr pp. 1–13; F. Kholeif, A Study on al-Rāzī and His Controversies in Transoxiana, Beirut: Dar El-Machreq, 1966, pp. 9–25; and McAuliffe, Qur'ānic Christians, pp. 63–76.
- 11 W. Chittick translates a portion of this letter in The Self-Disclosure of God: Principles of Ibn al-'Arabī's Cosmology, Albany, NY: SUNY Press, 1998, p. 124.
- 12 Ceylan, Theology and Tafṣīr, pp. 16, 19–20; Johns, "Solomon and the Queen of Sheba," pp. 76–80. Although he abridges al-Zamakhsharī, grammatical and linguistic issues still represent the largest part of his comments, according to M. Lagarde, Index du Grand Commentaire de Fakhr al-Dīn al-Rāzī, Leiden: E.J. Brill, 1996, p. 3.
- 13 See McAuliffe, Qur'ānic Christians, p. 69.
- 14 Information on the life and works of al-Qurṭubī can be found in R. Arnaldez's "Al-Qurṭubī" in The Encyclopedia of Islam, new ed.
- 15 Al-Qurṭubī, Al-Jāmi' li-aḥkām al-Qur'ān wa'l-mubayyin li-mā taḍammāna min al-sunna wa-āyāt al-furqān, Beirut: Dār al-Kutub al-'Abrabī, 1980.
- 16 Al-Qurṭubī shows himself to be aware of these controversies by sometimes offering critical comments relating to isrā'īliyyāt material. But, as M. Mashīnī demonstrates, al-Qurṭubī is inconsistent in his methodology, sometimes rejecting the narratives after assessing their source, sometimes including them without comment (Madrasāt al-tafṣīr fī al-Andalus, Beirut: Mu'assasāt al-Risāla, 1986, pp. 101, 560–78, 826).

- R. Arnaldez states that al-Qurṭubī makes very little use of this material (5:531b), but the index to Al-Jāmi' li-aḥkām al-Qur'ān (Fahāris al-Jāmi' li-aḥkām al-Qur'ān) lists something like 250 citations from al-Tha'labī (Beirut: Dār al-Kutub al-'Ilmiyya, 1988).
- 17 N. Calder, "Tafsīr from Ṭabarī to Ibn Kathīr: Problems in the description of a genre, illustrated with reference to the story of Abraham," in Approaches to the Qur'ān, eds G.R. Hawting and A.A. Shareef, London: Routledge, 1992, pp. 109–10.
 - 18 Information on the life and works of Ibn Taymiyya can be found in H. Laoust's article "Ibn Taymiyya" in The Encyclopedia of Islam, new ed.
 - 19 See G. Makdisi in "The Hanbali School of Sufism," Humaniora Islamica, 2, 1974, 61–72 and "Ibn Taimīya: A Ṣūfī of the Qādiriya Order," American Journal of Arabic Studies, 1, 1973, 118–29.
 - 20 Makdisi, "Ibn Taimīya," pp. 126–7 and T. Michel, A Muslim Theologian's Response to Christianity: Ibn Taymiyya's Al-Jawab al-Sahih, Delmar: Caravan, 1984, pp. 27–8.
 - 21 See T. Homerin, "Ibn Taymiyya's Al-Ṣūfiyyah wa-al-fuqarā'," Arabica, 32, 1985, 219–44; A. Knysh, Ibn 'Arabī in the Later Islamic Tradition: The Making of a Polemical Image In Medieval Islam, Albany, NY: SUNY Press, 1999, pp. 87–111; and T. Michel, "Ibn Taymiyya's Sharḥ on the Futūḥ al-Ghayb of 'Abd al-Qādir al-Jilānī," Hamdard Islamicus, 4, 1982, 3–12; and Michel, A Muslim's Theologian's Response to Christianity, pp. 27–8.
 - 22 See D. Syafruddin's analysis of this commentary in his "The Principles of Ibn Taymiyya's Qur'ānic Interpretation," M.A. Thesis, Institute of Islamic Studies, McGill University, Montreal, 1994, pp. 78–97.
 - 23 See R. Curtis, "Authentic Interpretation of Classical Islamic Texts: An analysis of the introduction to Ibn Kathīr's 'Tafsīr al-Qur'ān al-'Aẓīm,'" Ph.D. dissertation, University of Michigan, 1989, pp. 76–87 and Syafruddin, "The Principles of Ibn Taymiyya's Qur'ānic Interpretation," pp. 122–3.

WORKS CITED

Primary sources

- Abū Ṭālib al-Makkī, Muḥammad. Qūt al-qulūb. Cairo: Dār al-Rashād, 1991.
- Ash'arī, Abū'l-Ḥasan 'Alī, al-. Al-Ibāna 'an uṣūl al-diyāna. Beirut: Dār al-Nafā'is 1994.
- Ghazālī, Abū Ḥamid Muḥammad, al-. Fayṣal al-tafriqa bayna 'l-Islām wa 'l-zandaqa. Casablanca: Dār al-Nashr al-Maghribiyya, 1983.
- Ihyā' 'ulūm al-dīn. With commentary by Muḥammad b. Muḥammad Murtada' al-Zabīdī in Ithāf al-sāda al-muttaqīn bi-sharḥ. Beirut: Al-Dār al-Kutub al-'Ilmiyya, 1989.
- Iljām al-'awāmm 'an 'ilm al-kalām. Ed. Muḥammad al-Baghdādī. Beirut: Dār al-Kitāb al-'Arabī, 1985.
- Jawāhir al-Qur'ān wa duraruh. Beirut: Dār al-Afāq al-Jadīda, 1983.
- Mishkāt al-anwār wa-misfāt al-asrār. See Translations.
- Al-Mustaṣṣā min 'ilm al-uṣūl. Ed. Muḥammad al-Ashqār. Beirut: Mu'assasāt al-Risāla, 1997.
- Al-Risālat al-laduniyya. Cairo, n.d.
- Ḥallāj, Al-Ḥusayn b. Maṣṣūr, al-. Dīwān al-Ḥallāj. Koln: Al-Kamel Verlag, 1997.
- Ibn Ḥibbān, Abū Bakr Muḥammad. Al-Musnad al-ṣaḥīḥ 'alā 'l-taqāsīm wa 'l-anwā'. Beirut: Mu'assasāt al-Risāla, 1984–91.
- Ibn al-Jawzī, Abū'l-Faraj. Mukhtaṣar kitāb talbīs Iblīs. Beirut: Mu'assasāt al-Risāla, 1992.
- Ibn Qudāma. See translations.
- Ibn Sīnā, Abū 'Alī al-Ḥusayn. Fī ithbāt al-nubuwwāt li-Ibn Sīnā. Ed. Michael E. Marmura. Beirut: Dār al-Nahār li'l-Nashr, 1968.
- Al-Ishārāt wa 'l-tanbīhāt. Tehran: Matba'at al-Haydarī, 1958–9.
- Ibn Taymiyya, Aḥmad Taqī al-Dīn. Muqaddima fī uṣūl al-tafsīr. Cairo: Maktaba al-Turāth al-Islamiyya, 1988.
- Majmū' fatāwā Ibn Taymiyya: al-ḥadīth, Vol. 18, Beirut, 198–.
- Al-radd 'alā al-mantiqīyyīn. Bombay: Al-Maṭba'at al-Qayyima, 1949.
- Al-tafsīr al-kabīr. Beirut: Dār al-Kutub al-'Ilmiyya, 1988.
- Ja'far al-Ṣādiq. “Le Tafsir Mystique attribue a Ga'far Sadiq” (recension al-Sulamī). Ed. Paul Nwyia. Melanges De L'Université Saint Joseph, 43, 1968, 179–230.
- Kāshānī, 'Abd al-Razzāq al-. Iṣṭilāḥāt al-ṣūfiyya. See Translations: A Glossary of Sufi Technical Terms.
- Ta'wīlāt (Ta'wīl al-Qur'ān), published as Tafsīr al-Qur'ān al-karīm and attributed incorrectly to Ibn 'Arabī. Beirut: Dār al-Yaqẓat al-'Arabiyya, 1968.

- Maybudī, Rashīd al-Dīn al-. Kashf al-asrār wa 'uddat al-abrār. Ed. 'A. A. Hikmat. Tehran: Amīr Kabīr, 1982–3.
- Nisābūrī, Nizām al-Dīn al-. Gharā'ib al-Qur'ān wa raghā'ib al-furqān. Ed. Ibrāhīm 'Aṭwah 'Iwāḍ. Cairo: Muṣṭafā al-Bābī al-Ḥalabī, 1962–70.
- Qāshānī. See Kāshānī.
- Qurṭubī, Muḥammad b. Aḥmad 'Abd Allāh al-Anṣārī al-. Al-Jāmi' li-ahkām al-Qur'ān wa 'l-mubayyin li-mā taḍammāna min al-sunna wa-āyāt al-furqān. Beirut: Dār al-Kutub al-'Arabī, 1980.
- Qushayrī, Abū'l-Qāsim al-. Laṭā'if al-ishārāt. Introduction and editing by Ibrāhīm Basyūnī. Cairo: Dār al-Kutub al-'Arabī, 1968–71.
- Rāzī, Muḥammad b. 'Umar Fakhr al-Dīn al-. Sharḥ asmā' Allāh ta'āla wa'l-ṣifāt. Cairo: Maktaba al-Kulliyāt al-Azhariyya, 1976.
- Al-Tafsīr al-kabīr. Beirut, 1980.
- Rūzbihān al-Baqlī, Abū Muḥammad b. Abī Naṣr. 'Arā'is al-bayān fī ḥaqā'iq al-Qur'ān. Lucknow, 1898.
- Sarrāj Abū Naṣr al-. Kitāb al-luma' fī'l-taṣawwuf. Ed. Reynold A. Nicholson. Gibb Memorial Series, no. 22. London: Luzac, 1963.
- Simnānī, 'Alā' al-Dawla al-. "Muqaddima tafsīr al-Qur'ān li-'Alā' al-dawla al-Simnānī." Ed. Paul Nwyia. Al-Abḥāth, 26, 1973–77, 141–57.
- Sulamī, Abū 'Abd Al-Raḥmān Muḥammad b. al-Ḥusayn al-. Ḥaqā'iq al-tafsīr. Ed. Sayyid 'Umrān, Beirut: Dār al-Kutub al-'Ilmiyya, 2001.
- Ziyādāt ḥaqā'iq al-tafsīr (The Minor Commentary). Ed. Gerhard Böwering. Beirut: Dār al-Mashriq, 1986.
- Suyūṭī, Jalāl al-Dīn al-. Al-Itqān fī 'ulūm al-Qur'ān. Lahore: Suhail Academy, 1980.
- Ṭabarī, Abū Ja'far al-. Jāmi' al-bayān 'an ta'wīl āy al-Qur'ān. Egypt: Maṣṭafā al-Bābī al-Ḥalabī, 1954–7.
- Tha'labī, Ibn Ishāq Aḥmad b. Muḥammad Ibrāhīm, al. Qīṣaṣ al-anbiyā': Musammā bi'l-'Arā'is al-majālis. Egypt: Maktabat al-Jumhūriyya al-'Arabiyya, 195–.
- Qatā'ir al-Qur'ān. See translations.
- Tustarī, Abū Muḥammad Sahl b. 'Abd Allāh, al. Tafsīr al-Tustarī. Ed. Muḥammad Bāsil 'Uyūn al-Sūd, Beirut: Dār al-Kutub al-'Ilmiyya, 2002.
- Zamakhsharī, Maḥmūd b. 'Umar Abū'l-Qāsim, al. Al-Kashshāf 'an ḥaqā'iq al-tanzīl. Egypt: Mustafā al-Bābī al-Ḥalabī, 1966.

Al-Qur'ān translations

- The Holy Quran*. Text, translation and commentary by A.Yusuf Ali. New York: Haftner Publication, 1946.
- The Koran Interpreted*. Trans. Arthur J. Arberry. New York: Macmillan, 1955.
- The Message of the Qur'ān*. Translation and explanation by Muhammad Asad. Gibraltar: Dar al-Andalus, 1980.

Translations

- Abū Ṭalīb al-Makkī. Die Nahrung der Herzen. Trans. Richard Gramlich. Stuttgart: Franz Steiner Verlag, 1992–5.
- Ash'arī, Abū'l-Ḥasan 'Alī, al-. Al-Ash'arī's Al-Ibānah 'an uṣūl ad-diyānah (The Elucidation of Islam's Foundations). Trans. Walter C. Klein. New Haven, CT: American Oriental Society, 1940.

- Ghazālī, Abū Ḥāmid Muḥammad al-. "The Canons of Ta'wil" (Qānūn al-ta'wīl). Trans. Nicholas Heer. Windows on the House of Islam: Muslim Sources of Spirituality and Religious Life. Ed. John Renard. Berkeley, CA: University of California Press, 1998.
- . Freedom and Fulfillment: An Annotated Translation of Al-Ghazālī's al-Munqidh min al-Ḍalāl and Other Relevant Works of al-Ghazālī. Trans. Richard Joseph McCarthy. Boston, MA: Twayne, 1980.
- . Al-Ghazālī: The Niche of Lights. A parallel English-Arabic text translated, introduced, and annotated by David Buchman. Provo, UT: Brigham Young University Press, 1998.
- . Al-Ghazzālī's Mishkat al-anwar. Trans. W.H.T. Gairdner. Lahore: Sh. Muhammad Ashraf, 1991.
- . The Jewels of the Qur'an: Al-Ghazālī's Theory. A Translation, with an introduction and annotation, of al-Ghazālī's Kitāb Jawāhir al-Qur'an by Muhammad Abul Quasem. London: Kegan Paul International, 1983.
- . The Recitation and Interpretation of the Qur'an: Al-Ghazālī's Theory. Trans. Muhammad Abul Quasem. London and Boston: Kegan Paul International, 1982.
- . "Al-Risālat Al-Laduniyya. By Abū Ḥāmid Muḥammad al-Ghazālī (450/1059–505/1111)." Trans. Margaret Smith. Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society, 1938, 177–200, 353–74.
- Ḥallāj, Al-Ḥusayn b. Manṣūr al-. The Tawasin of Mansur al-Hallaj: The Great Sufic Text on the Unity of Reality. Trans. Aisha Abd ar-Rahman at-Tarjumana. Berkeley, CA: Diwan Press, 1974.
- Ibn al-Jawzī, Abū'l-Faraj. "The Devil's Delusion." Trans. D.S. Margoliouth. Islamic Culture, 10, 1936, 339–68; 11, 1937, 393–403.
- Ibn Qudāma, Muwaffaq al-Dīn 'Abd Allāh. Censure of Speculative Theology: An edition and translation of Ibn Qudāma's Taḥrīm an-naẓar fī kutub ahl al-kalām by George Makdisi. London: Luzac, 1962.
- Ibn Sīnā, Abū 'Alī al-Ḥusayn. "Avicenna: On the Proof of Prophecies and the Interpretation of the Prophet's Symbols and Metaphors." Trans. Michael E. Marmura. Medieval Political Philosophy: A Sourcebook. Eds Ralph Lerner and Mushin Mahdi. Ithaca, NY: Cornell University Press, 1963, 112–21.
- Ibn Taymiyya, Aḥmad b. 'Abd al-Ḥālim. A Muslim Theologian's Response to Christianity: Ibn Taymiyya's Al-Jawab al-Sahih. Trans. Thomas Michel. Delmar: Caravan, 1984.
- . Muqaddima fī uṣūl al-tafsīr: An Introduction to the Principles of Tafseer. Trans. Muhammad 'Abdul Haq Ansari. Birmingham, UK: Al-Hidaayah Publishing, 1993.
- . "Ibn Taymiyya's Sharḥ on the Futūḥ al-Ghayb of 'Abd al-Qādir al-Jīlānī." Trans. Thomas Michel. Hamdard Islamicus, 4, 1981, 3–12.
- . "Ibn Taimiyya's Al-Ṣūfiyyah wa-al-fuqarā'." Trans. Th. E. Homerin. Arabica, 32, 1985, 219–44.
- . "Ibn Taymiyya: Treatise on the Principles of Tafsīr" (excerpt). Trans. Jane Dammen McAuliffe. Windows on the House of Islam: Muslim Sources on Spirituality and Religious Life. Ed. John Renard. Berkeley, CA: University of California Press, 1998, pp. 35–43.
- Kalābādhi, Abū Bakr al-. The Doctrine of the Sufis (Kitāb al-ta'arruf li-madhab ahl al-taṣawwuf). Translated by A.J. Arberry. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1977 (first published 1935).
- Kāshānī, 'Abd al-Razzāq al-. A Glossary of Sufi Technical Terms (Iṣṭilāḥāt al-ṣūfiyya). Arabic text with trans. by Nabī Safwat, revised and edited by David Pendlebury. London: Octagon Press, 1991.

- Kisā'ī, Muḥammad b. 'Abd Allāh al-. The Tales of the Prophets of al-Kisā'i. Translated with notes by W.M. Thackston. Boston, MA: Twayne Publishers, 1978.
- Qushayrī, Abū'l-Qāsim al-. Principles of Sufism. Trans. B.R. von Schlegell. Berkeley, CA: Mizan Press, 1992.
- Rūzbihān al-Baqlī. Le Jasmin des Fideles d'amour (Kitāb-e 'Abhar al-'ashiqin). Introduction and translation by Henry Corbin and Mohsin Mo'in. Teheran: L'Institute Franco-Iranien, 1958.
- Rūzbihān al-Baqlī. The Unveiling of Secrets: Diary of a Sufi Master. Trans. Carl W. Ernst. Chapel Hill, NC: Parvardigar Press, 1997.
- Sarrāj Abū Naṣr al-. Schlaglichter über das Sufitums. Trans. Richard Gramlich. Stuttgart: Franz Steiner Verlag, 1990.
- Ṭabarī, Abū Ja'far Muḥammad b. Jarīr, al-. The Commentary on the Qur'ān. Vol. 1. Trans. J. Cooper. Oxford: Oxford University Press, 1987.
- The History of al-Ṭabarī (Ta'rikh al-rusul wa'l-mulūk). Vol. 1. Translation and General Introduction by Franz Rosenthal. Albany, NY: SUNY Press, 1989.
- The History of al-Ṭabarī (Ta'rikh al-rusul wa'l-mulūk). Vol. 3. Trans. William Brinner. Albany, NY: SUNY Press, 1991.
- Tha'labī, Abū Ishāq Aḥmad b. Muḥammad Ibrāhīm, al. 'Arā'is al-majālis fī qīṣaṣ al-anbiyā' Or, "Lives of the Prophets". Trans. William M. Brinner. Leiden: E.J. Brill, 2002.
- Die vom Koran Getöten: Aṭ-Tha'labīs Qatlā l-Qur'ān nach der Istanbuler und den Leidener Handschriften. Edition, commentary and translation by Beate Wiesmüller. Würzburg: Ergon Verlag, 2002.

Secondary works

- Abrahamov, Binyamin. "Ibn Taymiyya on the Agreement of Reason with Tradition." Muslim World, 82, 1992, 256–72.
- Afnan, Soheil M. Avicenna: His Life and Works. London: George Allen and Unwin, 1958.
- Ahmad, Rashid (Jullandri). "Abu al-Qasim al-Qushairi as a Theologian and Commentator." The Islamic Quarterly, 13, 1969, 16–69.
- "Qur'anic Exegesis and Classical Tafsir." The Islamic Quarterly, 12, 1968, 71–119.
- Amir-Moezzi, Mohammad Ali. The Divine Guide in Early Shi'ism: The Sources of Esotericism in Islam. Trans. David Streight. Albany, NY: SUNY, 1994.
- Anawati, G.C. Mu'allafāt Ibn Sīnā. Cairo: Dār al-Ma'ārif, 1950.
- Arberry, A.J. Shiraz: Persian City of Saints and Poets. Norman: University of Oklahoma Press, 1960.
- Asad, Muhammad. See Translations: Qur'ān.
- 'Āṣī, Ḥasan. Al-tafsīr al-Qur'ānī wa'l-lughat al-ṣūfiyya fī falsafa Ibn Sīnā. Beirut: Al-Mu'assasāt al-Jāmi'iyya li'l-Dirāsāt wa'l-Nashr wa'l-Tawzī', 1983.
- Ayoub, Mahmoud M. The Qur'an and Its Interpreters. Vol. 1. Albany, NY: SUNY Press, 1984.
- The Qur'an and Its Interpreters: The House of 'Imran. Vol. 2. Albany, NY: SUNY Press, 1992.
- Badawī, 'Abd al-Raḥmān. Mu'allafāt al-Ghazālī. Cairo: Al-Majlis al-A'lā liRi'āyat al-Funūn wa'l-ādāb wa'l 'ulūm al-Ijtimā'iyya, 1961.
- Bello, Iysa A. The Medieval Islamic Controversy Between Philosophy and Orthodoxy: Ijma' and Ta'wil in the Conflict Between Al-Ghazali and Ibn Rushd. Leiden: E.J. Brill, 1989.

- Böwering, Gerhard. "The Adab Literature of Classical Islam: Anṣārī's Code of Conduct." Moral Conduct and Authority: The Place of Adab in South Asian Islam. Ed. Barbara Daly Metcalf. Berkeley, CA: University of California Press, 1984.
- . "Ibn al-'Arabī's Concept of Time." God is Beautiful and He Loves Beauty. Eds Alma Giese and J. Christoph Bürgel. Bern: Peter Lang, 1994.
- . "The Major Sources of Sulamī's Minor Qur'ān Commentary." Oriens, 35, 1996, 35–56.
- . The Mystical Vision of Existence in Classical Islam: The Qur'ānic Hermeneutics of the Ṣūfī Sahl at-Tustarī. Berlin: Walter De Gruyter, 1980.
- . "The Qur'ān Commentary of Al-Sulamī." Islamic Studies Presented to Charles J. Adams. Eds Wael B. Hallaq and Donald P. Little. Leiden: E.J. Brill, 1991, pp. 41–56.
- Bürgel, Johann Christoph. The Feather of Simurgh: The "Licit Magic" of the Arts in Medieval Islam. New York: New York University Press, 1988.
- . "Symbols and Hints: Some Considerations Concerning the Meaning of Ibn Ṭufayl's Ḥayy ibn Yaqẓān." The World of Ibn Ṭufayl: Interdisciplinary Perspectives on Ḥayy ibn Yaqẓān. Ed. Lawrence I. Conrad. Leiden: E.J. Brill, 1996, pp. 114–32.
- Calder, Norman. "Tafsīr from Ṭabarī to Ibn Kathīr: Problems in the description of a genre, illustrated with reference to the story of Abraham." Approaches to the Qur'ān. Ed. G.R. Hawting and Abdul-Kader A. Shareef. London: Routledge, 1993, pp. 101–40.
- Ceylan, Yasin. Theology and Tafsīr in the Major Works of Fakhr al-Dīn al-Rāzī. Kuala Lumpur: International Institute of Islamic Thought and Civilization, 1996.
- Chittick, William. "The Five Divine Presences: From Al-Qūnawī to Al-Qayṣarī." The Muslim World, 72, 1982, 107–28.
- . Imaginal Worlds: Ibn al-'Arabi and the Problem of Religious Diversity. Albany, NY: SUNY Press, 1994.
- . "Rūmī and waḥdat al-wujūd." Poetry and Mysticism in Islam: The Heritage of Rūmī. Eds Amin Banani, Richard Hovannisian, and George Sabagh. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1984, pp. 70–111.
- . "The School of Ibn 'Arabī." History of Islamic Philosophy. Eds Seyyed Hossein Nasr and Oliver Leaman. Vol. 1. London: Routledge, 1996, pp. 510–23.
- . The Self-Disclosure of God: Principles of Ibn al-'Arabī's Cosmology. Albany, NY: SUNY Press, 1998.
- . The Sufi Path of Knowledge: Ibn al-'Arabī's Metaphysics of Imagination. Albany, NY: SUNY Press, 1989.
- Chodkiewicz, Michel. An Ocean Without Shore: Ibn Arabi, the Book, and the Law. Albany, NY: SUNY Press, 1993.
- Corbin, Henry. Creative Imagination in the Sufism of Ibn 'Arabi. Trans. Ralph Manheim. Princeton, NY: Princeton University Press, 1969.
- . En Islam Iranien. Paris: Gallimard, 1972.
- . The Man of Light in Iranian Sufism. Trans. Nancy Pearson. Boulder, CO: Shambhala, 1978.
- . Spiritual Body and Celestial Earth: From Mazdean Iran to Shi'ite Iran. Trans. Nancy Pearson. Princeton, NY: Princeton University Press, 1977.
- Curtis, Roy Young Mukhtar. "Authentic Interpretation of Classical Islamic Texts: An analysis of the introduction of Ibn Kathīr's "Tafsīr al-Qur'ān al-'Aẓīm." PhD Dissertation, The University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, MI, 1989.
- Dabashi, Hamid. "Historical Conditions of Persian Sufism during the Seljuk Period." Classical Persian Sufism: From its Origins to Rumi. Ed. Leonard Lewisohn. London: Khaniqahi Nimatullahi Publications, 1993, pp. 137–74.

- Davidson, Herbert A. Alfarabi, Avicenna, and Averroes, on Intellect: Their Cosmologies, Theories of the Active Intellect, and Theories of Human Intellect. Oxford: Oxford University Press, 1992.
- Dhahabī, Muḥammad Ḥusayn al-. Al-tafsīr wa'l-mufasssīrūn, 2 vols, Cairo: Dār al-kutub al-ḥadītha, 1967.
- Elias, Jamal J. The Throne Carrier of God: The Life and Thought of 'Ala' ad-dawla as-Simnani. Albany, NY: SUNY Press, 1995.
- The Encyclopedia of Islam*. Eds C.E. Bosworth, E. van Donzel, W.P. Heinrichs, and G. Lecomte. Leiden: E.J. Brill, 1960–2002.
- The Encyclopedia of Religion*. Ed. Mircea Eliade. New York: Macmillan, 1987.
- Ernst, Carl W. Ruzbihan Baqli: Mysticism and the Rhetoric of Sainthood in Persian Sufism. Richmond: Curzon Press, 1995.
- The Shambhala Guide to Sufism. Boston, MA: Shambhala, 1997.
- “The Symbolism of Birds and Flight in the Writings of Ruzbihan Baqli.” The Legacy of Mediaeval Persian Sufism. Ed. Leonard Lewisohn. London: Khaniqahi Nimatullahi, 1992, pp. 353–66.
- Words of Ecstasy in Sufism. Albany, NY: SUNY Press, 1985.
- Fahāris al-Jāmi' li-ahkām al-Qur'ān*. Beirut: Dār al-Kutub al-'Ilmiyya, 1988.
- Gatje, Helmut. The Qur'an and its Exegesis: Selected Texts with Classical and Modern Muslim Interpretations. Trans. and ed. by Alford T. Welch. Berkeley, CA: University of California Press, 1976.
- Glassé, Cyril. The Concise Encyclopedia of Islam. San Francisco, CA: Harper and Row, 1989.
- Godlas, Alan A. “Psychology and Self-Transformation in the Sufi Qur'ān Commentary of Rūzbihān al-Baqlī.” Sufi Illuminations, 1, 1996, 31–62.
- “Sufi Koran Commentary: A Survey of the Genre.” Web-based version of forthcoming article “al-Tafsir al-Sufi” to be published by the Encyclopedia Iranica. <www.arches.uga.edu/~godlas/suftaf/oldtafsuftoc.html> (accessed August 10, 2003).
- Goldziher, Ignaz. Die Richtungen der islamischen Koranauslegung. Leiden: E.J. Brill 1952 (first published 1920).
- Graham, William A. Divine Word and Prophet Word in Early Islam: A Reconsideration of the Sources, with Special Reference to the Divine Saying or Ḥadīth Qudsī. The Hague: Mouton and Co., 1977.
- Habil, Abdurrahman. “Traditional Esoteric Commentaries on the Qur'an.” Islamic Spirituality: Foundations. Ed. Seyyed Hossein Nasr. New York: Crossroad, 1987, pp. 24–47.
- Ha'iri Yazdi, Mehdi. The Principles of Epistemology in Islamic Philosophy: Knowledge by Presence. Albany, NY: SUNY Press, 1992.
- Halkin, A. S. “The Ḥashawiyya.” Journal of the American Oriental Society, 54, 1934, 1–28.
- Hawting, G.R. and A.K.A. Shareef, Eds. Approaches to the Qur'an. London: Routledge, 1993.
- Heath, Peter. Allegory and Philosophy in Avicenna (Ibn Sina): With a Translation of the Book of the Prophet Muḥammad's Ascent to Heaven. Philadelphia, PA: University of Pennsylvania Press, 1992.
- “Creative Hermeneutics: A Comparative Analysis of Three Islamic Approaches.” Arabica, 36, 1989, 173–210.
- Heer, Nicholas. “Abū Ḥamid al-Ghazālī's Esoteric Exegesis of the Koran.” Classical Persian Sufism: From its Origins to Rumi. Ed. Leonard Lewisohn. London: Khaneqahi Nimatullahi Publications, 1993, pp. 235–57.

- Heinrichs, Wolfhart. "Contacts Between Scriptural Hermeneutics and Literary Theory in Islam: The Case of Majāz." Zeitschrift für Geschichte der Arabisch-Islamischen Wissenschaften, 7, 1991/2, 253–84.
- "On the Genesis of the Ḥaḡīqa-Majāz Dichotomy." Studia Islamica, 59, 1984, 111–40.
- "Takhyīl and its Traditions." God is beautiful and He loves beauty. Eds Alma Giese and J. Christoph Bürgel. Bern: Peter Lang, 1994, pp. 227–47.
- Homerin, Th.E. See translations: Ibn Taymiyya.
- Hourani, George F. "The Chronology of Ghazālī's Writings." Journal of the American Oriental Society, 79, 1959, 225–33.
- Izutsu, Toshihiko. Creation and the Timeless Order of Things. Ashland, OR: White Cloud Press, 1994.
- Johns, A.H. "Solomon and the Queen of Sheba: Fakhr al-Dīn al-Rāzī's Treatment of the Qur'anic Telling of the Story," Abr-Nahrain, 24, 1986, 58–82.
- Kassis, Hanna E. A Concordance of the Qur'an. Berkeley, CA: University of California Press, 1983.
- Kermani, Navid. Gott ist schön: Das ästhetische Erleben des Koran. München: Verlag C.H. Beck, 1999.
- Kholeif, Fathalla. A Study on Fakhr al-Dīn al-Rāzī and His Controversies in Transoxiana. Beirut: Dar El-Machreq, 1966.
- Kinberg, Leah. "Muḥkamāt and Mutashābihāt (Koran 3/7): Implication of a Koranic Pair of Terms in Medieval Exegesis." Arabica, 35, 1988, 143–72.
- Knysh, Alexander D. Ibn 'Arabi in the Later Islamic Tradition: The Making of a Polemical Image in Medieval Islam. Albany, NY: SUNY Press, 1999.
- Lagarde, Michel. Index du Grand Commentaire de Fakhr al-Dīn al-Rāzī. Leiden: E.J. Brill, 1996.
- Landolt, Hermann. "Ghazālī and 'Religionswissenschaft': Some Notes on the Mishkāṭ al-anwār for Professor Charles J. Adams." Asiatische Studien, 45, 1991, 19–72.
- Lane, E.W. Arabic-English Lexicon. 2 vols Cambridge: The Islamic Texts Society, 1984. (First published 1863–93).
- Lewisohn, Leonard. Beyond Faith and Infidelity: The Sufi Poetry and Teachings of Maḥmūd Shabistarī. Richmond: Curzon Press, 1995.
- Lory, Pierre. Les Commentaires ésotériques du Coran d'après 'Abd ar-Razzāq al-Qāshānī. Paris: Les Deux Océans, 1980.
- McAuliffe, Jane Dammen. Qur'anic Christians: An Analysis of Classical and Modern Exegesis. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1991.
- "Qur'anic Hermeneutics: The Views of al-Ṭabarī and Ibn Kathīr." Approaches to the History of the Interpretation of the Qur'ān. Ed. Andrew Rippin. Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1988, pp. 46–62.
- Makdisi, George. "The Hanbali School and Sufism." Humaniora Islamica, 2, 1974, 61–72.
- "Ibn Taimīya: A Ṣūfī of the Qādiriya Order." American Journal of Arabic Studies, 1, 1973, 118–29.
- Mashīnī, Muṣṭafā Ibrāhīm. Madrasāt al-tafsīr fī l-Andalus. Beirut: Mu'assasāt al-Risāla 1986.
- Massignou, Louis. "Elie et son rôle transhistorique, Khadiriya, en Islam." Opera Minora, Ed. Y. Moubarac. Vol. 1. Beirut: Dār al-Ma'ārif, 1963, pp. 142–61.
- Essai sur les origines du lexique technique de la Mystique Musulmane. 2nd ed. Paris: J. Vrin, 1968 (1st ed. Paris, 1922).

- Massignon, Louis. "La Vie et les oeuvres de Ruzbehan Baqli." Opera Minora. Ed. Y. Moubarac. Vol. 2. Beirut: Dār al-Ma'ārif, 1963, pp. 451–65.
- Michel, Thomas. See translations: Ibn Taymiyya.
- Morris, James Winston. "Ibn Arabi and His Interpreters. Part II (Conclusion): Influences and Interpretations." Journal of the American Oriental Society 107, 1987, 101–19.
- Murata, Sachiko. The Tao of Islam: A Sourcebook of Gender Relationships in Islamic Thought. Albany, NY: SUNY Press 1992.
- Muṣṭafā, Aḥmad Amīn. Takhrīj abyāt laṭā'if al-ishārāt l-imām al-Qushayrī wa dirāsāt al-minhaj al-Qushayrī fī l-istashād al-adabī. Cairo: Al-Sa'āda, 1986.
- Newby, Gordon. "Tafsir Isra'iliyat." Journal of the American Academy of Religion, 47, 1979, 685–97.
- Nwyia, Paul. Exégèse Coranique et Language Mystique: Nouvel essai sur le lexique technique des mystiques musulmans. Beirut: Dar El-Masreq, 1970.
- Pavlin, James. "The Medieval Debate over Quranic Hermeneutics: Ibn Taymiyyah's Discussion of al-Ghazali's Metaphysics in the Bughṭat al-Murtadd." Paper presented at the American Academy of Religion Annual Meeting, Atlanta, GA, Nov. 22–25, 2003.
- . "The Salafi-ization of the Fanā: Ibn Taymiyyah and the Annihilation of Self." Paper presented at the Middle East Studies Association Annual Meeting, Washington, DC, Nov. 19–22, 1999.
- Rahman, Fazlur. "Dream, Imagination and 'Alam al-mithal' in The Dream and Human Societies. Eds G.E. Grunebaum and Roger Caillois. Berkeley, CA: University of California Press, 1966, pp. 409–19.
- Riddell, Peter G. "The Transmission of Narrative-Based Exegesis in Islam." Islam: Essays on Scripture, Thought and Society. Eds Riddell and Tony Street. Leiden: E.J. Brill, 1997, pp. 57–80.
- Rippin, Andrew, Ed. Approaches to the History of the Interpretation of the Qur'an. Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1988.
- . "The Present Status of Tafsir Studies." The Muslim World, 72, 1982, 224–38.
- Rokni, M. Mahdi. Laṭā'yif-i az Qur'an-i karīm. Mashhad: Mu'assasah-i chāp va intisharāt-i āstān-i quds-i raḡavī, 1996.
- Rosenthal, Franz. Knowledge Triumphant: The Concept of Knowledge in Medieval Islam. Leiden: E.J. Brill, 1970.
- . The Muslim Concept of Freedom Prior to the Nineteenth Century. Leiden: E.J. Brill, 1960.
- Sands, Kristin Zahra. "On the Popularity of Husayn Va'iz-i Kashifi's Mavāhib-i 'aliyya: A Persian Commentary on the Qur'an." Iranian Studies, 36, 2003, 469–83.
- Schimmel, Annemarie. Mystical Dimensions of Islam. Chapel Hill, NC: University of North Carolina Press, 1975.
- Sells, Michael A. "Bewildered Tongue: The Semantics of Mystical Union in Islam." Mystical Union in Judaism, Christianity, and Islam. Ed. Moshe Idel and Bernard McGinn. New York: Continuum, 1996.
- . Early Islamic Mysticism: Sufi, Qur'an, Mīraj, Poetic and Theological Writings. New York: Paulist Press, 1996.
- Sharī'at, Muḥammad Javād. Fihrist-i tafsi'r-i kashf al-asrār va 'uddat al-abrār ma'rūf bih tafsi'r-i Khvājah 'Abd Allāh Anṣārī. Tehran: Amīr Kabīr, 1363/1984.
- Shorter Encyclopaedia of Islam*, Eds H.A.R. Gibb and J.H. Kramers. Karachi: South Asian Publishers, 1981.

WORKS CITED

- Smith, Jane I. and Yvonne Y. Haddad. "The Virgin Mary in Islam's Tradition and Commentary." The Muslim World, 79, 1989, 161–87.
- Syafruddin, Didin, "The Principles of Ibn Taymiyya's Quranic Interpretation." M.A.Thesis, Institute of Islamic Studies, McGill University, Montreal, 1994.
- Tabatabai, Allamah. "The Concept of Al-Ta'wil in the Qur'an." Message of Thaqaalayn, 2, 1995, 21–40.
- Thackston, W. M. See Translations: The Tales of the Prophets of al-Kisa'i.
- Watt, W. Montgomery. "The Authenticity of the Works Attributed to al-Ghazālī." Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society, 1952, 24–45.
- Weiss, Bernard. "Exotericism and Objectivity in Islamic Jurisprudence." Islamic Law and Jurisprudence. Ed. Nicholas Heer. Seattle: University of Washington Press, 1990.
- Wensinck, A.J. Concordance et indices de la tradition musulmane, 2nd ed., 8 vols. Leiden: E.J. Brill, 1992.
- The Muslim Creed: Its Genesis and Historical Development. New York: Barnes and Noble, 1965 (first published 1932).
- Wheeler, Brannon M. "The Jewish Origins of Qur'ān 18:65–82? Reexamining Arent Jan Wensinck's Theory." Journal of the American Oriental Society, 118, 1998 153–71.
- Moses in the Quran and Islamic Exegesis. London: RoutledgeCurzon, 2002.
- Wolfson, Harry. "The Terms Taşawwur and Taşdīq in Arabic Philosophy and Their Greek, Latin and Hebrew Equivalents." Muslim World, 33, 1943, 114–28.

INDEX OF QUR'ĀNIC VERSES

- 2:31 He taught Adam all the names ... 27
- 2:67–71 When Mūsā said to his people, “God commands you to sacrifice” ... 74
- 2:88 They say, “Our hearts are enclosed in a covering” ... 19
- 2:213 Mankind was a single community and God sent prophets ... 87
- 2:257 God is the friend of those who believe ... 111, 169 n.11
- 3:7 He it is who sent down to you the book containing clear verses ... 14–28, 111, 115, 137
- 3:31 If you love God, follow me ... 74
- 3:35–47 When a woman of ‘Imrān said, “O my Lord, I have vowed to you” ... 97–104
- 3:155 Satan made them slip in some of what they earned ... 90
- 3:191 Those who remember God standing, sitting ... 74
- 4:43 O you who believe, do not come to prayers while intoxicated ... 45
- 4:83 Those among them who are to deduce [the matter] know it ... 48
- 4:155 They say, “Our hearts are enclosed in a covering” ... 19
- 5:27 He said, “It will be forbidden to them for forty years” ... 89
- 6:1 He made the shadows and the light ... 112
- 6:9 If We had made him an angel ... 149 n.8
- 6:25 We have placed veils upon their hearts lest they understand it ... 19
- 6:38 We have left nothing out from the Book 7
- 6:76–9 When the night covered [Ibrāhīm], he saw a star ... 37–8, 58, 153 n.10
- 6:103 Vision cannot encompass Him ... 19–20
- 6:122 Why, is he who was dead and We gave him life ... 169 n.11
- 6:124 God well knows where to place His message ... 87
- 6:158 On a day when some of the signs of your Lord will come ... 18
- 7:23 “Lord, we have wronged ourselves and if You do not forgive us” ... 106
- 7:28 God does not command what is shameful 19
- 7:143 When Mūsā came to Our appointed time ... 54, 90, 108
- 7:172 When your Lord took the seeds of their future progeny from the loins ... 27, 122, 151 n.44
- 8:17 You did not throw when you threw but God threw ... 118
- 10:3 He sits on the Throne governing the affair ... 110
- 11:1 From the very presence of one who is Wise, Knowing 27
- 12:53 “Truly the soul commands evil unless my Lord has mercy” ... 165 n.51, 166 n.61
- 13:2 He governs the affair ... 110
- 14:1 In order that you might bring mankind out of the darkness ... 119
- 15:21 There is nothing whose treasures are not with Us ... 7

- 16:50 They fear their Lord above them... 20
- 16:68 And your Lord revealed to the bees... 83
- 16:79 Do they not see the birds held subservient in mid-air?... 100
- 17:16 And when We intend to destroy a town... 19
- 17:44 There is nothing which does not proclaim His praise... 38
- 17:46 We have placed veils upon their hearts lest they understand it... 19
- 17:84 We revealed the Qur'ān which is a healing and mercy... 31
- 18:57 We have placed veils upon their hearts lest they understand it... 19
- 18:60–82 And when Mūsā (Moses) said to his boy, "I will continue until I reach the junction of the two seas"... 26, 79–96
- 19:16–29 Mention Maryam in the book when she withdrew from her family... 40, 97, 107–9
- 20:5 The Merciful sat upon the throne 20, 59, 127
- 20:9–12 Has the story of Mūsā reached you? When he saw a fire... 38, 59, 153 n.12
- 20:24 "Go to Pharaoh. Truly, he has transgressed." 49, 61
- 20:56 The Merciful sat upon the throne. To Him belongs... 173 n.78
- 20:69 "Throw down what is in your right hand..." 59
- 20:77 We revealed to Mūsā to travel by night with My servants... 89
- 20:114 Say, "Lord, increase me in knowledge." 26
- 21:83 When Job cried out to his Lord, "Truly I have been touched by distress"... 35
- 21:91 She who guarded her chastity... 97, 105
- 22:75 God chooses messengers from angels and from men... 87
- 23:50 We made the son of Maryam and his mother a sign... 97
- 24:34 We have sent down to you signs making things clear... 110
- 24:35 God is the light of the heavens and the earth... 110–35
- 24:40 Anyone for whom God does not appoint a light has no light 171 n.43
- 25:53 It is He who has let forth the two seas... 165 n.55
- 26:21 "So I fled from you when I feared you"... 89
- 26:29 We will surely guide to Our paths those who have struggled for Us... 30
- 26:89 Only the one who brings to God a sound heart 35
- 26:192–4 And surely it is a revelation of the Lord of the worlds... 31
- 27:8 So when he came to it, a voice cried... 89
- 27:34 Truly, when kings enter a village, they destroy it... 36
- 27:38 He said, "O council, which of you can bring me her throne"... 164 n.37
- 27:88 And you see the mountains, thinking them to be firmly fixed... 36
- 28:7 And We revealed to the mother of Mūsā... 83
- 28:15 Mūsā struck him and killed him... 90
- 28:30 And when he came to it, a voice cried from the right shore... 89–90
- 28:88 Everything is being annihilated except His face... 116, 126
- 29:69 We will surely guide to Our paths those who have struggled for Us... 30
- 31:27 If all the trees on the earth were pens... 7
- 32:5 He governs the affair from the heaven to the earth... 110
- 33:46 And as a inviter to God by His permission and as a light-giving lamp 119
- 35:12 The two seas are not alike... 165 n.55
- 36:12 We have counted everything in a clear register 7
- 38:29 A book which We have sent down to you as a blessing... 30
- 39:1 The revelation of the book is from God, the mighty, the wise 31
- 39:22 Is he whose breast God has opened up to Islam... 119
- 39:69 The earth will shine with the light of its Lord... 128

INDEX OF QUR'ĀNIC VERSES

- 40:1–2 Hā mīm. The revelation of the Book is from God, the exalted, the knowing 31
- 41:5 They say our hearts are veiled from what you call us to ... 19
- 41:11 They [the heavens and the earth] said, "We have come willingly." 38–40
- 41:53 We will show them Our signs in the horizons and in their souls ... 44, 173 n.77
- 42:11 There is nothing like Him ... 20, 41, 112
- 42:52 But We made it a light by which to guide ... 169 n.11
- 50:22 You were heedless of this but now We have removed your veil ... 162 n.19
- 50:37 Surely in that there is a remembrance for one who has a heart ... 31, 36
- 52:1–8 By the mount and a book inscribed on parchment unrolled ... 40–1
- 53:57–8 That which is immanent becomes immanent. No one but God ... 162 n.19
- 66:12 And Maryam, the daughter of 'Imrān, who guarded her chastity ... 97, 100, 105–6
- 74:50–1 As if they were startled asses feeling before a lion 74
- 75:2 Nay, I call to witness the blaming soul ... 165 n.51, 166 n.61
- 75:22–3 On that day faces will be radiant, gazing at their Lord 19–20
- 81:4 When the sun will be wrapped up ... 131
- 82:1 When heaven will be split open 131
- 84:1 When heaven will be split asunder ... 131
- 88:21 "Remind! You are only a reminder!" 28
- 89:27–8 "O soul at peace return to your Lord" ... 165 n.51, 166 n.61
- 93:6 Did He not find you an orphan and give (you) shelter? 35

INDEX OF AḤĀDĪTH AND SAYINGS

- The attribute of "sitting firm" (istawā) is unknown, the modality of it is not rational ... (Mālik ibn Anas) 60
- The believer's heart is between the two fingers of the Merciful 156 n.40
- The Book of God has four things ... (Ja'far al-Ṣādiq) 13
- Every verse of the Qur'ān has four kinds of meaning: an exoteric sense, an inner sense, a limit and a lookout point ('Alī) 12, 61
- For anyone who practically applies what he knows ... 30
- For the one who understands the Qur'ān, thereby whole bodies of knowledge ... ('Alī) 13
- The Garden was shown to me ... 57
- God created His creation in darkness, then cast some of His light upon them ... 133
- God Most High created men in darkness, then sprinkled on them ... 133
- I do not see anything without seeing God in it (quoted anonymously here) 24
- I kept repeating the verse in my heart ... (Ja'far al-Ṣādiq) 32
- I see a light 114, 135
- I see my Lord in the most beautiful form 108
- I swear by God that God has disclosed ... (Ja'far al-Ṣādiq) 31
- If I had wished, I could have loaded seventy camels with commentary ... ('Alī) 13
- It was as if I were looking at Yūnus ... 57
- Many have become perfect among men, but among women only ... 99
- The Messenger of God did not confide anything in me which he concealed from the people except ... ('Alī) 13
- O God, praise be to You, light of the heavens ... 114
- Poor people! They get their knowledge from the dead ... (Abū Yazīd al-Bisṭāmī) 51
- The Qur'ān has an exoteric sense and an inner sense ... up to seven inner senses 44
- The Qur'ān is recited with nine aspects (awjuh) ... (Ja'far al-Ṣādiq) 13
- The Qur'ān was sent down in seven aḥruf. Each ḥarf has a back (ẓahr) and a belly (baṭn) ... (related from Ibn Mas'ūd) 8
- The Qur'ān was sent down in seven modes (anwā') ... (Ja'far al-Ṣādiq) 13
- Reflect upon the bounties of God, not His essence 24
- Seek the legal opinion of your heart even if ... 87
- There is no good in an act of worship without comprehension ... ('Alī) 12, 33
- What earth would carry me, what heaven shelter me, if I were to speak of the Qur'ān ... (Abū Bakr al-Ṣiddīq) 47
- Whoever speaks of the Qur'ān from his personal opinion (ra'y) ... (related from Ibn 'Abbās) 47
- Whoever treats a friend of Mine as an enemy, on him I declare war ... 128, 173 n.79
- The whole of Sufism is ways of behavior (Abū 'Abd al-Raḥmān al-Sulamī) 30
- Yes, you were proof but devotion to proof after attainment ... (Aḥmad ibn Abū'l-Hawārī) 51
- You are the real, Your speech is real, the Garden is real ... 114
- Your soul has a right over you 91
- Your soul is your mount, so be kind to it 94

INDEX OF SELECTED NAMES AND TERMS

- Abū Ṭālib al-Makkī, Muḥammad (d. 998):
Qūt al-qulūb 9–10, 31–2, 34, 55, 72–3 adab (pl. ādāb, “ways of behavior, manners, courtesies”) 23, 29–32, 130; see also ta’dīb
aḥruf see ḥarf
aḥwāl see ḥāl
 Alī ibn Abī Ṭālib (d. 661) 25, 33, 62, 82; sayings of, on the Qur’ān and its interpretation 12–13, 136
 allegoresis see interpretation
 ‘amal (pl. a’māl, “practice”) 51, 93
 ‘amm (also ‘amma, pl. ‘awāmm, “public, common people, masses”) 60–1, 115; as contrasted with khāss (“elite, private”) 9, 13, 15–16, 22, 28, 136
anfus see nafs
 Anṣarī al-Harawī, ‘Abd Allāh al- (d. 1089) 73
 anthropomorphic verses see interpretation ‘aql (pl. ‘uqūl, “intellect”) 10, 12, 20, 38–9, 76, 85, 92, 108, 112, 116, 123, 125–6, 128–9, 163 n.30, 173 n.74; al-‘aql al-‘amālī (“the practical intellect”) 93; al-‘aql al-fa’āl (“the Active Intelligence”) 127, 129, 166 n.64; al-‘aql al-fāriqa (“the discerning intellect”) 95; al-‘aql al-kullī (“the Universal Intellect or Mind”) 86, 163 n.32; al-‘aql al-naẓarī (“the theoretical intellect”) 93
arwāḥ see rūḥ
 Ash’arī, Abū’l-Ḥasan al- (d. 935) 59–60
asrār see sirr attributes of God 15–16, 20, 33–4, 57, 110–14; Mu’tazilī doctrine on 111; see also ḥaqīqa, contrasted with majāz awliyā’ see walī
awqāt see waqt
badhl al-muhaj (“sacrificing the very core of one’s being, one’s lifeblood”) 29 baqā’ (“subsistence”) 24, 54, 117, 121, 128, 130, 133
 Basyūnī, Ibrāhīm 71–2
bāṭin (pl. bawāṭin, “inner or inward sense”) 51, 96, 127; contrasted with ẓāhir 1, 8–13, 29, 32, 43, 50, 52, 61, 81, 92, 95 bāṭiniyya (derogatory term for “esotericists”) 11, 37, 49, 52, 55, 61–2, 86, 121 bi-lā kayfa (“without asking ‘how’ or ‘why’”) 59–60
 Böwering, Gerhard 68–70
 Bürgel, Johann Christoph 3 burhān (pl. barāḥin, “demonstrative proof”) 57–60, 84
 Calder, Norman 67, 143
 Chittick, William 2, 40–1
 Chodkiewicz, Michel 96, 139
 Corbin, Henry 2, 162 n.14
 Dabashi, Hamid 3
dalīl or dalāla (pl. dalā’il or dalālāt, “evidence, indicator”) 49, 51, 59–60, 84; dalā’il ‘aqliyya (“rational indicators”) 21, 60; dalā’il qātī’a (“definitive indicators”) 60; dalīl munfaṣil (“clear-cut indicator”) 20, 111
ḍarb al-mithāl (“striking similitudes,” a method of interpretation) 37–40, 44, 67, 92
 Day of the Covenant (mithāq) 27, 151 n.44 desire: God creates man's 96, 104;

see also irāda
dhawq 54, 71, 116

Ernst, Carl 4, 82–3

fahm ("understanding," a method of interpretation) 4, 9, 12, 23–4, 29–31, 33–7, 48, 50, 67, 153 n.23

Fakhr al-Dīn al-Rāzī see Rāzī, Fakhr al-Dīn al- (d. 1210)

fanā ("annihilation") 54, 116–17, 127–8, 130, 133, 155 n.26

Ghazālī, Abū Ḥāmid al- (d. 1111) 4, 52, 55, 63, 72–3, 138, 142; Fayṣal al-tafrīqa 56–9, 60, 72, 136; Ihyā' 'ulūm al-dīn 10, 32–4, 48–51, 55, 59, 61, 71–2, 118, 136; Iljām al-'awāmm 22–3, 61, 72; Jawāhir al-Qur'ān 7, 29–30, 38–40, 72, 137; Mishkāt al-anwār 37–8, 42, 59, 61–2, 72, 92, 112, 114–17, 124–6; al-Munqidh min al-ḍalāl 72, 163 n.30; al-Mustasfā fi 'ilm al-uṣūl al-fiqh 72; Qānūn al-ta'wīl 21–2; al-Risālat al-laduniyya 72, 85–7, 163 n.30

Godlas, Alan 75

Goldziher, Ignaz 1–2, 110, 154 n.31

ḥadīth (pl. aḥādīth, sayings attributed to the Prophet) 3–12, 132; importance of, for interpretation 140–1, 143

ḥāl (pl. aḥwāl, "state") 24–5, 32–3, 38, 53–4, 88–9, 98, 102, 116, 122, 127, 131; criticism of Ṣūfī states 53–4, 137; as a source for knowledge 53–4

Ḥallāj, Ḥusayn ibn Manṣūr al- (d. 922) 75, 109, 123, 148 n.23, 168 n.57

ḥaqīqa ("reality") 13, 15–16, 21, 42, 52, 57, 109, 115–16, 130–1; contrasted with majāz 21, 112–13, 116

ḥarf (pl. aḥruf, "dialect, aspect of revelation") 8 ḥashawīyya (derogatory term for "literal exotericists") 61, 157 n.60

hawā ("passion, inclination") 26, 46, 81, 98; in interpretation 48–9 ḥiss (pl. ḥawāss, "sensory perception") 57, 94, 128; ḥawāss al-zāhira wa'l-bāṭina ("external and internal senses") 93

ḥuḍūr al-qalb ("presence of the heart") 23, 30–4

ḥujja ("conclusive proof") 19, 55, 60

Ibn 'Abbās, 'Abd Allāh (d. 686) 33, 47–8, 81–2, 110, 112, 152 n.25

Ibn 'Arabī, Muḥyī'l-Dīn (d. 1240) 2–3, 17, 39–41, 52, 76, 117, 139, 142, 144; Fuṣūṣ al-ḥikam 67, 76; Hyperliteralism 41

Ibn al-Jawzī, Abū'l-Farash (d. 1200) 137; Kitāb talbīs Iblīs 50–5, 70

Ibn Mas'ūd, 'Abd Allāh (d. 652) 8–12, 48, 61, 63, 136, 154 n.32, 154 n.36

Ibn Qudāma, Muwaffaq al-Dīn (d. 1146): Tahrīm al-naẓar 59–60

Ibn Sīnā, Abū 'Alī (Avicenna) (d. 1037) 142; Fī ithbāt al-nubuwwāt 117–18, 163 n.33; Al-Ishārāt wa'l-tanbīhāt 126

Ibn Taymiyya, Aḥmad (d. 1328) 21–2, 52–6, 71, 116, 137, 142–4; Muqaddima fī uṣūl al-tafsīr 55–6, 114, 144; al-Radd 'alā al-mantiqīyyīn 52–3; al-Ṣiṭfiyah wa'l-fuqarā 53–4; al-Tafsīr al-kabīr 113–14, 120–1

Ibn al-Zubayr, Muḥammad (d. 728–38) 15–16, 19

Ibrāhīm (Abraham) 119–20; and the celestial bodies 37–8, 58, 60, 126

ijtihād ("personal effort, independent exercise of judgement") 49, 55, 130

ilhām ("inspiration") 12, 51, 62, 83, 86

'ilm (pl. 'ulūm, "knowledge, science") 30, 96, 102, 123; 'ilm al-aḥwāl ("knowledge acquired from spiritual states") 78;

'ilm 'amm ("public knowledge") 9;

'ilm badīhī ("intuitive knowledge of self-evident truths") 84; 'ilm al-bāṭin ("knowledge of the inward") 43, 52;

'ilm darūrī ("necessary or self-evident knowledge") 84; 'ilm kasbī

(or muktasab, "knowledge acquired in this life") 27–8, 85; 'ilm ladunī

("knowledge given directly to man by God") 3, 26–8, 82–8, 91, 97,

102, 108, 137, 139; 'ilm al-zāhir

("knowledge of the exoteric") 43, 52

iltibās ("to become entangled or confused, ambiguous wrapping") 16, 108, 149 n.8

Ilyās (Elijah) 82, 162 n.12

imagination see khayāl

'indiyya ("witness") 102, 131

- interpretation: allegoresis, allegorical 1–2, 36, 41–2, 61, 67, 73, 77, 92–5, 105, 138, 158–9 n.17; of anthropomorphic verses 20, 22, 39, 59–60, 62, 113; based on transmitted tradition 10, 14, 33, 42, 48–56, 63, 140–1, 144; causes for errors in 35, 43, 49–51, 53, 55–6, 58, 63; homiletic 71, 74, 89, 141; literal 1, 3, 11, 15, 19, 21–2, 38–9, 42, 56, 58–63, 68, 135; literary 67, 71, 89, 158–9 n.17; metaphorical 2, 15, 23, 26, 39, 57–60, 68, 110–14, 118–20, 135; necessary qualifications for interpreters 18, 21–6, 47; proceeds from different states 29, 43, 53, 63; rules 19–22, 55–9; of specific words and phrases 36–41, 139; symbolic 2, 38–9, 41, 61, 67, 138, 158–9 n.17; of verses whose literal meaning seems absurd 20, 39, 56–62
- irādā* (pl. irādāt, “desire, volition”) 90, 93–6, 165 n.47; ambiguous nature of human volition 95–6
- ishāra* (pl. ishārāt, “allusion,” a method of interpretation) 3, 10, 12–13, 23, 27, 33, 35–7, 39–40, 43, 62, 67, 69, 73, 90–1, 94, 96, 115, 120, 127–8, 131, 153 n.23
- istī‘āra* (“figurative speech”) 57, 116
- istī‘ādā* (pl. istī‘ādāt, “preparedness”) 17, 86, 93, 105–6, 127, 129, 168 n.44
- istidlāl* (“deduction, reasoning”) 56, 78, 84–5, 88, 144
- istinbāt* (“deduction, extracting”) 83
- Izutsu, Toshihiko 2, 135
- jabarūt* (“world or realm of omnipotence”) 12, 43, 62–3
- Ja‘far al-Šādiq (d. 765) 2, 31, 69, 98, 102, 105, 121, 128, 131, 158–9 n.17; fainting when hearing Qur‘ān recited 32, 53, 152 n.14; sayings of, on the Qur‘ān and its interpretation 12–13, 136
- javānmard* (Persian “spiritual warrior, brave young man”) 90–1, 131
- karāmāt* (“charismatic acts”) 87–8, 101–3, 106
- Kāshānī, ‘Abd al-Razzāq al- (d. 1329) 76–7; Iṣṭilāḥāt al-šūfiyya 76; Ta‘wīlāt 8, 11, 16–17, 25–6, 32, 42–3, 76, 92–5, 102, 105–6, 124, 126–7, 138
- kashf* (pl. kushūf, “unveiling”) 10–11, 23, 40, 53–4, 76, 83, 88, 108, 130–1, 162 n.19
- kāshifīn* (“unveilers”) 26
- Khaḍīr al- 79–96, 137; allegorical interpretation of his actions 91; common features with other legends 80, 161 n.1; and use of pronouns 95–6, 139; and the water of life 80–2; see also ‘ilm, ‘ilm ladunī
- khāṣṣ* see ‘āmm
- khawāṣṣ* (“elite”) ahl al-khuṣūṣ (“elect”) 9, 13, 15–16, 84, 86, 116, 126, 136
- khayāl* (“imagination”) 39, 53, 57
- knowledge: linked to practice and religious disciplines 3, 29–34, 51–2, 61, 63, 81, 85, 88–95, 137–8; private and public 9, 23, 115, 137; received directly from God 3, 28, 82–8, 102, 137; by reason 20–2, 28, 39, 137; by states 29, 53, 137; by transmitted tradition 51–3, 137; types of 22, 24, 26–8, 83–8, 119; by unveiling 10–11, 23, 40, 44, 53–4, 83
- laṭīfa* (pl. laṭā‘īf, “subtleties, subtle faculties of man”) 12–13, 42, 44–6, 63, 73, 95, 133
- Lewisohn, Leonard 2–3
- The Light Verse 37, 72, 110–35; definitions of the word “light” 110–16; dynamic quality of light 128–31, 137; explanations of the metaphor of divine light 110–14, 118; al-Ghazālī’s “luminous human spirits” 125; literal understandings of divine light 114–16; literal understandings of the believer’s light 122–3; microcosmic and macrocosmic interpretations of the niche 124
- Lory, Pierre 77, 154 n.31
- macrocosm and microcosm 124, 127, 138; see also The Light Verse
- majāz* (“figurative expression, metaphor”) 39, 57; contrasted with ḥaqīqa see ḥaqīqa; definition of 39
- malakūt* (“world or realm of dominion”) 12, 37, 43, 62–3, 107, 119, 127, 129, 148 n.23

- Maryam: and “the bridegroom of reality” 109; freedom in servitude 97–100; miracles 101–5; mother Ḥannā’s vow 97–8; pointing to Jesus 40; as prescriptive model for the mystic 97, 138; prophethood of 99; quality of receptivity 106–7; see also Zakariyyā
- Massignon, Louis 1–2, 69
- Maybudī, Rashīd al-Dīn al- (fl. 1135): Kashf al-asrār 15–17, 73–4, 89–92, 99, 104–5, 131–5, 138
- Morris, James 76–7
- muhāqqiqūn* (“verifiers”) 4, 21, 25, 29, 52, 150 n.36
- muharrar* (“consecrated, emancipated”) 97–101, 139
- muhkamāt* (“clear verses in the Qur’ān”) 14–21, 25–6, 60
- mujāhada* (pl. mujāhadāt, “spiritual efforts”) 30, 85, 88, 91–4
- mukāshafa* see kashf
- munāsaba* (“interrelationship”) 37, 57
- Mūsā (Moses) 52, 74, 97, 105, 139; different journeys and states 88–95, 138; fainting upon God’s self-disclosure 54, 108; fatigue and toil in journey to find al-Khaḍir 88–92, 137–8; learning proper behavior 88–9; removing his shoes 38, 59–60, 62; searching for knowledge 80–1; see also Khaḍir al-musakhkhar (“subservient”) 100
- mushabbihā* (“anthropomorphists”) 20
- mushāhada* (“witnessing”) 12, 31, 33, 83, 88, 92, 130–1
- mutashābihāt* (“ambiguous verses in the Qur’ān”) 10, 14–28, 60
- muṭṭala’* (“look-out point, point of ascent”) 8–12, 62, 154 n.32
- muwāzana* (“parallelism”) 61
- nafs* (pl. anfūs, nufūs, “soul”) 29, 33, 44, 85, 90, 92, 95, 98, 103, 105, 107; al-nafs al-ammāra (“the commanding soul”) 93–4, 165 n.51, 166 n.61; al-nafs al-ḥayawānī (“the animal soul”) 166 n.60; al-nafs al-kullī (“the Universal Soul”) 86, 163 n.32; al-nafs al-lawwāma (“the soul that blames”) 165 n.51, 166 n.61; al-nafs al-muṭma’inna (“the soul at peace”) 91, 93–4, 100, 165 n.51; al-nafs al-nabātī (“the vegetative soul”) 166 n.61; al-nafs al-nāṭiqā (“the rational soul”) 94, 166 n.65, 173 n.75; al-nafs al-qudsiyya (“the sanctified soul”) 86, 127, 129; al-nafs al-ṭabī’ī (“the natural soul”) 166 n.60
- Najm al-Dīn al-Kubrā (d. 1220) 77, 142
- Najm al-Dīn al-Rāzī Dāyā (d. 1256) 77, 106
- naql* (“transmission”) 48–50, 56, 144
- Nisābūrī, Nizām al-Dīn al- (d. 1327): Gharāib al-Qur’ān 11, 26–8, 42, 77–8, 94–5, 102, 104, 124, 127–8, 141
- Nwyia, Paul 1–2, 70
- Philosophers 3, 37, 42, 58, 72–3, 142
- qalb* (pl. qulūb, “heart”) 9, 23, 30–4, 36, 91–4, 104–6, 127, 129
- qānitūn* (“devout, obedient”): quality of Maryam 100
- qiyās* (“analogy”) 53, 120–1
- Qur’ān: addresses people of different capacities 8, 43; anthropomorphic verses 20, 22, 39, 59–60, 62, 113, 141; as an endless ocean 7–8, 136; fainting while listening to 32, 53–4, 152 n.14, 155 n.23; interpretation of see interpretation; levels of meaning in 1, 7–13, 15, 23, 25, 44–6, 58, 61, 63; nature of the text reflects the cosmos 16; purpose of ambiguity in 15–17, 20–1; reading and reciting of 30–4
- Qurṭubī, Abū ‘Abd Allāh al- (d. 1272): al-Jāmi’ li-aḥkām 50, 82, 86–9, 99, 119–20, 138, 142–3, 155 n.12, 164–5 n.46
- Qushayrī, Abū’l-Qāsim al- (d. 1074): Latā’if al-ishārāt 15, 17, 23–4, 33, 71–3, 75–6, 82–4, 88–9, 91, 101, 103–4, 128–31, 137; al-Risāla fī ‘ilm al-taṣawwuf 54, 71, 83, 98–9
- quwwa* (pl. quwwāt or quwā, “power, faculty”) 63, 85, 94; al-quwwāt al-ḥayawāniyya (“animal faculties”) 93; al-quwwāt al-nabātiyya (“vegetative faculties”) 93; al-quwwāt al-nuṭqiyya (“rational faculties”) 93
- Rahman, Fazlur 2
- rājiḥ* (“preferable, more probable”) 20

- rāsikhūn fi l-'ilm*, al- ("those firmly rooted in knowledge") 14, 17–28, 61
- ra'y* see tafsīr: tafsīr bi l-ra'y
- Rāzī, Fakhr al-Dīn al- (d. 1210) 60;
Sharḥ asmā' Allāh 113–14, 169 n.20, 171 n.43; al-Tafsīr al-kabīr 19–21, 77, 84–8, 92, 111–13, 117–19, 141–3
- realms of existence: al-Ghazālī's five degrees of existence 57–8; al-Simnānī's four realms of existence 12, 148 n.23; see also worlds
- riyāda* (pl. riyādāt, "spiritual discipline") 30, 85, 88, 90–1, 93–4
- Rokni, M. Mahdi 74
- rūḥ* (pl. arwāḥ, "spirit") 10, 24, 83, 92–4, 105, 109, 124, 126–7, 129, 173 n.74; al-arwāḥ al-bashariyya al-nūrāniyya ("luminous human spirits") 125; rūḥ al-quḍus ("holy spirit") 125, 129, 165 n.58
- rumūz* ("symbols") 10, 27, 42, 73
- Rūzbihān al-Baqlī, Abū Muḥammad (d. 1209) 74–6; Arā'is al-bayān 10–11, 16–17, 24–5, 43–4, 74–6, 83, 91–2, 96, 100–11, 103, 105, 107–9
- Sahl al-Tustarī see Tustarī, Sahl ibn 'Abd Allāh al-
- salaf* ("the first generations of Muslims") 22, 31, 42, 55–6, 59, 113–14, 144
- Sarrāj, Abū Naṣr al- (d. 988): Kitāb al-luma 29–31, 35–7, 40, 43, 55, 73, 138
- Sells, Michael 3–4
- sharī'a* ("law") 15–16, 54; rejection of 51, 71
- shawāhid* ("witnessings") 16
- ṣifāt Allāh* ("God's attributes") 16, 108, 124, 130
- ṣifāt al-bashariyya* ("humanity's attributes") 27
- Simnānī, 'Alā' al-Dawla al- (d. 1336) 136; Tafsīr najm al-Qur'ān 11–12, 44–6, 62–3, 77, 95
- sirr* (pl. asrār, "innermost heart, secret") 10, 15, 31, 37, 61–2, 91–2, 95–6, 115, 120, 128–31
- soul see nafs
- states 24, 29, 33–4, 38, 43–4, 46, 63; subjectivity of 54; see also ḥāl
- Sulamī, Abū 'Abd al-Raḥmān al- (d. 1021) 30, 69–71, 83; Ḥaqā'iq al-tafsīr 55–6, 68–71, 75, 120; Ziyādāt ḥaqā'iq al-tafsīr 69–71, 75
- Ṭabarī, Abū Ja'far al- (d. 923): Jāmi' al-bayān 8–9, 14–15, 17–19, 47, 69, 80–3, 98–9, 101, 110–11, 118, 138, 140–4
- ta'bīr* ("dream or vision interpretation") 38
- ta'dīb* ("learning proper behavior") 88–9, 137
- tafsīr* ("commentary") 10–11, 13, 35, 40, 42–4, 50, 69–71, 89, 114; definition of the genre 67; tafsīr al-buṭūn al-sab'a ("commentary on the seven inner senses") 44–6; tafsīr bi l-ma'thūr ("interpretation by the transmitted tradition") 48, 140, 144; tafsīr bi l-ra'y ("interpretation by mere personal opinion") 33, 43, 47–50, 56, 61–3, 136
- tajallī* ("God's self-disclosure") 24, 26, 54, 128–30; and the appearance of the spirit before Maryam 107–9; and the imaginative faculty in man 39; in stages or all at once 126
- takfīr* ("charging someone with disbelief") 56–9, 136
- takhṣīs* ("personal application") 33, 95
- takhyl* ("imaginative representation") 39
- tamthīl* ("similitude, creating metaphors") 39, 120
- taqlīd* ("blind imitation, uncritical faith") 20, 24, 33
- tarjīḥ ba'dihā 'alā ba'd* ("preferring one Qur'ānic verse over another") 20
- taṣawwur* ("conceptualization") 85
- taṣdīq* ("assent") 85, 123
- tashqīq* ("breaking apart," a method of interpretation) 74
- taṭbīq* ("to make correspondences," a method of interpretation) 42, 77, 138, 154 n.31
- ta'wīl* ("interpretation, unfolding of events, bringing back") 8–9, 11, 14–15, 18, 20–2, 25, 42–4, 56–62, 67, 74, 77–8, 112, 114, 154 n.31; ta'wīl 'aqlī ("rational interpretation") 39–40
- Tha'labī, Abū Ishāq Aḥmad al- (d. 1036): Arā'is al-majālis fi qīṣaṣ al-anbiyā' 89, 141, 143, 164 n.45
- Tustarī, Sahl ibn 'Abd Allāh al- (d. 896) 68–9, 73, 108; Tafsīr 9, 25–6, 68, 83, 98, 122–3
- Ubayy b. Ka'b (d. 642) 80–1, 122
- 'ubūdiyya* ("servanthood") 25, 132; and Maryam 98–100

- ‘ulamā* (“religious scholars”) 10, 14, 26, 29, 43
‘ulūm see ‘ilm
- volition see irāda
- wahy* (“revelation”) 26, 83–4, 108, 123
wajd (“ecstasy”) 43, 130, 155 n.26; criticism of 53–4; and the Qur’ān 33
- walī* (pl. awliyā, “friend of God”) 87, 101, 125; knowledge of 10–11, 13, 22, 84, 86
- waqt* (pl. awqāt, “moment”) 32, 54; relationship to interpretation 43
- Wheeler, Brannon M. 80
- worlds 2, 107, 148 n.23; correspondences between 37–8, 42, 124–5, 127; of souls and horizons 44, 62; and striking similitudes 37–8, 125; see also realms of existence
- wujūd* (“existence”) 54; al-wujūd al-‘aqlī (“mental existence”) 57; al-wujūd al-dhatī (“essential existence”) 57; al-wujūd al-hissī (“sensible existence”) 57; al-wujūd al-khayālī (“imaginary existence”) 57; al-wujūd al-naḥsānī (“ego existence”) 27; al-wujūd al-rūḥānī (“spiritual existence”) 27; al-wujūd al-shabahī (“analogical existence”) 57; see also realms of existence
- zāhir* (pl. zawāhir, “exoteric, apparent or external sense”) 10–11, 15, 20, 43, 50, 60–2, 111, 120; contrasted with bāṭin see bāṭin
- Zakariyyā 101–5
- Zamakhsharī, Abū’l-Qāsim Maḥmūd al- (d.1144); Al-Kashshāf ‘an ḥaqā’iq al-tanzīl 19, 39, 77, 111–12, 114, 141–2
- ẓann* (pl. ẓunūn, “conjecture”) 20, 24, 59

eBooks

eBooks – at www.eBookstore.tandf.co.uk

A library at your fingertips!

eBooks are electronic versions of printed books. You can store them on your PC/laptop or browse them online.

They have advantages for anyone needing rapid access to a wide variety of published, copyright information.

eBooks can help your research by enabling you to bookmark chapters, annotate text and use instant searches to find specific words or phrases. Several eBook files would fit on even a small laptop or PDA.

NEW: Save money by eSubscribing: cheap, online access to any eBook for as long as you need it.

Annual subscription packages

We now offer special low-cost bulk subscriptions to packages of eBooks in certain subject areas. These are available to libraries or to individuals.

For more information please contact webmaster.ebooks@tandf.co.uk

We're continually developing the eBook concept, so keep up to date by visiting the website.

www.eBookstore.tandf.co.uk

THE SIGNS BEFORE THE DAY OF JUDGEMENT

IBN KATHĪR

THE SIGNS BEFORE THE DAY OF JUDGEMENT

Author: Al-Haafidh Ibn Katheer Hadeeth
Checking: Abu Talhah Daawood Burbank

Ayaat and Ahaadeeth about the Hour

"My Lord! Increase me in knowledge!" - Qur'an 20:114"

Allaah (subhaanahu wa ta'aala) said:

"They ask you (O Muhammad sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) about the Hour, - when will be its appointed time? You have no knowledge to say anything about it, To your Lord belongs (the knowledge of) the term thereof? You (O Muhammad sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) are only a warner for those who fear it, The Day they see it, (it will be) as if they had not tarried (in this world) except an afternoon or a morning." [An-Nazi'at (79):42-46]

"They ask you about the Hour (Day of Resurrection): 'When will be its appointed time?' Say: 'The knowledge thereof is with my Lord (Alone). None can reveal its time but He. Heavy is its burden through the heavens and the earth. It shall not come upon you except all of a sudden.' They ask you as if you have a good knowledge of it. Say: 'The knowledge thereof is with Allaah (Alone) but most of mankind know not.'" [Al-A'raaf (7):187]

There are many Ayaat and Ahaadeeth concerning this subject: Allaah said:

"The Hour has drawn near, and the moon has been cleft asunder." [Al-Qamar (54):1]

The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, whilst pointing with his index and middle fingers,

"The time of my advent and the Hour are like these two fingers." [1]

In another report he said,

"The Hour almost came before me."

This indicates how close we are, relatively speaking, to the Hour.

Allaah said:

"Draws near for mankind their reckoning, while they turn away in heedlessness." [Al-Anbiyaa' (21):1]

"The Event (the Hour or the punishment of disbelievers and polytheists or the Islaamic laws or commandments), ordained by Allaah will come to pass, so seek not to hasten it. Glorified and Exalted be He above all that they associate as partners with Him." [An-Nahl (16):1]

"Those who believe not therein seek to hasten it, while those who believe are fearful of it, and know that it is the very truth. Verily, those who dispute concerning the Hour are certainly in error far away." [Ash-Shooraa (42):18]

In Saheeh al-Bukhaaree, there is a Hadeeth which states that a Bedouin asked the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) about the Hour.

He (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said,

"It will surely come to pass. What have you prepared for it?" The man said, "O Messenger of Allaah, I have not prepared much in the way of prayer and good works, but I love Allaah and His Messenger." The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, "You will be with those you love." The Muslims had never rejoiced as much they did when they heard this Hadeeth. [2]

Some Ahaadeeth report that the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) was asked about the Hour. He looked towards a young boy and said, "If he lives, he will not grow very old before he sees your Last Hour coming to you." [3]

By this he meant their death and entering the Hereafter, because everyone who dies enters the Hereafter; some people say that when a person has died, his judgment has begun. This Hadeeth with this meaning is "correct" (Saheeh).

Some heretics comment on this Hadeeth and give it an incorrect meaning. The exact timing of the Great Hour (as-Saa'at al-'Uzmaa) is something which Allaah alone knows and which He has not revealed to anyone, as is clear from the Hadeeth in which the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said:

"There are five things which nobody knows except Allaah;" then he recited, "Verily, Allaah! With Him (Alone) is the knowledge of the Hour, He sends down the rain, and knows that which is in the wombs. No person knows what he will earn tomorrow, and no person knows in what land he will die. Verily, Allaah is All Knower, All Aware (of things)."

[Luqman (31):34] [4]

When Gabriel (Jibreel) (alayhi-salaam) came to the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) in the guise of a Bedouin, he asked him about Islaam, Eemaan (faith) and Ihsaan (excellence of faith); and the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) answered his questions. But when he asked him about the Hour, he said,

"The one questioned about it knows no better than the questioner." Jibreel said, "Tell me about its signs." Then the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) described them, as we shall see later when we quote this Hadeeth and others in full.

Hudhayfah said:

"The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) stood up one day to speak to us, and told us everything that was going to happen until the Hour, and left nothing unsaid. Some of the listeners learnt it by heart, and some forgot it; these friends of mine learnt it. I do not remember it completely, but sometimes it springs to mind, just as one might remember and recognise the face of a man whom one had forgotten, when one sees him." [Abu Daawood, Muslim] [5]

Imaam Ahmad reported via Abu Nudrah that Abu Sa'eed said:

"One day the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) led us in praying the afternoon prayer (Salaat al-'Asr). Then he stood and addressed us until sunset. He mentioned everything that was to happen until the Day of Resurrection, and left nothing unsaid. Some of us remembered it, and some of us forgot it. One of the things he said was:

'O people, this world is full of attractive temptations. Allaah has appointed you as vicegerents (Khaleefah) in this world, and He will see how you will act. So guard yourselves against the temptations of this world and of women.'

Towards the end of this speech, he said,

'The sun is about to set, and what remains of this world, compared to what has passed, is like what remains of this day compared to what has passed.' [6]"

'Alee ibn Zayd ibn Jad'an al-Timi narrated some Gharib and Munkar Ahaadeeth - which could bring into question the validity of this Hadeeth. But there are some reports which are similar to this Hadeeth, and which were transmitted with different isnaads. Part of this Hadeeth is in Saheeh Muslim, through Abu Nudrah on the authority of Abu Sa'eed. This Hadeeth refers to something which is beyond any doubt: what remains of this world, compared to what has passed, is very little. In spite of that, no-one can know exactly how much time is left except Allaah, and no-one can know exactly how much time has passed, except Allaah.

Footnotes

[1] Bukhaaree, Kitaab at-Tafsir, commentary on Surat an-Nazi'aat, 6/206.

[2] A similar Hadeeth was narrated by Bukhaaree in Kitaab al-Adab.

[3] See Bukhaaree, Kitaab al-Adab; Muslim, Kitaab al-Fitan wa Ashraat al-Sa'ah.

[4] Bukhaaree, Kitaab at-Tafsir, commentary on Luqman 31:34. A longer Hadeeth is narrated by Muslim in Kitaab al-Eemaan.

[5] Muslim, Kitaab al-Fitan wa Ashraaat al-Sa'ah; Abu Daawood, Kitaab al-Fitan wa'l-Malahim.

[6] The whole speech is narrated by Imaam Ahmad in his Musnad, 2/61. Checker's Note: Da'eef, al-Musnad (3/61) [or 2/61 as stated in the book??], at-Tirmidhee and al-Hakim (4/505). Da'eef due to `Alee ibn Zayd ibn Jad'an. al-Mishkat: 5145 of al-Albaanee. Parts of the complete speech are authentic, see Ibn Kathir's comments.

General Description of the Fitan (Tribulations)

Hudhayfah ibn al-Yaman said,

"People used to ask the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) about good things, but I used to ask him about bad things because I was afraid that they might overtake me. I said, 'O Messenger of Allaah, we were lost in ignorance (Jahiliyyah) and evil, then Allaah brought this good (i.e. Islaam). Will some evil come after this good thing?' He said, 'Yes' I asked, 'And will some good come after that evil?' He said, 'Yes, but it will be tainted with some evil' I asked, 'How will it be tainted?' He said, 'There will be some people who will lead others on a path different from mine. You will see good and bad in them.'" I asked, 'Will some evil come after that good?' He said, 'Some people will be standing and calling at the gates of Hell; whoever responds to their call, they will throw him into the Fire.' I said, 'O Messenger of Allaah, describe them for us.' He said, 'They will be from our own people, and will speak our language.' I asked, 'What do you advise me to do if I should live to see that?' He said, 'Stick to the main body (jamaa'ah) of the Muslims and their leader (Imaam). I asked, 'What if there is no main body and no leader?' He said 'Isolate yourself from all of these sects, even if you have to eat the roots of trees until death overcomes you while you are in that state.' [1]"

'Abd Allaah ibn Mas'ood said:

"The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, 'Islaam began as something strange, and it will revert to being strange as it was in the beginning, so good tidings for the strangers.' Someone asked, 'Who are the strangers?' He said, 'The ones who break away from their people (literally, 'tribes') for the sake of Islaam.'" This Hadeeth was narrated by Ibn Majah on the authority of Anas and Abu Hurairah. [2]

Footnotes

[1] Bukhaaree, Kitaab al-Fitan, 9/65.

[2] Muslim, Kitaab al-Eemaan, 1/90: Ibn Majah, Kitaab al-Fitan (Hadeeth 3988), 2/1320.

Divisions Within the Main Religious Groups

Abu Hurairah reported that the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said:

"The Jews have split into seventy-one sects, and my Ummah will divide into seventy-three." [1]

'Awf ibn Malik reported that the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said:

"The Jews split into seventy-one sects: one will enter Paradise and seventy will enter Hell. The Christians split into seventy-two sects: seventy-one will enter Hell and one will enter Paradise. By Him in Whose hand is my soul, my Ummah will split into seventy-three sects: one will enter Paradise and seventy-two will enter Hell." Someone asked, "O Messenger of Allaah, who will they be?" He replied, "The main body of the Muslims (al-Jamaa'ah)."

'Awf ibn Malik is the only one who reported this Hadeeth, and its isnaad is acceptable. [2]

Anas ibn Malik said,

"I shall tell you a Hadeeth which I heard from the Messenger of Allaah, and which no-one will tell you after me. I heard him say, 'Among the signs of the Hour will be the disappearance of knowledge and the appearance of ignorance. Adultery will be prevalent and the drinking of wine will be common. The number of men will decrease and the number of women will increase until there will be fifty women to be looked after by one man.'" This Hadeeth was reported in the two Saheehs from the Hadeeth of 'Abd Rabbihi. [3]

'Abd Allaah said,

"The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, 'Just before the Hour, there will be days in which knowledge will disappear and ignorance will appear, and there will be much killing.' " [Ibn Maajah; also narrated by Bukhaaree and Muslim, from the Hadeeth of al-A'mash] [4]

Hudhayfah ibn al-Yaman said,

"The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, 'Islaam will become worn out like clothes are, until there will be no-one who knows what fasting, prayer, charity and rituals are. The Qur'aan will disappear in one night, and no Ayah will be left on earth. Some groups of old people will be left who will say, 'We heard our fathers saying La ilaha illa Allaah, so we repeated it.' Silah asked Hudhayfah, "What will saying La ilaha illa Allaah do for them when they do not know what prayer, fasting, ritual and charity are?" Hudhayfah ignored him; then Silah repeated his question three times, and each time Hudayfah ignored him. Finally he answered, "O Silah, it will save them from Hell", and said it three times. [Ibn Maajah] [5] This indicates that in the last days, knowledge will be taken from the people, and even the Qur'aan will disappear from the Mushafs and from people's hearts. People will be left without knowledge. Only the old people will tell them that they used to hear people saying La ilaha illa Allaah; and they will repeat it to feel close to Allaah, so it will give them some blessing, even if they do not have any good deeds or beneficial knowledge. Knowledge will be taken away from men and ignorance will increase during the last days, and their ignorance and misguidance will increase until the end, as in the Hadeeth of the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam):

"The Hour will not come upon anyone who says, 'Allaah, Allaah'; it will only come upon the most evil of men." [6]

Footnotes

[1] Ibn Maajah, Kitaab al-Fitan (Hadeeth 3991), 2/1321.

Checker's Note: Saheeh, Saheeh Ibn Maajah: 3225

[2] Abu Daawood, Kitaab as-Sunnah, (Hadeeth 4572, 4573), 12/1340-2. "The main body of the Muslims (al-Jamaa'ah)" means the people of the Qur'aan, Hadeeth, Fiqh and other sciences, who have agreed to follow the Traditions of the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) in all circumstances without introducing any changes or imposing their own confused ideas.

Checker's Note: Saheeh, Saheeh al-Jami as-Sagheer: 1082, the narration of `Awf ibn Malik is also reported by Ibn Maajah (no. 4992), Ibn Abee `Asim in as-Sunnah (no. 63) and al-Lalikai in Sharh us-Sunnah (no. 1492).

[3] A similar Hadeeth was narated by al-Bukhaaree in Kitaab al-'Ilm, 1/30,31; and by Muslim.

Checker's Note: Saheeh, al-Bukhari and Muslim.

[4] Bukhaaree, Kitaab al-Fitan, 9/61; Msulim, Kitaab al-'Ilm, 8/58.

[5] Checker's Note: Saheeh, Silsilatul Ahadeeth as-Saheehah: 87.

[6]The first part of it was related by Muslim in Kitab al-Eemaan, 1/91, and the second part in Kitab al-Fitan wa Ashraat al-Sa'ah, 8/208.

The Evils Which Will Befall the Muslim Ummah During The Last Days

'Abd Allaah ibn 'Umar said,

"The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) came to us and said, 'O Muhaajiroon, (emigrants from Makkah to al-Madinah) you may be afflicted by five things; God forbid that you should live to see them. If fornication should become widespread, you should realise that this has never happened without new diseases befalling the people which their forebears never suffered. If people should begin to cheat in weighing out goods, you should realise that this has never happened without drought and famine befalling the people, and their rulers oppressing them. If people should withhold Zakaat, you should realise that this has never happened without the rain being stopped from falling; and were it not for the animals' sake, it would never rain again. If people should break their covenant with Allaah and His Messenger, you should realise that this has never happened without Allaah sending an enemy against them to take some of their possessions by force. If the leaders do not govern according to the Book of Allaah, you should realise that this has never happened without Allaah making them into groups and making them fight one another." [Ibn Maajah] [1]

'Alee ibn Abee Taalib said,

"The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said: 'If my Ummah bears fifteen traits, tribulation will befall it.' Someone asked, 'What are they, O Messenger of Allaah?' He said, 'When any gain is shared out only among the rich, with no benefit to the poor; when a trust becomes a means of making a profit; when paying Zakaat becomes a burden; when a man obeys his wife and disobeys his mother; and treats his friend kindly whilst shunning his father; when voices are raised in the mosques; when the leader of a people is the worst of them; when people treat a man with respect because they fear some evil he may do; when much wine is drunk; when men wear silk; when female singers and musical instruments become popular; when the last ones of this Ummah curse the first ones - then let them expect a red wind, or the earth to swallow them, or to be transformed into animals.'" [Tirmidhee] [2]

'Alee ibn Abee Taalib said,

"The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) led us in praying Salaat al-Fajr (the morning prayer). When he had finished, a man called to him: 'When will the Hour be? The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) reprimanded him and said 'Be quiet!' After a while he raised his eyes to the sky and said, 'Glorified be the One Who raised it and is taking care of it.' Then he lowered his gaze to the earth and said, 'Glory be to the One Who has outspread it and has created it.' Then the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, 'Where is the one who asked me about the Hour?' The man knelt down and said, 'I asked you.' The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, 'The Hour will come when leaders are oppressors, when people believe in the stars and reject al-Qadar (the Divine Decree of destiny) when a trust becomes a way of making a profit, when people give to charity (Sadaqah) reluctantly, when adultery becomes widespread - when this happens, then your people will perish." [3]

'Imran ibn Husayn said,

"The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, 'Some people of this Ummah will be swallowed up by the earth, some will be transformed into animals, and some will be bombarded with stones.' One of the Muslims asked, 'When will that be, O Messenger of Allaah?' He said, 'When singers and musical instruments will become popular, and much wine will be drunk.'" [4]

Footnotes

[1] Narrated by Ibn Maajah, Kitaab al-Fitan (Hadeeth 4019), 2/1332.

Checker's Note: Saheeh, Silsilatul Ahadeeth as-Saheehah: 106-107.

[2] Tirmidhee, Abwaab al-Fitan (Hadeeth 308), 6/4620-458.

Checker's Note: Da'eef, Da'eef al-Jami as-Sagheer: 608.

[3] al-Haythami, Kitaab al-Fitan.

Checker's Note: al-Haythami, says, "al-Bazzar reports it and it contains narrators I do not know." We do not know the status of the hadeeth as no muhaddith (as far as we know) has given a definite verdict.

[4] Narrated by at-Tirmidhee.

Checker's Note: Saheeh, Silsilatul Ahadeeth as-Saheehah: 1604.

The Greater Signs of the Hour

After the lesser signs of the Hour appear and increase, mankind will have reached a stage of great suffering. Then the awaited Mahdee will appear; he is the first of the greater, and clear, signs of the Hour. There will be no doubt about his existence, but this will only be clear to the knowledgeable people. The Mahdee will rule until the False Messiah (al-Maseeh ad-Dajjal) appears, who will spread oppression and corruption. The only ones who will know him well and avoid his evil will be those who have great knowledge and Eemaan (faith).

The false Messiah will remain for a while, destroying mankind completely, and the earth will witness the greatest Fitnah (tribulation) in its history.

Then the Messiah Jesus (alayhi salam) will descend, bringing justice from heaven. He will kill the Dajjal, and there will be years of safety and security.

Then the appearance of Ya'jooj and Ma'jooj (Gog and Magog) will take mankind by surprise, and corruption will overtake them again. In answer to Jesus' faithful prayer to Allaah (subhanahu wa ta'aala), they will die, and safety, security, justice and stability will return.

This state of affairs will continue for some years, until the death of Jesus. The Ulamaa differ concerning the order in which the other greater signs of the Hour will come about. They are:

- The destruction of the Ka'bah and the recovery of its treasure.
- The rising of the sun from the west.
- The emergence of the Beast from the earth.
- The smoke.
- A wind will take the souls of the believers.
- The Qur'aan will be taken up into heaven.
- A fire will drive the people to their last gathering place.
- The Trumpet will be sounded: at the first sound everyone will feel terror; at the second sound all will be struck down; at the last sound all will be resurrected.

The Mahdee

The Mahdee will come at the end of time; he is one of the Rightly-Guided Caliphs and Imaams. He is not the Mahdee who is expected by the Shee'ah, who they claim will appear from a tunnel in Saamarraa. This claim of theirs has no basis in reality nor in any reliable source. They allege that his name is Muhammad ibn al-Hasan ibn al-Askaree, and that he went into the tunnel when he was five years old.

The matter we intend to discuss has been proven by Ahaadeeth narrated from the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam): that the Mahdee will appear at the end of time. I believe that he will appear before Jesus the son of Mary comes down, as the Ahaadeeth indicate.

Hajjaaj said that he heard Alee say,

"The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, "Even if there were only one day left for the world, Allaah would send a man from among us to fill the world with justice, just as it had been filled with oppression and justice." [Ahmad] [1]

Alee said,

"The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, "The Mahdee is one of us, from among the people of my household. In one night Allaah will inspire him and prepare him to carry out his task successfully." [Ahmad and Ibn Maajah] [2]

Alee said, whilst looking at his son al-Hasan,

This son of mine is a Sayyid (master), as the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) named him. Among his descendants there will be man named after your Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam). He will resemble him in behaviour but not in looks. Then he told them the report which mentions that the earth will be filled with justice. [Abu Daawood] [3]

Abu Daawood devoted a chapter of his Sunan to the subject of the Mahdee. At the beginning of this chapter he quoted the Hadeeth of Jaabir ibn Samrah, in which the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, "This religion will remain steadfast until twelve caliphs have ruled over you." (According to another report he said, "This religion will remain strong until twelve caliphs have ruled over you.") Jaabir said, "The people cheered and shouted Allaahu Akbar! Then the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) whispered something. I asked my father 'What did he say?' My father said, 'He said, All of them will be from Quraysh.'" Another report says that when the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) returned to his house, Quraysh came to him and asked, "What will happen after that?" He said, "Then there will be tribulation and killing." [4]

Abu Daawood reported a Hadeeth from Abd Allaah ibn Masood: "The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, "If there were only one day left for the world, that day would be lengthened until a man from among my descendants or from among the people of my household, was sent; his name will be the same as my name, and his fathers name will be the same as my fathers name. He will fill the earth with justice and fairness, just as it will have been filled with injustice and oppression. The world will not end until a man of my household, whose name is the same as mine, holds sway." [5]

Abd Allaah said,

"The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, 'A man from my household, whose name is like mine, will take power.'" [Tirmidhee] [6]

In another report, from Abu Hurairah, the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said,

"If there were only one day left for this world, Allaah would lengthen it until he took power." [7]

Aboo Sa'eed said,

"The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, 'The Mahdee will be one of my descendants; he will have a high forehead and a hooked nose. He will fill the earth with justice and fairness just as it was filled with injustice and oppression, and he will rule for seven years.'" [Abu Daawood] [8]

Umm Salamah said,

"I heard the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) say, 'The Mahdee will be one of my descendants, from the children of Faatimah.'" [Abu Daawood] [9]

Umm Salamah reported that the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said,

"People will begin to differ after the death of a Khaleefah. A man from the people of Madinah will flee to Makkah. Some of the people of Makkah will come to him and drag him out against his will; they will swear allegiance to him between al-Rukn and al-Maqam. An army will be sent against him from Syria; it will be swallowed up in the desert between Makkah and Madinah. When the people see this, groups of people from Syria and Iraq will come and swear allegiance to him. Then a man from Quraysh whose mother is from Kalb will appear and send an army against them, and will defeat them; this will be known as the Battle of Kalb. Whoever does not witness the spoils of this battle will miss much! The Mahdee will distribute the wealth, and will rule the people according to the Sunnah of the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam). Then he will die, and the Muslims will pray for him." [Abu Daawood] [10]

Alee said,

"The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, 'A man named al-Haarith ibn Hirath will come from Transoxania. His army will be led by a man named Mansoor. He will pave the way for and establish the government of the family of Muhammad, just as Quraysh established the government of the Messenger of Allaah. Every believer will be obliged to support him.'" [Abu Daawood] [11]

Abd Allaah ibn al-Haarith ibn Juz' al-Zubaydee said,

"The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, 'A people will come out of the East who will pave the way for the Mahdee.'" [Ibn Maajah] [12]

Abd Allaah said,

"Whilst we were with the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam), some young men from Banu Hashim approached us. When the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) saw them, his eyes filled with tears and the colour of his face changed. I said, 'We can see something has changed in your face, and it upsets us.' The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, 'We are the people of a Household for whom Allaah has chosen the Hereafter rather than this world. The people of my Household (Ahl al-Bayt) will suffer a great deal after my death, and will be persecuted until a people carrying black banners will come out of the east. They will instruct the people to do good, but the people will refuse; they will fight until they are victorious, and the people do as they asked, but they will not accept it from them until they hand over power to a man from my household. Then the earth will be filled with fairness, just as it had been filled with injustice. If any of you live to see this, you should go to him even if you have to crawl across ice.'" [13]

This text refers to the rule of the Abbasids, as we have mentioned above in the text referring to the beginning of their rule in 132 AH. It also indicates that the Mahdee will appear after the Abbasids, and that he will be one of the Ahl al-Bayt, a descendant of Faatimah, the daughter of the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam), through Hasan, not Husayn, as mentioned in the Hadeeth from Alee ibn Abee Taalib; and Allaah knows best. [14]

Thwaban said,

"The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, 'Three men will be killed at the place where your treasure is. Each of them will be the son of a Khaleefah, and none of them will get hold of the treasure. Then the black banners will come out of the East, and they will slaughter you in a way which has never been seen before.' Then he said something which I do not remember; then, 'If you see him, go and give him your allegiance, even if you have to crawl over ice, because he is the Khaleefah of Allaah, the Mahdee.'" [Ibn Maajah] [15]

The treasure referred to in this text is the treasure of the Ka'bah. Towards the end of time, three of the sons of the Khaleefahs will fight to get hold of it, until the Mahdee appears. He will appear from the East, not from the tunnel of Saamarraa, as the Shee'ah claim; they believe that he is in this tunnel now, and they are waiting for him to emerge at the end of time.

There is no evidence for it in any book or Saheeh tradition, and there is no benefit in believing this.

The truth of the matter is that the Mahdee whose coming is promised at the end of time will appear from the East, and people will swear allegiance to him at the Ka'bah, as some Ahaadeeth indicate.

At the time of the Mahdee, there will be peace and prosperity, with abundant crops and wealth, strong rulers, and Islaam will be well-established.

Aboo Sa'eed said,

"By Allaah every ruler we have had has been worse than the previous one, and every year has been worse than the year before, but I heard the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) say, 'Among your rulers will be one who will give out wealth freely, without counting it. A man will come and ask him for money, and he will say, "Take"; the man will spread his cloak out and the ruler will pour money into it.' The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) spread out a thick cloak he had been wearing, to demonstrate the man's actions; then he gathered it up by its corners and said, 'Then the man will take it and leave.'" [Ahmad] [16]

Footnotes

[1] Ahmad, al-Musnad; similar Hadeeth in Abu Daawood, Kitaab Awwal al-Mahdee.

Checker's Note: Saheeh, Ahmad and Abu Daud, Saheeh al-Jami as-Sagheer: 5305.

[2] Ahmad, al-Musnad and Ibn Maajah, Kitaab al-Fitan.

Checker's Note: Saheeh Saheeh al-Jami as-Sagheer: 6735. It has been mistranslated slightly, it should be "In one night, Allaah will prepare him," the mention of inspiration and the carrying out of the task is explanatory.

[3] See Abu Daawood, Kitaab al-Mahdee.

Checker's Note: Da'eef Munqati' (chain of narration is broken), al-Mishkat, 1st checking: 5462.

[4] Checker's Note: "... returned to his house" is a da'eef addition. The rest of the hadeeth is saheeh.

[5] See Abu Daawood, Kitaab al-Mahdee.

Checker's Note: Saheeh, Saheeh Abee Daawood: 3601.

[6] Checker's Note: "A man from my household ..." Hasan, Saheeh al-Jami as-Sagheer: 8160.

[7] at-Tirmidhee, in his chapters dealing with al-Fitan.

Checker's Note: Saheeh, Saheeh at-Tirmidhee: 1819.

[8] Abu Daawood, Kitaab al-Mahdee.

Checker's Note: Hasan, Saheeh Abee Daawood: 3604. Translation states, "... a hooked nose." Correct translation is "... an aquiline nose."

[9] Abu Daawood, Kitaab al-Mahdee.

Checker's Note: Saheeh, Saheeh Abee Daawood: 3603.

[10] Abu Daawood, Kitaab al-Mahdee.

Checker's Note: Da'eef, al-Mishkat, 1st checking: 5456.

[11] Checker's Note: Da'eef, Da'eef al-Jami as-Sagheer: 6418.

[12] Ibn Maajah, Kitaab al-Fitan (Hadeeth 3088).

Checker's Note: Da'eef, Silsilatul Ahaadeeth ad-Da'eefah: 4826.

[13] Ibn Maajah, ibid., (Hadeeth 4082).

Checker's Note: Da'eef, Da'eef Ibn Maajah: 886.

[14] See Ahaadeeth above. (Ref. 1, 2 & 3)

Checker's Note: Footnote refers to hadeeth no. 3.

[15] Narrated by Ibn Maajah, op. cit., Hadeeth 4084.

Checker's Note: Da'eef Munkar (the isnaad is weak and moreover the meaning is wrong). In this case, the mention of "Khaleefah of Allaah" is munkar because Allaah cannot have a successor or vicegerent in His absence, Silsilatul Ahaadeeth ad-Da'eefah: 85.

[16] Ahmad, Musnad, 3/98.

Checker's Note: Da'eef. Its isnaad contains Mujahid ibn Sa'eed

Different Kinds of Fitan (Tribulations)

Zaynab bint Jahsh said,

"The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) got up from his sleep; his face was flushed and he said, 'There is no god but Allaah. Woe to the Arabs, for a great evil which is nearly approaching them. Today a gap has been made in the wall of Gog and Magog like this (Sufyan illustrated this by forming the number of 90 or 100 with his fingers).' Someone asked, 'Shall we be destroyed even though there are righteous people among us?' The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, 'Yes, if evil increases.'" [Bukhaaree] [1]

Umm Salamah, the wife of the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said,

"One night the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) got up and said, 'SubhanAllaah! How many tribulations have come down tonight, and how many treasures have been disclosed! Go and wake the dwellers of these apartments (i.e. his wives) for prayer. A well-dressed soul in this world may be naked in the Hereafter.'" [Bukhaaree] [2]

Usamah ibn Zayd said,

"Once the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) stood over one of the battlements of al-Madinah and asked the people, 'Do you see what I see?' They said, 'No.' He said, 'I see afflictions falling upon your houses as rain drops fall.'" [Bukhaaree and Muslim] [3]

Abu Hurairah (radiallahu anhu) said,

"The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, 'Time will pass rapidly, knowledge will decrease, miserliness will become widespread in peoples hearts, afflictions will appear, and there will be much Harj.' The people asked, 'O Messenger of Allaah, what is Harj?' He said, 'Killing, killing!'" [Bukhaaree] [4]

Al-Zubayr ibn Adee narrated,

"We went to Anas ibn Malik and complained about the wrong we were suffering at the hands of al-Hajjaaj. Anas ibn Malik said, 'Be patient, "For no time will come but that the time following it will be worse, until you meet your Lord." I heard the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) say that.'" [Bukhaaree]

Abu Hurairah said,

"The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, 'There will come a time of afflictions when one who sits will be better than one who stands; one who stands will be better than one who walks; and one who walks will be better than one who runs. Whoever exposes himself to these afflictions, they will destroy him. So whoever can find a place of protection or refuge from them, should take shelter in it." [Bukhaaree and Muslim] [5]

Hudhayfah said,

"The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) told us two Hadeeth, one of which I have seen fulfilled, and I am waiting for the fulfilment of the other. The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) told us that honesty came down into mens hearts (from Allaah); then they learnt it from the Qur'aan, and then from the Sunnah. The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) told us that honesty would be taken away. He said, 'Man will be overtaken by sleep, during which honesty will be taken away from his heart, and only its trace will remain, like traces of a dark spot. Then man will be overtaken by slumber again, during which honesty will decrease still further, until its trace will resemble a blister such as is caused when an ember is dropped onto ones foot: it swells, but there is nothing inside. People will be carrying on with their trade, but there will hardly be any trustworthy persons. People will say, There is an honest man in such-and-such a tribe. Later they will say about some man, What a wise, polite and strong man he is! - although he will not have faith even the size of a mustard-seed in his heart.' Indeed, there came a time when I did not mind dealing with any one of you, for if he were a Muslim his Islaam would compel him to pay whatever he owed me, and if he were a Christian, the Muslim official would compel him to pay it. But now I do not deal with anyone except so-and-so and so-and-so." [Bukhaaree] [6]

Ibn Umar said,

"The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) stood beside the pulpit, facing the east, and said, 'Afflictions will verily emerge from here, where the top of Satans head will appear.'" [Bukhaaree] [7]

Abu Hurairah said that he had heard the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) say,

"The Hour will not come until a man passes by someone's grave and says, 'Would that I were in his place!'" [Bukhaaree] [8]

Abu Hurairah said,

"I heard the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) say, 'The Hour will not come until the buttocks of the women of Daws move whist going around Dhoo l-Khalasah.'" Dhoo l-Khalasah was an idol worshipped by the tribe of Daws during the Jaahiliyyah. [Hadeeth from Bukhaaree] [9]

Abu Hurairah also said,

"The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, 'The Euphrates will disclose a golden treasure. Whoever is present at that time should not take anything of it." [10]

Abu Hurairah said,

"The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, 'The Hour will not come before the Euphrates uncovers a mountain of gold, for which people will fight. Ninety-nine out of every hundred will die, but every one among them will say that perhaps he will be the one who will survive (and thus possess the gold).'" [Muslim] [11]

Abu Hurairah said,

"The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, 'The Hour will not come until the following events have come to pass: two large groups will fight the another, and there will be many casualties; they will both be following the same religious teaching. Nearly thirty Dajjaals will appear, each of them falsely claiming to be a Messenger from Allaah. Knowledge will disappear, earthquakes will increase, time will pass quickly, afflictions will appear, and Harj (ie killing) will increase. Wealth will increase, so that a wealthy man will worry lest no-one accept his Zakaat, and when he offers it to anyone, that person will say, "I am not in need of it." People will compete in constructing high buildings. When a man passes by someones grave, he will say, "Would that I were in his place!" The sun will rise from the west; when it rises and the people see it, they will believe, but,

"No good will it do to a soul to believe in them then, if it believed not before nor earned righteousness through its faith..." [Al-An'aam (6):158]

"The Hour will come suddenly: when a man has milked his she-camel and taken away the milk, but he will not have time to drink it; before a man repairing a tank for his livestock will be able to put water in it for his animals; and before a man who has raised a morsel of food to his mouth will be able to eat it." [Bukhaaree] [12]

Hudhayfah ibn al-Yaman said,

"Of all the people, I know most about every tribulation which is going to happen between now and the Hour. This is not because the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) told me something in confidence which he did not tell anyone else; it is because I was present among a group of people to whom he spoke about the tribulations (al-Fitan). The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) mentioned three tribulations which would hardly spare anybody, and some which would be like storms in summer; some would be great and some would be small. Everyone who was present at that gathering has passed away, except me." [Muslim] [13]

Abu Hurairah said,

"I heard the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) say, "If you live for a while, you will see people go out under the wrath of Allaah and come back under His curse, and they will have in their hands whips like the tail of an ox." [Ahmad, Muslim] [14]

Abu Hurairah said,

"The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, 'There are two types among the people of Hell whom I have not yet seen. The first are people who have whips like the tails of oxen, with which they beat people, and the second are women who are naked in spite of being dressed; they will be led astray and will lead others astray, and their heads will look like camels humps. These women will not enter Paradise; they will not even experience the faintest scent of it, even though the fragrance of Paradise can be perceived from such a great distance.'" [15]

Anas ibn Malik said,

"The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) was asked, 'O Messenger of Allaah, (what will happen) when we stop enjoining good and forbidding evil?' He said, 'When what happened to the Israelites happens among you: when fornication becomes widespread among your leaders, knowledge is in the hands of the lowest of you, and power passes into the hands of the least of you.'" [Ibn Maajah] [16]

Abu Hurairah said,

"The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, 'Woe to the Arabs from the great evil which is nearly approaching them: it will be like patches of dark night. A man will wake up as a believer, and be a kafir (unbeliever) by nightfall. People will sell their religion for a small amount of worldly goods. The one who clings to his religion on that day will be as one who is grasping an ember - or thorns.'" [Ahmad] [17]

Abu Hurairah said,

"I heard the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) saying to Thawbaan, 'O Thawban, what will you do when the nations call one another to invade you as people call one another to come and eat from one bowl?'

Thawbaan said, 'May my father and my mother be sacrificed for you, O Messenger of Allaah! Is it because we are so few?' The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, 'No, on that day you (Muslims) will be many, but Allaah will put weakness (wahn) in your hearts.' The people asked, 'What is that weakness, O Messenger of Allaah?' He said, 'It is love for this world and dislike of fighting.'" [Ahmad] [18]

The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said,

"There will be a tribulation in which one who is sleeping will be better than one who is lying down, one who is lying will be better than one who is sitting, one who is sitting will be better than one who is standing, one who is standing will be better than one who is walking, one who is walking will be better than one who is riding, and one who is riding will be better than one who is running; all of their dead will be in Hell." The Companion of the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) who narrated this Hadeeth said, "O Messenger of Allaah, when will that be?" He said, "That will be the days of Harj." He asked, "When will the days of Harj be?" The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, "When a man will not trust the person to whom he is speaking." The Companion asked, "What do you advise me to do if I live to see that?" He said, "Restrain yourself, and go back to your place of residence." The Companion then asked, "O Messenger of Allaah, what should I do if someone enters my neighbourhood to attack me?" He said, "Go into your house." The Companion asked, "What if he enters my house?" He said, "Go into the place where you pray and do this - and he folded his arms, - and say 'My Lord is Allaah', until you die." [19]

Abu Bakrah said,

"The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, 'There will be a tribulation during which one who is lying down will be better than one who is sitting, one who is sitting will be better than one who is standing, one who is standing will be better than one who is walking, and one who is walking will be better than one who is running.' Someone asked, 'O Messenger of Allaah, what do you advise me to do?' He said, 'Whoever has camels, let him stay with them, and whoever has land, let him stay in his land.' Someone asked, 'What about someone who does not have anything like that?' He said, 'Then let him take his sword and strike its edge against a stone, then go as far away as possible.'" [Abu Daawood; similar Hadeeth in Muslim] [20]

At the time of the Fitnah of Uthmaan ibn Affaan's Khilaafah (Caliphate), Sa'd ibn Abee Waqqaas said,

"I bear witness that the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, 'There will come a tribulation during which one who sits will be better than one who stands, one who stands will be better than one who walks, and one who walks will be better than one who runs.' Someone asked, 'What do you advise if someone enters my house to kill me?' He said, 'Be like the son of Adam (i.e. resign yourself).'" [Muslim, Tirmidhee] [21]

Abu Moosaa al-Asharee said,

"The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, 'Before the Hour comes, there will be a tribulation like patches of dark night. A man will get up a believer and go to sleep a kaafir, or will go to sleep a believer and get up a kaafir. The one who sits will be better than one who stands, and one who walks will be better than one who runs. Break your bows, cut their strings, and strike your swords against stones. If someone comes to kill any of you, then be like the better of the two sons of Adam." [Abu Daawood] [22]

Abu Dharr said,

"The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) was riding a donkey and sat me behind him. He said, 'O Abu Dharr, if the people were suffering from such severe hunger that you could not even get up from your bed to go to the mosque, what would you do?' I said, 'Allaah and His Messenger know best.' He said, 'Be decent and restrain yourself.' Then he said, 'O Abu Dharr, if the people were suffering from severe death (i.e. if a man were worth no more than a grave), what would you do? If the people were killing one another, until Hajar al-Zayt (an area of Madinah) were submerged in blood, what would you do?' I said, 'Allaah and His Messenger know best.' He said, 'Stay in your house and lock the door.' I asked, 'What if I am not left alone?' He said, 'Then be one of them.' I said, 'Should I take up my sword?' He said, 'If you did that, you would be joining them in their activities. No - if you fear that the brightness of the shining sword will disturb you, then cover your face with part of your clothing, and let him carry his own sin and your sin.'" [Ahmad] [23]

Abd Allaah ibn Amr said,

"We were on a journey with the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam)...When the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam)'s caller called for prayer, I went there. The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) was addressing the people, saying: "O people, it has been the duty of every Prophet before me to guide his people to whatever he knew was good for them, and to warn them against whatever he knew was bad for them, but this Ummah has its time of peace and security at the beginning; at the end of its existence it will suffer trials and tribulations, one after the other. Tribulation will come, and the believer will say, "This will finish me", but it will pass. Another tribulation will come, and he will say, "This is it", but it will pass, and a third will come and go likewise. Whoever wishes to be rescued from Hell, and enter Paradise, let him die believing in Allaah and the Last Day, and treat the people as he himself wishes to be treated. If anyone gives allegiance to an Imaam, then let him obey him if he can (or on one occasion he said: as much as you can)."

Abd al-Rahman (one of the narrators of this Hadeeth) said,

"When I heard that, I put my head between my knees and said, 'But your cousin Mu'aawiyah is ordering us to squander our wealth among ourselves in vanity, and to kill each other, although Allaah has said, "O you who believe! Squander not your wealth among yourselves in vanity..." ' [an-Nisaa (4):29]

Abd Allaah (another narrator) put his head in his hands and paused a while, then he raised his head and said,

"Obey him in that which is obedience to Allaah and disobey that which is disobedience to Allaah." I asked him, "Did you hear that from the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam)?" He said, "Yes, I heard it with my ears and understood it in my heart." [Ahmad, Abu Daawood, an-Nasaa'ee, Ibn Maajah] [24]

Abd Allaah ibn Amr said,

"I heard the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) say, 'If you see my Ummah fearing a tyrant so much that they dare not tell him that he is a tyrant, then there will be no hope for them.'"

The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said,

"Among my Ummah, some will be swallowed up by the earth, some bombarded with stones, and some transformed into animals." [Ahmad] [25]

Footnotes

[1] Bukhaaree, Kitaab al-Fitan.

[2] Bukhaaree, Kitaab al-'Ilm.

[3] Bukhaaree, Kitaab al-Fitan, 9/60; Muslim, Baab Nuzuul al-Fitan ka-Mawaaqi' al-Qatar, 8/168.

[4] Bukhaaree, ibid.

[5] op. cit., 9/64; Muslim, Baab Nuzuul al-Fitan ka-Mawaaqi' al-Qatar.

[6] Bukhaaree, op. cit., 9/66.

[7] Bukhaaree, Kitaab Bid' al-Khalq, 4/150.

[8] Bukhaaree, Kitaab al-Fitan, 9/73.

[9] Bukhaaree, Kitaab al-Fitan, 8/132

Daws: a tribe in Yemen; Dhoo l-Khalasah: a house full of idols - it is so called because they believed that whoever worshipped it or went around it would be purified (khallasa). This Hadeeth means that the tribe of Daws will become apostates from Islaam and will go back to idol worshipping; even their women will exert themselves in worshipping the idol and running around it, so that their flesh will quiver.

[10] Bukhaaree, Kitaab al-Fitan, 9/73.

[11] Muslim, Kitaab al-Fitan wa Ashraat al-Saa'ah, 8/174.

[12] Bukhaaree, Kitaab al-Fitan, 9/74.

[13] Muslim, Kitaab al-Fitan wa Ashraat al-Saa'ah, 8/172.

[14] Muslim, Kitaab al-Jannah wa Sifat Na'imihaa wa Ahlihaa, 8/155, 156.

[15] Muslim, ibid.

[16] Ibn Maajah narrated a similar Hadeeth in Kitaab al-Fitan (Hadeeth 4015), 2/1331. Ahmad, Musnad, 3/187.

Checker's Note: Da'eef due to the `an`anah (usage of the word `an (from)) of Makhool, Da'eef Ibn Maajah: 870.

[17] Ahmad, Musnad, 2/390.

Checker's Note: Saheeh. Weak isnaad but supported by other narrations similar in meaning. Musnad Imaam Ahmad, checking by Ahmad Shakir: 2/390.

[18] Ahmad, Musnad, 2/359.

Checker's Note: Saheeh, Silsilatul Ahadeeth as-Saheehah: 958. Wording should be "dislike of death".

[19] Ahmad, Musnad, 1/448.

Checker's Note: Saheeh. Musnad Imaam Ahmad, checking by Ahmad Shakir: [??] Ahmad's narration contains an unnamed narrator who is named in the narration of Abdur Razzaaq, no. 20727 and al-Hakim, 4/320, and he is reliable.

[20] Abu Daawood, ibid. (Hadeeth 4236). Muslim, Kitaab al-Fitan, 8/169.

Checker's Note: Saheeh, Saheeh Abee Daawood: 3580.

[21] Tirmidhee, Abwaab al-Fitan, (Hadeeth 2290), 6/436, 438. Ahmad, Musnad, 1/185.

Checker's Note: Saheeh, al-Irwa, no. 2451 of Shaykh al-Albaanee. It is saheeh but has not been reported by Muslim, as main text states.

[22] Abu Daawood, Abwaab al-Fitan wa'l-Malaahim, (Hadeeth 4139), 11/337.

Checker's Note: Saheeh, Abu Daawood and Ibn Maajah, Silsilatul Ahadeeth as-Saheehah: 1535.

[23] Ahmad, Musnad, 5/149; similar Hadeeth in Abu Daawood, Abwaab al-Fitan wa'l-Malaahim, (Hadeeth 4241), 11-340, 343.

Checker's Note: Saheeh, al-Irwa, no: 2451.

[24] Ahmad, Musnad, 5/149. Muslim, Kitaab al-Imaarah, 6-18. Ibn Maajah, Kitaab al-Fitan (Hadeeth 3956), 2/1306, 1037. an-Nasaa'ee, Kitaab al-Bay'ah (shorter version), 7-152, 153. Abu Daawood, Kitab al-Fitan (shorted version), Hadeeth 4429, 11-319.

Checker's Note: Saheeh, Silsilatul Ahadeeth as-Saheehah: 241.

[25] Ahmad, Musnad. 2/163.

Checker's Note: Da'eef, Silsilatul Ahaadeeth ad-Da'eefah: 1264. Its isnaad contains the `an`anah of Abu Zubair, but its last part ("Among my Ummah ...") is supported. See Silsilatul Ahadeeth as-Saheehah: 1787

The Signs and Portents of the Hour

'Abd Allaah ibn 'Amr said,

"I went to the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) one day whilst he was performing Wudoo' (ablution) slowly and carefully. He raised his head, looked at me and said, 'Six things will happen to this Ummah: the death of your Prophet - 'and when I heard that I was aghast,' - this is the first. The second is that your wealth will increase so much that if a man were given ten thousand, he would still not be content with it. The third is that tribulation will enter the house of every one of you. The fourth is that sudden death will be widespread. The fifth is a peace-treaty between you and the Romans: they will gather troops against you for nine months - like a woman's period of childbearing - then they will be the first to break the treaty. The sixth is the conquest of a city.' I asked, 'O Messenger of Allaah, which city?' He said, 'Constantinople.' " [Ahmad] [1]

Abu Hurayrah said,

"The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, 'Hasten to do good deeds before six things happen: the rising of the sun from the West, the smoke, the Dajjaal, the beast, the (death) of one of you, or general tribulation.' " [Ahmad, Muslim] [2]

Hudhayfah ibn 'Ubayd said,

"The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) came upon us whilst, we were busy in discussion. He asked us, 'What are you talking about?' We said, 'We are discussing the Hour.' He said, 'It will not come until you see ten signs: the smoke, the Dajjaal, the beast, the sun rising from the West, the descent of Jesus son of Mary, Gog and Magog, and three land-slides - one in the East, one in the West, and one in Arabia, at the end of which fire will burst forth from the direction of Aden (Yemen) and drive people to the place of their final assembly.' " [Ahmad] [3]

Footnotes

[1] Ahmad, Musnad, 2/174.

Checker's Note: Da'eef, Musnad Imaam Ahmad, checking by Ahmad Shakir: 6623. Weak hadeeth due to Abri lamah al-Kalbi.

[2] Muslim, Kitaab al-Fitan, 8/207, Ahmad, Musnad, 2/337, 372.

[3] Muslim, Kitaab al-Fitan, 8/179.

Checker's Note: Wrong spelling, Ibn `Ubayd should be Ibn Usayd. Reported by Muslim, not by Ahmad as main text states.

The Battle with the Romans

After the battle with the Romans, which ended with the conquest of Constantinople, the Dajjaal will appear, and Jesus son of Mary will descend from Heaven to the earth, to the white minaret in the east of Damascus, at the time of Salaat al-Fajr (the morning prayer), as we shall see in the Saheeh Traditions.

Dhoo Mukhammar said,

"The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, 'You will make a peace-treaty with the Romans, and together you will invade an enemy beyond Rome. You will be victorious and take much booty. Then you will camp in a hilly pasture; one of the Roman men will come and raise a cross and say "Victory to the Cross", so one of the Muslims will come and kill him. Then the Romans will break the treaty, and there will be a battle. They will gather an army against you and come against you with eighty banners, each banner followed by 10,000 men.' " [Ahmad, Abu Daawood, Ibn Maajah] [1]

Yusayr ibn Jaabir said,

"Once there was a red storm in Kufah. A man came who had nothing to say except, 'O 'Abd Allaah ibn Mas'ood, has the Hour come?' 'Abd Allaah was sitting reclining against something, and said, 'The Hour will not come until people will not divide inheritance, nor rejoice over booty.' Pointing towards Syria, he said, 'An enemy will gather forces against the Muslims and the Muslims will gather forces against them.' I asked, 'Do you mean the Romans?' He said, 'Yes. At that time there will be very heavy fighting. The Muslims will prepare a detachment to fight to the death; they will not return unless they are victorious. They will fight until night intervenes. Both sides will return without being victorious; then many will be killed on both sides. On the fourth day, the Muslims who are left will return to the fight, and Allaah will cause the enemy to be routed. There will be a battle the like of which has never been seen, so that even if a bird were to pass their ranks, it would fall down dead before it reached the end of them. Out of a family of one hundred, only one man will survive, so how could he enjoy the booty or divide any inheritance? While they are in this state, they will hear of an even worse calamity. A cry will reach them: "The Dajjaal has taken your place among your offspring." So they will throw away whatever is in their hands and go forward, sending 10 horsemen as a scouting party. The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, 'I know their names, and the names of their fathers, and the colours of their horses. They will be the best horsemen on the face of the earth on that day.' " [Ahmad, Muslim] [2]

Abu Hurayrah said,

"The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, 'The Hour will not come until the Romans camp at al-A'mash or Dabeeq. An army, composed of the best people on earth at that time, will come out from Madinah to meet them. When they have arranged themselves in ranks, the Romans will say, 'Do not stand between us and those who took prisoners from amongst us. Let us fight with them.' The Muslims will say, 'No, by Allaah, we will never stand aside from you and our brothers.' Then they will fight. One-third will runaway, and Allaah will never forgive them. One-third will be killed, and they will be the best of martyrs in Allaah's sight. One-third, who will never be subjected to trials or tribulations, will win, and will conquer Constantinople. Whilst they are sharing out the booty, after hanging their swords on the olive-trees, Satan will shout to them that the Dajjaal has taken their place among their families. When they come to Syria, the Dajjaal will appear, while they are preparing for battle and drawing up the ranks. When the time for prayer comes, Jesus the son of Mary will descend and lead them in prayer. When the enemy of Allaah (i.e. the Dajjaal) sees him, he will start to dissolve like salt in water, but Allaah will kill him.' " [Muslim] [3]

The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, "The Hour will not come until the furthest border of the Muslims will be in Bulaa." Then he said, "O 'Alee!" 'Alee said, "May my father and mother be sacrificed for you!" The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, "You will fight the Romans, and those who come after you will fight them, until the best people among the Muslims, the people of al-Hijaaz, will go out to fight them, fearing nothing but Allaah. They will conquer Constantinople with Tasbeeh and Takbeer (saying "Subhaan Allaah" and "Allaahu Akbar"), and they will obtain booty the like of which has never been seen - they will share it out by scooping it up with their shields. Someone will come and say, 'The Dajjaal has appeared in your land', but he will be lying. Anyone who takes notice of him will regret it, and anyone who ignores him will regret it." [Ibn Maajah] [4]

Naafi' ibn 'Utbah said, "The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, 'You will attack Arabia, and Allaah will enable you to conquer it. Then you will attack Persia, and Allaah will enable you to conquer it. Then you will attack Rome, and Allaah will enable you to conquer it. Then you will attack the Dajjaal, and Allaah will enable you to conquer him.' " [Muslim] [5]

When Mustawrid al-Qurashee was sitting with 'Amr ibn al-'Aas, he said, "I heard the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) say, 'The Hour will come when the Romans will be in the majority.' 'Amr asked him, "What are you saying?" He said, "I am repeating that which I heard from the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam)." 'Amr said, "If you say this, it is true, because they have four good characteristics: they are the most able to cope with tribulation, the quickest to recover after disaster and to return to the fight after disaster, and are the best as far as treating the poor, weak and orphans is concerned. They have a fifth characteristic which is very good; they do not allow themselves to be oppressed by their kings." [6]

The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said,

"You will fight the Romans, and Believers from the Hijaaz will fight them after you, until Allaah enables them to conquer Constantinople and Rome with Tasbeeh and Takbeer ("Subhaan Allaah" and "Allaahu Akbar"). Its fortifications will collapse, and they will obtain booty the like of which has never been seen, so that they will share it out by scooping it up with their shields. Then someone will cry, 'O Muslims! The Dajjaal is in your country, with your families', and the people will leave the wealth. Anyone who takes notice will regret it and anyone who ignores it will regret it. They will ask, 'Who shouted?' but they will not know who he is. They will say, 'Send a vanguard to Ilyaa.' If the Dajjaal has appeared, you will hear about his deeds.' So they will go and see, and if they see that everything is normal, they will say, 'No-one would give a shout like that for no reason, so let us go together to Ilyaa.' If we find the Dajjaal there we will fight him together, until Allaah decides between us and him. If we do not find the Dajjaal, we will go back to our country and our families.'" [7]

Mu'aadh ibn Jabal said,

"The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, 'The building of Bayt al-Maqdis (in Jerusalem) will be followed by the destruction of Yathrib (Madeenah), which will be followed by the conquest of Constantinople, which will be followed by the appearance of the Dajjaal.' Then he put his hand on the thigh or the shoulder of the one with whom he was speaking (i.e. Mu'aadh), and said, 'This is as true as the fact that you are here (or as true as you are sitting here).'" [8]

This does not mean that Madeenah will be destroyed completely before the appearance of the Day, but that will happen at the end of time, as we shall see in some authentic Ahaadeeth. But the building of Bayt al-Maqdis will be the cause of the destruction of Madeenah, as it was proven in the Hadeeth that the Dajjaal will not be able to enter Madinah. He will be prevented from doing so because it is surrounded by angles bearing unsheathed swords. [9]

Abu Hurayrah said,

"The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said about Madeenah: 'Neither plague nor the Dajjaal can enter it.'" [Bukhaaree] [10]

Footnotes

[1] Similar Hadeeth in Abu Daawood, Kitaab al-Malaahim, (Hadeeth 4271), 11/397/399. Ibn Maajah, Kitab al-Fitan (Hadeeth 4089), 2/1369. Ahmad, Musnad, 9104.

Checker's Note: Saheeh, Saheeh al-Jami as-Sagheer: 3612.

[2] Muslim, Kitaab al-Fitan, 8/177, 178. Ahmad, Musnad, 1/384, 385.

[3] Muslim, Kitaab al-Fitan, 8 - 175, 176.

Al-A'mash is a place outside the city, and Dabeeq is a market-place in the city. "The city" refers to Aleppo (some say Damascus).

[4] Ibn Maajah, Kitaab al-Fitan (Hadeeth 4094), 2 - 1370.

The one who believes the liar will regret it, because he will find that the Dajjaal is not there. The one who does not believe him will regret it because the Dajjaal will appear soon afterwards.

Checker's Note: Fabricated. The reason is Kathir ibn `Abdillah, who is declared a liar by Abu Daawood and Shaafi'ee. He narrates a fabricated collection of hadeeth.

[5] Muslim, Kitaab al-Fitan wa Ashtaar al-Saa'ah, 8 - 178. Ibn Maajah, Baab al-Malaahim (Hadeeth 4091), 2 - 1380.

[6] Muslim, Kitaab al-Fitaan, 8 - 176.

[7] Al-Haythamee, Majma' al-Zawaa'id. Ibn Maajah, 7:248.

Checker's Note: Fabricated. Same reasons as the previous one.

Reported by al-Bazzar, Kashful Astar bi Zawa'id al-Bazzar of al-Haythamee: 3386.

[8] Hasan, al-Mishkat, 1st checking: 5424.

[9] Abu Daawood, Kitaab al-Malaahim (Hadeeth 4273), 11 - 400, 401; Ahmad, Musnad, 5/245.

Checker's Note: Hasan.

[10] Bukhaaree, Kitaab al-Fitan, 9/76.

The Appearance of the Dajjaal

First of all, we will quote the reports which mention the liars and "dajjaals" who will precede the coming of the Dajjaal, or Antichrist, who will be the last of them; may Allaah curse them and punish them with Hell-fire.

Jaabir ibn Samurah said,

"I heard the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) say, 'Just before the Hour there will be many liars.' " Jaabir said, "Be on your guard against them." [Muslim] [1]

Jaabir said,

"I heard the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) say, 'Just before the Hour there will be many liars; among them is the one in al-Yamamah, the

'Ansi in San'a', the one in Himyar, and the Dajjaal. This will be the greatest fitnah.' " [Ahmad] [2]

Abu Hurayrah said,

"The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, 'The Hour will not come ... until nearly 30 "dajjaals" (liars) appear, each one claiming to be a messenger from Allaah.' " [Bukhaaree and Muslim] [3]

Abu Hurayrah said,

"The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, 'The Hour will not come until 30 "dajjaals" appear, each of them claiming to be a messenger from Allaah, wealth increases, tribulations appear and al-Harj increases.' Someone asked, 'What is al-Harj?' He said, 'Killing, killing.' " [Ahmad] [4]

Abu Hurayrah said,

"The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, 'The Hour will not come until 30 "dajjaals" appear, all of them lying about Allaah and His Messenger.' " [Abu Daawood] [5]

Abu Hurayrah said,

"The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, 'Just before the Hour, there will be thirty "dajjaals", each of whom will say, I am a Prophet.' " [Ahmad] [6]

Abu Hurayrah said,

"The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, 'There will be "dajjaals" and liars among my Ummah. They will tell you something new, which neither you nor your forefathers have heard. Be on your guard against them, and do not let them lead you astray.' " [Ahmad] [7]

Thawbaan said,

"The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, 'There will be thirty liars among my Ummah. Each one will claim that he is a prophet; but I am the last of the Prophets (Seal of the Prophets), and there will be no Prophet after me.' " [Ahmad] [8]

The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said,

"Verily before the Day of Resurrection there will appear the Dajjaal, and thirty or more liars." [Ahmad] [9]

Ibn 'Umar said,

"I heard the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) say, 'Among my Ummah there will be more than seventy callers, each of whom will be calling people to Hell-fire. If I wished, I could tell you their names and tribes.' " [10]

Abu Bakrah said,

"The people spoke a great deal against Musaylimah before the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said anything about him. Then the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) got up to give a speech and said: '...as for this man about whom you have spoken so much - he is one of the thirty liars who will appear before the Hour, and there is no town which will not feel the fear of the Antichrist.' " [Ahmad] [11]

In another version of this report, the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said,

"He is one of the thirty liars who will appear before the Dajjaal. There is no town which will escape the fear of the Dajjaal, apart from Madeenah. At that time there will be two angels at every entrance of Madeenah, warding off the fear of the Antichrist." [12]

Anas ibn Malik said,

"The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, 'The time of the Dajjaal will be years of confusion. People will believe a liar, and disbelieve one who tells the truth. People will distrust one who is trustworthy, and trust one who is treacherous; and the Ruwaybidah will have a say.' Someone asked, 'Who are the Ruwaybidah?' He said, 'Those who rebel against Allaah and will have a say in general affairs.' " [Ahmad] [13]

Footnotes

[1] Muslim, Kitaab al-Fitan, 8/189.

[2] Ahmad, Musnad, 3/345.

Checker's Note: Ahmad's isnaad contains Ibn Lahi'ah who reports by way of `an, as does Abu Zubair. Al-Bazzar's isnaad contains `Abdur-Rahman ibn Maghra and Mujaahid ibn Sa`eed. Majma' az-Zawaid of al-Haythamee: 7/335. The status of the hadeeth is unknown as no muhaddith, as far as we know, has given a definite verdict.

[3] See Part 7, where the Hadeeth is quoted in full.

[4] Ahmad, Musnad, 2 - 457.

Checker's Note: Saheeh.

[5] Ahmad, Musnad, 2/450.

Checker's Note: Hasan, Saheeh Abee Daawood: 3643.

[6] Ahmad, Musnad, 2/429.

Checker's Note: Saheeh, Silsilatul Ahadeeth as-Saheehah: 1683.

[7] Ahmad, Musnad, 20/349.

Checker's Note: Da'eef isnaad, but Muslim reports similar wording.

[8] Ahmad, Musnad, 5/46.

Checker's Note: Saheeh. Wrong reference, Ahmad, Musnad, 5/46, should be Ahmad, Musnad, 5/278.

[9] Ahmad, Musnad, 2/95.

Checker's Note: Hasan, Silsilatul Ahadeeth as-Saheehah: 1683, Musnad Imaam Ahmad, checking by Ahmad Shakir: 5694.

[10] Da'eef. Reported by Abu Ya'la. Its isnaad contains Laith ibn Abee Sulaim.

[11] Ahmad, Musnad, 5/41, 46.

Checker's Note: Saheeh, Majma' az-Zawaid of al-Haythamee: 7/335.

[12] Ahmad, Musnad, 5/46.

Checker's Note: Saheeh, Musnad Imaam Ahmad, checking by Ahmad Shakir: 5/41. It is part of no. 10 above, which is not given in full in the book.

[13] Ahmad, Musnad, 3/220.

Checker's Note: Saheeh. Its isnaad is hasan and is further supported, Silsilatul Ahadeeth as-Saheehah: 1887, Kashful Astar bi Zawa'id al-Bazzar of al-Haythamee: 3373.

Ahaadeeth about the Dajjaal

'Abd Allaah ibn 'Umar said,

"Umar ibn al-Khattab went along with the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) and a group of people to Ibn Sayyaad, and found him playing with some children near the battlement of Banoo Maghaalah. At that time Ibn Sayyaad was on the threshold of adolescence; he did not realise that anybody was near until the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) struck him on the back. The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said to him: 'Do you bear witness that I am the Messenger of Allaah?' Ibn Sayyaad looked at him and said, 'I bear witness that you are the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) of the unlettered.' Then Ibn Sayyaad said to the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam), 'Do you bear witness that I am the Messenger of Allaah?' The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) dismissed this and said, 'I believe in Allaah and His Messengers.' Then the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) asked him, 'What do you see?' Ibn Sayyaad said, 'Sometimes a truthful person comes to me, and sometimes a liar.' The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said to him, 'You are confused', then he said, 'I am hiding something from you.' Ibn Sayyaad said, 'It is Dukk.' The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, 'Silence! You will not be able to go beyond your rank.' 'Umar ibn al-Khattab said, 'O Messenger of Allaah, shall I cut off his head?' The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, 'If he is (the Dajjaal) you will not be able to overpower him, and if he is not, then killing will not do you any good.' "

Saleem ibn 'Abd Allaah said,

"I heard 'Abd Allaah ibn 'Umar say, 'After that, the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) and Ubayy ibn Ka'b went along to the palm trees where Ibn Sayyaad was. The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) started to hide behind a tree, with the intention of hearing something from Ibn Sayyaad before Ibn Sayyaad saw him. The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) saw him lying on a bed, murmuring beneath a blanket. Ibn Sayyaad's mother saw the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) hiding behind a tree, and said to her son, "O Saf (Ibn Sayyaad's first name), here is Muhammad!" Ibn Sayyad jumped up, and the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, "If you had left him alone, he would have explained himself." "

Saleem said,

"Abd Allaah ibn 'Umar said, The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) stood up to address the people. He praised Allaah as He deserved to be praised, then he spoke about the Dajjaal: 'I warn you against him; there is no Prophet who has not warned his people against him, even Noah warned his people against him. But I will tell you something which no other Prophet has told his people. You must know that the Dajjaal is one-eyed, and Allaah is not one-eyed.' "

Ibn Shihaab said:

"Umar ibn Thaabit al-Ansaaree told me that some of the Companions of the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) told him that on the day when he warned the people about the Dajjaal, the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said: 'There will be written between his eyes the word Kaafir (unbeliever). Everyone who resents his bad deeds - or every believer - will be able to read it.' He also said, 'You must know that no one of you will be able to see his Lord until he dies.' " [Muslim, Bukhaaree] [1]

Ibn 'Umar said,

"The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) mentioned the Dajjaal to the people. He said, 'Allaah is not one-eyed, but the Dajjaal is blind in his right eye, and his eye is like a floating grape.' " [Muslim] [2]

Anas ibn Malik said,

"The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, 'There has never been a Prophet who did not warn his people against that one-eyed liar. Verily he is one-eyed and your Lord is not one-eyed. On his forehead will be written the letter Kaf, Fa, Ra (Kaafir).' " [Muslim, Bukhaaree] [3]

Hudhayfah said,

"The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, 'I know more about the powers which the Dajjaal will have than he will know himself. He will have two flowing rivers: one will appear to be pure water, and the other will appear to be flaming fire. Whosoever lives to see that, let him choose the river which seems to be fire, then let him close his eyes, lower his head and drink from it, for it will be cold water. The Dajjaal will be one-eyed; the place where one eye should be will be covered by a piece of skin. On his forehead will be written the word Kaafir, and every believer, whether literate or illiterate, will be able to read it.' " [Muslim] [4]

Abu Hurayrah said,

"The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, 'Shall I tell you something about the Dajjaal which no Prophet has ever told his people before me? The Dajjaal is one-eyed and will bring with him something which will resemble Paradise and Hell; but that which he calls Paradise will in fact be Hell. I warn you against him as Noah warned his people against him.' " [Bukhaaree, Muslim] [5]

Muhammad ibn Munkadir said:

"I saw Jaabir ibn 'Abd Allaah swearing by Allaah that Ibn Sayyaad was the Dajjaal, so I asked him, 'Do you swear by Allaah?' He said, 'I heard 'Umar swear to that effect in the presence of the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam), and the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) did not disapprove of it.' " [6]

Some 'ulamaa' (scholars) say that some of the Sahaabah (Companions of the Prophet) believed Ibn Sayyaad to be the greater Dajjaal, but that is not the case: Ibn Sayyaad was a lesser dajjal.

Ibn Sayyaad travelled between Makkah and Madeenah with Abu Sa'eed, and complained to him about the way that people were saying that he was the Dajjaal. Then he said to Abu Sa'eed,

"Did not the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) say that the Dajjaal would not enter Madinah? I was born there. Did not he say that he would not have any children? - I have children. Did not he say that he would be a Kaafir? - I have embraced Islaam. Of all the people, I know the most about him: I know where he is now. If I were given the opportunity to be in his place, I would not resent it.' " [Bukhaaree, Muslim]

There are many Ahaadeeth about Ibn Sayyaad, some of which are not clear as to whether he was the Dajjaal or not. We shall see Ahaadeeth which indicates that the Dajjaal is not Ibn Sayyaad, as in the Hadeeth of Faatimah Bint Qays al-Fahriyyah, although this does not mean that he was not one of the lesser Dajjaal; but Allaah knows best.

Footnotes

[1] Bukhaaree, Kitaab al-Adab, 8/49, 50. Muslim, Kitaab al-Fitan, 8/192, 193.

Ibn Sayyaad's [or Ibn Sa'eed's] first name was Saaf. He had some characteristics similar to those ascribed to the Dajjaal. When he was young, he was like a Kaahin (soothsayer) - sometimes he spoke the truth, sometimes he lied. When he grew up, he embraced Islaam and displayed some good characteristics, but later he changed, and it was said that his behaviour might indicate that he was the Dajjaal. But the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) had not received any Wahy (revelation) to that effect, so he told 'Umar: "If he is [the Dajjaal] you will not be able to overpower him."

Banoo Maghaalah: if you stand facing the Masjid al-Nabawee, (the Prophet's Mosque in Madeenah), everything on your right is the territory of Banoo Maghaalah.

Dukh: i.e. al-Dukhaan (smoke). The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) was thinking of the Aayah,

"Then wait you for the Day when the sky will bring forth a visible smoke."

[ad-Dukhaan (44):10]

"... with the intention of hearing something..." in other words, the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) wanted to eavesdrop on Ibn Sayyaad so that he and his companions could find out whether he was a soothsayer (kaahin) or a sorcerer.

"if you had left him alone, he would have had explained himself": i.e., if his mother had not told him that the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) was there, then the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) would have found out what he was - a soothsayer or a sorcerer.

[2] Muslim, Kitaab al-Fitan, 8/194, 195.

"His eye is like a floating grape" - this means that, his eye will protrude and there will be some kind of brightness in it.

[3] Muslim, ibid. Bukhaaree, Kitaab al-Fitan, 9/75, 76.

"On his forehead will be written the letters Kaaf, Faa', Raa' " - this indicates that he will call people to Kufr, not the right path, so we must avoid him. The fact that Muslims will be able to identify him as a Kaafir is a great blessing from Allaah to this Ummah.

[4] Muslim, ibid. Shorter version in Bukhaaree, Kitaab al-Fitan, 9/75.

[5] Bukhaaree, Kitaab al-Anbiyaa, 4/75. Muslim, Kitaab al-Fitan, 8/196.

[6] Muslim, Kitaab al-Fitan, 8/192.

The Hadeeth of Faatimah bint Qays

'Aamir ibn Sharaaheel Sha'bi Sha'b Hamdaan reported that he asked Faatimah bint Qays, the sister of Dahhaak ibn Qays, who was one of the first Muhaajiraat,

"Tell me a Hadeeth which you heard directly from the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) with no narrator in between." She said, "I can tell you if you like." He said, "Yes, please tell me." She said, "I married Ibn al-Mugheerah, who was one of the best of the youth of Quraysh in those days. But he fell in the first Jihaad on the side of the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam).

"When I became a widow, 'Abd al-Rahmaan ibn 'Awf, one of the companions of the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) sent me a proposal of marriage. The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) also sent me a proposal of marriage on behalf of his freedman Usaamah ibn Zayd. I had been told that the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) had said, 'He who loves me should also love Usaamah.' When the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) spoke to me, I said, 'It is up to you: marry me to whomever you wish.'

"The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, 'Go and stay with Umm Shareek.' Umm Shareek was a rich Ansaaree (Muslim originally from Madeenah) woman, who spent much in the way of Allaah and entertained many guests. I said, 'I will do as you wish.' Then he said, 'Don't go. Umm Shareek has many guests, and I would not like it if your head or leg were to become uncovered accidentally and people saw something you would not wish them to see. It is better if you go and stay with your cousin 'Abd Allaah ibn 'Amr ibn Umm Maktoom' (Abd Allaah was of the Banoo Fihir of Quraysh, the same tribe as that to which Faatimah belonged).

"So I went to stay with him, and when I had completed my 'Iddah (period of waiting), I heard the Prophet's (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) announcer calling for congregational prayer. I went out to the mosque, and prayed behind the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam). I was in the women's row, which was at the back of the congregation. When the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) had finished his prayer, he sat on the pulpit, smiling, and said, 'Everyone should stay in his place.' Then he said, 'Do you know why I had asked you to assemble?' The people said, 'Allaah and His Messenger know best.'

"He said, 'By Allaah, I have not gathered you here to give you an exhortation or a warning. I have kept you here because Tameem ad-Daaree, a Christian man who has come and embraced Islaam, told me something which agrees with that which I have told you about the Dajjaal. He told me that he had sailed in a ship with thirty men from Banoo Lakhm and Banoo Judhaam. The waves had tossed them about for a month, then they were brought near to an island, at the time of sunset. They landed on the island, and were met by a beast who was so hairy that they could not tell its front from its back. They said, "Woe to you! What are you?" It said, "I am al-Jassaasah." They said, "What is al-Jassaasah?" It said, "O people, go to this man in the monastery, for he is very eager to know about you." Tameem said that when it named a person to us, we were afraid lest it be a devil.

"Tamim said, 'We quickly went to the monastery. There we found a huge man with his hands tied up to his neck and with iron shackles between his legs up to the ankles. We said, "Woe to you, who are you?" He said, "You will soon know about me. Tell me who you are." We said, "We are people from Arabia. We sailed in a ship, but the waves have been tossing us about for a month, and they brought us to your island, where we met a beast who was so hairy that we could not tell its front from its back. We said to it, "Woe to you! What are you?" and it said, "I am al-Jassaasah." We asked, "What is al-Jassaasah?" and it told us, "Go to this man in the monastery, for he is very eager to know about you." So we came to you quickly, fearing that it might be a devil.'

"The man said, 'Tell me about the date-palms of Baysaan.' We said, 'What do you want to know about them?' He said, 'I want to know whether these trees bear fruit or not.' We said, 'Yes.' He said, 'Soon they will not bear fruit.' Then he said, 'Tell me about the lake of at-Tabariyyah [Tiberias, in Palestine].' We said, 'What do you want to know about it?' He asked, 'Is there water in it?' We said, 'There is plenty of water in it.' He said, 'Soon it will become dry.' Then he said, 'Tell me about the spring of Zughar.' We said, 'What do you want to know about it?' He said, 'Is there water in it, and does it irrigate the land?' We said, 'Yes, there is plenty of water in it, and the people use it to irrigate the land.'

"Then he said, 'Tell me about the unlettered Prophet - what has he done?' We said, 'He has left Makkah and settled in Yathrib.' He asked, 'Do the Arabs fight against him?' We said, 'Yes.' He said, 'How does he deal with them?' So we told him that the Prophet (sal-Allahu 'alayhe wa sallam) had overcome the Arabs around him and that they had followed him. He asked, 'Has it really happened?' We said, 'Yes.' He said, 'It is better for them if they follow him. Now I will tell you about myself. I am the Dajjal. I will soon be permitted to leave this place: I will emerge and travel about the earth. In forty nights I will pass through every town, except Makkah and Madeenah, for these have been forbidden to me. Every time I try to enter either of them, I will be met by an angel bearing an unsheathed sword, who will prevent me from entering. There will be angels guarding them at every passage leading to them.'

Faatimah said, "The Prophet (sal-Allahu 'alayhe wa sallam), striking the pulpit with his staff, said: 'This is Tayyibah, this is Tayyibah, this is Tayyibah, [i.e. Madeenah]. Have I not told you something like this?' The people said, 'Yes.' He said, 'I liked the account given to me by Tameem because it agrees with that which I have told you about the Dajjaal, and about Makkah and Madeenah. Indeed he is in the Syrian sea or the Yemen sea. No, on the contrary, he is in the East, he is in the East, he is in the East' and he pointed towards the East. Faatimah said: I memorised this from the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam)." [Muslim] [1]

'Abd Allaah ibn 'Umar said,

"The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, 'While I was asleep, I saw myself in a dream performing Tawaaf (circumambulation) around the Ka'bah. I saw a ruddy man with lank hair and water dripping from his head. I said, "Who is he?" and they said, "The son of Mary." Then I turned around and saw another man with a huge body, red complexion, curly hair and one eye. His other eye looked like a floating grape. They said, "This is the Dajjaal." The one who most resembles him is Ibn Qatan, a man from the tribe of al-Khuzaa'ah.' " [Bukhaaree, Muslim] [2]

Jaabir ibn 'Abd Allaah said,

"The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, 'The Dajjaal will appear at the end of time, when religion is taken lightly. He will have forty days in which to travel throughout the earth. One of these days will be like a year, another will be like a month, a third will be like a week, and the rest will be like normal days. He will be riding a donkey; the width between its ears will be forty cubits. He will say to the people: "I am your lord." He is one-eyed, but your Lord is not one-eyed. On his forehead will be written the word Kaafir, and every believer, literate or illiterate, will be able to read it. He will go everywhere except Makkah and Madeenah, which Allaah has forbidden to him; angels stand at their gates. He will have a mountain of bread, and the people will face hardship, except for those who follow him. He will have two rivers, and I know what is in them. He will call one Paradise and one Hell. Whoever enters the one he calls Paradise will find that it is Hell, and whoever enters the one he calls Hell will find that it is Paradise. Allaah will send with him devils who will speak to the people. He will bring a great tribulation; he will issue a command to the sky and it will seem to the people as if it is raining. Then he will appear to kill someone and bring him back to life. After that he will no longer have this power. The people will say, "Can anybody do something like this except the Lord?" The Muslims will flee to Jabal al-Dukhaan in Syria, and the Dajjaal will come and besiege them. The siege will intensify and they will suffer great hardship. Then Jesus son of Mary will descend, and will call the people at dawn: "O people, what prevented you from coming out to fight this evil liar?" They will answer, "He is a Jinn." Then they will go out, and find Jesus son of Mary. The time for prayer will come, and the Muslims will call on Jesus to lead the prayer, but he will say, "Let your Imaam lead the prayer." Their Imaam will lead them in praying Salaat al-Subh (Morning prayer), then they will go out to fight the Dajjaal. When the liar sees Jesus, he will dissolve like salt in water. Jesus will go to him and kill him, and he will not let anyone who followed him live.' " [Ahmad] [3]

Footnotes

[1] Muslim, Kitaab al- Fitan, 8/203-205.

Al-Jassaasah is so called because he spies on behalf of the Dajjaal (from jassa - to try to gain information, to spy out, etc.).

Baysaan - a village in Palestine.

'Ayn Zughar (the spring of Zughar) is a town in Palestine.

[2] Bukhaaree, Kitaab al-Fitan, 9/75. Muslim, Kitaab al-Imaan, 1/108.

[3] Ahmad, Musnad, 3/367, 368.

Checker's Note: Da`eef. Silsilatul Ahaadieeh ad-Da`eefah: 1969. It contains the `an`anah of Abu Zubair. Parts are found in authentic narrations. Refer to Dajjaal section in Saheeh Muslim.

The Hadeeth of Al-Nuwas Ibn Sam'an Al-Kilabi

Al-Nuwas ibn Saman said,

"One morning the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) spoke about the Dajjaal. Sometimes he described him as insignificant, and sometimes he described him as so dangerous that we thought he was in the clump of date-palms nearby. When we went to him later on, he noticed that fear in our faces, and asked, 'What is the matter with you?' We said, 'O Messenger of Allaah, this morning you spoke of the Dajjaal; sometimes you described him as insignificant, and sometimes you described him as being so dangerous that we thought he was in the clump of date-palms nearby.

"The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, 'I fear for you in other matters besides the Dajjaal. If he appears whilst I am among you, I will contend with him on your behalf. But if he appears while I am not among you, then each man must contend with him on his own behalf, and Allaah will take care of every Muslim on my behalf. The Dajjaal will be a young man, with short, curly hair, and one eye floating. I would liken him to 'Abd al-Uzzaa ibn Qatan. Whoever amongst you lives to see him should recite the opening Ayaat of Surat al-Kahf. He will appear on the way between Syria and Iraq, and will create disaster left and right. O servants of Allaah, adhere to the Path of Truth.' "

"We said, 'O Messenger of Allaah, for the day which is like a year, will one days prayers be sufficient?' He said, 'No, you must make an estimate of the time, and then observe the prayers.' "

"We asked, 'O Messenger of Allaah, how quickly will he walk upon the earth?' He said, 'Like a cloud driven by the wind. He will come to the people and call them (to a false religion), and they will believe in him and respond to him. He will issue a command to the sky, and it will rain; and to the earth, and it will produce crops. After grazing on these crops, their animals will return with their udders full of milk and their flanks stretched. Then he will come to another people and will call them (to a false religion), but they will reject his call. He will depart from them; they will suffer famine and will possess nothing in the form of wealth. Then he will pass through the wasteland and will say, Bring forth your treasures, and the treasures will come forth, like swarms of bees. Then he will call a man brimming with youth; he will strike him with a sword and cut him in two, then place the two pieces at the distance between an archer and his target. Then he will call him, and the young man will come running and laughing.' "

"At that point, Allaah will send the Messiah, son of Mary, and he will descend to the white minaret in the east of Damascus, wearing two garments dyed with saffron, placing his hands on the wings of two angels. When he lowers his head, beads of perspiration will fall from it, and when he raises his head, beads like pearls will scatter from it. Every Kaafir who smells his fragrance will die, and his breath will reach as far as he can see. He will search for the Dajjaal until he finds him at the gate of Ludd, where he will kill him."

"Then a people whom Allaah has protected will come to Jesus son of Mary, and he will wipe their faces (i.e. wipe the traces of hardship from their faces) and tell them of their status in Paradise. At that time Allaah will reveal to Jesus: "I have brought forth some of My servants whom no-one will be able to fight. Take My servants safely to at-Toor."

"Then Allaah will send Gog and Magog, and they will swarm down from every slope. The first of them will pass by the Lake of Tiberias, and will drink some of its water; the last of them will pass by it and say, "There used to be water here." Jesus, the Prophet of Allaah, and his Companions will be besieged until a bull's head will be dearer to them than one hundred dinars are to you nowadays."

"Then Jesus and his Companions will pray to Allaah, and He will send insects who will bite the people of Gog and Magog on their necks, so that in the morning they will all perish as one. Then Jesus and his Companions will come down and will not find any nook or cranny on earth which is free from their putrid stench. Jesus and his Companions will again pray to Allaah, Who will send birds like the necks of camels; they will seize the bodies of Gog and Magog and throw them wherever Allaah wills. Then Allaah will send rain which no house or tent will be able to keep out, and the earth will be cleansed, until it will look like a mirror. Then the earth will be told to bring forth its fruit and restore its blessing. On that day, a group of people will be able to eat from a single pomegranate and seek shelter under its skin (i.e. the fruit would be so big). A milch camel will give so much milk that a whole party will be able to drink from it; a cow will give so much milk that a whole tribe will be able to drink from it; and a milch-sheep will give so much milk that a whole family will be able to drink from it. At that time, Allaah will send a pleasant wind which will soothe them even under their armpits, and will take the soul of every Muslim. Only the most wicked people will be left, and they will fornicate like asses; then the Last Hour will come upon them." "

[Muslim] [1]

Footnote

[1] Muslim, Kitaab al-Fitan wa Ashraat al-Saa'ah, 8/196-199.

Ludd: the biblical Lydda, now known as Lod, site of the zionist state's major airport

Hadeeth narrated from Abu Umaamah Al-Baahilee

Abu Umaamah al-Baahilee said,

"The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) delivered a speech to us, most of which dealt with the Dajjaal and warned us against him. He said, 'No tribulation on earth since the creation of Adam will be worse than the tribulation of the Dajjaal. Allaah has never sent a Prophet who did not warn his Ummah against the Dajjaal. I am the last of the Prophets, and you are the last Ummah. The Dajjaal is emerging among you and it is inevitable. If he appears while I am still among you, I will contend with him on behalf of every Muslim. But if he appears after I am gone, then every person must contend with him on his own behalf. He will appear on the way between Syria and Iraq, and will spread disaster right and left. O servants of Allaah adhere to the path of Truth. I shall describe him for you in a way that no Prophet has ever done before.

He will start by saying that he is a Prophet, but there will be no Prophet after me. Then he will say, "I am your Lord," but you will never see your Lord until you die. The Dajjaal is one-eyed, but your Lord, glorified be He, is not one-eyed. On his forehead will be written the word Kaafir, which every Muslim, literate or illiterate, will be able to read. Among that which he will bring will be the Paradise and Hell he will offer; but that which he calls Hell will be Paradise, and that which he calls Paradise will be Hell. Whoever enters his Hell, let him seek refuge with Allaah and recite the opening Ayaat of Surat ul-Kahf, and it will become cool and peaceful for him, as the fire became cool and peaceful for Abraham.

"He will say to a Bedouin, What do you think if I bring your father and mother back to life for you? Will you bear witness that I am your lord? The Bedouin will say Yes, so two devils will assume the appearance of his father and mother, and will say, "O my son, follow him for he is your lord."

"He will be given power over one person, whom he will kill and cut in two with a saw. Then he will say, Look at this slave of mine, now I will resurrect him, but he will still claim that he has a Lord other than me. Allaah will resurrect him, and this evil man (the Dajjaal) will say to him, Who is your Lord? The man will answer, 'My Lord is Allaah, and you are the enemy of Allaah. You are the Dajjaal. By Allaah, I have never been more sure of this than I am today.' "

Aboo Sa'eed said,

"The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, 'That man will have the highest status among my Ummah in Paradise.' "

Abu Sa'eed said,

"By Allaah, we never thought that that man would be any other than 'Umar ibn al-Khattab, until he passed away."

Al-Muhaaribee said:

"Then we referred to the Hadeeth of Abu Raafi'ee, which said, 'Part of his Fitnah will be the fact that he will pass through an area whose people will deny him, and none of their livestock will remain alive. Then he will pass through a second area whose people will believe in him; he will order the sky to rain and the earth to bring forth crops, and their flocks will return from grazing fatter than they have ever been, with their flanks stretched, their udders full. He will pass through every place on earth - except Makkah and Madeenah, which he will never enter, for there are angels guarding every gate of them with unsheathed swords - until he reaches al-Zareeb al-Ahmar and camps at the edge of the salt-marsh. Madeenah will be shaken by three tremors, after which every Munaafiq (hypocrite) will leave it, and it will be cleansed of evil, as iron is cleansed of dross. That day will be called Yawm al-Khalaas (The Day of Purification).' "

Umm Shareek bint Abee'l-'Akr said,

"O Messenger of Allaah, where will the Arabs be at that time?" He said, "At that time they will be few; most of them will be in Bayt al-Maqdis (Jerusalem), and their Imaam will be a righteous man. Whilst their Imaam is going forward to lead the people in praying Salaat al-Subh (the morning prayer), Jesus son of Mary will descend. The Imaam will step back, to let Jesus lead the people in prayer, but Jesus will place his hand between the man's shoulders and say, 'Go forward and lead the prayer, for the Iqaamah was made for you.' So the Imaam will lead the people in prayer, and afterwards Jesus (alayhi-salam) will say, 'Open the gate.' The gate will be opened, and behind it will be the Dajjaal and a thousand Jews, each of them bearing a sword and shield. When the Dajjaal sees Jesus, he will begin to dissolve like salt in water, and will run away. Jesus will say, 'You will remain alive until I strike you with my sword.' He will catch up with him at the eastern gate of Ludd and will kill him. The Jews will be deflated with the help of Allaah. There will be no place for them to hide; they will not be able to hide behind any stone, wall, animal or tree - except the boxthorn (al-Gharqarah) - without it saying, 'O Muslim servant of Allaah! here is a Jew, come and kill him!' " The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, "The time of the Dajjaal will be forty years; one year like half a year, one year like a month, and one month like a week. The rest of his days will pass so quickly that if one of you were at one of the gates of Madeenah, he would not reach the other gate before evening fell."

Someone asked,

"O Messenger of Allaah, how will we pray in those shorter days?" He said, "Work out the times of prayer in the same way that you do in these longer days, and then pray." The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, "Jesus son of Mary will be a just administrator and leader of my Ummah. He will break the cross, kill the pigs, and abolish the Jizyah (tax on non-Muslims). He will not collect the Sadaqah, so he will not collect sheep and camels. Mutual enmity and hatred will disappear. Every harmful animal will be made harmless, so that a small boy will be able to put his hand into a snake's mouth without being harmed, a small girl will be able to make a lion run away from her, and a wolf will go among sheep as if he were a sheepdog. The earth will be filled with peace as a container is filled with water. People will be in complete agreement, and only Allaah will be worshipped. Wars will cease, and the authority of Quraysh will be taken away. The earth will be like a silver basin, and will produce fruits so abundantly that a group of people will gather to eat a bunch of grapes or on epomegranate and will be satisfied. A bull will be worth so much money, but a horse will be worth only a few dirhams."

Someone asked,

"O Messenger of Allaah, why will a horse be so cheap?" He said,

"Because it will never be ridden in war." He was asked, "Why will the bull be so expensive?" He said, "Because it will plough the earth. For three years before the Dajjaal emerges, the people will suffer severe hunger. In the first year, Allaah will order the sky to withhold a third of its rain, and the earth to withhold two-thirds of its fruits. In the third year, He will order the sky to withhold all of its rain, and the earth to withhold all of its fruits, so that nothing green will grow. Every cloven-hoofed creature will die except for whatever Allaah wills." Someone asked, "How will the people live at that time?" He said, "By saying Laa ilaaha illaa Allaah, Allaahu Akbar, Subhaan Allaah and Al-Hamdu-lillaah. This will be like food for them." [1]

The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said,

"The Dajjaal will come forth, and one of the Believers will go towards him.

The armed men of the Dajjaal will ask him, 'Where are you going?' He will say, 'I am going to this one who has come forth.' They will say, 'Kill him!' Then some of them will say to the others, 'Hasn't your lord [ie the Dajjaal] forbidden you to kill anyone without his permission?' So they will take him to the Dajjaal, and when the Believer sees him, he will say, 'O People, this is the Dajjaal whom the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) told us about.' Then the Dajjaal will order them to seize him and wound him in the head; they will inflict blows all over, even in his back and stomach. The Dajjaal will ask him, 'Don't you believe in me?' He will say, 'You are a false Messiah.' The Dajjaal will order that he be sawn in two from the parting of his hair to his legs; then he will walk between the two pieces. Then he will say 'Stand!' and the man will stand up. The Dajjaal will say to him, 'Don't you believe in me?' The believer will say, 'It has only increased my understanding that you are the Dajjaal.' Then he will say, 'O people! he will not treat anyone else in such a manner after me.' The Dajjaal will seize him to slaughter him, but the space between his neck and collar-bone will be turned into copper, and the Dajjaal will not be able to do anything to him. He will take the man by his arms and legs and throw him away; the people will believe that he has been thrown into Hell, whereas in fact he will have been thrown into Paradise." The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, "He will be the greatest of martyrs in the sight of Allaah, the Lord of the Worlds." [Muslim] [2]

Footnotes

[1] Ibn Maajah, Kitaab al-Fitan, (Hadeeth 4077), 2:1363.

"He will break the cross and kill pigs", i.e. Christianity will be annulled.

"He will not collect the Sadaqah" (i.e. Zakaat) - because there will be so much wealth, and no-one will be in need of Sadaqah.

Checker's Note: Da'eef. Da'eef Ibn Maajah: 884. Parts are supported.

[2] Muslim, Kitaab al-Fitan wa Ashtaar al-Saa'ah, 8/199, 200

The Hadeeth of Al-Mugheerah Ibn Shu'bah

Al-Mugheerah ibn Shu'bah said,

"No-one asked the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) more questions about the Dajjaal than I did. He said, 'You should not worry about him, because he will not be able to harm you.' I said, 'But they say that he will have much food and water!' He said, 'He is too insignificant in the sight of Allaah to have all that.' " [Muslim]

Al-Mugheerah ibn Shu'bah said,

"No-one asked the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) more questions about the Dajjaal than I did." One of the narrators said, "What did you ask him?" Al-Mugheerah said, "I said, 'They say that the Dajjaal will have a mountain of bread and meat, and a river of water. The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, 'He is too insignificant in the sight of Allaah to have all that.' " [Muslim]

From these Ahaadeeth, we can see that Allaah will test His servants with the Dajjaal and by the miracles which he will be permitted to perform: as we have already mentioned, the Dajjaal will order the sky to rain for those who accept him, and will order the earth to bring forth its fruits so that they and their livestock will eat of it, and their flocks will return fat and with their udders full of milk. Those who reject the Dajjaal and refuse to believe in him will suffer drought and famine; people and livestock will die, and wealth and supplies of food will be depleted. People will follow the Dajjaal like swarms of bees, and he will kill a young man and bring him back to life.

This is not a kind of magic; it will be something real with which Allaah will test His servants at the end of time. Many will be led astray, and many will be guided by it. Those who doubt will disbelieve, but those who believe will be strengthened in their faith.

Al-Qaadi 'Iyaad and others interpreted the phrase "He is too insignificant in the sight of Allaah to have all that" as meaning that the Dajjaal is too insignificant to have anything that could lead the true believers astray, because he is obviously evil and corrupt. Even if he brings great terror, the word Kaafir will be clearly written between his eyes; one report explains that it will be written "Kaaf, Faa, Raa," from which we can understand that it will be written perceptibly, not abstractly, as some people say.

One of his eyes will be blind, protruding and repulsive; this is the meaning of the Hadeeth: "...as if it were a grape floating on the surface of the water." Other reports say that it is "dull, with no light in it," or "like white spittle on a wall," i.e. it will look ugly.

Some reports say that it is his right eye which will be blind; others say that it is his left eye.

He could be partly blind in both eyes, or there could be a fault in both eyes. This interpretation could be supported by the Hadeeth narrated by at-Tabaraanee, in which he reports that Ibn 'Abbaas said,

"The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, 'The Dajjaal is curly-haired and white-skinned. His head is like the branch of a tree; his left eye is blind, and the other eye looks like a floating grape.' "

One may ask: if the Dajjaal is going to cause such widespread evil and his claim to be a "lord" will be so widely believed - even though he is obviously a liar, and all the Prophet's have warned against him - why does the Qur'aan not mention him by name and warn us against his lies and stubbornness?

The answer is:-

The Dajjaal was referred to in the Ayah:

"...The day that some of the Signs of your Lord do come, no good will it do to a person to believe then, if he believed not before, nor earned good (by performing deeds of righteousness) through his Faith..." [al-An'aam (6):158]

Abu Hurairah said,

"The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, 'There are three things which, when they appear, no good will it do a soul to believe in them then, if it believed not before nor earned righteousness through its Faith. They are: The Dajjaal, the Beast, and the rising of the sun from the west.' "

Jesus son of Mary will descend from Heaven and kill the Dajjaal, as we have already mentioned. The descent of Jesus is mentioned in the Ayaat:

"And because of their saying (in boast), "We killed Messiah 'Eesaa (Jesus), son of Maryam (Mary), the Messenger of Allaah," - but they killed him not, nor crucified him, but the resemblance of 'Eesaa (Jesus) was put over another man (and they killed that man), and those who differ therein are full of doubts. They have no (certain) knowledge, they follow nothing but conjecture. For surely; they killed him not [i.e. 'Eesaa

(Jesus), son of Maryam (Mary) alayhi-salam]:

But Allaah raised him ['Eesaa (Jesus)] up (with his body and soul) unto Himself (and he alayhi-salam is in the heavens). And Allaah is Ever All Powerful, All Wise.

And there is none of the people of the Scripture (Jews and Christians), but must believe in him ['Eesaa (Jesus), son of Maryam (Mary), as only a Messenger of Allaah and a human being], before his ['Eesaa (Jesus) alayhi-salam or a Jew's or a Christian's] death (at the time of the appearance of the angel of death). And on the Day of Resurrection, he ['Eesaa (Jesus)] will be a witness against them." [an-Nisaa' (4):157-9] We think that the Tafseer (interpretation) of this Aayah is that the pronoun in "before his death" (qabla mawtihi) refers to Jesus; i.e, he will descend and the People of the Book who differed concerning him will believe in him. The Christians claimed that he was divine, while the Jews made a slanderous accusation, i.e. that he was born from adultery. When Jesus descends before the Day of Judgment, he will correct all these differences and lies.

On this basis, the reference to the descent of the Messiah Jesus son of Mary also includes a reference to the Dajjaal (false Mesor Antichrist), who is the opposite of the true Messiah, because sometimes the Arabs refer to one of two opposites and not the other, but mean both.

The Dajjaal is not mentioned by name in the Qur'aan because he is so insignificant: he claims to be divine, but he is merely a human being. His affairs are too contemptible to be mentioned in the Qur'aan. But the Prophet's, out of loyalty to Allaah, warned their people about the Dajjaal and the tribulations and misguiding miracles he would bring. It is enough for us to know the reports of the Prophet's and the many reports from the Prophet Muhammad (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam).

One could argue that Allaah has mentioned Pharaoh and his false claims, such as:

"I am your lord, most high" [an-Nazi'aat (79):24] and "O chiefs! I know not that you have an ilaah (a god) other than me..." [al-Qasas (28):38]

This can be explained by the fact that Pharaoh and his deeds are in the past, and his lies are clear to every believer. But the Dajjaal is yet to come, in the future; it will be a Fitnah and a test for all people. So the Dajjaal is not mentioned in the Qur'aan because he is contemptible; and the fact that he is not mentioned means that it will be a great test.

The facts about the Dajjaal and his lies are obvious and do not need further emphasis. This is often the case when something is very clear. For example, when the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) was terminally ill, he wanted to write a document confirming that Abu Bakr would be the Khaleefah after him. Then he abandoned this idea, and said,

"Allaah and the believers will not accept anyone other than Abu Bakr."

He decided not to write the document because he knew of Abu Bakr's high standing among the Sahaabah (Companions) and was sure that they would not choose anyone else. Similarly, the facts about the Dajjaal are so clear that they did not need to be mentioned in the Qur'aan.

Allaah did not mention the Dajjaal in the Qur'aan because He (subhaanahu wa ta'aala) knew that the Dajjaal would not be able to lead His true servants astray; he would only increase their faith, their submission to Allaah and His Messenger, their belief in the Truth, and their rejection of falsehood. For this reason the believer whom the Dajjaal overpowers will say, when he revives him,

"By Allaah, it has only increased my understanding that you are the one-eyed liar about whom the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) spoke."

More Ahaadeeth about the Dajjaal

The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said,

"The Dajjaal will emerge in a land in the east called Khurasan. His followers will be people with faces like hammered shields." [1]

Asmaa' bint Yazeed al-Ansaariyyah said,

"The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, 'During the three years just before the Dajjaal comes, there will be one year when the sky will withhold one third of its rain and the earth one-third of its fruits. In the second year the sky will withhold two-thirds of its rain, and the earth two-thirds of its fruits. In the third year the sky will withhold all of its rain, and the earth all of its fruits, and all the animals will die. It will be the greatest tribulation: the Dajjaal will bring a Bedouin and say to him, "What if I bring your camels to life for you? Will you agree that I am your lord?" The Bedouin will say "Yes." So devils will assume the forms of his camels, with the fullest udders and the highest humps. Then he will bring a man whose father and brother have died, and will ask him, "What do you think if I bring your father and brother back to life? Will you agree that I am your lord?" The man will say "Yes," so the devils will assume the forms of his father and brother.' Then the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) went out for something, and then returned. The people were very concerned about what he had told them. He stood in the doorway and asked, 'What is wrong, Asma'? I said, 'O Messenger of Allaah, you have terrified us with what you said about the Dajjaal.' He said, 'He will certainly appear. If I am still alive, I will contend with him on your behalf; otherwise Allaah will take care of every Muslim on my behalf.' I said, 'O Messenger of Allaah, we do not bake our dough until we are hungry, so how will it be for the believers at that time?' The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, 'The glorification of Allaah which suffices the people of Heaven will be sufficient for them.' " [2]

Abu Hurairah (radi-Allahu 'anhu) said,

"The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, 'The Hour will not come until the Muslims fight the Jews and kill them. When a Jew hides behind a rock or a tree, it will say, "O Muslim, O servant of Allaah! There is a Jew behind me, come and kill him!" All the trees will do this except the box-thorn (al-Gharqad), because it is the tree of the Jews.' " [Ahmad] [3]

Footnotes

[1] Tirmidhee Abwaab al-Fitan, Hadeeth 2338, 6/465. Ibn Maajah, Kitaab al-Fitan, Hadeeth 4072, 1354, 2/1353, 1354. Ahmad, Musnad 1/7.

Checker's Note: Saheeh, Saheeh Ibn Maajah: 4072.

[2] Ahmad, Musnad, 6/455, 456.

Checker's Note: Da'eef, al-Mishkat, 1st checking: 5491. Its isnaad contains Sharh ibn Hawshab, who is weak.

[3] Muslim, Kitaab al-Fitan wa Ashraat al-Saa'ah, 8/388. Ahmad, Musnad, 2/417.

Protection Against The Dajjaal

1. Seeking refuge with Allaah from his tribulation.

It is proven in the Saheeh (authentic) Ahaadeeth that the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) used to seek refuge with Allaah from the tribulation of the Dajjaal in his prayers, and that he commanded his Ummah to do likewise:

"Allaahumma innaa na'oodhu bika min 'adhaabi jahannam, wa min 'adhaabi 'l-qabr, wa min fitnatee 'l-mahyaa'i wa'l-mamaat, wa min fitnatee 'l-maseehi 'd-dajjaal."

"O Allaah! We seek refuge with You from the punishment of Hell, from the punishment of the grave, from the tribulations of life and death, and from the tribulation of the False Messiah (Dajjaal)." [1]

This Hadeeth was narrated by many Sahabah, including Anas, Abu Hurairah, 'Aa'ishah, Ibn 'Abbaas, and Sa'd (radi-Allaahu 'anhum).

2. Memorising certain Aayaat from Surat al-Kahf.

Al-Haafidh ad-Dhahabee said,

"Seeking refuge with Allaah from the Dajjaal is mentioned in many Mutawaatir Ahaadeeth (those with numerous lines of narrators). One way of doing this is to memorise ten Ayaat from Surat al-Kahf."

Abul-Diraa reported that the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, "Whoever memorises the first ten Aayaat of Surat al-Kahf will be protected from the Dajjaal." [Abu Daawood] [2]

3. Keeping away from the Dajjaal.

One way to be protected from the tribulation of the Dajjaal is to live in Madeenah or Makkah.

Abu Hurairah reported that the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said,

"There are angels standing at the gates of Madeenah; neither plague nor the Dajjaal can enter it." [Bukhaaree, Muslim]

Abu Bakr reported that the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, "The terror caused by the Dajjaal will not enter Madeenah. At that time it will have seven gates; there will be two angels guarding every gate."

[Bukhaaree] [3]

Anas said,

"The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, 'The Dajjaal will come to Madeenah, and he will find angels guarding it. Neither plague nor the Dajjaal will enter it, inshaa-Allaah.' " [Tirmidhee, Bukhaaree]

It has been proven in the Saheeh Ahaadeeth that the Dajjaal will not enter Makkah or Madeenah, because the angels will prevent him from entering these two places which are sanctuaries and are safe from him. When he camps at the salt-marsh (Sabkhah) of Madeenah, it will be shaken by three tremors - either physically or metaphorically - and every hypocrite will go out to join the Dajjaal. On that day, Madeenah will be cleansed of its dross and will be refined and purified; and Allaah knows best.

Footnotes

[1] Bukhaaree, Kitaab al-Janaa'iz, 2/124. Muslim, Kitaab al-Masaajid, 2/93.

[2] Muslim, Kitaab al-Musaafirun, 2/199. Abu Daawood, Kitaab al-Malaahim, (Hadeeth 4301), 11/401, 402.

[3] Bukhaaree, Baab Haram al-Madeenah, 1/28.

The Life And Deeds Of The Dajjaal

The Dajjaal will be a man, created by Allaah to be a test for people at the end of time. Many will be led astray through him, and many will be guided through him; only the sinful will be led astray.

Al-Haafidh Ibn 'Alee al-Abaar wrote in his book of history (at-Taareekh) that the Dajjaal's Kunyah (nickname or paternal title) would be Abu Yoosuf. [1]

Abu Bakrah said,

"The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, 'The Dajjaal's parents will remain childless for thirty years, then a one-eyed child will be born to them. He will be very bad and will cause a great deal of trouble. When he sleeps, his eyes will be closed but his heart (or mind) will still be active.' Then he described his parents: 'His father will be a tall and bulky man, with a long nose like a beak; his mother will be a huge, heavy-breasted woman.' " [2]

Abu Bakrah said,

"We heard that a child had been born to some of the Jews in Madeenah. Az-Zubayr ibn al-'Awaam and I went to see his parents, and found that they matched the description given by the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam). We saw the boy lying in the sun, covered with a blanket, murmuring to himself. We asked his parents about him, and they said, 'We remained childless for thirty years, then this one-eyed boy was born to us. He is very bad and causes a great deal of trouble.' When we went out, we passed the boy. He asked us, 'What were you doing?' We said, 'Did you hear us?' He said, 'Yes; when I sleep, my eyes are closed but my heart (mind) is still active.' That boy was Ibn Sayyaad." [Ahmad, Tirmidhee; this Hadeeth is not very strong] [3]

As we have already seen in the Saheeh Ahaadeeth, Maalik and others think that Ibn Sayyaad was not the Dajjaal; he was one of a number of "lesser dajjaals." Later he repented and embraced Islaam; Allaah knows best his heart and deeds.

The "greater" Dajjaal is the one mentioned in the Hadeeth of Faatimah bint Qays, which she narrated from the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam), from Tameem ad-Daaree, and which includes the story of the Jassaasah. The Dajjaal will be permitted to appear at the end of time, after the Muslims have conquered a Roman city called Constantinople. He will first appear in Isfahaan, in an area known as the Jewish quarter (al-Yahoodiyyah). He will be followed by seventy thousand Jews from that area, all of them armed. Seventy thousand Tatars and many people from Khuraasaan will also follow him. At first he will appear as a tyrannical king, then he will claim to be a prophet, then a lord. Only the most ignorant of men will follow him; the righteous and those guided by Allaah will reject him. He will start to conquer the world country by country, fortress by fortress, region by region, town by town; no place will remain unscathed except Makkah and Madeenah. The length of his stay on earth will be forty days: one day like a year, one day like a month, one day like a week, and the rest of the days like normal days, i.e. his stay will be approximately one year and two and a half months. Allaah will grant him many miracles, through which whoever He wills will be astray, and the faith of the believers will be strengthened. The descent of Jesus son of Mary, the true Messiah, will happen at the time of the Dajjaal, the false messiah. He will descend to the minaret in the east of Damascus. The believers and true servants of Allaah will gather to support him, and the Messiah Jesus son of Mary will lead them against the Dajjaal, who at that time will be heading for Bayt al-Maqdis (Jerusalem). He will catch up with him at 'Aqabah 'Afeeq. The Dajjaal will runaway from him, but Jesus will catch up with him at the gate of Ludd, and will kill him with his spear just as he is entering it. He will say to him, "I have to deal you a blow; you cannot escape." When the Dajjaal faces him, he will begin to dissolve like salt in water. So Jesus will kill him with his spear at the gate of Ludd, and he will die there, as many Saheeh Ahaadeeth indicate.

Majma' ibn Jaariyah is reported to have said,

"I heard the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) saying, 'The son of Mary will kill the Dajjaal at the gate of Ludd.' " [Tirmidhee] [4]

Footnotes

[1] Checker's Note: Reported as the saying of ash-Sha'bi. The reporter, Mujaahid ibn Sa'eed is weak.

[2] Checker's Note: Da'eef, al-Mishkat, 1st checking: 6445.

[3] Tirmidhee, Abwaab al-Fitan (Hadeeth 2350), 6/522, 523. Ahmad, Musnad, 5/40.

"When he sleeps, his eyes will be closed but his heart (or mind) will still be active" - means that his evil ideas will still come to him even while he is asleep.

Checker's Note: Da'eef due to Alee ibn Zaid ibn Jad'an.

[4] Tirmidhee, Abwaab al-Fitan (Hadeeth 2345), 6/513, 514.

Checker's Note: Saheeh, Saheeh at-Tirmidhee: 1829.

The Descent of Jesus at the End of Time

Abd Allaah ibn 'Amr said,

"The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, 'The Dajjaal will appear in my Ummah, and will remain for forty - "I cannot say whether he meant forty days, forty months or forty years." - Then Allaah will send Jesus (alayhi-salam), the son of Mary, who will resemble 'Urwah ibn Mas'ood. He will chase the Dajjaal and kill him. Then the people will live for seven years during which there will be no enmity between any two persons. Then Allaah will send a cold wind from the direction of Syria, which will take the soul of everyone who has the slightest speck of good or faith in his heart. Even if one of you were to enter the heart of a mountain, the wind would reach him there and take his soul. Only the most wicked people will be left; they will be as careless as birds, with the characteristics of beasts, and will have no concern for right and wrong. Satan will come to them in the form of man and will say, "Don't you respond?" They will say, "What do you order us to do?" He will order them to worship idols, and in spite of that they will have sustenance in abundance, and lead comfortable lives.

"Then the Trumpet will be blown, and everyone will tilt their heads to hear it. The first one to hear it will be a man busy repairing a trough for his camels. He and everyone else will be struck down. Then Allaah will send (or send down) rain like dew, and the bodies of the people (i.e. the dead) will grow out of it. Then the trumpet will be sounded again, and the people will get up and look around. Then it will be said, "O people, go to your Lord and account for yourselves." It will be said, "Bring out the people of Hell," and it will be asked, "How many are there?" - the answer will come: "Nine hundred and ninety-nine out of every thousand." "On that day a child will grow old and the shin will be laid bare." [al-Qalam (68):42] " [Muslim] [1]

Abu Hurairah said,

"The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, 'The son of Mary will come down as a just leader. He will break the cross, and kill the pigs. Peace will prevail and people will use their swords as sickles. Every harmful beast will be made harmless; the sky will send down rain in abundance, and the earth will bring forth its blessings. A child will play with a fox and not come to any harm; a wolf will graze with sheep and a lion with cattle, without harming them.' " [Ahmad] [2]

Abu Hurairah said,

"The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, 'By Him in Whose hand is my soul, surely the son of Mary will come down among you as a just ruler. He will break the cross, kill the pigs and abolish the Jizyah. Wealth will be in such abundance that no-one will care about it, and a single prostration in prayer will be better than the world and all that is in it.' "

Abu Hurairah said,

'If you wish, recite the Aayah: "And there is none of the People of the Book but must believe in him before his death; and on the Day of Judgement he will be a witness against them..." [an-Nisaa' (4):159] '

[Bukhaaree, Muslim] [3]

Abu Hurairah reported that the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said,

"The Prophets are like brothers; they have different mothers but their religion is one. I am the closest of all the people to Jesus son of Mary, because there is no other Prophet between him and myself. He will come again, and when you see him, you will recognise him. He is of medium height and his colouring is reddish-white. He will be wearing two garments, and his hair will look wet. He will break the cross, kill the pigs, abolish the Jizyah and call the people to Islaam. During his time, Allaah will end every religion and sect other than Islaam, and will destroy the Dajjaal. Then peace and security will prevail on earth, so that lions will graze with camels, tigers with cattle, and wolves with sheep; children will be able to play with snakes without coming to any harm. Jesus will remain for forty years, then die, and the Muslims will pray for him."

[Ahmad] [4]

Ibn Masood reported that the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said,

"On the night of the Israa' (night journey), I met my father Abraham, Moses and Jesus, and they discussed the Hour. The matter was referred first to Abraham, then to Moses, and both said, 'I have no knowledge of it.' Then it was referred to Jesus, who said, 'No-one knows about its timing except Allaah; what my Lord told me was that the Dajjaal will appear, and when he sees me he will begin to melt like lead. Allaah will destroy him when he sees me. The Muslims will fight against the Kaafirs, and even the trees and rocks will say, "O Muslim, there is a Kaafir hiding beneath me - come and kill him!" Allaah will destroy the Kaafirs, and the people will return to their own lands. Then Gog and Magog will appear from all directions, eating and drinking everything they find. The people will complain to me, so I will pray to Allaah and He will destroy them, so that the earth will be filled with their stench. Allaah will send rain which will wash their bodies into the sea. My Lord has told me that when that happens, the Hour will be very close, like a pregnant woman whose time is due, but her family do not know exactly when she will deliver.' "

[Ahmad, Ibn Maajah] [5]

Footnotes

[1] Muslim, Kitaab al-Fitan wa Ashraat al-Saa'ah, 8/201, 202.

[2] Ahmad, Musnad, 2/482, 483.

Checker's Note: The Tabi'e is Ziyad ibn Sa'd, who is mentioned by Ibn

Hibban in ath-Thiqat al-Bukhari and Abu Hatim did not speak for nor against him. Ibn Kathir says the report is good and strong.

[3] Bukhaaree, Kitaab al-Anbiyaa, 204, 205. Muslim, Kitaab al-Imaan, 1/93, 94.

[4] Ahmad, Musnad, 2/406.

Checker's Note: Saheeh as declared by al-Hakim and adh-Dhahabi.

Qatadah's hearing it is reported in a later narration in al-Musnad 2/436.

[5] Ahmad, Musnad, 1/375. Similar Hadeeth in Ibn Maajah, Kitaab al-Fitan (Hadeeth 4081), 2/1365, 1366.

Checker's Note: Da'eef, Da'eef al-Jami as-Sagheer: 4709. See Saheeh Muslim translation, no. 6924

Description of the Messiah Jesus son of Mary, Messenger of Allaah

Abu Hurairah said,

"The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, 'On the night of the Israa' (miraculous journey to Jerusalem) I met Moses - he was a slim man with wavy hair, and looked like a man from the Shanoo'ah tribe. I also met Jesus - he was of medium height and of a red complexion, as if he had just come out of the bath' " [Bukhaaree, Muslim] [1]

The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said,

"Whilst I was asleep, I saw myself (in a dream) making Tawaaf around the Ka'bah. I saw a brown-skinned man, with straight hair, being supported by two men, and with water dripping from his head. I said, 'Who is this?' They said, 'The son of Mary' I turned around and saw a fat, ruddy man, with curly hair, who was blind in his right eye; his eye looked like a floating grape. I asked, 'Who is this?' They said, 'The Dajjaal.' The one who most resembles him is Ibn Qatan." Az-Zuhri explained: Ibn Qatan was a man from Khuzaa'ah who died during the Jaahiliyyah (before the coming of Islaam). [Bukhaaree] [2]

Footnotes

[1] Bukhaaree, Kitaab al-Anbiyaa, 4/302. Muslim, Kitaab al-Imaan, 1/106, 107.

[2] Bukhaaree, ibid.

The Appearance of Gog and Magog

They (two tribes or peoples) will appear at the time of Jesus son of Mary, after the Dajjaal. Allaah will destroy them all in one night, in response to the supplication of Jesus.

Abu Hurairah reported that the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said,

"Everyday, Gog and Magog are trying to dig a way out through the barrier. When they begin to see sunlight through it, the one who is in charge of them says, 'Go back; you can carry on digging tomorrow,' and when they come back, the barrier is stronger than it was before. This will continue until their time comes and Allaah wishes to send them forth. They will dig until they begin to see sunlight, then the one who is in charge of them will say, 'Go back; you can carry on digging tomorrow, inshaa'-Allaah.' In this case he will make an exception by saying inshaa'-Allaah, thus relating the matter to the Will of Allaah. They will return on the following day, and find the hole as they left it. They will carry on digging and come out against the people. They will drink all the water, and the people will entrench themselves in their fortresses. Gog and Magog will fire their arrows into the sky, and they will fall back to earth with something like blood on them. Gog and Magog will say, 'We have defeated the people of earth, and overcome the people of heaven.' Then Allaah will send a kind of worm in the napes of their necks, and they will be killed by it..' 'By Him in Whose hand is the soul of Muhammad, the beasts of the earth will become fat.' " [1]

Gog and Magog are two groups of Turks, descended from Yaafith (Japheth), the father of the Turks, one of the sons of Noah. At the time of Abraham (alayhi-salam), there was a king called Dhu'l-Qarnayn. He performed Tawaaf around the Ka'bah with Abraham (alayhi-salam) when he first built it; he believed and followed him. Dhu'l-Qarnayn was a good man and a great king; Allaah gave him great power and he ruled the east and west. He held sway over all kings and countries, and travelled far and wide in both east and west. He travelled eastwards until he reached a pass between two mountains, through which people were coming out. They did not understand anything, because they were so isolated; they were Gog and Magog. They were spreading corruption through the earth, and harming the people, so the people sought help from Dhu'l-Qarnayn. They asked him to build a barrier between them and Gog and Magog. He asked them to help him to build it, so together they built a barrier by mixing iron, copper and tar.

Thus Dhu'l-Qarnayn restrained Gog and Magog behind the barrier. They tried to penetrate the barrier, or to climb over it, but to no avail. They could not succeed because the barrier is so huge and smooth. They began to dig, and they have been digging for centuries; they will continue to do so until the time when Allaah decrees that they come out. At that time the barrier will collapse, and Gog and Magog will rush out in all directions, spreading corruption, uprooting plants, killing people. When Jesus (alayhi-salam) prays against them, Allaah will send a kind of worm in the napes of their necks, and they will be killed by it.

Footnotes

[1] Tirmidhee, Abwaab al-Tafsir: Soorat al-Kahf (Hadeeth 5160), 8/597-99. Ibn Maajah, Kitaab al-Fitan, (Hadeeth 4080), 2/1364. Ahmad, Musnad, 2/510, 511.

Checker's Note: Saheeh, Silsilatul Ahadeeth as-Saheehah: 1735.

The destruction of the Ka'bah

At the end of time, Dhu'l-Suwayqatayn, who will come from Abyssinia (al-Habash), will destroy the Ka'bah in order to steal its treasure and Kiswah (cloth covering). The Ka'bah is the ancient building which was built by Abraham, and whose foundations were laid by Adam.

As Tafseer (interpretation) of the Aayah "Until the Gog and Magog (people) are let through (their barrier)" [al-Anbiyaa' (21):96], it was reported from Ka'b al-Ahbar that Dhu'l-Suwayqatayn will first emerge at the time of Jesus, son of Mary. Allaah will send Jesus at the head of a vanguard of between seven and eight hundred. While they are marching towards Dhu'l-Suwayqatayn, Allaah will send a breeze from the direction of Yemen, which will take the soul of every believer. Only the worst of people will be left, and they will begin to copulate like animals. Ka'b said: "At that time, the Hour will be close at hand." [1]

'Abd Allaah ibn 'Amr said,

"I heard the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) say, 'Dhu'l-Suwayqatayn from Abyssinia will destroy the Ka'bah and steal its treasure and Kiswah. It is as if I could see him now: he is bald-headed and has a distortion in his wrists. He will strike the Ka'bah with his spade and pick-axe.' " [Ahmad] [2]

It was reported from 'Abd Allaah ibn 'Umar that the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said,

"Leave the Abyssinians alone so long as they do not disturb you, for no-one will recover the treasure of the Ka'bah except Dhu'l-Suwayqatayn from Abyssinia." [Abu Daawood, in the chapter on the prohibition of provoking the Abyssinians] [3]

Ibn 'Abbaas narrated that the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said,

"It is as if I can see him now: he is black and his legs are widely spaced. He will destroy the Ka'bah stone by stone." [Ahmad] [4]

The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said,

"The Hour will not come until a man from Qahtaan appears and rules the people." [Muslim; similar Hadeeth in Bukhaaree]

This man could be Dhu'l-Suwayqatayn, or someone else, because this man comes from Qahtaan, while other reports say that Dhu'l-Suwayqatayn comes from Abyssinia; and Allaah knows best.

Abu Hurairah said,

"The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, 'Day and night will not come to an end until a freed man called Jahjaah holds sway.' " [Ahmad] [5]

This could be the name of Dhul-Suwayqatayn from Abyssinia; and Allaah knows best.

'Umar ibn al-Khattab reported that he heard the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) say:

"The people of Makkah will leave, and only a few people will pass through it. Then it will be resettled and rebuilt; then the people will leave it again, and no-one will ever return." [6]

Footnotes

[1] Concerning Dhu'l-Suwayqatayn, see: Bukhaaree: Kitaab al-Hajj, Baab Hadam al-Ka'bah (The Book of Pilgrimage, Chapter of the Destruction of the Ka'bah), 2/183. Muslim, Kitaab al-Fitan wa Ashraat al-Saa'ah, 8/183. Dhu'l-Suwayqatayn: al-Suwayqatayn is the diminutive of al-Saaqayn (legs); his legs are described as being "small" because they are thin. Thin legs are, in general, a characteristic of the Sudanese and people of the Horn of Africa.

[2] Ahmad, Musnad, 2/220.

Checker's Note: Da'eef isnaad. It contains the 'an'anah of Abu Zubair. The first part, up to 'treasure' is hasan, Silsilatul Ahadeeth as-Saheehah: 771.

[3] Abu Daawood, Kitaab al-Malaahim, (Hadeeth 4287), 11/423.

Checker's Note: Hasan, Saheeh Abee Daawood.

[4] Ahmad, Musnad, 1/227.

Checker's Note: Saheeh, also reported in al-Bukhaaree.

[5] Checker's Note: Saheeh, Ahmad, Muslim and at-Tirmidhee. Silsilatul Ahadeeth as-Saheehah: 7684.

[6] Ahmad, Musnad, 1/23.

Checker's Note: Da'eef, Da'eef al-Jami as-Sagheer: 3298. Da'eef due to Ibn Lahi'ah and 'an'anah of Abu Zubair

Madeenah will remain inhabited at the time of the Dajjaal

It has been proven in the Saheeh Ahaadeeth, as already stated, that the Dajjaal will not be able to enter Makkah and Madeenah, and that there will be angels at the gates of Makkah to ward him off and prevent him from entering.

It was reported from Abu Hurairah that the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said,

"Neither the Dajjaal nor plague will be able to enter Madeenah."

As mentioned above, the Dajjaal will camp outside Madeenah, and it will be shaken by three tremors. Every hypocrite and sinner will go out to join the Dajjaal, and every believer and Muslim will stay. That day will be called the Day of Purification (Yawm al-Khalaas). Most of those who go out to join the Dajjaal will be women. As the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said,

"Verily it (Madeenah) is good; its evil will be eliminated and its goodness will be obvious."

Allaah (subhaanahu wa ta'aala) said:

"Women impure are for men impure, and men impure for women impure, and women of purity are for men of purity, and men of purity are for women of purity..." [an-Noor (24):26]

Madeenah will remain inhabited during the days of the Dajjaal, and during the time of Jesus son of Mary (alayhi-salam), until he dies and is buried there. Then it will be destroyed.

'Umar ibn al-Khattab said,

"I heard the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) say, 'A rider will go around Madeenah and say, There used to be many Muslims here.' "

[Ahmad] [1]

Footnotes

[1] Ahmad, Musnad, 1/20.

Checker's Note: Da'eef isnaad due to Ibn Lahi'ah and `an`anah of Abu Zubair. The fact that Madinah will be deserted is reported from Abu Hurairah by al-Bukhaaree.

The Emergence of the Beast

Among the signs of the Hour will be the emergence of a beast from the earth. It will be very strange in appearance, and extremely huge; one cannot even imagine what it will look like. It will emerge from the earth and shake the dust from its head. It will have with it the ring of Solomon and the rod of Moses. People will be terrified of it and will try to run away, but they will not be able to escape, because such will be the decree of Allaah. It will destroy the nose of every unbeliever with the rod, and write the word "Kaafir" on his forehead; it will adorn the face of every believer and write the word "Mu'min" (true believer) on his forehead, and it will speak to people.

Allaah (subhaanahu wa ta'aala) said:

"And when the Word is fulfilled against them (the unjust), We shall produce from the earth a Beast to (face) them: it will speak to them..."

[an-Naml (27):82]

Ibn 'Abbaas, al-Hasan and Qataadah said that "It will speak to them" (tukallimuhum) means that it will address them. Ibn Jareer suggested that it means that the Beast will address them with the words "...for that mankind did not believe with assurance in Our Signs..." [an-Naml (27):82 - latter part of the Ayah]

Ibn Jareer reported this from 'Alee and 'Ata'. It was reported from Ibn 'Abbaas that tukallimuhum means that the Beast will cut them, i.e., it will write the word "Kaafir" on the forehead of the unbeliever. It was also reported from Ibn 'Abbaas that he will both address them and cut them; this suggestion incorporates both of the previous suggestions; and Allaah knows best.

We have already mentioned the Hadeeth of Hudhayfah ibn Usayd, in which the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) is reported to have said,

"The Hour will not come until you see ten signs: the smoke; the Dajjaal; the Beast; the sun rising from the West; the descent of Jesus son of Mary; Gog and Magog; and three land-slides - one in the East, one in the West, and one in Arabia, at the end of which fire will burst forth from the direction of Aden (Yemen) and drive people to the place of their final assembly."

Abu Hurairah said,

"The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, 'Hasten to do good deeds before six things happen: the rising of the sun from the West, the smoke, the Dajjaal, the Beast, the (death) of one of you or general tribulation.' " [Muslim]

Bareedah said,

"The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) took me to a place in the desert, near Makkah. It was a dry piece of land surrounded by sand. The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, 'The Beast will emerge from this place.' It was a very small area." [Ibn Maajah] [1]

It was reported from Abu Hurairah that the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said,

"The Beast of the Earth will emerge, and will have with it the rod of Moses and the ring of Solomon."

It was also reported that he said,

"(The Beast) will destroy the noses of the unbelievers with the ring, - so that people seated around one table will begin to address one another with the words "O Believer!" or "O Unbeliever!" (i.e., everyone's status will become clear) [Ibn Maajah] [2]

'Abd Allaah ibn 'Amr said,

"I memorised a Hadeeth from the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) which I have not forgotten since. I heard the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) say, 'The first of the signs (of the Hour) to appear will be the rising of the sun from the West and the appearance of the Beast before the people in the forenoon. Whichever of these two events happens first, the other will follow immediately.' " [Muslim] [3]

That is to say, these will be the first extraordinary signs. The Dajjaal, the descent of Jesus (alayhi-salam), the emergence of Gog and Magog, are less unusual in that they are all human beings. But the emergence of the Beast, whose form will be very strange, its addressing the people and classifying them according to their faith or unbelief, is something truly extraordinary. This is the first of the earthly signs, as the rising of the sun from the West is the first of the heavenly signs.

Footnotes

[1] Ibn Maajah, Kitaab al-Fitan, (Hadeeth 4267), 2/1352.

Checker's Note: Da'eef Jiddan (very weak). Ibn Maajah, no. 4067, Da'eef Ibn Maajah: 882.

[2] Similar Hadeeth narrated by Ibn Maajah in Kitaab al-Fitan, (Hadeeth 4061), 2 - 1351, 1352. Ahmad, Musnad, 2 - 295.

Checker's Note: Da'eef, Da'eef al-Jami as-Sagheer: 2413.

[3] Muslim, Kitaab al-Fitan, 8/202.

The Rising of the Sun from the West

Allaah (subhaanahu wa ta'aala) says:

"Do they then wait for anything other than that the angels should come to them, or that your Lord should come, or that some of the Signs of your Lord should come (i.e. portents of the Hour e.g., arising of the sun from the west)! The day that some of the Signs of your Lord do come, no good will it do to a person to believe then, if he believed not before, nor earned good (by performing deeds of righteousness) through his Faith. Say:

'Wait you! we (too) are waiting.'" [al-An'aam (6):158]

It was reported from Abu Sa'eed al-Khudree that the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) explained,

"The day that some of the Signs of your Lord do come, no good will it do to a person to believe then...", referring to the rising of the sun from the West. [Ahmad] [1]

Abu Hurairah said,

"The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, 'The Hour will not come until the sun rises from the West. When the people see it, whoever is living on earth will believe, but that will be the time when - No good will it do to a person to believe then, if he believed not before then' "

[Bukhaaree] [2]

It was also reported from Abu Hurairah that the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said,

"The Hour will not come until the sun rises from the West. When it rises and the people see it, they will all believe. But that will be the time when 'No good will it do to a person to believe then.' " [Bukhaaree] [3]

It was reported from Abu Hurairah that the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said,

"There are three things which, if they appear, 'No good will it do to a person to believe then, if he believed not before, nor earned good (by performing deeds of righteousness) through his Faith' They are: the rising of the sun from the West, the Dajjaal, and the Beast of the Earth."

[Ahmad, Muslim, Tirmidhee] [4]

Abu Dharr said,

"The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) asked me, 'Do you know where the sun goes when it sets?' I said, 'I do not know' He said, 'It travels until it prostrates itself beneath the Throne, and asks for permission to rise again. But a time will come when it will be told, 'Go back whence you came.' That will be the time when 'No good will it do to a person to believe then, if he believed not before, nor earned good (by performing deeds of righteousness) through his Faith' " [Bukhaaree] [5]

'Amr ibn Jareer said,

"Three Muslims were sitting with Marwaan in Madeenah, and heard him say, whilst talking about the Signs of the Hour, that the first of them would be the appearance of the Dajjaal. The three went to 'Abd Allaah ibn 'Amr, and told him what they had heard Marwaan say concerning the Signs. 'Abd Allaah said, 'Marwan has not said much. I memorised a Hadeeth like that from the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) which I have not forgotten since. I heard the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) say:

"The first of the signs will be the rising of the sun from the West, and the emergence of the Beast in the forenoon. Whichever of the two comes first, the other will follow immediately"

Then 'Abd Allaah, who was widely-read, said,

"I think that the first to happen will be the rising of the sun from the West.

Every time it sets, it goes beneath the Throne, prostrates itself, and seeks permission to rise again. A time will come when three times it will seek permission and will receive no reply, until, when part of the night has passed and it realises that even if it were given permission, it would not be able to rise on time, it will say: 'O my Lord, how far the rising-point is from me! What can I do for the people now?' Then it will seek permission to go back, and it will be told: 'Rise from where you are now' - and it will rise from the West." Then 'Abd Allaah recited the Aayah: "No good will it do to a person to believe then, if he believed not before, nor earned good (by performing deeds of righteousness) through his Faith." [Ahmad] [6]

Footnotes

[1] Ahmad, Musnad, 3/31.

Checker's Note: Saheeh, Saheeh at-Tirmidhee: 2455.

[2] Bukhaaree, Kitaab al-Tafsir, 6/73.

[3] Bukhaaree, ibid.

[4] Muslim, Kitaab al-Imaan, 1/96. Tirmidhee, Abwaab al-Tafsir (Hadeeth 5067), 8/449, 450. Ahmad, Musnad, 2/455, 446.

[5] Similar Hadeeth in Bukhaaree, Kitaab Bid' al-Khalq, 4/131.

[6] Ahmad, Musnad, 2/201.

Checker's Note: Saheeh, Musnad Imaam Ahmad, checking by Ahmad Shakir: 6881.

The Smoke which will appear at the End of Time

Masrooq said:

"While a man was giving a speech among the people of Kindah, he said, 'There will be smoke on the Day of Resurrection which will deprive the hypocrites of their hearing and sight, but the believers will only suffer something like a cold.' We were terrified, so we went to Ibn Masood, who was reclining. When he heard about this, he became angry and sat up, and said: 'O people, whoever knows a thing, let him say it; but whoever does not know, let him say, "Allaah knows best." It is a part of knowledge, when one does not know something, to say "Allaah knows best." Allaah (subhaanahu wa ta'aala) said to His Prophet Muhammad (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam):

"Say (O Muhammad sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam): 'No wage do I ask of you for this (the Qur'aan), nor am I one of the Mutakallifoon (those who pretend and fabricate things which do not exist).'" [Saad (38):86]

"Quraysh were being slow in embracing Islaam, so the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) prayed against them, saying, 'O Allaah, help me against them by sending seven years of famine like those of Joseph.' They were afflicted by a year of famine in which they were destroyed, and ate dead animals and bones. They began to see something like smoke between the sky and the earth. Abu Sufyan came and said, 'O Muhammad! You came to command us to keep good relations with our relatives, and your people have perished, so pray that Allaah may relieve them.'"

Then Ibn Mas'ood recited,

"Then wait you for the Day when the sky will bring forth a visible smoke. Covering the people, this is a painful torment. (They will say): "Our Lord! Remove the torment from us, really we shall become believers!" How can there be for them an admonition (at the time when the torment has reached them), when a Messenger explaining things clearly has already come to them. Then they had turned away from him (Messenger Muhammad sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) and said: "One (Muhammad sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) taught (by a human being), a madman!" Verily, We shall remove the torment for a while. Verily! You will revert."

[ad-Dukhaan (44):10-15]

Ibn Masood asked:

"Will their punishment in the Hereafter be removed so they can go back to their Kufr?"

Allaah (subhaanahu wa ta'aala) said:

"On the Day when We shall seize you with the greatest grasp. Verily, We will exact retribution." [ad-Dukhaan (44):16]

...and soon will come the inevitable (punishment)!" [al-Furqaan (25):77]

These Ayaat refer to the Day (Battle) of Badr. Allaah (subhaanahu wa ta'aala) said:

"Alif Laam Meem. The Romans have been defeated. In the nearer land (Syria, Iraq, Jordan, and Palestine), and they, after their defeat, will be victorious. Within three to nine years." [ar-Room (30): 1-4] [Bukhaaree]

[1]

This speaker's suggestion - that the idea that the smoke would be on the Day of Resurrection was not a good one - made Ibn Masood react angrily. But the smoke will appear before the Day of Resurrection; it will be one of the signs, which are: the Beast, the Dajjaal, the Smoke, and Gog and Magog, as the Ahaadeeth narrated from Abu Sareehah, Abu Hurairah and other Sahaabah indicate.

As mentioned in the Saheeh Ahaadeeth, the fire which will appear before the Day of Resurrection will burst forth from the direction of Aden, and drive the people to the place of their final assembly. It will move with them and halt with them, and will devour any who lag behind.

Footnote

[1] Bukhaaree, Kitaab at-Tafsir - Soorat ar-Room, 6/142, 143

Other Events which will precede the Hour

It was reported from Abu Sa'eed al-Khudree that the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said,

"Thunderbolts will increase so much as the Hour approaches that when a man comes to a people, he will ask, 'Who amongst you was struck by a thunderbolt this morning?' and they will say, 'So-and-so and so-and-so was struck.'" [Ahmad] [1]

Heavy rain before the Day of Resurrection

It was reported from Abu Hurairah that the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said,

"The hour will not come until there has been rain which will destroy all dwellings except tents." [2]

We have already mentioned many Ahaadeeth about the signs of the Hour. Now we will turn our attention to some Ahaadeeth which could indicate that the Hour is close at hand.

It was reported from Abu Hurairah that the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said:

"The Hour will not come until the following events have come to pass: people will compete with one another in constructing high buildings; two big groups will fight one another, and there will be many casualties - they will both be following the same religious teaching; earthquakes will increase; time will pass quickly; afflictions and killing will increase; nearly thirty dajjals will appear, each of them claiming to be a messenger from Allaah; a man will pass by a grave and say, 'Would that I were in your place'; the sun will rise from the West; when it rises and the people see it, they will all believe, but that will be the time when 'No good will it do to a person to believe then, if it believed not before...' [al-An'aam (6):158]; and a wealthy man will worry lest no-one accept his Zakaat." [Bukhaaree, Muslim]

It was reported from Anas that the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said:

"Among the signs of the Hour are the following: knowledge will decrease and ignorance will prevail; fornication and the drinking of wine will be common; the number of men will decrease and the number of women will increase, until one man will look after fifty women." [Bukhaaree] [3]

'Aa'ishah said,

"I heard the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) say, 'Day and night will not pass away until people begin to worship Laat and 'Uzzaa' (two goddesses of pre-Islaamic Arabic). I said, 'O Messenger of Allaah, I thought that when Allaah revealed the Aayah "It is He Who has sent His Messenger (Muhammad sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) with guidance and the religion of truth (Islaam), to make it superior over all religions even though the Mushrikoon (polytheists, pagans, idolaters, disbelievers in the Oneness of Allaah) hate (it)" [at-Tawbah (9):33], it implied that (this promise) would be fulfilled.' The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, 'It will happen as Allaah wishes. Then Allaah will send a pleasant breeze, which will take everyone who has as much faith as a grain of mustard-seed in his heart. Only those with no goodness in them will be left, and they will revert to the religion of their forefathers.' " [Muslim] [4] It was reported from Abu Hurairah that one day, while the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) was sitting with the people, a Bedouin came to him and asked him about Eemaan and Islaam, then he asked, "O Messenger of Allaah, when will the Hour be?" He said, "The one who is asked about it does not know more than the one who asks, but I tell you about its signs. When a slave gives birth to her mistress, and when the bare-footed and naked become the chiefs of the people - these are among the signs of the Hour. There are five things which no-one knows except Allaah." Then he recited:

"Verily the knowledge of the Hour is with God (alone). It is He Who sends down rain, and He Who knows what is in the wombs. Nor does anyone know what it is that he will earn on the morrow: nor does anyone know in what land he is to die. Verily God is All-Knowing, All Aware." [Luqman (31):34]

Then the man went away, and the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, "Call him back to me," but when the people went to call him, they could not see anything. The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, "That was Gabriel, who came to teach the people their religion." [Bukhaaree, Muslim] [5]

"The bare-footed and naked paupers will compete with one another in constructing high buildings" means that they will become the chiefs of people. They will become rich, and their only concern will be to compete in constructing high buildings. This is as in the Hadeeth we shall see later:

"The Hour will not come until the happiest people in the world will be the depraved sons of the depraved."

It was reported from Abu Sa'eed that the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said:

"The Hour will not come until the time when a man will leave his home, and his shoes or whip or stick will tell what is happening to his family."

[Ahmad] [6]

It was reported from Abu Sa'eed that the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said:

"By Him in Whose hand is my soul, the Hour will not come until wild animals talk to men, and a man speaks to his whip or his shoe, and his thigh will tell him about what happened to his family after he left." [7]

Anas said,

"We were discussing the fact that the Hour would not come until there is no rain, the earth does not produce crops, and fifty women will be cared for by one man; and if a woman passes by a man, he will look at her and say, 'This woman once had a husband.' " [Ahmad] [8]

Abu Hurairah said:

"The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said: 'The Hour will not come until time passes so quickly that a year will be like a month, a month like a week, a week like a day, a day like an hour, and an hour like the time it takes for a palm-leaf to burn.' " [Ahmad] [9]

Abu Hurairah said,

"The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said: 'The world will not pass away until the one who enjoys it the most is the depraved son of the depraved.' " [Ahmad] [10]

Abu Hurairah said,

"The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said, 'Before the Hour comes, there will be years of deceit, in which a truthful person will be disbelieved and a liar will be believed; and the insignificant will have a say.' " [Ahmad] [11]

Abu Hurairah said:

"I heard the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) say: 'The Hour will not come until the sheep with horns no longer fights the sheep without horns.' " [Ahmad] [12]

It was reported from Abu Hurairah that the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said,

"The Hour will not come until wealth increases so much that a wealthy man will be worried lest no-one accept his Sadaqah; knowledge will be taken away; time will pass quickly; tribulations will appear; and there will be much Harj." The people asked, "What is Harj, O Messenger of Allaah?" He said, "Killing, killing." [Ahmad] [13]

It was reported from Abu Hurairah that the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said,

"By Him Who sent me with the Truth, this earth will not pass away until people are afflicted with landslides, are pelted with stones, and are transformed into animals." The people asked, "When will that be, O Messenger of Allaah?" He said, "When you see women riding in the saddle, when singers are common, when bearing false witness becomes widespread, and when men lie with men and women with women." [14]

Taariq ibn Shihaab said,

"We were sitting with 'Abd Allaah ibn Mas'ood, when a man came and told us that the time for prayer had come. So we got up and went to the mosque... After the prayer, a man came to 'Abd Allaah ibn Mas'ood and said, 'As-salaam 'alayka (Peace be upon you), O Abu 'Abd ar-Rahmaan'. 'Abd Allaah answered, 'Allaah and His Messenger have spoken the truth.' When we went back, we asked one another, 'Did you hear the answer he gave? Who is going to ask him about it?' I said, 'I will ask him'; so I asked him when he came out. He narrated from the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam):

'Before the Hour comes, there will be a special greeting for the people of distinction; trade will become so widespread that a woman will help her husband in business; family ties will be cut; the giving of false witness will be common, while truthful witness will be rare; and writing will be widespread.' [Ahmad] [15]

Footnotes

[1] Ahmad, Musnad, 3/64, 65.

Checker's Note: Da'eef isnaad due to Muhammad ibn Mus'ab.

[2] Ahmad, Musnad, 2/262.

Checker's Note: Saheeh, Musnad Imaam Ahmad, checking by Ahmad Shakir: 7554 and Majma' az-Zawa'id of al-Haythamee: 7/331.

[3] Bukhaaree, Kitaab al-'Ilm, 1/30, 31.

[4] Muslim, Kitaab al-Fitan 8/182.

[5] Bukhaaree, Kitaab al-Imaan, 1/19; Kitaab at-Tafsir - Soorat Luqmaan, 6/144. Muslim, Kitaab al-Imaan, 1/30, 31.

[6] Ahmad, Musnad, 3/88, 89.

Checker's Note: Saheeh.

[7] Ahmad, Musnad, 3/82, 84.

Checker's Note: Saheeh, Silsilatul Ahadeeth as-Saheehah: 122.

[8] Ahmad, Musnad, 3/286.

Checker's Note: Saheeh, reported by Ahmad, Abu Ya'la and al-Bazzar. Majma' az-Zawa'id of al-Haythamee: 7/333 and Kashful Astar bi Zawa'id al-Bazzar of al-Haythamee: 3415.

[9] Ahmad, Musnad, 3/358.

Checker's Note: Saheeh, Saheeh al-Jami as-Sagheer: 7422.

[10] Ahmad, Musnad, 2/358.

Checker's Note: Saheeh, Saheeh al-Jami as-Sagheer: 7272.

[11] Ahmad, Musnad, 2/238.

Checker's Note: Hasan, Silsilatul Ahadeeth as-Saheehah: 1887.

[12] Ahmad, Musnad, 2/442.

Checker's Note: Da'eef?? [not quite sure] due to as-Salt ibn Quwaid; an-Nasaa'ee said, "His hadith is munkar."

[13] Ahmad, Musnad, 2/313.

Checker's Note: Saheeh, Musnad Imaam Ahmad, checking by Ahmad Shakir: 8120, 8121.

[14] al-Haythamee, Kitaab al-Fitan.

Checker's Note: Da'eef, related by al-Bazzar and at-Tabaraanee in al-Awsat. It is weak due to Sulaiman ibn Daawood al-Yamami who is matrook (abandoned). Majma' az-Zawa'id of al-Haythamee.

[15] Ahmad, Musnad, 1/407.

Checker's Note: Saheeh, Silsilatul Ahadeeth as-Saheehah: 648.

Description of the People who will be Alive at the End of Time

It was reported from 'Abd Allaah ibn 'Amr that the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said,

"The Hour will not come until Allaah takes away the best people on earth; only the worst people will be left; they will not know any good or forbid any evil." [Ahmad] [1]

'Abd Allaah ibn Mas'ood said,

"I heard the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) say: 'Eloquence can be bewitching; the worst of the people are those upon whom the Hour will come while they are still alive, and those who turn graves into mosques.'

" [Ahmad] [2]

It was reported from Anas that the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said,

"The Hour will not come until no-one on earth says 'Laa ilaaha illaa Allaah.'" [Ahmad] [3]

It was also reported from Anas that the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) said:

"The Hour will not come until no-one on earth says, 'Allaah, Allaah.'" [Ahmad] [4]

[Ahmad] [4]

There are two suggestions as to the meaning of the phrase, "until no-one on earth says 'Allaah, Allaah'":

It could mean that no-one will forbid evil, or try to correct another if he sees him doing something wrong. We have already come across this in the Hadeeth of 'Abd Allaah ibn 'Amr:

"Only the worst people will be left; they will not know any good or forbid any evil."

It could mean that Allaah will no longer be mentioned, and His Name will not be known; this will be part of the prevalent corruption and Kufr, as in the previous Hadeeth,

"Until no-one on earth says 'Laa ilaaha illaa Allaah."

'Aa'ishah said,

"The Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) came in, saying 'O 'Aa'ishah, your people will be the first of my Ummah to join me.' When he sat down, I said, 'O Messenger of Allaah, may I be sacrificed for you! When you came in, you were saying something which scared me.' He asked, 'What was that?' I said, 'You said that my people would be the first of your Ummah to join you.' He said, 'Yes.' I asked, 'Why is that?' He said, 'Death will be widespread among them, and their relatives will be jealous of them.' I said, 'How will people be after that?' He said, 'Like locusts: the strong will devour the weak, until the Hour comes.' " [Ahmad] [5]

'Albaa' al-Salamee said,

"I heard the Prophet (sal-Allaahu 'alayhe wa sallam) say: 'The Hour will only come upon the worst of the people.' " [Ahmad] [6]

Footnotes

[1] Ahmad, Musnad, 1/454.

Checker's Note: Da'eef isnaad due to `an`anah of al-Hasan al-Basree.

[2] Ahmad, Musnad, 3/268.

Checker's Note: Saheeh, Musnad Imaam Ahmad, checking by Ahmad Shakir: 4342.

[3] Ahmad, Musnad, 3/268.

Checker's Note: Saheeh, Tahdheerus Saajid of Shaykh al-Albaanee, pg. 119.

[4] Ahmad, Musnad, 3/107.

Checker's Note: Saheeh, Saheeh al-Jami as-Sagheer: 7420.

[5] Ahmad, Musnad, 6/81.

Checker's Note: Saheeh, Silsilatul Ahadeeth as-Saheehah: 1953.

[6] Ahmad, Musnad, 3/499.

Checker's Note: Saheeh, Mustadrak of al-Hakim: 4/496. Declared saheeh by al-Hakim and agreed to by adh-Dhahaabee

THE SIGNS BEFORE THE DAY OF JUDGEMENT

Author: Al-Haafidh Ibn Katheer Hadeeth Checking: Abu Talhah Daawood Burbank

41

www.hcis.tk

www.harrowcollege.tk

This comment applies to all the places in which Bashier has used the old version of the Encyclopaedia of Islam instead of the newer one. This comment applies also to Bashier's explanation of ta'ṣīl and tanzīh (both terms are used to indicate a transcendent God who has no resemblance whatsoever to his Creation), which unfortunately also relies on a small and not sufficiently developed reference from the shorter version of *EI*¹.

The index is not complete: it lacks Arabic terms, and one finds them only under the English translation. There are a few spelling errors in the Arabic transliteration (e.g., p. 128: al-Ākhir and not al-Akhir; p. 113: qalb and not qalp). But in general Bashier's well-written and courageous book is a fine addition to previous research on Ibn al-ʿArabī in its attempt to shed light on the concept of barzakh. It deserves to be a starting point for future dialogue between scholars and philosophers, regardless of their familiarity with medieval Arabic thought.

LIVNAT HOLTZMAN
BAR-ILAN UNIVERSITY, ISRAEL

its spaces, and its uses? Something that would place the Nasrid palace firmly against the backdrop, not of Washington Irving's tales or John Frederick Lewis' gypsies, or Henri Regnault's muscle-bound executioner, but of the vibrant political, intellectual, courtly, poetic, social and religious culture that created it? This reviewer can think of none.

In truth, no fingers can be pointed at Irwin's vacillation between fact and fantasy, or at his eschewing of romantic fictions and exaggerations, only to trip over one and then another in the very next chapter. His laundry-list evocation of the complexities of Nasrid literary and intellectual culture, followed by a swift and seemingly contradictory return to universalizing musings about the cheap and ephemeral nature of these fantasies-in-stucco engendered by the Nasrids' own consciousness of the imminence of their end, is very much par for the course: specialists, with very few exceptions, have offered no better. It is indeed somewhat ironic that a fully contextualized study of the best preserved medieval Islamic palace (albeit located, as Irwin observes, in Europe [p. 3]) has yet to be undertaken, that no scholar has yet taken a stab at reading its ornamental program through the varied lenses offered by Nasrid poetics, philosophy, or Sufi aesthetics. One wonders if this is perhaps because, ultimately, we as scholars are just as seduced by the palace's constructed "mystery" as is Doris Lessing, who lauds Irwin's study as "captur[ing] and convey[ing] the mysterious attractions of the Alhambra."

But the stunning ornamental tour de force which is the Palace of the Lions is—must be—much more than just trompe l'oeil and sensationalism. Recent studies of other key buildings and their contexts in Islamic art have offered us provocative forays beyond the Western dead-end which is iconography, and toward illuminating readings of these monuments within the framework intended by patrons and (perhaps) artisans for very specific publics. Indeed, Irwin—who is not primarily an art historian, and does not claim to be—hints at something that smacks very much of frustration when faced with academia's construction of an impenetrable "stucco mystery" out of a place which was, in his words, "designed by and for intellectuals with mystical inclinations" (p. 99). He has laid out, in abbreviated form, in the final pages of his second chapter and throughout his third, what other scholars have laboriously reconstructed on the basis of original sources: a unique, sophisticated, original, and complex intellectual culture that must have informed (and doubtless been informed by) the aesthetics of the Alhambra's beloved muqarnas and ornamental programs. It is up to art historians now to remove the veil of mystery, however much we may enjoy luxuriating beneath it, and to weave together building and context. It would indeed be a great pleasure for this reviewer to address such a book in such a journal as this.

CYNTHIA ROBINSON
CORNELL UNIVERSITY

Ibn al-ʿArabi's Barzakh: The Concept of the Limit and the Relationship between God and the World.

By SALMAN H. BASHIER. Albany: STATE UNIVERSITY OF NEW YORK PRESS, 2004. Pp. xii + 206. $45.

A systematic analysis of one of the key terms in Ibn al-ʿArabi's monistic theory of the unity of existence (wahdat al-wujūd), set in a thorough description of the teachings of Plato as well as those of medieval Arabic thinkers, is central to this challenging book. The enigmatic term barzakh (translated by Bashier as "the Limit"), which is mentioned three times in the Qurʾān and in some eschatological traditions, is used by the Andalusian mystic thinker Ibn al-ʿArabi (d. 1240) to denote the concept of an immutable entity which separates the divine from creation and at the same time unites them. Bashier has recognized the importance of the concept of barzakh in Ibn al-ʿArabi's mystical philosophy. By dedicating his book to this concept, he provides a necessary outlook on a subject which was far from being exhausted in previous research. He wishes to relate Ibn al-ʿArabi's thought to Islamic theology and philosophy, in spite of the latter's proclaimed distance from and reservations about the rational philosophers. His argument in favor of comparing Ibn al-ʿArabi's thought to that of the Islamic philosophers hits the mark. As he puts it, "why [should] a certain scholar . . . establish his view concerning Ibn al-ʿArabī's stand from the philosophical thought on the basis of some anecdote that depicts him tossing away a philosophy book, for instance, and not on the basis of his words in defense of philosophical activity. In a sense, this selective reading of Ibn al-ʿArabī seems as rather taking him out of context?" (pp. 143–44).

Situating Ibn al-ʿArabī's thought in the context of Islamic philosophy on the one hand and Greek philosophy on the other is the task Bashier has taken upon himself in this work, although he is aware of the criticism this step might raise. He admits that Ibn al-ʿArabī's tortuous writing style makes it very difficult to refine a definite argument and situate it in a coherent philosophical discussion. Bashier's solution is to bring statements from various works of Ibn al-ʿArabī and put them together as if they were asserted in one place. This solution is compatible with the aim of his research, although it does not always help to clarify the subject in question.

Apart from dealing with the barzakh and its place among the main themes in Ibn al-ʿArabī's thought, and after taking upon himself the task of describing the equivalents of the barzakh notion in the teachings of Ibn al-ʿArabī's predecessors, Bashier seems to have a much more ambitious aim. Following William Chittick in his introduction to The Sufi Path of Knowledge, Bashier aims to present Ibn al-ʿArabī's thought as a worthy substitute for the Western intellectual tradition of rationalism. Thus, Ibn al-ʿArabī's notion of the barzakh is taken almost as a test case designed to demonstrate Bashier's assertion that "present philosophical thought is undergoing a serious crisis," a crisis that might be resolved if only modern philosophers were aware of the intellectual value of medieval and ancient thought, which "can still be our guide in ridding us of our present intellectual predicament" (p. 145). This and other statements in the same vein give the impression that the book is addressed to a much broader audience than the readers of Ibn al-ʿArabī, whether students or researchers, who are familiar with medieval Arabic thought.

Describing the concept of barzakh as Ibn al-ʿArabī's solution to a controversy between Ṣūfī thinkers on the one hand and mutakallimūn and falāsifa on the other over the problem of the origin of the world, is one of the greatest achievements of the book. The barzakh, as Bashier puts it, is "an imaginal mirror that represents the eternal God as eternal and the temporally originated world as temporally originated, although in itself it is neither eternal nor temporally originated. The barzakh differentiates between God and the world. In virtue of this differentiating activity, God may be represented to our knowledge as eternal and the world as temporally originated. But the barzakh plays also the complementary role of the provider for the context of unity, in which context both God and the world can be represented as both eternal and temporally originated" (p. 12). Bashier examines Ibn al-ʿArabī's notion of the barzakh in two modes of reflection: one emphasizing separation and discontinuity, and the other emphasizing connection and continuity. These apparently contradictory ideas are complementary, in the eyes of both Ibn al-ʿArabī and Bashier.

As a preliminary step towards leading the reader to a proper understanding of Ibn al-ʿArabī's concept of barzakh, Bashier emphasizes what he calls "one of Ibn Rushd's greatest achievements and yet his most misunderstood discovery that truth is one and universal, even though it may be expressed in contradictory ways" (p. 59). Thus philosophers who hold that the world is infinite see one side of the truth, while theologians who hold the view that the world is finite see the other side. Both are correct, "since the world can be considered as both finite and infinite from two different perspectives, or according to two different rational interpretations." This twofold point of view about the world is a necessary tool in deciphering the concept of barzakh.

The author is gifted with the ability to tell an exciting story, a talent revealed in the intriguing opening of the book: a delightful anecdote of the watchman in the Sultan's palace, a professional musician and a dream of gypsies, time, and music (pp. 1–2). The exciting atmosphere is maintained particularly in chapters four through eight, which analyze the thought of Ibn al-ʿArabī. However, since Bashier aims to demonstrate the philosophical heritage that nourished Ibn al-ʿArabī's thought, the reader is required to traverse three rather long chapters, while Ibn al-ʿArabī makes his actual significant appearance in the book only on p. 60.

In the first two chapters, which are a vital exposition of Ibn al-ʿArabī's barzakh, Bashier dedicates too much space to various views of modern scholars. For example, the second chapter deals with the concept of creation ex nihilo. Bashier elaborates the views of Netton, Wolfson, Leaman, Urvoy, Arnaldez, and Burrell at the beginning of the chapter. Although this is a good indication of his meticulous reading and his profound knowledge of current research, it is a clear case of overkill. On the other hand, his insistence on dedicating a relatively extensive space (two chapters) to Ibn al-ʿArabī's predecessors in both Greek philosophy and Islamic philosophy and theology is admirable.

Chapter five is the most challenging chapter of the book. Here Bashier sets forth the notion that Ibn al-ʿArabī drew the concept of barzakh from the Qurʾān and ḥadīth literature as well as from Platonic thinkers. He begins with an interesting example which demonstrates Ibn al-ʿArabī's concept of the grave as "the intermediate state in which the dead person lingers from the time of his death until the time of resurrection" (p. 77). This concept is reinforced by a series of prophetic traditions which describe the grave as a pleasure garden for the believer and a cave of fire for the heretic; it is also to be found in the theological writings of several medieval thinkers such as al-Ghazālī (d. 1111; al-Ghazālī's impact on Ibn al-ʿArabī is discussed on pp. 81–83), Ibn Taymiyya (d. 1328), and Ibn Qayyim al-Jawziyya (d. 1350). Ibn al-ʿArabī sees the grave as barzakh, i.e., a place in which "spiritual entities are manifested in corporeal forms. Thus, the dead person may see his deeds in a perfect form if in his lifetime he managed to perfect himself through obedience to the Law, whereas the opposite happens if the person neglects his duty as a believer" (p. 79). However, as Bashier points out (pp. 172–73, n. 20), this notion is not alien to traditional Islam. In fact, Ibn al-ʿArabī rephrases a tradition that is found in the eschatological section of some ḥadīth compilations, according to which spiritual entities take on material form in the barzakh.

Ibn al-ʿArabī's definition of the barzakh, Bashier explains, is tentative. "For the barzakh is the very thing that makes the activity of defining possible. This is the meaning of his words that the separation between the things (defining) and the separating factor (that which defines) become manifest as one in entity. Understanding the definition of barzakh is identical to differentiating between things" (p. 87). Ibn al-ʿArabī's argument leads to the paradoxical conclusion that when things identify themselves, they differentiate themselves from all relations with the Other, "including the relations of difference from Other." "But the only way Something can differentiate itself from difference to Other is by making Other disappear in it, that is, by uniting with Other. Hence, by completely differentiating itself from Other, Something completely unites with Other" (p. 88).

This argument, as Ibn al-ʿArabī himself states, is anything but rationalistic. The way Bashier explains this paradox, as a golden mean of two contradicting assumptions, is commendable, and so are his explanations of other arguments throughout the book. His method of building the explanation step by step makes the complex concepts of Ibn al-ʿArabī accessible and not beyond comprehension. For example, when Bashier presents Ibn al-ʿArabī's concept of aʿyān thābita (fixed entities) through the concept of barzakh, he states that Ibn al-ʿArabī "thinks that the paradoxical reality of things comes to them by virtue of their being images of their immutable or fixed entities (aʿyān thābita), which are barzakhs between them and the Real" (p. 89). This succinct description follows a thorough discussion of Plato's theory of the Forms, so that the reader views Ibn al-ʿArabī's barzakh as an Arabic manifestation of Plato's Forms added to the Muʿtazilite concept of the maʿdūm (nonexistent). Bashier's dealing with Wolfson's and Chittick's reservations concerning this triple knot (Wolfson's reservation about identifying the Muʿtazilite concept with the Platonic Forms, and Chittick's reservation about identifying Ibn al-ʿArabī's concept with the Platonic Forms) is fair enough (p. 98). Bashier thinks that the Muʿtazilite notion of al-maʿdūm, Ibn al-ʿArabī's aʿyān thābita, and Plato's Forms are basically the same ideas (p. 98).

Chapter seven deals with one of the most provocative notions in Ibn al-ʿArabī's thought, that of the Perfect Man (al-insān al-kāmil; unfortunately this term is not referred to in this chapter). Here Bashier seems to give up the discussion of the philosophical and theological roots of this notion, and concentrates on the concept of the Perfect Man as a specific example of the barzakh between the divine and creation. This example is crystallized through an interesting analysis of a lengthy paragraph from al-Futūḥāt al-Makkiyya, which describes the human soul's journey towards the love of God. Bashier's interpretation clarifies a great deal with respect to this highly complex paragraph, and leads the reader towards a synthesis between the notion of the Perfect Man and that of the barzakh: "Man begins to worship God. His worship, however, is mixed with love, fear and desire. He cannot rid himself of the elements of fear and desire in his worship until he attains a stage in which he sees God manifested in

This comment applies to all the places in which Bashier has used the old version of the Encyclopaedia of Islam instead of the newer one. This comment applies also to Bashier's explanation of ta'ṣīl and tanzīh (both terms are used to indicate a transcendent God who has no resemblance whatsoever to his Creation), which unfortunately also relies on a small and not sufficiently developed reference from the shorter version of *EI*¹.

The index is not complete: it lacks Arabic terms, and one finds them only under the English translation. There are a few spelling errors in the Arabic transliteration (e.g., p. 128: al-Ākhir and not al-Akhir; p. 113: qalb and not qalp). But in general Bashier's well-written and courageous book is a fine addition to previous research on Ibn al-ʿArabī in its attempt to shed light on the concept of barzakh. It deserves to be a starting point for future dialogue between scholars and philosophers, regardless of their familiarity with medieval Arabic thought.

LIVNAT HOLTZMAN
BAR-ILAN UNIVERSITY, ISRAEL

both the natural and the spiritual aspects of reality. Once Man has arrived at this stage, he becomes a synthesis of the natural (manifest) and the spiritual (nonmanifest) aspects of reality. As such, he will have attained a state of perfection and become a barzakh between the Real . . . and His creation" (p. 116). The second part of the chapter is dedicated to a detailed comparison between Ibn al-ʿArabī's notion of the Supreme Barzakh and the notion of the Tao, based on Toshihiko Izutsu's research on Sūfism and Taoism. Although Bashier prefaces a warning to this discussion about the difficulties which the reader might come across in the next pages, he makes his point briefly and clearly, especially when he deals with Ibn al-ʿArabī's interpretation of Qurʾān 8:17 (p. 25). What this chapter lacks, in my opinion, is a more general discussion of the notion of the Perfect Man in Ibn al-ʿArabī's thought, although much concerning this notion is clarified and discussed in chapter eight.

In view of the rather lengthy treatment of contemporary thinkers' views, it is a pity that Bashier decides to shorten his discussion when it comes to the texts and concepts of Ibn al-ʿArabī. One example is his dealing with the fifteenth chapter of al-Futūḥāt al-Makkiyya, "On the Poles and Realizers in Knowledge of Breaths and Their Secrets." A key term in the discussion is maʿrifat al-anfās ("knowledge of breaths"). Bashier indicates that this phrase stands for "the knowledge of Creative Imagination" (p. 61). However, instead of giving a thorough explanation of this concept, Bashier sends the reader to H. Corbin's Alone with the Alone: Creative Imagination in the Sūfism of Ibn ʿArabī (Princeton Univ. Press, 1969). After presenting the views of scholars on various matters, the decision to give a short and unsatisfactory explanation is quite puzzling.

Bashier deals with the fifteenth chapter of the Futūḥāt in the context of the encounter between al-Khaḍīr and Moses; but his treatment is inconsistent and confusing. For example, he does not indicate that this encounter is not described in the fifteenth chapter of the Futūḥāt, nor that this chapter does not include a discussion of Moses' position, but Bashier inserts it all the same, without indicating the source. The story appears only in the commentaries on Qurʾān 18:60–82, none of which are mentioned by Bashier. Only on p. 62 does he cite the relevant Qurʾānic verses, but mistakenly ascribes them to Sūra 16 instead of Sūra 18. More careful editing could have avoided such unfortunate mistakes. The translation of this Qurʾānic passage is a mixture of Arberry's and Yūsuf ʿAlī's, neither of whom are credited for their efforts.

It is a pity that Bashier does not introduce more Arabic terms when citing from Ibn al-ʿArabī's works, even in translation. Inserting the Arabic terms in the body of the translation is crucial to the understanding of the thought of any scholar, let alone Ibn al-ʿArabī, whose whole system of thought is based on giving fresh and unconventional interpretations of familiar terms. One obvious example is his understanding of the terms tashbīḥ and tanzīḥ, which is by no means coeval with the familiar use of these terms. On pp. 24–25 Bashier cites a passage from the Futūḥāt which deals with these terms. Although this citation is taken from G. T. Elmore's translation, the Arabic terms should have been inserted here. When a text includes terms like "Reality," "Qualities," "essence," "quiddity," etc., it is important to give the Arabic terms in parentheses, especially when there is no wide acceptance of the proper translation for certain terms; "quiddity" is probably the most conspicuous example.

Bashier makes an interesting point when dealing with the mental state of the mystic, which is represented by the word ḥāl. The mystic ḥāl represents "a link that connects the created with the Creator," and is related to the term taḥawwul, which is the constant transmutation of the opposite elements of the Universe. This reminds Bashier of ḥāl as is used by the mutakallimūn: a quality of an existent being which "is neither existent nor nonexistent" (pp. 68–69). The connection Bashier makes between the two terms, which are apparently taken from two different fields of thought, is impressive, and sets a fine example for exploiting a kalāmīc notion familiar to Ibn al-ʿArabī in order to clarify a mystical term. It is obvious that Ibn al-ʿArabī's concept of the perpetual creation (al-khalq al-mutajaddid) of the world is drawn from Ashʿarite kalām. Thus his use of the term ḥāl encompasses both the theological as well as the mystical point of view. Here Bashier makes the dividing line between these two fields of thought blurred if not nonexistent; this approach is compatible with Ibn al-ʿArabī's own writings. However, this line of thought needs further investigation, because Bashier relies on the definition of ḥāl as it appears in the Shorter Encyclopaedia of Islam. Scholarship in the field of theology has advanced greatly since D. B. MacDonald wrote this entry around a century ago; consulting more recent research in the field of Islamic theology would have contributed more to the point Bashier is making.

MYSTICAL TREATISES OF MUHYIDDIN IBN 'ARABI

IBN 'ARABI

The Universal Tree and the Four Birds

Translated by Angela Jaffray

The Universal Tree and the Four Birds

MYSTICAL TREATISES OF MUHYIDDIN IBN 'ARABI

FORTHCOMING TITLES

The Four Cornerstones of the Way
(Hilyat al-abdāl)

Annihilated in Contemplation
(Kitāb al-fanā' fi'l-mushāhada)

Technical Terms of Sufism
(al-Iṣṭilāḥāt al-ṣūfīya)

Muḥyiddīn Ibn ‘Arabī

The Universal Tree and the Four Birds

Treatise on Unification (al-Ittiḥād al-kawnī)

Introduction, Translation and Commentary

ANGELA JAFFRAY

ANQA PUBLISHING • OXFORD

IN ASSOCIATION WITH THE
MUHYIDDIN IBN ‘ARABI SOCIETY

Published by Anqa Publishing
PO Box 1178
Oxford OX2 8YS, UK
www.ibn-arabi.com

In association with the Muhyiddin Ibn 'Arabi Society
www.ibnarabisociety.org

© Angela Jaffray, 2006

Angela Jaffray has asserted her moral right under the Copyright, Designs and Patents Act, 1988, to be identified as the author of this work.

All rights reserved. No part of this publication may be reproduced, stored in a retrieval system, or transmitted, in any form or by any means, without the prior permission in writing of the publisher.

Cover design: Michael Tiernan
Manuscript on the back cover: Shehit Ali 2813, f.33, dated AH 621, copied by Ayyūb b. Badr al-Muqrī and checked by the author.
Courtesy of the Suleymaniye library, Istanbul.

British Library Cataloguing in Publication Data.
A catalogue record for this book is available from the British Library.

ISBN-10: 0 9534513 9 9
ISBN-13: 978 0 9534513 9 5

Printed in the USA

I am in love with no other than myself, and my very separation is my union ...

I am my beloved and my lover;
I am my knight and my maiden.

Muḥyiddīn Ibn ‘Arabī

CONTENTS

Acknowledgements	viii
Of the Tree and its Four Birds, by Rafi Zabor	1
Biography of Ibn ‘Arabi	9
Introduction	16
Overview	16
Stylistic Considerations	18
Treatise on Unification	21
Dedication	26
Discourse of the Universal Tree	35
Discourse of the Ringdove	38
Discourse of the Royal Eagle	42
Discourse of the Strange ‘ Anqā ’	46
Discourse of the Jet-Black Crow	47
Commentary	53
The Title	53
The Proemial Poems	61
The Dedicatee	63
The Fourth Poem	77
Meetings in the Barzakh	78
Soliloquies of the Universal Tree and the Four Birds	80
Cosmic Marriage and the Genealogy of the Birds	103
Appendix: The Edition of the Text	111
Bibliography	115
Index of Qur’anic Citations	123
Index of Names and Terms	125
Arabic text

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I owe special thanks to my friend Rafi Zabor, who suggested several years ago that I translate the Ittiḥād al-kawnī for the Web journal Words without Borders, and supplied the illuminating introductory essay.

Thanks, also, to Words without Borders who published an early version of the translation in their August 2004 issue.

I couldn't ask for more responsive and meticulous editors than Stephen Hirstenstein and Michael Tiernan at Anqa Publishing. Stephen's learned comments enriched my commentary immensely, and Michael's design and careful editing are each, in their own domain, things of beauty.

Without the sublime French translation, sagacious notes, and expert edition of the Ittiḥād by Denis Gril, I would have found myself frequently at a loss. Lovers of Ibn 'Arabī owe a tremendous debt to him and other pioneers in the enterprise of Ibn 'Arabī translation for their deep knowledge of the Shaykh's words and works.

Jim Robinson, eagle-eyed companion in devoir, has accompanied this translation from fledgling stage to final flight. He has given me many helpful suggestions, kept me from colossal mistakes, and offered unflagging encouragement all the way.

Lā tawfīq illā bi-llāh

OF THE TREE AND ITS FOUR BIRDS

RAFI ZABOR

It is He who is revealed in every face, sought in every sign, gazed upon by every eye, worshipped in every object of worship, and pursued in the unseen and the visible. Not a single one of His creatures can fail to find Him in its primordial and original nature.

Muḥyiddīn Ibn ‘Arabī

Ibn ‘Arabī – or Abū ‘Abd Allāh Muḥammad ibn al-‘Arabī at-Ṭā’ī al-Ḥātimī, also called Muḥyiddīn, the Revivifier of the Faith – was born in 1165 CE in the city of Murcia in Muslim Andalusia, and died seventy-five years later in Damascus: a narrative traversal of the Islamic world more than mirrored by his encompassment of its internal, esoteric aspect. Called within the Sufi tradition the Shaykh al-Akbar, or Greatest Master, and seen as its ultimate exemplar of esoteric Knowledge, he was, among many other things, the author of approximately three hundred books, some of them no longer than a pamphlet, others comprising several volumes. The best known and doubtless most important of these are the Fuṣūṣ al-ḥikam, in many ways the crystallization of a lifetime’s gnosis, and the enormous Futūḥāt al-Makkiyya, which combines the functions of a spiritual encyclopedia and intimate autobiography. The work translated here (Risālat al-ittiḥād al-kawnī, likely written before the author’s arrival in Mecca circa 1203 CE), combining verse, prose, and rhymed prose, is certainly one of Ibn ‘Arabī’s most beautiful and, while quite unlike any other of his books so far translated into English,¹ it is wholly characteristic of his genius.

In it the reader will encounter a work of extraordinary literary and spiritual artistry, followed by a commentary whose lucidity and acuity of articulation will introduce the neophyte – its thoroughness should also please the specialist – to some of the details of the cosmological order to which our author's imagery, in this work and elsewhere, belongs; but there ought also to be room for a few general words of introduction for the general reader who might happen by.

In the history of monotheistic spirituality, in particular its Western, Abrahamic branch incorporating Judaism, Christianity, and Islam, you may find an aspected resemblance here and there, but there is really no one, from taproot to topmost leaf-tip, like Muḥyiddīn Ibn 'Arabī. In Islamic esotericism per se, especially with regard to its metaphysical and exegetical component, virtually everyone before him is an anticipation and everyone after a commentator or interpreter.

In encountering him you come upon the ultimate implications of monotheism whole and unaltered. Since in exoteric Islam the Unity and Absoluteness of God is the primary axiom, it follows that for its definitive esotericist a One and Absolute God implies the non-existence of anything other than Himself – since that would qualify His Singleness and Absoluteness – so that there is not, in existence or the many shades of relative existence and non-existence in the eighteen thousand Universes anything other than Him tout court. From this vantage point we pass to a world of apparently infinite paradox, actually a series of antinomic affirmations logically exclusive of each other but united in the suprarational fact that is the One Existence: the Universes are His appearance, He is the same as the existence of the things, although nothing can be associated with Him and He is transcendent from all qualification, even that of transcendence; everything that exists is the self-manifestation of possibilities latent in His essence, existentiated by His Mercy, yet the possibilities themselves choose their modes of being and demand existentiation from

1. It has been translated into splendidly lyrical French by Denis Gril as Le Livre de l'arbre et des quatre oiseaux, Paris: Les Deux Océans, 1984.

Him, so that their will is free and their own, and the consequences of their actions rebound upon themselves, although there is essentially no will but His, and He is transcendent from the existent things without difference although He is their being and substance, and He guides them, perpetually, because He is their inextricable essence. The conscious, perfected human being – the normal run of humans are veiled from the Reality by the illusion of their own self-existence – is the complete reflection of its infinite and eternal Source, and it is precisely for the sake of this mirroring that the Absolute breathed His mercy upon the possibilities and potentials latent in Himself and permitted the Universes to become, although their existence is pure contingency, a veil, an illusion, and also the Truth in Truth, while there is only He, and nothing with or beside Him, ever. And so on, almost ad infinitum, according to each particular face of revelation implicit in the nature of the Reality. Ibn ‘Arabī’s cosmology sometimes seems as detailed as the Universe whose ontology it addresses; at other times he demolishes all secondary consideration in a totalizing affirmation of the indivisible and unconditionable One: these two components of his vision do not exclude each other but are essentially the same, and cannot be halved. And as the Shaykh sometimes likes to put it: if you understand it that way, fine; and if not, then not.

What after Ibn ‘Arabī’s death came to be called the doctrine of the Unity of Being was not, however, some ultimate ingenuity of exegesis but the result of profound self-experience, and when you read one of his books you encounter in some measure the extraordinary individual who experienced it. His is a flavor one comes to recognize and distinguish from all others, a genius both inclusive of and beyond rational compass, a forthrightness challenging all complacencies, and at times a robustly humorous overturner of all cognitive convention. His complications dazzle and bewilder the intellect and imagination; alternately his bluntness can, at times, make even so bold a visionary as William Blake seem almost an equivocator by comparison.

He is also a poet of extraordinary expressive power, as a reader of the Ittiḥād will quickly discover. The book begins with a preludinal poem which even in translation seems one of the great one-time-only coups of the world-long poetic tradition:

*From my incompleteness to my completeness, and from my inclination to my equilibrium
From my grandeur to my beauty, and from my splendour to my majesty
From my scattering to my gathering, and from my exclusion to my reunion
From my baseness to my preciousness, and from my stones to my pearls . . .*

For thirteen lines Ibn ‘Arabī’s contemplation swings like a pendulum between the polarities of a self whose sphere of allusion and reference is the entire subsolar and sublunary world with its risings and settings, breezes, boughs, and shade, its steeds and gazelles – an extraordinary ambit of discourse that shudders to a halt with the abrupt discovery of that self’s isolation and the limits of its enclosed love. The last line of the section reveals the reality behind even so inspired and inevitable a self-absorption and uncovers the crux of its anguish – Do not blame me for my passion. I am inconsolable over the one who has fled me – but if we have left the sphere of the passional self and the romance of its poetics, it is not in obeisance to the dictates of a conventional mysteriosophy; neither will Ibn ‘Arabī, as his accustomed readers know, end his quest with a conventionally diffuse devotional yearning for the Infinite as traditionally conceived: when the Shaykh al-Akbar seeks something he almost invariably finds it, on a large scale and in plenty.

When, after this reflective pause, the tolling of the polarities resumes, a measure of discrimination inserts itself into the cascade of couplets – Continuous is the light of knowledge; ephemeral the light of intuition – even, shortly, a teleology, and a changing a sense of quest:

So that I might bring to light what lies hidden in night’s core . . .

To explain the mysteries' roots and express the realities' enigmas.

The author ends this phase of his invocation by affirming the Spiritual nature of his inspiration and by distinguishing it from that of the willfully ignorant.

Ibn 'Arabī then calls his book to order, announces its title, and dedicates it to Abū al-Fawāris Ṣakhr b. Sinān, a “master of the triads and dyads” in whose nature, manner, or teaching must surely lie the root of the introduction’s uniquely “dyadic words of praise”. Ibn 'Arabī then praises God, with reference to a particularly important Qur’anic passage – “Surely We created man with the most beautiful of constitutions”, that is, in the essential image of God, “then We reduced him to the lowest of the low” (Q. 95: 4–5), which in part is to say the mortality and limits of this world but especially the blinkered consciousness we typically have in it – before resuming a rapturous poetics one might have thought eliminated by so firm a theological intrusion. In the following strophes, self and Self, essence and Essence, humanity and the properly Divine are both distinguished from each other – with particular reference to some occulted aspects of the individuated subjectivity – and revealed as inextricable.

In the last moment of this introductory section the author delineates still more precisely the book’s locus of revelation: situated “on the equator”, that is to say at the meeting-point, of “the most beautiful of constitutions” and the “lowest of degrees” that encompass between them the essential human state – the comprehensive conjunction of the Transcendent and the Manifest, in other texts the place where “the two seas meet”, and where the Arc of Necessarily-so-ness and the Arc of Possibilities converge – metaphorically rendered here as the City of human habitation and the Sinai that is the archetypal site of human receptivity to the continuous Divine self-revelation.

Having articulated the book’s metaphysical context, Ibn 'Arabī plunges us into the heart of a drama drawn on a consciously cosmic scale – there is tremendous urgency behind the narrative from the first – evincing an impetuosity and directness, a singleness of feeling whose impassioned expressiveness is quite distinct from the Persian genius for decoration and ameliorative address to a normative audience, most familiar in the West in the work of Ibn 'Arabī's great near-contemporary Jalāluddīn Rūmī. In fact Rūmī, recognized within the Sufi tradition as its ultimate exemplar of divine and spiritual Love, is not Ibn 'Arabī's opposite but his complement. Ibn 'Arabī is alleged to have seen the child Rūmī and to have remarked upon his future greatness, but the two are more substantially and convincingly linked through Ibn 'Arabī's adopted son and great disciple Ṣadr al-Dīn Qūnawī, who later was a friend and collaborator of Rūmī's in Konya, the capital of thirteenth-century Seljuk Turkey; and it may be that Ibn 'Arabī and Jalāluddīn Rūmī are ideally understood in terms of each other, one expressing explicitly what is implicit in his counterpart.

Unlike the Turkish–Persian master, who usually took care to veil his jalāl, or fierce majestic aspect, Ibn 'Arabī not only rushes straight at the Truth but trusts It to let the chips fall where they may: subjective after-effects and secondary concatenations are not his responsibility. Our author exemplifies not only the Arabic genius but the compressive power of the Arabic language, which like its cousin Hebrew and perhaps metaphorically the cosmos those languages characteristically describe, parlays a finite number of consonantal roots into an improbably multiform eloquence of expression.

Ibn 'Arabī shouts, “Alas, my burning heart. I fled from the universe and here I am in it. Where is what I seek?”, and is answered by a voice remarkably like the one that addressed Job from the whirlwind – the author scruples to note that it comes from neither inside nor outside him – demanding where he was at the setting up of the Throne and the placement of the celestial couches, not to mention before the establishment of the supreme horizon, and so on for a staggering paragraph delineating the utter incommensurability of the human and the Divine.

The Voice from the Whirlwind quite silenced Job's inquiries, but the ever-impetuous Ibn 'Arabī, registering that voice and its implications completely within himself, goes onward and inward through aspect after aspect in his quest for the entire unedited human reality's reflection of the Divine Itselfness. Through an audacity of question and answer, in a sort of active submission to the Reality's fullness of will, in a dialogue of extreme spiritual subtlety dense with Qur'anic allusion and references to the Shaykh's own extensive terminology – much of which will be lost upon the neophyte reader but which registers as strong gnostic drama regardless;² also see the Commentary – Ibn 'Arabī finally arrives at the book's central image of revelation: a Tree with four birds in its branches. Our author will converse with each of them.

Up to this point the protagonist's struggle has been to detach himself from the last traces of contingent creation and so address himself appropriately to the unqualified Reality. (Along the way, the reader will have noted Ibn 'Arabī's characteristic combination of the evocative and the categorical: "If you extract me from the crashing waves and deliver me from the horror of this gloomy night I will never more pronounce the adverb or the preposition of place." Later on, the Crow will tell him: "I am the lamp and the winds. I am the chain against the rock and the wing. I am the sea whose waves constantly strike one another. I am, of the countable, the singular and the paired.") Beginning with his converse with the Tree, our author has reached his goal, and everything that follows is fruition and harvest.

At the very end of the text, Ibn 'Arabī tells us what the Tree and the birds represent, so it is probably best for the reader first to submit to their unassisted poetic authority. Still, for a reader unacquainted with the tradition and its symbology a few words of explication will probably not go amiss. Much of Ibn 'Arabī's personal terminology is a more abstract rendering of the language of the Qur'an, hence the Pen appears as the First Intellect, the Tablet as Soul, and so forth. Of the birds in the Tree, the third, or "strange 'Anqā'", could certainly use a small interpretative assist and a bit of speciation. Sometimes translated as Phoenix, the strange 'Anqā' in any case is proverbially a bird that has a Name but no manifest Being – Ismi var, varlık yok, as almost any Turk can tell you – and hence is associated with the Reality of Realities, a mercurial entity which is the foundation of the world. The Reality of Realities is, as Ibn ‘Arabī writes in The Book of the Description of the Encompassing Circles:

2. The indispensable glossary of his terminology and précis of his metaphysics is The Twenty-Nine Pages. Robertson, Roxburghshire: Beshara Publications, 1998.

the All-embracing Universal which includes the temporal and the eternal, increasing by the multiplicity of existents without however subdividing by their fractioning . . . It is neither existent nor non-existent; it is not the world, and yet it also is; it is other without being other, given that otherness implies [at least] two existents, whereas sameness implies matching . . . resulting in a third notion qualified as form.³

It is co-eternal with the eternal and co-temporal with the temporal. The Reality of Realities is the core of Ibn ‘Arabī’s logos doctrine, and ultimately it is perfectly manifested in the heart of the Perfected Human Being. (Further ambiguities of its indeterminacy are treated within the translator’s Commentary.)

Amid all the beauty and allusiveness of Ibn ‘Arabī’s dialogue with the Tree and its birds, I would especially point out the peroration of the Crow, which is in part a reproach to spiritual types who disdain the created world of bodies and limitation and night. The Shaykh says elsewhere that there are People of the Right Hand, who care only for spiritual things, and People of the Left Hand, who care only for the things of this world; then there are the people who make no distinction between the spiritual and the mundane, and they are Those Who Have Been Brought Near – yet another piece of a rich, meticulously and majestically developed perspective that this short, lyrical and evocative book, youthful but already magisterial, with a conceptual spine strong as tensile steel, makes palpably real to the reader through the eloquence of its imagery and the uniqueness of its author’s unforgettable voice.

3. Translated by P. Fenton and M. Gloton, in Muhyiddin Ibn ‘Arabi: A Commemorative Volume, ed. S. Hirtenstein and M. Tiernan. Shaftesbury, Dorset: Element, 1993, pp.25–6.

BIOGRAPHY OF IBN ‘ARABĪ¹

Muḥyiddīn Muḥammad Ibn ‘Arabī, known as “al-Shaykh al-Akbar”, or Greatest Shaykh, was born in 1165 in Murcia, Spain. His father held an important post in the government, first of Ibn Mardanīsh and later of his rival Abū Ya‘qūb Yūsuf, the Almohad ruler. When he was seven, his family moved to Seville where, despite an initial attraction to youthful diversions, an even stronger inclination toward the devotional life began to emerge. Even as a very young man he began to undertake retreats, spent considerable time in cemeteries communing with spirits, and realized astounding mystical insights.

Ibn ‘Arabī tells us little about his first formative retreat, other than to say that, unlike most other mystical wayfarers, he was seized by a kind of divine attraction or ecstasy (jadhba), instead of proceeding slowly and laboriously by disciplined stages.² This illuminative event, if the later report of al-Qārī’ al-Baghdādī (d.1418) is to be believed,³ had its inception in the midst of a typical Andalusian fête attended by the teenaged Ibn ‘Arabī. About to raise a cup of wine to his lips, the young man heard a voice proclaim: “O Muḥammad, it was not for this that you were created!”⁴ He left the party abruptly and fled to a cemetery, where he engaged in solitary invocation of God.

1. I have relied on two excellent biographies of Ibn ‘Arabī: Quest for the Red Sulphur, by Claude Addas, and The Unlimited Mercifier, by Stephen Hirstenstein.

2. Ibn ‘Arabī’s initial spiritual opening is described in Chittick, Sufi Path of Knowledge (hereafter SPK), p. 383, n. 12: “at twenty he began his ‘wayfaring’ (sulūk) in the technical Sufi sense, while in his early teens he had undergone his first opening as the result of a divine attraction (jadhba), through the intervention of the prophets Jesus, Moses, and Muḥammad.”

3. See Hirstenstein, Unlimited Mercifier, p. 254, n. 3.

4. Ibid., p. 52.

It was there in the cemetery that Ibn 'Arabī experienced a triple vision of the Prophets Jesus, Moses, and Muḥammad.⁵ Each of these three masters illuminated certain aspects of the Path: from Jesus he learned the necessity of asceticism; from Moses, he learned that he would attain 'ilm ladunī, the kind of knowledge bestowed by God as a gift rather than the result of striving followed by acquisition.⁶ Finally, in the midst of a vision in which he was threatened by assailants, the young man saw the Prophet Muḥammad, standing on a hill. The Prophet urged him to “hold fast to me and you will be safe.”⁷ From that point on, Ibn 'Arabī became an ardent student of hadith, those traditions that recount the Prophet's words and actions, taking them as a model for his own behaviour.

This extraordinary retreat, however, was followed by a period of “abandonment” (fatra), which is not at all uncommon in either prophets or friends of God (awliyā').⁸ The Prophet Muḥammad himself experienced it. It is a period of silence from the divine side. The mystic finds himself, as it were, in a desert, completely without sustenance, tormented by doubts and unsure of how, or even whether, to proceed. It is a state in which one may wander compassless forever; or one can emerge safely, as Ibn 'Arabī did, hearing the divine voice recite to him the Qur'anic verses:

And He it is who sendeth the winds as tidings heralding His mercy, till, when they bear a cloud heavy [with rain], We lead it to a dead land, and then cause water to descend thereon and thereby bring forth fruits of every kind. Thus we bring forth the dead. Haply you will remember. As for the good land, its vegetation cometh forth by permission of its Lord. (Q. 7: 57–58)

5. See Fut. IV. 172. For the significance of this unprecedented triple vision, see Hirtenstein, Unlimited Mercifier, pp. 52–6.

6. See Fut. I. 254. Although common to the prophets, this form of knowledge is rarely found in anyone else, a noted exception being al-Khidr, Moses' mysterious companion, whose remarkable tale is found in Surat al-Kahf (Q. 18: 65–82).

7. Hirtenstein, Unlimited Mercifier, p. 55.

8. Ibid., pp. 58–60.

Hearkening to the advice of Jesus, his “first master,”⁹ whom the Shaykh was to meet numerous times in visions, the young man pledged himself to an ascetic life and gave away all his possessions to his father. From then on, as he recounts in the Futūḥāt, he lived on gifts and alms, trusting in God for his needs.¹⁰ Henceforth, the young Ibn 'Arabī became a bona fide man of the Sufi Way. He studied the traditional Islamic sciences with some of the foremost scholars of Andalusia, and concurrently realized, in a very short time, the panoply of mystical stations he describes in his various writings.

By around the age of twenty, Ibn 'Arabī had acquired his first Sufi teacher, Abū al-‘Abbās al-‘Uryabī,¹¹ an illiterate peasant whom he met in Seville. Among this shaykh’s many virtues was that he had realized the station of perfect servitude, the highest of all stations. Al-‘Uryabī was not the only shaykh that the young Muḥyiddīn frequented during the thirty years he spent in Andalusia prior to his departure to the east. In his two compendia devoted to Andalusian saints, he lists and describes some seventy-one Sufi shaykhs, four of them women, from whom he received important spiritual direction.¹²

Ibn 'Arabī’s own spiritual state was made clear to him in three successive visions between 1190 and 1202. In them, he saw all of the messengers and prophets as well as “all the believers – those who have been and those who will be – until the Day of Resurrection.”¹³ He learned that the major reason why the prophets and messengers had assembled in the spiritual world was to congratulate him at being designated the Seal of the Muḥammadan Sainthood – the heir to the Seal of the Prophets, Muḥammad. As he explains in his Futūḥāt, the Seal of the Muḥammadan Sainthood combines all the qualities

9. Fut. III. 341.

10. Fut. II. 548.

11. Some accounts give his name as al-‘Uryanī.

12. Many of the Sufi masters with whom Ibn 'Arabī studied are described in his Rūḥ al-quds and al-Durra al-fākhira, partially translated by Austin as Sufis of Andalusia.

13. Fut. III. 323; trans. Addas, Quest, p. 74.

of all the saints; and since prophets are also saints, it includes all the qualities of all the prophets, excluding those pertaining to their legislative roles.

In 1193, Ibn 'Arabī made his first journey beyond the Iberian Peninsula, to North Africa. He stayed in Tunis for a year, studying with Shaykh al-Mahdawī, a disciple of the famous Algerian saint Abū Madyan, whose tomb is a site of pilgrimage to this day. When Ibn 'Arabī returned to al-Andalus, he began to compose the first of his more than 300 works. His primary activity, however, seems to have been spiritual wayfaring in order to learn from Sufi masters and study Prophetic Traditions. Between the years 1195 and 1200, he was engaged in constant travel between Spain and North Africa, while concurrently traversing another landscape, not visible to the physical eye. To many of these purely spiritual locales he gave evocative names, such as “God’s Vast Earth” where “the spiritual takes body and the body becomes spiritual,”¹⁴ and the “Abode of Light”, where all destinies are known from beginning to end.

But the greatest vision he experienced at this time was no doubt the spiritual ascent (mi'rāj) he made in imitation of the Prophet’s corporeal ascent to the seven heavens and to the Divine Presence Itself. Mounted on the “Burāq”¹⁵ of his spiritual aspiration, he travelled through the seven celestial spheres, each one presided over by a prophet. Beyond the seventh heaven lies the goal of every mi'rāj: the “Lote Tree of the Limit”, alluded to in the Qur’an. It was here that he became, as he puts it, “nothing but light”.¹⁶ He realized that, despite the multiplicity of God’s names, attributes, and acts, there is but a single Being to which they refer, and that “the journey that [he] made was inside [him]self, and it was toward [him]self he had been guided.”¹⁷

14. Corbin, Creative Imagination, p. 4.

15. The fabulous steed on which the prophets are said to be transported on their celestial ascent. Ibn 'Arabī often uses this image metaphorically. See Fut. III. 345, R. al-ittihād, p. 30.

16. Fut. III. 350; trans. Addas, Quest, p. 156.

17. Fut. III. 350; trans. Addas, Quest, p. 156.

The year 1200 marks the beginning of Ibn 'Arabī's journey to the east. He was never again to return to Spain. From North Africa he went first to Cairo, then to Hebron – where he visited the tomb of Abraham – then Jerusalem, where he prayed at the al-Aqsa Mosque. His final goal was Mecca, where he intended to perform the pilgrimage. Among his many visions and meetings with remarkable men and women, two merit special mention. The first was his astonishing encounter with the strange personage he calls the Fatā, or youth, evocatively described in the first chapter of the Futūḥāt. One evening, when he was performing the ritual circumambulations of the Ka'ba, a mysterious youth accosted him. Was he an angel or a human being? The embodiment of the Black Stone, or the personification of the Holy Spirit? Ibn 'Arabī's celestial twin or an epitome of the Futūḥāt itself? Perhaps he was all of these and more. After describing their conversation, recounted in poetry and rhymed prose, a pact between the young man and the Shaykh was concluded. The result of this epiphany is the some 2000 tightly-packed folio pages of the Futūḥāt, a masterpiece of mystical literature.

It was also in Mecca that he made the acquaintance of the young woman Nizām, who would become the inspiration for his love poems, written approximately fifteen years later (1215) and collected in the Tarjumān al-ashwāq (The Interpreter of Desires). Nizām was a young Iranian lady of considerable beauty, piety, and intelligence – “the ornament of our gatherings”,¹⁸ as Ibn 'Arabī says in his Preface to the Tarjumān. Commentators have seen in Nizām the archetypal Eternal Feminine, the embodiment of Sophia, the equivalent of Dante's Beatrice, and the coincidentia oppositorum.¹⁹ She is not only the muse of the Interpreter of Desires but also may have inspired the paean to Woman found in the final chapter of the Fuṣūṣ, on the Wisdom of Singularity in the Word of Muḥammad.²⁰ “Contemplation

18. Tarjumān, p. 11. (Unless otherwise noted, all references are to the Nicholson edition.)

19. See Austin, “The Lady Nizām”, pp. 35–48.

20. Ibid., p. 39.

of the Reality without formal support is not possible”, he says. “The best and most perfect kind [of contemplation] is the contemplation of God in women.”²¹

Ibn 'Arabī was to spend roughly two years in Mecca. It was at Mecca, during a brief period of dissatisfaction with the aptitude of his students that, in a dream vision, the Shaykh was given the divine advice to “counsel God’s servants”.²² Whether addressing jurists or Sufis, rulers or simple folk, for the remainder of his life the Shaykh made it a point to convey his message, orally and in his many writings, to all the believers he encountered and at the level of their varied understandings. Some of the texts he wrote were short, composed at a single sitting; some ran to hundreds, even thousands, of pages, as in the case of the Futūḥāt, and were the products of years of labour and revision.

Just as his early years were devoted to constant wayfaring throughout Andalusia and the Maghreb, Ibn 'Arabī spent the years spanning 1204 to 1220 travelling back and forth across Syria, Palestine, Anatolia, Egypt, Iraq, and the Hijaz. During this time he acquired many disciples, continued his literary output, and even became an advisor to the Seljuk sultan Kaykā'ūs. It was not until the final twenty years of his life that he ceased his peregrinations and in 1221 settled permanently in Damascus.

At the end of 1229, an event occurred that resulted in the writing of the Shaykh’s best known book, the Fuṣūṣ al-ḥikam, or “Bezels of Wisdom.” In a dream, he saw the Prophet Muḥammad, holding a book. The Prophet told him: “This is the book of the Fuṣūṣ al-ḥikam. Take and give it to humanity so that they may find benefit from it.”²³ The twenty-seven chapters contained therein – each one devoted to a different prophet and elucidating a particular facet of wisdom – were, according to Ibn 'Arabī, inspired by the Prophet with no personal input on his part whatsoever. The Fuṣūṣ has remained to this day his most provocative and most frequently commented-upon work.

21. Fuṣūṣ, p. 217; trans. Austin, Bezels of Wisdom, p. 275.

22. See Addas, Quest, p. 218.

23. Fuṣūṣ, p. 47; trans. Austin, Bezels of Wisdom, p. 45.

Biography of Ibn 'Arabī

Ibn 'Arabī died in Damascus in November 1240. Over the centuries, his teachings spread east as far as China, disseminated by devoted students – many of them gifted mystics and poets in their own rights. For the past century, the West has also played a part in this process, as scholars and translators continue the effort to bring the Shaykh's remarkable writings to the attention of the contemporary world.

INTRODUCTION

Overview

The Ittiḥād al-kawnī is one of Ibn ‘Arabī’s early works, most likely written before the author’s journey to the eastern Islamic lands in 1201/02 CE (AH 598).¹ Written primarily in rhymed prose and poetry, it shares the charm of its cousins among the visionary mystical–philosophical fables of the Islamic world, such as those penned by Avicenna, Suhrawardī, and ‘Aṭṭār.²

It also belongs to the genre of mystical ascent literature. Although ascent literature is represented in many of the world’s traditions,³ in Islam the model derives from the Prophet Muḥammad’s ascension through the seven heavens to the Divine Presence as allusively recounted in Suras 17:1 and 53:4–18. In later years, Sufis undertook to imitate the Prophet’s ascent and, beginning with Abū Yazīd al-Bisṭāmī (d.874 CE), several described their visions, either orally or in treatise form. Abū Yazīd’s strange account of his mi‘rāj, for example, was recounted by (pseudo-?) al-Junayd (d.910)⁴ and interpreted by al-Sarrāj (d.988).⁵ Having flown in the form of a bird to the Tree of Unity, the Lote Tree of the Limit, described in Sura 53:14, Abū

1. See Gril, Le Livre de l’arbre, p.29; Elmore, Islamic Sainthood, p.165. Although the precise dating of the treatise is not known, in all likelihood it was preceded by such works as Mashāhid al-asrār al-qudsiyya, al-Tadbīrāt al-ilāhiyya, Mawāqī’ al-nujūm, Inshā’ al-dawā’ ir, and other treatises that were probably lost when Ibn ‘Arabī left al-Andalus. Its subject matter bears a close resemblance to that of another early work, ‘Uqlat al-mustawfiz.

2. See Corbin, Avicenna; Thackston, Mystical and Visionary Treatises; and Aṭṭār, Manṭiq al-ṭayr.

3. Among the many studies devoted to this subject in world literature, see Couliano, Out of this World, and Culianu, Psychanodia I.

4. See Sells, Early Islamic Mysticism, pp.242–50.

5. See al-Sarrāj, K. al-luma’.

Yazīd remarked that it was “all a cheat”⁶ – a remark interpreted by Sarrāj as meaning that Abū Yazīd found anything but attention to God a useless vanity.

Besides the Ittiḥād al-kawnī, Ibn ‘Arabī wrote at least two independent works,⁷ K. al-isrā’ and R. al-anwār, devoted to the subject, and included two extensive mi’rāj accounts in his Futūḥāt.⁸ In addition, treatises such as K. al-isfār,⁹ a spiritual itinerary, cover much of the same ground as the mi’rāj accounts. It is evident that the Shaykh found the ascent genre a fitting one to describe both the boons and the perils of the spiritual path.

Despite its shimmering surface, the Ittiḥād is not an easy work to fathom because of its dense symbolism and enigmatic style. The initial series of poems immediately plunges the reader into a veritable sea of perplexity, as the author “swings like a pendulum between the polarities of [the] self.”¹⁰ The poems are then followed by a dedication whose dedicatee appears to be a long-dead Arabian prophet, while all the while the author claims to be addressing none other than himself. At last the narrative begins, but where? It appears that the reader has been set down at the centre of the world, the symbolic locus of balanced oppositions. Here the tension aroused by the constant fluctuation from state to state, amply elaborated in the opening verses, turns to lament as the author engages in an obscure dialogue with the Supreme Being of his very self. From this place

6. Sells, Early Islamic Mysticism, p. 219.

7. See Chodkiewicz, Seal of the Saints, Chap. 10, which translates most of R. al-anwār and provides an illuminating commentary on it. R. al-anwār has also been translated by Harris as Journey to the Lord of Power, and more recently in the study by Radtke, Neue kritische Gänge.

8. See Fut. II, Chap. 167 (French translation by Ruspoli, L’Alchimie du bonheur parfait); and Fut. III, Chap. 367. See also Morris’ partial translation and commentary of this latter in Chodkiewicz, Meccan Revelations, as well as his excellent study, “The Spiritual Ascension”.

9. See Gril, Le Dévoilement des effets. See also Jaffray, Unveiling the Effects, forthcoming.

10. See Zabor’s Foreword (“Of the Tree and Its Four Birds”), p. 4.

of momentary equilibrium, the author ascends on a Night Journey¹¹ to the outer limits of creation. There, in a garden at the farthest boundary of the cosmos, he hears the discourse of a Tree and four Birds, whose charming tales and flowery speech mask the fact that they are none other than the awesome images of the Perfect Human Being and his four cosmic faculties: the First Intellect, the Universal Soul, Prime Matter, and Universal Body. Never before have these abstruse philosophical concepts been described in such an elliptical and suggestive way.

Stylistic Considerations

The Ittiḥād al-kawnī is written in a combination of rhymed prose (sajʿ)¹² and poetry. As a youth Ibn Arabī seems to have been particularly taken with belles-lettres and his early works, despite their complex metaphysics, are remarkably lyrical. He never lost his love of either rhymed prose or poetry, as we see in many of his works. His Dīwān contains more than 800 verses and his Tarjumān al-ashwāq, a collection of sixty-one mystical love poems, is considered one of the finest collections of Arabic verse. His 560-chapter magnum opus, the Futūḥāt al-Makkiyya, begins with a lengthy proemium, embellished with flowing sajʿ and punctuated by many lines of verse. Nearly every chapter of this lengthy summa begins with poetry and many of the chapters contain additional lines of original verse.

Ibn ʿArabī's sheer love of the Arabic language can be felt on every page of his work, both poetry and prose. Among the various schools of thought concerning the origin of language, Ibn ʿArabī would have to be put in the category of those who favoured the divine institution of language. Thus for him, to take a word back to its root meaning and then to extend it to its full semantic range is a process that reflects the nature of the primal divine speech as one/many: “God takes one of these words and makes it many, for He says, Our only word to a thing, when We desire it, is to say to it ‘Be!’ (kun) (Q. 16:40).”¹³ On the one hand, as a Qu’ranic hermeneut, he insists on a sometimes shocking literalism that peels away incrustated layers of traditional interpretation. On the other hand, he allows for a word in the hands of a spiritually realized interpreter to bear any meaning as long as it lies within the range of understandable Arabic. God, he says, is fully aware of all the possible meanings of any given word, thus the gnostic interpreter is encouraged to open himself up to the full spectrum of interpretations, as long as there is evidence for them, based on the actual Qur’anic text.¹⁴

11. The Night Journey, or Isrāʾ, alluded to in Sura 17:1 of the Qurʾan, was Muḥammad's celestial ride on the fantastic steed Burāq to the Sacred Precinct of Jerusalem. From there he ascended through the seven heavens to the Divine Presence. This ascent, known as his miʿrāj, is recounted in Sura 53:4–18.

12. One of the meanings of the word "sajʿ" is the sound a pigeon (or dove) makes – quite fitting for a treatise in which a ringdove plays a major role!

Drawing from nearly all the disciplines of his time – the traditional Islamic sciences, mysticism, theology, philosophy, and even alchemy and magic, Ibn ‘Arabi’s working vocabulary is astoundingly rich. Anchoring himself on the (primarily) tri-consonantal Arabic root, he leaves his imagination free to explore a complex world of interpenetrating meanings and associations attainable by acceptable morphological permutations.¹⁵ Although this approach generally produces a scintillating multifaceted gem whose surfaces delight and whose deep hues attract, the reader is often at a loss when trying to fathom the seemingly endless potential meanings, both lexicographical and symbolic, of any given word or phrase. The end result 13. Fut. III. 283; trans. Chittick, Self-Disclosure of God (hereafter SDG), p. 196.

14. See Fut. II. 119, Chap. 73, Question 128. Note, however, that for Ibn ‘Arabi, interpretation is more often than not a dangerous enterprise in the hands of most people, so he frequently condemns the ignorant use of ta’wīl, esoteric interpretation, that strays far from the literal meaning of the text.

15. Not all critics have found the Shaykh’s ventures into etymology as fruitful as they might seem. Jaroslav Stetkevych takes him to task for relying too heavily on the etymological method for commenting on his own poems of the Tarjumān: “Words run the danger of appearing like denuded, uprooted stems, leaving the imagination at best in amazement” (Zephyrs of Najd, p. 94).

is a thoroughly over-determined text that loses much in the effort of its commentator to explain it.

Unlike the Tarjumān al-ashwāq, on which the author himself – for better or worse – wrote a mystical commentary, the Ittiḥād al-kawnī provides no such aid, and there are seemingly no commentaries by the Shaykh's followers to guide us.¹⁶ Other writings by Ibn 'Arabī, especially his Futūḥāt al-Makkiyya, are essential to ferreting out clues, but, as is the case of all his works in general, the Qur'an – and to a somewhat lesser extent, the Prophetic Traditions (ḥadith) – remains the touchstone.

Thus, in its brief compass, the The Universal Tree and the Four Birds manages both to engage the reader's imagination and to introduce him to some of the major themes of Ibn 'Arabī's cosmology and metaphysics in a highly compressed and ciphered form. For that reason, it is an excellent entrée to Ibn 'Arabī's writings as a whole.

The following translation is based on the edition of Denis Gril in Annales Islamologiques 17, 1981. A description of the manuscripts he used can be found in the Appendix (Edition of the Text). I have generally used Muḥammad Marmaduke Pickthall's translation, The Glorious Qur'an, for Qur'anic quotations, altering it when necessary to reflect Ibn 'Arabī's interpretation.

The annotated translation is followed by a commentary that, while necessarily far from being conclusive, aims to provide some hints in order to make the reader's voyage in the company of the Shaykh a bit less baffling.

16. See Yahia, Histoire et classification, p. 325.

TREATISE ON UNIFICATION

In the name of God, the Merciful, the Compassionate. Blessings upon our master, Muḥammad, and upon his family and companions. This is a noble treatise in which I have consigned a tremendous discourse.

From my incompleteness to my completeness, and from my inclination to my equilibrium
From my grandeur to my beauty, and from my splendour¹ to my majesty²
From my scattering to my gathering, and from my exclusion to my reunion³
From my baseness to my preciousness, and from my stones to my pearls
From my rising to my setting, and from my days to my nights
From my luminosity to my darkness, and from my guidance to my straying
From my perigee to my apogee, and from the base of my lance to its tip⁴

1. The words sanā' (grandeur) and sanā (splendour) form a tajnīs zā'id, that is, they are homonymous save for the addition of the letter hamza to the first term.

2. Majesty and Beauty are two Divine Attributes that seemingly oppose one another much as the Kabbalistic sefirot Gevurah (Rigour) and Hesed (Mercy) do. See Fut. II. 133, 541, 542; IV. 251, 269.

3. The terms ṣudūd and wiṣāl suggest opposing gestures on the part of the Beloved, who at times obstructs union and at times allows it, in keeping with His Attributes of Majesty and Beauty.

4. Gril points out (Arbre, p. 36, n. 4), that zījāj and 'awālī, terms pertaining to the measure of a lance, signal “descending and ascending tendencies along an axial line”.

From my waxing to my waning, and from the void of my moon to its crescent
From my pursuit to my flight, and from my steed to my gazelle⁵
From my breeze to my boughs, and from my boughs to my shade
From my shade to my bliss, and from my bliss to my wrath⁶
From my wrath to my likeness, and from my likeness to my impossibility⁷
From my impossibility to my validity, and from my validity to my deficiency.
I am no one in existence but myself, so –
Whom do I treat as foe and whom do I treat as friend?
Whom do I call to aid my heart, pierced by a penetrating arrow,
When the archer is my eyelid,⁸ striking my heart without an arrow?⁹
Why defend my station? It matters little to me; what do I care?
For I am in love with none other than myself, and my very separation is my union.¹⁰
Do not blame me for my passion. I am inconsolable over the one who has fled me.

5. There is a nice parallel drawn here between the hunter on his steed in pursuit of the fleeing gazelle and the poet, who is both hunter and gazelle.

6. For this translation of miḥāl, see Q.13:13: “He launcheth the thunderbolts and smiteth with them whom He will while they dispute concerning Allah, and He is mighty in wrath (miḥāl).”

7. Muḥāl, “impossibility”, nicely complements miḥāl, “wrath”, in the previous line.

8. Jafn, “eyelid”, can also mean “scabbard” or “sheath”. See Lane, Arabic-English Lexicon, Part 2, p. 434, s.v. jafn.

9. The glance of the beloved, who is none other than the poet himself, pierces his own heart and causes him to fall in love with himself.

10. Ibn ‘Arabī repeats these lines in Fut. II. 390.

In this book I never cease addressing myself about myself and returning in it to myself from myself.

From my heaven to my earth, from my exemplary practice to my religious duty,¹¹
From my pact to my perjury,¹² from my length to my breadth.¹³

* * *

From my sense to my intellect and from my intellect to my sense,
– From whence derive two strange sciences, without doubt or confusion.
From my soul to my spirit and from my spirit to my soul, – By means of dissolution and coagulation, like the corpse in the tomb.¹⁴
From my intuition to my knowledge and from my knowledge to my intuition,
– Continuous is the light of knowledge; ephemeral the light of intuition.
From my sanctity to my impurity and from my impurity to my sanctity,
– Sanctity is in my present and impurity is in yesterday.

11. Fard and sunna are two terms drawn from Islamic law, the first having to do with required religious duties, the second with recommended ones, based on the Prophet Muḥammad's practice.

12. The Arabic pair ibrām and naqd, in addition to the concrete meaning of braiding and unbraiding a rope, suggests in legal terms the conclusion of a pact and its violation.

13. Ṭūl (length) and ʿarḍ (width) again suggest movement along an axis. Ibn ʿArabī was much influenced by al-Ḥallāj's esoteric interpretation of this pair of terms. See, for example, Fut. I. 169, Chap. 20, in which he attributes to al-Ḥallāj the notion that length has to do with action in the world of spirits and width has to do with action in the world of bodies.

14. These two terms, tahīl and tarkīb, are, in addition to their common meaning of "dissolving" and "composition", an allusion to the alchemical process.

From my human-nature to my jinn-nature, and from my jinn-nature to my human-nature, – For my jinn-nature seeks to disquiet me and my human-nature seeks to set me at ease.
From the narrowness of my body to the vastness of my soul,
And from the vastness of my soul to the prison of my body,
– For my soul denies my intellect and my intellect my soul.
From my entity to my nonentity, and my nonentity to my entity,
– Where I rejoice to find my composition and lament to find my dispersion.
From my likeness to my opposite and from my opposite to my likeness,
– Were it not for Bāqil no light of excellence would shine in Quss.¹⁵
From my sun to my full moon and from my full moon¹⁶ to my sun,
– So that I might bring to light what lies hidden in night's core.
From Persian to Arab and from Arab to Persian,¹⁷ – To explain the mysteries' roots and express the realities' enigmas.
From my root to my branch and from my branch to my root,

15. Quss and Bāqil are two semi-legendary pre-Islamic figures. Quss ibn Sā'ida, a ḥanīf of Najran, was an orator of the highest rank, and Muḥammad committed an excerpt of one of his sermons to memory (see Hoyland, Arabia and the Arabs, p.222). Bāqil, on the other hand, was a stutterer. The eloquent Quss and the tongue-tied Bāqil became proverbial (see Gril, Arbre, p.39, n.12).

16. The Perfect Human Being is sometimes compared to the full moon, which reflects the sun (the Real) most completely.

17. Although the terms 'urb' and 'furs' refer to the peoples designated by these names, there is another sense here of things that are clearly stated (from the root '-R-B') versus unintelligible (from another name for the Persians: al-'ajam). See Gril's note (Arbre, p.39, n.13): "These two terms refer to the state of non-manifestation or of revelation of divine mysteries to which two modes of expression correspond: allusion (ishāra) and clear expression ('ibāra'). Ibn 'Arabī employs mu'jam (from 'ajamī') and mu'rab (from 'arabī') in the same sense."

– For the sake of a life that was buried in death, animate or inanimate.
Pay no heed, my soul, to the words of that jealous spitemonger,
Or to the remarks of that ignorant presumer, O myrtle of my soul!
How many ignoramuses have slandered us spiritual beings!
While my revelation descends from the Spirit of inspiration and sanctity,
He is like a man possessed by a demon whose touch makes him tremble.¹⁸
On the matter of spiritual realization mankind does not cease to err,
For God’s secret is poised between the shout and the whisper.

I have called this treatise “Cosmic unification in the presence of essential witnessing, through the assembling of the Human Tree and the Four Spiritual Birds.” I have dedicated it to Abū al-Fawāris Ṣakhr ibn Sinān, master of the reins of generosity and eloquence. I seek help from God. He is my support and my assistance, glory be to him!¹⁹

18. See Q.2:275: “Those who swallow usury cannot rise up save as he ariseth whom the devil hath prostrated by [his] touch.”

19. I have chosen to place all third-person singular pronouns in lower case in light of the ambiguous nature of the divine–human relationship in this treatise. There is additional justification for this in that Arabic pronouns, even when referring to the Divinity, are not indicated by capital letters.

Dedication

To the third and the second – the master of the triads and dyads – the one alluded to in the doubled words of praise,²⁰ the evanescent conqueror who restrains his mount, the one who turns toward his shadow and bows his head in humility; the generous one whose generosity never runs dry, the perfect being whose existence is not known, the one who is sent from the two divine presences and the envoy of the two powers; he whose foundations are certain, whose possibility is discounted, and whose place is known; channel of subtle graces, reality of time, goal of faith, seat of Mercy, subtlety of the moment, sultan of men and jinn, Jānn son of jinn,²¹ pupil of man's eye, beneficent giver, Abū al-Fawāris Ṣakhr b. Sinān, master of the reins of generosity and eloquence. I ask God to give him the most perfect and elevated of ranks.

May he receive the scent of the most perfect and the most pure of greetings, as well as the mercy and benedictions of God, the most Exalted.

20. As Gril mentions, this refers to the opening sura of the Qur'an, the Fātiḥa, often called "the seven doubled" or "oft-repeated" since it contains seven lines and is recited repeatedly in every ritual prayer. According to Ibn 'Arabī, the Perfect Human Being "opens" or initiates (fataḥa) existence just as the Fātiḥa opens the Qur'an. See Gril, Arbre, p. 10. The inner structure of the Fātiḥa is based on a division of the sura into two parts, one of which belongs to the Lord and one to the servant. At the same time, it is a synthesis of the entire Qur'an. These three aspects are echoed in the first verse of the Fātiḥa: "In the Name of Allah, the All-Merciful, the All-Compassionate". The Name Allah embraces all Divine Names and Attributes while All-Merciful and All-Compassionate express nuanced modalities of Mercy (rahma). See Fut. I. 102, Chap. 5.

21. Arabic: Jānn ibn Jānn. Jānn is a plural of jinnī, the shape-shifting, fiery spirits mentioned frequently in the Qur'an. It also can mean "father of the jinn" (see Lane, Arabic-English Lexicon, Part 2, p. 462, s.v. jānn) or "a small white serpent, a great serpent, or a species of serpent having black-bordered eyes, inclining to yellow, harmless, and abounding in houses" (Lane, Arabic-English Lexicon, Part 2, p. 464, s.v. jānn). Jānn with this meaning is found twice in the Qur'an (Q. 27: 10; 28: 31) in connection with Moses' staff: "But when he saw it writhing like a jānn, he turned to flee headlong."

I praise God who has “fashioned” me and “balanced” me,²² and cast me in “the most beautiful of constitutions”.²³ For he made me know myself through myself and caused me to appear to myself, so that I became enamoured of only myself. Between my distance and my proximity I have become mad with love for myself, and I address myself alone.

Were I to see myself when I came to myself by myself, secretly or openly,
And said, “Greetings” and answered, “At your service”,
And if my turning were from me to me,
My very “Here I am!” would annihilate me from myself,
From my enemies and my trusty friends,
From my threat [of punishment] and my surplus [grace],
From my delight and my promises [of paradise],
From my witnessing and my testimony.
What wonderful favour would be mine through myself!
Oh I! Return me by me to me until I see my stability.
He returned me by me to me from me, and only my qualities subsisted in me.
My palm grasped my stick, my staff smote my rock;
The river of constellations flowed from it: Twelve heralds!²⁴

22. See Q.82:7–8: “Who created thee, then fashioned, then proportioned thee, into whatsoever form He will, He casteth thee.”

23. Q.95:4: “Surely We created man in the most beautiful of constitutions.”

24. See Q.2:60: “And when Moses asked for water for his people, We said: Smite with thy staff the rock. And there gushed out therefrom twelve springs [so that] each tribe knew their drinking place.” See also Q.7:60: “We divided them into twelve tribes, nations; and We inspired Moses, when his people asked him for water, saying: Smite with thy staff the rock! And there gushed forth therefrom twelve springs, so that each tribe knew their drinking-place.” See also Fut. II. 441, where the rivers mentioned in the verse are placed within the three different Gardens of Paradise: four in the Garden of the Elites, four in the Garden of Inheritance, and four in the Garden of Deeds. The rivers are then assigned various types of sciences. The river of unbrackish water = the science of life; the river of wine = the science of states; the river of honey = the science of revelation; and the river of milk = the science of the secrets.

I said to myself: Oh I! Add constancy to my constancy!
These are the sciences of life, scattering light from all that grows upon my being.
Where in me does that subtle secret reside that God has placed within my essences?
I was filled with what I sought from myself, but my desire for death remained.
I took to complaining to myself of my passion so that my signs would appear
Upon my eyelids from the essence of my creation.
Then he lavished gathering on my scattering.
My essence conjoined passionately with my essence, for my essence, my whole life long.
I did not hold my harshness against myself,
Or the length of my abandonment or my misdeeds –
I am my beloved and my lover; I am my knight and my maiden.²⁵

This book came to me from the city situated on the equator, assigned to the temperate clime,²⁶ fortified by [spiritual] powers: Mount Sinai, the Land Made Safe,²⁷ fashioned of water and clay,²⁸ uniting the “most beautiful of constitutions” with the “lowest of degrees”. This treatise informed me of what passed between myself and myself and what my existence contemplated of my existence.

25. Ibn ‘Arabī repeats these lines in Fut. II. 390.

26. Arabic: mustawā. Gril (Arbre, p. 44, n.29): “The line of the equator or the equinoxes cuts in its centre the horizontal plane of manifestation (mustawā) or the place of the divine establishment on the Throne (al-istiwā ‘alā l-‘arsh).”

27. Mecca. According to Gril (Arbre, p. 44, n.30), Mount Sinai = “the most beautiful of constitutions”, that is the Perfect Human Being who is created upon the divine form; the Land Made Safe = Mecca, at the heart of which is the cube of the Ka’ba, draped in its black covering. For dark things being ideal receptacles for divine lights and secrets, see our Commentary, p. 103. This passage relates particularly to Q. 95: 1–5: “By the fig, by the olive, by Mount Sinai, by this land made safe. Surely We created man of the most beautiful constitution. Then We reduced him to the lowest of the low.”

28. See Q. 6: 2; 15: 26; 25: 54.

When the signs of witnessing were lifted from me and the suffering of spiritual combat was removed, and harmony and succour began to flow through me, I mounted the Burāq²⁹ of my spiritual aspiration and departed from the cycle of this grief. I fell into the sea of hylic matter, and beheld the next world and the present one.³⁰ I said: “May he perish, whoever denies the gardens and the abode of life, the sporting boys and embracing houris,³¹ and the union of bodies with bodies! He who sees the Preserver affirms the existence of the Speaker, for the line of equilibrium does not waver.” I understood here that those who deny the resurrection of the body will continue to waver and will never be rid of the noose of the four and the two.³²

Then I shouted: “Oh alas!” and “Alas, my burning heart. I fled from the universe and here I am in it. Where is what I seek?”

I heard a voice coming from me – but neither inside me nor outside me – say: “Why do you demand a high station when you are on the road? What have you to do with the sittings [on the Throne]³³ What have you to do with the celestial couches and sublime litters?³⁴ What have you to do with the uppermost horizon?³⁵ What have you

29. Fabulous steed on which the Prophet rode on his Night Journey to the highest heavens. For the mystic, it is often linked to the initial stages of the Path, when spiritual concentration and correct intention are of particular importance.

30. The vision of heaven and hell takes place in the Barzakh. See Commentary, p. 79. Note that one variant reads: “I fell into the sea of destruction and beheld he who affirms and he who denies.”

31. For the beautiful women of Paradise, see Q. 44: 54; 52: 20; 55: 72; 56: 22.

32. Four and two are both even numbers that are polarized without resolution. Among the four things that have such an antagonistic relationship to one another are the four elements. Some of the Divine Names are also polarized, for example He who gives life and He who causes death, and are metaphorically engaged in “disputing with” one another. See, for example, Fut. I, Chap. 56; Fut. II, Chap. 73, question 86; Fut. II, Chap. 154; Fut. III, Chaps 306, 336.

33. Arabic plural: istiwā’ūt. See Q. 53: 6 and Gril’s note (Arbre, p. 46, n. 35): “Istiwā’ is thus for the creature the equilibrium between contrary tendencies and the deliverance from existential limits.”

34. See Q. 55: 76: “Reclining on green cushions and fair carpets.”

35. See Q. 53: 7: “When he was on the uppermost horizon.”

to do with the screens of splendour? What have you to do with the radiant curtain? What have you to do with the Cloud?³⁶ What have you to do with the impenetrable Veil of Sublimity?³⁷ What have you to do with the absolute ipseities? What have you to do with the confirmed realities? What have you to do with the presence of allusions? What have you to do with the conversations? What have you to do with the nightly confidences? What have you to do with the sublime Tree? What have you to do with the branches of the world? What have you to do with the strange 'Anqā'? What have you to do with the Ringdove? What have you to do with the Jet-Black Crow? What have you to do with the Royal Eagle? O you who are veiled, how can you ask 'where?' about the Essence, when you are in a station that does not admit lies!"

I answered: "Oh you who rebuke me, your words have wounded me.³⁸ Do you not know that you speak from your own station? You are in the presence of the Essence, divested of time and place, while I am in this dark³⁹ abyss,⁴⁰ in this black gloom and this fearful calamity,⁴¹ in this mine of lies and doubt, this place of faults and defects. Does the prisoner of quantity and the one confined to wise maxims not cry out: Woe! If you extract me from the crashing waves and deliver me from the struggles of this gloomy night I will never more pronounce an adverb or stop at a particle."

Through his irresistible power he attracted me to himself and said to me: "You are vanquished, so seek help!"⁴²

36. The Cloud is referred to in a hadith in which, before creation, God is said to have been in a Cloud above and below which there was no air.

37. See Fut. I, Chap. 73, question 153: "... it is blindness and perplexity." None can penetrate it and gain knowledge of God's Essence.

38. The root K-L-M has to do with both speech and wounding. For this latter, see Ibn 'Arabī's discussion of the Prophet Idrīs as the Healer of Wounds (Muḍḍawī al-kulūm), Fut. I, Chap. 14.

39. The root '-M-Y' conveys the sense of blindness and obscurity. The word 'immiyyā' also means "trial", "slaughter", and "conflict." See Lane, Arabic-English Lexicon, Part 5, p. 2162, s.v. 'immiyyā'.

40. Lujja can also mean "sea".

41. In Arabic, the expression uses two words from the same root: dāhiya al-dahiyā.

I said: "I will save myself by your right hand, for both your hands are right hands."⁴³ For he is the powerful, the trustworthy, the faithful, and the true one who never lies."

He said: "How can one mock me whose hope abides in me?"

I said: "Just like one who praises you bestows favour upon you."

When he attracted me to himself I saw myself in another form than my previous one. I established myself there and took a firm position.

I said: "Oh I!"

He said: "I, welcome!"

I said: "No welcome, no greetings, no make yourself at ease!"

He said: "Oh eye-balm, what is disquieting you? Oh prisoner of creation, what is afflicting you?"

I answered: "You do not cease from veiling me from myself. Unveil me to myself so that I can know myself! Here is my tablet outspread, my banner is raised, my knowledge is delimited, my station is praised, my secret self⁴⁴ is witnessed, my heart⁴⁵ is found, the goal I seek is lost, and I, in my world, am what is sought.⁴⁶ I am called the word of existence.⁴⁷ If these entities were to become annihilated, if these creatures were to vanish, and if I were to retreat from the Throne of Mercy and the lordly name, I would be able to enjoy the divine regard and not be harmed by this favour."⁴⁸

42. See Q. 54: 10: "So he [Noah] cried unto his Lord, saying: I am vanquished, so give help!"

43. Reference to a hadith: "Both the hands of my Lord are blessed right hands."

44. Arabic: sirr. Another meaning is the innermost part of the heart.

45. Arabic: lubb. The kernel, or inner part of the heart.

46. The text gives "ma' būd" (worshipped), but I translate according to the variant. See the Universal Tree's discourse, p. 37, n. 79, where the Tree describes himself as the "intended meaning".

47. This refers to the Arabic word Kun (Be!), God's Word that brought all creation into existence. The Universal Tree also gives this as one of his epithets. See p. 38, n. 80.

48. Gril (Arbre, p. 49, n. 49), points out the qualities that the Perfect Human Being must have in order to accomplish his spiritual goal. This paragraph contains references to the prophetic accoutrements: banner (liwā') and praised station (maqām maḥmūd).

He said: "The pens have been spent, the signs have gone away, the names have departed, the Throne has been veiled, the tablets have been put away, and the hearts and spirits have been lost. But these are necessary: the dark-green⁴⁹ gloom of the Garden, the sphere of water, the Supreme Pen, the first step, the hidden letter nūn,⁵⁰ and the guarded right hand."⁵¹

When I heard that there was still a trace of createdness before me, I feared that it would cut me off from my cognizance. So I rose from that gloomy darkness, leaving the Burāq of my aspiration in it. I was transported to the thrones of subtle grace and the couches⁵² of the celestial cushions,⁵³ until I reached the station of rejoicing where I set myself to oscillate like a hanging lamp.⁵⁴ I said: "What have I to do with the state of audition?"⁵⁵

Someone said: "It is the beauty of the rhythm that has set you in motion."

49. Possible reference to Q. 55: 64.

50. The letter nūn is found at the beginning of Sura 70 of the Qur'an, called "The Pen".

51. The right hand moves the Supreme Pen.

52. Arabic: muttākā'āt. See Q. 12: 31: "And when she [Zulaykha] heard of their sly talk, she sent for them and prepared for them a cushioned couch."

53. Arabic: rafārif. See Q. 55: 76: "Reclining on green cushions (rafrāf) and fair carpets." Note also that rafrāfa means to flutter like a bird, hence the rafrāf was sometimes considered to be one of the vehicles Muḥammad was transported in on his celestial ascensions.

54. See also Ibn 'Arabī's Risālat al-anwār, p. 189; English trans. (Harris, Lord of Power) p. 47. See also notes from al-Jilī's Commentary of R. al-anwār, entitled al-Isfār 'an risālat al-anwār, translated in Lord of Power, p. 88, n. 21: "Know ... that this place is a stage demanding the greatest courage from seekers. For if they arrive in it and this oneness manifests itself to them ... they suppose that they have arrived in the Presence of the Unity and triumphed in the essential revelation. This is because of the divine bliss they find in this stage and the fact that any reality other than their own is absent from it."

55. Arabic: samā'. Gril (Arbre, p. 50, n. 52) notes that audition for Ibn 'Arabī consists of two sorts: one in which the hearer delights in the harmonies and rhythms of sensible melodies and songs; the other in which the hearer is absorbed in the supra-sensible realm and does not engage in movement at all. See Fut. I. 210–11 and Fut. II. 366–9.

I said: "I didn't feel it."

Someone said to me: "Be careful! For you are with yourself and not with him!"

I said: "Reality is beyond the rhythms of song. What it demands is extinction within extinction."

Then a veil was lowered between my essence and its Essence and a state came between me and it.

Then he said to me: "Where are you, do you belong to the world or to me?"

I said: "[I am] between drudgery and desire. My goal is the blinding Cloud⁵⁶ while I am in the water. My spirit is in the heavens while my throne is in the primordial Dust and my family is in Sabā.⁵⁷ My kingdom is in the Throne and my authority in the two feet of equivalence.⁵⁸ My constellation is in the celestial sphere,⁵⁹ my veil is in the angel, my obscurity is in prime matter, and my trial is in this world.⁶⁰ My beginning is the first state⁶¹ while my end is the next world. My intimacy is in the intimate friend Abraham; my conversations are in Moses, who spoke with God; my vicegerency is in Aaron, the sage; my elevation is in Idrīs; my form is in Joseph; my knowledge in its diversity and multiplicity is in Jesus; my body is in Adam, the father of mankind; my heart is from Abraham, the greatest of masters; and my physical frame is in the four elements."⁶²

56. A reference to a much-cited hadith. The Prophet Muḥammad was asked, "Where was our Lord before He created the creatures?" He answered: "He was in a Cloud, neither above which nor below which was there any air." Ibn 'Arabī explains that the Cloud is "the nearest of existent things to God" (Fut. II. 310). Within it the cosmos takes shape.

57. See Q.27:22; 34:15.

58. The two feet of equivalence (sawā') are found at the level of the Footstool (al-kursī). It is at this level that the cosmos is polarized into opposing Names and Attributes.

59. Arabic: fulk and falak, whose orthography is identical.

60. Literally, the first. This world, as contrasted to the "last" world mentioned in the following line.

61. See Q. 79: 10–11: "Shall we really be restored to our first state even after we are crumbled bones?"

62. The seven prophets enumerated in this series are the same ones encountered

He said: "That is your portion from my creation, but where is your portion from my essence?"

I said: "Oh you, who speak by allusion! Relationship exists either with something contrary or something similar, and when the similar is inherent [to this relationship] it is inherent essentially and necessarily."

The one who speaks by allusion said: "I mean the relationship of the similar."

I said: "My trace is yours and my attribute is yours. Summation is better than particularization⁶³ in this manner, for the sake of the Wayfarers."

He said: "You've spoken correctly. But where is the relationship of the contrary, according to reality, not according to equivocation?"

I said: "In my non-existence is your existence and in my avarice is your generosity; in your speech is my muteness and in your discourse is my bell-peal. In my impossibility is your eternity and in my beginning is your precedence."

He said: "I know now that you know. How excellent is your judgment!"

Then the Universal Tree of the garden, described as the Likeness,⁶⁴ was unveiled to me. I observed a tree "whose root is firm and by the Prophet Muḥammad during his mi'rāj. They are associated with seven planets and seven attributes: Saturn – Abraham – intimacy; Jupiter – Moses – face-to-face-conversation; Mars – Aaron – vicegerency; Sun – Idrīs – elevation; Venus – Joseph – form of beauty; Mercury – Jesus – diverse sciences; Moon – Adam – body.

It is odd that Abraham should be mentioned twice, occurring both at the head and the foot of the list. It may be, as Stephen Hirtenstein has suggested to me, that when the Real, in descending through the levels of existence, reaches the lowest heaven, that of the Moon, It is met by the heart of the Perfect Human Being, symbolized here by Abraham, the custodian of the heart. The heart, in turn, is the synthesizing spiritual organ in which the four elements combine. In the mi'rāj literature, Abraham's place is the Visited House (al-Bayt al-Ma'mūr), the celestial equivalent of the Ka'ba, whose microcosmic equivalent is the heart of the believer. See Hirtenstein, "The Brotherhood of Milk".

63. Arabic: tafṣīl. For these two opposing terms, described in terms of the Supreme Pen and the Preserved Tablet, see Fut. I. 295; Fut. II. 283.

whose branches are in the heavens.”⁶⁵ Its fruit is in the hand of the Deity, who sits upon the Throne. Among its branches sat the Crow and the strange ‘Anqā’, and in the shelter of its boughs perched the Eagle and the Ringdove. I greeted the Tree and it answered, greeting me even more finely. It said: “Listen, O wayfarer, O king.”

Discourse of the Universal Tree, Described as the Likeness

I am the Universal Tree of synthesis and likeness. I have deep roots and my branches are lofty. The hand of the One⁶⁶ planted me in the garden of eternity, protected from the vicissitudes of time. I have spirit and body. My fruit is gathered with no hand touching it. These fruits contain more sciences and knowledge than sound intellects and subtle hearts can bear. My leaves are “raised couches”,⁶⁷ my fruits are not “out of reach nor yet forbidden”.⁶⁸ My centre is the desired goal. My branches perpetually draw nigh and come down.⁶⁹ Some come down to provide benefit and aid, while some draw nigh gradually to bestow favour. My constitution is like the celestial sphere in roundness and my branches are homes to the winged spirits. My flowers are like the stars whose course engenders the minerals, flowing in their bodies.

I am the Tree of light, speech, and the eye-balm of Moses,⁷⁰ upon whom be peace. Of directions mine is the most excellent right-

64. Arabic: mithliyya. The Perfect Human Being is often described as being the likeness (mithl), since he was created upon the form of the Real.

65. Q.14:24.

66. The Tree was planted by God’s one hand while Adam was created with God’s two hands.

67. Q.56:34.

68. Q.56:33.

69. See Q.53:8.

70. See Q.20:10; 27:7–8; 28:29–30. Moses was in search of fire for his family when he chanced upon the Burning Bush.

handed one, of places mine is the holy valley.⁷¹ Of times mine is the instant. Of dwelling places, mine is the equator⁷² and the temperate climes.⁷³ I have perpetuity, everlastingness, and felicity without misery. The fruits of my two gardens are near to hand⁷⁴ and my bough sways loftily as if intoxicated. It bestows grace and tenderness on all living creatures. My branches always offer frankincense to the spirits of the Guarded Tablet, and my foliage is a protection for them against the diurnal rays. My shade extends over those whom God envelops in his solicitude and my wings are spread over the people of sainthood. The spirit-winds blow on me from many different directions⁷⁵ and disarrange the order of my branches. From this entanglement one hears such melodious sounds. They enrapture the supreme intellects in the utmost heights and set them running on the course inscribed upon their scroll.

I am the music of wisdom that removes care through the beauty of its rhythmic song. I am the luminous light. Mine is the green carpet and the most resplendent round face. Assisted by the powers and ennobled by the one who is seated on the Throne, I have become like prime matter,⁷⁶ receiving all forms in the afterworld and the present one. I am not too narrow to bear anything! I am never apart from a faithful light that shines upon me; it consoles the one who leans upon me.

71. See Q. 20: 12; 79: 16. It was from the right side of the valley that the tree called to Moses (Q. 28: 30).

72. Arabic: khaṭṭ al-istiwā. The word “istiwā” is also associated with the All-Merciful’s sitting on the Throne (Q. 20: 5).

73. Arabic: i’tidāl al-arkān. It can also mean “moderation of elements”. The sense here is that the Tree is positioned in the centre of creation, the pivot-point of existence.

74. See Q. 55: 54: “... the fruit of both gardens near to hand.” Note the alliteration here: janā jannatayya.

75. Arabic: bi-ikhtilāfi taṣārīfihā, literally, with the opposition of their vicissitudes. The sense here is of the opposing attributes of the Divine Names.

76. See Commentary, p. 96, for the relationship between the Perfect Human Being and Prime Matter.

I am the “spreading shade”,⁷⁷ the clustered plantains,⁷⁸ the intended meaning,⁷⁹ the word of existence,⁸⁰ the most noble of originated beings, the most transcendent of limited beings. My power is unsurpassable, my place most holy, my lamp most elevated.⁸¹ I am the source from which issue the lights, the synthesis of the divine words,⁸² the mine of secrets and wisdoms.

Mine are the vast earth and the heavens.
In my centre are equivalence and straightness.⁸³
Mine are the firmly-rooted⁸⁴ majesty, the splendour,
The secret of the worlds, and the exaltation.⁸⁵
When thoughts betake themselves to my essence
The distance and the blinding Cloud bewilder them.

77. Q.56:30.

78. Q.56:29.

79. Arabic: al-ma'na al-maqsūd. A possible reference to the offspring of dyadic oppositions, the “singularity” (fardiyya) that equilibrates contraries. Thus, for example, in the syllogism, it is the conclusion, the “third thing” that results from the “cosmic marriage” of two premises. In alchemy, it is the gold that is the product of the marriage of sulphur and mercury (see Fut. II. 270, Chap. 167). For more on the cosmic marriage, see Commentary, p. 103.

80. A reference to God’s cosmogonic word: Be!

81. A reference to Q.24:35–6.

82. The Prophet Muḥammad is called by this epithet.

83. Arabic: al-sawā' wa-l-istiwā'. These two terms suggest ontological levels as well as the ideas of straightness, likeness, and moderation. The first is often equated with the Footstool, the second with the Throne upon which the All-Merciful sits (see Q.20:5). As Gril remarks (Arbre, p. 56, n. 72), sawā' has been defined by Ibn 'Arabī in his Iṣṭilāḥāt as “the occultation of God in the creature and the creature in God.” See also Fut. II. 128, Chap. 73, which has the same definition, adding: “This is only in one who knows that he is a locus of manifestation for the Real.”

84. Arabic: mu'aththal. The word conveys the sense not only of being firmly rooted but also suggests permanence. The athl is a kind of tamarisk tree, mentioned in the Qur'an (Q.34:16) in connection with the gardens of Sabā (Sheba).

85. Also: ascension, as one ascends the throne.

No one in the universe knows my existence
Save one undelimited by praise.⁸⁶
He disposes over and governs us.
The choice is his⁸⁷ – he does what he wills.⁸⁸

Discourse of the Ringdove

When the Ringdove heard the Universal Tree's discourse and the eternal knowledge it brought forth, she uttered a cry in the garden of her sanctity, declaring about herself:

When God wished to bring my creation into existence, he made me contemplate my own essence; he encircled my neck with the ring of splendour and he gave me the "Lote Tree of the Limit"⁸⁹ as a dwelling place. He called to the Eagle, assuring him that he would be preserved from punishment.⁹⁰ The Eagle, who was in the courtyard⁹¹ in front of his door, answered obediently: "Your call is heard." He told him: "Now you are in exile, even though you remain in the locus of my proximity. I am not of your kind, so you must feel lonely. But in you is eye-balm. Make her appear in reality. Enjoy"⁹²

86. It is impossible to praise God as befits Him, by any quality or Name, since "every one of His names known to us is assumed by the servant as his own trait and by it he becomes qualified to the measure that is appropriate for him" (Fut. III. 148; trans. Chittick, SPK, p. 71). As Chittick adds, parenthetically, "Hence there is no name worthy of God's unique Essence."

87. Literally: "He is the Chooser" (al-mukhtār).

88. Q. 3:40; 14:27; 22:18: "Allah doth what He will." This line is repeated in Fut. IV. 198 at the end of a poem on the Lordly Presence.

89. See Q. 53:13–16.

90. A play on words here. "Punishment" ('iqāba) is from the same root as "eagle" ('uqāb).

91. Another play on words, in that finā' (courtyard) and fanā' (annihilation) are from the same root F-N-Y. The Supreme Pen is often said to have been singled out from among the Enraptured Angels, who are annihilated in the beauty and majesty of the Real. See, for example, Fut. I, Chap. 13; I. 295.

92. From the same root as "soul" (nafs) and "breath" (nafas).

her company and be cheered by her conversation, because familiarity with me is impossible, for I am ‘mighty in power’.”⁹³

The Eagle asked: “How can something be manifested from me when my station is weakness and my power and might have no authority?”

He answered him: “Continue to call plaintively and that very one will appear before you, face to face. This is the second harmony and union through doubling.”

The Eagle obeyed. He doubled his plaint and I appeared; the Real called me and I hastened. The Eagle, however, had not understood what was happening, since he was preoccupied with the dower and my coming into existence from his loins. When he heard me respond to the divine call, he asked: “What is this that has appeared?”

As soon as he had seen me, he fell in love with me. The beauty God had surrounded⁹⁴ me with made him mad with love. Passion made him groan with pain: “I’m burning! I’m drowning!” He was like a nightingale, warbling his plaint,⁹⁵ trying to heal his condition, but the burning only became more extensive and solace more impossible. I would not permit him to kiss me, although his cure was in lying with me and embracing me. The veils of doubt were raised, and from behind the pavilions of the Unseen someone called: “What is wrong with you that you don’t regard her lineaments and the performance of her song? Why have you not looked upon her qualities and the marvels of her wisdom?”

He called me to him. “Here I am!” I responded. He commanded me to sit before him. He said: “I was so inflamed with ardour at your form that I overlooked the knowledge of your spiritual qualities.

93. Q.13:13. Note the paronomasia between muḥāl (impossible) and miḥāl (power).

94. Arabic: ṭawwaganī. It could also mean “he embraced me”.

95. Arabic: balbala bulbulun balbālahu. A fine play of words here on words from the quadriliteral root B-L-B-L, meaning “nightingale” (bulbul), to disquiet (balbala), and anxiety (balbāl), which the author complements by ending the following line with bāl (mind /state).

The divine order has come that you make yourself known to me and that a ray of your sunlight shine for me.”

I said: “God has brought me into existence from you, face to face.⁹⁶ And he has made me manifest from your loins, following our inclination for one another. I emanate from your power and am manifested through your form. God has entrusted me with two realities and has given me two subtle threads:⁹⁷ one reality by which I know and one reality by which I bring into existence what I wish by means of its occasion.⁹⁸ One thread is attached to you; it is sent down to me when I desire you and draws me to your presence. The second joins me to him and is sent down to me when he calls me to him.”

When he heard that a subtle thread extended from me to him, and having verified the realities of love, the Eagle descended toward me along this thread. My essence mingled with his,⁹⁹ my qualities disappeared into his, and we were absorbed in the pleasures of union, cheered by the attainment of harmony. The spiritual wedding took place. The two waters flowed together in the womb of the moment, which received them in virtue of that divine wisdom that bestows grace to some and accords misery to others.¹⁰⁰ The lover recovered from his malady and found rest in a desire to answer the divine call. Wavering between two desires, he set in the two wests and rose in the two easts.¹⁰¹

96. Arabic: ‘inda al-taqābul. The sense is both of facing and opposing.

97. Arabic: raqīqa. See Commentary, pp. 85–6.

98. Arabic: sabab. This means the secondary cause, the primary cause being God who, in reality, is the only true cause.

99. See our Commentary, pp. 53–4, regarding the possibility of the intermingling (here imtizāj) of essences.

100. Arabic: man ḥurima wa-man ruḥima, literally “one who is refused and one who is accorded mercy”. Note the transposition of the letters ḥā’ and rā’ to give opposite meanings. As Gril notes (Arbre, p. 14), the Eagle represents the pole of severity and the Ringdove the pole of mercy, already inherent in the right and left branches of the Tree.

101. See Q.55: 17: “Lord of the two easts, and Lord of the two wests.” The exoteric sense of “two easts” may refer to the extreme points where the sun rises in winter and summer, while the “two wests” may be the extreme points where the sun sets in

When he had recovered from his suffering and had departed to his abode, I found in myself a fullness that I had never before known. The paths and roads to him were blocked. The divine thread moved and I said: “Oh, my God. What is this that has befallen me?”

He said: “Exhale¹⁰² when you mention me so that the word of my command may manifest from you.”

So I exhaled like one oppressed. And there was the ‘Anqā’, who filled my refuge with life. Ask the ‘Anqā’ about herself and she will tell you what God has deposited in her of his subtle graces and what he has given to her of knowledge.

I am the Dove of oft-repeated praises.¹⁰³

My dwelling is in the Garden of spiritual meanings.

I am an essence in the entities. I have nothing but dualities.

They call me “O second!” – but I am not second.

Everything in creation ends up at my existence.

I come after the one whose essence is too high for sight.

My authority is useful to those most far and near.

summer and winter. See Pickthall, Glorious Qur’an, p. 590, and Yūsuf ‘Ali, Meaning of the Glorious Qur’an, p. 1474, n. 5184. The latter adds “extreme” to qualify the points and says that they include all points in between. Hence God is everywhere. Additional esoteric meanings are given by Ibn ‘Arabī in another early work, the ‘Anqā’ mughrib. The east in general is associated with the world of manifestation, while the west is associated with the world of transcendence (see Elmore, Islamic Sainthood, p. 493). With respect to the two solar risings, he says: “Even as the sun necessarily changes its time of rising and shifts its place – similarly your own ‘Sun’ must rise upon the exterior of your physical constitution. And know that the sun, by an inherent [motion] is constantly circulating from the west to the east, even as it proceeds by [compulsion from] another from the east to the west, though sight is unable [to perceive the former movement] and the mind is staggered [by its computation]. But it must be that one day [the Sun rising from the West] will openly manifest its [inherent] movement [eastwards] and [freely] bestow its blessing.” (Trans. Elmore, Islamic Sainthood, p. 487.) Note: the sun’s rising in the west is a sign of the Mahdi’s coming.

102. This command suggests the Breath of the All-Merciful, which relieves the non-existent fixed entities (al-a’yān al-thābita) from the distress of their latent possibility by bringing them into existence.

103. Arabic: mathānī. See Commentary, pp. 87–8.

I have no likeness save one whose nature is similar to mine.
Reproach me if you wish for what my tongue brings forth:
Beautiful realities descend upon threads Toward the hearts that turn from the ornaments of the gardens
In search of the one who transcends the vicissitudes of time.
He is the singular, the exalted. No second shares his authority.
He is the one who elected me;
He is the one who selected me.
He has placed me in equilibrium between pot and potter.¹⁰⁴
I banish every distant one and draw each near one closer.
I befriend every friend and I afflict all the wretched.
When I swoop down low, it is with the spirit of diffusing,
And when I rise high above, bodily constitutions dissolve.
It is I who confer sense and leave the inhabited places deserted.¹⁰⁵

Discourse of the Royal Eagle

When the Eagle heard what the Ringdove had mentioned and what she had related about the certain sciences, he said: “What she has affirmed is true. She has disclosed to you all the sciences she encompasses.”

I said to him: “Fly through the air of your eloquence and tell us clearly about your nature.” The throne of the Eagle shook. He flapped his wings joyfully and said:

104. Arabic: bayna dann wa-dannān. Dann is literally an earthen wine-jar with a tapered bottom. See Lane, Arabic-English Lexicon, Part 3, p.918, s.v. dann. Both the imagery and the Arabic root D-N-N suggest the soul’s intermediate station between God the Craftsman and His product here below, al-dunyā.

105. Arabic: maghānī. See Lane, Arabic-English Lexicon, Part 6, p.2304, s.v. maghnan. The sense here is of a place whose inhabitants were satisfied but then departed from or were removed from it.

I am the Eagle.

To me belong the most elevated station, beauty, and the most brilliant shining light.

I carry out everything according to its determined rank
On this world's shores, but my power is more inaccessible.

I am his sublime effusion, the light of his existence.

I am he who summons existence and it obeys.

I am the one who never ceases to be the "handful" of my creator,¹⁰⁶

The instrument of his openhandedness.

The realities hurry toward me to seek their fill.¹⁰⁷

I give to and withhold from whomever I wish.

If I approach, the beauty of his being dazzles me.

If I retreat, his most magnificent splendour summons me.

Approach confers upon me a pleasing wisdom

But it rends the heart of the high one.

Distance invests me with an apportioned command

Whose light illuminates their borders.¹⁰⁸

When I am distant I am the commander –

My misery is in my command and my felicity when it is removed.

The most pleasing of my moments is when I see the essences of the new moons arising.

I was still non-existent as an entity in one of the levels of creation when the divine solicitude came forth and made my existence the beginning. Having manifested himself to himself, my existence was prolonged in my contemplation. I received the supreme rank

106. See Q.39:67: "... the whole earth is His handful on the Day of Resurrection ..."

107. Arabic: mā fī shirbihā. Shirb is "a share, or portion that falls to one's lot of water." Lane, Arabic-English Lexicon, Part 4, p. 1527, s.v. shirb.

108. Arabic: arjā'. See Lane, Arabic-English Lexicon, Part 3, p. 1050, s.v. rajan. See also Q. 69: 17: "The angels will stand at its borders (arjā' ihā) and eight will uphold the Throne of their Lord that day, above them."

through the form,¹⁰⁹ and the most secret part of my being became his Throne.¹¹⁰ The divine all-encompassing Name sat itself down upon me. His two viziers, He-who-gives and He-who-withholds, and his two chamberlains, He-who-confers-harm and He-who-confers-good, stood at his two stirrups.¹¹¹ When the sitting had taken place, and the other¹¹² appeared, and the names “mighty” and “sublime” were given to me, the courtyard became filled. Subsistence and annihilation¹¹³ appeared; just allotment and effusive plenty followed one another in alternating course, and expansiveness and contraction were firmly established. By the kingdom the king was confirmed, by the message the angel became manifest, and by the stars the sphere was set in motion.

Then he called me to instruct me with the language of arbitration: “Look into your essence, bringing together all that delights you.” When I began to look and could distinguish between those that required precedence and those that required contemplation, I laid down the different laws and divided the lights between merits and graces.¹¹⁴ I said to those enraptured spirits whom I surveyed: “Adhere to the enrapturing presence!” And I said to the subjected spirits whom I surveyed: “Adhere to the subjecting stations!” And I said to the governing spirits whom I surveyed: “Adhere to the governed bodies!” Each of these departed to seek its waystation in order to contemplate there the one who had caused them to descend. I had already seen the Ringdove, pregnant with the strange ʿAnqāʾ, but in dividing up the waystations, I had neglected the one who shares my waystation.¹¹⁵

109. There is a near homophony between sūra (rank) and ṣūra (form). This is particularly fitting, as it is the divine form that gives the Intellect its high rank.

110. A play on words between sarīr (throne) and sarīra (secret).

111. A reference to the Footstool at which level polarities enter creation.

112. Arabic: al-siwā. What is other than the Real, that is, creation.

113. Note the near tajnīs between fināʾ (courtyard) and fanāʾ (annihilation).

114. Arabic: al-makāsib (what is earned) and al-mawāhib (what is bestowed). For this distinction and its relation to prophecy, see, for example, Fut. II, beginning of Chap. 73.

115. Arabic: al-munāzil. Translation unsure. I follow Gril’s translation (Arbre,

I am the knowledge of creation concealed in the cloak of the divine inviolability. A band of philosophers invented lies¹¹⁶ about me and a gang of noblemen tried to capture me. They set up the fowler's net of their thoughts to hunt me and used against me the very means that I myself had provided them with in order to gain from my toil. And when their spiritual aspirations were sufficient to grasp me in their fowler's net of thought, there fell into it an eagle with my form from the country of illusion. They said, "This is the clear truth!" Would that they knew that the truth is not clear to them and never will be. Knowledge of me and my existence depends upon what is granted as a gift or recompensed for merit.¹¹⁷ Satan incited them to doubt and they imagined that they had alighted at the summit when their station was the low plains. They mistook anteriority for eternity,¹¹⁸ declaring me eternal and that my existence did not stem from non-existence.¹¹⁹ I abandoned them to their confusion "like meat on the butcher's block." Those who commit an injustice to the divine command must be oppressed! I am free from what they attribute to me, and an unbeliever¹²⁰ in what they set up. For God, may his glory be magnified, was from all eternity while I was under the decree of non-existence. Then he brought me into existence from non-existence through a pre-eternal precedence, and my essence became manifest. He illuminated my existence with his knowledge and entrusted me with poverty and weakness, turning me away from might

p. 64). The form is masculine, but from the narrative of the Ringdove, we may assume she is the one who has been overlooked.

116. Arabic: iftarā. In the Qur'an, this word is used for the attribution of an associate with God. See Q. 4:51: "And whoso attributeth a copartner to God hath devised an enormous sin."

117. Again, a reference to earning and divine bestowal. The Shaykh is suggesting here that the philosophers will never discover the truth about the First Intellect; such knowledge belongs only to the Messengers, Prophets, and Friends of God.

118. Note the play on words between qidam (eternity) and qadam (anteriority), which have the same orthography.

119. In other words, the philosophers mistook the First Intellect for the Real.

120. Arabic: kāfir. Gril's translation (Arbre, p. 65), "I disavow the worship that they offer me", though less literal, conveys the sense of the phrase very well.

and glory. I am the humble one who has no glory and the powerful one who does not cease to be weak.¹²¹

Discourse of the Strange ‘Anqā’

When the Eagle completed his discourse and finished explaining his station, the ‘Anqā’ began to speak clearly about her existence and spoke strangely¹²² about the high rank of her limit.¹²³

She said: I am the strange ‘Anqā’. My dwelling is forever in the west,¹²⁴ in the middle station, on the banks of the surrounding sea.¹²⁵ Glory embraces me on two sides without my entity ever becoming manifest at all.

I am the one who has no existent entity, the one who lacks no property,
Strange ‘Anqā’, they’ve come to call me.
Although the door of my existence is sealed
The Merciful has not made my mention in vain
But it has to do with a meaning whose secret must be sought –
It is that I am the one who bestows gnosis to their innermost beings.
Our straight path stretches on, and the wayfarers are each at the levels of their light:
The greatest one is he whose light is sheer detachment.

121. Ibn ‘Arabī plays nicely on the rhyming sounds of these two opposing verbs: ya’ izz (to be powerful) and ya’ jiz (to be weak).

122. Arabic: tu’ribu (to speak clearly) and tughribu (to say strange things). This paronomasia is particularly elegant in that the letters ‘ayn and ‘ghayn are distinguished only by the dot above the latter.

123. Arabic: ḥadd. Could also mean “definition”.

124. Arabic: maghrib. Note the use of words based on the root GH-R-B: meaning strangeness, west, exile.

125. Arabic: al-baḥr al-muḥīṭ. This is also the name for the Mediterranean Sea and the Atlantic Ocean. For an esoteric meaning of this “surrounding sea”, see Fut. II. 40, where it is equated with knowledge of union and separation.

Limits¹²⁶ derive from me, and upon me existence depends. One hears mention of me but I am invisible, and the report of me is not one that can be declared a lie. I am the strange one, the 'Anqā'. My mother is the Ringdove and my father the Royal Eagle. My son is the Jet-Black Crow. I am the element of light and darkness, the place of trust and suspicion. I do not receive the unqualified light, for it is my contrary. I am unacquainted with knowledge, for I cannot produce or reproduce.¹²⁷ Everyone who praises me is far from understanding me, subdued by the sultan of imagination. I have no might in which to seek protection. The bodily frames of superior and inferior creation trace their origin to me. I am the reality that has no character, because of the vastness that I have. I clothe every condition with either happiness or misery. I am capable of bearing any form. I have no rank in any known form. But I have received the gift of transmitting the sciences although I am no knower, and of bestowing determinations although I am no judge. Nothing can be manifested that I am not in, but no seeker can attain it as something grasped or perceived in its entirety. I am of very great value in the eyes of those who realize the truth. I wander through the gathering of those with bowed heads.¹²⁸ Thus I have explained my state and have made manifest what is true and what is impossible about myself.

Discourse of the Jet-Black Crow

The Crow arose and said: I am the body of lights and the bearer of the receptacle of secrets,¹²⁹ the receptacle of quality and quantity, and the cause of joy and sorrow. I am the leader who is led. Sense and sensible are mine and through me appear the traces [of existence].

126. As Gril says (Arbre, p. 67, n. 92): "Limits are what defines a being; they are of three kinds: essential, descriptive, and linguistic." See Fut. II. 63.

127. See Q. 85: 13: "It is He who produceth, then reproduceth."

128. Arabic: majlis al-muṭṭiqīn, from the fourth form of the root ṭ-R-Q. This root is also associated with the word ṭarīqa, meaning "the Sufi Path".

129. See Fut. II. 647.

From me arises the world of material bodies. I am the source of figures, and likenesses are struck according to the levels of my form. I am the lamp¹³⁰ and the winds. I am the chain against the pebbles¹³¹ and the wing. I am the sea whose waves constantly strike one another.¹³² I am, of the numbers, the singular among counted numbers and its pair. My width is the abode of the charismatic gifts of his friends and my depth is the abode of abuse to his enemies. My height has not ceased to be face to face with his essence, through eternity without beginning and end, ever since I was brought into existence. I am the alembic of wisdom, the music of melody, and the one who brings together the realities of the words. In directing oneself toward me, one reaches the limit,¹³³ and those who are endowed with intelligence¹³⁴ rely upon me. I am the most precious gift¹³⁵ that has been bestowed, the final goal that has no end.¹³⁶ For my sake some are accepted and others rejected. I am those who are rolled and held in his right hand, and I am enclosed in the grasp of the evident truth.¹³⁷ The Real summoned me into his presence and I came. He called me to his knowledge and I readily responded. I am the form of the celestial sphere and the place of royalty. Upon me he established the Throne and I was given the name “place where it was established”.¹³⁸ I am the subsequent¹³⁹ who is not overtaken, just

130. See Q.24:35: “The similitude of His light is as a niche wherein is a lamp.”

131. According to a prophetic report, this was one of the forms in which the revelation came to the Prophet.

132. See Q.24:40: “Or as a darkness on a vast, abysmal sea. There covereth him a wave, above which is a cloud. Layer upon layer of darkness.”

133. Arabic: ilayya al-munahhī. Munahhī can also mean “one who forbids or warns”. I follow Gril’s translation here, as it seems to make more sense. The Arabic root N-H-W/Y has the meanings: to forbid, restrain, reach (a limit).

134. See Q.20:54 and 20:128: “Herein verily are signs for men of thought.”

135. Arabic: luhā. The root of this word generally has to do with entertainment of a light sort; however, one of the manuscripts consulted by Gril glosses it as “gift”.

136. Although matter is the limit of manifestation, the individuals that come to be in embodied form are endless.

137. See Q.39:67: “... when the whole earth is His handful on the Day of Resurrection, and the heavens are rolled in His right hand.”

138. See Gril, Arbre, p.44, nn.29 and 30 for the connection between the equatorial as the Eagle is the precedent¹⁴⁰ who is not outstripped. He is the first and I am the last. His is the non-manifest dimension and mine is the manifest one. Existence has been divided between myself and him. I manifest his might and his creation, while his judgement depends on me. My knowledge flows in him, and his knowledge flows in me. When its bestower offers it, it is for our benefit, and when I acquire it, he thanks me for increasing it even more.

Some alleging to be endowed with unshakeable reason made their claim and imposed their dubious judgement. They showered me with unseemly derision and divested me of the robe of seemly praise. But the evil consequences of their actions will turn against them and their mocking will encompass them when, in the depths [of my hell]¹⁴¹ they will call for help and be answered: “Begone therein and speak not unto me”,¹⁴² while in the breadth [of my paradise]¹⁴³ those who praised me well will make merry with their spouses “in a garden made joyful”.¹⁴⁴ The Law has already praised me so what do I care? The received text has made clear my rank, so why say more?

line, the place of the Throne’s establishment, and the “dark bodies” that are the most secure places to hide the divine lights.

139. Arabic: al-lāḥiq. It is interesting to note that both this word and its pair here, al-sābiq (see below), were used by the Ismā‘īlīs to designate levels in their hierarchical structure, be it human – as is the case with lāḥiq, which signifies the Hidden Imam’s deputy during his occultation – or cosmic, as is the case with sābiq, described below.

140. Arabic: al-sābiq. The Ismā‘īlīs, drawing on Neoplatonic emanationist doctrines, associated this word with the First Intellect. See Corbin, Cyclical Time, pp. 87–9. While there is ample proof in Ibn ‘Arabi’s writings to refute any Shi‘ite proclivities on his part, the linking of these two terms does suggest that there is a stronger connection between Intellect and Body than is immediately perceptible. For a refutation of Ibn ‘Arabi’s supposed Shi‘ism, see al-Ghorab, “Muhyiddin Ibn al-‘Arabi Amidst Religions and Schools of Thought”, pp. 202–6.

141. Literally: “in my depth”.

142. Q. 23: 108.

143. Literally: “in my breadth”.

144. Q. 30: 15; 43: 70.

I am, with respect to my Lord, a wisdom for one who sees me,
For I am the secret whose nature was fashioned without fingertips.

My creator ordered everything within himself when he constructed me,

For I am a rock, and from me the spiritual meanings flash.¹⁴⁵
Together with the superior beings, [we are] like contesting racehorses,

Yet I am one who conceals himself modestly from view.
I'm the one who answered my Lord obediently when he summoned me.

He who, because of time's vicissitudes, sees my existence
Like the heart of Moses' mother, empty of spiritual meanings,¹⁴⁶

Is completely void¹⁴⁷ of the verities of explanation.

I am the source of habitations and the foundation of songs.

I am the secret of an Imam, a noble one, high in place,

Whose knowledge is the most perfect knowledge

And whose rank is the greatest rank.

He fell in love with me when he saw me in the enclosures of the gardens.

I do not name him for I fear the spearhead's¹⁴⁸ sharpness.¹⁴⁹

145. See Q.2:60; 7:160. See Commentary, p. 72, for this line's connection to the dedicatee of the treatise.

146. See Q.28:10: "And the heart of the mother of Moses became void, and she would have betrayed him if We had not fortified her heart, that she might be of the believers."

147. Arabic: al-khalī. See Commentary, p. 101, for a discussion of this term.

148. Arabic: ḥadd al-sinān. A pun on the name of the dedicatee, found in the following line. The Arabic root H-D-D conveys a number of senses, including: sharpness, definition, limit, impediment, and legal punishment.

149. It is possible that Ibn 'Arabī is also alluding to a tradition of the Prophet: "No verse of the Qur'an has come down without it having an exoteric (ẓāhir) interpretation, an esoteric (bāṭin) interpretation, a limit (ḥadd) and a place of ascension (muṭṭala').¹" If limit – the barzakh between the exoteric and esoteric interpretation – belongs to Sinān, the place of ascent where one solves the riddle, belongs to Ṣakhr,

Discourse of the Jet-Black Crow

But he who understands my riddle is Ṣakhr ibn Sinān –
The one who possesses the most generous hand
And the one who is most steadfast in combat.
Mother, Grandmother, Grandfather, and I:
The spiritual meanings of our existence derive from God,
timelessly,
Like what becomes visible to the eye in the air brightened with lightning.¹⁵⁰

Oh Ṣakhr ibn Sinān, I have explained to you some of the stations of the sources of the creatures: the universal human being, the first intellect, the unique soul, prime matter, and universal body. Investigate them like an intelligent man who seeks the salvation of his soul.

Peace be upon its author and upon us!

the rock from which one gains a perspective of the totality. I thank Stephen Hirstenstein for his suggestive comments on this puzzling verse. See also Chap. 25 of the Futūḥāt.

150. This line can also be found in 'Uqlat al-mustawfiz, p. 56, where it begins the chapter on the Throne of the All-Merciful, which brings together the "four existing things": Nature, Dust, [Universal] Body, and Sphere.

COMMENTARY

The Title

The full title of the treatise is long and complex: Cosmic Unification in the Presence of the Eye-witnessing through the Assembly of the Human Tree and the Four Spiritual Birds (al-Ittiḥād al-kawnī fī ḥaḍrat al-ish-hād al-‘aynī bi-maḥḍūr al-shajara al-insāniyya wa-l-ṭuyūr al-arba‘a al-ruḥāniyya). As is generally the case with Ibn ‘Arabī’s titles, each word is carefully chosen for its semantic as well as symbolic resonance. While we will discuss the “human tree” and the “four spiritual birds” later, let us briefly look at the other key terms in the title.

Ittiḥād

Ittiḥād is the verbal noun deriving from the eighth form of the consonantal root W-H-D, which conveys the basic meaning of “one, unity, uniqueness”. The eighth form of the verb primarily gives the sense of reflexivity and reciprocity. Thus the first-form verb waḥada, meaning “to be one, unique”, becomes in the eighth form ittahada, meaning “to unite”, to make oneself and/or others one. As Ibn ‘Arabī defines it, “Ittiḥād is that two essences become one, whether servant or Lord”,¹ thus the term suggests a mystical union in which one essence is subsumed or annihilated in the other. But, as Souad al-Ḥakīm has written, “the ittiḥād in which two essences become one is impossible according to Ibn ‘Arabī”.² As the Shaykh tells us, “There can be no ittiḥād other than with respect to number and nature.”³

1. Fut. II. 130, Chap. 73, Question 153.

2. Al-Ḥakīm, Al-Mu‘jam al-ṣūfī, p. 1180.

3. Fut. II. 130, Chap. 73, Question 153. In the case of numbers, one remains the essence of every number; two, although it has a different name, is nothing but one

The doctrine of ittiḥād is censured by both the exoteric scholars, such as the theologians and philosophers, and by the mystics, albeit in a qualified sense. Not only can there be no intermingling of essences, either as an apotheosis of the human being or as an incarnation (ḥulūl) of the divine in human form, but the entire notion of ittiḥād rests on the false assumption that there is anything at all other than the One Essence.⁴ Ittiḥād thus, from one point of view, is a meaningless concept.

This, however, is not the full story, for there are situations in which, Ibn 'Arabī claims, the declaration of ittiḥād is not only permissible but necessary for the mystic to profess. In the highly allusive Chapter 399 of the Futūḥāt, Ibn 'Arabī discusses ittiḥād at length. The paradoxes of this notion are evident in the chapter's title: On Knowledge of the Mutual Waystation of "He who enters it, I smote his neck [that is, behead him], and no one remains who does not enter it." It is inevitable, in other words, that the creature will profess ittiḥād, whether he realizes the true situation or is completely unaware. Everyone and everything attributes his own action to himself, everything says "I". God Himself ascribes action to His creatures, as Ibn 'Arabī points out in a series of quotations from the Qur'an. Hence, although the gnostic knows that God is the only agent, there are times when his spiritual state or even a command from God allows him to attribute God's action to himself, as in the case of spiritual annihilation (fanā') where God, as a result of the servant's drawing near to Him through the supererogatory acts of worship (nawāfil), "becomes", in the ḥadīth qudsī,⁵ the servant's plus one. The name "one" has disappeared. In the case of nature, various names designate the many forms of existing things, but the essence remains one, hidden.

4. See also Fut. IV. 71, Chap. 456, and Gril's translation (Arbre, p. 19) concerning the identity of the Voice that addressed Moses from the Burning Bush (here simply the Tree). The upshot is that the Real is both the Speaker in the form of the Tree and the Hearer in the form of Moses, without the Tree ceasing to be a tree or Moses ceasing to be Moses. There is no ḥulūl (dissolving of essences) because, as we have seen above, a thing cannot unite with its own essence.

5. A ḥadīth qudsī is the extra-Qur'anic speech of God, transmitted on the authority of the Prophet Muḥammad.

hearing, seeing, speaking, and all his faculties.⁶ When the servant enters the station of ittiḥād, God “smote[s] his neck”; that is, He severs the connection between the absolute and the relative with respect to the servant’s perception of his ontological condition, and only Oneness (aḥadiyya) remains, a Oneness that belongs to the Real alone, never to the servant.⁷ This, of course, is the reason for the “blasphemous” and unruly utterances of such well-known Sufis as al-Ḥallāj, who said: “I am the Real”, and Abū Yazīd al-Bisṭāmī, who said: “Glory be to me.”

Another instance of the permissibility of declaring ittiḥād is discussed briefly by Ibn ‘Arabī in the Futūḥāt’s Chapter on Love,⁸ with reference to the ḥadīth qudsī mentioned above, as well as the Qur’anic dictum to the Prophet: “You did not throw when you threw but God threw” (Q. 8: 17). Further on in the chapter,⁹ he describes the goal of spiritual love as ittiḥād, in which the essence of the Beloved becomes the essence of the lover, a statement that would seem to contradict his statements elsewhere. He relates this to the infamous heresy of incarnation (ḥulūl), but says that those who proclaim it are unaware of the real meaning of this unification.

6. See Ibn ‘Arabī’s Mishkāt al-anwār, trans. Hirtenstein and Notcutt as Divine Sayings, hadith 91, p. 88 (English), p. 51 (Arabic) for the complete text. Note that, for Ibn ‘Arabī, only the human being, fashioned upon the divine Form, can participate in God’s creativity by engaging in supererogatory acts of worship; angels, on the other hand, have a certain one-dimensionality in that they can only engage in what is obligatory. See Fut. IV. 30, Chap. 421 (trans. Chittick, SPK, p. 328): “The angels are servants by compulsion, while we are servants by compulsion through our obligatory works and by free choice through our supererogatory works.”

7. See Fut. II. 31, Chap. 73: “If it were not for the dependence of the essence of the servant, the authority of these two Names [the First and the Last] would not become manifest, since the essence (‘ayn) [with respect to God] is one and it is not united (muttaḥida), while with respect to the servant it is united, not one. Oneness (aḥadiyya) belongs to God while unification (ittiḥād), not Oneness, belongs to the servant. For the servant cannot be conceived as other than [dependent] on someone else, not on himself, so he has no whiff of Oneness ever. One can conceive Oneness of the Real and one can conceive relation (idāfa) of Him, because everything belongs to Him, or rather He is the essence (‘ayn) of all.”

8. Fut. II. 322, Chap. 178.

9. See Fut. II. 334.

The sense of unification between the lover and the Beloved is later explained in terms of natural love, in which two lovers exchange breath, that is, spirits, and saliva in intimate embrace. “When this breath becomes the spirit in the one toward which it is transferred and the breath of the other becomes the spirit of the first, it is interpreted as unification (ittiḥād) ... So it is correct to say [as the poet al-Ḥallāj has said]:

I am the One I love, and the One I love is me!”¹⁰

A final example, taken from this same chapter on love, shows the bewilderment of the lover who does not understand the situation as it really is. Taken from an enumeration of various essential characteristics of the lover, the passage in question has to do with the lover whose essential characteristic is that he is “annoyed (mutabarrim) by the company of what comes between him and meeting his Beloved.”¹¹ As Ibn ‘Arabī explains, nothing comes between the gnostic and meeting God but non-existence, which is nothing. Existence is nothing other than God. God Himself is the Contemplator in every eye that sees Him. The only veil between lover and Beloved is creation, and the lover is unable to remove creation for it is his very essence. As Ibn ‘Arabī explains, “A thing cannot remove itself from itself, and his self is what comes between him and meeting his Beloved ... so he remains ever annoyed.”¹² He imagines that when he is separated from his body, he will be separated from composition and he will become something simple in which there is no duality. He multiplies his own oneness (aḥadiyya) with the Oneness of the Real, and this constitutes the meeting. But multiplication results only in him, not in Him. And this makes the lover even more annoyed. On the other hand, the lover who is a knower of God does not become

10. Fut. II. 334, Chap. 178. See also Fut. II. 390 where Ibn ‘Arabī makes an explicit connection between this line of al-Ḥallāj’s poem and two lines from the Shaykh’s own Risālat al-ittiḥād. See our translation, p. 24, n. 10 and p. 30, n. 24.

11. Fut. II. 351, Chap. 178.

12. Ibid.

annoyed because “he knows the affair as it really is, as we have mentioned in the Treatise on Unification (Risālat al-ittiḥād).”¹³

And how is the affair as it really is? In one sense, one can explain it only by paradox: there is / is not unification, depending on one’s particular understanding of the word. Ibn ‘Arabī himself explains it in terms of the Prophet’s supererogatory supplication that God make him into a light since God has said: “God is the light of the heavens and the earth” (Q.24:35). The Shaykh explains: “The glories [of God’s Face] are lights, and light is not burned away by light. Rather, it is included within it, that is, it coheres with it because it is of the same genus. This is conjunction and unification (ittiḥād).”¹⁴ The Muḥammadan light is thus consubstantial with the Divine Light. The servant, who, in himself, has only possible existence, is by his very nature something added (nafl), “light upon light” (Q.24:34) as it were: “You are fundamentally extra with respect to existence, since God was when you were not, and then you were.”¹⁵

Thus ittiḥād can only occur when the servant realizes his superfluous or supererogatory nature vis-à-vis the Real. By engaging in the supererogatory, an act that engages his will and creativity, he assumes the attributes of the Real, whereby the Real becomes his hearing, seeing, and all his faculties. It is only in this way that the Real becomes manifest in the form of the servant and the servant becomes manifest in the form of the Real. Then there is an interpenetration of attributes rather than the disappearance of one essence into another.¹⁶

It is, as Ibn ‘Arabī remarks in his chapter on Abraham in the Fuṣūṣ al-ḥikam, like the dying of a garment, where colour penetrates the cloth.¹⁷ This interpenetration of attributes is known as khulla, or intimate friendship, from which the designation of Abraham as

13. Ibid. This appears to be the only explicit mention of the R. al-ittiḥād in the Futūḥāt.

14. Fut. II. 184, Chap. 101. See also Fut. II. 126.

15. Fut. IV. 449, Chap. 560.

16. K. al-masā’il, pp. 164–5 (mas’āla 41).

17. Fuṣūṣ, pp. 80–1; Austin, Bezels of Wisdom, pp. 91–2.

al-Khalīl derives. As the Shaykh explains, “Khulla can only be between God and His servant. It is the station of unification (ittiḥād).”¹⁸ It is a reciprocal intimacy, then, in which the loving servant plays both an active and a passive part, following the two-part structure of the aforementioned ḥadīth qudsī.¹⁹ In the first stage: “My servant does not approach me by something I love more than by those acts which I have prescribed.” In this first movement, one involving the performance of obligatory acts, Abraham “penetrates and encompasses”²⁰ the Divine Attributes. This is followed by a second stage in which: “He does not cease approaching Me with supererogatory acts until I love him.” This love consists of the “penetration” by the Divine Spirit, which courses through every organ and limb of the servant’s body: “And when I love him, I am his ear with which he hears, his eye with which he sees, his hand with which he grasps.”²¹

Ittiḥād, then, is the state in which God is “nearer” to His servant “than the jugular vein” (Q. 50: 16), but neither Lord nor vassal disappears. As Ibn ‘Arabī concludes, in the chapter on Abraham in the Fuṣūṣ:

We are His as has been shown,
As also we belong to ourselves.
... I have two aspects, He and I,
But He is not I in my I.
In me is His place of manifestation,
And we are for Him as vessels.²²

18. Fut. II. 22, Chap. 73.

19. See above, pp. 56–7.

20. Fuṣūṣ, p. 80.

21. In Fut. IV. 24, Chap. 417, Ibn ‘Arabī notes that: “obligatory acts (farā’id) are higher and more loved by God than supererogatory ones (nawāfil). ... God the Most High said: [My servant] does not draw near to Me by anything I love more than by that which I have prescribed for him.” He then quotes the rest of the ḥadīth qudsī, and remarks: “This is the result of supererogatory acts, so what do you think about the result of obligatory acts by which the servant will be God’s hearing and sight?!” See also Fut. II. 173, IV. 30, 449–50.

22. Trans. Austin (slightly modified), Bezels of Wisdom, p. 95.

Kawnī

Kawnī is an adjective derived from the verbal noun kawn, cosmos, creation. It can also refer to the individual creature. The consonantal root is K-W-N, whose meanings include “to be”, “to create”, “to bring into existence”. God’s command “Be!” (kun)²³ is the occasion for all existence. Ibn ‘Arabī finds an esoteric meaning within the structure of this command. Although it is written with only two letters, the kāf and the nūn, the wāw lies hidden within, appearing only as the short-vowel ḍamma, pronounced “u”. The seeming polarity of the Real and creation is bridged by a third thing, the linking letter wāw, which represents the Perfect Human Being.²⁴ This Perfect Human Being thus serves as an isthmus, or barzakh, partaking of both sides of creation as a whole, the divine and the cosmic,²⁵ yet preserving the tension inherent in them.²⁶

Ishhād

Ishhād is the fourth-form verbal noun of the verb ashhada. Its root SH-H-D has to do with seeing, witnessing. One of the senses of fourth-form verbs is causative, hence in this case “to make see or witness”. For Ibn ‘Arabī, seeing possesses an inner as well as outward sense. The Essence or Being of the Real can never be grasped but His manifestation in the cosmos can be witnessed in its infinite self-disclosures.²⁷ In the state of annihilation of self (fanā) and the

23. Q.2:117, 3:47, 16:40, 19:35, 36:82, 40:68.

24. See, for example, Fut. III. 283.

25. “‘Engendered existence’ translates al-kawn. It may be that Ibn al-‘Arabī means by this term ‘all that is,’ including both God and the cosmos. Then, when we ‘leave aside’ the totality, we observe the two sides. However, although the word kawn can apply to the wujūd [being/finding] of God in some contexts, al-kawn is typically a technical term meaning everything other than God, everything that has come to be as the result of the divine command kun.” Chittick, SDG, p.407, n.29.

26. For extensive discussion of the Perfect Human Being in Ibn ‘Arabī’s thought, see Izutsu, Sufism and Taoism, pp.218–83; Takeshita, Theory of the Perfect Man.

27. “God is present and finds Himself in all things, and man witnesses this subsistence of God (baqā'), the gnostic realizes that it is God who is both Witness and witnesser.

'Aynī

'Aynī is an adjective related to the consonantal root 'Y-N. 'Ayn is the paradigmatic homonym, with a wide range of meanings as diverse as "eye", "spring", "source", "essence", "entity", and "self". Ibn 'Arabī fully exploits the range of possibilities of this word's meaning in his title and throughout the treatise. What the author is being made to witness with the eye of his inner vision is the Root of his existence and his very self. The title could easily be read: Cosmic Unification in the Presence of the I-witnessing.

* * *

There is an unmistakable affinity between the paired terms al-ittiḥād al-kawnī and al-ishḥād al-'aynī.²⁸ While the first term may suggest to some the notion that has mistakenly been ascribed to Ibn 'Arabī through the centuries, waḥdat al-wujūd, oneness or unity of being, the form of the word ittiḥād is much more in line with Ibn 'Arabī's manner of thinking. The fact that the word is in a form that implies reflexivity and reciprocity provides a dynamism that we do not find in the more static word waḥda. Since we know from the Shaykh's own words that two incommensurable essences – the Real and the servant – cannot enter into a true unity, and that in reality there is only one absolute unqualified Being, the effort is directed to the realization of what it means to be the locus where absolute and relative being meet.

presence and finding to the extent of his capacity." Chittick, SPK, p. 226.

28. See Gril, Arbre, p. 8. Gril notes that the alternating symmetry in the title's words (ittiḥād/ishḥād and kawnī/'aynī) is echoed in the introductory poems, which depict the bi-polarity of Man. Hence, he says, the treatise comprises two parts, one devoted to the supreme realization of the Perfect Man, the other to his universality as symbolized by the Tree and the four Birds.

The Proemial Poems

The Ittiḥād al-kawnī begins abruptly with a series of proemial poems – a Stemning, in Kierkegaardian terms – that sets the tone for the first part of the risāla. The series consists of three poems of differing lengths and metres, interspersed by prose remarks, including the dedication and naming of the treatise. In reality, the three poems form a single poem, regularly repeating the refrain: “From my ... to my ...” They are all marked by end rhymes to which the letter yā’ (transliterated “ī”) or the shortened variant “i” is appended. The first poem’s end rhyme is in lām plus the additional “ī” – ālī (for example, i’tidālī // jalālī); the second’s is ḍād plus “ī” – ardī: (farḍī // ‘ardī); the third’s is sīn, hence –sī: (ḥissī // labsī). The result is fifty lines of verse, all ending with the long “ee” sound. In Arabic, the long consonantal “yā’”, which gives the sound of a long “ee”, is the marker of the first person possessive pronoun suffix. Thus the author truly does not cease to speak about himself throughout the entire initial sequence and beyond. Imagine the effect if we were to read an English poem of equivalent length, all ending in the word “me”.

The first poem, in the metre basīt, is nineteen lines in length, thirteen of which present paired terms in each hemistich for a total of twenty-six paired terms. Nine lines consist of dyads that are not repeated: incompleteness / completeness; inclination / equilibrium. Represented by letters, the pattern would be: A → B → C → D. This pattern is repeated for nine lines, after which come four lines in which the second of the dyads is repeated, while the fourth is new: breeze, boughs / boughs, shade. The pattern here is A → B = B → C. Following the thirteen lines of paired terms are six lines with no paired terms.

The first thirteen lines are full of dyadic fluctuations, oppositions, ascents, and descents, in dizzying succession. Some of the terms are states, some things. Generally, the movement is along a variety of horizontal axes, but at the mention of the moon, a cyclical variant of this fluctuation is brought into consideration. This is made even more apparent as the author begins to repeat the last term of the line as the first term of the next line: breeze to boughs, boughs to shade, and so forth.

The reader is caught in the sheer instability of human – nay all – nature, and the words of the Prophetic tradition may come to mind: “The heart is between two of the fingers of the All-Merciful; He makes it fluctuate as He desires.”²⁹

The second poem consists of only two lines in the rare metre muḍāriʿ. The pairs here: heaven, earth; exemplary practice, religious duty // pact, perjury; length, breadth, are contraries. There are no repeated terms among the eight, hence we return to the first pattern of the first sequence: $A \rightarrow B \rightarrow C \rightarrow D$.

The third poem consists of twenty-nine lines in the metre hazaj. The first pair of each hemistich, with one exception, is presented in reverse order in the second: sense, intellect / intellect, sense. Thus the pattern here is $A \rightarrow B = B \leftarrow A$. A line of explanation or elaboration follows each of these pair-embedded lines. As we have mentioned, all but one of the pairs in the first hemistich are repeated in reverse order in the second. The exception is the eleventh line: body, vastness; vastness / prison.³⁰ This gives a total of eleven pairs made up of five individual terms plus the extra “prison”. A final contrasting pair, shout / whisper, is given in the last line.

We have mentioned the pattern of the three proemial poems for a reason. The movement of the first sequence is along a horizontal line: $ABCD \rightarrow$. The second can be seen as a Z:

29. For variants of this hadith, see Muslim, Qadar 17; Tirmidhī, Qadar 7, Daʿawāt 89; Ibn Māja, Muqaddima 13; Aḥmad II, 168, 173; VI, 182, 251, 302, 315.

30. A variant gives: vastness/narrowness; narrowness/the Footstool.

The Dedicatee

The two-lined third sequence returns to ABCD→ and the fourth forms a perfectly self-contained X:

We also note that the terms in each line have been reduced in sequences one, two, and four from four terms to three and then to two. The wild ricocheting has settled down to an even swing as equilibrium approaches. The poet seems to have progressed from the sensation of being caught in the dualities at every level of existence to a realization of the Unity at the core.

The Dedicatee

As we have already noted, Ibn ‘Arabī states often in the treatise that he addresses only himself. What, then, is his relation to the dedicatee of the work? The Ittiḥād al-kawnī is dedicated to a mysterious personage who, as Ibn ‘Arabī says, “understands my riddle”. In the Ittiḥād he is called by the name Abū al-Fawāris Ṣakhr ibn Sinān, but as Gril has pointed out,³¹ there is no doubt that he is the semi-legendary prophet Khālīd ibn Sinān b. ‘Ayth (or al-Ghayth)³² al-‘Absī,³³

31. Gril, Arbre, p. 22.

32. See ‘Afifī, Fuṣūṣ, p. 317.

33. According to al-Jāḥiẓ, he belonged to the Banū Makhzūm of the Banū Qutay‘ah b. ‘Abs. (K. al-ḥayawān, Vol. IV, p. 476). While some accounts place his tribe of the Ṭā‘y in central Arabia – Gril points out that this is also the tribe from which Ibn ‘Arabī himself is descended (Arbre, p. 22, n. 11) – other accounts, such as Jāmī’s Naqd al-nuṣūṣ, place him in Aden (see Chittick, “Ibn ‘Arabī’s Own Summary of the Fuṣūṣ”, p. 87). Gril also remarks that Ṣakhr was the name of one of the factions of that tribe.

to whom Ibn ‘Arabī devotes his penultimate chapter in the Fuṣūṣ al-ḥikam. In the Ittiḥād, however, he is not called Khālīd but Ṣakhr. Nonetheless, the two men are one and the same, as will become clear later when we deconstruct these names.

The dedicatee’s role in the narrative seems minor at best, appearing only once in the Jet-Black Crow’s poem at the end, but this insignificance is only apparent. In reality, he holds a major key to the work, as a possible alter ego of the author himself and as a symbol for the Perfect Human Being as a barzakh, or isthmus, whose nature will be discussed below. Some delving into Khālīd’s history and the various components of his name yields important clues.

Khālīd, whom some, including Ibn ‘Arabī, regard as a pre-Islamic Arabian prophet,³⁴ is said to have lived at the time of what is known as the *fatra*³⁵ – the intermediate period between specific legislative revelations, in this case between Jesus and Muḥammad.³⁶ He is considered to be a ḥanīf, a natural monotheist or Muslim avant le lettre, in part because of a Prophetic tradition that links him with the message of tawḥīd – the declaration of God’s Oneness. According to this tradition, when the Prophet recited the Sura of Sincerity, Surat al-Ikhlāṣ: “Say: He, Allah, is One, Allah the Eternal Refuge (al-Ṣamad)”, Khālīd’s daughter informed him that she had heard her father recite the very same verse.

Khālīd is not mentioned by name in the Qur’an,³⁷ and his status as a prophet is sometimes cast into doubt by the Prophet’s having said, “I am the nearest of men to Jesus son of Mary, for there is no prophet between him and me.” But as Ṣadr al-Dīn Qūnawī says in the Fukūk,

34. Other Arab prophets such as Ḥūd, Ṣāliḥ, and Shu‘ayb, were also sent to the peoples of the Arabian peninsula, but they did not bring with them a divine law for their community.

35. The word “fatra” is also applied to a condition of stagnation in an individual. It is that time known to prophets and saints – indeed to artists and scholars as well – when the fire of inspiration cools and the well runs dry.

36. Some accounts place him before Jesus. See ‘Aḥīfī, Fuṣūṣ, p. 317.

37. Note that the chapter devoted to Khālīd in the Fuṣūṣ is the only one in which no Qur’anic verses or hadith are cited.

this was due to the fact that Khālīd “did not manifest prophecy on the sensory plane”.³⁸

Why Khālīd failed to manifest his prophecy in this world is associated with a strange story, several versions of which are recounted by the Shaykh and his followers. We will mention first the more extensive account given in Jāmī’s commentary on Ibn ‘Arabī’s own chapter headings of the Fuṣūṣ.³⁹ The story goes as follows. Khālīd lived with his people in Aden.⁴⁰ One day, a great fire (traditionally called “nār al-ḥarratayn”),⁴¹ accompanied by billows of smoke and a deafening noise, came out of a cave and wreaked havoc upon the people, their farms, and their livestock, causing them to flee to Khālīd for refuge. Khālīd approached the fire and beat it with his staff until it retreated back into the cave. He told his sons that he was going to follow the fire into the cave and extinguish it completely. He then instructed them to call him after three days, and warned them that if they called him before that, he would come out but that they – presumably the sons as well as their father – would die. The sons waited two days before their patience wore out – or as Jāmī says, Satan made them restless – and they began to suspect that their father had died. So they called him before the appointed time. Khālīd emerged from the cave, his head wounded by their call. He told them, “You have caused me to perish, and you have let my words and instructions perish.”

He then told them that he was going to die and ordered them to bury him and watch over his grave for forty days. At that time a flock of sheep would come to them, led by a bob-tailed donkey. When the donkey stopped in front of his grave, they were to disinter him. He would then tell them about the states of the barzakh, the isthmus between life and death.

The people waited forty days, as instructed, and the flock, led by the bob-tailed donkey, came by, just as Khālīd predicted. When it 38. Fukūk, p. 307.

39. Chittick, “Ibn ‘Arabī’s Own Summary of the Fuṣūṣ”, pp. 86–7.

40. Some place this incident in the lava fields near Yathrib (= Medina).

41. ‘Aḥīfī, Fuṣūṣ, p. 317.

stopped in front of his grave, the believers among his people wanted to open the grave and hear Khālīd's message. His sons, however, once more thwarted their father's plans, fearing the disgrace of being called "the sons of him whose grave was opened". "So it was the pagan ignorance of the Arabs that caused his instructions to perish and let him perish."⁴²

The sign that confirmed his prophecy – his revelation concerning the barzakh – was to become manifest after death but, as Ibn 'Arabī says, "He let his sign perish, since he did not manifest it during his lifetime, and he let his people perish also, for he did not show it to them, so they let him perish."⁴³ This is alluded to in another tradition linking Khālīd to the Prophet, in which the latter is reported to have said to one of Khālīd's daughters: "Welcome to the daughter of a prophet whose people let him perish!"⁴⁴ Ibn 'Arabī, however, points out that the blame was to be assigned only to Khālīd's sons.

A second version, recounted by Ibn 'Arabī in his Muḥāḍarāt al-abrār wa-musāmarāt al-aḥyār, a work of belles-lettres, stays close to the hadith reports. It traces the report to Ibn 'Abbās, and places the story in the steppe lands between Mecca and Medina during the fatra. The fire that appeared was called "Budā" by the Bedouin and some of them were on the point of worshipping it like the Magians. Khālīd, presumably because of his monotheism, sought to stamp out the root of this heresy. He confronted the fire with his staff, beating it until God put it out.⁴⁵ The exertion seems to have mortally wounded Khālīd. The remainder of the story is as above, complete with burial instructions and donkey (full-tailed here). Khālīd promises to tell the people how things are in the world of the dead. The rest of the story passes as already recounted, the sons once more being assigned the blame for the failure to exhume their father. A coda links the story to two sayings of the Prophet, one of which we 42. Chittick, "Ibn 'Arabī's Own Summary of the Fuṣūṣ", p. 87.

43. Ibid., p. 87.

44. See Muḥāḍarāt al-abrār wa-musāmarāt al-aḥyār, p. 105.

45. In some accounts, he threw himself into the fire. See Pellat, s.v. Khālīd b. Sinān, Encyclopaedia of Islam, revised edition (hereafter EI 2).

have encountered above, that is, the Prophet's greeting to Khālid's daughter, the other of which reflects the aborted message: "Then [the Messenger of God] said, 'Had they disinterred him, he would have told them about me and my community and what would come to be from them.'"⁴⁶

We should also mention al-Qāshānī's version that provides the intriguing detail that from the fire that terrified Khālid's people emerged an 'anuq – a male 'anqā' – whose body partly resembled a camel and partly a snake.⁴⁷ It was this serpent-like creature that Khālid beat back into the cave with his staff, his tribe following timorously behind.

The Fuṣūṣ, however, reflects yet another version,⁴⁸ in which Khālid tells his people that he will reveal the secrets of the barzakh only after his death and disinterment; he claims that the barzakh is in the form of this world,⁴⁹ thus confirming what the messengers had revealed. As the Ottoman commentator remarks in his commentary on the Fuṣūṣ, "It was not that Khālid was manifested with the prophecy of barzakhīyya, but that he would first die and would witness the states of the barzakh and then, after becoming alive again by divine order, he would be manifested with the prophecy of barzakhīyya."⁵⁰ Hence Khālid's failure to manifest his prophecy is the reason for the Prophet's statement: "I am the nearest of men to Jesus son of Mary, for there is no prophet between him and me." According to this commentator, then, Khālid did not become manifest with the prophecy of the barzakh, since his pronouncements upon its joys and sorrows were not confirmed by his resurrection: "Because for the general public, if a prophet dies and comes back, the effect of the news he gives of the other world is more definite than the 46. Muḥāḍarāt al-abrār, pp. 104–5.

47. 'Aḥfī, Fuṣūṣ, p. 317.

48. The account in the Fuṣūṣ draws from the story of Hanzalah b. Safwān. See Elmores, Islamic Sainthood, p. 191, n. 167.

49. As Ibn 'Arabī says regarding the disputed nature of the barzakh, its people alter in state there just as they do here. See Fut. III. 395.

50. Ismail Hakki Bursevi's Translation and Commentary, Vol. 4, p. 1047.

information of the other world given by a prophet who is not dead but who is alive in this world.”⁵¹

In the Fuṣūṣ version, Khālīd is also attributed with foretelling Muḥammad’s mission. Khālīd’s desire, according to Ibn ‘Arabī, was that all mankind believe in the message of the prophets and particularly in Muḥammad’s mission as a mercy to the universes, which he apparently foresaw. His people, however, did not allow him to fulfil his purpose. Thus this version differs in that the message concerning the barzakh is delivered, but not confirmed, and the role of harbinger of universal mercy is denied him.

The prophecy of Khālīd is in many ways the exact opposite of Muḥammad’s. While Muḥammad’s was fully visible, Khālīd’s was hidden. While Muḥammad’s mission was successful, Khālīd’s was a failure. While Muḥammad ascends to the heavens during his mi‘rāj, Khālīd is best known for his descents underground – practising a sort of katabasis in a cave, pursuing knowledge in the tomb. Like a seed deposited in the ground, or an embryo in the dark womb, Khālīd awaits the time when his people will disinter him, enabling him to proclaim his message, confirming the words of the messengers before him. But Khālīd himself could not achieve his wish. His message remains in sheer potentiality with respect to this world.

At this point, a certain constellation of notions discussed at great length in the Futūḥāt comes to mind. These include the opposing states of seclusion (khalwa) and society (jalwa), the various stages of annihilation (fanā’) and perdurance (baqā’),⁵² and the spiritual voyage that ends either in arrival (wuṣūl)⁵³ and halting (waqfa) or arrival and return (rujū’). Considered in relation to these discussions, Khālīd’s prophecy was imperfect for it was entirely concerned with khalwa and waqfa. He was not granted the possibility of manifesting his prophecy in public and was not able to return to his people. Muḥammad’s

51. Ibid., p. 1049.

52. See Ibn ‘Arabī’s treatise al-Fanā’ fī al-mushāhada; English trans. Hirtenstein and Shamash, JMIAS, IX (1991); French trans. Vâlsan, Études Traditionnelles, 363 and 364 (1961). See also Fut., Chaps 220, 221, and 286.

53. From the same root as ittiṣāl (conjunction).

prophecy, on the other hand, was perfect for it embraced these opposites. The initial stage of his spiritual initiation, before the coming of the angel Gabriel, took place in the cave of Hirā. Thus it was a period of seclusion and flight from the world. In the wake of the descent of revelation upon him, however, his apostolic mission demanded that he manifest within the world. And his heavenly mi'rāj did not culminate in any permanent absorption in the divine but was followed by a return to his community. As the Shaykh says in his Futūḥāt, “The perfection of the heritage of the prophets and the messengers consists in the return to the creatures.”⁵⁴ And Khālīd is a clear example of a prophet who arrived and halted, unable to make the return to the world.

Secrets of the Name Abū al-Fawāris Ṣakhr [= Khālīd] ibn Sinān⁵⁵

The first kunya, or agnomen – Abū al-Fawāris – means “father of the knights”. The farwāris were “a class of Arab chivalrous heroes distinguished by eloquence (bayān) as well as courage and generosity (jūd)”.⁵⁶ The appellation suggests pre-Islamic values and may have a connection with the fatā, or chivalrous knight, of the Futūḥāt’s first chapter. Ibn ‘Arabī makes reference to these values in his dedication and again at the end of the Risāla when he praises Ṣakhr ibn Sinān for his generosity and steadfastness in combat.⁵⁷

Gril points out that the word jūd (generosity) calls to mind the word wujūd (existence) and vice versa; as an Arabic proverb states, “Al-wujūd fī al-jūd” (Existence is – or consists – in generosity). Bayān (eloquence) brings to mind the Qur’ān, since this is one of its

54. Fut. I. 251, Chap. 45.

55. ‘Abd al-Bāqī Miftāḥ has provided many of the clues enumerated below concerning the name Khālīd as well as other interesting information regarding this figure in his Maḥātīḥ Fuṣūṣ al-ḥikam, pp. 135–8.

56. Elmore, Islamic Sainthood, p. 193, n. 180.

57. The name Khālīd also appears in Ibn ‘Arabī’s K. al-‘abādila, pp. 168–9, where it is linked with the attribute of generosity. See Gril, Arbre, p. 23, n. 15.

appellations. Hence not only are generosity and eloquence evoked in this passage but existence and revelation as well.⁵⁸

The root F-R-S is also connected with the quasi-occult science of fīrāsa, or physiognomy. A fāris discerns the unseen nature of things, and especially human beings, from visible signs. To be fāris of something, says Ibn Manzūr in Lisān al-‘Arab, is to know it.

The dedicatee’s second kunya – Ibn Sinān – means “son of a spear-head”. This again suggests the notion of pre-Islamic warrior values.

* * *

The name Khālīd has two main meanings, one concerned with rocks (ṣakhr/hajar) and the other with everlastingness (ṣamādiyya). But let us begin with the name Khālīd itself and the Arabic root KH-L-D from which it is derived.

Khālīd-eternal* = ṣamad = rock = *ṣakhr

“Khālīd” is an active participle, deriving from the verb khalada: to remain or last forever; to be immortal; to remain in a place. In the fourth form, akhlada, it has many of the same meanings as form one, but it also means: to incline, lean, tend to. In this form it appears in the Qur’an: “And had We willed We could have raised him by their means, but he inclined toward [or clung to] the earth (akhlada) and followed his own whim” (Q. 7: 176). Khālīda (pl. khawālīd) are rocks or mountains,⁵⁹ “the immovable ones, ... the earth-riveted, unchanging, ... clasping the ground”.⁶⁰ Addressed by the poet Labīd, they are “the mute immovable ones whose speech yields no sense” (ḍumman khawālīda mā yabīnu kalāmuhā).⁶¹

The verbal noun khuld conveys the sense of infinite duration and eternity. Dār al-khuld is an epithet for the hereafter. Jaroslav

58. Gril, Arbre, p. 22.

59. Lane, Arabic-English Lexicon, Part 2, p. 784, s.v. khālīd.

60. Stetkevych, “Toward an Arabic Lexicon”, p. 101.

61. Ibid., pp. 93, 108.

Stetkevych has discussed the “binary semantic tension that inheres in the word khuld itself”.⁶² In the Qur’an, this noun appears both in a positive (Q. 21: 15) and negative (Q. 10: 52; 32: 14; 41: 28) sense; and verbs and participles based on this root reflect the same ambivalence: “Where did khuld begin – in ‘heaven’ or in ‘hell’, or rather: in the higher regions of the awareness of self or in the lower ones? Is it an origin or an aspiration? ... Is it the future or the past?”⁶³ Khuld is also a word for mole, a blind burrowing creature who lives underground. Thus both the prophet Khālīd and the animal khuld are associated with the chthonic realm. Stetkevych remarks that even the celestial associations of this root in the Qur’an, wherein the term khuld/khālīd is frequently coupled with the term jannah, garden/paradise,⁶⁴ cannot be divorced from the chthonic: “... jannah ... may itself only be ‘projected’ into the eschatological ‘heavenly’ sphere out of its primary chthonic ‘hiddenness,’ ‘buriedness,’ ‘darkness,’ and also ‘protectedness.’”⁶⁵ For the semantic range of the root ḡ-N-N includes such words as “to veil”, “to conceal”, “fetus” (janīn), “jinn”, and “grave” (janan). Ibn ‘Arabī’s appellation of Khālīd as “Jānn ibn Jānn” (Jānn, son of the Jinn) in his dedication is thus entirely appropriate.⁶⁶

62. Ibid., p. 101.

63. Ibid.

64. For example Q. 20: 76; 25: 15.

65. Stetkevych, “Toward an Arabic Lexicon”, p. 102.

66. Gilis (Livre des Chatons, p. 681) has suggested an intriguing connection between the other meaning of jānn, a great serpent, and Khālīd, translating the phrase in question as “Serpent son of Jānn”. He points out parallels between Moses’ staff, which turns into a serpent in his contest with Pharaoh’s magicians and splits the rock from which issue twelve streams of water (as mentioned by Ibn ‘Arabī in his final poem), and Khālīd’s staff, with which he beats back the fire into the cave. If this “fire” is either a serpent/jinnī or an ‘anqā’, as some accounts have it, the Khālīd legend becomes even more complex.

Ṣakhr-rock = ḥajar = khālīd = jabal

The word “ṣakhr” appears three times in the Qur’an: (1) “Didst thou see, when we took refuge in the rock” (Q.18:63). The context is the voyage undertaken by Moses and Khidr; (2) “though it be in a rock, or in the heavens, or in the earth ... God will bring it forth” (Q.31:16). The context is Luqmān’s advice to his son; and (3) “and Thamūd, who hollowed the rocks in the valley” (Q.89:9). Thus rocks may be refuges, hiding places, and ruins of a pre-Islamic people who disobeyed their prophet Hūd.

The other word for rock is ḥajar. This is the word used in the Qur’an in connection with Moses: “Strike with thy staff the rock” (Q.2:60; 7:160), and “for there are stones from which rivers come gushing” (Q.2:74). Ibn ‘Arabī seems to be referring to this image in the final poem of the Ittiḥād, “I am a rock (ṣakhr), and from me the spiritual meanings flash.”

The Moses/rock analogy is evident in another early work of Ibn ‘Arabī’s, Mashāhid al-asrār. One of the contemplations involves the “light of the Rock (ṣakhra)” at the end of which the Real addresses the Moon: “Tell the rock to let twelve springs pour forth ...”⁶⁷ According to Ibn Sawdakīn, who commented on this work, the rock is a symbol of the body and its knowledges, the Moon represents the knowledge of Nature, the twelve springs are the constellations.⁶⁸

Ṣamad

“Ṣamad” is a curious word that appears only once in the Qur’an, in Sura 112. It is variously translated in that context as “eternal refuge”, “everlasting”, and “resource”. As such it is an epithet for God.

The legends of Khālīd emphasize Khālīd’s role as the support and refuge of his people. It is to him that they turn in times of danger or need, as in the case of the fire that came out of the cave. We have also seen that in the traditions, Khālīd is specifically associated with Sura 112, which calls God “Aḥad” and “Ṣamad”. Thus, the two elements of dependable recourse and strict monotheism are brought together as Khālīd’s distinguishing features.

67. Beneito and Twinch, Contemplation of the Holy Mysteries, p. 74.

68. Ibid., pp. 75–6.

In the Fuṣūṣ, these suppositions are tacitly understood, for the particular wisdom associated with Khālīd ibn Sinān is ṣamadiyya.⁶⁹ The chapter on Khālīd does not specifically mention what the precise connection is between Khālīd and ṣamadiyya, although Ṣadr al-Dīn Qūnāwī in his Fukūk interprets ṣamad as “aim”.⁷⁰ In the Fuṣūṣ, this is one of the two main foci of the chapter – the other being the barzakh – since Khālīd is associated with the notions of intention and fulfilment. Khālīd’s mission, as we have noted, was a failure. Yet Ibn ‘Arabī concludes in the Fuṣūṣ that God “allow[ed] him to achieve the reward (ajr) of his wish (umniyya)”. But he adds: “There is doubt and dispute as to whether he attained the reward (ajr) of his quest (maṭlūb).”⁷¹ In other words, is wishing to perform an action equivalent to accomplishing the act itself, and does desire merit a reward even if it fails to be carried to fruition?⁷² “In the outward sense”, says Ibn ‘Arabī, “they are not equal. Therefore, Khālīd b. Sinān sought to attain both so he could have the station of bringing

69. Ṣamad is also mentioned in the Fuṣūṣ in connection with the prophet Aaron: “He is summoning to a God who is eternally resorted to, universally known, but not seen. ... The eyes cannot see Him, just as they cannot see the spirits that govern their shapes and outer forms” (Fuṣūṣ; trans. Austin, Bezels of Wisdom, p. 248).

70. Fukūk, p. 307. See also Lane, Arabic-English Lexicon, Part 4, p. 1726, s.v. ṣamad, for this sense of the word.

71. Fuṣūṣ, I. 213. Austin’s English translation (Bezels of Wisdom, p. 268) does not preserve the meaning of ajr as “reward”, which is essential to the legal discussion that follows. In addition, to translate both umniyya and maṭlūb as “wish” obscures the distinction between them. Dagli’s new English translation (Ringstones of Wisdom, p. 276) maintains this distinction; he translates ajr as “reward”, umniyya as “hope” and maṭlūb as “sought after thing”.

72. This is an issue debated in fiqh, of which Ibn ‘Arabī himself gives two examples: the person who makes the effort to attend the congregational prayer, but misses it, and the person of limited means who would like to perform the good deeds that the wealthy are able to perform but cannot because of his poverty. In both these cases, the reward for intending and accomplishing is said to be the same.

together both things and thus gain two rewards.”⁷³ His success, however, is inconclusive.⁷⁴

Another word belonging to this root is “ṣamda”, which is “a rock firmly imbedded in the earth, even with the surface thereof” or “somewhat elevated”.⁷⁵ Thus we find again associations connecting Ṣakhr / Khālīd ibn Sinān with enduring rocks and subterranean existence.

“Ṣamad” also means “solid, not hollow”⁷⁶ and is applied to someone who takes no nourishment yet neither hungers nor thirsts in war.⁷⁷ Thus it is connected in particular with fasting. Ibn ‘Arabī, for example, calls Ramadan “ṣamadiyya”.⁷⁸ One finds this same connection in the Shaykh’s small treatise Hilyat al-abdāl: “The station is that of universal sustenance. It is a very elevated condition characterized by intellectual secrets, contemplative unveilings, and spiritual states.”⁷⁹

Finally, the Presence of ṣamad is discussed in the Futūḥāt, Chapter 287. The particular self-disclosure of this Presence has to do with the descent of the Qur’an on the Night of Power, which occurs during the fasting month of Ramadan.⁸⁰

73. Fuṣūṣ, I. 214. Cf. Austin, Bezels of Wisdom, p. 268.

74. See Ismail Hakki Bursevi’s Translation and Commentary, Vol. 4, pp. 1049–50, for further illumination of this point. His conclusion is: “there is no equality between the two deserts of intention and action ... because had there been equality [Khālīd] would have been satisfied with desiring.”

75. Lane, Arabic-English Lexicon, Part 4, p. 1727, s.v. ṣamda.

76. Ṣadr al-Dīn Qūnawī includes this meaning of “recourse” and “aim” in his brief discussion of ṣamad in the Khālīd chapter. See Fukūk, p. 307.

77. Lane, Arabic-English Lexicon, Part 2, p. 784, s.v. khālīd.

78. See ‘Anqā’ mughrib, trans. Elmore, Islamic Sainthood, p. 442; Fut. I, Chap. 71: On Fasting. Ibn ‘Arabī speaks also of the ṣamadāniyya retreat, most appropriately undertaken during the month of Ramadan, in his K. al-khawāṣṣ al-muṭlaqa, currently being edited and translated by Stephen Hirtenstein. This thirty-day retreat consists of fasting and nightly vigil.

79. Hilyat al-abdāl; French trans. Vâlsan, Parure des abdāl, p. 34.

80. In addition to the sources mentioned above, see also Rauf, Addresses, pp. 52–6.

Khālid ibn Sinān, Prophet of the Barzakh

When we bring together all the etymological clues with the legendary account of Khālid's mission, we find that this final Arabian prophet before the advent of Muḥammad is admirably suited to be called "Prophet of the barzakh". We have already encountered one meaning of barzakh in connection with the content of Khālid's message. It is "the interval between the present life and that which is to come, from the period of death to the resurrection".⁸¹ But in its broadest definition a barzakh is anything that separates two things, anything that is neither one thing nor another: it is the dream world that partakes of both life and death, the image in the mirror that both is and is not the observer; it is the unperceivable instant between past and future; the dawn and dusk when it is neither fully light nor dark; and the moon as it waxes and wanes in its cycle, forever in transit from crescent to void.⁸² As Chittick has noted,

A barzakh is something that stands between and separates two other things, yet combines the attributes of both. Strictly speaking, every existent thing is a barzakh, since everything has its own niche between two other niches within the ontological hierarchy known as the cosmos.⁸³

Chittick goes on to say: "Existence itself is a barzakh between Being and nothingness."⁸⁴ Between the One, unchanging Being and the equally unchanging nothingness ('adam) lies the barzakh of the ever-fluctuating existent things.

81. Lane, Arabic-English Lexicon, Part 1, p. 187, s.v. barzakh.

82. For an extended study of the barzakh in Ibn 'Arabī's thought, see Bashier, Ibn al-'Arabī's Barzakh.

83. Chittick, SPK, p. 14.

84. Ibid. This, in Ibn 'Arabī's terms, is called "non-delimited imagination" (al-khayāl al-muṭlaq), the Supreme Barzakh (al-barzakh al-a' lā) or the Barzakh of Barzakhs (barzakh al-barāzikh). It is also called (although they are not exact synonyms): the Cloud, the Breath of the All-Merciful, the Real through whom creation takes place, the Universal Reality, Nature, and the Reality of the Perfect Human Being.

Two contradictories never stand opposite each other without a separator through which each is distinguished from the other and which prevents the one from being described by the attribute of the other. ... This is the Supreme Barzakh, or the Barzakh of Barzakhs. It possesses a face toward Being and a face toward nothingness. It stands opposite each of these two known things in its very essence. It is the third known thing. Within it are all possible things. It is infinite, just as each of the other two known things is infinite.⁸⁵

When we take this passage into consideration, the initially puzzling reference to Şakhr's being "master of the dyads and triads" becomes a bit clearer.⁸⁶ The Perfect Human Being, as we have stated above, brings together opposites and provides the resolving bridge between them. Thus he is able to reflect in response to the moment all the divine attributes on either side of the cosmic divide – mercy and severity, beauty and majesty, transcendence and immanence – while simultaneously preserving the oddness and singularity inherent in the whole, representing, as he does, the human axis of unity. While in himself he is non-existent, as a locus for the infinite manifestations of the divine in every instant, he is God's representative (khalīfā) in the world. For its part, the triplicate order is evident everywhere. There are three levels of existence: Real, creation, and barzakh; three points of articulation for the letters: throat, lips, and middle of the mouth; three levels within the human being: reason, sense, and barzakh.⁸⁷

Barzakh is the world of the imagination that stands as a mesocosm between the spiritual and material worlds. It is the "interworld", as Henry Corbin calls it,⁸⁸ the place where psycho-spiritual events including miracles, spiritual ascents, and theurgical operations take

85. Fut. III. 46, Chap. 312; trans. Chittick, SPK, p.204.

86. The dyadic and triadic structure of existence is discussed by Ibn 'Arabī in many places. See, for example, Fuṣūṣ, Chap. on Şāliḥ and Chap. on Muḥammad.

87. See Fut. II. 391.

88. Corbin, Spiritual Body, p. 79.

place. “Imagination”, as the Shaykh tells us, “is neither existent nor non-existent, neither known nor unknown, neither negated nor affirmed.”⁸⁹ It is the broadest of universal planes, since, unlike the world of the senses, it contains everything that exists, “real” and “imaginary”. It is in this world of image-exemplars that the dialectical-monologue between the narrator and the various personae and faculties of himself takes place.

The Fourth Poem

After explaining the title and offering homage to the Prophet of the barzakh, the author turns again to rhyme. The fourth poem consists of eighteen lines in the metre basīt. Although separated from the preceding three poems, the fourth poem is connected with its predecessors through its end rhyme tā’ coupled with the first person singular pronoun suffix yā’:–ātī: (bi-dhātī // iltifātī).

In addition, the author continues to group things in pairs, five of which are contrasting pairs: secretly/openly; enemies/friends; threat/grace; gathering/scattering; knight/maiden. Their effect here is more subdued than in the first three poems since they are not marked by the repeated refrain: “from ... to ...” (min ... ilā ...).

In this poem, the author engages in a clever repartee with himself. It is replete with paradoxes. His very assertion of self (innanī: here I am, or indeed I)⁹⁰ would cause his annihilation. To utter “I” throws the speaker into a state of fanā’ – annihilation – in which friends and enemies, grace and punishment, disappear. There is only One who can properly say “I”.

89. Fut. I. 304, Chap. 6; trans. Chittick, SPK, p. 118.

90. As Ibn ‘Arabī defines this emphatic particle in Fut. II. 130, Chap. 73: “If you ask: What is inniyya?, we answer: It is the Reality by way of attribution. [The people of inniyya] are those who are engaged with the Tablet, witnessing the Pen, observing the Nūn, drawing [the ink] from the Ipseity, speaking with anniyya [the personal pronoun “I”], expressing themselves with unification (ittiḥād).

Meetings in the Barzakh

The author now finds himself in a land “situated on the equator”, that is, in a momentary state of equilibrium where opposites are joined and realization of the Oneness of Being prevails. It is both a placeless place from which he will begin his ascent through the celestial spheres in imitation of the Prophet Muḥammad, and a balance-point within his very nature, anchoring his corporeal and spiritual dimensions. Thus we find both a cluster of sacred sites connected to this place of ascent: Mount Sinai, Mecca, Jerusalem (as the locus from which the Prophet was taken on his heavenly journey), and an allusion to the father of humanity, Adam, “fashioned of water and clay”, the synthesis of what is highest and lowest in creation.

The first stage in the ascent paradoxically involves a “plunge” into the sea of hayūlā, prime matter, later in the narrative to be symbolized by the ʿAnqāʾ bird. Hayūlā is yet another barzakh, the matrix of all form, spiritual and material. It is here that the levels of heaven and hell are made sensible to the inner vision. The Shaykh insists on the reality of these realms as they are depicted in the Qurʾan.

Then he engages in a popular rhetorical device he had made good use of in earlier works: “Question and answer” (suʾāl wa-jawāb). This abstruse exchange between the author and his unnamed interlocutor – who alludes to rather than explains his meaning clearly – serves to heighten the narrative’s drama.⁹¹ Used with unequaled power by the tenth-century Sufi al-Niffarī to describe the ineffable dialogue between the servant and God,⁹² his Andalusian admirer finds the opportunity to engage in riddled speech with the divine aspect of his being. In a speech that recalls Job’s Interlocutor from the Whirlwind, this alter ego, who both is and is not the author, both is and is not the Real, seems to be seeking to cut the author down to size: Where were you when I created the world and the spiritual realities?

91. For a discussion of this term in Persian poetry, see Schimmel, Two-Colored Brocade, p. 44.

92. See al-Niffarī’s Mawāqif and Mukhāṭabāt.

The truth demanded by the station demands that the servant realize his utter nonentity with respect to the transcendent and all-powerful God.

Seeking deliverance from the sea of matter, he is transformed into a more subtle form, which, despite its station, is still connected to the material world and at some remove from the One Reality. At the point where he leaves his Burāq – just as the Prophet dismounted and tied his steed to a post at the Masjid al-Aqṣā – we know that the author has begun his upward ascent. In a state of oscillation, like a lamp set swinging to celestial music, that brings to mind the poems at the beginning of the treatise, he realizes that he is still within the world of form, spiritual though it may be. What he longs for is annihilation in annihilation (al-fanā' fī al-fanā'), and the state of baqā', subsistence, where all of the servant's faculties are realized to be, in truth, God's.⁹³ When asked by his interlocutor where he is, whether established in this world or in the Essence, he can only answer in dualities and then invoke the prophets who are the guardians of the seven heavens through which he passes, high to low: Abraham, Moses, Aaron, Idrīs, Joseph, Jesus, and Adam.⁹⁴ Despite what he acquires from the prophets, all of this pertains to the created world, not to the Essence itself. It seems that there is no escape on any level from his essential creatureliness.

The conversation that follows seeks to define the relationship between the Real and creation (ḥaqq and khalq). It culminates in the realization that, as God says in the aforementioned Prophetic tradition: "I am his hearing through which he hears, his eyesight through which he sees, his hand through which he holds, and his foot through which he walks.” The servant now knows the meaning of ittiḥād as the coincidence of opposites – relative and absolute – in one locus, the Perfect Human Being: “Insofar as he manifests the Divine Attributes through his positive qualities, Man finds himself with God in a relation of similitude, but insofar as being is concerned, the difference is absolute, for Being (al-wujūd) belongs only to God.”⁹⁵

93. For these technical terms, so vital in understanding Ibn 'Arabī's ideas concerning the possibility of union between the Real and the servant, see Fut. II, Chaps 220 and 221 and his short treatise Kitāb al-fanā' fī al-mushāhada (Arabic, pp. 11–18; French trans., see especially pp. 40–1 and Vâlsan's commentary, especially pp. 27–33; English trans. p. 6, and Hirtenstein and Shamash's notes, p. 15, n.11).

94. These are the prophets traditionally encountered in the mystical ascent. See Fut. II, Chap. 167, Fut. III, Chap. 367; Kitāb al-isfār; and Risālat al-anwār, in which the prophets are not mentioned but merely suggested (see Chodkiewicz's excellent commentary concerning this, Seal of the Saints, pp. 147–73).

At this point, the Universal Tree and the Four Birds are revealed – an echo of the Prophet’s arrival at the Lote Tree of the Limit.⁹⁶ Each of the fantastic creatures, imaginatively conceived representations of the Perfect Human Being’s own faculties, addresses him both with an elegant speech in saj’ and a poem.

Soliloquies of the Universal Tree and the Four Birds

The Universal Tree (al-shajara al-kullī)

If you ask: What is the Tree?, we answer: [It is] the Perfect Human Being who governs the bodily temple (haykal) of the Crow.⁹⁷

The first to address the author is the Universal Tree, otherwise known as the “human tree”, for it symbolizes the Human Being writ large, the archetypal “Perfect Human Being”, exemplified by such individuals as the Prophet Muḥammad, who reflect the totality of the Divine Names and Attributes in a synthetic form.

The Universal Tree is found in many of the world’s traditions, symbol of life eternal. Positioned as the central axis of the cosmos, it serves as a pivotal point around which creation revolves.⁹⁸

95. Gril, Arbre, p. 11.

96. Q. 53: 14–16.

97. Fut. II. 31, Chap. 73.

Significant trees are found in numerous places in the Qur'an, including: the "goodly tree" (Q. 14:24–5); the "green tree" (Q. 36:80); Adam's Tree of Immortality (Q. 20:12); Moses' Burning Bush (Q. 28:30); the desiccated palm tree that Mary shook to provide her with dates (Q. 19:25); the tree underneath which the believers swore allegiance to Muḥammad (Q. 48:18); the Lote Tree of the Limit (Q. 53:14); the "Blessed Olive Tree" (Q. 24:35); and, on a far less pleasing note, the "Accursed Tree" (Q. 17:60), the Tree of Zaqqūm, "a torment for wrongdoers" (see Q. 37:62–8) and "the food of the sinner" (see Q. 44:43–6). Prophetic reports give us the Ṭūbā tree, planted by God in the Garden of Paradise with His hand⁹⁹ and the tree in which Muḥammad and the angel Gabriel nested during one of the Prophet's Night Journeys.¹⁰⁰

Ibn 'Arabī's works are also replete with trees. In the Futūḥāt, for example, all of the prominent trees mentioned in the Qur'an and hadith are discussed and interpreted, some at great length.¹⁰¹ Man himself, at one point, is called a tree.¹⁰²

In a work once ascribed to Ibn 'Arabī, entitled Shajarat al-kawn, or the Universal Tree,¹⁰³ this symbol is extended and described in detail. The axial trunk of the cosmic Tree splits into two branches¹⁰⁴ that represent the multifarious opposing qualities manifesting in all

98. See Eliade, Sacred and Profane, especially pp.32–42, for a discussion of the symbolism of the central pole or cosmic tree. See also Philpot, Sacred Tree.

99. See Ibn Ḥanbal, Musnad III, 71. According to some traditions, the Ṭūbā tree is situated at the top of Mount Qāf, is associated in some way with Mount Sinai, and is made of green light. Its height is said to reach the sun. See Gloton, L'Arbre du monde, p.132.

100. See Fut. III. 3; III. 214; III. 554.

101. See, in particular, his extensive discussion of the Ṭūbā tree in Fut. III. 433, Chap. 371.

102. See Fut. III. 137ff., Chap. 336.

103. See Jeffery, "Ibn 'Arabī's Shajarat al-kawn"; Gloton, L'Arbre du monde. According to Chodkiewicz (Ocean without Shore, pp. 143–4, n. 13), the recent research of Y. A. Mdaghri has shown this work to be by 'Abd al-Salām b. Aḥmad b. Ghānim al-Maqdisī (d. 1280).

104. Note that in Fut. III. 315 the boughs of the tree of existence represent the Divine Names, and its fruit represents human beings.

of creation: male/female; active/passive; Pen/Tablet; and so forth. Thus a ternary structure consisting of right-hand branch, left-hand branch, and central axis can be imagined. When leaves, symbolizing the myriad and ever-renewed forms of creation, are generated, a fourth element results, and a circle, encompassing this cruciform structure, comes into view. Quaternity embraces such notions as the four elements: fire, air, water, and earth, and four temperaments: hot, cold, dry, and wet – the basic building blocks and qualities of the embodied world. In our treatise, in keeping with this quaternity, Ibn ‘Arabī has placed four birds among the branches, representing the four-fold structure of the cosmos.

In Ibn ‘Arabī’s mapping of correspondences, the Universal Tree finds its human counterpart in the Quṭb, or Spiritual Pole, who anchors the coincidentia oppositorum and balances creation. “The Pole is the point round which everything turns – hence another symbol of the [S]elf”.¹⁰⁵ Were he to disappear, the cosmos would dissolve into chaos. Mircea Eliade has noted, in his studies of symbols of sacred space,¹⁰⁶ that whatever is privileged with centrality – be it mountain, city, or tree – provides a threshold between heaven and earth. The human representative of this mediation, the Pole, serves the same function in Ibn ‘Arabī’s writings, and is thus considered a barzakhī, or liminal figure.

In the Ittiḥād, the Tree is described as the Likeness, that is, the likeness of the Real, “whose root is firm and whose branches are in the heavens”.¹⁰⁷ The likeness of the Tree / Perfect Human Being consists of its being modelled “upon the form” of the Divinity, hence it has both unity – represented by the well-rooted trunk – and multiplicity, reflected in the appearance of its branches, leaves, and fruits, as well as in its very name itself. One of the meanings of the Arabic root SH-Ḥ-R is “difference in opinion, dispute”.¹⁰⁸ This is alluded to

105. Jung, Psychology and Alchemy, p. 183.

106. See Eliade, Sacred and Profane, Chap. 1; Eliade, Images and Symbols, Chap. 1.

107. Q.14:24.

108. See Q.4:65. Ibn ‘Arabī’s chapter on Shu‘ayb in the Fuṣūṣ is particularly eloquent on this theme. Shu‘ayb’s name suggests branching (tasha‘ub), hence the in the Futūḥāt, where the Shaykh states: “[God] made [man] a tree in which there is contentiousness (tashājur), because of his being created from contraries.”¹⁰⁹

The Perfect Human Being is a copy (nuskha) of the divine, a synthesis of all the Divine Names and Attributes, and a heart¹¹⁰ capable of assuming any form.¹¹¹ Like the Ṭūbā tree, the Universal Tree is planted with God’s own hand in the “where”-less place in the centre of the cosmos.

The Universal Tree’s Poem

The Tree’s poem consists of but five lines, in the metre wāfir. Its end rhyme is appropriately hamza, the first pronounced letter of the Arabic alphabet. In the majestic sway of the Tree’s recitation, the themes of straightness, balance, all-encompassment, and non-delimitation by form are reiterated.

The Ringdove (al-muṭawwaqa al-warqā)

The Dove is the Soul that is between Nature and the Intellect.¹¹²

The dove is the universally recognized symbol of peace and universal love. In alchemy, as in Christian iconography, the dove represents pneuma, or spirit.

The Ringdove is more often called ḥamāma in Arabic literature, but her name here is muṭawwaqa warqā. What do we make of this less common appellation given to her by Ibn ‘Arabī? Again we must look to etymology. The consonantal root Ṭ-W-Q is connected with rings.

chapter concentrates on the ability of the fluctuating heart of the believer both to embrace its Lord in every aspect and to accommodate any form of belief.

109. Fut. III. 137, Chap. 336.

110. “The Real can only be embraced by the heart.” Fut. I. 289, Chap. 58; trans. Chittick, SPK, p. 112.

111. See Tarjumān, Poem XI.

112. Fut. II. 130, Chap. 73, Question 153.

The Ringdove is famous for her fidelity. Because of her dark neck-ring (ṭawq), she is faithfully bound forever to her mate.¹¹³ Despite her devotion, she is a weak bird and can be easily seized by birds of prey, such as the eagle, just as the heart can be seized by love.¹¹⁴ Muṭawwaqa (ringed) is a passive participle, hence a receptacle of action. The Ringdove is something ringed by an agent, in this case the Eagle. The ring encircling the dove's neck is sometimes interpreted by Ibn 'Arabī as the covenant entrusted to her by the Real.¹¹⁵

What first comes to mind from the root W-R-Q is "leaves" or "paper", in other words, something that is written upon. Since the Ringdove in Ibn 'Arabī's mystical aviary represents the Tablet (lawḥ) that receives the writing of the Supreme Pen (the Eagle), this is appropriate. Ibn 'Arabī himself makes a connection between the Ringdove and leaves in Poem IX of his Tarjumān al-ashwāq: "A ringdove flitted past and a twig put forth leaves (awraqa)."¹¹⁶ Warqā also means silver, a metal that suggests the shimmering of the moon and the reflection of the sun's superior light. Ḥamāma, on the other hand, is associated with the root Ḥ-M-M, hence with the colour red and with heat.¹¹⁷

The Ringdove is a messenger bird. In Ibn 'Arabī's writings, doves are sometimes seen as bearers of inspiration. In Poem XXX of the Tarjumān, for instance, doves – here called ḥamām – bring inspiration so overwhelming that their song causes the poet to become unconscious.¹¹⁸ Ibn 'Arabī obligingly interprets doves here as "spirits of the intermediate world, the bearers of the inspiration that comes at the tinkling sound, which is like the noise of a chain when it strikes a rock. They cause this heart to vanish, even as they themselves vanish on hearing that sound."¹¹⁹

113. See Ibn Ḥazm, Ṭawq al-ḥamāma.

114. Schimmel, Two-Colored Brocade, p. 184.

115. Tarjumān, p. 73.

116. Tarjumān, pp. 18 (Arabic), 64; Sells, Stations of Desire, p. 67; Giese, Ibn 'Arabī: Urwolke und Welt, p. 240.

117. Stetkevych, "Toward an Arabic Lexicon", pp. 103–4.

118. Tarjumān, pp. 33 (Arabic), 112, 116 (commentary).

The Ringdove – when not seen with her loving partner – is more often than not found moaning and lamenting her loneliness. Poem XIII of the Tarjūmān, in fact, makes reference to a ringdove who has lost her child – her unity (waḥdāniyya) as the Shaykh interprets it: “the special quality which distinguishes her from all things else ...whereby she knows the unity of Him who brought her into being. The loss of it consists in her not knowing what it is and in its not being plainly discerned by her.”¹²⁰

Another symbol represented by the ringdove is Jesus, the symbol of the universal spirit breathed into the human form.¹²¹ He, in turn, breathes life into the dead and the clay birds.

The Ringdove in philosophical terms is the Universal Soul.¹²² It is also occasionally called the Spirit (rūḥ) blown into forms, the first among existing things to come into existence through being sent forth (inbi‘āth), and the first existent whose existence is the effect of a created being, a cause – that is, the First Intellect, which, in turn, was brought into existence by the Divine Command.¹²³ The Universal Soul is thus passive in relation to the Intellect, just as the Intellect is passive in relation to the Real, and in this way is somewhat akin to matter’s reception of form.

The Soul, while it enjoys a high rank, occupies a subordinate level to the Intellect because of its duality, a fact that is reiterated throughout the Ringdove’s speech and poem. It has, for example, two “causes” or, as they are called in the Ittiḥād, “subtle threads” (raqā’iq).¹²⁴ One is the “special face” that is turned toward God,¹²⁵

119. Ibid., p. 116. The sound described here is a reference to the sound accompanying the descent of prophecy that the Prophet found most unendurable.

120. Ibid., p. 73. See also Sells, Stations of Desire, p. 105, and Giese, Ibn ‘Arabī, p. 253.

121. See Tarjūmān, p. 73, commentary on Poem XIII.

122. For the Ringdove as Universal Soul in Ibn ‘Arabī’s poetry, see Tarjūmān, p. 64, commentary on Poem IX.

123. See Fut. II. 427, Chap. 198, section 12.

124. On raqā’iq and their relation to “faces” see Fut. III. 260, Chap. 357:

Between these high celestial forms and the low elemental forms extend tenuous (raqā’iq) that belong to the divine names and the lordly realities. These are the specific faces belonging to each possible thing that has proceeded from which, in philosophical terms, is the efficient cause of the Soul's existence. The other "face" is turned toward the First Intellect, which is the secondary cause (sabab) or, philosophically speaking, the formal cause, of its existence.

The Soul contains the attributes of both knowledge ('ilm) and effectiveness ('amal).¹²⁶ Its effective attribute brings the forms of the cosmos into existence: sensory forms – which are bodies and their sensible accidents – and supra-sensible forms – which are various sciences, knowledges, and desires pertaining to these bodies.¹²⁷ Its attribute of knowledge is called "a father, for it produces an effect, while the attribute related to action is a mother, for it is the object of an effect";¹²⁸ that is, it is because the Soul has received all that exists in its undifferentiated state that it can generate it in differentiated form.

Duality also pervades the Soul in terms Ibn 'Arabī describes as light and darkness, again sometimes related to the notion of "face". The light face is turned toward the Intellect, from which it receives light like the moon from the sun; the dark face is turned toward the material world.¹²⁹

In theological terms, the Ringdove is equivalent to the Preserved,

Him – from the word Be through the divine face-turning (tawajjuh) of desire. The occasioned thing does not know the specific face belonging to anything else, even though he has a specific face in himself, whether or not he knows it.

From this face everything is poor toward God, not toward its engendered occasion (sabab). This is the divine occasion that is nearer than the engendered occasion, for the engendered occasion is separate from the creature, but this occasion is qualified neither by separation from it nor by a proximate joining, even if, in the case of the human being it is nearer than the jugular vein (Q. 50: 16) – so its nearness is nearer than that.

Trans. Chittick, SDG, p. 143. See also Fut. III. 28ff., Chap. 307, where the raqā'iq are described as forming a cosmic chain, or ladder, of reciprocal interactions, stemming from God to Intellect to Soul and beyond.

125. See Fut. I. 428.

126. See Fut. I, Chap. 7.

127. See Fut. I, Chap. 11.

128. Fut. I. 140, Chap. 11.

129. See 'Uqlat al-mustawfiz, p. 56.

or Inscribed Tablet, hence the notion of materiality is continued. The Tablet contains everything that the Pen writes upon it in detailed form, everything that God wills concerning creation until the Day of Resurrection.¹³⁰

The Ringdove is also the equivalent of Eve, who is born from the sleeping Adam, “as if the intellect had not become aware of its creative power”.¹³¹ It is only when the receptive female element becomes manifest that the active male element is able to contemplate most perfectly its own ability to know and act in this mirror that both is and is not itself.¹³²

The Ringdove’s Poem

Although we might expect the Eagle to address us first because of his precedent rank, he does not. Instead it is the Ringdove who regales us from her perch on the Tree with nineteen lines of poetry, whose end rhyme is -ānī (ī). This is a fitting end rhyme for a creature whose poem both manifestly and subtly alludes to duality and doubling. First of all, there are four words in the first three lines, and an additional one in the twelfth, that are based on the consonantal root TH-N-Y, whose basic meaning is “two”. Another meaning of this root has to do with praise. The word mathnā, and its variant spelling mathnah, the plural of which in both instances is mathānin, is replete with symbolism, combining notions of repetition and praise. In particular we should note that al-mathānī can signify: (1) The Qur’an altogether, since it contains repeated mentions of certain dyads, such as reward and punishment, mercy and wrath; also that one reads it repeatedly without becoming weary. (2) The opening sura of the Qur’an, the Fātiḥa, which is repeated in every ritual prayer and at the beginning of the recitation of every Qur’anic verse, or because it contains praise of God. The Fātiḥa is often called, in fact, the 130. See Fut. I, Chap. 11.

131. Gril, Arbre, p. 13.

132. Ibid., p. 14. This is best explained by the Shaykh in his chapter on Muḥammad in the Fuṣūṣ.

“seven doubled ones” (al-sab‘ al-mathānī).¹³³ (3) Qur’anic verses that are repeated often – especially the Fātiḥa – in order to avert evil.¹³⁴ The Ringdove, as a symbol of the Umm al-Kitāb, or heavenly prototype of the Qur’an, inscribed by the Supreme Pen, thus aptly names herself as the “doubled one”.

An additional doubling is fortuitously found in the Ringdove’s own name: al-muṭawwaqa al-warqā. The first part contains a doubled wāw and the second a qāf with two dots!

The Ringdove continues to allude to the notion of duality as she remarks: “They call me ‘O second!’” But as she tells us, and as we have already intuited by her preceding the Eagle in her address, she is not in actuality the second. As Ibn ‘Arabī explains elsewhere, the four spiritual beings: Intellect, Soul, Prime Matter, and Body, represented here by the four birds, in one sense occupy one rank.

Additional – less obvious – allusions to duality appear in the end rhyme of the poem itself: the suffix -ān in Arabic is a mark of the dual. Furthermore, the Ringdove has a penchant for repeating certain roots. Besides the five instances of words derived from TH-N-Y, there are two derived from ‘-N-Y (meaning), three derived from its permutation ‘-Y-N, and two from a closely related root ‘-W-N. There are two derived from ‘-L-Y (high) along with three from the closely related W-L-Y (friend). Then there are two derived from D-N-N (earthen jug), along with three from its close relative D-N-W (near, low). Finally, there are three from Q-Ṣ-W (far).

The Ringdove makes repeated references to things high and low, near and far. As we have mentioned above, she is connected to the Eagle and to her Lord by “subtle threads” (raqā’iq) that connect level to level in the hierarchy of existence.

133. Lane, Arabic-English Lexicon, Part 1, p. 360, s.v. mathnā.

134. Steingass, Persian English Dictionary, p. 1172.

The Eagle (‘uqāb)

If you ask: What is the Eagle?, we answer: [It is] the Divine Spirit which the Real breathed into the bodily temples as if they were their moving and quiescent spirits.¹³⁵

Eagles have long been connected with royalty and temporal power. The most regal of the birds of prey, they are known for their dizzying ascents and swooping descents, lingering on earth just long enough to grasp the unsuspecting field mouse. They have a reputation for inaccessibility, living in mountain eyries. Their vision is so powerful and acute that they are said to be able to look at the sun without blinking.

In alchemy, the Eagle, especially the double-eagle, is a symbol – along with the raven – for Mercurius, the double-natured symbol of the philosopher’s stone. The Eagle is “synonymous with phoenix, vulture, raven”.¹³⁶

Why does Ibn ‘Arabī call the Eagle ‘uqāb rather than the more common nasr? Etymology may have something to do with it. The consonantal root ‘-Q-B has a semantic range that includes: heel, coming after, following, taking one’s place (as, for example, a vicegerent), punishment, consequence, result of an action, time or state of subsequence, recompense, offspring, mountain road, retaliation, sinews, and tendons. It is also described in ancient sources as a rock or mass of stone protruding in the side of a mountain like a stair or series of stairs. From this derives the meaning of ‘aqaba as a place that is difficult to ascend. The root also has the meaning of a “chief” or a “lord”. The Eagle plays the role of a grand old shaykh. He is Adam as first vicegerent of God (khalīfa).

The word ‘uqāb is also associated with the Prophet Muḥammad. First of all, it was his standard or banner, to which rallied his supporters for battle. Secondly, the Prophet assigned the name “al-‘Āqib” to himself because he came after the other prophets and was the last of the prophets.

135. Fut. II. 130, Chap. 73, Question 153.

136. Jung, Psychology and Alchemy, p. 202.

In philosophical terms, the Eagle is the First Intellect. The Prophet is reported to have said: "The first thing that God created was the Intellect."¹³⁷ It came into existence from nothing (ma'wjud al-ibdā'ī), meaning directly from God without intermediary or secondary cause.

The Essential Attribute connected to the Intellect is Life.¹³⁸ The Intellect is also compared to Light from which all other lights, that is, intellects, are kindled.¹³⁹ As such, it is analogous to the primordial Muḥammadan Light of prophecy, from which all prophets throughout time drew their derivative light.

In theological terms specific to Islam, the Eagle is the Supreme Pen. It is created from the Breath, which Ibn 'Arabī in places equates with the Cloud. Ibn 'Arabī describes the Intellect as "the bearer (ḥāmil) of everything that is known, high and low ... which takes from God without intermediary".¹⁴⁰ It receives the dictation of all that is to be in summary form and inscribes it on the Tablet, which preserves it in detailed form.

The Eagle's Poem

The Eagle recites ten lines in kāmil (meaning: "perfect") metre, whose end rhyme is 'ayn. The Eagle's poem expresses well the Intellect's high role in the hierarchy of existence. A subtext of the verse is the Qur'anic story of Adam's creation (Q.2:30–9) as God's vicegerent on the earth. When God announced His plans, the angels were dismayed: "Wilt Thou place therein one who will do harm therein and shed blood?" (Q.2:30). Thus the lines: "Approach confers upon me a pleasing wisdom but it rends the heart of the elevated spirit." What the angels did not know was that Adam was created 137. According to a similar hadith: "The first thing that God created was the Pen."

138. See Fut. I. 293.

139. See Fut. II. 66–7, Chap. 73, Question 39.

140. Fut. I. 92, Chap. 3.

“upon His form”, as a perfect reflection of his Creator. Moulded with two hands, he encompassed more of the Divinity than the angels could, as they were created only to praise and obey. As vicegerent, the Intellect/Adam was taught “all the names” – whether these are thought of as the Divine Names or the names of everything in creation: “The realities hurry toward me to seek their portion”, that is, their names. It was because of this all-encompassing knowledge that the angels – with the exception of Satan – realized Adam’s superiority and obeyed God’s command to prostrate themselves before Adam.

The poem plays with the ideas of closeness and distance, approach and retreat. As in the story of Adam, it is the Intellect’s disobedience and setting itself up as independent arbiter that causes distance from the Real, while realizing its servanthood and utter dependence is what brings it near.

The ‘Anqā’

If you ask: What is the ‘Anqā’?, we answer: [It is] the Dust (habā’), which is neither existent nor non-existent, although it assumes form in the vision-event.¹⁴¹

The ‘Anqā’ is the Dust in which God reveals/opens (fataḥa) the bodies of the world.¹⁴²

The ‘anqā’, sometimes translated into English as either gryphon or phoenix, is a mythical bird. Early Arabic lexicographers struggled to define this creature none had ever seen. It is said to be perhaps a kind of eagle (‘uqāb’) or vulture (rakḥama) or a crested black bird or one that is bald and has a long yellow beak.¹⁴³ Sometimes those seeking an etymological connection describe it as long-necked (‘unuq’ in

141. Fut. II. 130, Chap. 73, Question 153.

142. Al-Iṣṭilāḥāt, p. 310.

143. Kopf, “The Bird ‘Anūq’”, p. 125. For other descriptions of the ‘anqā’ under its various guises as phoenix, gryphon, and so forth, see Elmore, Islamic Sainthood, pp. 184–5.

Arabic means “neck”). The form ‘anūq’, according to the lexicographers, is either male or female, singular or plural, but the form ‘anqā’ is feminine. The ‘anqā’ is said to live atop the inaccessible Mount Qāf. Sometimes her high mountain habitat itself is called ‘anqā’.¹⁴⁴

Many proverbs exist concerning this odd bird, and from the beginning it was associated with all that was marvellous, occult, and strange. “Rarer than the eggs of the ‘anūq’”¹⁴⁵ was one such proverb, and the Turkish ismi var cismi yok – it has a name but not a body – came to symbolize “everything that exists only in the imagination”.¹⁴⁶

The ‘anqā’ has certain similarities to another fanciful female bird, the simurgh, described as “the manifestation of spiritual reality”.¹⁴⁷ The simurgh is the object of the birds’ quest in ‘Aṭṭār’s famous parable. The ‘anqā’ and the simurgh find a felicitous pairing in the avian symbolism of a follower of Rūzbihān Baqlī: “These are the places of the descent of the Sīmurgh of the spirit ... [and] the ascent of the ‘Anqā’ of the heart.”¹⁴⁸

The phoenix plays a major role in alchemical texts, in which the very alchemical process is said to begin in chaos and end in the birth of the phoenix, or philosopher’s stone.¹⁴⁹

In Ibn ‘Arabī’s symbology, as we have discovered, etymology provides a rich mine to explore. In the case of the “Strange ‘Anqā’” (‘anqā’ mughrib, or sometimes mugharrib), the consonantal root GH-R-B conveys the following semantic range: distance, removal, exile, foreignness, hiddenness, the setting sun, west, strangeness, improbability, obscurity, and incomprehensibility.

It is also connected with the quality of blackness. For instance, it is a certain intensely black grape, and intensely black hair.¹⁵⁰ Note that both the ‘Anqā’ and her son the Crow (ghurāb) are connected 144. Lane, Arabic-English Lexicon, Part 5, p. 2177, s.v. a’naq.

145. Kopf, “The Bird ‘Anūq”, p. 125.

146. Schimmel, Two-Colored Brocade, p. 188.

147. Ibid.

148. See Ernst, “The Symbolism of Birds and Flight”, p. 366.

149. Jung, Psychology and Alchemy, p. 202.

150. Lane, Arabic-English Lexicon, Part 5, p. 2177, s.v. a’naq.

with this root, the ‘Anqā’ primarily with connotations of hiddenness and strangeness, while the Ghurāb, as we shall see, is primarily associated with distance and blackness. It was no doubt quite intentional, on Ibn ‘Arabī’s part, to choose his four birds with an eye to the symbolic gradations of light. The Eagle, as we have seen, is pure light; the Ringdove, a mixture of light and darkness, with light predominating; the ‘Anqā’, an ambiguous twilight, tending toward dark; and the Crow, jet-black midnight.

On the negative side, the term ‘anqā’ mughrīb is also connected to the notion of calamity or misfortune. The expression ṭārat bihi ‘anqā’ mughrīb means: calamity or misfortune carried him away.¹⁵¹ Moreover, the early animal encyclopaedists did not hesitate to put the ‘anūq in the category of dung-eaters.¹⁵² In a similarly negative vein, the ‘anqā’ was sometimes associated with the jinn. In a tradition, inna fī-kum mugharribīn means: “Among you are those in whom the jinn have a partnership or share” because of their coming from remote or foreign stock.¹⁵³

Because among its meanings is “west”, it is also associated both with the geographical west, that is, the Maghreb, where Ibn ‘Arabī spent much of his youth, and the spiritual meaning of “west” as esoteric knowledge. This contrasts with the Illuminationist school, founded by the martyred Suhrawardī, which saw the west as the dark realm of the body and the east as the source of spiritual knowledge and light. In Ibn ‘Arabī’s early work ‘Anqā’ mughrīb, the narrator alludes cryptically to the Seal of the Saints, Jesus, both as the ‘anqā’ mughrīb and as the Sun which, according to Islamic tradition, will rise in the west at the end of time.

There is an obvious parallel between the Phoenix (often the translation of choice for ‘anqā’) and Khālīd, both of whom are connected with fire, death, and resurrection.¹⁵⁴ Here is ‘Aṭṭar on the Phoenix:

151. Ibid.

152. Kopf, “The Bird ‘Anūq”, p. 129.

153. Lane, Arabic-English Lexicon, Part 5, p. 2177, s.v. a’naq.

154. Another reference to the story of Khālīd and the fiery ‘Anqā’ may be found in Ibn ‘Arabī’s ‘Anqā’ mughrīb. See Elmore, Islamic Sainthood, pp. 481–2.

The Phoenix is an admirable and lovely bird which lives in Hindustan. It has no mate and lives alone. ... The Phoenix lives about a thousand years and he knows exactly the day of his death. When his time comes he gathers round him a quantity of palm leaves and, distraught among the leaves, utters plaintive cries. ... His lamentations express the sorrow of death, and he trembles like a leaf. At the sound of his trumpet the birds and the beasts draw near to assist the spectacle. Now they fall into bewilderment, and many die because their strength fails them. While the Phoenix still has breath, he beats his wings and ruffles his feathers, and by this produces fire. The fire spreads to the palm fronds, and soon both the fronds and the bird are reduced to living coals and then to ashes. But when the last spark has flickered out a new small Phoenix arises from the ashes.¹⁵⁵

In philosophical parlance, the 'Anqā' is a metonym for the Greek notion of hylē (Arabic: hayūlā), or prime matter,¹⁵⁶ which Ibn 'Arabī, citing precedent in the Qur'an,¹⁵⁷ 'Alī ibn Abī Ṭālib, and the Sufi Sahl al-Tustarī (d.896),¹⁵⁸ generally prefers to call Dust (habā'). In its original meaning, habā' was the dust particles that dance in the rays of the sun. Appropriated by Arabic alchemists such as Jābir, habā' was seen as the constitution of the material world in formation.¹⁵⁹ Associated with the sheer potentiality¹⁶⁰ and the female principle 155. 'Aṭṭār, Manṭiq al-ṭayr, pp.66–7.

156. The Greek philosophers discussed prime matter extensively, basing their doctrines on Aristotle's writings on material cause, Plato's notions of the receptacle, or a combination of the two. It is primarily this hybrid doctrine that penetrated the Islamic milieu through the late Hellenistic Neoplatonic commentary tradition.

157. See Fut. I. 122, Chap. 7. "It was scattered dust" (Q. 56:6).

158. See Fut. I. 119, Chap. 6. For Sahl, the Muḥammadan Light was akin to habā' in that it was shaped by God from His own Light. See Böwering, Mystical Vision of Existence, p. 150.

159. See Kraus, Jābir ibn Ḥayyān, p. 142 and his long note concerning habā' on p. 154, n. 6.

160. See also Thomas Aquinas, Summa Theologiae 1a.76.7; Summa contra Gentiles I, Chap. 43; II, Chap. 96; III, Chap. 6.

– hence the feminine gender of the ‘Anqā’ in the Ittiḥād – prime matter is capable of taking on any form and as such is the matrix and ground for the universe.

The notion of prime matter is a particularly difficult one to grasp, especially since the term “matter” in modern terms suggests the stuff of reality that we can physically sense and grasp. But prime matter is nothing of this sort. As the Ikhwān al-Ṣāfā’ (Brethren of Purity) write, “It is a simple intelligible substance that cannot be perceived by sense.”¹⁶¹ It is completely dimensionless, unquantifiable, and devoid of actual content, while containing at the same time the potential forms of all existence. As such, even understanding it becomes impossible. One is left only with knowledge of its name and the faculty of imagination, which is its domain, to give it form.

The origin of this Dust, according to Ibn ‘Arabī, is God’s desire to bring the cosmos into existence and His theophany “in the Universal Reality¹⁶² – a reality called Dust”.¹⁶³ The Shaykh compares it to the plaster with which a builder moulds whatever forms he wishes. God manifests Himself as Light to the Dust, and every thing existing in potentia in this Dust receives His light according to its particular predisposition, “as the corners of a room receive the light of a torch, and are more fully and brightly lit up the nearer they are to the torch”.¹⁶⁴

Habā’, says Ibn ‘Arabī, is present in all natural forms, and cannot be divided, separated, or decreased. He compares it to the whiteness that can be perceived in every white thing.¹⁶⁵ In this it appears to be equivalent to the philosophical universal accident that has no reality save when it manifests in an underlying subject or substance. Another example, given in the Futūḥāt, makes this even clearer. Knowledge, says the Shaykh, in itself is neither eternal nor temporal. In

161. Rasā’il, II, p. 6.

162. Universal Reality is synonymous with Reality of Realities (ḥaqīqat al-ḥaqā’iq). For more on the relationship between these terms and the ‘Anqā’, see below, p. 107.

163. Fut. I. 119, Chap. 6.

164. Fut. I. 119, Chap. 6; trans. Chodkiewicz, Seal of the Saints, p. 68.

165. Fut. I. 122, Chap. 7.

the Eternal One, knowledge is eternal; in the creature, knowledge is temporally originated. "In every essence it accords with its own reality and entity. But it has no existential entity except the entity of that which it describes. So it remains in its root: an intelligible thing, not an existent thing."¹⁶⁶

Hayūlā, moreover, is not only associated with cosmology and epistemology but is also used in connection with the Perfect Human Being. For example, Ibn 'Arabī tells the reader in his Fuṣūṣ, "Be the hayūlā of all the doctrinal beliefs",¹⁶⁷ meaning: Do not limit yourself to any particular Face that God shows to the believers, for they are infinite. It is to this all-encompassment that he refers when he says in what is perhaps his most memorable lines of verse: "My heart has become capable of every form: it is a pasture for gazelles and a convent for Christian monks, / And a temple for idols and the pilgrim's Ka'ba and the tables of the Tora and the book of the Koran."¹⁶⁸

In his Dīwān, the Shaykh composed a poem to the 'Anqā', which we give here in full as it expresses so well the nature of this strange creature:

I marvel at a being that comprises every form,
Whether of essential angels, jinn, or humankind;
Whether of this world or of the world-supernal,
Of animal, vegetable, or mineral.
These are naught beside it,
Nor yet are they its essence,
But in any form it wills, it manifests itself.
It is what appears, by definition, to perception,
Yet it is what remains veiled from conception.
For minds cannot know it by the force of their thinking,
But Imagination makes it manifest to sense.
It is the Living, although no life supports its Essence 166. Fut. II. 432, Chap. 198, Section 14; trans. Chittick, SPK, p. 139.

167. Fuṣūṣ, I. 113; Austin, Bezels of Wisdom, p. 137.

168. Tarjumān, pp. 19 (Arabic), 67.

In the way that all the forms subsist in [life].
Inform me then, who it may be that I have indicated
In what we have described (and cast aside conceptions):
There it is – concealed, but without being absent;
And there, again, envisaged, but hidden from vision!
I would like to know: Of the likes of it have you Ever heard or no? – Inform me, then, who is it?
But no one knows what we have adduced here
Except for One, and that is God.
No creature can ever comprehend it.
None there is like unto it, except one personage:
I marvel at the One Perfect that he epitomizes!¹⁶⁹

The ‘Anqā’'s Poem

The ‘Anqā’'s poem, like that of the Tree,¹⁷⁰ has but five lines, whose end rhyme is dāl, primarily -ūd with the exception of the final word of the poem that ends in -īd. A long “u”, inserted between the final two consonants of a first-form verb, indicates the passive participle, the recipient of an action, for example mamdūd. This participle is particularly apt for the ‘Anqā’ who, as a metonym for prime matter, receives all forms.¹⁷¹

169. Trans. Elmore (slightly altered), Islamic Sainthood, pp.614–15. He bases his trans. on the 1855 edn. of the Dīrwān.

170. It is not by mere chance that the poems of the ‘Anqā’ and the Tree are equal in length. The author wants to draw our attention to the ‘Anqā’'s similarity to the Tree as Perfect Human Being.

171. For more on the ‘Anqā’, see Elmore, Islamic Sainthood, pp.184–95.

The Jet-Black Crow (al-ghurāb)

If you ask: What is the Crow?, we answer: [It is] the Universal Body, which the Eagle made appear by means of the Dove.¹⁷²

The raven or crow is a bird that is often, perhaps because of its colour, connected with the occult. In alchemical lore, the raven – like the eagle and the phoenix – is one of the symbols for Mercurius, the lapis philosophorum.¹⁷³ It is thus associated with everything that is solid, dark, and earthy. It represents the first stage of the alchemical process, melanosis or nigredo, “either present from the beginning as a quality of the material prima, the chaos or massa confusa, or else produced by the separation ... of the elements”.¹⁷⁴ Ibn ‘Arabī appears to be well acquainted with the alchemical art when he has the Ghurāb call himself the alembic (būṭāqa), an alchemical term. Jung tells us that the alembic’s ideal shape was perfectly round – or sometimes egg-shaped, in imitation of the womb and the heavenly bodies.¹⁷⁵ Universal Body, the Ghurāb’s metaphysical reality, is also created round: “The first shape that this body received was the circular shape.”¹⁷⁶

Crows inhabit “the hibernal-material world”¹⁷⁷ and are associated with death and entombment. The ghurāb is found in the Qur’an in this connection in the remarkable story of Cain and Abel. Following Cain’s murder of his brother: “Allah sent a raven scratching up the ground, to show him how to hide his brother’s naked corpse. He said: Woe unto me! Am I not able to be as this raven and so hide my brother’s naked corpse? And he became repentant”(Q. 5: 31).

In Arabic literature, the crow or raven – the two are not distinguished – generally has a negative connotation for the reasons we have alluded to above.¹⁷⁸ In Rūmī’s poetry, for example, the crow is 172. Fut. II. 130, Chap. 73, Question 153.

173. Jung, Philosophy and Alchemy, p. 134.

174. Ibid., p. 230.

175. See ibid., pp. 87, 236.

176. ‘Uqlat al-mustawfiz, p. 57.

177. Schimmel, Triumphal Sun, p. 118.

considered an ugly and predacious bird, a consumer of carrion and dung. By extension, it is a symbol of those attracted by the material world. It also has a reputation for sharp-sightedness, caution, and pride.

Crows are almost invariably birds of ill-omen. In many a pre-Islamic poem, the ghurāb al-bayn – archetypal bird of separation – signals the impending separation of lover and beloved. Ibn ‘Arabī employs the motif of the ghurāb al-bayn in his poetry upon occasion. In Poem XV of the Tarjumān al-ashwāq, for example, he writes: “Gone, gone, / cawed the crows of separation, / God leave rotting on the path / a crow that caws! // And what are the crows of separation / but camel stallions / pacing hard, / taking those we love away.”¹⁷⁹

In pre-Islamic Arabia, Ghurāb was a personal name which, according to tradition, Muḥammad would not allow the Muslims to keep because of its etymological association with separation from one’s homeland (ghurba) and its natural association with the foul carrion-eating bird.

In philosophical terms, the Jet-Black Crow represents Universal Body. Universal Body is sometimes known as “Second Matter”,¹⁸⁰ the first metaphysical step to concrete existence.¹⁸¹ It is absolute, unqualified body which, because it receives effects from Nature in the form of the four elements, is the first natural form.¹⁸² Unlike hayūlā, 178. For more on the raven in Arabic literature, see Stetkevych, Muḥammad and the Golden Bough, p. 117–18, n. 11.

179. Trans. Sells, Stations of Desire, p. 114. Nicholson gives a more prosaic English trans., Tarjumān, pp. 21 (Arabic), 76.

180. The designation of Universal Body as “second matter” in Arabic philosophy can be found in the Rasā’il of the Ikhwān al-Ṣafā’ (Vol. III, p. 187): “The First Hyle receives measurements, which are length, width, and depth, and with that it becomes the Absolute Body, which is the Second Hyle.”

181. Philosophical discussions concerning first and second matter began early in Greek philosophy, probably in response to Stoic ideas concerning matter, and lasted well into the Hellenistic period. See de Haas, John Philoponus’ New Definition. The Arabic philosophers continued the debate, formulating their own opposing notions. See Hyman, “Aristotle’s ‘First Matter’ and Avicenna’s and Averroes’ ‘Corporeal Form’”.

182. See Ikhwān al-Ṣafā’, Rasā’il, II, p. 6. See also Nasr, Islamic Cosmological Doctrines, pp. 58–9.

Universal Body is quantifiable and determinate; it has length, width, and depth. A “corporeal sphere”, it “fills the Void”, and “within it every corporeal thing in the cosmos takes shape”.¹⁸³

As Ibn ‘Arabī says in the ‘Uqlat al-mustawfiz: “The first form that received the form of the body is length, breadth, and depth. ... Its length is from the Intellect, its width from the Soul, and its depth is the space that extends to the centre [of the earth]. For this reason, these three realities were in it, and it was three-dimensional.”¹⁸⁴

The Universal Body is given the shape of a circle, the most perfect of shapes,¹⁸⁵ and it has movement, not from place to place but around its axis, “like a hand-mill”.¹⁸⁶ This movement is caused by heat, for, if the elements of the body were perfectly equilibrated, it would be stationary and there would be no manifestation whatsoever. Thus the series of revolving celestial spheres are the first and finest of the corporeal bodies to come into existence in Universal Body.

Universal Body is associated with fullness (malā’) as contrasted to void (khalā’), and it is in the Shaykh’s chapter on Retreat (khalwa) in the Futūḥāt that some of his most intriguing remarks concerning Universal Body can be found. The first thing to fill the void, according to Ibn ‘Arabī, was the dimensionless Dust, a “dark substance”.¹⁸⁷ Then the Real manifested Himself to this substance with His Name the Light, dyeing it and removing from it the darkness of non-existence. It then was attributed with existence and became what the early philosophers called the “Great Man” (al-insān al-kabīr), in other words, the macrocosm. The forms of shapes were unfolded within this body: shapes of the celestial spheres, the elements, and all generated beings, the human – called the “Small Man” – constituting the last of them. This human being, created upon the form of 183. Murata, Tao of Islam, p.156.

184. ‘Uqlat al-mustawfiz, pp. 56–7.

185. As Corbin points out (Temple and Contemplation, p.216), the circular form should be conceived in terms of function rather than of geometrical shape.

186. Fut. II. 433, Chap. 198, Section 14.

187. Fut. II. 150, Chap. 78. See also Fuṣūṣ, Chap. on Joseph, for the description of the cosmos in its latent form as “shadow” and its relation to the Imagination.

the Real and the cosmos, bringing together every attribute, is God's vicegerent, the Perfect Human Being. Thus, as the Shaykh elegantly puts it, "the Dusty-Substance impregnated with Light is the basic element (al-basīṭ), the manifestation of the cosmos in it is the intermediary (al-wasīṭ), and the Perfect Human Being is the summary (al-wajīz)".¹⁸⁸

In Chapter 198 of the Futūḥāt, the Divine Name associated with Universal Body is the Manifest (al-ẓāhir), because it is the final outcome of the divine creative process, the complete filling of the void or womb of non-existence with life in all its manifest forms. The prophetic wisdom exemplified by this Name is that of Abraham, who, with his epithet "the Intimate Friend" (khalīl) exhibits the complementary qualities of voiding (khalā')¹⁸⁹ of self and filling (malā') with God. Permeated with divine qualities, as light permeates inchoate matter, Abraham becomes the manifest locus of the hidden God: "If ... the creature is considered the manifest and the Reality the Unmanifest within him, then the Reality is in the hearing of the creature, as also in his sight, hand, foot, and all his faculties, as declared in the [well-known] Holy Tradition of the Prophet."¹⁹⁰ To deprecate the material world is thus to fail to witness the fullness of God's Self-disclosure in the manifold vessels of the cosmos and to be ignorant of both oneself and God. "The spirit cannot rationally understand itself without the body, which is the locus of 'how many' and manyness. ... It does not know its humanness without the existence of the body along with it."¹⁹¹

An additional connection between Abraham and the Ghurāb should be noted. Corbin has pointed out that the site of the Maqām Ibrāhīm (Station of Abraham) is located in the western area of the Ka'ba precinct. Hence, the notions of setting and exile are appropriately

188. Fut. II. 151, Chap. 78.

189. Khulla (intimate friendship) and khalā' (void) are not derived from the same root, but Ibn 'Arabī often makes use of assonant words to draw startling parallels.

190. Fuṣūṣ, p. 81; trans. Austin, Bezels of Wisdom, p. 92.

191. Fut. II. 618, Chap. 282; trans. Chittick, SPK, p. 235.

attributed to this archetypal monotheist, who refused to worship what sets, and chose exile over idol worship.¹⁹²

The Jet-Black Crow's Poem

The Jet-Black Crow has twenty lines of verse, whose metre is ramal and whose end rhyme is -ānī, like the Ringdove's. The world-shunning philosophers have maligned the Body as the source of darkness and evil, but the Crow seeks to set the record straight. As a manifestation of the Divine Name "the Last",¹⁹³ he is the very crown of creation; as a manifestation of the Name "the Manifest" he is the matrix for the corporeal entities of the universe. Although dark himself, he is the source of the myriad sparks of light in that the stars and planets are all derived from Universal Body. His poem thus contains an extended allusion to the Light verse of Sura 24.

Since the cosmos is created upon principles of arithmetic, geometry, and music, all these principles receive their first determination in the Universal Body. For that reason, the Crow rightly calls himself the "foundation of songs".

The Jet-Black Crow, because of his darkness, is a keeper of secrets and a repository of the Trust.¹⁹⁴ The one who can unravel his secret is someone who is also associated with the chthonic realm: Šakhr ibn Sinān, prophet of the Barzakh.

192. Corbin, Temple and Contemplation, p.231.

193. Note also the connection between the Name "the Last" (al-Ākhir) and the next or "last" world (al-ākhirā). Many of the secrets of the Crow – archetypal harbinger of death – have to do with the fate of the body after death. In this he is very like the man whose secret he conceals.

194. See Fut. II. 647.

Cosmic Marriage¹⁹⁵ and the Genealogy of the Birds

According to Ibn 'Arabī, the entire universe is the locus of marriage and procreation, not only among material beings but in the divine and spiritual realms as well. God, for example, engenders the universe in nothingness when He brings the fixed entities (al-a'yān al-thābita) into existence.¹⁹⁶

The Pen and the Tablet are also paired as a cosmic couple:

Between the Pen and the Tablet there is an intelligible spiritual marriage and a visible sensory effect. The effect that was deposited in the Tablet was like the sperm that is ejaculated into the womb of the female. The meanings deposited within the celestial letters that became manifest from that writing are like the spirits of the children deposited within their bodies.¹⁹⁷

Even syllogisms are engaged in procreation. Deductive knowledge can only result from the “marriage” of two premises, which takes place when a single term is repeated. This constitutes the marriage act between them, and the conclusion that is “born” from them is thus called their “child”.¹⁹⁸

In many places throughout the Futūḥāt, as we have alluded to above, Ibn 'Arabī speaks about the relations between the ontological levels in terms of fathers, mothers, and children.¹⁹⁹ He states this principle as follows: “Everything that exercises an effect is a father, and everything that receives an effect is a mother. ... That which is born between the two from the effect is called a son or a child.”²⁰⁰

195. For a masterful treatment of this theme in Islamic philosophy, see Murata, Tao of Islam, especially Chap. 5 (Macrocosmic Marriage).

196. See Fut. II. 656, Chap. 292.

197. Fut. I. 139, Chap. 11.

198. Fut. I. 138, Chap. 11.

199. See especially Fut. I, Chaps 11 and 21.

200. Fut. I. 138, Chap. 11; trans. Murata, Tao of Islam, p. 145.

God is thus the “First Father” and (non-existent) “thingness” is the First Mother. Marriage on this level takes place through the existential command: Be! The child that results is the possible thing upon which existence has been bestowed.²⁰¹ This cosmic pattern appears at every level of creation, but other than the role of First Father, which is fulfilled by God alone, the rest of the existing entities take turns at being fathers and mothers, depending on whether they have an active or a passive role. For this reason, the Eagle/Pen/Intellect is a mother as well as a father, a Tablet as well as a Pen, although we see him in the Ittiḥād primarily in his masculine role.

The four birds are thus related to one another in a variety of ways, the most evident of which is through a hierarchical descent. The Eagle, brought into existence by the Real, gives birth from himself to the Ringdove, through the agency of the Real’s command. Their mating, the tale of which constitutes a large portion of the Ringdove’s soliloquy, results in the ‘Anqā’, who is the mother of the Crow. We are not told who the Crow’s father is, and the narrator does not pursue the genealogy further.

The bird’s family tree, if we may call it that, is complicated, however, by the fact that they represent cosmological figures whose relation to one another is a serious matter of dispute. One member of the family, for example, appears to be altogether missing.

Nature

Anyone acquainted with the Shaykh’s extensive writings on cosmology in the Futūḥāt and elsewhere will note the absence of Nature among these cosmic principles making up the family tree of the four birds. In Chapter 198 of the Futūḥāt, for example, we find an enumeration of the twenty-eight levels of existence that places Nature between the level of the Universal Soul and that of the Dust. In fact, the Shaykh explains that the level of Nature can only be between the Soul and the Dust, for “Every body that the Dust accepts, down to the last existing body, is natural.”²⁰² Nature’s authority extends from the Dust to everything below it, while the Universal Soul’s authority extends from Nature to everything below it. As for what is above the Soul, that is, the Intellect and what is above it, neither Nature nor Soul have any authority over it.

201. See Fut. I. 139.

In some instances, however, the Shaykh places Nature and Dust at an approximately equal level, Nature being slightly higher only because of its priority in time:

Among those things that were cast [into the Soul] through a most sanctified, spiritual casting [that is, from the First Intellect] were Nature and the Dust. Hence the Soul was the first mother to give birth to twins. The first thing she cast down was Nature, which was followed by the Dust. Hence Nature and the Dust are brother and sister from a single father and a single mother. Then [God] gave Nature in marriage to the Dust. Born from them was the form of the Universal Body, which was the first body to become manifest. Nature is the father because it produces effect. Dust is the mother because within it effects become manifest. The result is the Body.²⁰³

This appears to answer the question of the Crow’s progenitor: his father is Nature. We should not be surprised at seeing Mother Nature personified here as masculine, for it only means that Nature is the active force in the marriage act between it and the Dust. But this does not solve the problem of why Nature does not appear in the Ittiḥād at all.

It is possible that a clue to this mystery can be found in a passage of the Futūḥāt in which Ibn ‘Arabī appears to completely reverse his position regarding the relative positions of the entities in question: “[T]hose who have placed Nature in a level below the Soul and above the Hyle ... have no witnessing”,²⁰⁴ that is, they have not seen

202. Fut. I. 261, Chap. 47.

203. Fut. I. 140, Chap. 11; trans. Murata, Tao of Islam, pp. 156–7, modified.

204. Fut. III. 420, Chap. 371; trans. Chittick, SPK, p. 140.

things as they really are. He goes on to resolve this contradiction by explaining that:

If a person does have witnessing and [nonetheless] holds this view, he means [by it] that Nature which becomes manifest through its authority in the translucent corporeal bodies, that is, in the Throne and what it surrounds. This second Nature is to the first as the daughter is to the woman who is the mother; like her mother, she gives birth, even if she is a daughter born from her.²⁰⁵

Nature, it now appears, occupies two rungs on the genealogical ladder. Thus far, we have only been concerned with that aspect of Nature which gives rise to physical bodies, from the celestial spheres to the four elements and everything in between. This “second Nature” is the cosmogonic ‘Anqā’. But as the Shaykh tells us above, there is an aspect of Nature that transcends this second Nature and occupies a rank even higher than that of the First Intellect and Universal Soul – a Nature which, Ibn ‘Arabī says, “is more worthy to be attributed to the Real than anything else, since everything else becomes manifest only in that which becomes manifest from Nature, that is, the Breath [of the All-Merciful], which permeates the cosmos.”²⁰⁶

Nature as first Mother is all-inclusive. Ibn ‘Arabī equates this Nature with the Breath of the All-Merciful: “Universal Nature, by its form, comes before those things that derive their being from her. In reality, Nature is the Breath of the Merciful in which are unfolded the forms of the higher and lower Cosmos.”²⁰⁷ Breath manifests as a vaporous Cloud – that symbolic representation of the totality of animated entities, generated at every instant through God’s loving mercy. With every flash of metaphysical light, the cosmos comes into existence, returns to non-existence, and receives new existence perpetually within God’s knowledge of Himself. In every moment, 205. Ibid.; trans. Chittick, SPK, p. 140, modified.

206. Ibid.; trans. Chittick, SPK, p. 140.

207. Fuṣūṣ, p. 219; trans. Austin, Bezels of Wisdom, p. 277.

an endless process of divine exhalation and inhalation breathes life into the entities, annihilates them, and revivifies them eternally.

This Cloud is sometimes equated with the Reality of Realities, or Universal Reality. It is, so to speak, hayūlā writ large. To give an example which, although provided by Ibn ‘Arabī, is probably more familiar to readers of Plato, it is the Form of Knowledge as opposed to the Form of the chair. There is nothing that this Reality does not contain, since it embraces every concept, from the Real to the real, including the very notion of being itself:

The Cloud is that which we have mentioned as eternal in the eternal and temporally originated in the temporally originated. This is like your words, or identical with your words, concerning Being/existence. When you attribute it to the Real, you say it is Eternal, but when you attribute it to creation, you say that it is temporally originated. So the Cloud inasmuch as it is a description of the Real is a divine description, but inasmuch as it is a description of the cosmos it is an engendered description.²⁰⁸

Since this Reality is qualified neither by existence nor by non-existence, Ibn ‘Arabī sometimes calls it the “third thing” and the “All-embracing Universal”, and says that it is from this third thing that the world becomes manifest.²⁰⁹ Embracing all realities, particularizing them at will in a myriad of forms, this is the ‘Anqā’ in her noetic aspect. “Call it, if you wish, the Reality of Realities, or hylê, First Matter, or supreme genus. ... This third thing can never be separate from the Necessary Being, standing parallel to It, without having entified existence.”²¹⁰

There is still one more step we must take, one more form that the ‘Anqā’ must assume to complete the triplicate aspect of her nature: that of the Universal Tree, symbol of the Perfect Human 208. Fut. II. 63, Chap. 73, Question 31; trans. Chittick, SPK, p. 137.

209. Inshā’ al-dawwā’ir, p. 18.

210. Ibid., p. 21.

Being, whose “shade extends over those whom God envelops in His solicitude”.

The Perfect Human Being, and Muḥammad in particular, is sometimes depicted as the microcosmic counterpart of the Breath of the All-Merciful. We should recall that the Fuṣūṣ begins with the divine exhalation that gives form to the cosmos and its likeness Adam, and it ends with Muḥammad, the perfect vessel of mercy, who receives and gives form to the Divine Breath: “When Muḥammad was created a pure servant, he had no ambition for leadership, but continued prostrating and standing [before his Lord], a passive creation, until God effected [His purpose] in him, when He conferred on him an active role in the realm of the Breaths.”²¹¹

Muḥammad, then, also occupies two levels: he is both the principle and the aim of creation. The highest of these levels is called the primordial Muḥammadan Reality, or the Muḥammadan Light, which lies above the levels of spiritual and material creation. It is to this that the Prophet’s claim, “I was a prophet when Adam was between water and clay”, refers. The other level is his specific universal mission as the Prophet Muḥammad, the embodied Seal of the Prophets, who lived and died as a fully human being.

The Perfect Human Being embraces all reality, divine and human, never known in itself, but only through relationship. The Perfect Human Being is a synthesis of all the words of existence, all Names of beauty and all Names of severity; a kaleidoscope of light and darkness; a heart that embraces every form, from mosque to fire temple; a microcosmic mundus imaginalis, where what is and what is not happily co-exist.

The secret of the birds’ genealogy, therefore, lies in the ‘Anqā’s unique position as First and Second Mothers – a fact that allows her to rightly claim that “nothing can be manifested that I am not in”. The ‘Anqā’, as First Mother, gives life to all. In this sense, she strangely gives birth to her father, the Intellect, bringing to mind

211. Fuṣūṣ, p.220; trans. Austin, p.278.

the paradoxical lines from al-Ḥallāj's cosmological–alchemical poem “Uqtulūnī yâ thiqātī”:²¹²

My mother has given birth to her father,
What a marvel is mine!
And my daughters, 'though my daughters, are my sisters,
Not by the act of time, no,
Nor by the act of adultery.²¹³

212. Dīwān al-Ḥallāj, p. 125. See French trans. by Massignon, Ḥusayn Manṣūr al-Ḥallāj, p. 54.

213. See Ibn 'Arabī's reference to this poem in Fut. II. 656, Chap. 292. Henry Corbin has discussed the perplexing line: “My mother has given birth to her father” in Creative Imagination, pp. 169–70. He also notes that the appellation of the Prophet's daughter Fātima as “mother of her father” (umm abīhā) – an appellation attributed in Shi'ite sources to the Prophet himself – is an indication of the “Creative Feminine” alluded to in al-Ḥallāj's poem (see Creative Imagination, p. 345, n. 65; p. 347, n. 70).

APPENDIX

The Edition of the Text

Ibn ‘Arabī mentions the Ittiḥād al-kawnī once in his Futūḥāt (II.351), as well as in two bibliographical works, the Fihrist and the Ijāza. Osman Yahia lists twenty-three manuscripts,¹ all conserved in the libraries of Istanbul. Denis Gril consulted ten manuscripts, two of which (nos. 5 and 8 below) were not mentioned by Osman Yahia, to establish the text. They are:

1. Shehit Ali 2813 / no. 6 (fols. 26–33b), copied in AH 621

Part of a collection of nine surviving treatises by Ibn ‘Arabī, copied by one of his disciples, Ayyūb b. Badr b. Maṣṣūr al-Muqrī (or al-Maqqarī), in the presence of the author. The beginning of the Treatise bears a samā’ in the hand of the copyist, also apparently describing the work as Risālat al-aḥadiyya. At the bottom of the page in his Andalusī script, Ibn ‘Arabī has appended an attestation of its accuracy:

ṣaḥḥa mā dhakarahu a’lāhu wa-kataba al-munshi’ fī tārikhihi (the above-mentioned is correct, as written by the author on this date)

This copy, certified by the author, constitutes the base manuscript. Some of its readings, however, remain tentative because of damage to the page margins and the copyist’s highly cursive script.

2. Veliyuddin 51 / no. 6 (fols. 48–56), copied in AH 736

Part of a collection of seventeen treatises of Ibn ‘Arabī, copied by Aḥmad b. Muḥammad b. Muthabbīt in Jerusalem, who claims to have taken it from an autograph copy, transmitted by ‘Abdallāh Badr al-Ḥabashī, Ibn ‘Arabī’s beloved disciple, who died around 618. The original manuscript, therefore, would antedate no. 1.

1. Histoire et classification, Vol. I, p. 325, no. 317.

3. Beyazit 3750 / no. 18 (fols. 277–286), copied in AH 782

Part of a collection of thirty treatises by Ibn ‘Arabī (excluding no. 12), taken from a copy in the hand of Shaykh Badr al-Dīn Muḥammad al-Zāhidī in Aleppo. Contains some variants tracing back to an original that is probably different from nos. 1 and 2.

4. Murad Bukhari 207 / no. 5 (fols. 71–95), copied in AH 875

Part of a collection of six treatises by Ibn ‘Arabī, copied by Jamāl al-Dīn ‘Abdallāh b. Ibrāhīm from an original copy apparently in the author’s hand, which was read back to him and certified by him as correct. Derives from no. 1.

5. Laleli 3741 / no. 6 (fols. 113–122b), copied in AH 904

Evidently derived from no. 1.

6. Carullah 2111 / no. 10 (fols. 63–69b), copied in AH 915

Part of a collection of twenty-three treatises, nineteen of which are by Ibn ‘Arabī, copied by ‘Abd al-Ṣamad al-Ṣāliḥī al-Ḥanafī al-Ṣūfī. Numbers 7, 8, and 9 seem to derive from this copy.

7. Fatih 5322 / no. 19 (fols. 151–153b), copied in c. AH 934

Part of a collection of thirty separate works, mostly treatises by Ibn ‘Arabī, some of which are commented on by Ibn Sawdakīn. The poetry at the beginning is missing. It offers some variants similar to those in nos. 1 and 4.

8. Hacı Mahmud 2510 /no. 1 (fols. 1b–16b), copied in AH 958

Part of a collection of two treatises by Ibn ‘Arabī; bears similarities to no. 5.

9. Halet Efendi 245 / no. 17 (fols. 353b–366), copied after AH 936

Part of a collection of twenty-six treatises, mostly by Ibn 'Arabī; bears similarities to no. 5.

10. Esad Efendi 1777 /no. 9 (fols. 158–172b), copied in AH 1004

Part of a collection of eleven treatises attributed to Ibn 'Arabī, some of which are apocryphal. Copy is very defective, and derives from no. 2.

There appear, then, to be three families of manuscripts whose transmission cannot be traced with precision. In the Arabic edition, all variants have been provided.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

- Addas, Claude. Quest for the Red Sulphur: The Life of Ibn 'Arabī. Translated by P. Kingsley. Cambridge: Islamic Texts Society, 1993.
- 'Affifī, A. E. (ed.). Fuṣūṣ al-ḥikam. See under Ibn 'Arabī.
- Arberry, A. J. (trans.). The Ring of the Dove. London: Luzac, 1953, reprinted 1994. Translation of Ibn Ḥazm's Ṭawq al-ḥamāma.
- Aṭṭār, Farīduddīn. Manṭiq al-ṭayr. Translated by C. S. Nott, from French translation of G. de Tassy, as The Conference of the Birds. Boulder: Shambhala, 1971.
- Austin, Ralph (trans.). Ibn al-'Arabī: The Bezels of Wisdom. Translation of Fuṣūṣ al-ḥikam. New York: Paulist Press, 1980.
- Austin, Ralph. Sufis of Andalusia. 1971. Reprinted Sherborne, Glos: Beshara Publications, 1988. Partial translation of Rūḥ al-quds and al-Durra al-fākhira.
- Austin, Ralph. "The Lady Nizām – An Image of Love and Knowledge", JMIAS, VII (1988), 35–48.
- Bashier, Salman H. Ibn al-'Arabī's Barzakh: The Concept of the Limit and the Relationship between God and the World. Albany, NY: SUNY Press, 2004.
- Bayrak, Tosun, and Rabia Terri Harris. What the Seeker Needs. Putney, VT: Threshold Books, 1992. Translation of al-Iṣtilāḥāt al-ṣūfiyya.
- Beneito, Pablo, and Souad al-Ḥakīm. Las Contemplaciones de los Misterios. Madrid: Editora Regional de Murcia, 1994. Translation of al-Mashāhid al-qudsiyya.
- Böwering, Gerhard. The Mystical Vision of Existence in Classical Islam. Berlin: De Gruyter, 1979.
- Bursevi, Ismail Hakki. Ismail Hakki Bursevi's Translation of and Commentary on Fusus al-Hikam by Muhyiddin Ibn 'Arabi, Vol. 4. Rendered into English by B. Rauf. Oxford: Muhyiddin Ibn 'Arabi Society, 1991.
- Chittick, William C. "Ibn 'Arabī's Own Summary of the Fuṣūṣ: 'The Imprint of the Bezels of Wisdom'". JMIAS, I (1982), 30–93. Partial translation of Jāmī's Naqd al-nuṣūṣ fī sharḥ naqsh al-fuṣūṣ.
- Chittick, William C. "The Chapter Headings of the Fuṣūṣ". JMIAS, II (1984), 41–93.

Bibliography

- Chittick, William C. The Self-Disclosure of God: Principles of Ibn al-ʿArabī's Cosmology. Albany, NY: SUNY Press, 1998.
- Chittick, William C. The Sufi Path of Knowledge: Ibn al-ʿArabī's Metaphysics of Imagination. Albany, NY: SUNY Press, 1989.
- Chodkiewicz, Michel. An Ocean without Shore: Ibn Arabī, the Book and the Law. Translated by D. Streight. Albany, NY: SUNY Press, 1993.
- Chodkiewicz, Michel. Seal of the Saints: Prophethood and Sainthood in the Doctrine of Ibn ʿArabī. Translated by L. Sherrard. Cambridge: Islamic Texts Society, 1993.
- Chodkiewicz, Michel (ed.). The Meccan Revelations, Vol. 1. New York: Pir Press, 2002.
- Corbin, Henry. Avicenna and the Visionary Recital. Translated W. R. Trask. Princeton: Princeton University Press, 1960. Reprinted Spring Publications, Irving, TX, 1980.
- Corbin, Henry. Creative Imagination in the Sufism of Ibn ʿArabī. Translated by R. Mannheim. Princeton: Princeton University Press, 1969.
- Corbin, Henry. Cyclical Time and Ismaili Gnosis. London: Kegan Paul, 1983.
- Corbin, Henry. Spiritual Body and Celestial Earth. Translated by N. Pearson. Princeton: Princeton University Press, 1977.
- Corbin, Henry. Temple and Contemplation. Translated by P. Sherrard, with the assistance of Liadain Sherrard. London: KPI, 1986.
- Coulano, Ioan Petru. Out of this World: Other Worldly Journeys from Gilgamesh to Albert Einstein. Boston: Shambhala, 1991.
- Culianu, Ioan Petru. Psychanodia I. Leiden: Brill, 1983.
- Dagli, Caner K. Ibn al-ʿArabī: The Ringstones of Wisdom. Translation of Fuṣūṣ al-ḥikam. Chicago: Great Books of the Islamic World, 2004.
- Eliade, Mircea. Images and Symbols. New York: Sheed & Ward, 1961.
- Eliade, Mircea. The Sacred and the Profane. New York: Harcourt, Brace & World, 1959.
- Elmore, Gerald. Islamic Sainthood in the Fullness of Time: Ibn ʿArabī's Book of the Fabulous Gryphon. Leiden: Brill, 1998. Translation of ʿAnqāʾ mughrīb.
- Ernst, Carl W. "The Symbolism of Birds and Flight in the Writings of Rūzbihān Baqlī". In The Heritage of Sufism: The Legacy of Medieval Persian Sufism (1150–1500), Vol. 2, edited by L. Lewisohn, pp. 353–66. Oxford: Oneworld, 1999. (Originally published 1992.)
- Fenton, Paul, and Maurice Gloton. La Production des cercles. Translation of Inshāʾ al-dawāʾir. Paris: Éditions de l'Éclat, 1996.

Bibliography

- Fenton, Paul, and Maurice Gloton. "The Book of the Description of the Encompassing Circles". In Muhyiddin Ibn 'Arabī: A Commemorative Volume, edited by S. Hirtenstein and M. Tiernan, pp. 12–43. Shaftesbury, Dorset: Element, 1993. Translation of Inshā' al-dawā'ir.
- Giese, Alma. Ibn 'Arabī: Urwolke und Welt. Munich: Verlag C. H. Beck, 2002.
- Al-Ghorab, Maḥmūd. "Muhyiddin Ibn al-'Arabi Amidst Religions and Schools of Thought". In Muhyiddin Ibn 'Arabī: A Commemorative Volume, edited by S. Hirtenstein and M. Tiernan, pp. 200–27. Shaftesbury, Dorset: Element, 1993.
- Gilis, Charles-André. *Le Livre des chatons des sagesse*s, 2 vols. Beirut: Dar al-Bouraq, 1997–98. Translation of Fuṣūṣ al-ḥikam.
- Gloton, Maurice. L'Arbre du monde. Paris: Les Deux Océans, 1982.
- Gril, Denis. Le Dévoilement des effets du voyage. Paris: Éditions de l'Éclat, 1994. Translation of K. al-isfār.
- Gril, Denis. Le Livre de l'arbre et des quatre oiseaux. Paris: Les Deux Océans, 1984. Translation of R. al-ittiḥād al-kawnī.
- Gril, Denis. "Le Livre de l'arbre et des quatre oiseaux (Risālat al-ittiḥād al-kawnī)". Annales Islamologiques, 17 (1981), 53–86.
- de Haas, Frans A. J. John Philoponus' New Definition of Prime Matter: Aspects of Its Background in Neoplatonism and the Ancient Commentary Tradition. Leiden: Brill, 1997.
- Al-Ḥakīm, Souad. Al-Mu'jam al-ṣuṭī. Beirut: Dandara, 1981.
- Al-Ḥallāj, al-Ḥusayn b. Maṣṣūr. Diwān al-Ḥallāj. Beirut: Dār al-Kutub al-'Ilmiyya, 1998.
- Harris, Rabia Terri. Journey to the Lord of Power. New York: Inner Traditions, 1981. Translation of R. al-anwār.
- Hirtenstein, Stephen. The Unlimited Mercifier: the Spiritual Life and Thought of Ibn 'Arabī. Oxford: Anqa Publishing, 1999.
- Hirtenstein, Stephen. "The Brotherhood of Milk: Perspectives of Knowledge in the Adamic Clay," JMLAS, XXXIII (2003), 1–21.
- Hirtenstein, Stephen, and Layla Shamash. "Kitāb al-fanā' fī-l-mushāhada". JMLAS, IX (1991), 1–17.
- Hirtenstein, Stephen, and Martin Notcutt. Divine Sayings: The Mishkāt al-anwār of Ibn 'Arabī. Oxford: Anqa Publishing, 2004.
- Hoyland, Robert G. Arabia and the Arabs. London: Routledge, 2001.
- Hyman, Arthur. "Aristotle's 'First Matter' and Avicenna's and Averroes' 'Corporeal Form'". In Harry Austryn Wolfson Jubilee Volume on the

Bibliography

- Occasion of His Seventy-Fifth Birthday*, Vol. 1, edited by A. Hyman and S. Lieberman, pp. 385–406. Jerusalem: American Academy for Jewish Research, 1965.
- Ibn ‘Arabī, Muḥyiddīn. K. al-‘abādila. Cairo, 1969.
- Ibn ‘Arabī. ‘Anqā’ mughrib. For English translation, see Elmore, Islamic Sainthood.
- Ibn ‘Arabī. R. al-anwār. In Rasā’il Ibn ‘Arabī, Vol. 1, pp. 179–94. For English translation, see Harris, Journey to the Lord of Power. For German translation, see Radtke, Neue kritische Gänge.
- Ibn ‘Arabī. Al-Durra al-fākhira. For partial English translation, see Austin, Sufis of Andalusia.
- Ibn ‘Arabī. K. al-fanā’ fī al-mushāhada. In Rasā’il Ibn ‘Arabī, Vol. 1, pp. 9–18. For English translation, see Hirtenstein and Shamash. For French translation, see Vâlsan, “Le Livre de l’extinction dans la contemplation”.
- Ibn ‘Arabī. Fuṣūṣ al-ḥikam. Edited by A. Afifī. Teheran: Intishārāt al-Zahrā, n.d. (Reprint of Beirut 1946 edition.) For English translations, see Austin, Ibn al-‘Arabi: The Bezels of Wisdom; Bursevi, Ismail Hakki Bursevi’s Translation of and Commentary on Fusus al-Hikam; Dagli, Ibn al-‘Arabī: The Ringstones of Wisdom. For French translation, see Gilis, *Le Livre des chatons des sagesse*s.
- Ibn ‘Arabī. Al-Futūḥāt al-Makkiyya. Edited by O. Yahya. Cairo: Al-Hay’ al-Miṣriyya al-‘Amma li-l-kitāb, 1977–.
- Ibn ‘Arabī. Al-Futūḥāt al-Makkiyya, 4 vols. Reprinted Beirut: Dār Ṣādir, n.d.
- Ibn ‘Arabī. Ḥilyat al-abdāl. In Rasā’il Ibn ‘Arabī, Vol. 2, pp. 271–80. For French translation, see Vâlsan, La Parure des abdāl.
- Ibn ‘Arabī. Inshā’ al-dawā’ir. For French translation, see Fenton and Gloton, La Production des cercles. For English translation, see Fenton and Gloton, “The Book of the Description of the Encompassing Circles”.
- Ibn ‘Arabī. K. al-isfār. For French translation, see Gril, Le Dévoilement.
- Ibn ‘Arabī. Al-Iṣṭilāḥ al-ṣūfiyya. In Rasā’il Ibn ‘Arabī, Vol. 2, pp. 301–16. For English translation, see Bayrak and Harris, What the Seeker Needs.
- Ibn ‘Arabī. R. al-ittiḥād al-kawnī. Edited by D. Gril. Annales Islamologiques 17, 1981, pp. 53–86. For French translation, see Gril, Le Livre de l’arbre.
- Ibn ‘Arabī. Muḥāḍarāt al-abrār wa musāmarāt al-aḥyār, Part I. Edited by M. al-Namarī. Beirut: Dār al-Kutub al-‘Ilmiyya, 2001.

Bibliography

- Ibn 'Arabī. Al-Masā'il. In Rasā'il Ibn 'Arabī, Vol. 2, pp. 143–70.
- Ibn 'Arabī. Al-Mashāhid al-quḍsiyya. For French translation, see Ruspoli, Le Livre des contemplations divines. For Spanish translation, see Beneito and al-Ḥakīm, Las Contemplaciones de los misterios. For English translation, see Twinch and Beneito, Contemplation of the Holy Mysteries.
- Ibn 'Arabī. Mishkāt al-anwār. For English translation, see Hirtenstein and Notcutt, Divine Sayings.
- Ibn 'Arabī. Naqsh al-fuṣūṣ. In Rasā'il Ibn 'Arabī, Vol. 2, pp. 281–92. For English translation, see Chittick, "Ibn 'Arabī's Own Summary of the Fuṣūṣ".
- Ibn 'Arabī. Rasā'il Ibn 'Arabī. Damascus, 1998. (Reprint of 1948 Hyderabad edn.)
- Ibn 'Arabī. Rūḥ al-quḍs. For partial English translation, see Austin, Sufis of Andalusia.
- Ibn 'Arabī. Tarjumān al-ashwāq. Edited and English translation by R. A. Nicholson, London: Theosophical Publishing House, 1911, reprinted 1978.
- Ibn 'Arabī. 'Uqlat al-mustawfiz. In Kleine Schriften des Ibn al-'Arabī, edited by H. Nyberg. Leiden: Brill, 1919.
- Ibn Ḥazm, Abū Muḥammad 'Alī. Ṭawq al-ḥamāma. Edited Makkī, Cairo: Dār al-Ma'ārif, 1980. For English translation, see Arberry, Ring of the Dove.
- Ikhwān al-Ṣafā'. Rasā'il ikhwān al-ṣafā', II and III. Beirut: Dār Sāder, n.d.
- Izutsu, Toshihiko. Sufism and Taoism: A Comparative Study of Key Philosophical Concepts. Berkeley and Los Angeles: University of California Press, 1984.
- Jaffray, Angela. Unveiling the Effects of the Voyages, forthcoming.
- Al-Jāhiz, 'Amr b. Baḥr. K. al-ḥayawān, Vol. IV, edited by 'A. S. M. Hārūn, Cairo: Maktabat Muṣṭafā al-Bābī al-Ḥalabī, AH 1359.
- Jāmī, 'Abd al-Raḥmān. Naqd al-nuṣūṣ fī sharḥ naqsh al-fuṣūṣ. For partial English translation, see Chittick, "Ibn 'Arabī's Own Summary of the Fuṣūṣ".
- Jeffery, Arthur. "Ibn 'Arabī's Shajarat al-kawn". Studia Islamica, X (1959), 43–77, and XI (1959), 113–60.
- Jung, Carl. Psychology and Alchemy. 2nd edn. Princeton: Princeton University Press, reprinted 1993.
- Kopf, Lothar. "The Bird 'Anūq". In Studies in Arabic and Hebrew Lexicography, edited by M. H. Goshen-Gottstein, pp. 125–32. Jerusalem: Magnes Press, 1976.

Bibliography

- Kraus, Paul. Jābir ibn Ḥayyān: contribution à l'histoire des idées scientifiques dans l'Islam. Paris: Les Belles Lettres, 1986.
- Lane, Edward William. An Arabic-English Lexicon, in 8 parts. Reprinted Beirut: Librairie du Liban, 1968.
- Massignon, Louis (trans.). Ḥusayn Maṣṣūr al-Ḥallāj: Diwān. Paris: Seuil, 1981.
- Miftāḥ, 'Abd al-Bāqī. Mafātiḥ fuṣūṣ al-ḥikam li-Ibn 'Arabī. Marrakesh: Dār al-Qubba al-Zarqā, 1997.
- Morris, James W. "The Spiritual Ascension: Ibn 'Arabī and the Mi'rāj". Journal of the American Oriental Society, 107 (1987), 629–52, and 108 (1988), 63–77.
- Murata, Sachiko. The Tao of Islam. Albany, NY: SUNY Press, 1992.
- Nasr, Seyyid Hossein. An Introduction to Islamic Cosmological Doctrines, revised edn. Boulder: Shambhala, 1978.
- Nicholson, R. A. See Ibn 'Arabī, Tarjumān al-ashwāq.
- Al-Niffarī, 'Abd al-Jabbār. The Mawāqif and Mukhāṭabāt of Muḥammad Ibn 'Abdī'l-Jabbār al-Niffarī. Edited and translated by Arthur J. Arberry. London: Gibb Memorial Trust, 1935. Reprinted 1978.
- Pellat, Charles. s.v. "Khālid b. Sinān". In Encyclopaedia of Islam. 2nd edn, edited by C. E. Bosworth, E. van Donzel, W. P. Heinrichs, and G. Lecomte, p. 928. Leiden: Brill, 1960–.
- Philpot, J. H., The Sacred Tree in Religion and Myth. Mineola, NY: Dover, 2004.
- Pickthall, Muhammad Marmaduke (trans.) The Glorious Qur'an. Mecca: Muslim World League, 1977.
- Qūnāwī, Ṣadr al-Dīn. Al-Fukūk. Teheran: Intishārāt Mawlā, n.d.
- Radtke, Bernd. Neue kritische Gänge, Utrecht: Houtsma, 2005.
- Rauf, Bulent. Addresses. Robertson, Scotland: Beshara Publications, 1986.
- Ruspoli, Stéphane. L'Alchimie du bonheur parfait. Paris: Berg International, 1981.
- Ruspoli, Stéphane. Ibn 'Arabī: le livre des contemplations divines. Paris: Sindbad, 1999. Edition and translation of Al-Mashāhid al-qudsiyya.
- Al-Sarrāj, Abū Naṣr. K. al-Luma'. Edited by R. A. Nicholson. London: Luzac, 1914.
- Schimmel, Annemarie. A Two-Colored Brocade. Chapel Hill: University of North Carolina Press, 1992.
- Schimmel, Annemarie. As Through a Veil: Mystical Poetry in Islam. New York: Columbia University Press, 1980.

Bibliography

- Schimmel, Annemarie. The Triumphal Sun. Albany, NY: SUNY Press, 1993.
- Sells, Michael. Early Islamic Mysticism. New York: Paulist Press, 1996.
- Sells, Michael. Stations of Desire. Jerusalem: Ibis, 2000.
- Steingass, Francis J. A Comprehensive Persian-English Dictionary. London: Routledge, 1988.
- Stetkevych, Jaroslav. The Zephyrs of Najd: The Poetics of Nostalgia in the Classical Arabic Nasīb. Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1993.
- Stetkevych, Jaroslav. "Toward an Arabic Elegiac Lexicon: The Seven Words of the Nasīb". In Reorientations / Arabic and Persian Poetry, edited by S. Stetkevych, pp. 58–129. Bloomington: Indiana University Press, 1993.
- Stetkevych, Jaroslav. Muḥammad and the Golden Bough: Reconstructing Arabian Myth. Bloomington: Indiana University Press, 1996.
- Takeshita, Masataka. Ibn 'Arabī's Theory of the Perfect Man and Its Place in the History of Islamic Thought. Tokyo: Institute for the Studies of Languages and Cultures of Asia and Africa, 1987.
- Thackston, Wheeler (trans.). The Mystical and Visionary Treatises of Shihabuddīn Yahya Suhrawardī. London: Octagon, 1982.
- Twinch, Cecilia, and Pablo Beneito. Contemplation of the Holy Mysteries. Oxford: Anqa Publishing, 2001. Translation of al-Mashāhid al-qudsiyya.
- Vâlsan, Michel. "Le Livre de l'extinction dans la contemplation (Kitābu-l-fanā' i fi-l-mushāhada)". Études Traditionnelles 363 (1961), 26–44; 364 (1961), 89–98; 365 (1961), 144–50.
- Vâlsan, Michel. La Parure des abdāl. Paris: Les Editions de l'Oeuvre, 1992. Translation of Ḥilyat al-abdāl.
- Wright, William. A Grammar of the Arabic Language, 2 vols. 3rd edn. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1967.
- Yahia, Osman. Histoire et classification de l'oeuvre d'Ibn 'Arabī: Étude critique. Damascus: Institut Français de Damas, 1964.
- Yūsuf 'Alī, 'Abdullāh. The Meaning of the Glorious Qur'an, Vol. 2. Cairo: Dār al-Kitāb al-Masrī, 1938.

INDEX OF QUR'ANIC CITATIONS

2:30	90	28:31	26n
2:60	27n, 72	30:15	50
2:74	72	31:16	72
2:275	25n	36:80	81
3:40	38n	37:62	81
4:51	45n	39:67	43n, 48n
5:31	98	43:70	50
7:57–58	10	44:44	81
7:60	27n	50:16	58
7:160	72	53:7	29n
7:176	70	53:14	16
8:17	55	54:10	30n
12:31	32n	55:17	40n
13:13	22n, 39	55:54	36n
14:24–25	81	55:76	29n, 32n
14:27	38n	56:29	37
16:40	19	56:30	37
17:60	81	56:33	35
18:63	72	56:34	35
20:54	48n	69:17	43n
20:128	48n	79:10–11	33n
22:18	38n	82:7–8	27n
23:108	50	85:13	47n
24:34	57	89:9	72
24:35	48n, 57, 81	95:1–5	28n
24:40	48n	95:4	27n
27:10	26n	95:4–5	5
28:10	50n	112:1–2	72

INDEX OF NAMES AND TERMS

- Aaron 33, 34n, 73n, 79
 Abel 98
 Abraham 13, 33, 34n, 57, 58, 79, 101
 Abū al-‘Abbās al-‘Uryabī/‘Uryanī 11, 11n
 Abū al-Fawāris Ṣakhr ibn Sinān 5, 25, 26, 50n, 51, 63, 69–76; see also Khālīd
 Abū Madyan 12
 Abū Ya‘qūb Yūsuf 9
 Abū Yazīd al-Bisṭāmī 16, 17, 55
 Adam 33, 35n, 78, 79, 81, 87, 89, 90, 91, 108 alchemy 23n, 37n, 83, 92, 98, 109
 ‘Alī ibn Abī Ṭālib 94
 ‘amā’ see Cloud
 ‘Anqā’ 7, 30, 35, 41, 44, 46–7, 67, 71n, 78, 91–7, 104, 106–8 ‘Anqā’ mughrib 41n, 93, 93n al-Anwār 17, 17n, 32n, 79n al-‘aql al-awwal see Intellect
 Aristotle 94n
 ‘Aṭṭār, Farīduddīn 16, 92, 93
a’yān thābita (fixed entities) 41n, 103
 Avicenna 16
 ‘aynī’ 60

 Bāqil 24, 24n
barzakh (isthmus, barrier) 29n, 50n, 59, 64–8, 73, 75–8, 82, 102
 Blake, William 3
 Body, Universal (jism kullī) 18, 51n, 88, 99–102, 105
 Breath (of the All-Merciful) 41n, 90, 106–8
 Burāq 12, 29, 29n, 32, 79

 Cain 98

 Cloud (al-‘amā’) 30, 30n, 33n, 37, 90, 107
 Corbin, Henry 76, 101
 Crow (ghurāb) 7, 8, 30, 35, 47–51, 64, 80, 92–3, 98–102, 104–5

Dīrwān 18, 96
 Dove see Ringdove
al-Durra al-fākhira 11n
 Dust (habā’) 33, 51n, 91, 94–5, 100–1, 104–5

 Eagle (‘uqāb) 30, 35, 38, 39, 40, 42–6, 47, 49, 84, 88–91, 93, 98, 104
 Eliade, Mircea 82
 Eve 87

fanā’ (annihilation) 54, 59, 68, 77, 79 al-Fanā’ fī al-mushāhada 79n
 Fātiḥa 26n, 87
 First Intellect see Intellect
 Footstool (kursī) 33n, 44n, 62n
Fuṣūṣ al-ḥikam 1, 13, 14, 57, 58, 64, 64n, 65, 67, 67n, 68, 73, 73n, 76n, 82n, 87n, 96, 100n, 108 al-Futūḥāt al-Makkiyya 1, 11, 13, 14, 18, 20, 54, 55, 57n, 68, 69, 74, 81, 83, 95, 100, 101, 103, 104, 105

 Gabriel 69, 81

ḥaqīqat al-ḥaqā’iq see Reality of Realities al-Ḥallāj 23n, 55, 56, 109
habā’ see Dust
hayūlā see Prime Matter

Index of Names and Terms

- Ḥilyat al-abdāl* 74
 Ḥūd 64n, 72
 Hyle see Prime Matter
- Ibn Mardaniṣh 9
 Ibn Sawdakīn 72, 112
 Idrīs 30n, 33, 34n, 79
 Ikhwān al-Ṣafā' 95, 99n
Inshā' al-dawā'ir 8, 16n
 Intellect (First) (al-'aql al-awwal) 7, 18, 45n, 49n, 85–6, 88, 90–1, 100, 104–6, 108
Isfār 17, 79n
ishhād 59–60
Isrā' (Night Journey of the Prophet Muḥammad) 18, 18n
K. al-Isrā' 17
ittiḥād (unification) 53–8, 77n
- Jābir ibn Ḥayyān 94
 al-Jāmi 65
 Jānn ibn Jānn 26, 26n, 71
 Jesus 9n, 10, 33, 34n, 64, 79, 85, 93 al-Jilī 32n
 Job 6, 78
 Joseph 33, 34n, 79
 Junayd 16
 Jung, Carl 98
- Kaykā'ūs 14
kawn (creation; cosmos) 59, 59n
 Khālīd ibn Sinān 63–76, 93; see also Abū al-Fawāris Ṣakhr ibn Sinā Khidr 10n, 72
Kursī see Footstool
- Labīd 70
al-lawḥ al-mahfūz see Tablet likeness (mithl, mithliyya) 34, 35, 35n, 37n, 82
 Lote Tree of the Limit (sidrat al-muntahā) 12, 16, 38, 80, 81
 Luqmān 72
- al-Mahdawī, 'Abd al-'Azīz 12
mādda see matter
Mashāhid al-asrār 16n, 72 matter (mādda) 79, 87, 94–5, 101
Marwāqī' al-nujūm 16n
 Mercurius 89, 98
mi'rāj 12, 16, 17, 34n, 68, 69
mithl see likeness
 Moses 9n, 10, 26n, 27n, 33, 34n, 35, 35n, 36n, 50, 50n, 54n, 71n, 72, 79, 81
 Mount Qāf 81n, 92
 Mount Sinai 28, 28n, 78, 81n
Muḥādarāt al-abrār 66
 Muḥammad 9n, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 16, 18n, 23n, 29n, 32n, 33n, 34n, 37n, 48n, 50n, 54n, 57, 64, 66, 67, 68, 69, 75, 76n, 78–81, 85n, 87n, 89, 90, 94n, 99, 108
- al-nafs al-kullī* see Soul
 Nature 51n, 54n, 62, 72, 75n, 83, 99, 104–6 al-Niffarī, 'Abd al-Jabbār 78
 Night Journey (see Isrā')
 Nizām 13
 Noah 31n
- Pen (qalam) 7, 32, 34n, 38n, 77n, 82, 84, 87, 88, 90, 90n, 103, 104
 Perfect Human Being (insān kāmil) 8, 18, 26n, 28n, 31n, 34n, 35n, 36n, 59, 60n, 64, 75n, 76, 80, 82, 83, 96, 101, 107–8
 Phoenix see 'Anqā'
 Plato 94n, 107
 Prime Matter (hayūlā) 18, 33, 36, 36n, 78, 88, 94–6, 98, 107; see also Matter
- al-Qāri' al-Baghdādī 9
 al-Qāshānī 67
 Quss ibn Sā'ida 24, 24n
Qutb (spiritual Pole) 82

Index of Names and Terms

- raqīqa/raqā'iq* (subtle thread/s) 40,
42, 85, 85n, 86n, 88
Raven see Crow
Reality of Realities (ḥaqīqat al-ḥaqā'iq) 8, 95n, 107
Ringdove (al-muṭawwāqa al-warqā)
30, 35, 38–42, 44, 45n, 47, 83–8,
93, 104
Rūḥ al-quds 11n
Rūmī, Jalāluddīn 6, 98
Rūzbihān Baqlī 92

Sabā 33, 37n
Ṣadr al-Dīn Qūnawī 6, 64, 73, 74n
Sahl al-Tustarī 94
Ṣakhr ibn Sinān see Abū al-Fawāris
Ṣāliḥ 64n, 76n
ṣamad/ṣamadiyya 72–4
al-Sarrāj 16, 17
Second Matter 99; see also Matter
Shajarat al-kawn 81
Shu'ayb 64n, 82n
Simurgh 92
Soul, Universal (al-naḥs al-kullī) 7, 18, 85–6, 88, 100, 104–6

Stetkevych, Jaroslav 19n, 71
Suhrawardī 16, 93

Tablet (lawḥ) 7, 34n, 36, 77n, 82, 84, 86–7, 90, 103–4
al-Tadbīrat al-ilāhiyya 16n
Tarjumān al-ashwāq 13, 18, 20,
84–5, 99
Thamūd 72
Throne (al-'arsh) 28n, 31, 32, 33,
35, 36, 43n, 44, 49n, 51n, 106
Tree 7, 8, 30, 31n, 34, 35–8, 80–3, 97, 107–8
Ṭūbā 81, 83

Universal Body see Body
Universal Soul see Soul
'Uqlat al-mustawfiz 16n, 51n, 100

wahdat al-wujūd (Unity of Being) 3, 60

Zaqqūm 81

al-Ittiḥād al-kawnī
fī ḥadrat al-ishḥād al-‘aynī bi-maḥḍūr al-shajara al-insāniyya wa-l-ṭuyūr al-arba‘a al-ruḥāniyya

Muḥyī al-dīn Muḥammad
b. ‘Alī b. al-‘Arabī

Arabic text by Denis Gril

رسالة الإتحاد الكوني

فى حضرة الإشهاد العينى

بمحضر الشجرة الإنسانية والطيور الأربعة الروحانية¹

(¹) رموز التحقيق: - 1 شهيد : شهيد على 2813 (ق 26 - 33 ب) وهى النسخة الأصلية. - 2 ولي : ولي الدين 51 (ق 48 - 51). - 3 با يزيد : با يزيد 3750 (ق 277 - 286). - 4 لاله لي : لاله لي 3741 (ق 113 - 122 ب). - 5 جار : جار الله 2111 (ق 63 - 69 ب). - 6 مراد : مراد بخاري 207 (ق 71 - 95). - 7 فاتح : فاتح 5322 (ق 151 - 153 ب). - حاجي : حاجي محمود 2510 (ق 1 ب - 16 ب)، حالت : حالت افندى 245 (ق 353 ب - 366)، أسد : اسد افندى 1777 (ق 158 - 172 ب). انظر وصف النسخ فى آخر المقدمة باللغة الإنكليزية.

شهيد: رسالة الاتحاد. كتبه لنفسه أيوب بن بدر (...) (يليه سماع لغير هذا الكتاب ثم:) وقرأت هذه الأوراق رسالة الأحدية (ولعله الاتحاد لأن الأحدية تلى هذه الرسالة فى المجموعة) على ناظمها متع الله الإسلام بطول حياته محيي الدين ابي عبد الله محمد بن على بن أحمد بن العربي الحاتمي الطائي وأنا أيوب بن بدر بن منصورالمقرى فسمعها القاضي الفاضل معز الدين أبي اسحاق إبراهيم ولد القاضي عز الدين عبد الله القرشيين نفعه الله و نفع به وهياه للعلم وأعانه على نقله وحفظه وذلك فى سنة إحدى وعشرين وستمائة بدار المسمع ... (غير واضح بعد ذلك)

[يخط كبير أندلسى وهو خط المؤلف نفسه:] صح ما ذكره أعلاه وكتب المنشئ فى تاريخه.

ولى: + كتب بها محمد بن على بن محمد أبو عبد الله بن العربي الطائي الحاتمي الأندلسى إلى أبي الفوارس صخر بن سنان مالك أزمة الجود والبيان وفقهما الله تعالى. رواية الصوفي المسعود أبي محمد عبد الله بدر بن عبد الله الحبشى عتيق أبي الغنائم بن أبي الفتوح الحرائى عنه وفقه الله وإياكم. علقها المغترف من بحر جود ربه أحمد بن محمد بن مثبت من خط مرسلها رحمه الله تعالى.

جار: + كتب بها مؤلفها سيدي الشيخ العلامة محيي الدين بن عربي الحاتمي الطائي إلى أبي الفوارس محمد بن سنان وفقه ورحمه.

بسم الله الرحمن الرحيم

وصلى الله على سيدنا محمد وآله وصحبه وسلم²

هذا كتاب كريم وخطاب جسيم كتبتُ به

شعر: [بسيط]

من انحراقي إلى اعتدالي	من انتقاصي إلى كمالي
ومن سنائي إلى جلالي	ومن سنائي ³ إلى جمالي
فمن صدودي إلى وصالي	ومن شتاتي إلى اجتماعي
فمن حجاري إلى اللآلي	ومن خسيسي إلى نفيسي
فمن نهار ⁴ إلى الليالي	ومن شروقي إلى غروبي
فمن هُدائي إلى ضلالي	ومن ضيائي إلى ظلامي
فمن زجاج إلى العوالي	ومن حضيضي إلى استوائي
فمن محاقبي إلى هلاقي	ومن دخولي إلى خروجي
فمن جَوادي إلى غزالي	ومن طلابي إلى نفوري ⁵

(2) شهيد: + قال شيخنا وسيدنا وإمامنا الشيخ الإمام المحدث نسيج دهره وفريد عصره شيخ الطريق وإمام التحقيق محيي الدين أبي عبد الله محمد بن علي بن محمد بن العربي الحاتمي الطائفي نفعه الله ونفع به ولي - حاجي: + يقول عبد الله الفقير إلى الله محمد بن علي بن محمد بن العربي الطائفي الحاتمي ثم الأندلسي عفا الله عنه وختم بالحسن.

جار - حالت: + قال الشيخ الإمام العالم الأوحد الصدر الكبير المؤيد المنصور النور المخصوص برحمة من ربه أبو عبد الله محمد بن علي بن محمد العربي الطائفي الحاتمي الأندلسي رضى الله تعالى عنه ونفعنا ببركاته وعلومه

(3) ولي - با يزيد : سنائي.

(4) ولي - با يزيد - أسد: نهاري.

(5) أسد: ومن مضيقني إلى نفودي.

ومن غصوني إلى ظلالِي	ومن نسيمي إلى غُصوني
ومن نعيمِي إلى مُحالي	ومن ظلالِي إلي نعيمِي
ومن مثالي إلى مُحالي	ومن مُحالي إلى مثالي
ومن صحيحِي إلى اعتلالِي	ومن مُحالي إلى صحيحِي
فما أُعادي وما أُوالي	فما أنا ^٦ في الوجود غير
من أجل سَهْم ^٧ ماضِي النِّصَالِ	وما أنا دى على فؤادي
إلى فؤادي بلا نِبَالِ	فانْ رامِي النِّصَالِ جَفْنِي
وما أُغالي فما أُبالي	فما أحامِي ^٨ على مقامي
فعين فصلِي هو اتصالي	فإنني ما عشقتُ غيرِي
فلستُ عن هاجري بسالي	فلا تَلْمَنِي على هواي
وإنني لا أزال في هذا الكتاب أخاطبني عنى وأرجع فيها إلى مني:
[مضارع]

ومن سُنَّتِي إلى فَرَضِي	فمن سَمَائِي إلى أَرْضِي
ومن طَوْلِي إلى عَرَضِي	ومن إِبْرَامِي إلى نَقْضِي
[هزج]

ومن عَقْلِي إلى حَسِي	فمن حَسِي إلى عَقْلِي
بلا شك ولا لبسٍ	بعلمين غريبين

(٦) با يزيد: أتى.

(٧) ولي - با يزيد - أسد : رام.

(٨) أسد: ولا أداني.

ومن نفسي إلى رُوحِي	ومن نفسي إلى رُوحِي
بتحليل وتركيب	بتحليل وتركيب
ومن حدُسي إلى علمي	ومن حدُسي إلى علمي
فنور العلم ممدودٌ	فنور العلم ممدودٌ
ومن قدُسي إلى رُجُسي ⁹	ومن قدُسي إلى رُجُسي ⁹
فقدُسي كان في وقُتي	فقدُسي كان في وقُتي
ومن إنُسي إلى جنِّي	ومن إنُسي إلى جنِّي
فجنِّي يبتغي هَمِّي	فجنِّي يبتغي هَمِّي
ومن جسَمي إلى سعتي	ومن جسَمي إلى سعتي
لنكر قام في نفسي	لنكر قام في نفسي
ومن أَيْسي إلى لَيْسي	ومن أَيْسي إلى لَيْسي
بسعد فيه تَأْلِيفي ¹¹	بسعد فيه تَأْلِيفي ¹¹
ومن جنسي إلى ضِدي	ومن جنسي إلى ضِدي
فلولا بَاقِلٌ ما لاح	فلولا بَاقِلٌ ما لاح
ومن شمسي إلى بدري	ومن شمسي إلى بدري
لإظهارِي الخفايا في	لإظهارِي الخفايا في
بطون نواشي دُبُس ¹²	بطون نواشي دُبُس ¹²

(9) أُسَد: طبعِي.

(10) با يزِيد - أُسَد: + ومن سعتي إلى ضيقي ومن ضيقي إلى الكرسي.

(11) ولي - جار: تَأْلِيف.

(12) جار: دمس. أُسَد: اللبس.

ومن عُربي إلى عُربي	ومن فُرسِي إلى عُربي
ورمز حقائق نُكْس ¹⁴	لشرح قوام ¹³ أسرار
ومن فرعي إلى أُسي	ومن أُسي إلى فرعي
بحسّ أو بلا حسّ	لعيش دُسّ في موت
لقول الحاسد النُكْس	فلا تهتمّ يا نفسي
يا ريحانة النفس ¹⁵	وقول الجاهل المغرور
في أرواحنا الجرّس ¹⁶	فكم من جاهل قد قال
بروح النفط والجسّ ¹⁷	لدى تنزيل تنزيلي
تخطّه من المسّ	كانس فيه شيطان
من التحقيق في لبسٍ	فإن الناس مازالوا
بين الجهرّ والهَمْسِ	فسرّ الله ممدود ¹⁸

وسميتُ هذه الرسالة بالإتحاد¹⁹ الكوني في حضرة الإِشهاد العيني بمحضر الشجرة الإنسانية والطيور الأربعة الروحانية، خاطبت بها أبا الفوارس²⁰ صخر بن سنان مالك أزمة الجود والبيان وهذه أول الرسالة وبالله أستعين فهو المؤيّد سبحانه والمعين.

(13) ولي [في الهامش]: عيون.

(14) أسد: لشرح حقائق المعنى ومن دقائق تكسي.

(15) ولي - جار - حاجي: الانس. يا يزيد - أسد: القدس.

(16) في بقية النسخ: الخرس.

(17) أسد: في القدس.

(18) في بقية النسخ: موجود.

(19) جار - حالت: الإيجاد.

(20) لاله لي: + بالحقائق التي كالعرائس.

بسم الله الرحمن الرحيم وصلى الله على الرؤف الرحيم

إلى الثالث والثاني ورب المثلث والمثاني والمشار إليه في المثاني القاهر الفاني
والسائر الثاني، الناكس لظله والناكس لذه، الجواد الذي لا يُقبل جوده والموجود
التام الذي جهل وجوده، المنبعث من الثنتين والمبعوث بالقوتين، معتمد الأركان
ومعتمد الإمكان ومستند المكان رقيقة المان وحقيقة الزمان ومنتهى الأمان
ومستوى الرحمن ودقيقة الآن وسلطان الإنس والجان جان بن جان الإنسان في
الإنسان الواهب المحسان، أبي الفوارس صخر بن سنان مالك أزمة الجود
والبيان، أستوهب الله له من المواهب المقدسة أسهلها وأحلاها ومن المراتب
المؤسّسة أكملها وأعلاها، سلام طيب²¹ مبارك يخص مقامكم الرفيع أتمّه وأزكاه.
ورحمت الله تعالى وبركاته.

أما بعد فاني أحمد الله إلى الذي سوانى وعدلني وفى صورة أحسن تقويم ركبني
ثم عرفني بي وأظهرني لي فعشقتني فلا أحب سواى وهيّمت²² فى بين بُعدى وقُربى
فما أخطب إلا إياي.

[بسيط]

فلو أراني إذا أتاني	سراً وجهراً أنا بذاتي
وقلت أنعم فقلت طوعاً	وكان مني لي التفاتي
فنيّت عنى بعين إنّي	وعن عداتي وعن ثقاتي
وعن وعيدي وعن مزيدي	وعن نعيمى وعن عدّاتي
وعن شهيدى وعن شهودى	وكنّت لي بي نغم المواتي
فيا أنا رُدّني بعيني	إليّ حتى أرى ثباتي
فردّني بي إليّ مني	فلم تقم بي سوى صفاتي

(21) ولي - با يزيد: + أثير.

(22) لا له لي - فاتح: همت.

وصال عودي على صفاتي	وصال ²³ كفي على عصاي
عشرا وثنتين معلّمت	فسال نهر البروج منها
مني ثباتاً على ثباتي	فقلت لي يا أنا وزدني
على وجودي من النبات	هذي علوم الحياة لاحت
فدام شوقي إلى مماتي	فأين سرّي اللطيف مني
إليّ كيما تبدو سماتي	فصرت أشكو الغرام مني
فجاد جمعي على شتاتي	إلى جفوني من عين كوني
من أجل ذاتي مدى حياتي	وصلت ذاتي وجداً بذاتي
وطول هجري وسيّاتي	ولم أعرج على جفائي
أنا فتاي أنا فتاتي	أنا حبيبي أنا محبي

ثم أما بعد فالكتاب إليّ من المدينة²⁴ الممكنة بالاستوا والمعينة في المستوى المحصنة بالقوى، طور سنين والبلد الأمين المسوى من الماء والطين والجامع بين أحسن تقويم وأسفل سافلين، معرفاً إياي بما طرأ بيني وبينني وما شاهده كوني من كوني، وذلك أنه لما رفعت لنا أعلام المشاهدة ووضعت عنا ألام المجاهدة وكان²⁵ التجاري بحكم الموافقة والمساعدة، امتطوت براق الهمة وخرجت عن كور هذه الغمة ووقعت في بحر الهيولى فعاينت الآخرة والأولى،²⁶ فقلت: تباً لمنكري الجنان والدار الحيوان وملاعبة الولدان ومعانقة الحور الحسان ولصوق الأبدان بالأبدان، من عاين الحافظ أثبت اللافظ، فإن خط الاعتدال غير ميّال، وعرفت هناك أن منكري حشر الأجساد ما برحوا من الميّلين وما انفكّوا من ربقة الأربعة والإثنين.

(23) ولي - با يزيد - جار الله - فاتح: فصال.

(24) جار - فاتح - حالت: + القصوى.

(25) في بقية النسخ: صار.

(26) جار - فاتح - حالت: فوقعت في بحر الهلاك فعاينت من أجاب وأبا.

ثم صَحْتُ: وَاحْرَبَاهُ، وَاحْرَقْ قَلْبَاهُ مِنَ الْكِيَانِ هَرَبْتُ وَهَا أَنَا فِيهِ فَأَيْنَ مَا طَلَبْتُ؟
 فسمعت الخطاب مني لادخل في ولا خارج²⁷ عني، وهو يخبرني أَنِي عَلَى الْمَدْرَجَةِ
 فكيف تطلب الدرجة؟ أَيْنَ أَنْتَ وَالاستواءات أَيْنَ أَنْتَ وَالانكفاءات، أَيْنَ أَنْتَ
 والرفارف العُلَيَّيْ أَيْنَ أَنْتَ مِنَ الْأَفَقِ الْأَعْلَى، أَيْنَ أَنْتَ وَحُجُبُ الْبَهَا أَيْنَ أَنْتَ وَالسُّتُرُ
 الْأَزْهَى، أَيْنَ أَنْتَ وَالْعَمَا أَيْنَ أَنْتَ وَحِجَابُ الْعِزَّةِ الْأَحْمَى، أَيْنَ أَنْتَ وَالْهَوِيَّاتِ الْمَطْلُوقَةِ
 أَيْنَ أَنْتَ وَالْإِنِّيَّاتِ²⁸ الْمُحَقَّقَةِ، أَيْنَ أَنْتَ وَحُضْرَةُ الْإِشَارَاتِ أَيْنَ أَنْتَ وَالْمَحَادَثَاتِ²⁹
 أَيْنَ أَنْتَ وَالْمَسَامِرَاتِ، أَيْنَ أَنْتَ وَالشَّجَرَةُ الْعُلْيَا أَيْنَ أَنْتَ وَالْفُرُوعُ الدُّنْيَا، أَيْنَ أَنْتَ
 وَالْغُرْبِيَّةِ الْعِنَقَا أَيْنَ أَنْتَ وَالْمَطْوِقَةُ الْوَرَقَا، أَيْنَ أَنْتَ وَالْغُرَابُ الْحَالِكَا أَيْنَ أَنْتَ
 وَالْعَقَابُ الْمَالِكَا؟ يَا مَحْجُوبُ كَيْفَ تَسْأَلُ بِالْأَيْنِ عَنِ الْعَيْنِ وَأَنْتَ فِي مَقَامٍ لَا يَحْتَمِلُ الْمَيْنُ!

فقلت: أَيُّهَا الزَّاجِرُ لَقَدْ أَكَلَمْتُ، أَمَا عَلِمْتَ أَنَّكَ فِي مَقَامِكَ تَكَلَّمْتُ؟ أَنْتَ فِي حُضْرَةِ
 الْعَيْنِ، مَعْرَى عَنِ الْآنِ وَالْأَيْنِ وَأَنَا فِي هَذِهِ اللَّجَّةِ الْعَمْيَا وَالْدُلْجَةِ³⁰ السُّودَاءِ وَالْدَاهِيَةِ
 الدَّهْيَا، مَعْدَنُ الْمَيْنِ وَالزَّيْبِ وَمَحَلُّ النُّقْصِ وَالْعَيْبِ، وَهَلْ يَصِيحُ "وَاحْرَبَاهُ!" إِلَّا أُسِيرَ
 الْكَمِّ وَحَبِيسُ الْحَكْمِ؟ فَانْ أَنْتَ أَخْرَجْتَنِي مِنْ بَيْنِ تَلَاظِمِ هَذِهِ الْأَمْوَاجِ وَأَرْحَتَنِي مِنْ
 مَعَانَاةِ هَذَا اللَّيْلِ الْأَلْيَلِيِّ الدَّاجِ، فَانِي لَا أَفُوهُ بِظَرْفٍ³¹ وَلَا أُعْرَجُ عَلَى حَرْفٍ.

فجذبني إِلَيْهِ جَذْبَةً عَزِيزٍ مُقْتَدِرٍ وَقَالَ: إِنَّكَ مَغْلُوبٌ فَانْتَصِرْ³². فقلت: أَنْتَصِرْ بِيَدِكَ
 الْيُمْنَى مِنْ كَلْتِي يَدِيكَ يُمْنَى. فَإِنَّهُ الْقَوَى الْأَمِينُ وَالْوَفَى الصَّادِقُ الَّذِي لَا يَمِينُ. فَقَالَ
 كَيْفَ يَهْجُونِي مِنْ يَرْجُونِي؟ قُلْتُ: كَمَا يَمْدُحُكَ مِنْ يَمْنُوكُ. فَلَمَّا جَذَبْنِي إِلَيْهِ رَأَيْتَنِي
 فِي غَيْرِ الصُّورَةِ الَّتِي فِيهَا كُنْتُ وَقَدْ ثَبْتُ فِيهَا وَتَمَكَّنْتُ فَقُلْتُ: يَا أَنَا! فَقَالَ: أَنَا

(27) ولي: داخلا ... خارجاً ...

(28) في الأصل: إنيات.

(29) فاتح: المحاورات.

(30) جار - فاتح: اللجة.

(31) في بقية النسخ: طرف، ويبدو أصح.

(32) انظر سورة القمر ٥٤: ٤٢، ١٠.

مرحباً! فقلت: لا مرحباً ولا أهلاً ولاسعة ولا سهلاً! فقال: ياقرة العين ما رابك ويا أسيرة الكون ما أصابك؟ فقلت: كم ذا تحجبني عني فاكشفني لي حتى أعرفني، هذا لوحى ممدود ولوائى معقود وعلمى محدود ومقامى محمود وسرى مشهود ولبي موجود ومطلوبى مفقود وأنا في عالمي معبود³³ أدعى كلمة الوجود فلو فنيته هذه الأعيان وتلاشت هذه الأكوان وغبت عن الاستواء الرحماني والاسم الرباني، أمكنني أن أسرَّ باللمحة³⁴ ولا أتضرر بالمنحة.

قال: وقد فنيته الأقلام وزهبت الأعلام وراحت الأسماء واحتجب الاستواء ورفعت الألواح وفقدت³⁵ الأبواب والأرواح ولكن لا بد لك من ظلمة الجنة الدهما ودائرة الما والقلم الأعلى والقدم الأولى والنون³⁶ المكنون واليمين المصون.

فعندما سمعت أن أثراً من الكيان أمامي، خفت أن يقطعني عن إمامي فنهضت من تلك الظلمة المذلَّمة وتركت بها براق الهمة ورفعت على أسرة اللطائف ومُتَكَات الرفارف، إلى أن وصلنا مقام الإبتهاج أتمايل فيه تمايل السراج، فقلت: ما لي وحالة السماع؟ فقيل: حرَّك حسن الإيقاع، فقلت: ما أحسستُ به، فقيل لي: انتبِه فإنك بك ما أنت به! فقلت: الحقيقة في غنى عن إيقاع الغنا ومطلبها الفنا في الفنا، فحجب عن عيني عينها وحال بيني وبينها. ثم قال لي: أين أنت من العالم ومني؟ قلت: بين التعني والتمني، مطلبى في العما وأنا في الما وروحي في السما وعرشي في الهبا وأهلي في سبا وملكي في الاستواء وحكمي في قدمي السواء وفُلكي في الفلك وحجابي في الملك وظلمتي³⁷ في الهيولى ومحنتي في الأولى وبدأتي³⁸ في الحافرة وغايتي في الآخرة وخلتي في الخليل إبراهيم ومناجاتي في موسى الكليم

(33) جار - فاتح - حالت: مقصود.

(34) لا له لي: المحنة.

(35) با يزيد: قعدت.

(36) جار - فاتح - حالت: النور.

(37) ولي: تثليثي.

(38) ولي: بدايتي.

وخلافتي³⁹ في هرون الحكيم ورفعتي في إدريس⁴⁰ وصورتني في يوسف⁴¹ ومعارفي مع إختلافها وأصنافها في عيسى وجسدي⁴² في آدم أبي البشر وقلبي في ابراهيم السيد الأكبر⁴³ وهيكل في العنصر⁴⁴ المربع⁴⁵.

قال: هذا حظك من كوني وأين حظك من عيني؟ فقلت: أيها المشير⁴⁶ ، المناسبة تكون بالنقيض والنظير والنظير الملازم يكون بالذاتي واللازم. فقال المشير: أريد مناسبة النظير. فقلت: في رسمي رسمك وفي نعتي نعتك والاجمال أحسن من التفصيل في هذا القبيل من أجل أبناء السبيل. فقال: صدقت فأين مناسبة النقيض بحكم الحقيقة لا بحكم التعريض؟ فقلت: في عدمي وجودك وفي بُحلي جودك وفي كلامك خروسي وفي قولك جروسي وفي استحالتني قَدَمك وفي بدايتي قَدَمك. قال: علمت أنك علمت ونعم ما به حكمت.

ثم كشف لى عن شجرة البستان الكلية الموصوفة بالمثلية فنظرت إلى شجرة "أصلها ثابت وفرعها في السماء"⁴⁷ وثمرها بيد إله الإستواء بين أغصانها وأوراقها الغراب والغريبة العنقا وفي ذرى أفنانها العقاب والمطوقة الورقا فسلمت على الشجرة فحيّت بأحسن من ذلك، قالت اسمع أيها السالك المالك!

(39) جار - فاتح - حالت: + الانسانية.

(40) جار - فاتح - حالت: وقلبي في إدريس الرفيع.

(41) جار - فاتح - حالت: وحسني في يوسف - عليه السلام - وامضائي.

(42) جار - فاتح - حالت: وخلافتي الإلهية.

(43) جار- فاتح - حالت: - (قلبي... الأكبر).

(44) جار- فاتح - حالت: العالم.

(45) ولي، با يزيد، حاجي: وختي في زحل ومناجاتي في المشتري الأكمل وخلافتي الانسانية في المريخ الأحمر وقلبي في السيد الأبراهيمي الأكبر وحسني في زهرة الأحكام وإمضاي في عطارذ الافهام وخلافتي الالهية في البدر الأرفع وهيكل في العنصر المربع.

(46) جار، فاتح، حالت: المنشئ.

(47) سورة ابراهيم ١٤: ٢٤

خطبة الشجرة الكلية الموصوفة بالمثلية

أنا الشجرة الكلية الجامعة المثلية ذات الأصول الراسخة والفروع الشامخة،
غرستني يد الأحد في بستان الأبد، مستورة عن تصارييف الأمد فأنا ذات روح
وجسد وثمرتي مقطوف دون يد، حملت من ثمر العلوم و المعارف ما لا يستقل
بحمله العقول السليمة وأسرار اللطائف، ورقي "قُرْش مَرْفُوعَة" وفاكهتي غير
"مَقْطُوعَة وَلَا مَمْنُوعَة"⁴⁸ وسطي هو المقصود وفروعي في هبوط وصعود فالهابطة
للتدلي والإفادة والصاعدة للتداني والإستفادة، نشأني كالفلك في الاستدارة
وفروعي منازل الأرواح الطيارة وزهري كالكواكب السيارة تتكون المعادن عن سريانها في أبدانها.

أنا شجرة النور والكلام وقرّة عين موسى - عليه السلام -، لى من الجهات اليمين
الأنفس ومن الأمكنة الوادي المقدّس ولي من الزمان الآن ومن المساكن خطّ
الاستواء واعتدال الأركان فلي الدوام والبقاء والسعادة دون الشقاء، جَنَى جَنَّتِي
دَان وَفَنَّنِي يَمِيسُ كَأَنَّهُ نَشْوَانُ لَهُ لَطَافَةٌ وَحَنَانٌ عَلَى جَمِيعِ الْحَيَوَانِ، لم تنزل أفناني
للأرواح اللوحية كنادرا وورقي لها عن تأثيرات الشعاعات اليومية ساترا، ظلّ⁴⁹
ممدود لأهل العناية وجناحي منشور على أهل الولاية، تهبّ عليّ الأرواح باختلاف
تصارييفها فتخرج أغصاني عن ترتيب تأليفها فتسمع لذلك التداخل نغمات تُولِّه
العقول العلوية على سموّ أوجها وتجري بها على حسب ما رقم في درجها. فأنا
موسيقى الحكمة ومزيل الغموم بحسن إيقاع النغمة.

فأنا النور الأزهر ولي البساط الأخضر والوجه المستدير الأنضر، أيدت بالقوى
وشرفت بالمستوى وصرت كالهيليولى أقبل على جميع الصور في الآخرة والأولى، [لا

(48) انظر سورة الواقعة ٥٦: ٣٣، ٣٤

(49) لعله: ظلي.

أُضيق عن حمل شيء ولا أنفك عن نور وفي فنور علي⁵⁰ فيئي لمن استند إلى.
وأنا الظل الممدود والطلح المنضود والمعنى المقصود وكلمة الوجود وأشرف
محدث موجود وأنزه محدود، عزيزة السلطان مقدسة الكان، رفيع المنار ينبوع
الأنوار، جوامع الكلم معدن الأسرار والحكم.

[وافر]

لى الأرض الأريضة والسماء	وفي وسطي السواء والاستواء
لى المجد الموثل والبهاء	وسر العالمين والإعتلاء
إذا ما أمت الأفكار ذاتي	يُخبرها على البعد العماء
فما فى الكون من يدري وجودي	سوى من لا يقيدہ الثناء
له التصريف والاحكام فينا	هو المختار يفعل ما يشاء

خطبة المطوقة الورقا

ولما سمعت المطوقة كلام الشجرة الكلية وما جاءت به من المعارف الازلية⁵¹،
صدحت في روضة قدسها معربة عن نفسها. فقالت: لما أراد الله إيجاد كوني
وإشهاد عيني وان يطوقني بطوق البهاء ويسكني في سدرۃ المنتهى، نادى بعقابه:
الأمن من عقابه وهو بفناء بابه فأجابه مطيعاً وقال: ناديت سميعاً. [فقال له: إنك
فى أرض غربة وإن كنت منى فى محل القربة]⁵² فاني لست من جنسك فلا بد من
استيحاش نفسك وفيك قرة عين فأظهرها فى العين تأنس بمجاورتها وتتنفس
بمحاورتها فان الأنس بي محال وإنني شديد المحال.

فقال العقاب: كيف يظهر عني شيء ومقامي العجز وما في قوتي سلطان ولا عز؟

(50) [] : سقط من الأصل.

(51) ولي: الإلية.

(52) [] : الزيادة من ولي.

فقال له: الزم المناوحة فسيظهر عينها عند المكافحة وهذا هو الانتظام الثاني والالتحام بالمثاني. فناوح الأمر فظهرت وناداني الحق فبادرت وما عرف العقاب ما جرى به النهر لشغله بالمهر⁵³ وكوني منه في الظهر فعندما سمع إجابة النداء، قال: ما هذا الذي بدا؟ فصرف النظر إلي فعشقتني وهيّه ما به الحق من الجمال طوقني فشكا الغليل والأليل ونادى بالحريق والغريق بلبل بلبل بلباله وتعلّم⁵⁴ في إصلاح باله ويأبى الخرق⁵⁵ إلا اتساعا والعزاء الا امتناعا وما أبيع له لثمي وشفاؤه في مضاجعتي وضمي فرفع عنه حجاب الريب ونودي من خلف سرادقات الغيب: ما لك تنظر في أعطافها وتوقع نغمتها ولا تنظر في أوصافها وبديع حكمتها؟

فدعاني إليه فلبيت وأمرني بالقعود بين يديه فجثوت فقال لي: تهيامي في حسن مبانيك⁵⁶ أذهلني عن معرفة معانيك وقد ورد الأمر بأن تعرفيني بنفسك وتطلع⁵⁷ لي بارقة من سنيّ شمسك. فقلت: إن الله أوجدني منك عند التقابل وأظهرني من ظهرك على التمايل فأنا من قوتك صادرة وبصورتك ظاهرة، أودعني حقيقتين ووهبني رقيقتين، حقيقة أعرف بها وحقيقة أكون ما شئت بسببها ورقيقة مني إليك تنزلني إذا اشتبهت عليك وبها حضرت بين يديك ورقيقة مني إليه تنزلني إذا دعاني إليه. فلما سمع أن بيني وبينه رقيقة ممتدة وهو قد تحقق بحقائق المودة، نزل في تلك الرقيقة إليّ حتى امتزجت ذاتي بذاته وغابت صفاتي في صفاته وغبنا في لذة الالتحام وطبنا بحصول الانتظام ووقع النكاح المعنوي واجتمع المان في الرحم الآن وقبله الرحم لحكمة من حرم ومن رجم، وبلّ العاشق من دائه وارتاح شوقا إلى ندائه، فهو يتردد بين شوقين ويغرب في غربين ويشرق في شرقيين.

(53) جار، حالت: القهر.

(54) فاتح: تعلل.

(55) لا له لي: معانيك.

(56) با يزيد، فاتح، حالت: الحرق.

(57) جار، حالت: تطلعي.

فعندما استبَلَّ من أَلمه ونزح إلى معلّمه وجدت في ذاتي امتلاءً لم أكن أعرفه قبل ذلك فانسَدَّت⁵⁸ المجاري له والمسالك فحركت الرقيقة الإلهية فأجابني فقلت: يا إلهي ما هذا الذي أصابني؟ فقال: تنفسي بذكري لتظهر عنك كلمة أمري. فتنفست تنفُسَ المثلث فاذا بالعنقاء قد عمرت المعقل فسَلُّوا العنقا عن شأنها فستخبركم بما أودع الحق فيها من لطائفه ومنحها من عوارفه.

[رمل]

أنا ورقا المثنائي	مسكني روض المعاني
أنا عين في العيان	ليس لي غير المثنائي
فينادييني يا ثان	وأنا لست بثنائي
ينتهي إلى وجودي	كل شئ من الكيان
أنا أتلو من تسامت	ذاته عن العيان
لي حكم مستفاد	في الأفاصى والأدان
ليس لي مثل سوى من	شأنه يُشبهه شائي
فانتقد إن كنت تبغي	ما أتى به لساني
من رقائق ⁵⁹ تدلّت	بحقائق ⁶⁰ حسان
لقلوب قد تولّت	عن زخارف الجنان
طالبات من تعالى	عن تصاريف الزمان
فهو الفرد المعلى	ما له في الحكم ثان
وهو الذي اجتباني	وهو الذي اصطفاني
وأقامني عديلا	بين دن ⁶¹ ودنان

(58) فى الأصل: انشأت.

(59) جار، حالت: رقيقات ... حقيقات.

(60) جار، حالت: رقيقات ... حقيقات.

(61) لا له لي، حاجى، حالت: دن.

وَأَدَانِي كُلِّ دَانِي	فَتَقَاصِي كُلِّ قَاصٍ
وَأَعَانِي كُلِّ عَانٍ	وَأَوَالِي كُلِّ وَالٍ
فَبِرُوحِ السَّرِيَانِ	فَإِذَا هَوَيْتُ سَفَلًا
فَلتَحْلِيلِ الْمَبَانِي	وَإِذَا صَعَدْتُ عُلُوًّا
وَأَنَا أَخْلِي ⁶² الْمَغَانِي	فَأَنَا أُعْطِي الْمَغَانِي

خطبة العقاب المالك

فلما سمع العقاب ما ذكرته المطوقة وما قررته من العلوم المحققة قال: صدقت فيما ادعته وأظهرت لكم ما وسعته فقلت له: طرُفِي جوَّ بيانك وأعربُ لنا عن شأنك! فاهتزَّ سرير العقاب وصفَّق بجناحه وطاب وقال:

[كامل]

والحسن والنور البهيَّ الأسطعُ	أَنَا الْعِقَابُ لِيَّ الْمَقَامُ الْأَرْفَعُ
فِي الْعُدُوَّةِ الدُّنْيَا وَعِزِّي أَمْنَعُ	أَمْضِي الْأُمُورَ عَلَى مَرَاتِبِ حِكْمِهِ
وَأَنَا الَّذِي أَدْعُو الْوُجُودَ فَيَخْضَعُ	أَنَا فَيَضُهُ السَّامِيُّ وَنُورُ وُجُودِهِ
فَالْجُودُ جُودِي وَالْحَقَائِقُ تَوْضَعُ	وَأَنَا الَّذِي مَازِلْتُ قُبْضَةً مُوجِدِي
فَأَعْطِي مِنْ أَشَاءٍ وَأَمْنَعُ	نَحْوِي لِنَتَلَبَّ مَا لَهَا فِي شَرْبِهَا
أُنْأَى فَيَدْعُونِي الْبُهَاءُ الْأُرُوعُ	أُدْنُو فَيِيْهَرْنِي جَمَالُ وُجُودِهِ
لَكِنْ لَهَا قَلْبُ الْعُلَى يَتَصَدَّعُ	فَإِذَا دَنُوتُ فَحِكْمَةٌ مُقْبُولَةٌ
وَالنُّورُ مِنْ أَرْجَائِهَا يَتَشَعَّشَعُ	وَإِذَا بَعْدْتُ فَاِمْرَةٌ مُقْسُومَةٌ
فِي إِمْرَتِي وَسَعَادَتِي إِذْ أَنْزَعُ	فَأَنَا الْأَمِيرُ إِذَا بَعْدْتُ، شَقَوْتِي
عَايَنْتُ أَعْيَانُ الْأَهْلَةَ تَطْلُعُ	فَأَسْرُ أَوْقَاتِي وَأَسْعِدُهَا إِذَا

لم أزل في مرتبة من مراتب الكون وأنا معدوم العين إلى أن سبقت العناية فكانت

(62) لاله لي، جار، حالت: أجلي - حاجي: أخل.

بوجودي البداية وذلك أنه تجلّى بنفسه لنفسه فامتدّ وجودي بشهودي فنلت السورة بالصورة وكنت سريره بالسريرة فاستوى عليّ الاسم الجامع وحف بركابه وزيره المعطى والمانع وحاجباه الضارّ والنافع، فلما تحقق الاستواء وبان السوى ودعّنى الأسماء بالأعزّ الأسمى فعُمرّ الفنا وبرز البقاء والفنا، وتوالى القسط والفيض واستمر وثبت البسط والقبض واستقرّ وصح بالملك الملك وظهر بالمأكلة الملك ودار بالفلك الفلك. ثم نداني نداء التعليم بلسان التحكيم أن انظر في ذاتك بجامع لذاتك. قلما وقع مني النظر وميزت بين من يجب له التقدم ممن يجب له النظر وشرعت المذاهب وقسمت الأنوار بين المكاسب والمواهب، وقلت لمن عاينت من الأرواح المهيّمة: الزموا الحضرة المهيّمة! وقلت لمن عاينت من الأرواح المسخّرة: الزموا المقامات المسخّرة! وقلت لمن عاينت من الأرواح المدبّرة: الزموا الهياكل المدبّرة! فراح كل صنف يطلب منزله ليشهد مُنْزَلَه وكنت قد عاينت المطوقة الورقا وحملها الغريبة العنقا غير أنني لتقسيم المنازل ذهلت عن المنازل.

فأنا علم الكون والمخبوء في أودية الصون، افترى على جماعة من العقلاء وتعصب لأخذي عصابة من الفضلاء فنصبوا شرك أفكارهم لصيدي وأحالوا عليّ ما مددتهم به ليستخرجوا جدّي، ولما كانت الهمم قد توفرت لتحصيلي في شركهم الفكري وحصل فيها عقابٌ على صورتي من الموطن الوهمي، قالوا: هذا هو الحق المبين! ولو علموا أن الحق ما بان لهم ولا يبين، فإن المعرفة بي وبموجودي موقوفة على الوهب مصروفة على الكسب، فاستفزهم بشبهته الشيطان وتخيلوا أنهم قد حلّوا بالرُّبِّي ومنزلهم الغيطان واشتبه عليهم القدم بالقدم فحكموهم على بالقدم وإن وجودي لا عن عدم، فتركهم بشبهتهم لحماً على وضمّ وهكذا ينبغي لمن اهتضم الأمر الإلهي أن يهتضم وأنا برئ مما نسبوا وكافر بما نصبوا فان الله جل جلاله في القدم وأنا [إذ ذاك⁶³] محكوم⁶⁴ عليّ بالعدم، ثم أوجدني عن عدم لسابقة القدم

(63) جار - با يزيد - فاتح: + إذ ذاك.

(64) با يزيد: موصوف.

فظهر عني وأناار بعلمه كوني وناط بي الفقر والعجز وأماط عني الأرز والعزّ فأنا
الذليل الذى لايعز والقوى الذى لم يزلّ يعجز.

خطبة الغريبة العنقا

فلما فرغ العقاب من كلامه وأتى على بيان مقامه قامت العنقا تعرب عن وجودها
وتغرب بعزة حدها، قالت: أنا عنقا مغرب، مازال مسكني بالمغرب بالمقام الوسيط على سيف البحر المحيط، اكتتفني العز من الجهتين وما ظهر قط لوجودي عين.

[كامل]

فأنا التي ⁶⁵ لا عين لي موجود	فأنا التي ⁶⁶ لا حكم لي مفقود
عنقا مُغْرَبٌ قد تُعَوِّفَ ذكراها	عُرْفًا وباب وجودها مسدود
ما صَبَّرَ الرحمن ذكري باطلاً	لكن لمعنى سره المقصود
هو أننى وهَابَةٌ أسرارهم	عرفانها فصراطنا ممدود
والسالكون على مراتب نورهم	فأجلهم من نوره التجريد

بي تكون الحدود وعليّ توقف الوجود، يُسَمَّعَ بذكري ولا أرى وليس الحديث بي
حديثا يفتري، أنا الغيبة العنقا، اامي المطوقة الورقا ووالدي العقاب المالك وولدي
الغراب الحالك أنا عنصر النور والظلم ومحل الأمانة والتُّهم، لأقبل النور المطلق
فانه ضدي ولا أعرف العلم فإنني ما أعيد، لا أبدي، كل من أثنى علي فهو بعيد
الفهم مقهور تحت سلطان الوهم، ما لي عزة فأحتمي وهياكل الكون الأعلى
والأسفل إليّ تنتمي، أنا الحقيقة الإمعة لما عندى من السعة، نلبس لكل حالة
لبوسها إما نعيمها وإما بؤسها، لأعجز عن حمل صورة وليست لي فى الصور
المعلومة سورة لكن وهبت أن أهب العلوم ولست بعالمة وأمنح الأحكام ولست

(65) كذا فى الأصل وفى سائر النسخ: الذى.

(66) كذا فى الأصل وفى سائر النسخ: الذى.

بحاكمة، لا يظهر شئ لم أكن فيه ولا يحصله⁶⁷ طالب مدرك ولا يستوفيه، فهذا
القدر عَظُمْتُ في أعين المحققين ولي جولان في مجالس المطرقيين فهذا قد أبنتُ
عن حالي وأظهرت صِدْقِي من محالي.

خطبة الغراب الحالك

فقام الغراب وقال: أنا هيكل الأنوار وحامل محل⁶⁸ الأسرار ومحل الكيف والكم
وسبب الفرح والغم، أنا الرئيس المرؤس ولي الحس والمحسوس، بي ظهرت
الرسوم ومني قام عالم الجسوم، أنا أصل الأشكال وبمراتب صورتي تضرب
الأمثال، فأنا المصباح والرياح وأنا السلسلة على صفوان والجناح، أنا البحر الذي
يصطفق موجه وأنا فرد المعدود وزوجه، عرضي دار كرامته لأوليائه وعمقى دار
إهانته لأعدائه، وطولي مذ وجدت لم يزل يقابل بذاته الأبد والأزل، فأنا بوطيقي
الحكم وموسيقى النغم وجامع حقائق الكلم، إلى المنتهى وعلى عول أولو النهى وأنا
أسنى ما منح من الله⁶⁹، أنا الغاية وليست لي غاية، من أجلي أخذ من أخذ
وبسببي بُذ من بُذ، أنا المطوية باليمين وأنا في قبضة الحق المبين، دعاني الحق
إلى حضرته فأنتيت وناداني إلى معرفته فلبّيت، أنا صورة الفلك ومحل الملك، على
صح الاستوا وعنى كنى بالمستوى، أنا اللاحق الذي لا ألحق كما أن العقاب
السابق الذي لا يسبق هو الأول وأنا الآخر وله الباطن ولي الظاهر، قسم الوجود
بيني وبينه وأنا أظهرت عزّه وكونه، توقف عليّ حكمه وسرى فيه علمي وسرى في
علمه إذا دفعه واهبه فألى لنفيده وإذا أفدته شكرنى لأزيده.

قامت طائفة ممن تدعى العقل الرصين على زعمها وقضت على شبهتها بحكمها
فناطوا بي قبيح الهجاء وخلعوا عني حلة حسن الثناء فحار عليهم وبال ما كانوا

(67) في معظم النسخ: يحصره.

(68) ولي: محال.

(69) ولي، بالهامش: معناه العطايا.

يعملون وحق بهم ما كانوا به يستهزؤون كأنني عمقي يستصرخون فيجابون
 "أخسُّوا فيها ولا تُكَلِّمُون" ⁷⁰ إذا كان في عرضي أهل الثناء الحسن في حقي
 فأكهين هم وأزواجهم "في رَوْضَةٍ يُحْبَرُونَ" ⁷¹ وقد أثنى عليَّ الشرعُ فما أبالي وبين
 مرتبتي السمعُ فما أعالِي.

[رمل]

حكمةٌ لمن يراني ⁷²	إنني من حيث ربي
خُلِقَ بلا بَنانٍ	فأنا السر المسوَّى
خالقي لِمَا بناني	رتب الأمور فيه
تتفجَّر المعاني	فأنا صخرٌ ومِنِّي
مثل أفراس الرهانِ	وأنا مع العوالي
حشمة عن العيانِ	وأنا الذي توارِي
طائِعاً لِمَا دعاني	والذي أجبْتُ ربي
لتصاريف الزمان	فالذي يرى وجودي
فارغاً من المعاني	كفؤاد أم موسى
من حقائق ⁷³ البيان	فهو الخَلِيُّ حقاً
وأنا أَسُّ الأغاني	فأنا أصل المغاني ⁷⁴
فاضلٍ سامي المكانِ	وأنا سرُّ إمامٍ
شأنه أعظم شأنٍ	علمه أكمل علم
في المقاصير الجنان	هام بي لما رَأَني
خائف حد السنان	لأسميه فإنني

(70) سورة المومنون ٢٢: ١٠٨

(71) سورة الروم ٢٠: ١٥

(72) البيت ناقص في الأصل وبا يزيد وحاجي.

(73) جار، حالت: حقيقات.

(74) با يزيد، جار، فاتح، حاجي، حالت: المعاني.

والذي يفهم رمزي هو صخر بن سنان
أكرم الوجود كفاً ثابت⁷⁵ عند الطعان
وأنا والأم والجدة والجد المعاني
في وجودنا عن الحق⁷⁶ معاً بلا زمان
مثل ملاح بعين في الهوا برق يمان

فهذا يا صخر بن سنان قد أوضحت لك مقامات أمهات الأكوان وهو الإنسان الكلي
والعقل الأول والنفس الواحدة والهيولى والجسم الكلي⁷⁷ فابحث فيها بحث العاقل
الطالب نجاة نفسه والسلام على منشئها وعلينا⁷⁸. ⁷⁹

(75) ولي: بطل.

(76) ولي، جار، فاتح، حالت: الجود.

(77) جار، فاتح، حالت: والقلم الأعلى واللوح المحفوظ والهباء والجسم.

(78) في بقية النسخ: والسلام عليكم ورحمة الله وبركاته.

(79) شهيد: + وصلى على محمد وآله وسلم تسليماً كثيراً كتبه لنفسه أيوب بن بدر بن منصور من أصل الشيخ وكان بخطه حفظه الله.

ولي: + علقها الفقير أحمد بن محمد مثبت من خط منشئها ابن العربي رحمه الله (وبالهامش:) قرأتها معارضاً
بها الأصل فصحت لدي.

با يزيد: + قويل على النسخة المنقولة منها وهي بخط الشيخ بدر الدين محمد الزاهدي.

جار: + كملت والحمد لله رب العالمين والصلاة على سيدنا محمد خاتم النبيين وعلى آله وصحبه أجمعين
والحمد لله وحده ووقع الفراغ من تعليق هذه النسخة من نسخة معتمدة في اليوم المبارك تاسع عشرين شعبان
المكرم سنة خمس عشرة وتسعمائة أحسن الله عاقبتها وختم لنا بخير ولجميع المسلمين آمين وحسبنا الله ونعم الوكيل.

مراد: + كتبه الفقير إلى الله تعالى جمال الدين عبد الله بن إبراهيم لأخيه الفقير الشيخ السالك الناسك العالم
الورع الزاهد قطب الدين محمد بن تقي الدين المشتهر بابن الكبكي البروي (٩) أعاد الله علينا من بركاته ومفقتنا به والمسلمين في تاريخ أواخر شهر رمضان المبارك هـ ع ض (= 875) والحمد لله وحده.
فاتح: + تمت الرسالة بحمد الله وعونه وحسن توقيقه وصلواته وسلامه على سيدنا محمد وعلى آله وصحبه وسلم أبداً.

حاجي: + تمت الرسالة المباركة الموسومة بالإتحاد الكوني في حضرة الإشهاد العيني بمحضر الشجرة
الإنسانية والطيور الأربعة الروحانية للشيخ محيي الدين بن العربي رحمه الله تعالى آمين ووافق الفراغ من
كتابتها نهار الأربعاء

The Universal Tree and the Four Birds, one of Ibn 'Arabi's early works, is a dazzling blend of poetry and rhymed prose, encompassing a number of themes that were of perennial concern to the Shaykh al-Akbar. Based on the mystical framework of the ascent, the stages of the journey to union with the Real are described in an intriguingly enigmatic way. Beginning with a dizzying series of poems that explain the existential fluctuation of the human heart, the narrator goes on to describe his meeting with his Essential Self in a place outside of space and time. He then finds himself in a garden with the Universal Tree and four delightful birds: an Eagle, a Ringdove, a fabulous 'Anqā', and a Jet-Black Crow. Each in turn regales the author with a tale of its origins and essential characteristics, but only at the end are their true natures revealed.

The elegant translation is complemented by Angela Jaffray's illuminating commentary on key elements in the text and extensive notes, and a Foreword by Rafi Zabor. The Arabic text, critically edited from the best manuscripts by Denis Gril, is also included.

محمد عيسى بن العربي

ANQA PUBLISHING

ISBN 0-9534513-9-9

9 780953 451395

www.ibn-arabi.com
publishing@anqa.co.uk

Printed in the USA

Al-Ghazzali on REPENTANCE

M.S. STERN Distributed By APT BOOKS, INC.
141 East 44 Street New York, N.Y. 10017

STERLING PUBLISHERS PRIVATE LIMITED

STERLING PUBLISHERS PRIVATE LIMITED
L-10, Green Park Extension, New Delhi-110016
G-2, Cunningham Apartments, Cunningham Road, Bangalore-560052

All rights are reserved. No part of this publication may be reproduced, stored in a retrieval system or transmitted, in any form or by any means, mechanical, photocopying, recording or otherwise, without prior written permission of the publisher.

PRINTED IN INDIA

Published by S.K. Ghai, Managing Director, Sterling Publishers Pvt. Ltd., L-10, Green Park Extension, New Delhi-110016. Printed at Gopsons Papers (P) Ltd., Noida, (India).

PREFACE

The project goal is the presentation of Abu Hamid al-Ghazzali's teaching on repentance as rendered in his encyclopedic Revival of the Religious Sciences (Ihya' 'Ulum ad-Din). The presentation is made in two parts.

Part One consists of introductory remarks designed to provide a background against which al-Ghazzali's teachings on repentance can be viewed. Specifically, it includes a short account of the idea of repentance in Jewish and Christian tradition; a discussion of the Koranic notion of repentance; a biographical sketch of al-Ghazzali; an outline of the content and purpose of the Revival; a treatment of al-Ghazzali's conception of salvation; and, finally, a profile of al-Ghazzali's position on a number of basic theological issues which are both intrinsically bound to his explication of repentance and generally illustrative of his religious and pedagogical stance.

Part Two consists of the translation of the Kitab at-Tawba which is the thirty-first book of al-Ghazzali's Revival. A Cairo edition (c. 1965) of the Revival was used. In order to achieve a more reliable text, however, one manuscript was used as well as the major printed commentary by al-Zabidi which presents a text in the commentary itself, and another running on the margin. Translations of other books of the Revival were examined for terminological usage. Citations from the literature of Tradition (hadith) were checked and the references are given in Appendix

A. The references of Appendix A are noted in the translation by lower case letters following the pagination of the Arabic text.

- Many have had a part in the completion of this work. I would especially like to acknowledge those whose contributions were most significant: Deans Finlay and Lobdell of the University of Manitoba, Professor Moshe Nahir, Mrs. Irene Muir and Mrs. Trudy Baureiss. They have my heartfelt gratitude.

Above all, I wish to acknowledge those without whom this work would have been inconceivable.

- The late Professor G. E. von Grunebaum was a paradigm of humane scholarship; he is missed. Professor Moshe Perlmann, a teacher par

- excellence and a righteous man; he he constantly before my eyes. And,

At last but not least, my wife and partner, Sydel Stern; kind, patient and insightful, she nurtures my mind and my soul. These three have provided personal and professional models for me to emulate. I pray that I might prove worthy of each. To them, with gratitude to the Almighty, I dedicate this book.

CONTENTS

Preface: : v	Part One: Introduction	I	Part Two: Translation of Book
XXXI of the
	Ihya' 'Ulum ad-Din	29
Appendix A:		133
Appendix B: Index of Persons Mentioned		137
Bibliography:		139
Notes:		143

I

By the beginning of the seventh century, when Muhammad was beginning to preach to his new community of believers, repentance had already become a fundamental concept in both Judaism and Christianity. Both of these religious traditions assert the existence of a personal God, the reality of sin and its consequences and, perhaps most importantly, man's freedom both in his ability to commit and overcome sin. Thus man was seen as a moral being capable of breaking away from a negatively valued past and reforming. Furthermore, this conversion is highly valued as a basic virtue and a permanent condition to spiritual accomplishment.

The Hebrew noun teshubah ('repentance') is mishnaic in origin (i.e., post-biblical) but the same radical in its verbal form (shub) is quite common in the Hebrew Bible. Aside from its denotation 'to turn' or 'to return' in a physical sense,² there is a parallel usage indicating a spiritual or moral conversion. In fact, there are two such usages common, especially in the Latter Prophets. One such usage finds Israel as subject, indicating a conversion from sin to righteousness.³ The other uses the verb with God as subject, indicating the abatement of God's wrath and His extending to Israel a return to grace.⁴ There is a definite collective sense evident in many of these verses which are, incidentally, relatively unique to the Hebrew biblical tradition. The call to return is made to the people Israel, a manifestation of the covenant between God and His people.⁵ Nonetheless, there is clear evidence that the biblical tradition understood the possibility of repentance to exist both outside the people Israel⁶ and within it, on an individual basis.⁷

There are, in fact, two main currents to the idea of repentance in the Hebrew Bible. Firstly there is the ritualistic or cultic system by which man seeks forgiveness through sacrifice and displacement of guilt.⁸ This aspect is best exemplified in the ritual enjoined for the Day of Atonement.

Secondly there is the moral and ethical conversion especially emphasized by the prophetic sections of the Bible.¹⁰ These two currents should not, however, be viewed as totally independent elements. The ritual and ethical are intimately related in the biblical conceptions of sin and repentance. Indeed this synthesis becomes one of the fundamental aspects of later rabbinic teaching.¹

PART ONE

2
3

Finally, the Hebrew Bible views repentance as a process involving both man and God. Linguistic usage to this effect has already been cited. The prophets, however, put this usage together in such a manner as to indicate that the return by man is the factor under whose initiative God's return is triggered. Clearly, then, the biblical tradition views God's forgiveness and grace as a response to man's obedience.¹²

The Hebrew Bible does not, however, present a single comprehensive conception of repentance. Indeed one sees in this regard the variation of attitude and situation faced by the various biblical authors. The inconsistencies inherent in the biblical texts are, moreover, carried over to some degree into the rabbinic texts of the talmudic period.¹³ It is only in the medieval era, especially in the work of Maimonides, that consistent and comprehensive treatments of the topic are to be found. It can be said, however, that most of the major elements of the rabbinic conception of repentance are already mentioned in the talmudic literature. The talmudic sages were clearly aware of the biblical inconsistencies and the lack of systematic topical treatment may, in large measure, be due to the nature of talmudic literature itself.¹⁴

It is evident, nonetheless, that repentance had become a basic feature of rabbinic piety. The religious poetry of the period, an increasingly important liturgical resource in the post-Temple period, is marked by a high frequency of penitential themes.¹⁵ Further, the word teshubdh (repentance) becomes, at this time, a technical theological term, indicating a more intense concern for and treatment of its nature and characteristics.¹⁶ The significance assigned repentance by the talmudic sages is so great that it is credited with having been created prior to the physical world.¹⁷ Attributed to it are special life-giving and redemptive powers.¹⁸ Repentance is, furthermore, viewed as a potent form of righteousness. Consequently, at least some authorities see the penitent as more virtuous than the sinless man.¹⁹

So valued was the penitent in the rabbinic tradition that only his relative virtuosity compared with the unblemished could be questioned. In the Greek philosophical tradition this was not the case. Aristotle, for example, deals with the concept of 'repentance as cure in his Nichomachean Ethics. He does not, however, view it as a virtue. The good man is not given to repentance²⁰ When the two lines converge in the work of Philo²¹ repentance is introduced into the hellenistic philosophi cal tradition as a virtue²² It would seem that the rabbinic view of man's fallibility and repentance were already so basic within pre-Destruction first century Judaism that Philo did not hesitate to disagree in this matter with the ancient masters.

In early Christianity, as portrayed in the New Testament, repentance becomes an urgent and pervasive theme. Even before Jesus' advent, John the Baptist, sensing the imminence of Judgement, calls for immediate repentance.²³ This call is taken up by Jesus who often explains the major purpose of his ministry as being the repentance of sinners²⁴

This concept of repentance (metanoia) is developed into far more than a turning away from sin. It becomes rather, a complete change of the total spiritual personality.²⁵ Paul describes this in mystical language as a crucifixion and coming again to life.²⁶ With Jesus' death, repentance, as the key to salvation, seems to be replaced by faith²⁷ Yet, as faith was understood it differs little, in process, from repentance. Repentance is man's turning away from sin, faith is his turning to God. The shift can be understood as an adjustment from the intense expectation of an imminent Judgement to the acceptance of the possibility of a prolonged interval between the present and the realization of the Kingdom.

This change, from repentance based on eschatological expectation to repentance based on the demands of normative piety, is an important process. It parallels, in many respects, the changes which are discernible in the teachings of Muhammad after the founding of his community in Medina.²⁸ Perforce, the warning, BUT UNLESS YOU REPENT YOU WILL ALL SIMILARLY PERISH,²⁹ has a different intensity after Jesus' death. In the following centuries, through to the emergence of Islam, Christian theological treatment of repentance never goes beyond the New Testament ideas. In fact, with the increasing involvement of the Church in the sacramental process of penance, of which repentance was considered a part, the intensity of the original concept is often lessened³⁰

In Christianity, however, as in Judaism repentance is highly valued and the penitent, fulfilling, as it were, Jesus' ministry, is considered God's joy. The New Testament parables of the lost sheep and the lost coin are even more emphatic than the rabbinic texts in lauding the virtue of the penitent even against the sinless³¹ Thus is the positive emphasis on repentance in Judaism and Christianity at the beginning of the seventh century.

Tawba is the Arabic equivalent to the Hebrew teshubh. It is a loan word borrowed, in its basic verbal form (tfba), from Aramaic. It does not have the physical denotation of the biblical shfb but does parallel its religious signification.³²

In its verbal forms the Koranic tfba occurs both in an absolute form³³ or with one of two prepositions, *ila*³⁴ or *'alf*³⁵ Use of the last mentioned preposition indicates, without exception, that the verb's subject is God. All other instances of the verb refer to man as subject. There are three nominal derivatives each meaning repentance or conversion: tawb,³⁶ matab,³⁷ and tawba.³⁸ The active participle occurs twice³⁹ and there is an adjectival form, tawwdb,⁴⁰ which refers to God in all but one case.⁴¹ In all, the word tfba or its derivatives occur eighty-four times in the Koran.

The frequency and periodic distribution of this usage would seem to have some significance. Of the eighty four instances in which this radical is encountered, only nineteen are unquestionably of the Meccan period.⁴² Of these nineteen only one is a verbal form with the preposition 'ald.⁴³ Further, none of the adjectival forms predate the Medinian period. The adjectival tawwfb usually appears in tandem with the adjective rahim.⁴⁴ Such a double adjectival arrangement with rahim occurs in the Meccan period but never with tawwfb.⁴⁵ It seems clear that the Koran is asserting that God plays an active role in tawba but this idea is developed and stressed only relatively late in Muhammad's prophetic career. In fact, it would seem that whatever process is meant by tawba, a clear and decisive definition of which is not to be had in the Koran, it was taught in the Meccan period but not stressed or developed until after Muhammad's move to Medina.

Tfba and its derivatives are not the only words used in the Koran to indicate repentance. Raja a, a word meaning return in both physical and religious contexts, is used.⁴⁶ This word has not, however, become a legal or theological idiom and its religious signification would appear to be a simple extension of its literal meaning. Derivatives of *fba*⁴⁷ and the fourth verbal form of *nfb*⁴⁸ are found in the Koran and do, moreover, occur frequently in later literature.

In the context of the later usage, Hujwiri differentiates the three terms by reference to those who are repenting and their spiritual state at the time of penitence. Tfba refers to the repentance of the ordinary man; anfba, the repentance of the elect; and fba, the repentance of the elite, those who have attained the degree of divine love.⁴⁹ It does not necessarily follow that this represents the Koranic usage but it is reasonable to assume that Muhammad did, in fact, use them to denote different aspects or categories of repentance.

Aba and its derivatives occur seventeen times in the Koran. Of these, only one is undoubtedly of the Medinian period.⁵⁰ None of these, including the adjectival form awwfb are used to refer to God. Only one verbal form is present and the subject is the mountains which are to sing God's praises along with David.⁵¹ Anfba appears eighteen times from among which only one instance is clearly of Medinian origin.⁵² Again, all these refer to man. Tfba, on the other hand, occurs, as noted above, eighty four times. Of these, only nineteen are, without question, Meccan. Here God is often referred to and some forms, such as tawwfb, almost exclusively refer to God.

Muhammad was, in Mecca, a warner. He called the people to return to God immediately, the Judgement was at hand. This type of return or conversion, based on imminent eschatological expectations, must be total, immediate and radical. When Muhammad moved to Medina he became increasingly concerned with establishing a normative frame for his growing community.⁵³ The concept of repentance, in this context, needed to be more sympathetic to the temptations and ignorant follies of man. If man's conversion was to remain steadfast over a relatively extended period he would feel the need for God, in His mercy, to undertake an active helping and accepting role. This would seem to be the concept expressed by the tfba terminology. It is perhaps of interest that in Medina, and in the context of tawba, Muhammad proclaims that deathbed repentance is unacceptable.⁵⁴ If, in fact, man can prepare himself for the final judgement only in this life, it seems inconsistent with the Meccan message to invalidate deathbed repentance. Yet, it is explained by the shift in the grounding of repentance from an eschatological frame to one of normative piety.

The Koran does not offer a precise definition of tawba. It is clear, however, that tawba represents, at its most basic level, an abandonment of sin and a reorientation to a life of obedience.⁵⁵ It follows, then, that there must exist an awareness of having sinned and a feeling of remorse which moves one to turn away from sin. Repudiation of sin, however, is not sufficient. The Koran often juxtaposes tawba and the pursuit of righteousness.⁵⁶ It is not clear whether the latter is a part of the process of repentance or consequent to it. Whichever is the case, however, man's hope of divine forgiveness requires such a conversion.

Repentance is a requisite, although not necessarily determining, condition to the salvation of the sinner.⁵⁷ Furthermore, the Koran posits a special relationship between the penitent sinner and God. If man repents and turns to God (ild), God repents over man ('ala), turns to him and, perchance, will forgive him. God, moreover, places special value on the penitent and loves them.⁵⁸ One can conclude, therefore, that while the process of tawba is the repudiation and abandonment of sin, its purpose is the reconciliation of man to God. That the one could follow the other becomes intelligible only by understanding the Koranic conception of sin.

The Koran, in accord with its general character, does not elaborate a systematic theory of sin. There are, however, frequent references to sin, its consequences, and its possible forgiveness. From these references it is possible to construct an outline of the Koranic concept of sin ⁵⁹

Sin is a breach of moral norms. The Koran, standing by itself, does not present a comprehensive moral code. It does, however, assert a moral sanction, God. When man commits an indecent act it is to God that he must turn in seeking forgiveness.⁶⁰ This religious orientation stands in 'sharp contrast to what was, fundamentally, a socially sanctioned, conservative and pragmatic moral standard in pre-Islamic pagan Arabia.⁶¹ This assertion of a religious orientation, which infers that sin alienates man from God, is further augmented by the very concept of repentance. Sin's cure lies, at least in part, in turning to God. The assumption that in sinning man has turned from God is clear. This concept, while clearly present in the Koran, is not as fully developed as it later becomes in al-Ghazzali's writings. It is, in this regard, interesting to note that the term ma'siya, which denotes disobedience and rebellion, is used frequently by al-Ghazzali to signify sin. In the Koran it appears only twice and in both cases relates to disobedience to a prophet.⁶² An additional indication of this orientation is to be found in the references to atonement. The Koran does not provide for, any specific atonement ritual such as is to be found in Judaism⁶³ It does indicate, however, that good deeds atone for sin. The fact that it specifies certain ritual observances, i.e., the correct execution of ^{prayers}, as efficacious can be attributed to the underlying assumption that sin is fundamentally an offense against

God⁶⁴

Sin also entails damage to the perpetrator. Man, in sinning, falls short of his own potential. To express the concept of sin the Koran uses, among other terms, words derived from the radical Kh-t'.⁶⁵ This radical indicates stumbling or falling short of target.⁶⁶ The Koran indicates, moreover, that a man who accepts God's morality perceives in sin an effacement of self. Thus, for example, Moses says: O MY LORD, I HAVE WRONGED MYSELF (zalamtu nafsī) ⁶⁷ For Muhammad, sin effects more than subjectively discernible damage. Sin also leads man to hellfire, barring him from the rewards set aside for the righteous.⁶⁸ But, unlike the concepts of sin and justice in some other traditions,⁶⁹ the Koran asserts the lack of necessity in God's executing punishment ⁷⁰ The concept of uncontrolled and unwilling Fate is lacking.

7

The Koran refers to a differentiation between major and minor sins ⁷¹ It is not clear, however, which sins are included in either category or by what criteria they are to be differentiated. The classification of sin according to intensity, reference and effect is the product of later stages in the development of Islamic law and theology. The elaboration of a theory of sin, and the tangential questions suggested by such an elaboration, constituted one of the major elements in the controversy out of which Islamic orthodoxy emerged.

III

Abu Hamid Muhammad al-Ghazzali was born in the year 1058 in or around Tus, a town in northeastern Persia. After an active and varied life, he died in Tus in the year 1111.⁷² Interestingly, while al-Ghazzali was an extremely prolific writer and, in many regards, a pivotal figure in Islamic life, only the barest sketch of biographical information about him is available. To a great degree this is due to al-Ghazzali himself who does not often reveal his private self beyond what he deems necessary for pedagogical purposes. This is best illustrated by the obvious gaps in al-Ghazzali's semi-autobiographical Deliverance whose real purpose seems more instructional and apologetic than personal and confessional. ⁷³ Nonetheless, it is essential to take note of his own intentional 'conversion' in order to properly comprehend his approach and to place it in its proper historical setting.

Al-Ghazzali was orphaned at an early age, and according to his father's will, he was placed in the care of a family friend. He and his brother were given a traditional education in the religious sciences and al-Ghazzali then followed an educational course leading to certification as a jurist and theologian ('slim). Given the mobility of students in that milieu, it is not at all unusual that he travelled to Nishapur in 1077 to study under al-Juwayni, a leading jurist of the age. He remained there, studying and teaching, until his mentor's death in 1085.

8
9

When al-Juwayni died, al-Ghazzali joined the entourage of the Seljuq vizier Nizam al-Mulk. He remained with the vizier until Nizam appointed him to a professorship at the Baghdad Nizamiyya college in July of 1091.

He continued in his professorship for four years until his spiritual crisis led to his resignation and withdrawal from public life in 1095.⁷⁴

Al-Ghazzali, in the Deliverance,⁷⁵ described his unrelenting search for certainty and truth. This quest, which al-Ghazzali states led to his crisis, brought him to study the four major intellectual and spiritual approaches of his day: theology, philosophy, Isma'ili authoritarian instruction (ta'lim) and Sufism. Yet, a critical analysis of his work and behaviour must lead to the conclusion that his crisis, and therefore his conversion, needs to be viewed as personal, immediate and nonacademic.⁷⁶

What caused the eruption of al-Ghazzali's crisis? Authoritarian instruction does not seem to have been an acceptable personal option. When he refers to it, he is totally polemical. Sufism, on the other hand, was not a new experience. The family friend, in whose care he had been placed as a child, was himself a sufi.⁷⁷ Rather, al-Ghazzali's crisis flowed from his increasing disenchantment with his colleagues in Baghdad. They were not the great religious models he had thought them to be. In his view, they were using their scholarship to further worldly ambitions.⁷⁸ In all probability al-Ghazzali became alarmed because, seeing himself fall into that same state, he became increasingly uncertain of his salvation. This uncertainty, coupled with a feeling of personal worthlessness, caused a progressive functional breakdown until al-Ghazzali finally resolved to withdraw from public life and follow the sufi Way in search of personal salvation. That there were other factors, political ones among them, which encouraged his departure from Baghdad is not to be discounted. Yet, they can only have been secondary. In all probability the other factors were decisive only in highlighting the worldliness of al-Ghazzali's status.⁷⁹

Al-Ghazzali spent the next ten years in retirement. Part of the time was spent in Syria, some on pilgrimage, and it seems, some in Baghdad itself. He returned to teaching, however, at the Nizamiyya college of Nishapur in 1106. He later went into semi-retirement in Tus where he established a small circle among whom he taught.⁸⁰

His undertaking of renewed public duties is indicative of the direction in which his penitential search led him. The answer to his previous worldliness was not in withdrawal but rather in reorientation, and in a way, intensification of his pedagogical work.⁸¹ His sensitivity to the responsibility of the 'ulama' class brought him to realize that a 'return' on his part necessitated his working towards a general return, and therefore, a revival of the religious sciences.⁸²

Al-Ghazzali's influence on the development of Islam is both significant and multi-faceted. He helped to reintroduce the element of fear into the service of God. His work in the areas of philosophy and theology brought these disciplines a clarity that made them available to and treatable by the greater number of Muslims. In fact, though his interests and foci changed after 1095, he remained throughout his life a doctor of the Law. His later work, as exemplified in the Revival, was as significant to his theology as his earlier efforts. He also created a framework within which sufism attained an assured position within Orthodox Islam. These, moreover, are only some of his important contributions.⁸³

Nonetheless, the above are only contributing elements in the ultimate importance of al-Ghazzali to Islam. Above all he was a religious teacher and guide who felt and exhibited an overriding concern for his fellow believers. His greatest strength lay in his ability, as literary artist and teacher, to project his concern and involvement in the spiritual condition of his age.⁸⁴

Al-Ghazzali, as noted, was a very prolific writer. His works cover almost all the major areas of Islamic religious thought.⁸⁵ The Ihya' 'Ulum ad-Din, Revival of the Religious Sciences, an encyclopedic work that was written over a period of years beginning with his departure from Baghdad in 1095, is his magnum opus. While not written in a personal or confessional style, it represents the fruits of al-Ghazzali's years of spiritual development and sufi travelling. It is a vibrant work frequently using anecdotes and parables.⁸⁶ It is characterized, as is most of his writings, by the use of emotional as well as rational persuasion, a mark of his pedagogical style and skill.⁸⁷

Its intended purpose is to fundamentally redirect the attitude of the believer. In his Beginning of Guidance, al-Ghazzali declares that his Revival attempts, by increasing the fear of God and the believer's awareness of self, to decrease the appetite for this world and increase the desire for the life to come. The Revival will acquaint the Muslim with the internal aspects of piety which will lead to the opening of the supernal realm.⁸⁸

Al-Ghazzali divided the believers into two main categories: the 'vulgar' ('awamm) and the elite (khawass). The 'vulgar' is the intellectually and spiritually limited masses, usually possessed of imitative faith (tagiid).

Of the sciences of the hereafter they should be restricted to the practical sciences ('ilm al-mu amala). The elite is that group of believers which is intellectually and spiritually capable of revelatory faith. They are initiated to the science of vision ('ilm al-mukashafa)⁸⁹ Many have concluded that al-Ghazzali taught a 'double truth': an exoteric doctrine for the 'vulgas', and a higher esoteric truth for the elite. Professor Lazarus Yafeh has ably shown that such was not the case. For al-Ghazzali there was only one truth. As an accomplished and skilled pedagogue, however, he realized that different people have varying capacities for understanding. Al-Ghazzali, therefore, advocated limiting the amount of the singular truth taught, according to the capability of the student to absorb and comprehend it⁹⁰

Al-Ghazzali, as becomes one who considered himself primarily a teacher and spiritual physician, usually inclined to the theory that a man's rank was subject to his own will and effort. Given this position, the division of believers loses its rigidity. Most, if not all, of those who are to be reckoned :part of the 'vulgas' could raise themselves to the elite class. It would seem, in fact, that al-Ghazzali considered such endeavour to be each man's duty⁹¹

For whom, then, did alGhazzali write the Revival? Wilzer asserts that the Revival was written for dw 'vulgas'..She bases this assertion on the repentance terminology used in the b at-Tawba. According to Tiujwiri's definitions, the appropriate terms for the repentance of the elite would be abu o aaaa, niter of which is used hereby ai-Ghazzali. Since al-Ghazzali treats only Twba, defined by Hujwiri as the repentance of the masses, she concludes that the Ritnb at-Tawba is wholly exoteric⁹² This position, however, ignores that fact that, despite disclaimers, al-Ghazzali struggles in the JWOb at-Tawba, as in other books of the Revival, with concepts that belong to the areas of knowledge reserved for the initiated⁹³ This apparent contradiction can only be resolved by reference to al-Ghazzali's fluid concept of the 'vulgas' and his graded approach to the revelation of the one truth. There are believers, not yet of the elite but who are capable of being guided to that Path by means of an awakening to some of the divine secrets. These people are led gradually to a fuller and more comprehensive knowledge of the truth.

It is to this group that the Revival is directed.⁹⁴

The Revival is divided into four quarters, each of which consists of ten books. The first quarter opens with a book dealing with knowledge and learning. It is here, at the very outset, that al-Ghazzali sets out the indictment of the 'ulama'. The remainder, of this first quarter deals with ritual observance (e.g., prayer, fasting, alms, etc.). The second quarter deals with the regulation of personal and social aspects of life (e.g., eating, marriage, livelihood, etc.). In the first half, al-Ghazzali deals with the usual legalistic aspects of religious life common to the literature of the 'ulamd'. The second half deals with traits of the spirit and character. The third quarter treats the negative traits against which man must strive. These include anger, pride, the evil of the tongue and the like. The fourth and last quarter undertakes the exposition of positive traits and their acquisition. It examines patience, asceticism, contentment, selfexamination and such as these. This second section is clearly sufi and not unlike many non-Muslim devotional manuals⁹⁵

It would be wrong, however, to see the Revival as consisting of two separate strands: the legalistic and the mystic. One of al-Ghazzali's most significant characteristics is his blending and harmonizing of these two previously divergent lines. There were, before his time, observant (i.e. orthodox) sufis. Some of these were also members of the 'ulama' class. Yet, to some, orthodoxy must have seemed mere conformity, while with others the two lines were compartmentalized and, therefore, separate. The external observance exists on one level, and the internal, pietistic search on another. For al-Ghazzali, however, the external and legalistic observances of Islam are the very basis for the internal mystic search. Islamic practices were, for him, the means of drawing near to God and preparing for the life to come⁹⁶ Indeed, just as al-Ghazzali sought to give deeper content to the religious life of the mechanically pious, he also showed great concern to remove the strongly entrenched indifference to the religious commandments from among the mystics.⁹⁷

All of al-Ghazzali's studies and experiences are reflected in the Revival. He, like the mystics before him, found in the Koran, the Tradition, and the literature of law, the first seeds of a moral-religious approach.⁹⁸ Yet he never turned away from them. He continued, throughout his career, to draw from these sources and to refine their concepts in light of his mystic studies and experiences. he further clarified them by struggling with the ideas presented by the major movements (e.g., mu tazila, kalam, philosophy, etc.) of Islamic civilization.' Much of the success that the Revival enjoyed in bringing together once divergent lines of tradition can be attributed to the unity which al-Ghazzali himself brought to his work.

Repentance, as might be expected, is treated in the last quarter of the Revival. In fact, it is the first book of the fourth quarter. Al-Ghazzali, no doubt, viewed repentance as the most basic and requisite process for attaining positive spiritual qualities working towards the goal of salvation. In many ways his treatment of repentance typifies the totality of his teachings as explicated in the Revival.

12

N

The goal of life, for al-Ghazzali, is the attainment of salvation.⁹⁹ To the uninitiated Muslim, God, the highest spiritual entity, forms with man a personal moral community.¹⁰⁰ The fulfillment of this relationship, one in which God is the Master and man the slave, is at Judgement. In the hereafter, the temporal locus of Judgement, God is manifested in the absoluteness of His mastery, and man in the totality of his subservience. If man is granted salvation, he is vindicated in judgement and awarded the rewards of Paradise. If he, in this life, has failed, he is damned and cast into hellfire. For such a Muslim the guiding theme of life is fear of God, i.e., fear of being denied the rewards of Paradise and fear of the torments of Hell.¹⁰¹

Al-Ghazzali did not consider Fear, an element promoted both by the Koran and the early ascetics, to be of no value. For the 'vulgar', whose faith is imitative and whose understanding is limited, it is as effective a means to salvation as is possible.¹⁰² For the gnostic (arif), however, fear can only be a preliminary stage which is overtaken by the stage of Love. Such a man does not seek the pleasures of Paradise nor does he fear the fires of Hell. He only desires to encounter his Beloved. His only fear is separation from God.¹⁰³ Whereas the masses prepare for Judgement, the mystics seek the bliss of knowing God. They become, as it were, indifferent to the whole concept of Judgement as it relates to Paradise and Hell. Their salvation- is with and in God.

In some mystic traditions the ultimate goal of man's search is to become one with God.¹⁰⁴ This objective was, within the monotheistic tradition of Islam, unacceptable. The gulf between God and man cannot be bridged. Yet, for al-Ghazzali, man could, indeed should, strive to attain knowledge of God.¹⁰⁵ This knowledge, the search of which becomes man's true purpose and vocation, is not intellectual ('ilm) (although intellectual knowledge is an important factor in the search for higher states). Rather, the sought after knowledge is intuitive and experiential (ma'rifa). In experiencing this knowledge man finds God. Through this illumination the gnostic achieves a portion of the divine substance.¹⁰⁶

13

The traditional terminology for God, in this context, is mahbub (Beloved).¹⁰⁷ For al-Ghazzali this was a most apt term. If a man truly finds God as his Beloved, he will seek naught save that knowledge that will allow him to draw nigh and enjoy the bliss of proximity.¹⁰⁸ Gnosis (ma'rifa) and Love (hubb) always go together.¹⁰⁹ For such a lover the only true salvation is being near to God. The only damnation to fear is that which bars man from God's presence.

This idea, that the greatest bliss is proximity to God, is not unique to the mystical tradition of Islam. Indeed, it is to be found in the Koran¹¹⁰ as well as the talmudic tradition.¹¹¹ Yet, in those sources the expectation of intuitive knowledge or experience of God's presence is projected solely in the context of the hereafter. Maimonides, for example, who asserts that knowledge of God is man's prime duty, is discussing an intellectual phenomenon.¹¹² When he asserts the bliss of Encounter (i.e., the equivalent of ma'rifa) as the reward of the righteous, he clearly is talking of the rewards of the hereafter.¹¹³ The mystics, al-Ghazzali included, understood this experience to be attainable, through ecstasy, in this life. Indeed, it is only through gnosis that man can, in this life, gain a clear and direct image of the life to come.¹¹⁴

What role, then, does this world (dunya) play in al-Ghazzali's concept of salvation?

This life, which is called the World of the Material and the Evident ('alam al-mulk wa-sh-shahada), compares to the hereafter, called the World of the Hidden and Transcendent ('alam al-ghayb wa-l-malakut), as sleep compares to the waking state. The literal form of a dream cannot yield a knowledge of the true state of things. Truth, however, can be revealed by the proper interpretation of the content or meaning of a dream. Thus, in this life, man is limited in his apprehension of the true state of things in the hereafter by his ability to properly interpret the parables and allegories presented him by prophecy. Man can directly experience and know God only by gnosis (ma'rifa).¹¹⁵ This too, however, is strictly limited. Man, because of his very nature, cannot achieve perfect and lasting gnosis in this life.¹¹⁶ So long as man's state of morality and knowledge is imperfect, a condition whose inevitability will be treated below, he cannot aspire to ^{salvation, i.e.,} full knowledge of and proximity to God, in this life. Salvation is only to be found in the hereafter.¹¹⁷

This life is an antechamber to the hereafter.¹¹⁸ Al-Ghazzali is wont to refer to the tradition which asserts that this world is a field for the cultivation of the hereafter.¹¹⁹ Man's life in this world plays a prepara tory role in which he can assure for himself either salvation or consignment to damnation. The possibility of achieving some measure of gnosis in this life allows man to foretaste, as it were, of the saved state in the hereafter. He can then be in a position to appreciate the rewards of the good life.

14

15

The relationship between this life and the hereafter is, in al-Ghazzali's thought, much more complex than just an antechamber leading into the great hall. Man, he asserts, will experience nothing new in the hereafter. Man receives, in the hereafter, only as he has provided himself in this world. If man wishes to find salvation in the hereafter, he must struggle to achieve gnosis, salvation's foretaste, while still in this ephemeral life.¹²⁰ This concept is very similar to the one expressed in the rabbinic dictum which states that only he who has prepared on the eve of the Sabbath will eat on the Sabbath.¹²¹ The parallel is very apt. In the rabbinic tradition, the Sabbath is spoken of as a foretaste of the life to come.¹²²

It is of interest to note that al-Ghazzali posits, in this regard, another parallel between this life and the hereafter. In different contexts he calls his reader's attention to the fact that the Master of both worlds is one and the same and, furthermore, that His order (sunna) is constant.¹²³ In trying to thus connect this world and the hereafter he is not saying that both are exactly alike. Such would be grossly inconsistent with his projections on the nature of the hereafter. He is saying, however, that there is a continuity between the two worlds. One can in no way dissociate the effects of man's life in this world from what he can expect in the hereafter. Thus, while the nature of man's life in the hereafter is unique, its roots and causes are to be found in his temporal existence.¹²⁴

Al-Ghazzali, finally, views this world not merely as a preparation for the hereafter, but as a test.¹²⁵ This world (dunyā) is the prime cause of sin and, therefore, man's alienation from God. This world is not intrinsically evil but, if man begins to live it for its own sake, it will lead him to perdition. For al-Ghazzali all sin can be traced to a man's finding excessive delight in the pleasures of this world. This life should be valued only for its functional use in aiding man to achieve salvation. Al-Ghazzali does not advocate extreme asceticism. Such behaviour, in his view, makes man as much a slave to this world as its opposite. Rather, man must learn to use this world to meet his primary goal and be prepared to renounce that which is neither useful nor desirable to that end.¹²⁶ This moderate asceticism should not be confused with the denial that al-Ghazzali prescribes for individuals as self-castigation for specific sins. If an individual finds himself so attracted to an aspect of the temporal world that it is leading him to sin, he should renounce it even though, for most men, it would be permissible.¹²⁷

In sum, therefore, this world (dunyā) is a preparation for the hereafter. It is a test of man's worthiness and, in fact, a context within which he can gain a foothold on or preclude himself from salvation. Salvation, however, belongs to the hereafter. Only in the hereafter can the success of man's efforts in this life truly be validated.¹²⁸

What is man that this life becomes a test and thus threatens his salvation? Al-Ghazzali sees man as being endowed, as part of his basic nature, with two hostile forces: appetite and intellect. They are not, however, equal or co-temporal. These forces develop progressively as man grows older. The first to develop are the impulses leading man to desire the delights of this world. Only later, over a span of some thirty-three years beginning at age seven, does the intellect develop as a control on the appetites. Its function is to limit man's devotion to the mundane and direct him to knowledge of God and, thereby, to salvation.¹²⁹

Al-Ghazzali considers the unbridled pursuit of one's appetites as the basic road to alienation from God, i.e., sin. It follows, then, that with a person's appetites developing before the formation of the intellect, sin is inevitable. Even after the intellect has emerged it requires many years of development before it fully matures. If the appetites are allowed to gain control, the development of the intellect may be stunted and it may never reach full maturity. In such a case sin becomes impervious to conquest as well as inevitable.¹³⁰ This view of sin's inevitability in man is shared by both later Christianity and Judaism.¹³¹ The view, moreover, that man's moral position is strongly affected by the development of his impulses during his early years is reflected in the biblical tradition¹³²

Man's appetites and impulses, according to al-Ghazzali, also develop progressively and sequentially. First, man develops an animal disposition. Then he moves on to a predatory, a satanic, and finally, an egotistic disposition. Each of these stages, separately and in combination, leads man to different traits, and therefore, the tendency to different sins. At the first stage a man might sin by robbery. At the last stage his sin might consist of tyranny over his fellows. Just as a man's intellectual growth may be retarded by the force of his passions, so might his intellect limit the development of sinful tendencies. Al-Ghazzali asserts, therefore, that each person will have a proclivity to a different set of sins. This subjective factor is, for al-Ghazzali, as teacher and spiritual physician, of great

16

17

significance.¹³³

Al-Ghazzali maintains that man is created with a sound heart (galb salim). Furthermore, only a person who, at the end of his life, presents himself to God with a sound heart, will be granted salvation in the here after." This position seems to indicate that man starts life with salvation assured and must only insure that he does nothing to forfeit it. Yet al-Ghazzali also asserts that sin is not an act that counters man's natural disposition. Indeed, sin is inevitable. Moreover, in the parable of the conquering king, the parable by which al-Ghazzali explicates the various states of the hereafter, he has a specific classification for the likes of the feeble-minded and the children; those who are, for various reasons not under their control, beyond obedience or disobedience. Al-Ghazzali does not assign them to Paradise. They are not rewarded with salvation, neither are they condemned to hellfire.¹³⁵ The sound heart which brings salvation is, for al-Ghazzali, only such a heart as has become pure through refinement.¹³⁶ Al-Ghazzali's position that every man is born with a sound heart would seem to indicate his conviction that every man has, in his very nature and constitution, the potential for attaining salvation. Notwithstanding the inevitability of sin, no man is inherently evil. This understanding is consistent with al-Ghazzali's statement at the beginning of the Kitab at-Tawba that total evil is not the nature of man but of Satan. The nature of man, he asserts there, is to sin but afterward to return to good through sincere repentance.¹³⁷ Each man has the potential to return the heart God have him in trust, refined by his deeds, and thereby worthy of salvation.

In light of the above it is pertinent to note that al-Ghazzali did not accept the concept of infallibility ('Lsma).¹³⁸ In the biographies of the Prophet (sira) and in Koranic exegesis (tafsir) there exists a tendency, much akin to rabbinic Midrash, to create a more perfect personality for the faith's model. This led to a widespread acceptance among Sunni dogmatists of the concept of prophetic immunity from sin and error. Among the shi'a, of course, infallibility was attributed to the imam to a greater degree than to the prophets.¹³⁹ In al-Ghazzali's view no man is free of sin, it is a part of man's fundamental make-up. Al-Ghazzali, in many of his writings, makes clear his attitude of opposition to this basic aspect of Shi'ism.¹⁴⁰ Furthermore, as regards the Sunni tradition, in discussing the requisite qualities and attributes of the community's leadership he explicitly denies infallibility as a requisite.¹⁴¹ In fact, al-Ghazzali advocated, for pedagogical purposes, the public discussion of the prophets' sins and their consequent punishment.¹⁴² All men are fallible but they are also given the potential to overcome the weakness of their nature and achieve salvation.

The ground of sin is the pursuit and love of the mundane world. Such pursuit diverts man from the search for the hereafter and leads to the loss of salvation. The nature of sin is disobedience and its effect is the alienation of man from God. The specifics of any particular act of sinning are important in the process of correction but are irrelevant in defining the act-as sinful. It is the disobedience to God, in whatever form it is manifested, that removes one from proximity to God.¹⁴³

It has already been noted that man's nature, combining appetites and intellect, make his sinning inevitable but also provides the wherewithal for overcoming the consequences of sin and achieving salvation. This comes through the intellect's gaining control over the appetites. The intellect masters the appetites by gaining knowledge and leading to gnosis. When it fails, totally or partially, it leaves the man with active appetites and ignorance (jahl), and such a state leads inexorably to sin. Knowledge, then, is the key to avoidance of sin.¹⁴⁴

Belief, according to al-Ghazzali, is of two types. Firstly, there is the belief in God, His attributes and deeds. This belief belongs to the category al-Ghazzali refers to as the science of revelation ('ilm al-mukashafa). To be lacking in such faith is to be left with sheer unbelief and, therefore, perdition. It is the root of all belief and knowledge without which there can be no other. Secondly, there is the belief, termed faith (iman), in the practical duties and states of man's heart. In his al-Ghazzali refers to under the heading of the science of behavior ('ilm al-mu dmala). This belief is equated, in al-Ghazzali's writings, with knowledge. If one's belief in the practical sciences is defective, therefore, he is ignorant. Ignorance, again, is the condition that brings man to sin. It follows, then, that a person may indeed sin while still being a believer. A defect in the latter belief does not necessitate a defect in the former.¹⁴⁵

Al-Ghazzali understood, however, as did others in the Christian and Jewish traditions, that sin is an inner process of disease and decay.¹⁴⁶ Continuing sinfulness, which of itself is a defect only in the context of the practical sciences, must, little by little, erode the belief in the science of revelation. Eventually, if sin is left unchecked, the erosion of basic belief will lead to spiritual death, the loss of the heart.¹⁴⁷ If one loses the heart, of course, salvation is precluded. In this context al-Ghazzali is fond of using the parable of the mirror. Man's heart is like a mirror which was originally brought to a high polish (i.e., man is born with a sound heart). If he sins he allows vapour and filth to encrust itself upon the surface of the mirror. If this process is not controlled and reversed the metal becomes so dull as to preclude the possibility of reburnishing. Once the mirror begins to dull it must immediately be cleansed and polished. Thus, a man, after sinning, must proceed forthwith to attain the knowledge that counteracts the dulling effect of ignorance and defective faith; if not, the course of the decay will proceed apace.¹⁴⁸ This process of correction is, of course, repentance. It emerges from the confrontation between knowledge and ignorance. This confrontation, rooted as it is in human nature, is constant and enduring. Thus repentance is a life-long obligation flowing from the imperfection of man.¹⁴⁹

18

19

In pre-Islamic Arabia the gods were worshipped with certain rites centering on public sacrifice. It has already been noted that the morality of the age seems to have had limited religious sanction or relevance. The pagan, insofar as he went beyond the mundane, lived in a world filled with magical forces to be propitiated and neutralized. Muhammad, in preaching the message of Islam, cancelled public sacrifice and relegated such ritual to a private and secondary status. He instituted public worship through prayer and taught obedience to God through the fulfillment of the religious commandments.¹⁵⁰ This parallels, to a significant degree, a process of change in rabbinic Judaism just before and following the destruction of the second Temple of Jerusalem. In Judaism, the sacrificial cult was slowly losing ground to the institution of the synagogue so that, with the destruction of the Temple, a smooth transition to obligatory public prayer was possible. The developments of the later biblical tradition in which the sacrificial practices were increasingly limited by the prophetic call to worship through good works and piety, were decisive in the development of both talmudic Judaism and Christianity.¹⁵¹

The centrality of the pious life in obedience to the divine commandments was challenged by the proponents of sufism. The mystics believed that perfection and salvation could be achieved only by the search for knowledge and experience of God. Worship, on its various levels, was to be defined by its utility in the quest for the unitive state. Many of those travelling on the mystic Way developed an indifference to the observance of the commandments. They viewed the commandments, all normative piety, as a lower form of spirituality designed for the uninitiated masses. Al-Ghazzali sought to inculcate the mystics with an appreciation of the basic importance of obedience to God through the commandments as an ongoing requisite of salvation.¹⁵²

Maimonides, representative of many medieval thinkers, in this regard viewed the religious commandments as a means by which man, through control of his bestial impulses and the discipline of virtue, could perfect himself, morally and intellectually. Having thus perfected himself, man would be prepared for the ultimate knowledge of God. This knowledge, for Maimonides, was philosophical.¹⁵³ After attaining to this perfection the commandments are no longer functional.¹⁵⁴ Al-Ghazzali's position is, to a great extent, parallel. The purpose of the commandments is to help man master his appetites, educate himself in virtuous living, and deepen his religious experience. Al-Ghazzali does not, however, view the intellectual knowledge of God to be the highest objective. Man's goal is knowledge, intuitive and experiential. In this world such experience is only attainable through deeds of obedience. Observance of the commandments, then, lead to knowledge ('ilm). This knowledge further refines his deeds which allow him to experience gnosis. Man's nature, furthermore, is such that there are always forces working to dull the surface of his heart. The result, for the pilgrim (sdlik), is a continuous need for further commitment to the pursuit of obedience through the observance of the commandments. Moreover, the higher a man is able to reach in his knowledge, the more he is able to infuse his observance with depth of intent. In the 'way of the hereafter' the proper observance of the commandments require the combination of knowledge and action ('ilm wa- aural). The process creates a spiral of expanding knowledge leading to deeper observance which, in turn, brings man to greater knowledge. Clearly al-Ghazzali was addressing himself to both the shallow religiosity of the mechanically pious and the rootless spirituality of the libertine mystics.¹⁵⁵

In sum, then, salvation is to be found in the experience of God the Beloved. It is a constant state attainable only in the hereafter. It must, however, be cultivated in this life which is a proving ground of man's worthiness. Man's nature is such as makes sin and ignorance, the seeds of the disease of the heart, inevitable, but it is also such as allows him, through observance of the religious commandments, in an increasingly refined and deepened manner, to expand his knowledge of God. The continuing combination of knowledge and obedience, counteracting ignorance and heedlessness (ghafla), permits his attaining a measure of gnosis, the foretaste of salvation. This foretaste is itself a credit redeemable in the hereafter.

20

21

V

During the early formative years of classical Islam there emerged a number of debates whose development and resolution were decisive in forming the body of doctrine that became accepted as orthodox.¹⁵⁶ Among these was the debate over the individual and communal consequences of sin. The Koran indicates that sin leads man to hellfire.¹⁵⁷ The questions that arose, in this context, concerned which sins or types of sin are those that result in damnation and, following such a determination, what status does one sinning in such a way have within the community of believers.

The Koran differentiates, as to punishment or forgiveness, between two groupings of sin: grave (kabira) and minor (saghira). This can be seen in the verse: IF YOU AVOID THE HEINOUS SINS THAT ARE FORBIDDEN YOU, WE WILL ACQUIT YOU OF YOUR EVIL DEEDS AND ADMIT YOU BY THE GATE OF HONOUR.¹⁵⁸ Thus it follows that minor sin does not, of itself, carry the punishment of hell fire. The people of Hell are those who commit grave sins. The ensuing debate concerned itself, then, with the immediate and ultimate disposition of such as commit sins considered grave.

The khdriji sectarians believed, to use Watt's terminology, in the 'charismatic community'.¹⁵⁹ Salvation was tied into membership in the community of believers which alone was the source of the people of Paradise. Moreover, salvation was dependent on the integrity of the community. A person who committed a grave sin was, therefore, to be excised from the community. Such a man is an unbeliever and of the people of Hell. These people, moreover, posing a threat to the salvation of the entire community, must be fought, killed if necessary. There were, however, variations within the khariji movement. The azariga, for example, were extreme in the application of this principle. They never succeeded in forming large or stable communities and were constantly in armed conflict with the established political and social order. The najdiyya, however, did succeed in establishing their own political unit. The practical demands of government were, no doubt, responsible for a more moderate approach. They asserted that isolated instances of sin did not make one an unbeliever or threaten the salvation of the community. Such a threat only followed persistent grave violations. In any case, all the khariji factions held the position that grave sin was unbelief and its consequence was eternal punishment¹⁶⁰

The mu'tazila, like most other Islamic groups, did not concur in this attitude toward a salvational community. They held that one who commits a grave sin is neither a believer nor an unbeliever. Rather, he occupies an intermediate position (manila bayna 'l-manzilatayn). Their outlook, as with most other early Islamic theologies, was more individualistic. They did concur with the kharijis, however, that the consequence of grave sin is eternal punishment.¹⁶¹

A third group, important for the emergence of the orthodox view, was the nuurji'a. They believed that the status of the grave sinner, both as to his being a believer and his ultimate fate, were matters that could not be judged by men. They were questions best left for God at Judgement. Man should, to be considered a believer in this temporal setting, make the profession of faith. This latter consideration evokes the question of the relative importance, as regards man's ultimate disposition, of faith versus works.¹⁶²

The orthodox position, as articulated by al-Ash'ari and his school, posits that all unbelievers will be assigned to eternal damnation. Those attaining the status of believer, however, have done so as a result of their profession of faith and not as a result of their works. If a man has faith, if he accepts the Islamic creed, he will gain entrance to Paradise. The ash art school did not ignore the effects of sin. Indeed, many may be purged in the fires of Hell for a time. Ultimately, however, all who profess the faith will be saved.¹⁶³

Al-Ghazzali's position is, of course, very close to that of the ash art school. He does, however, refine this position in light of his understanding of both belief and sin. Polytheism (shirk), which is unbelief in the sphere of the revealed sciences, precludes pardon and condemns the unbeliever to perdition, eternally. If, on the other hand, a person is a believer he is assured of salvation.¹⁶⁴ If the man dies a sinner, a defect in the practical sciences, he is punished with hellfire for a time. Only the sound heart is accepted by God. If the surface of the heart is dirtied, it must be cleansed by fire. After death the only fire is that of Hell. In such a case the function of hellfire is purgative. After the heart is restored to its purity, entrance to some level of Paradise is effected.¹⁶⁵ In this there is no real difference from the ash'ari position. However, al-Ghazzali's understanding of sin, as previously expounded, is much more sophisticated. It is difficult for a man to continue in sin without an erosion of his belief in the revealed sciences. There is an intimate relationship, that of root and branch, between the areas known as faith and works. It is difficult for al-Ghazzali to envision a man persisting unrepentant in sin and remaining uncorrupted in faith. These two are not easily divisible.

Furthermore, while profession of faith is sufficient to preclude exclusion from the community and temporal punishment as an unbeliever, al-Ghazzali is emphatic that ultimately it is of no avail if it is only verbal. Al-Ghazzali believes that it is beyond human competence to judge the veracity of another's profession of faith. Also, he does not believe that a man's faith can, in this life, be confirmed or denied by his sins. All of these judgments are beyond human ken.¹⁶⁶ God, however, will indeed make these judgments.

Al-Ghazzali does not consider the community as the basic reference for or source of salvation. In line with the Koran, al-Ghazzali is committed to an individualistic approach.¹⁶⁷ Each man stands for judgement as an individual. Also, each person's struggle for salvation must be based on his own strengths and weaknesses as an individual.¹⁶⁸ Al-Ghazzali, as Islam in general, does not present an institutionalized atonement procedure as might be found in Judaism and Christianity.¹⁶⁹ Public confession is neither required nor encouraged except in the case of social offense.¹⁷⁰ Indeed, since sin is derived from the pursuit of the appetites, the specific development of which varies from individual to individual, the quest for integrity of faith and works must differ from one person to another. The convenantal relationship in Islam is between the individual Muslim and God.¹⁷¹

In rejecting the community as the source of salvation al-Ghazzali does not lose sight of the societal environment in which man lives out his temporal life. Ignorance, for example, can only be removed by the spread of knowledge. As God entrusted the people's education to the prophets so it falls to the lot of the learned doctors, the prophets' heirs, to continue this work.¹⁷² Yet, in terms of ultimate responsibility each learned doctor will be judged as an individual, as will his charges. His communal work is a personal obligation imposed by his level of knowledge or appointed position.¹⁷³ That all men have social responsibilities for which they are answerable to God is attested to by the fact that injustices against one's fellows are also transgressions against God and are breaches of the belief in the practical sciences.¹⁷⁴ The community is not the source of salvation but rather it is, by divine will and command, an area of responsibility in which man can pursue either obedience or disobedience.

There is another interesting element in al-Ghazzali's treatment of sin. Sins, according to al-Ghazzali, may be measured in two ways: objectively or subjectively. Objective assessment may be made by recourse to the Law. Yet, this alone would be an insufficient measure. Al-Ghazzali insists that the measurement of a sin must take into account the spiritual level (i.e. knowledge and perception) of the sinner. The transgression of an ignoramus is not the same violation as the identical infraction perpetrated by a learned doctor.¹⁷⁵ Incidentally, the social or communal stature of the sinner, as well as the attendant publicity of the sin, are also important variables. The learned doctor, for example, is a model whose public actions will be emulated. A sin he commits publicly could lead others to sin. He would then be doubly culpable.¹⁷⁶

In discussing the division of sins into those grave and those minor, al-Ghazzali has recourse to a number of different standards based on the legal tradition. He is able, finally, to indicate that some sins are definitely known as being grave, others as minor, while some are in doubt.¹⁷⁷ Yet, in continuing his analysis he introduces a subjective element asserting that a minor sin may become grave notwithstanding its status according to the objective sources of tradition through a person's persistence or faulty attitude.¹⁷⁸

A determination of sin is based on a code of morality whose violation is an offense against God. The mu'tazila conceived of an autonomous morality which followed from rational premises. Al-Ghazzali rejects this conception out of hand. It is evident from the aforementioned that, for al-Ghazzali, the ethical is secondary to the religious. Revelation is the sole source of morality.¹⁷⁹ The basis of that morality is God's command. Sin is no more and no less than rebellion against God.¹⁸⁰ This does not mean that Reason has no function in al-Ghazzali's system. To the contrary, even the sciences of the hereafter are categorized by him as rational sciences.¹⁸¹ Nonetheless, al-Ghazzali is insistent that morality is revelatory.

If there is a little of the paradoxical in al-Ghazzali's attitude as regards Reason, such is not unique. There are a number of areas in al-Ghazzali's treatment of repentance that seem paradoxical. It may well be impossible to explain these beyond indicating that al-Ghazzali did not consider the Revival as directed to those to whom the whole truth might be exposed. Some things are mysteries, knowledge of which is reserved for the initiated. Yet, in introducing this work, it would seem useful to at least treat an example or two of the mysterious in the Kitab at-Tawba.

VI

One of the most fundamental and contested issues in the formative years after the establishment of Islam was defining the implications of the prophet's assertion of God's omnipotence. An early and basic question that emerged from this issue pertained to a determination of man's basic nature. Does man act as a free agent or are his actions predetermined by God.

The khawarij movement, influenced to no small degree by their political philosophy and goals, were among the earliest advocates of the free will position.¹⁸² They were followed in this by the mu'tazila.¹⁸³ On the other extreme were many in the traditionalist camp who, feeling that the assertion of human freedom impinged upon the absoluteness of God's omnipotence, upheld a position of pure and total determinism.¹⁸⁴

Al-Ash'ari, reflecting the orthodox position, affirmed the determinists' position while adding that man was nonetheless responsible for his actions. He explained that God creates all of the component elements that lead to an action and then man chooses the act into which he is compelled. While the act is totally of God's creation, man acquires it (kasb, iktisab). This formulation is quite obscure, proverbially so.¹⁸⁵ Yet it is clearly an attempt to reaffirm God's absolute freedom while preventing fatalistic indifference to proper moral behaviour. Man's subjective feeling of choice is given formal status while, at the same time, there is a recognition of God's acting out His will through men. This conception is foreign to Jewish thought as it is, in general, to Christianity. There does, however, exist a similar idea in the New Testament.¹⁸⁶

This conception is echoed by al-Ghazzali. Man, he says, is compelled into that choice that is his. He goes to great length to show how God creates the various sequential elements that lead man into acting in a predetermined manner.¹⁸⁷ Yet, al-Ghazzali also promotes ideas that do not seem to harmonize with this position. The very idea of repentance implies man's ability to choose and act upon that choice. In fact, al-Ghazzali asserts that the ability to turn from evil and correct one's mistakes is a fundamental characteristic of human nature. Al-Ghazzali, moreover, states that God does not require of man more than that of which he is capable. If so, God's commanding man presupposes his ability and volition. Finally, al-Ghazzali often emphasizes the ability of all men, at least potentially, to raise themselves to the ranks of the saints, prophets, and angels.¹⁸⁸

The basic paradox inherent in the various writings of al-Ghazzali on this subject is explicitly rendered in his presentation of the parable of the blind man and the elephant. In this parable of Buddhist origin, al-Ghazzali tells of a group of blind men who examine, by touch, different parts of an elephant in order to ascertain its nature. Each man, having felt a different part of the animal, describes the nature of the animal differently. All of the men spoke truthfully, yet none of them was able to encompass, in his description, the totality of the animal. Thus, says al-Ghazzali, those who take the positions of determinism, acquisition (kasb), and free will, have each stated a part of the truth but, if taken singly as embracing the totality of the truth, each position is only a distortion of reality.¹⁸⁹

Al-Ghazzali, the teacher and spiritual physician, had, it seems, a basic functional commitment to the position that man has the ability to make choices and act freely. He also understood that creation's order, as well as man's own previous actions, limit his freedom. The elements requisite for any choice must also exist. Moreover, al-Ghazzali no doubt felt the need, as did those before him (e.g., al-Ash'ari), to protect the theological integrity of God's omnipotence. Man is required to understand that nothing can be accomplished, even for the gnostic ('arif), without divine grace.¹⁹⁰ Yet as dependent as man is on God, he is not simply a vessel or automaton. He does, in a real sense, have the ability to exercise choice (ikhtiyar).¹⁹¹

Man, especially such as for whom al-Ghazzali wrote the Revival, should be, left with the mystery and paradox unresolved. It was, for al-Ghazzali, a mystery in pursuit of which the unenlightened would stumble and which the illumined are forbidden to reveal.¹⁹²

The debate about man's free volition was intimately tied to two other issues: Order and Justice. Do defined causes beget constant and predictable results. Most of the early Muslim theologians, in the context of their attitudes on the question of God's omnipotence, were atomistic in their view of the world. There does not exist a necessary cause-effect relationship. Rather, each moment is a fresh creation and expression of divine will. If man stands witness to the fact that a particular cause has always resulted in the same effect, he cannot, with certainty, project this as having a bearing on the next instance of that cause.¹⁹³

Al-Ghazzali rejects this position. Happiness or misery in the hereafter are directly attributable to man's actions, good or bad. In fact, this causal relationship can be reduced to the lowest measurable degree. The scales of judgement are tipped to salvation or perdition even by the weight of an atom. His parable of the conquering king, which was cited previously, is eloquent testimony to this belief in causality. Each man's station in the hereafter, as in the newly conquered territory, is defined directly by the measure of his service or disservice. Again, in a different context, al-Ghazzali indicates that a person's fate is decided, in the minutest detail, by the quantity, duration, and intensity of his faith and works.¹⁹⁴ This is not an insignificant statement of fact. The acceptance of the reality of this causal order was, in his view, the very foundation of the belief in the divine origin of the commandments and the revelation (shar).¹⁹⁵

This causal order does not relate to the hereafter alone. Remaining in the moral sphere, al-Ghazzali viewed all calamity in this life as being a consequence of sin.¹⁹⁶ Al-Ghazzali also viewed the struggle for moral correction to be a natural outcome of the maturation of the intellect. If the intellect is allowed to develop, it will naturally confront the appetites and induce man to repentance.¹⁹⁷ According to Obermann, moreover, al-Ghazzali feels that acceptance of repentance is necessary in the sense that the very act of repentance results, causally, in the effects of acceptance (i.e. purification of the heart).¹⁹⁸

The mysterious element is raised by al-Ghazzali in treating the ideas of God's mercy and wrath. At times a man will be granted salvation or condemned to hellfire when all the apparent causes point to a different result. The condemnation of an apparently righteous man or the saving of an evil one would argue for the lack of order and causality. Al-Ghazzali, however, emphatically asserts that there is always a cause even, as in such a case, if it be hidden and secret. These hidden causes (asbab haf <ya), however, that result in mercy or wrath are not comprehensible through the rational sciences.¹⁹⁹ While there exists a causal order, it is God's order (sunna) and as such it is comprehensible only through revelation.

The other issue was that of Justice. There is order in creation, can this order be termed equitable. The Mu'tazila held, as one of their two most basic propositions, that it was part of the very nature of God that He be just and, according to some of their theorists, act in man's best interests. Thus they could speak of justice being an obligation of God.²⁰⁰ Al-Ash'ari was convinced, no doubt, of God's being equitable. This concern is probably one of the motives for his struggling with man's responsibility in the face of the doctrine of determinism. Yet, he could not reconcile the idea of obligation with God's omnipotence, a concept that assures absolute freedom of will.

Al-Ghazzali follows and elaborates al-Ash'ari's position. Is God just? His response is a resounding affirmative. God does not reward evil or punish obedience. Man's actions are requited with absolute equity.²⁰¹ There exists almost infinite variety, among men, in the quantity and quality of their obedience or disobedience. God, then, prepares innumerable levels both in Paradise and Hell.²⁰² A man's fate is measured according to his faith and works. These are, therefore, examined even to the measure of an atom.²⁰³ If a man realizes genuine repentance it will surely be accepted.²⁰⁴ Even in the working of the mysterious elements of mercy and wrath al-Ghazzali explicitly insists on their being just.²⁰⁵ Can this justice, which is clearly an absolute, be termed an obligation or a necessity? Here al-Ghazzali responds with an emphatic negative.²⁰⁶ Justice, for al-Ghazzali, is a part of God's order and practice (sunna). This order is an act of God's will, He could have willed otherwise. Being a part of His order, however, it is not wholly comprehensible to man except insofar as God wills it to be so. The dimension of justice must also be one in which, for man, mystery remains a part.

Al-Ghazzali's low valuation of formal theology might, through these examples, be more readily understood. He felt that theology might be useful to treat the doubts of the spiritually sick, but it could not be a tool of the healthy seeker of God.²⁰⁷ God, ultimately, cannot be known, as the philosophers would have it, through the exercise of reason and intellect. God, as His order, is beyond human comprehension. The knowledge that al-Ghazzali would have the believer seek is the intuitive knowledge that comes solely through the experience of and proximity to the living and omnipotent God. Only in this manner, through illumination, can the mysteries be uncovered. The totality of the single truth in which al-Ghazzali believed could not even be taught, objectively, by men.²⁰⁸

Repentance was a concept accepted and valued in both Judaism and Christianity. It was an integral part of Muhammad's message. In al-Ghazzali, however, repentance is given added dimensions and significance. Repentance is not only the means of overcoming the consequences and influence of a 'sick' past, it is the first step towards a 'healthy' future. Given man's nature, and the ordeal of this mundane existence, it is also a continuing part of man's quest for salvation.

28

Many of al-Ghazzali's insights and teachings can be seen in the earlier traditions of Judaism and Christianity. To a large degree, also, al-Ghazzali drew directly from earlier Muslim sources, traditional and mystic.²⁰⁹ The unique contribution that was al-Ghazzali's remains his mastery in two areas. Firstly, he possessed in his own person, the vast and variegated knowledge that was classical Islam. He was Koranic devotee, theologian, jurist, student of mystical theory, and defender of orthodoxy locked in debate with sectarianism and philosophy. He possessed this knowledge and integrated it into his own spiritual life and quest. Secondly, and perhaps more importantly, he was a master pedagogue. He was devoted to his fellow believers and was, because of his belief in the idea of renewal dedicated to sharing his quest.

It is in this light that we proceed to al-Ghazzali's Book of Repentance.

TRANSLATION OF BOOK XXXI OF THE IJYA' 'ULUM AD-DIN

[2]²¹⁰ THE BOOK OF REPENTANCE

Which is the first book in the Quarter of Salvation of the Book of the Revival of the Religious Sciences

IN THE NAME OF GOD, THE MERCIFUL, THE COMPASSIONATE

Praise to God, with whose praise every book is prefaced; with whose invocation every discourse commences; by whose praise the people of felicity shall abide with ease in the abode of recompense; and by whose name the wretched are consoled, even if the bar is set down before them, and they are separated from the blissful by a portaled wall; inside thereof Divine Mercy obtains, while outside Divine Chastisement proceeds.

We turn unto Him in penitence, convinced that He is master of all masters and originator of all causes. We look to Him in anticipation, knowing Him to be the King, compassionate, forgiving and disposed to accept penitence. We blend dread with hope, not doubting that while being forgiving of transgression and receptive to repentance He is also stern in inflicting punishment.

We pray for His prophet Muhammad, God bless him, and for his family and companions,²¹¹ a prayer that will rescue us from the terror of the place whence one will look down on the day of resurrection²¹² and will secure for us nearness to and safe refuge with God.

But to proceed; Repentance from sin, by recourse to the Veiler of vices, Knower of secrets, is the starting point for the followers of the spiritual path, the capital of the successful, the first step of the aspirants, key to the straightening of the bent, the prelude of the selection and election for those who are brought close to God; and for our father Adam, God bless him,²¹³ and all the other prophets. How appropriate it is for children to emulate their fathers and ancestors. It is small wonder if a son of Adam sins and does wrong, 'a- disposition which one who transgresses may recognize as a hereditary trait²¹⁴ For who resembles his father and does no evil? But if the father is restored after failing²¹⁵ and is revitalized after aging, let the emulation of him be at both poles, of the negative and the positive. Adam has been smitten with remorse, filled with repentance over his past deeds. Anyone who follows him as a model of sinning [only], and not in penitence, has stumbled.

PART TWO

30

31

Devotion to pure goodness is a trait of the angels close to God. Devotion to uncorrected evil is the nature of devils. But, return to good after stumbling in evil is inevitable in human beings. The devotee of absolute good is an angel intimate of the King [who is] Judge. The devotee of evil only is a devil. But he who rectifies evil by returning to good, is, in truth, human. So, in man's nature there is a duality of disposition, two traits joining in him.

Every human being verifies his relationship with the Angel, Adam or the Devil. The penitent, by keeping to the definition of Man, truly proves that he is related to Adam, whilst he who persists in iniquity is proving that he is related to the Devil. Confirmation of relationship to the Angels, [3] however, by dedication exclusively to the good, is beyond the realm of possibility. For evil is firmly kneaded with good in the nature of man, and it cannot be refined except by one of the two fires: of penitence, or of Hell. Burning in fire is necessary to purify the human essence of the Satanic pollution.²¹⁶ It is up to you now to choose the easier fire,²¹⁷ and to be prompt in embarking on the lesser discomfort before the choice is withdrawn to give way to the inevitability²¹⁸ of either Paradise or Hell.

Since²¹⁹ repentance holds such a place within the faith, it must be put first in the Quarter of Salvation with explanation of its true nature, requisites, motivation, manifestation and benefit, the difficulties barring it²²⁰ and the remedies facilitating it. This will become clear by discussing four pillars.

The First Pillar: On the Nature of Repentance.

Explication of its definition and true character; that it is obligatory, at once, for all men, under all conditions and, if properly carried through, accepted.

The Second Pillar: On the Context of Repentance (i.e. transgression).

Explication of sin's division into venial and mortal sins, some toward one's fellow-man others toward God; how higher and lower states [in the hereafter] are distributed according to good and evil works [in this life]; the circumstances amplifying the venial sins.

The Third Pillar: On the Requisites and Perseverance of Repentance. How past iniquities may be corrected, and transgression atoned; the categories of men²²¹ according to their perseverance in repentance.

The Fourth Pillar: On the Stimulus spurring Repentance and the way of Treatment for the Dissolution of the Knot of Persistence.

The goal of the exposition concerning these four pillars will be attained by God's will.

THE FIRST PILLAR: ON THE NATURE OF REPENTANCE

Explication of Repentance and its Definition

Repentance is a concept consisting of three successive and joined elements: knowledge, state [of remorse] and action. Knowledge is first, awareness second and action third.²²² The first necessitates the second, and the second necessitates the third, in accord with the continuity of the divine regimen in matters temporal and spiritual.

As for knowledge, it is the realization of the magnitude of the sin's harm and its being a barrier between man and the divine. If he realizes this with utter and decisive certainty, overwhelming his heart, this realization will stir a heartache on account of the Beloved eluding him. For the heart, whenever it perceives the withdrawal of the Beloved, is pained. If the withdrawal be through man's own action, he is regretful of that alienating behaviour. Such grief of the heart over behaviour alienating the Beloved is called Regret.

When this anguish becomes overpowering, another inner state is induced, termed volition and aspiration towards [new] behaviour connected with the present, the past, and the future. Its connection with the present consists of the repudiation of the sin with which he was entwined. For the future, it involves the determination to abandon forever the sin which causes alienation from the Beloved. With regard to the past, it entails correction of what was omitted by [doing] good and performing [the omitted act], if it is susceptible to [such] restoration.

Thus, knowledge is prerequisite and is the starting point of these blessings. By this knowledge I mean faith, and certitude. To have faith is to accept as true that Sins are a deadly poison. Certitude consists of the assurance of the acceptance of this truth, the removal of all doubt about it and finally its mastery over the heart, so that whenever the illumination of this Faith shines upon the heart it produces the fire of Regret.

It, in turn, will bring forth anguish as the heart perceives, through this illumination of the light of the faith, that it has become veiled from its Beloved. As one who was in darkness and on the verge of ruin, and, with the dispersal of clouds and the rending of a veil, the illumination of the sun shone and radiated upon him,²²³ and he saw his Beloved. Then the flames of love burn in his heart and these flames flare up in his will to rise to correct his ways.

Knowledge, Regret, and the intent connected with abandonment [of sin] in the present and future, and correction of the [sin perpetrated in the] past are three successive concepts within this process. The term Penitence (tawba) refers to this totality. Frequently, the term Penitence is used for the concept of Regret alone, as if making knowledge a precondition, and abandonment a result and later consequence. It is in this sense that the Prophet said: 'Regret is Repentance,'^a for Regret is void of knowledge which [4] necessitates and evokes it, and of determination which follows it. Regret is surrounded at both ends, by its result and its cause.

In this sense it is said, about Repentance as such that it is the melting of the entrails as a result of previous offense for this exposes to sheer agony. It is therefore said: /It is a fire raging in the heart, a fissure within that does not heal/. With respect to the meaning of Abandonment as an element of Repentance, it is related: It is the casting off of alienation and the start of fidelity.

Sahl ibn 'Abd Allah al-Tustari²²⁴ has said: Repentance is the change from reprehensible acts to commendable acts. This can be accomplished only in solitude and silence, eating from that which is allowed [i.e., earning an honest livelihood]. He seems to have pointed to the third element of Repentance.

The sayings about Repentance are innumerable. Yet, if you have understood these three aspects in their junction and sequence you will know that all that has been said regarding it falls short of encompassing all its aspects. The search for the knowledge of the true essence is more important than the pursuit of mere verbalizations.

Explication of the Obligatoriness and Excellence of Repentance

Know, that the obligatoriness (wujub) of repentance is evident in the Koran and the Tradition," and it is manifest in the light of discernment to him whose discernment has developed and whose heart God has laid open to the light of faith, so that he is capable²²⁵ of advancing. in this light amidst the murk of ignorance, without need of someone directing²²⁶ his every step.

A pilgrim (sdlik), may be blind, and must have someone to direct his steps; or his vision may be good, and he will be guided²²⁷ to the beginning of the way (tariq) whence he will guide himself. In the way of religion, men are similarly divided. There is the limited type not able to transcend blind imitation (taqlid) of past authority, and requiring, at each step, a text from God's Book or the tradition of His prophet, and in the absence of such a passage he may become perplexed, and, though he live long and be most diligent, such a man's progress may be limited, and his steps failing.

But then there is the fortunate man whose heart God has opened to an acceptance of Islam, and who is illumined by God. He will respond to the slightest indication to follow a difficult path and overcome tire some obstacles. The light of the Koran and the Faith will glow in his heart, and, due to the intensity of his inner illumination, the slightest explanation will suffice him. IT IS AS IF HIS OIL WOULD SHINE EVEN IF NO FIRE TOUCHED IT; and if THE FIRE TOUCHED IT THEN IT WOULD BE LIGHT UPON LIGHT. GOD GUIDES TO HIS LIGHT WHOM HE WILL²²⁸ Such a man has no need for a traditional text at every turn.

A person like that, if he desires to understand the obligation of repentance, examines, through the light of [his] discernment, what is the nature of repentance, then he scrutinizes what is the meaning of Obligation, then he combines these, and there will be no doubt as to his perseverance therein: To wit, he knows that the meaning of the obligatory is that which is obligatory for attainment of eternal bliss and deliverance from everlasting damnation. For unless 'happiness and misery are dependent²²⁹ on some action or its Omission, describing the act as being obligatory would be without meaning. The statement, 'it became obligatory by being given obligation [in some impersonal way]', is mere verbiage. For, in the case of an act where we have no purpose, near or distant, in doing it or leaving it undone and so no meaning in busying ourselves with it, someone else made it obligatory for us or did not make it obligatory.

If man understands the concept of obligation [of repentance], that it is the means to eternal bliss; that. there is no bliss in the Hereafter except in encounter of God; that everyone barred therefrom is no doubt suffering, feeling separated from. the object of his desire, and seared by the flame of separation and hellfire; that what keeps him away from encountering God is following the lusts and fondness for this ephemeral world and the pursuit of affection for something with which lie inevitably must part; that nothing can bring near the encounter with God except the severance of his heart's attachment to the vanity of this life, complete responsiveness to God, in search of intimacy with Him by constantly remembering Him and by love (mahabba) for Him, in the knowledge of His Majesty and Beauty, to the extent of man's capability; and that the transgressions which constitute turning from God and following the delights of the devils, those enemies of God that keep one away from His presence, are the cause of man's being shut off, kept out from [the presence] of God; then there is no doubt that renunciation of the path leading away [from God] is obligatory in order to achieve closeness to Him.

Renunciation, however, is achieved by Knowledge, Regret, and Determination. As long as man knows not that transgressions are the causes for the remoteness of the Beloved, he will neither regret nor grieve over his traveling on the path of withdrawal. As long as he has not grieved, he will not turn back, retreat being abandonment and determination. No doubt, these three elements are necessary in reaching [5] the Beloved, Such is then Faith that derives from the light of perception.

As for the [ordinary] man who is not qualified for such a station, whose climax transcends the bounds of most people, he has ample scope, through the following of convention and example, to attain salvation from damnation. Let him heed the word of God, His prophet and the righteous forebears (salaf).

God said, as a universal statement, BELIEVERS, TURN TO GOD [in repentance], HAPLY YOU MAY PROSPER,²³⁰ and He said: O BELIEVERS, TURN TO GOD IN SINCERE REPENTANCE.²³¹ The meaning of 'sincere' in the verse is 'sincere with God', free of blemish, the word being derived²³² from 'sincere counsel'. Further, God's word points out the excellence of repentance. TRULY GOD LOVES PENITENTS AND THOSE THAT CLEANSE THEMSELVES²³³

The Prophet said: 'The Penitent is beloved unto God, and he who repents of sin is as one who has never sinned.'a He also said: 'God is happier with the repentance of His faithful servant than the man [about whom the following story is related].

'Accompanied by his camel which bore his food and drink, he came to an arid desert. He laid down his head and napped. He awoke and his camel was gone. He searched for it until the heat and thirst overcame him, et cetera. He said, I will return whence I started and sleep until I die. He proceeded to place his head upon his arm so as to die. Then, he was aroused, and lo, his camel stood before him, provisions intact. God's joy at the repentance of the faithful servant is more intense than that of the man on account of his camel.'o (Some versions have it that in his great joy and desirous of thanking God, he exclaimed: 'I am your master and you are my servant.')

It has been transmitted on the authority of Hasan [al-Basri]: When God forgave Adam, the angels congratulated him. Gabriel and Michael descended to him and said: 'O Adam, may you delight in God's forgiveness!' Adam replied: 'O Gabriel, if a question remains after this pardon, what is my standing?' God, then, revealed to him: 'O Adam, you have bequeathed your descendants toil and hardship but also repentance. Whosoever of them shall call upon Me, I shall respond to him as I did to you. Whosoever shall seek pardon, I shall not withhold it from him, for I am nigh and responsive! O Adam, I shall gather up the penitents from their graves happy and laughing, their supplication answered.'

There are innumerable traditions on the subject, and there exists within the community a general consensus as to the obligatoriness [of penitence]. For its meaning is the recognition that sins and iniquities are destructive and remove Man from God. This sense is part and parcel of the obligatoriness of Faith. At times, however, disregard of it may occur. Knowledge means the elimination of this disregard. There is no doubt of the obligatory nature of repentance.

Among the various aspects of repentance are the abandonment of iniquities in the present; resolve to abstain in the future; correction of previous shortcomings. Of the obligation of these there is no doubt. As for regret and sadness of past offenses, surely this is obligatory. It is the very spirit of repentance which includes full rectification. How could this not be obligatory? Nay, it is a sort of pain one suffers following the realization of how much of lifetime has passed away and was wasted in the wrath of God.

You might say:

Heart anguish is a necessary state about which one has no choice. How then can it be classified as an obligation?

Know, then, that such anguish is caused by the certainty of having missed the Beloved. Man has a path by which to grasp its cause. In this sense, knowledge can be classified as obligatory. It cannot, however, be understood as a self-induced creation of man, for this would be absurd. Rather, Knowledge, Regret, Action, Volition, Capacity and the carrier ate all creations and deeds of ^{God}. GOD HAS CREATED YOU AND

[ALL] THAT YOU DO 2³⁴ This is what men of insight²³⁵ consider true, and all else is wrong.

You might also ask:

Has man, then, no choice in action and abandonment?

This we must answer in the affirmative. Yet this does not contradict our previous statement that everything stems from God's creation. So, also, does choice. Man is compelled in that choice which is his.

Indeed when God created the right hand, [6] delicious food and the appetite for food in the stomach, He also created the innate awareness that this food would alleviate the craving. He also produced the opposing notions: does or does not this food, while alleviating the craving, also contain harm and, perhaps, there is some objection to it, making its consumption objectionable. Further He created the knowledge that there is no obstacle. When these factors converge, there emerges a resolve motivating consumption. The emergence of the resolve, then, after vacillating between contradictory notions, and following on the intense²³⁶ appetite for the food, is called choice. It is inevitable that it should set in upon the convergence of all these conditions. Then, as resolve emerges through God's creation of these conditions, the right hand duly rises towards the food. For after volition and ability are attained, the following of the act is necessary so that the movement is produced. Thus the movement is by God's creation, following the attainment of ability and the emergence of the resolve, both also of divine creation. The emergence of volition follows real appetite and the recognition that there are no objections, again by divine creation. But some of these creations follow others in an order habitual in divine creation. YOU SHALL NOT FIND FOR THE WAY OF GOD AUGHT OF CHANGE 2³⁷

God does not create the movement of the hand in orderly writing so long as He has not created in the hand the quality of capacity, life and emerging will. Nor does He create a firm resolve as long as He has not brought forth desire and inclination in the soul. This inclination is not fully induced until there is knowledge that it suits the soul either immediately or ultimately. Knowledge, also, comes about only by other elements going back to movement, will and knowledge. Knowledge and natural disposition, then, always entail firm resolve. Movement always follows power and resolve. Such is the order of each action. All of it derives from divine origination.

Some of His creations, however, are preconditions of others and, therefore, some will have to precede others, e.g., will appears only after knowledge, which comes only with life, which emerges only after the creation of the body. The creation of the body is, therefore, requisite for the incidence of life but not in the sense that life is generated from the body. Likewise, the creation of life is a condition for the creation of knowledge, but not in the sense that knowledge is born of life. Yet, there is no ready receptacle for knowledge except it be alive. The creation of knowledge is then a requisite for the emerging resolve but not in the sense that knowledge engenders resolve. But only a live and knowing body is receptive of a state of volition.

Nothing is included in Existence except that which is possible, and possibility is an ordained order which does not tolerate change, for such would be an absurdity. As soon as the precondition of a quality exists, the carrier endowed with it is created to receive the quality. This quality, then, is attained through divine grace and eternal power, once the disposition has set in. Inasmuch as the disposition, on account of the preconditions, has [pre-ordained] order, the flow, by God's directives, of events has a set order, and Man, then, is the arena of these divinely pre-ordained successive events. These events are regulated by divine decree, which is as the twinkling of an eye,²³⁸ in a universal and unchangeable order. Their manifestation²³⁹ is so predestined in detail that man cannot transcend them. This is expressed in the divine saying, WE HAVE CREATED ALL THINGS ACCORDING TO A FIXED DECREE,²⁴⁰ and concerning the absolute and eternal decree in the verse, WE HAVE COMMANDED. BUT ONE WORD, AS THE TWINKLING OF AN EYE 2⁴¹

Men are subject to the flow of fate and divine decree. Part of destiny is the creation of the movement in the hand of the writer²⁴² after the creation of a special quality in the hand which quality is termed capacity. This follows the introduction of a strong and definite inclination, called Intent, in man's soul. This succeeds knowledge of the object of his inclination, which is called Awareness and Perception.

When, from the hidden reaches of the invisible world,²⁴³ these four elements appear upon the person of a man, who is subject to the compulsion of fate, the people of the visible world, barred as they are from the invisible and sublime world, come and say: O man, you who have moved, aimed and written. But proclaimed from behind the veil of the transcendental and the whirlwind of majesty, it has been announced: When you have aimed it is not you that has aimed but God. When you have killed, it is not you that has done it 2⁴⁴ But, BATTLE THEM, GOD CHASTIES THEM AT YOUR HANDS 2⁴⁵

The minds of those sitting in the middle of the sensible world are there upon sorely confused. Some teach utter predestination (jabr). Some maintain pure indeterminism (ikhtird' sirf). Yet others mediate and tend towards the theory of acquisition (kasb). If the gates of heaven were opened to them and they looked into the transcendental world, it would become apparent to them that each one is right in a sense, and yet all share in failure, and not one of them had fathomed the matter in all its aspects. Complete perception of it is attained by illumination through an aperture reaching into the invisible world. God knows the hidden world and the manifest. He reveals this hidden realm only to such a messenger with whom He is well-pleased ²⁴⁶ The manifest may be perceived [7] by one who has not come within the scope of [His] satisfaction. To him, who sets into motion the chain of causes and results, and knows the manner of its sequence and the nature of its connection to the primal cause; the secret of destiny is disclosed, and he acquires certainty that there is no creator and originator save for God.

If you say: you have concluded that each of these respective advocates of predestination, free will and acquisition is correct, to some degree, but also falls short of truth, are you not positing a contradiction? How can such a situation be understood? Is it possible to explain this through a parable?

A group of blind men heard that a strange animal, called an elephant, had been brought to the town but none of them had seen its shape nor had they heard its name. They said: 'We must inspect and know it by touch of which we are capable.' So, they sought it out, and when they found it they groped about it. One of them grasped its leg, ²⁴⁷ another its tusk and the third its ear. Then they said: 'Now we know it.' When ²⁴⁸ they departed, the other blind men questioned them but the three differed in their answers. The one who felt the leg said: 'The elephant is similar to a coarse cylinder outside although it appears to be softer than that.' The one who had felt the tusk said: 'It is not as he says. It is solid without any softness on it. It is smooth, not coarse. It is not at all stiff but rather it resembles a column.' The third man, who had handled the ear, said: 'By my life, it is soft and somewhat coarse. One of them is right but it is not like a column or a cylinder. It is rather, like broad, thick hide.'

Now, each of these presented a true aspect when he related what he had gained from experiencing the elephant. None of them had strayed from the true description of the elephant. Yet, together, they fell short of fathoming the true appearance of the elephant. Ponder this parable and learn from it. It is the pattern of most human controversies. If these words touch the revealed sciences and provoke ripples therein, this was not our intention.

Let us, then, return to our present concern, i.e., the explanation that repentance with all its three divisions: Knowledge, Regret and Renunciation is obligatory. Regret comes within the scope of obligatoriness as this occurs in all of God's actions that are interposed between man's knowledge and his will and power. That which answers this description is included in the term 'obligatoriness'.

Explication that Promptness is [essential in fulfilling] the Obligation of Repentance

No one doubts that promptness is [essential in fulfilling] this obligation, since perception of sins' destructiveness is of the essence of faith (iman), which is immediately obligatory. Its obligatoriness is profoundly grasped by him whom this keeps from reprehensible action. Indeed this perception is not of the revealed disciplines ('umm al-mukashafat) which are independent of action. Rather, it is of the sciences of practical religion ('ulian al-mu amala) ²⁴⁹ Every [item of] knowledge that is intended to be a stimulus to action has not been fully perceived as long as it has not become such a stimulus. The knowledge of sins' harm was intended to be a stimulus to renouncing them. He, then, who has not abandoned sin is failing in this part of faith. Such is the intent of the Prophet's saying: 'The adulterer does not fornicate at the time of fornication, he being a believer.'

His intent in [this saying] was not the denial of the faith which pertains to the revealed disciplines, such as knowledge of God['s existence], His unity, His attributes, His scriptures and Apostles. Indeed, adultery and transgression do not preclude that. Rather, he thereby meant denial of the belief that adultery alienates [one] from God and leads to abomination. It is similar to a situation where the physician says: 'This is poison, do not take it.' If the patient then takes it, it can be said [that] he took it as a non-believer. [This is meant] not in the sense that he lacks belief in the existence of the physician or in his being a physician. Neither [does it indicate] the patient's distrust of the physician. Rather, what is meant is that the patient distrusts the physician's statement that the compound is a lethal toxin. Indeed, he who knows [the nature of] the toxin will not take it at all.

The sinner, of necessity, lacks in faith. Faith is not one variety but rather some seventy whose highest point is the creed (shahada) that there is only one God, and whose lowest point is the removal of harm from the path. It is similar to the saying: Man is not one creature but rather some seventy whose highest is the heart and spirit, and whose lowest is keeping harm from the outer skin so that the mustache will be shaven, the nails cut and the skin free [8] of scum so that he is set apart from the beasts soiled by their detestable dung, with their long claws and hooves. This is a fitting simile.

Faith is similar to man. The loss of the affirmation of [God's] unity produces total futility like the loss of the spirit. He who has nothing save the affirmation of God's unity and of [Muhammad's] mission is like a man whose limbs are cut off, whose eyes have burst, and who has lost all his organs, both internal and external, except²⁵⁰ the spiritual element.

Just as he, who is in this condition, is close to death, the weak and solitary spirit, bereft of the limbs which support it and give it strength, abandoning him, so, he who being deficient in works, has naught save the root of faith is near to having the [whole] tree of his faith uprooted when, preceding the approach and arrival of the Angel of Death, the tempest which dislocates faith strikes the tree.

Any faith that is not firmly rooted in certitude nor branched out in action will not withstand the stormy terror of the Angel of Death, and may be in danger of an evil end, unlike faith that is tempered continuously with pious deeds until faith is firmly anchored.

The statement of the defiant to the obedient [servant]: 'I am a believer just as you are a believer,' is like the statement of the pumpkin tree to the stone pine: 'I am a tree and you are a tree.' How apt was the pine's retort when it said: 'When the autumn winds blow you will surely realize your foolishness in including [us both under the same] nomenclature, for then your roots will be severed, your leaves will fall away, and your conceit in sharing the name 'tree', as well as your heedlessness of the conditions of a tree's stability, will be made apparent.'

When the dust settles, you will see, If it's a horse you're riding, or an ass.

This matter will become apparent at the end. The arteries of people of perception collapse in fear of the vicissitudes of death and its terrible foreshadowing which only very few will withstand.

The sinner, when undaunted by the consequence of his disobedience, eternal hellfire, is like the healthy man who, addicted to injurious passions, is not, while in his healthy state, afraid of death. Indeed death does not usually occur suddenly. He may be told: 'The healthy man fears sickness, then, if he takes ill he hears death. So, the sinner fears a bad end, then, when, God forbid, his end is bad, he is consigned to eternal hellfire'.

Sins are to faith what toxic foods are to the body. They keep accumulating inside [the body] until the component elements change, imperceptibly, until the composition deteriorates and suddenly the man falls ill, then, suddenly, dies. So it is with the sinner. If a man afraid of ruination in this passing world must, immediately and constantly, abandon toxic substances and harmful foods, so too, and even more so must he who fears eternal perdition.

If a man who consumed poison, then felt regret, would need vomit and discontinue the consumption of poison by invalidating and removing it from the stomach in the quickest manner, to save his body which is on the verge of death, the loss merely of this ephemeral world, then, he who consumes what is toxic to religion, that is commits sins, is even more blighted to desist from these sins by correcting whatever is possible so long as there remains time for correction, namely [the remainder of his] lifetime.

For, what is feared from this toxin is the loss of everlasting life which contains lasting bliss and the great kingdom;²⁵¹ its loss entails the fire of Hell and lasting chastisement which is such as multiples of life in this world are less than one tenth of a tenth of its duration, it having no end at all.

Hurry, hurry, then, to repent before the toxic sins do their work on the spirit of faith, and the matter will transcend physicians and their knowledge²⁵² After which seeking shelter will avail naught nor will counsel and admonition, and man may be said to be among the damned, as it says: SURELY WE HAVE PUT ON THEIR NECKS FETTERS UPTO THE CHIN, SO THAT THEY ARE MADE STIFF NECKED; AND WE HAVE PUT BEFORE THEM A BARRIER AND BEHIND THEM A BARRIER; AND WE HAVE COVERED THEM, SO THEY DO NOT SEE. IT IS ALIKE WHETHER OR NOT YOU FOREWARN THEM, THEY DO NOT BELIEVE 2⁵³

Do not be deluded by the word 'faith'. We say the verse pertains to the unbeliever. Since it has been explained to you that faith is of some seventy varieties, and that 'the adulterer does not fornicate being a believer',²⁵⁴ he then who is barred from faith which is bough and branch, will be barred, in the end, from that faith which is the root. Just as the man who, bereft of limbs, which are the branches, will be led to final death of that spirit (ruh) which is the root. But the root has no continuity without the branch, [9] nor has the branch existence without the root. There is no difference between the root and the branch except in one point: the existence and continuity of the branch requires the existence of the root while the existence of the root does not require the existence of the branch. The continuity of the root, then, lies in the branch, and the branch draws its existence from the root.

Likewise the revealed discipline and the disciplines of practical religion are as inseparable as the root and branch. Neither can dispense with the other even though one of them has a primary status and the other is secondary. If the disciplines of practical religion have not become a stimulus to action, their non-existence is preferable to their existence. If they have not carried out their intended function, they turn into a support for the case against their student. Therefore, the chastisement of the learned but immoral is greater than that of the immoral ignoramus, as can be seen from the Traditions we cited in the Book of Knowledge 255

On the Universality of the Obligation of Repentance, no one being free of it

Know that the actual text of the Koran has already indicated this: BELIEVERS, TURN TO GOD [in repentance], HAPLY YOU MAY PROSPER ²⁵⁶ Thus He made the address universal (i.e., He addressed all believers). The light of the mind²⁵⁷ also advises so, as the meaning of repentance is the retreat from the road which leads away from God and draws [man] nigh unto Satan. That is conceived only by one endowed with reason.

The natural disposition of the intellect is fulfilled only after the fullness of the instincts of desire, anger and the rest of the negative qualities which are Satan's instruments for the enticement of man.

For the perfection of the intellect comes at the age of about forty; its foundation becomes complete only at puberty and its rudiments appear at the age of seven.

The passions are the soldiers of Satan, and the minds those of the angels. When they come together combat is, of necessity, joined between them, as one does not yield to the other, they being adversaries.

The strife between them is like the struggle between night and day, light and darkness. Whenever the one gains ascendancy, the other is, necessarily, roused. If the desires mature during childhood or adolescence, before the perfection of the intellect, then the satanic forces have preceded and mastered the situation. Familiarity and intimacy with Satan befall the heart, no doubt, as usual requisites of the desires. This overcomes man and makes it difficult to abstain therefrom. Then the intellect, which is God's troop and force, emerges to save, gradually, those favoured by God, from the hands of His enemies. But if the mind is not strong and perfected, the kingdom of the heart is surrendered to Satan, and the Evil One carried out his promises: I SHALL VERILY MASTER HIS PROGENY, SAVE A FEW ²⁵⁸ But if the intellect is perfected and strengthened, its first occupation is to suppress the satanic forces by breaking the appetites and habits and by forcefully reverting the natural disposition to acts of worship. Only this is the meaning of repentance. It is the return, from that road whose guide is lust and whose sentry is Satan, to God's path.

In every human being passion prevails over intellect; the impulse which is a device of Satan prevails over the impulse which is an instrument of the angels. Prophet or fool, every human being must abandon the steps taken to promote desire. On no account should you suppose that this is peculiar to Adam. It has been said:

Do not suppose that only 'Hind [shows] treachery as a personal temper.

Every songstress is like Hind.

Rather, it is an eternal rule, the fate of humankind which no decree can alter so long as there is no variance in the immutable divine order.

Consequently, anyone who has come of age as an ignorant unbeliever must repent his ignorance and unbelief. If he has come of age as a Muslim, following his parents; yet negligent of the real meaning of Islam, he must repent his negligence by a [growing] comprehension of the meaning of Islam. Indeed, his parents' Islam is of no avail to him so long as he himself does not turn Muslim. If he has understood that, then he must turn from his practice and propensity for following the desires, without anyone to divert him, and turn toward the pattern of the divinely set limits in prevention, release, absolution and renunciation. This is of the hardest varieties of repentance, and it is the ruin of most, as they fail therein. All this is retreat and repentance. It points to [the fact] that repentance is an individual duty of every person. It is unimaginable that anybody can be exempt from it, as Adam was not either. The constitution of the progeny cannot accommodate that which the original constitution of the progenitor could not.

As for the explanation of the constancy and universality of this obligation, it is [10] that no man is free from sins by his limbs; for even the prophets were not free of them, as is mentioned in the Koran and Traditions about the sins of the prophets: how the prophets bemdefined and repented them. If a man, in some cases, is free of sin by commission, he is not free of thinking about sin in his mind. If he is free, sometimes, from such thought, he is not free of satanic temptation by instigation of sporadic thoughts distracting from invoking God's name. But even if he is free therefrom, he would not be free of heedlessness and shortcoming in the knowledge of God, His attributes and acts. All this is an imperfection which has its causes. Abandonment of its causes, by taking to their opposites, is a turning from a path to one leading in the opposite direction. The intent of repentance is [such a] turning.

Freedom from this imperfection, in humans is inconceivable but they differ as to the extent of imperfection. Yet, basically there is no escape from it. That is why the Prophet said: 'Verily my heart is beclouded so that I beg forgiveness of God seventy times in a day.'^a God therefore honoured him, as it says: THAT GOD MAY FORGIVE YOU THAT WHICH HAS PRECEDED OF SIN AND THAT WHICH SHALL FOLLOW 2⁵⁹ If such was the case of the Prophet, what could another person expect?

Perhaps you would assert:

It is obvious that the concerns and thoughts that overtake the heart are a blemish, and that perfection consists of freedom from them; further, that the defective cognition of the essence of God's sublimity is a deficiency, and as cognition grows, so does perfection increase; that the transition from the sphere of deficiency toward perfection is also a turning away and that turning away is repentance. These, however, are virtues not [religious] precepts. You have made a statement on the obligatoriness of repentance under all conditions. Yet, repentance of these matters is not obligatory, as the attainment of perfection is not obligatory under Islamic law. What then is intended by your statement: 'Repentance is obligatory under all conditions'?

Know, as it has already been stated, that basically, by his very nature, man cannot but follow his desires. The meaning of repentance is not merely their abandonment. Rather, full repentance includes the correction of that which has passed. From each desire that a man pursues, a darkness rises onto his heart, as a dark spot is picked up from man's breath ^{by} the surface of a polished mirror. If the darkness of the desires accumulates, it forms a stain, as the gathering vapour of breath becomes dross on the surface²⁶⁰ of the mirror. As the Koran said: NO INDEED, BUT THAT WHICH THEY WERE EARNING HAS RUSTED UPON THEIR HEARTS²⁶¹

When the rust collects it becomes characteristic and it is imprinted onto the heart like the dross on the surface of the mirror when the dross accumulates over a long time, becomes immersed in the iron and corrupts it: the metal will not take further polishing, and becomes imprinted with the slag.

In correcting [the results] of following the appetites it is not enough to abandon them in the future. It is necessary to wipe out those stains that impressed themselves upon the heart. Likewise, the future elimination of breath and vapor that darken the mirror's surface will not suffice for clear reflection in the mirror, as long as no effort was made to wipe out the stain that had imprinted itself in the mirror.

Just as darkness will arise onto the heart from [the commission] of sins and [the pursuit of] appetites, so a light will arise upon it from [acts of] obedience and abstention from the appetites. The darkness of sin will; then, be eradicated by the light of obedience. This is alluded to in the Prophet's saying: 'Follow an evil deed with a good deed, to wipe it out.'^o Consequently, in any given situation, man will not be free of the need to eliminate from his heart the traces of evil by pursuit of pious deeds, the influence of [the good] contravening the effects of those evil deeds. This [refers to] a heart which has first had its purity and clarity, and then became dark due to obstructive factors. As for the initial burnishing, it is a protracted affair, because polishing to remove rust from the mirror is unlike the initial work of producing the mirror. Such operations are long lasting, never ceasing at all. All this applies to repentance.

As for your statement that this cannot be called obligatory, but is rather a virtue and search for perfection, know, then, that [the term] 'obligatory' has two meanings. One of them is: that which falls within the terms of a legal decision and which applies to all the people. It is the measure with which, if all mankind were to observe it, the world would not be destroyed. If all men were truly bent on fearing God, they would abandon [the pursuit] of livelihood and would forsake the world totally. That would lead to the total nullity of piety. For whenever livelihood is impaired, no one has the leisure for piety. Rather, occupation in weaving [11] and cultivation and [baking] bread absorbs everyone's²⁶² life totally, according to his needs. From this point of view none of these stages (i.e., of freedom from sinful thought and the quest for perfection) is obligatory.

The second [meaning of] the obligatory is that which is essential for attaining the sought after proximity to God-And the good abode among the righteous. Repentance from all we have mentioned [of sins] is necessary to attain it- As it is said: [Cultic] purity (tahdra) is obligatory for a voluntary prayer for anybody who desires it. Indeed, he will not come by it without that purity. On the other hand, for him who is satisfied with the omission of and preclusion from the virtue of voluntary service, purity, on its account, is not obligatory.

This [conforms to] what has been said: The eye, ear, hand and leg are a requisite for the existence of man. That is to say, it is a requisite for him who desires to be a complete man, enjoying his humanity and seeking thereby to attain to the noblest rank in this world. But he who is content with basic life and is satisfied to be like meat on the block and like a cast off rag, [finds] that for such a life the eye, hand and foot are not requisite. The root of the obligations, which enter the general mandate, bring one merely to the root of salvation. The root of salvation is like the root of life. The bliss beyond the root of salvation which shapes²⁶³ life flows through the limbs and tools by which life perfection²⁶⁴ is being prepared. It is this that the prophets, the saints, and the scholars sought, each according to his rank. That was their aspiration, their quest, and it is for this that they totally rejected the pleasures of this world.

Jesus came to rest his head on a stone to sleep. Satan then came to him and said: 'Were you not [resolved] to forsake this world for the next?' Jesus answered: 'Yes. What now?' Satan said: 'Your use of this rock as a pillow is a worldly enjoyment. Why do you not place your head on the ground?' Jesus cast away the stone, and placed his head on the ground. His casting off of the rock was [in] penance of that [worldly] enjoyment. Are you, then, of the opinion that Jesus did not know that placing [one's] head on the ground is not, by general mandate, considered obligatory?

Do you further think that our Prophet Muhammad, when the design on the garment he had on distracted him from his prayer until he removed the garment,^c or when the lace of his shoe, which was new, distracted him until he replaced it with an old one,^b did not know that such is not obligatory, according to the revelation he brought to all mankind?²⁶⁵ And, if he knew that, why did he repent through abstention from his deeds? Was that not because he saw [the amenities] acting upon his heart [in such a way as to] prevent him from reaching the good state which had been promised him?

And Abu Bakr, after he had drunk some milk and was informed that it was improper, inserting his finger in his throat, gagging almost to the point of death, so as to, bring [the milk] up. Do you think that he was so unaware of the rule of [Islamic] law by which anything eaten [of improper food] through ignorance [of its state], is not [an object of] guilt, and the food need not, according to jurisprudential mandate, be evacuated? Then why did he repent his drinking, by attempting, to the best of his ability, to empty his stomach of it? Was it not the conscience embedded within him which informed him that the general mandate is one thing and that the gravity of the path to the next world is [another] known only by the righteous?

Contemplate the state of these who, of God's creation, are most cognizant of God, of His path, of His scheme and of the hiding places of the Deluder. Beware lest the life of this world should delude you even once. Beware, beware a million times of the Deluder's guile concerning God. These are mysteries. He, who sniffs them out early, knows that the need of sincere repentance with every breath, clings to the man who is a pilgrim (salik) on God's path, even if he live as long as Noah. He also, knows that this (repentance) is obligatory forthwith and with no delay.

Indeed, Abu Sulayman ad-Dariini²⁶⁶ has spoken truthfully when he said: If the sensible man cried in what is left of his life only over what he missed in breach of piety, this would be apt to grieve him unto death. How is it then for him who faces the remainder of his life with [behaviour] similar to that of his past ignorance? He said this because if the sensible man possessed a precious gem and it was lost senselessly, certainly he would cry over it; if its loss were the cause of his own destruction, his weeping would be yet greater. Each hour of life, nay each breath, is a precious stone for which there is no substitute or exchange; it is beneficial for it is leading you to eternal bliss and saving you from endless misery. Which gem²⁶⁷ is more precious than this? If you have lost it through negligence, you have suffered patent damage and if you have expended it in sin [12] then you have already perished repugnantly. If you do not weep over this sin it is because of your ignorance. Your misfortune through ignorance is greater than any other. Ignorance, however, is a calamity in which the one stricken is unaware of his misfortune.

Indeed, heedless slumber intervenes between man and his perception. Men are asleep, but when they die they awaken. At that time to every wretch his destitution is revealed, and to every afflicted person his misfortune. Yet correction is already out of their reach.

One of the mystics has said: If the Angel of Death appeared to a man and informed him, 'there remains one hour to your life, and you cannot be reprieved for even one moment,' the man would experience such sorrow and grief, that if the whole world were all his, he would [be ready to] leave it for another hour to be added, just to enable him to seek God's pleasure and correct his own remissness. He will, however, find no way to accomplish this. This is the first meaning to appear from the divine word: AND A BARRIER IS SET BETWEEN THEM AND THAT WHICH THEY DESIRE ²⁶⁸ Further, this is indicated by the words: ... BEFORE DEATH COMES UNTO ONE OF YOU AND HE SAYS; O MY LORD! IF ONLY THOU WOULDST REPRIEVE ME, AWHILE, SO THAT I MIGHT MAKE FREE WILL OFFERING AND BE AMONG THE RIGHTEOUS. BUT GOD REPRIEVES NO SOUL WHEN ITS TERM IS ENDED ²⁶⁹

It has been said that the meaning of the 'awhile' that the man requests [according to the verse], is that when the matter is disclosed to him, man says: 'O Angel of Death, grant me an additional day, to plead to be excused by God, repent and provide a good record for my soul.' But the Angel replies: 'The days have come to an end, there is, then, not [a] day.' The man: 'Then reprieve me for an hour.' The Angel: 'The hours have lapsed; no hour!'

The gate of repentance is then closed to man, he gags, breathes heavily in his bitter regret. He suffers the agony of despair about correction, and bitter sorrow over the waste of his lifetime. The very foundation of his faith will be [surely] shaken under these blows.

When a man dies in God's grace, his soul expires with the words of the creed, and that [is to be considered] the good end. If he, God forbid, is doomed to wretchedness, he expires in doubt and confusion, and that is a bad end. In this regard it is said: BUT GOD SHALL NOT TURN TOWARDS THOSE WHO DO EVIL DEEDS UNTIL, WHEN ONE OF THEM IS VISITED BY DEATH, HE SAYS, 'INDEED NOW I REPENT.'²⁷⁰ And, again, GOD SHALL TURN ONLY TOWARDS THOSE WHO DO EVIL IN IGNORANCE, THEN SHORTLY REPENT ²⁷¹

'Shortly' refers to temporal proximity to the offense, so that he repent it and erase any trace of it through good works, substituting such for [the bad] before a stain beyond removal can collect upon the heart. Of this the Prophet has said: Follow an evil deed with a good deed, [may one] eliminate the other.

Of this, again, Lugmiin²⁷² said to his son: 'My son, do not delay repentance for death comes suddenly. He who has put off the effort to repentance finds himself between the two great perils: one of them being that darkness, brought on by his sins, will collect upon his heart until it becomes deeply embedded grime beyond elimination; the other that sickness or death may befall him swiftly, without permitting time to engage in correction.' That is why Tradition has it that 'most of the cries from those consigned to hellfire result from procrastination.' It is this that accounts for perdition. Blackening of the heart is cash while purging it by obedient action is credit, until death snatches man, and he brings before God an impaired heart. But only he is saved who brings before God a sound heart.

The heart is a trust left by God with man. So is a lifetime. So are the other means of worship. he who breaches this trust and does not make amends is in sore peril.

A mystic has said: Indeed, God has entrusted²⁷³ to man, through inspiration, two secrets. Firstly, when man exits his mother's womb God says to him: 'My servant, I have brought you into the world clean and pure, and have consigned you life and entrusted it to you. Heed how you keep this trust safe, and consider how you shall encounter Me [later].' Secondly, at the time of death He says: 'Man, what have you done with my trust? Have you kept it safe until you found Me under the covenant, so that I find you faithful? Or, have you forfeited it, so that I meet you with claim and punishment?' This is alluded to in the verse: . . . FULFILL MY COVENANT AND I SHALL FULFILL YOUR COVENANT ,²⁷⁴ and in the verse: . . . AND WHO PROTECT THEIR TRUSTS AND COVENANT ²⁷⁵

[13] Upon Accumulation of its Requisites, Repentance is surely accepted

If you have understood the concept of 'acceptance you will not doubt that every correct repentance is accepted. Those who contemplate through the illumination derived from the lights of the Koran know that every sound heart is received well by God, is enjoying in the next world nearness to God, and its master, through his immortal eye, is prepared to perceive God's countenance. They also know that, originally, the heart was created sound, every creature being born with such a nature. This soundness, however, eludes man because of a murkiness which overcomes the surface of his heart from the pollution and darkness of sins.

They are aware that the fire of regret [can] burn this pollution, and that the light of good deeds [can] obliterate the darkness of evil from the heart's surface, and that the darkness of transgressions has no power against the light of pious acts, just as the gloom of night is helpless in the face of the light of day; nay, just as the turbidity of filth cannot exist with the whiteness of soap, and as a king would not accept a dirty garment as his attire, so God does not admit a darkened heart into His proximity. And, just as the use of a garment for vile labor will soil it, and, certainly, to clean it one needs to wash it with soap and warm water, so exposure of the heart to the desires fouls it, and to clean, purge and purify it, one needs to wash it in the flow of tears and the burning of regret. Every clean and pure heart is well received, just as every clean garment is. The purification and cleansing, however, are up to you.

As for acceptance (gabul), it is freely granted as irrevocably preordained. This is termed 'prosperity' in the verse: PROSPEROUS IS HE WHO PURIFIES IT²⁷⁶

He who does not know, strictly speaking, with a perception greater and clearer than that achieved through eyesight, that the heart is affected contrarily by sins and good deeds, using for the former, the metaphor 'darkness' (zaldm) [as it is used also for ignorance] and for the latter, the metaphor 'illumination' (nur) [as used also for knowledge]; and that between illumination and darkness there exists a necessary unbridgeable contradiction; then he is as one to whom only the husk of religion was left with nothing attached save appellations. His heart is in a dense wrap [barred] from the essence of religion, nay even from his own essence and attributes. But he who is ignorant of himself, surely is yet more ignorant of another. I refer, in this, to his heart. Since knowledge of another [lies] within his heart, how can he have [such] knowledge when of his own heart he has no knowledge?

He who fancies that repentance could be sound yet not accepted is like him who imagines that the sun will rise but the darkness persist, or that a garment will be laundered with soap but the dirt will persist. Unless it be that lengthy accumulation of filth penetrated into the interstices of the garment and spoiled it so that the soap will lack the strength to extricate it. Likewise the accumulation of sins may become stained and imprinted upon the heart. Such a heart cannot return and repent.

Certainly, at times, a man says, with his tongue, 'I have repented.' Yet, that is like the fuller saying, with his tongue [alone], 'I have cleaned the garment.' But this will never clean the garment so long as he does not change the disposition of the garment by use of something effective against the filth²⁷⁷ ingrained in it. In this case repentance is fundamentally impossible. This is not rare but rather prevailing among all those creatures who devote themselves to this world and completely renounce God.

This explanation of the acceptance of repentance should be sufficient for men of discernment. But we shall support it by quoting verses, traditions and sayings of the Companions, for any reflection not attested to by the Book and the [apostolic] tradition (sunna) is not reliable.

The Koran says: IT IS HE WHO ACCEPTS REPENTANCE FROM HIS SERVANTS, AND PARDONS EVIL DEEDS ²⁷⁸ He also said: FORGIVER OF SINS, ACCEPTER OF REPENTANCE ²⁷⁹ Of such verses there are many more.

The Prophet said: 'God rejoices in the repentance of [even] one of you.... Joy is behind acceptance, and it points to acceptance, and more than that.' The Prophet also said: 'Indeed, God extends His hand with repentance until morning to him who sins at night, and to him who sins during the day He extends His hand until nightfall.' a Extension of the hand amounts to a call for repentance and the [attribute of] seeker is behind [the attribute of] accepter. Many are the receivers who do not seek but one does not seek unless he is [willing to] accept.

The Prophet said: 'If you sinned until it reached the heaven, then repented, surely God would turn unto you.' b He also said: 'Indeed a man can commit a sin [14] and enter paradise with it.' He was asked: 'How can this be, O Apostle of God?' He replied: 'He will direct his attention to repent it, fleeing [from sin] until he enters paradise.' The Prophet said: 'The expiation of sin is repentance.' d And: 'He who repents of sin is like one who has never sinned.'

It is related that an Abyssinian [came before the Prophet and] said: 'O Apostle of God, I used to commit vile deeds, do I have [a chance] of repentance?' T 'Yes,' replied [the Prophet]. [The Abyssinian] turned away and then returned saying: 'O Apostle of God, did He see me when I committed them?' Again, 'yes.' [At this point] the man uttered a shout with which his soul departed. e

It is related that when God damned Iblis, the devil asked for a reprieve. God, then, granted him a stay until the Day of Resurrection. [Iblis] said: 'By Your glory, may I not leave the heart of the son of Adam so long as he lives.' [To this] God replied: 'By My glory and majesty, may I not bar repentance from [man] so long as he lives.' f

The Prophet said: 'Good works remove evil as water [washes away] dirt.' 9

The traditions in this matter are too numerous to mention. ²⁸⁰

As for the sayings of the Companions:

Sa'id ibn al-Musayyab²⁸¹ said: God's revealed word, . INDEED HE IS FORGIVING OF THOSE THAT RETURN,²⁸² [refers] to man: he sins, repents, sins and repents again.

52

53

Al-Fudayl²⁸³ said: God has said: 'Announce to the sinners that if they repent I will accept their penitence. Caution the righteous that if I applied to them My justice, I would punish them.'

Talq b. Habib said: God's claims [upon man] are greater than man's capability; yet repent day and night.

'Abdullah b. 'Umar²⁸⁴ said:²⁸⁵ If a man bears in mind an offense he perpetrated, then is afraid in his heart on account of that offense, then that sin is erased from the [celestial] Register.

It is related that one of the prophets of the Children of Israel sinned.

God, then, revealed to him: 'By My glory, if indeed you do it again, I shall chastise you.' The prophet replied: 'O my God, Thou art Thou and I am I. By Your majesty, if You do not grant me immunity I will surely do it again.' Thereupon God granted him immunity.

One said: If a man sins and does not cease to regret it until he enters paradise, Iblis says: 'Would that I had not plunged him into sin.'

Habib b. Thabit said: A man is confronted with his sins on the Day of Resurrection. Then he passes by a sin and says, 'Verily, I was afraid of it.' That man is forgiven.

It is recounted that a man asked Ibn Mas'ad²⁸⁶ about a sin he committed: did he have a chance of repentance? Ibn Mas'ad turned away from him, then turned back and saw tears flowing from his eyes. Ibn Mas'ad said to the man: 'Indeed paradise has eight gates which open and close but the gate of repentance, guarded by a special angel, does not close; do [repent], and do not despair.'

'Abd ar-Rahman b. Abi-l-Qasim said: 'I conferred with 'Abd ar-Rahim²⁸⁷ about the repentance of an unbeliever and God's saying: IF THEY CEASE [151 WHAT HAS ALREADY PASSED WILL BE FORGIVEN THEM].²⁸⁸ And he said: 'I indeed expect that a Muslim will be better off with God. Yet, I have learnt that the repentance of a Muslim is like a [second and new] adoption of Islam after the original adherence thereto.'

'Abdullah b. Salam²⁸⁹ said: 'I would not report to you except of a [duly] charged prophet or a revealed book. Indeed, when a man sins, then feels remorse because of it for as long as a twinkle of an eye, the sin falls away from him quicker than the twinkling of an eye.'

'Umar²⁹⁰ said: 'Sit among the contrite. Indeed, they are the most delicate of hearts.'

One said: 'I know when God will forgive me.' 'When?' it was queried. 'When He restores me to His grace.'

Another said: 'I am more afraid of being deprived of repentance, than of being denied forgiveness. That is to say, forgiveness is certainly among the requisites and results of repentance.'

It is related: There, was, among the Children of Israel, a young man who had served God for twenty years, then defied God for [yet another] twenty years. Afterwards he gazed in a mirror and saw a gray hair in his beard. This grieved him and he said, 'My God, I obeyed You for twenty years, and disobeyed [another] twenty. If I return would you accept me?' He then heard a voice, although he saw no one: 'You loved Us and We loved you; you abandoned Us and We abandoned you; you defied Us but We granted you time; if you return, We will accept you.'

Dhu-l-Nun al-Misri²⁹¹ said: 'God has servants who grew trees of sins that were like guardians of the soul. They watered the trees with the water of repentance; the trees then produced regret and sadness. They became possessed without madness and idiotic without faltering or muteness. They are the profound, the eloquent, [those] that knew God and His Apostle. They drank from the cup of purity and achieved endurance (sabr) throughout tribulation. They they lost their hearts in the spiritual world and their thoughts roamed among the palaces veiling [God's] omnipotence. They sought shelter under the portico of regret, and read the ledger of sin. Then they were seized with anguish until they reached the height of asceticism on the ladder of piety. They found sweet the bitter [taste] of abandoning this world, and found supple the coarse bed, until they seized the thread of salvation and the grip of security. Their spirits roamed freely in the heights until they attained the gardens of pleasure. They plunged into the sea of life; filled in the trenches of anxiety and forded the bridges of passion until they descended to the courtyard of knowledge. They drank from the stream of wisdom; traveled on the ship of sagacity, and set sail, under the breeze of salvation, on the sea of security, until they reached the gardens of comfort, the source of glory and nobility.'

This is sufficient to demonstrate that all true repentance is certainly accepted.

Should you say:

Are you saying what the Mu'tazila have taught that the acceptance of repentance is obligatory upon God?

To this I reply:

In what I have mentioned of the necessity of God's acceptance of repentance I intend only what is intended by him who says: Indeed, when a garment is cleansed with soap, the dirt needs must vanish; When the thirsty [man] drinks water the thirst needs must cease; When he is, for awhile, denied water, thirst needs must result; if the thirst continues, death must [follow]. There is nothing in this of what the Mu'tazila intended by [the concept of] obligation [as regards] God[']s actions]. I would rather say; God created obedience as an atonement for sin, and good as an antidote to evil, as He created water as a remedy of thirst. His omnipotence is sufficient for the opposite should it have been His pleasure. There is, then, no obligation upon God but what His eternal Will has anticipated must, certainly, come to exist.

54

55

You might assert:

Every penitent doubts the acceptance of his repentance, while he who drinks water is certain of the abatement of thirst. Why then does [the penitent] doubt?

To this I say:

His doubt [with regard to the] acceptability [of his repentance] is like the doubt regarding the presence of the conditions of health. Repentance has delicate [requisite] props and conditions as will [later] be mentioned. The presence of all its requisites cannot be ascertained as if it were the case of one who doubts a laxative he took, i.e, will it work? That, because of his doubt in getting the requisites for relief by the medication in the given case, time, manner of mixing and preparing the remedy, and the potency of [its various component] drugs. Such and the like lead to fear even after repentance and, certainly, necessitate doubt of its acceptability, as will be seen, God willing, from the discussion of the requisites of penitence.

[16] THE SECOND PILLAR: THE CONTEXT OF REPENTANCE BEING SINS: VENIAL AND MORTAL

Repentance is the abandonment of sin. But it is impossible to abandon a thing unless it is perceived. Now since repentance is obligatory, it follows that anything, without which it cannot be achieved, must [also] be obligatory. Sin consists of anything which varies from God's [expressed] command by omission or commission.

A detailed exposition of this calls for an explanation of the whole range of Obligations. Such is not our intent. Yet, we shall indicate their general principles and the interconnections of their constituent parts. God is the one who in His mercy helps to [reach] what is correct.

On the Division of Sin in Relation to the Qualities of Man

[First Division:]

Man possesses many qualities and characteristics, as explained in the Book of the Wonders and Dangers of the Heart 2 The stimuli of sin, however, are limited to four qualities: of supremacy, of delivery, of bestiality, and of predacity.

Such is the case, for man's substance is molded of different ingredients, each one resulting in a [different] effect, just as sugar, vinegar and saffron exert, in oxymel, different influences.

The bent for the supremacy qualities, encourages such traits as prestige; glory; power, love of praise, appreciation and wealth; the desire for perpetuate life; and quest for superiority over all until it seems that man wishes to say, 'I AM YOUR LORD, THE MOST HIGH.'²⁹³ From these some of the greatest sins result, of which men are heedless, and which they do not reckon as sins. yet they are the great ravagers which are the source of most transgressions, as we have detailed in the Quarter of Destructive Matters.²⁹⁴

The second is the satanic quality from which derive envy, injustice, subterfuge, perfidy, inclination to immorality and deception, including corruption, hypocrisy, and the urge to [unlawful] innovation and error.

The third is the bestial quality from which derive gluttony, greed and desire for the fulfillment of the carnal appetites. From it derived also adultery, homosexuality, robbery, misappropriation of the property of orphans and all the other vanities for the sake of the appetites.

The fourth is the predatory quality from which derive anger, malice, assault, vilification, murder and waste of wealth. From these, various sins branch off.

These qualities have [a certain] gradation in human nature. The bestial quality is first predominant. It is followed by the predatory quality. Then, when the two get together and apply the mind to deceit, scheming and subterfuge, this is the satanic quality. Then, finally, the supremacy qualities prevail such as [the bent for] glory, power, arrogance, grandeur and control over all creatures.

These are the sources and origins of sin, the wells from which sin gushes forth to²⁹⁵ the limbs. Some of them [pertain] especially to the heart; such as unbelief, heresy, hypocrisy and harboring evil designs; others [pertain specifically] to the eye and ear, or to the tongue, or the stomach and genitals, or the hands and feet; some to the entire body. As this is clear, there is no need to go into details.

[Another Division:]

Sins are divided into that which is between man and God, and that which pertains to the relation of man to man; that which concerns an individual man, such as abstention from prayer, fast or obligations particular to him; and that which concerns inter-human relations, such as abstention from almsgiving, murder, usurpation of property, vilification of [another's] honour, and anything that infringes on another's rights, whether of life, limb, property, honour, belief or dignity; infringement on belief by leading astray and calling to heresy; incitement to transgression and to defiance against God, as practiced by certain preachers who cultivate hope over fear.

56

57

Sin that pertains to men is graver. In that which is between man and God [alone], unless it be idolatry, there is more hope for pardon. It has been transmitted in a tradition: There are three accounts: one which is forgiven, one which is never forgiven, and one which is not neglected. The account which is forgiven is that of the sins between man and God. The account which is never forgiven is that of idolatry. [17] The account which is not neglected is that of the injustices toward humans.^a That is, man must be called to answer for them before he is forgiven.

[Third Division:]

Sins are divided into venial and mortal. There is much disagreement about them. Some say: There is no venial or mortal [sin], rather, every transgression of God's command is mortal sin. This [position, however,] is weak since God said: IF YOU AVOID THE HEINOUS SINS THAT ARE FORBIDDEN YOU, WE WILL ACQUIT YOU OF YOUR EVIL DEEDS AND ADMIT YOU BY THE GATE OF HONOUR.²⁹⁶ Also: THOSE WHO AVOID THE HEINOUS SINS AND ABOMINATIONS, SAVE THE UNWILLED OFFENSES ...²⁹⁷ And, the Prophet said: 'The five prayers and [one] Friday [communal prayer] to the next, atone for what is between them, if mortal sins are avoided,'^b and in another version, '... are expiations for what [comes] between them except the mortal sins.' According to what was retold by 'Abdullah b. 'Amr b. al-'As,²⁹⁸ the Prophet said: 'Attributing partners to God, disobedience of parents, murder and willful perjury [are the mortal sins].'^t

The Companions and Followers differed in [setting] the number of mortal sins. [It ranged] from four, to seven, to nine, to eleven or more. Ibn Mas'ud²⁹⁹ said: 'They are four.' Ibn 'Umar said: 'They are seven.' 'Abdullah b. 'Amr said: 'They are~nine.' When Ibn 'Umar's statement, that their number is seven, reached Ibn 'Abbas³⁰⁰ he would say: 'They are closer to seventy than seven.' He once said: 'All that God has forbidden [constitutes] a mortal sin.' Another said: 'Any [action for which] God has threatened hellfire is of the mortal sins.' One of the righteous forebears said: 'Anything which necessitates [the infliction] of legal punishment (hadd) in this world, is a mortal sin.' It has been said: It is an obscure point, the number is not known, like the Night of Power (laylatu-l-gadr) or the hour of the Friday prayer. Ibn Mas'ud, when he was asked of this, said: 'Read from the beginning of the Chapter of

Women to verse thirty where it says: IF YOU AVOID THE HEINOUS SINS THAT ARE FORBIDDEN YOU ...³⁰¹ Everything that God has prohibited in this chapter to this point is a mortal sin.'

Abu Tiilib al-Makki³⁰² said: 'The mortal sins number seventeen. I collected them from all the traditions^a and from all that is gathered of the sayings of Ibn 'Abbas, Ibn Mas'ud, Ibn 'Umar, [18] and others. Four are of the heart: polytheism; persistence in disobedience; despairing of divine mercy; and [false] security from divine cunning. Four are of the tongue: false testimony; false accusation of the chaste; willful perjury, (i.e., that which justifies a falsehood or perverts the truth; which is, it is said, that by which the property of a Muslim³⁰³ is seized wrongly, even a toothpick,³⁰⁴ and it is termed 'plunger' (ghamus) because it plunges its perpetrator into hellfire), and sorcery which is any speech which alters man or other substances from the states fixed at Creation. Three are of the stomach: imbibing wine or any intoxicating drink; eating illicitly, and from the property of an orphan; and conscious usury. Two are of sexual nature: adultery and homosexuality. Two are of the hands: murder and theft. One is of the feet: desertion of the ranks, one of two and ten from twenty. One is of the entire body: disobedience of parents.' He said: 'The acme of disobedience is that they justly adjure [the son] and he does not respect their appeal; if they ask of him something, and he does not give it to them; if they rebuke him he hits them; if they are hungry he does not feed them.'

This is what he said, and it is plausible. Complete satisfaction, however, will not be gleaned from it, since it is possible both to add to it or subtract from it. Thus he has listed usury and embezzling an orphan's property as mortal sins. They are [both, however,] misappropriation of property. But of criminal acts he mentioned only murder as a mortal sin. Yet, gouging the eye, cutting off the hands, and torture of Muslims by beating and types of punishment, did not occur to him. Surely, beating and torturing an orphan, and amputating his limbs are greater [in sinfulness] than embezzling his property. Indeed, in the tradition [it is stated]: 'Excessive reviling, and detracting from the reputation of a fellow Muslim are mortal sins.' This is in addition to slander of the chaste.

58

59

Abu Sa'id al-Khudri³⁰⁵ and others of the Companions said: 'Indeed you are doing things which are, in your eyes, finer than a hair, and which in the time of the Prophet, God bless him, we used to reckon as mortal sins.'^o A faction said: 'Any premeditated [evil act] and anything that God has forbidden are mortal sins.'

To clarify this, take the case of the investigator of theft, as to whether it is or is not a major crime. [19] [This contemplation] will not be sound so long as one does not understand the meaning of mortal sin. What is intended by this is: Is theft prohibited or not? There is no hope of clarifying this without first establishing the essence [of the term] 'prohibited' (haram), and then, finding out whether that essence is present in theft.

'Major sin', then, is lexically vague and has no specific connotation, either in [Arabic] lexicography or in [Islamic] law. This is due to the fact that 'major' and 'minor' are modifiers. Any sin is major in comparison to what is beneath it and minor in comparison to what is above it. To lie down with an alien female is a major sin relative to gazing [at her]. It is minor [however,] in comparison to fornication. Amputation of a Muslim's hand is a major sin relative to beating him but minor in comparison to killing him.

Certainly, that action especially for which hellfire was set can be termed by man a mortal sin. By this appellation we mean to say that the punishment of hellfire is grave. Man can also apply [the term 'mortal'] to that [action] which necessitates, a legal punishment (hadd), for that which hastens a necessary punishment in this world is grave. He may also apply [this term] to that which is mentioned in the text of the Book as interdicted, for he can say that its specification in the Koran indicates the act's gravity. Then, again, since the Koranic stipulations also differ in their gradation, it will certainly be both grave and mortal by comparison. To these applications there is no objection, and preserved expressions of the Companions vacillate between these points. Possibly they can be reduced to one of these cases.

Certainly, it is important that you know the meaning of God's saying: IF YOU AVOID THE MORTAL SINS THAT ARE FORBIDDEN YOU, WE WILL ACQUIT YOU OF YOUR EVIL DEEDS, and [the meaning of] the Prophet's saying: 'Prayers are atonement for what [falls] between them except mortal sins.' Indeed, this is the ruling principle on mortal sin ³⁰⁷

The truth of the matter is that sins are divided, according to the view of the law (spar'), into those that are known to be considered by it as grave; those that are known to be counted among the venial sins; and those that are in doubt and the rule about them is unknown. To strive for a comprehensive definition or a definite figure is to strive for the impossible. For this is impossible except by hearing the Apostle of God say: 'By mortal sins I meant ten or five,' and list them. But as this is not reported, though in some versions 'three mortal sins' are mentioned,^o in others, seven,^b and 'that blasphemy is one of the mortal sins', apart from the seven and three, it becomes clear that no specific number was meant. How could one then aspire to set a [specific] number when the divine law does not? Perhaps the law intended to obscure it so that men would be in dread, as they are on the Night of Power (laylata-lqadr), to increase [thereby] men's diligence in searching for it.

Certainly, we have an overall method which enables us to know the categories and types of mortal sin, upon investigation. As for its main manifestations we know them by contemplation and approximation. We also know the greatest of mortal sins.

But, as for the most minor of the venial there is no way of knowing it.

The point is that we know, by the testimony of both the law and the illumination of insight, that the purpose of all the precepts is to lead men into proximity of God and the bliss of encounter with Him; and that men can attain this only through perception of God, His attributes, books and prophets. This is indicated by the verse: I HAVE NOT CREATED JINN AND MANKIND EXCEPT TO SERVE ME³⁰⁸ that is, that they be My servitors. Yet, man [the servitor] cannot be a servant so long as he has not perceived his master in His mastery, and himself in his servitude. Man must know himself and his Master. This, indeed, is the ultimate purpose of the mission of prophets.

This is, however, fulfilled only in the life of this world. This is the meaning of the Prophet's word: 'This world is a place [for the] cultivation of the hereafter.' Maintenance of this world thus also becomes the domain of religion, inasmuch as the world is a means of fulfilling religion (din). Two things of this world are connected with the hereafter: human beings and possessions. Anything, then, which is in the way of the perception of God is the gravest of mortal sin, the next being that which is destructive of human life, and the next is that which impedes the livelihood of men. These are three stages. [20] It is evidently the intent of all the creeds that the hearts must hold the perception [of the divine], the bodies - preserve life, humans - preserve possessions. It is unimaginable that these three matters would be [subject] to dissent [among the various] creeds. It is, then, inconceivable that God would send a prophet, desiring thereby the improvement of [His] creatures in their affairs, both spiritual and temporal, only to command them what would impede them from perceiving Him and His messengers, or that He would command them to destroy life and property. It follows that mortal sin has three levels. The first level is that which prevents [man] from perception of God and His apostles. This is unbelief (kufra), and there is no mortal sin greater than unbelief, for it is ignorance that is the barrier between God and man, and man's means to draw nigh to God is knowledge ('ilm) and perception (ma'rifa).

61

Man's proximity [to God] corresponds to the measure of man's perception while his remoteness [from Him] corresponds to the measure of his ignorance. That ignorance which is called unbelief is followed by [man's feeling of] security from God's devices and the despair of His mercy. This, indeed, is also of the very essence of ignorance. For he who perceives God could not conceive himself to be [in this sense] secure or despairing.

This stage is followed by the various heresies connected with [the concepts of] the essence of God, His attributes and works. Some of these are graver than others. The disparity [among them] is commensurate with their varying [degrees] of ignorance, and with their holding on to the belief in God, His works and revelations, His commands and prohibitions. The gradations of this are unlimited. They are divided into what one knows to be included within the mortal sins mentioned in the Koran; what is known not to be included; and what one is in doubt about. Seeking to dispel the doubt about this middle category is a hopeless aspiration.

The second level [relates to] human beings, since on their survival and maintenance depend the continuity of life and attainment of perception of God. Consequently, murder, even though it is beneath [the gravity] of unbelief, is certainly of the mortal sins. For, while one strikes at the goal [of religion] itself, the other strikes at the means to the [fulfillment] of that goal. For life in the world is intended only for the sake of the hereafter and the attainment thereof by means of [human] perception of God. This mortal sin is followed by amputation of limbs and whatever leads to death, even beating, with some acts being graver than others.

The prohibition of adultery and homosexuality falls within this category because if all men were to be content with males [alone] in fulfilling [their] carnal appetites, procreation would cease. Rejection of the existant is close to cutting off existence. As for adultery, it does not negate the principle of existence but rather distorts the lines of kinship and nullifies inheritance, mutual aid and many of those matters without which life [cannot be] well ordered. How, indeed, can good order be achieved together with the permission of adultery? Animal life is not well thriv ing so long as the male is not with his particular females, set apart from the other males. For this reason it is inconceivable for adultery to be permissible according to a religion³⁰⁹ whose aim is the improvement [of life]. Adultery needs be on a level beneath murder as it does not threaten the continuity of [human] existence, nor does it prevent its principle. It [merely] threatens the distinction of familial relationships, and stimulates factors that lead to strife. [Adultery] must, however, be considered graver than homosexuality as the [natural] desires spur it on both sides, its frequency is greater, and with frequency its harmful impact.

The third degree [relates. to] property, which is the life-stuff of man.

Men cannot control its acquisition chaotically, even until seizure, theft and the like. Rather it must be preserved, so that its continuity might insure the continuity of human beings. Nevertheless, property, when it is seized, can be regained, and if it has been disposed of, restitution is possible. The affair, then, cannot become [too] grave.

It is true that when its acquisition occurs in a [wrong] manner that would make correction difficult, such [interference] ought to be [considered] a mortal sin. This can be in four ways. The first is secret affair, which is theft. If it is not generally controlled - how can it be corrected. The second is consumption of an orphan's property. This too is a covert matter. I refer to a guardian or custodian, entrusted with [the property], who has not [possible] opposition save the orphan who is a minor unaware of the matter. This must be considered grave. Different is the case of extortion which is overt, and that of breach of [a normal] trust where the consignor can oppose the action and seek justice for himself. The third is its alienation by false testimony. The fourth is seizure of a trust and the like by [means of] willful perjury.

Indeed these methods³¹⁰ are not open to correction and it is unimaginable that religions should differ at all as to interdicting them. Some [cases] are graver than others, but they all are beneath the second level which is concerned with life. These four are worthy of being assigned as mortal sins even though canon law does not invoke legal punishment in some cases. However, [divine] threats in their regard are numerous, and in the affairs of this world their impact is great.

As for usury it is only, the consumption of another's property by mutual consent, along with the breach of a condition imposed by canon law. It is not impossible that there should be a variance among the religions [21] in a matter like this. If extortion,³¹¹ which is the taking of another's property without³¹² his consent and without the law's permission, has not been deemed a mortal sin, then exacting interest, done with the assent of the owner, albeit without legal sanction, should preferably not be considered a mortal sin³¹³

62

63

Even though the canon law views interest³¹⁴ with rebuke, it has done so also with regard to the iniquity of extortion and the like, and to breach of trust, with the result that it merits consideration whether a daniq's³¹⁵ worth of embezzlement and extortion is mortal sin, yet this is an area of doubt, and the trend of thought is against including such deeds under the heading of mortal sin. Rather, it is appropriate to limit mortal sin to that which is legally so indisputable that it be religiously obvious.

Thus, of what Abu Talib al-Makki³¹⁶ mentioned, only calumny, intoxication, witchcraft, desertion from the ranks and disobedience to parents³¹⁷ remain.

As for drinking, inasmuch as it removes reason, it is appropriate that it be a mortal sin, as attested to by both the severity of the law and rational considerations. For indeed, the intellect is a gift just as life, nay life is worthless without the [faculty of] reason. Elimination, then, of [the faculty of] reason is a mortal sin.

This does not follow, however, from a drop of wine. No doubt, if a man drank water in which was a drop of wine, that would not constitute a mortal sin. It is merely drinking polluted water. The drop itself is an object of doubt. That the law lays down legal punishment for it [merely] indicates how gravely it views the matter of intoxication. For it is counted as a mortal sin under the law. It is beyond human ability to grasp all the subtleties of the divine law. If, then, there is consensus that it is mortal sin, this line must be pursued. If not, there is room for hesitation.

As for calumny, it involves only hurting [people's] good repute, and this falls below the level of detriment to property." Again, hurt to honour is a matter of degree, its most severe being false accusation regarding the abomination of fornication. The canon law views this gravely.

I think, generally, that the Companions used to count any [action] which called for legal punishment a mortal sin. It, from this standpoint, is not expiated by the five prayers, and this is what we mean, now, by [the term] 'mortal sin'. But, inasmuch as it is possible that the [revelational] laws would differ about this, while analogy alone does not point to the magnitude and gravity [of this charge], nay, it would be possible for the Law to stipulate that one valid witness, upon seeing a man fornicate, may bear testimony, in which case the accused is flogged by virtue of this testimony. But, if his testimony is not accepted, then the other man's punishment is not evident, practically, even if it is one of the actually occurring affairs in the category of needs. Then, this too is appended to the mortal sins of him who knows the rule of canon law.' As for he who thinks that he must testify himself or that another may join him in support, it is not necessary that it be counted as a mortal sin of his.

As for sorcery, if it contains unbelief it is a mortal sin; if not, its gravity depends upon the damage which results from it, such as loss of life, sickness or the like.

As for desertion and disobedience versus parents, this too should be, by virtue of analogy, subject to hesitation.

Thus we conclude that any accusation, except adultery, assaulting people, oppressing them by usurpation of their property; evicting them from their dwellings and villages and ousting them from their homelands, does not involve a mortal sin. For it has not been mentioned among the seventeen, the highest listing given, so that hesitation in this too is not unlikely. The Tradition, however, indicates its designation as mortal sin, and so it may be appended to such sin.

In conclusion, the matter, therefore, reverts to the meaning we attached to the term 'mortal sin', i.e., that for the expiation of which, according to the rule of canon law, the prayers are not efficacious. That again is divided into what one knows will not, at all, be expiated; that for which people should atone; and that which is open to doubt. Of the last, some cases may be presumed to be solved positively or negatively, and others are so doubtful that only a text from the Book or [prophetic] tradition can resolve them. In the absence of such a text there is no point in seeking resolution of the doubt.

You might object:

This proves the impossibility of perceiving the definition of a mortal sin, and how can the Law deal with what cannot be defined?

Know, then, that anything that is connected³¹⁹ with judgement in this world can be open to ambiguity. Yet³²⁰ it is this world that is the sphere of prescribed divine law. About mortal sin, as such, there is no rule in this world. Rather, anything necessitating legal punishment is known by its [separate] name, such as theft, adultery and the like. But the rule re mortal sin is merely that the five prayers do not atone for it. This is a matter that relates to the hereafter. Ambiguity about it is appropriate in order that man be fearful and cautious, and should not venture, relying on the efficacy of the five prayers, into venial sins.

Thus, avoidance of mortal sins [22] atones venial ones, in accordance with the divine word: IF YOU AVOID THE MORTAL SINS THAT ARE FORBIDDEN YOU, WE WILL ACQUIT YOU OF YOUR EVIL DEEDS ³²¹ But, avoidance of mortal sin atones for the venial sin [only] when man abstains despite his ability and volition, like one who has power over a woman and could cohabit with her but restrains himself from intercourse and limits himself to gazing or touching. His internal struggle to abstain from sexual congress has greater effect in the illumination of his heart than his audacity in gazing has in the darkening of his heart. This, then, is the meaning of his atonement. If, however, he was impotent; abstaining only because of disability; or refrained in fear of another [extraneous] matter, then such would not, by any means, serve the purpose of atonement. Whoever, by nature, had no³²² desire for wine, and even were it permitted him would not drink of it, his abstention would not atone for the auxiliary venial sins like listening to the playing of musical instruments. Certainly, he who craves wine and listening to music, yet restrains himself with great effort from wine and settled for music, his internal struggle in abstention may erase from his heart the darkness which accrued to it through the sin of listening to music.

65

All of these judgements pertain to the hereafter, and it is conceivable that some of them will remain. in a state of uncertainty and doubt. Their particulars can be known only from a text; which text or comprehensive definition has not yet been [clearly] granted, and only varying versions have reached us.

Thus that Abu Hurayra³²³ said: The Apostle of God, of blessed memory, said: 'One prayer to the next and one Ramadan to the next is an atonement, except in three matters, [namely]; polytheism, abandoning the tradition (sunna) and breach of contract.'^o He was asked: 'What [constitutes] abandoning tradition?' He replied:³²⁴ 'Seceding from the community.' 'And what of breach of contract,' [he was asked]. 'That a man swore allegiance to [a leader] then go out with sword [in hand] to combat him.' This and its like are the expressions [in the matter]. They do not indicate a total number, nor do they point to a general rule. Thus the matter certainly remains obscure.

You might object:

Testimony (shahada) is accepted only from him who avoids the mortal sins; caution from venial sins is not a requisite for its acceptance. This is [in accord with] this world's rules.

Know, then, that we do not-restrict the rejection of testimony to the mortal sins. Indisputably, one who listens to the playing of musical instruments, dresses in silk brocade, wears a golden ring, and drinks from gold and silver vessels, his testimony is not accepted, yet no one has concluded that these matters are mortal sins.

'Ash-Shi fr'i³²⁵ said: 'If a Hanafi drank nabidh,³²⁶ I should impose legal punishment but would not reject his testimony.' By obligating legal punishment he made it a mortal sin, yet he did not reject the testimony.

This shows that neither acceptance nor rejection of testimony depends upon either venial or mortal sins [as such]. Rather, all sins damage integrity except those which man obviously cannot escape, such as slander, snooping, evil thought, falsehood in some statements, listening to gossip, abandoning the commanding of the good and forbidding the evil; eating doubtful food; abuse of a child and slave, beating them, in anger, more than is right; deference to tyrannical rulers; friendship with profligates; and indolence in instruction of household and child in all their religious needs. It is inconceivable that the witness could avoid, more or less, these sins except by withdrawing and devoting himself exclusively to the affairs of the hereafter, and curbing himself for awhile to the extent that he would be able to stick to his path even after he has rejoined society. If only the word of such a man were to be accepted, then it would be so scarce that all litigation and testimony would prove untenable.

Dressing in silk, listening to music, playing backgammon, social intercourse with the drinking set at the time of a party, intimacy with alien women, and the like of these venial sins are not of this kind. In accepting or rejecting testimony one must look into these ways, not into mortal or venial sins.

Then again some of these venial sins; because of which testimony is not rejected, surely may bring on the rejection of testimony if a man persists in them, e.g., habitual gossip and slander, keeping company and friendship with profligates. The venial sin grows by persistence, just as the permissible but indifferent act, like playing chess, singing constantly, etc., may become, through persistence, a venial sin..

So much for the rule re mortal and venial-sins

[23] How Higher and Lower States, in the Hereafter are distributed according to Good and Evil Works in this Life

This life (dunyā) is of the material world while the hereafter is of the transcendent world. By 'this life' I refer to your state before death, and by the 'hereafter' to your condition after death. For your [temporal] existence and afterlife are your attributes and states; [that] which is near is called 'this life' and that which follows later is called the hereafter (dkhira).

66

67

We speak now while being in this life of the next. Because, we speak in this life, it being the sensible world, but our purpose is the explanation of the hereafter, which is the world beyond the senses, and it is inconceivable to describe the transcendent world within the sensible world except by adducing parables. That is why it is said: AND THOSE PARABLES, WE COIN THEM FOR THE PEOPLE, BUT NONE UNDERSTANDS THEM SAVE THOSE WHO KNOW ³²⁷ This is because compared to the transcendental world ('alam al-malakut) the temporal world is like slumber. That is why the Prophet said: 'men are asleep, and when they die they awaken.'¹⁰

That which will occur in the waking state becomes clear to you during sleep only [through] parables which are in need of interpretation. Likewise, that which will take place in the waking state of the hereafter cannot be explained in the sleep of this life except through a multitude of parables, by which I mean that which we know from the science of dreaminterpretation. Of these [similitudes] three should suffice if you are sagacious.

A man came to Ibn Sirin³²⁸ and said: 'In my dream I seemed to have a seal in my hand with which I sealed men's mouths and women's pudenda.' Ibn Sirin said: 'You are a muezzin who announces the prayers during Ramadan before the break of dawn.' 'Right you are,' replied the man.

Another man came to him and said: 'I saw myself pouring oil into olives.' Ibn Sirin replied: 'If you have a female slave whom you bought, examine her case closely, for, indeed, she is your mother who was taken prisoner while you were an infant³²⁹ For the olives are the source of the oil, and now [in your dream] it is returned to the source.' The man, then, looked into the matter, and, in fact, the slave turned out to be his mother who had been taken captive while he was an infant.

Yet another said to Ibn Sirin: 'I was myself adorning the necks of swine with pearls.'³³⁰ Ibn Sirin said: 'You teach wisdom to the unworthy.' It was as he said.

Dream-interpretation, from first to last, consists of parables that convey to you the way of coining parables. By a parable we mean the rendering of meaning in such a form that if one considers its meaning he, finds it true, yet, if he looks at its form he will find it false. Thus the muezzin, if he looked at the form of the seal and the imprinting of it on the pudenda, would consider it false. Indeed, he did not seal with it at all. But, if he considered its meaning he found it true since from it issued the spirit and sense of sealing, which is the stopping intended by sealing.

The prophets cannot address humans except by use of parables, for they are commissioned to speak to men according to man's level of understanding. But men are³³n (as] in sleep, and nothing is revealed to a sleeper except through parable. When they die, then, they awake and realize that the parable is true.. That is why the Prophet said: 'The heart of the believer is between two of the Merciful's fingers.'^o This is of the parables that only those that know can understand. As for the ignorant [one], his level [of ability] does not go beyond the literal sense of the parable, because of his ignorance of interpretation (tafsir) which is called allegorical interpretation (tail) just^{as} the interpretation of the 'parables' seen in sleep is called 'dream interpretation' (ta'6ir). Thus he affirms of God a hand and a finger - may God be exalted far above this view!³³² Similar to this is the saying of the Prophet: 'God created Adam in His image.'b [The ignorant men] understand image [as meaning] only color, form and shape. He attributes these to God³³³ That is why some people stumbled in the matter of divine attributes, even re divine speech. They represent it as voice and letter etc. It would take too long to discuss it.

There may occur the coining of parables concerning the hereafter, which parables the unbeliever, whose view rigidly sticks to the literal sense and what he considers contradictory in it he will reject. For example, the Prophet says: 'On the Day of Resurrection, Death in the form of a beautiful ram will be brought and killed.' The stupid heretic revolts, deems it a falsehood, and infers from it the falsity of the prophets. He says: 'O Almighty God, death is an accident and the ram is a body. How is an accident transformed into a body? Is this not [24] absurd?' But God keeps the knowledge of His secrets out of reach of those fools, as it is said: NONE UNDERSTANDS IT SAVE THOSE THAT KNOW³³⁴ The wretch does not understand. A man said: 'I saw in my sleep that a ram was brought and it was said that it was the plague which [ravaged] the village. Then, it was slaughtered.' The interpreter said: 'You are right. It is as you have seen it. It indicates that the plague will cease and never recur, for the slaughtered was the source of desperation.' Both are right: the interpreter in his explanation, the dreamer in his vision. The truth here' goes back to the fact that the angel³³⁵ in charge of dreams is the one who informs men during sleep of that which is [written] on the 'safely preserved tablet' (al-lawh al-ma'afuz),³³⁶ he instructed the dreamer, by means of a parable which he coined for him, of what is on the preserved tablet. For the sleeper grasps the parable, the parable is true and its meaning sound.

68

69

The prophets, also, when they address men in this life, which, compared to the hereafter, is as slumber, convey meanings to men's minds through similitudes, out of divine wisdom and kindness to men, facilitating the comprehension of that which they would fail to grasp without parables. The statement, then, that death is brought in the form of a beautiful ram is a simile coined to convey to the mind that death brings on despair.

The heart is predisposed to being influenced by similes and to establishing their meanings. The Koran, therefore, characterized extreme power when it stated: BE, AND IT IS.³³⁷ The Prophet expressed the alacrity of transformation when he said: 'the heart of the believer is between two of the Merciful's fingers.' We have already indicated the sense of that in the Book of the Foundations of the Articles of Faith, which is in the quarter of Acts of Worship³³⁸ Let us now return to the matter at hand.

The point is that the indication of the distribution of degrees and attainments for good and evil works is impossible except by striking similes. Let us, then, understand our simile as to its meaning, not its form. Just as men differ in [the attainment] of happiness or misery in this life, so are they divided in the hereafter into classes and differ in an innumerable variety of greater or lesser happiness or misery. The hereafter is not at all different in this respect. For the ruler of [both] the temporal and the transcendental worlds is one; no associate has He. His order, which originates from His eternal will, is constant, unchangeable.

While we are unable to enumerate the individual levels, nevertheless, we can compute the [broader] categories. In the hereafter, men are divided, clearly, into four categories: the damned; the chastised; the redeemed; and the blessed³³⁹ An analogy in this world is the following. A king captures a region. He kills some of the [natives]; they are destroyed. He chastises some for awhile but does not kill them; they are chastised. He frees some; they are redeemed. He confers honours on some; they are successful. If the king is just he will divide them strictly on their merits. He will slay only those who deny the king's right, resisting him politically. He chastises only those who fell short in his service while acknowledging his dominion and lofty rank. He would free only those who, following recognition of his power, have not failed to the extent of deserving chastisement, nor have rendered service to the extent of deserving reward. He honours only those who have spent their lives to serve and support him.

It is proper that honours granted should vary in rank in accordance with the degrees of service; that the destruction of the damned should be, either by beheading or infliction of an exemplary punishment, in accordance with their degree of opposition; that the severity, duration and type of punishment for the chastised should be in accordance with the degree of their failing. Each of these categories is sub-divided into innumerable groups..

It is thus to be understood that, in the hereafter too, men are variously disposed. One will be destroyed, another chastised for awhile, one redeemed to reside in the abode of security, and another blessed. Moreover, the blessed are divided into those residing in the gardens of Eden, the gardens of sheltering retreat, or the gardens of Paradise^{34p} Among the chastised, also, there are those punished for a while, those tormented for one thousand to seven thousand years. These latter are the last to leave hellfire, as it has been reported ii, a tradition. ° The damned, who despaired of God's mercy, are also of different categories. All these variations correspond to the differences in their obedient and rebellious acts. Let us, now, mention the mode of distribution.

[25] The first level is that of the damned, by which term we refer to those who despair of God's mercy. Do not be heedless of the meaning of our simile in which the one slain was he who despaired of the king's pleasure and deference. This level is only for heretics; disdainers; those devoted solely to temporal existence; those who deny God, His apostles and scriptures. Yet, ultimate happiness lies in nearness to God and gazing at His countenance. Such is attained only through that perception which finds its expression in faith [in God] and acceptance [of His prophets]. The heretics are those who deny; the disbelievers are those who despair of God's eternal mercy. It is they who disbelieve the Lord of the Universe and His appointed prophets. But upon that day they shall be veiled from their Lord most certainly.³⁴¹ Yet whenever someone is veiled from his beloved, a bar is set between him and that which he desires, he certainly is seared as by hellfire by the fire of separation³⁴²

The gnostics therefore say: Our fear is not of hellfire, nor is our yearning for the maidens of paradise. Nay, what we seek is only the Encounter, and what we flee from - is the Veil. Also: One who worships God seeking compensation is ignoble. He worships God as if out of the quest for paradise or for fear of hellfire. The gnostic, however, serves Him for His own sake, and seeks naught save God Himself. He desires neither houri nor paradisiac fruit, and fears not hellfire. For the overwhelming fire of separation is likely to prove more painful than the fire which consumes the body. Indeed, the fire of separation is THE FIRE OF GOD KINDLED ROARING OVER THE HEARTS ³⁴³ The fire of Hell affects naught save the body but, in relation to the affliction of the heart, the torment of the body is scorned. Therefore it has been said:

The hottest fire of Hell is cooler than,
The flame of passion in the lover's heart³⁴⁴

One should not ignore this [phenomenon] of the hereafter as there exists a visible parallel in the temporal world. It has been observed that a man possessed by the ecstasy of love runs over fire and on the roots of reeds that injure his feet yet he feels it not due to the intensity of that which fills his heart. You can see, in combat, how fury overwhelms a man, so that he remains unaware of injuries sustained: The rage is a fire filling his heart. The Prophet has said: 'Rage is a portion of hellfire.'^o

The burning of the heart is more potent than the burning of the body. As you can see, the stronger nullifies sensitivity to the lesser. Death by fire and sword is merely due to the separation of two components connected in a union feasible in bodies. But that which separates the heart from its beloved, to whom it is joined in a union more perfect than that [found] in bodies, is far more painful. [This is obvious] if you are a man of heart and insight. Nor it is unlikely that one who has no heart will not grasp the intensity of this pain and will regard it lightly in comparison to the pain of the body.

If a youth were given the choice between the pain of doing without ball and mallet and the pain of missing the rank of a ruler, he would, by no means, be sensitive to the preclusion from power. Nor would he reckon that as painful. He would exclaim: '[Running] with the mallet on the playing field is dearer to me than occupying a thousand royal thrones.

Likewise, one, who is dominated by gluttony, if given the choice between pastry³⁴⁵ and sweets and a good action by which he would triumph over his enemies and delight his friends, surely would choose the pastry and sweets, as a result of the loss of that stimulus (ma'na) by which glory becomes desirable, and the presence of the faculty by which food becomes delightful. This applies to one who has been dominated by bestial and predatory traits, one in whom the angelic qualities have not appeared, those traits which tally with the delight exclusively in proximity to the Lord, and are grieved only by remoteness and concealment [from Him]. Just as taste resides only in the tongue and hear ing only in the ears, so this quality is only of the heart. And, just as one who is bereft of hearing and sight cannot appreciate the delight of melody nor the beauty of form and colour, so a man who has no heart cannot have this [spiritual] sensation. Not every man has a heart. Or else the Divine Word: SURELY IN THAT THERE IS A REMINDER TO HIM WHO POSSESSES A HEART,³⁴⁶ would not be true. In this verse God qualified one unmindful of the Koran as one who is bereft of the heart.

I do not mean, by the term 'heart', that which is encased by the ribs. Nay, I mean the conscience which is of the world of dominion. ⁴⁷ That flesh[, of the same name,] which is of the world of creation, is its throne, the chest [cavity] its seat and the other limbs are its [26] sphere and its realm. Both creation and dominion are the Lord's. Yet, that conscience about which God said: SAY, THE SPIRIT IS OF THE COMMAND OF MY LORD,³⁴ is the commander and king. For between the world of creation and that of dominion there is a certain relation,³⁴⁹ the world of dominion commanding the world of creation. It is that spiritual substance³⁵⁰ which, if it is sound, brings soundness to the rest of the body. One who perceives it, knows himself and one who knows himself knows his Lord. Then man can have the first inkling of the spiritual wisdom implied in the Prophet's statement that 'God created Adam in His image.'

God views with compassion those who attribute to Him the literal meaning of His expression and those who stray in the method of [allegorical] interpretation. If His compassion for the former is greater than for the latter, it is because compassion comes in accordance with the measure of the error, their error being greater even though they share in the common misfortune of being deprived of the truth. For the truth is the bounty of God.

He gives to whom He will, and God is of bounty abounding ist It is His wisdom for which He singles out whom He will³⁵² . . . AND WHOSO IS GIVEN THE WISDOM, HAS BEEN GIVEN MUCH GOOD ³⁵³

Let us return to the matter 'at hand. We went to all that length and dwelt extensively on a matter which is higher than the study of practical religion which we pursue in this book. It has become evident, then, that the degree of destruction is visited only on the ignorant deniers. As the evidence of this from God's book and the Tradition (sunna) of His Apostle is too extensive, we have not cited it.

The second level is that of the chastised. On it are those who are endowed with the basic faith but have failed in corresponding fidelity.

72

73

Indeed, the beginning of faith is monotheism (tawhid), that is, that one serves only God. But a person who pursues his own whim, takes his whim to be god; consequently he pays lip-service to being monotheist without, in truth, being one. However, the meaning of the profession, 'there is no god but God', is as the Koran states: SAY: "GOD". THEN LEAVE THEM ALONE, PLAYING THEIR GAME OF PLUNGING ³⁵⁴ That means: abandon completely everything save God.

The sense of the verse: THOSE WHO HAVE SAID 'OUR LORD IS GOD', THEN HAVE GONE STRAIGHT... ³⁵⁵ is: The straight path, following of which is the only means to full monotheism, is, like the bridge (sirat)³⁵⁶ in the description of the hereafter, thinner than a hair and sharper than [the blade] of a sword. No man can escape deviation from it, even in an easy matter, as he is yet not free of following his whim, even if it be in a trifling. That detracts from the fullness of monotheism according to the [degree] of deviation from the straight path. Such certainly necessitates a defect in the degree of proximity to God. With each [such] defect, two fires attend: the fire of separation resulting from that elusive fullness of faith, and the fire of hell as the Koran has described it.

Everyone who deviates from the straight path is punished twice in two respects. The severity or leniency, however, and the varying duration of that punishment is decided by two factors: the intensity of his faith and the degree of his pursuit of whim. Since man, in most cases, is not devoid of failing in.. one of the two respects, God said: NOT ONE OF YOU THERE IS, BUT HE SHALL GO DOWN TO IT: THAT FOR THY LORD IS A THING DECREED, DETERMINED. THEN WE SHALL DELIVER THOSE THAT WERE GODFEARING: AND THE EVIL DOERS WE SHALL LEAVE THERE, HOBBLING ON THEIR KNEES ³⁵⁷ The pious of old said, therefore: 'Our fear is caused by our being sure that we are destined for the fire, and we have doubts about [our] salvation.' When al-Hasan³⁵⁸ reported the above-mentioned tradition of the one who leaves hellfire after a thousand years crying, 'O Compassionate One! O Benefactor!', ° Hasan exclaimed: 'If only I could be that man.'

Some traditions indicate that the last to leave hellfire will do so after seven thousand years, and that the duration differs between an instant and seven thousand years, so that some pass over hellfire like a fleeting bolt of lightning, without any sojourn. Between the instant and the seven thousand years there are varying degrees of duration: a day; a week; a month; and so forth. Also, [the traditions indicate] a diversity in the intensity with the maximum limitless, and the minimum an accounting. [This is just] as [in the case] of the king who sometimes punishes, by rebuke, those who have fallen short in their works, then grants pardon; sometimes by flogging and at other times he inflicts a different sort punishment. A third difference beyond duration and intensity, pertains to chastisement; that being variety of type. For one is punished with mere confiscation of his property; another by loss of his property and the slaying of his children, and seizure of his women, chastisement of his kinsfolk, flogging, amputation of tongue, hand, [27] nose, ear and so forth. Such variations exist also in the chastisement of the hereafter. These are indicated in the trenchant propositions of the law [of Islam].

These are in accordance with the strength or weakness of faith and the greater or lesser quantity of good and evil deeds ³⁵⁹ The intensity of chastisement is according to the intensity and frequency of the evil deeds; while its quantity is linked to the quantity of evil. The variety of type is related to the variety of deeds. This has been disclosed to those who possess hearts, through Koran passages, illumined by faith. This is the meaning of the verse: THY LORD WRONGS NOT HIS SERVANTS ³⁶⁰ And again: TODAY EACH SOUL SHALL BE RECOMPENSED FOR THAT IT HAS EARNED ³⁶¹ Also:... AND THAT MAN HAS NAUGHT SAVE AS HE HAS LABOURED³⁶² And: ... WHOSO HAS DONE AN ATOM'S WEIGHT OF GOOD SHALL SEE IT. AND WHOSO HAS DONE AN ATOM'S WEIGHT OF EVIL SHALL SEE IT;³⁶³ and other such passages in the Scripture and Tradition as to reward and punishment being recompense for man's acts, all this injustice without iniquity. The trend is toward pardon and mercy inasmuch as our Prophet quoted God as saying: 'My mercy outweighs My wrath.'¹⁰ God said: AND IF IT BE A GOOD DEED HE WILL DOUBLE IT, AND GIVE FROM HIMSELF A MIGHTY WAGE.³⁶⁴ Thus these general points, therefore, pertaining to the relation of greater and lesser ranks to good and evil works are known through the decisive statements of revelation and the illumination of gnosis. As for the particulars, they can be known only as [probable] opinion relying on the literal sense of the traditions and the type of intuition drawing upon the lights of contemplative scrutiny.

We assert, then, that anyone who absorbed the principle of faith, avoids all major sins and fulfills all religious obligations - namely, the five pillars, - with only sporadic minor transgressions, his punishment will, it seems; be merely a reprimand. When he is brought to account, his good works outweigh his evil ones, inasmuch as traditions have it that the five prayers, Friday prayer, and the Ramadiin fast atone for that which [occurs] between them. Also, according to the Koran text, avoidance of major sin atones for minor ones. The minimum of atonement is that the punishment be averted though the accounting was not. Anyone in this position, with his scales heavy in the balance [with good deeds], shall, after the favourable balance is evident and the accounting disposed, inherit a pleasing life.³⁶⁵ How excellent is his joining the Companions of the Right Hand or the near stationed, and his entering the gardens of Eden or the Supreme Paradise!³⁶⁶

74

75

The same applies to the classes of faith. For faith is of two types: imitative, as is the faith of the masses who believe that they are told and persist therein; and the revelatory faith which is achieved through the enlarging of the breast by divine illumination until all reality is exposed as it is. It then becomes clear that everything originates and ends in God for naught is real save God, His attributes and works. It is the people of this class that are the near-stationed ones who abide in the Supreme Paradise. They enjoy the utmost degree of proximity to the heavenly host. They too, however, are of various categories. Some are more advanced, others less, the disparity dependent upon the differences in their knowledge of God. The gnostics' degrees of gnosis are innumerable inasmuch as fully fathoming God's glorious essence is impossible. The sea of gnosis has no coast and no bottom and, therefore, men plunge into it according to their strength and according to what they have been granted by God throughout the ages. The stations on the road to God are endless, and innumerable are the levels of those who travel God's path.

One who believes by imitation is if the Companions of the Right Hand but on a level lower than the near-stationed. The Companions of the Right Hand are further subdivided. The level of the highest among them approaches the lowest level of the near-stationed. This is the position of one who avoided all major sins and performed all religious obligations - namely, the five pillars, i.e., the verbal utterance of the profession of faith, prayer, alms, fast and pilgrimage. One who perpetrated one or more major sins or neglected some of Islam's pillars, if he truly repents before his time came due, joins those who sinned not. For he who repents is as one who has never sinned. A washed garment is as one which was never soiled.

If he died before repenting, it is a perilous matter, for he may die while persisting [in sin] and this may be the cause of wavering in his faith, and he may be assigned to a bad end. This is especially so when his faith was of a conformist kind. For imitation, even if resolute, is apt to disintegrate at the least doubt or distortion. [28] The insightful gnostic is less likely to be afraid for a bad end. Both of them, if they died in faith, would be chastised except that God may forgo any chastisement beyond rebuke at the accounting.

The duration of the punishment is commensurate with the duration of persistence in sin; its intensity with the ignominy of the major sins; the variety of type with the variety of evil works. At the termination of the period of punishment the tradition-bound dolts will abide in the levels of the Companions of the Right Hand while the gnostics of insight will abide in the highest heights.

It is related: 'The last to leave hellfire will be given such as this whole world (dunyd) tenfold.'¹⁰ Do not imagine that the intent is the calculation of the physical area, as one parasang compares to two parasangs or as ten compares to twenty. This would be ignorance of the way parables are coined. Rather, it is like the saying: 'One took from him a camel and gave him ten like it.' Or, 'the camel was worth ten dinars but someone gave him a hundred.'

If one understands the simile only in terms of weight surely, then, the hundred dinars, if placed on one balance of a scale, would not register a relation of one to ten with the camel on the other balance. Nay, it is a comparison of the meanings of bodies and spirits not of their individual existences. The camel is not wanted for its weight, length, breadth or area, but for its monetary worth. Its spirit is its monetary worth, and its body is its flesh and blood. One hundred dinars are equal to it tenfold on the spiritual balances, not on the bodily balances. This can be seen as true by anyone who knows the concept of monetary worth of gold and silver.

If one gave him, however, a jewel whose weight was a mithgiil and whole value was a hundred dinars, and said: 'I gave him the like of ten of it,' he would be correct. Only jewelers, however, would grasp his veracity. For the jeweler's spirit does not comprehend by mere eyesight but by a different sense beyond the eye. Therefore, a youth, especially a villager or bedouin, would deny the statement saying: 'This jewel is but a stone weighing a mithg5l'; the camel weighs a million mithgi ls; hence the man lied when he said, 'I gave him tenfold thereof.' In truth, however, it is the youth who is wrong but there is no way to prove it to him, until he be left to mature and become refined, or until he attain in his heart the illumination with which he may grasp the inner worth of gems and other valuables. Then only would the truth be revealed to him.

76

77

The gnostic is unable to make the tradition-bound man, lagging behind, understand how right is the Prophet in this comparison, as the Prophet says, according to traditions: 'Paradise is in the heavens.'^o The heavens are of this world. How, then, can this world [they say] hold ten of the like? This incapacity is like that of the adult who is unable to make the boy grasp the above-mentioned comparison. The same is true of explaining the matter to the nomad.

Just as one may pity the jeweler when he attempts to enlighten the bedouin and villager concerning the parable, so the gnostic may be pitied when he attempts to enlighten the dullwitted. It is for this reason that the Prophet, God bless him said: 'Have mercy on three: a learned man among the ignorant; the rich man who became poor and the mighty man who was humbled .^b

For this reason the prophets are pitied from among the people. Their tribulations, because of the people's lack of understanding, are a trial and test for them from God. Such tribulation is assigned them, by eternal pre-ordained decree. This is the meaning of the Prophet's words: 'Tribulation is assigned the prophets, then the saints, and then others rank by rank.'

Do not surmise that the tribulation is like that of Job, an affliction of the body. Indeed, Noah's trial was also great. He suffered from people who the more he called them to turn to God, the more just fled. There fore, when God's Apostle was troubled by the speech of some he said: 'God had compassion on my brother Moses. Indeed, he was troubled by more than this, yet he endured.'^d

Thus, the prophets are not free [29] of being afflicted by the unbelievers. Nor are the saints and the learned free of being afflicted by the ignorant. Therefore, the saints are seldom free of [various] types of harm and tribulation: by expulsion from the land, or their being denounced before the authorities, or by accusation of their unbelief and heresy. It is inevitable that the men of gnosis be viewed as unbelievers by the ignorant just as that he who substitutes a small gem for the large camel should be viewed, by the ignorant, as a squanderer and loser.

When you are aware of these points, trust the Prophet's statement: 'The last to leave hellfire will be given the likes of this world tenfold.' Beware lest you limit your belief to that which is perceived through the sense alone, and become a two-legged ass. For the ass shares with you the five senses; you, however, differ from the ass in a divine conscience which has been offered to the heavens, the earth and the mountains, but they refused to carry [the trust] and were afraid of it ³⁶⁷ Yet, understanding of that which is beyond the sensible world occurs only within the scope of that conscience which distinguishes you from the ass and the other animals. He who overlooks that, disregards and neglects it, and is content with the bestial level, does not transcend the [level] of sensual perceptions, is the one who destroys himself by wrecking his soul, forgetting it by ignoring it. BE NOT AS THOSE WHO FORGOT GOD, AND SO HE CAUSED THEM TO FORGET THEIR SOULS.³⁶⁸ Anyone who knows no more than is grasped through the five senses has forgotten God, inasmuch as His being cannot be encompassed, in this world, through the senses. But anyone who has forgotten God, is certainly made to forget his own soul, and is lowered to the animal level, and abandons the ascent to the higher horizon ³⁶⁹ He betrays the trust which God placed with him and bestowed upon him, is ungrateful of His blessings and is risking His rancor, nay his state is worse than that of the beast. For, the beast is redeemed by death.

But man has a trust which shall, certainly, be returned to its consignor. He is the source and end of the consignment. The trust is like the radiant sun, yet, it falls into this evanescent mold and sets in it. At the destruction of this mold this sun will rise from its setting place and return to its creator, either in eclipsing darkness or with brilliant radiance. The brilliant and radiant are not barred from the divine Presence. The darkened also returns to the Presence for God is the source and end of all; only that [the darkened soul] turns its head from the highest heights to the lowest depths. The Koran, therefore, states: IF THOU COULDST SEE THE GUILTY HANDING THEIR HEADS BEFORE THEIR LORD³¹⁰ It is clear, then, that they are, before their Lord, in confusion; their faces turned back and their heads lowered. Such is the divine rule for all to whom He has denied success and whom He has not guided on His path. We seek refuge in God from error and from descent to the station of the ignorant. Such is the fate of him who leaves hellfire and is given ten times or more the like of this world. But only a [true] monotheist will leave hellfire. By monotheism I do not refer to the verbal profession: 'there is no god but God'. The tongue is of the temporal world and avails only in the temporal world. [Such verbal profession] removes the sword from man's neck and repels thothands of plunderers from his wealth. [But] security of limb and property [extends only] the duration of life. But as limb and property do not remain, verbalization avails not. On the contrary, sincerity in monotheism avails, and its perfection is that man sees all things as being only of God. Its sign is that he does not become vexed at any creature in what befalls him, inasmuch as he sees not the means but the Prime Cause, as will be shown in the Book on the Reliance on God ³⁷¹

78

This monotheism is variegated. There are those whose monotheism is like mountains (jibdl); in others, it is only the weight of an ounce (mithgal); still others have only the measure of a mustard seed or grain. He who has in his heart a dinar's weight of faith, will be the first to leave hellfire. It is said in a tradition: 'Those with a dinar's weight of faith, get out of hellfire!' The last to leave is he in whose heart is only a grain of faith. The gamut of degrees between the dinar's weight and the grain [determines the order of] exit from hellfire in between the two extremes. The comparison between the ounce and the grain is, in terms of simile, as we have mentioned in the comparison between property assets and specie.

For the most part, what leads monotheists into hellfire is injustices toward men, for the account of men is that which will not be neglected. As for the remainder of evil deeds, they may be quickly pardoned and atoned. As a tradition has it: Man [30] is brought before God. The man has good deeds [to his credit] the likes of mountains; if they be admitted he is of the people of Paradise. Then the examiners of interpersonal injustices rise: he may have abused someone's dignity, misappropriated someone's property, assaulted someone. These deeds are subtracted³⁷² from his good deeds until none remain. Then the angels declare: 'O Lord, this man's good deeds are gone and many claims against him remain.' God proclaims: 'Heap their grievances upon his account, and make out his ticket to hellfire.' Just as he is destroyed by the evil done to another, by way of retribution, so the wronged one is saved by the good deed of the evil-doer who committed the injustice against him. For, it is transferred to him in exchange for the wrong he suffered at the other's hand.

It has been related of Ibn al-Jala³⁷³ that one of his brethren slandered him, then, requested his forgiveness. He said: 'I cannot. My ledger has no good in it which is better than this. How, then, can I erase it.' He and others said: 'My brethren's transgressions are of my good deeds with which I intend to adorn my ledger.'

It is this we desired to mention of the variation of man's degrees of happiness and misery in the hereafter.

All this is judgement of external causes, like the decision of the doctor about the patient, that he will certainly die and no treatment will avail, or, about another patient, that his malady is slight and his cure easy. Indeed, that notion is correct in most instances. Yet, sometimes, unbe knownst to the physician, the soul's soundness may return to man close to death. Sometimes, however, the end comes unexpectedly to one who suffers from a light malady. These are God's mysteries, concealed in the living and in the obscurity of causes determined with a certain measure of the Prime Cause, for it is not given to human power to fathom them.

79

Likewise, salvation and bliss in the hereafter have secret causes beyond the power of human comprehension. That concealed cause leading to redemption is termed pardon and favour, and that leading to destruction is termed wrath and vengeance. Behind this mystery is the eternal divine volition which no creature can comprehend. Thus we must admit the pardon of the rebellious, even if his apparent evil is great, and the wrath upon the obedient, even if his apparent acts of obedience are many.

Indeed, we rely on piety, which is in the heart and it [i.e., the heart] is too obscure to be grasped by its possessor, the more so by another. It has already, however, been revealed to those possessed of hearts that forgiveness comes to man only through a secret reason which accounts for it. Wrath also comes only because of a hidden cause which draws man away from God. If not for that, pardon and wrath would not be recompense for acts and qualities. Were it not recompense it would be unjust, and, if it were unjust, the verses: THY LORD

WRONGS NOT HIS SERVANTS;³⁷⁴ and, SURELY GOD SHALL NOT WRONG SO MUCH AS THE WEIGHT OF A MOTE,³⁷⁵ would not be correct. Yet all of this is true.

... AND THAT A MAN SHALL HAVE TO HIS ACCOUNT ONLY AS HE HAS LABOURED, AND THAT HIS LABOURING SHALL SURELY BE SEEN ³⁷⁶ EVERY SOUL SHALL BE PLEDGED FOR WHAT IT HAS EARNED ³⁷⁷ WHEN THEY SWERVED, GOD CAUSED THEIR HEARTS TO SWERVE ³⁷⁸ And, when they change what is in themselves, God changes that which is in them. This fulfills the verse, GOD CHANGES NOT WHAT IS IN A PEOPLE, UNTIL THEY CHANGE WHAT IS IN THEMSELVES.³⁷⁹ All this has been revealed to possessors of heart in a manner clearer than visible evidence, inasmuch as eyesight can err, as when, at times, it perceives a distant object as near and a large one as small. But the evidence of the heart cannot err. The point, however, is the opening of the eyesight of the heart and not to imagine falsity in the heart after this development. This is alluded to in the verse, THE HEART LIES NOT OF WHAT HE SAW³⁸⁰

The third level is that of the redeemed. By redemption I mean security only, without felicity or bliss. They are people who have neither rendered service to be rewarded, not have they failed [so as] to deserve punishment. It seems that this is the state of the insane, the young of the unbelievers, the feeble-minded and those to whom the call to God has not reached due to geographical isolation. They live in ignorance without perception. Their portion is neither knowledge nor unbelief, neither obedience nor rebellion. There is no means that can bring them close to God nor any offence which can turn them away from God. They are not of the people of paradise nor of the people of hellfire. Rather, they are stationed midway between the two. The revelation terms this A 'rdf (the crest) ³⁸¹ The existence of some people in this stage is known with certainty from Koran verses, traditions and the lights [31] of various considerations. Essentially, the judgement,³⁸² for example, that the youth are in this category, is presumed and not known with certainty. Learning about it truly belongs to the sphere of prophecy, and it is unlikely that [men in] the grade of the saints and the scholars would rise to it.

80

81

The traditions as regards the youth are also contradictory. When one of the youths died, 'A'isha³⁸³ said: 'A bird of the birds of Paradise.' But God's Apostle denied this saying: 'How do you know?'b Ambiguity and obscurity, therefore, prevail about this placement.

The fourth level is that of the blessed ³⁸⁴ They are the gnostics, as distinct from the mere tradition-bound. They are the successful, station near [God]. The tradition-bound, even if he attains, on the whole, a station in Paradise, is of the Companions of the Right Hand but these are the near-stationed, and what they experience is beyond [the possibility of] explanation.. The extent of possible explanation is what is detailed in the Koran. There can be no explanation beyond God's. That which cannot be expressed in this world is summed up in the verse: NO SOUL KNOWS WHAT COMFORT IS LAID UP FOR THEM SECRETLY,³⁸⁵ and, further, in the tradition: 'I have prepared for my righteous servants that which no eye has seen, which no ear has heard, and which has not occurred to the human mind.'

The desire of the gnostics is that state which could not conceivably have occurred to the human mind in this world. As for the houri, palaces, fruit, milk, honey, wine, and jewelry of Paradise, the gnostics do not covet them. Moreover, if these were given to them, they would not be content. They seek only the rapture of gazing at God's countenance. This is the utmost of felicities and the ultimate delight. That is why, when Rabi'a al-'Adawiya³⁸⁶ was asked: 'What do you long for in Paradise?', she answered, 'first the Neighbour and then the House.'³⁸⁷ For these are people whose preoccupation with the love of the Master deflects them from taking interest in the house and its embellishment, indeed in anything other than He, even in themselves. They are like the lover who is blindly devoted to his Beloved, whose mind is riveted to gazing at His countenance and thinking of Him. He is in the state of immersion, he is neglectful of himself, not aware of what affects his body. This state is termed the obliteration of self. That means that he becomes immersed in another, and all his concerns become one concern, namely his Beloved. There remains no room in him for anything but his beloved until he pays no attention to either himself or others. This is the state through which, in the hereafter, one attains such delight as is as inconceivable [32] in this world, in anyone's mind, as it cannot be imagined that one deaf and blind would form the notion of colour and melody unless the bar was lifted from (the impairment of) his faculties of hearing and sight. At that point he might understand his condition and know, assuredly, that earlier it was impossible for him to have formed such notions. This life (dunyā) is a veil to realization, and with its removal the hidden is revealed. At that point, the flavour of the good life is perceived. SURELY THE LAST ABODE IS LIFE, DID THEY BUT KNOW.³⁸⁸

This should suffice in explication of the distribution of degrees [in the hereafter] according to good works.

May God, in His benevolence, grant success.
How Minor Sins are increased

There are circumstances by which minor sins are magnified. Among them are persistence and assiduity. That is why they say: A sin persisted in cannot be minor, and a sin followed by the quest for forgiveness, cannot be major. A major sin can go by and, if it can be imagined that it is not followed by the like, then pardon for such is more likely than for a minor sin in which man persists. A model for this is drops of water falling, continuously, upon a stone until they wear it away. The same amount of water, poured onto the stone all at once, would not produce a like effect. That is why the Apostle of God said: 'best are works that are continuous even if &w.'^o

Matters are clarified through their opposites. If the useful work is the constant, even if it be minor, then the intermittent though numerous works are of little advantage in the illumination and purification of the heart. Likewise, a few evil deeds, if they persist, have great influence in corrupting the heart. Yet, it is hardly imaginable that man storms for the major sin suddenly without antecedents and accessories from the category of minor sins. Rarely does the adulterer fornicate without enticement and plotting. Rarely, also, does one kill abruptly without previous rancor and enmity. Thus every major sin involves previous and dependent minor ones. If we could imagine a major sin independent and sudden, without recurrence, perhaps pardon of it would be more likely than of a minor sin in which a man persists throughout his life.

82

83

Another [source of augmenting sin] is to consider sin minute. Indeed, whenever man himself deems the sin as major, it becomes, in God's view, minor, because the apprehension of its magnitude stems from the heart's aversion to it and loathing of it. This aversion to it restrains the intensity of its influence upon the heart. [Conversely,] considering a sin insignificant stems from habitude which makes for an intense influence on the heart. The heart must be illumined through acts of obedience, and its blackening through evil deeds must be avoided. It, therefore, will not be censured for what befalls it inadvertently. Indeed, the heart is not impressed by what occurs inadvertently. A tradition has it: 'The believer considers his sin a mountain, suspended above him, and fears it may fall upon him; the hypocrite considers his sin a fly which passed by his nose, and is swatted away.'^o Somebody has said that the sin which is not forgiven is man's saying: 'Were all my sins such as this.'

The sin waxes great in the heart of the believer because of his awareness of God's majesty, and when he contemplates the greatness of Him against whom he rebelled, he sees a minor sin as major. God has revealed to one of His prophets: 'Look not at the insignificance of the gift but, rather, at the greatness of the giver; look not at the smallness of the offense, look rather at the majesty of Him whom you confront with it.' In this sense a gnostic has said: 'There is no minor sin; every offense is major.'

Likewise, a Companion said to the 'Followers': 'Surely you do things which, while in your eyes they are finer than a hair, we, in the time of God's Apostle, would reckon as among the mortal sins.' Since the Companions' perception of God's majesty was more sterling, they considered the minor sins, with regard to God's majesty, as major sins. For the same reason what is a minor sin in the case of an ignoramus, becomes a major sin in the case of a learned man. Matters which are disregarded in the case of a common person, are not so disregarded in the case of an enlightened one, for sin and offense grow in proportion to the perception of the transgressor.

Another cause of the minor sin turning great is delighting in the minor sin, taking pride in it, considering its realization as pleasure, and dis regard of its being the cause of misery. The more the sweetness of the minor sin overcomes a man, the more a minor sin becomes major, and its impact in blackening the heart is growing, so that there are even sinners who pride themselves on their sins and boast of them, because of the intensity of their joy at having yielded to them. [33] As if saying: 'Have you not seen how I rent his dignity?' A disputant says: 'Have you now seen how I exposed him, how I brought out his shortcomings to the point of shame, how I scorned him and how I duped him?' A trader says: 'Have you not seen how I sold him the spurious, how I deceived him, how I cheated him of his wealth and how I made a fool of him?' By deeds such as these are minor sins magnified. But sins are destructive. When man is led to them, and Satan has succeeded in inducing him to act that way, then he should be in trouble and regret brought on by the triumph of the Enemy over him and his own remoteness from God.

If a sick person rejoices in the destruction of the vessel containing his medication, just to escape the discomfort pursuant to its consumption, he cannot be expected to be cured.

What also increases a minor sin is that man disdains God's protection of him, His forbearance, and the respite He granted. Man does not grasp that he is given respite out of detestation, so that the offense might increase. He thinks that his ability to sin is a sign of God's concern for him. This is because of his feeling secure from God's devising, and his ignorance of the pitfalls of delusion about God. As it says, AND THEY SAY WITHIN THEMSELVES, 'WHY DOES GOD NOT CHASTISE US FOR WHAT WE SAY?' SUFFICIENT FOR THEM SHALL BE GEHENNA, AT WHICH THEY SHALL BE ROASTED - A WRETCHED LOT.³⁸⁹ Another case: that he commit a sin and expose it by mentioning it after its commission or committing it in another's presence.

Indeed, such is an offense against the protection God lowers upon him and an incitement of the craving for evil in him whom he told of his sin or whom he made witness his action. Two offenses join into his offense to harden it. If encouraging another person to commit that sin, inducing him and involving him, be added it goes into a fourth crime, and it becomes a monstrous affair.

It is recorded in a tradition: 'All men are excused except the declarers. One of them passes the night in sin, and God conceals it, yet he arises and removes divine concealment, and speaks of his sin.'⁹⁰ This is because it is of God's attributes and favours that he reveals the good deed, conceals the unsightly and does not rip the protective veil. But exposure. [by man] is a repudiation of this grace.

84

Somebody said: 'Do not sin, but if you cannot avoid sin, never awaken such a desire in another, for then you will have sinned twice.' That is why the Koran states: THE HYPOCRITES, THE MEN AND THE WOMEN, ARE AS ONE ANOTHER: THEY BID TO DISHONOUR AND FORBID HONOUR³⁹⁰ An early authority said: 'The gravest violation of a man's reputation is to assist him in committing a sin, and then make him consider it slight.'

Another way of increasing a sin: the sinner be a learned doctor with a following. If his sin is displayed, it increases, e.g., the scholar's donning of silk, riding in golden carriages, taking of doubtful money from rulers, frequenting the company of rulers, encouraging them by withholding report [of their sins], reckless slandering, intemperance in controversy, his design being scorn, and occupying himself with such learning as leads only to glory, e.g., the art of controversy and argumentation. For these are sins in which the doctor will have a following. He dies but his evil remains spreading in the world indefinitely. Blessed is he whose sins die with him. A tradition says: 'He who enacts an evil practice bears its burden as well as that of anybody practicing it, his responsibility not reduced at all.'^a

God has said: AND WE WRITE DOWN WHAT THEY HAVE FORWARDED AND WHAT THEY HAVE LEFT BEHIND ³⁹¹ What 'is left behind' refers to those acts which continue after the expiration of the deed and the doer.

Ibn 'Abbiis³⁹² said: 'Woe to the scholar from his followers; he slips but goes right yet people carry the error far away.' Somebody said: 'The error of the learned doctor is like a shipwreck, it sinks and its passengers drown.'

In the 'Isra'iliyat³⁹³ [it occurs]: 'There was a scholar who misguided people into unlawful innovation, then was overtaken by repentance and acted toward correction over a lifetime. God then revealed to their prophet: "Say to him: 'If your sin were only in that which is between Me and thee, I would surely forgive it. However, what about those of My servants thou hast misled and hast plunged into hellfire?' " ' "

Thus it becomes clear that the position of learned doctors is grave. They have two obligations; first abandonment of sin and, secondly, concealment of it. Just as their responsibility for sins is compounded, so is their recompense for good deeds emulated by their following.

If the doctor abandons [the search for] affectation and the affection for the mundane world; is satisfied with little thereof, as well as with little food and apparel against the elements; and is followed in this by leading scholars and the rank and file, he will enjoy the likes of their reward. If, however, he leans toward imitating him, they will be able to attain success only in the service of rulers [34] and the gathering of scraps from unlawful wealth. For all this he will be responsible. Thus the behaviour of the scholars is compounded manyfold, be it in merit or demerit, in gain or loss.

85

So much for the details of the sins for which repentance is effected.

THE THIRD PILLAR: ON THE FULLNESS, REQUISITES AND PERMANENCE OF REPENTANCE

We have already mentioned that repentance consists of regret which leads to determination and resolution. This regret is itself caused by knowledge that the offenses are a barrier between man and his Beloved. Each of these - knowledge, regret and determination - has permanence and fullness. Its fullness has a mark, and its permanence has requisites, all to be clarified.

As for knowledge, examination of it is a study of the cause of repentance; its strengthening and its perfection by factors such as the company of the virtuous, attendance of the dhikrs,³⁹⁴ questioning about the fatal impact of transgressions and about the punishment they may bring on in this world. But cleaving to a shaykh is more useful than all this; indeed it is the efficacious remedy. It will be discussed later on ³⁹⁵

As for regret, it is the heartache when man discerns that the Beloved has been missed. It is marked by long grief and sorrow, tears flowing and much weeping³⁹⁶

One who becomes aware of torment afflicting his child or one of his dear ones, his grief and weeping are protracted. And, who is dearer to a person than himself, what punishment is severer than hellfire, what is more indicative of the descent of punishment than sins, and [finally,] what announcer is more reliable than God and His Apostle?

If a man was told by one called physician that his child would not recover from his illness and would die thereof, surely his grief would be aroused. Yet, his child is not dearer than himself, nor is the physician more knowledgeable or more reliable than God and His Apostle, death not more severe than hellfire and sickness not more indicative of death than sins are of God's wrath and the risk of hellfire.

The stronger the anguish of regret, the more likely is the expiation of sin through it. The sign of the sincerity of regret is the mellowness of the heart and the profusion of tears. It is said in a tradition: 'Sit with the contrite, for their hearts are the most mellow.¹⁰ A sign thereof is that instead of the sweetness of those sins, their bitterness seizes man's heart, and inclination turns into loathing, desire into aversion.

87

86

It is stated in the 'Isra'ilyat that Almighty God said to one of His prophets who had asked that the repentance of a certain man be accepted after he had strived in vain for years in worship: 'By My power and majesty, if the hosts of heaven and earth interceded, I would still not accept his repentance, for the sweetness of that sin, of which he repents, yet lurks in his heart.'

You might say:

Sins by nature are agreeable acts. How, then, can one find bitterness in them?

One who partakes of honey containing a poison, and does not discover it by taste, and relishes it, but afterwards falls ill, his illness and its pain progress, his hair falls out and his limbs are left paralyzed, - should honey containing a like substance, be set before him, even if he is in an extreme state of hunger and urge for sweetness, would his soul shun such honey or not? If you answer negatively, such answer would be a denial of the evident and of experience.

Rather, it is possible that even uncontaminated honey would be avoided because of its similarity to the other. That is how the penitent may have the sensation of the bitterness of sin. This is brought on by his knowledge that the taste of every sin may be the taste of honey yet its effect is that of poison. Repentance is not sincere or true without such belief. As such belief is rare, repentance and penitence are rare. You see only such as turn away from God, think lightly of sins, and persist in them.

This is a requisite for the fullness of remorse, and must be constant unto death.

Man must find such bitterness in all sins, even if he has never committed them before, just as one who consumed poison contained in honey feels aversion to fresh water as soon as he learns that it contains a similar poison, since the harm was not from the honey but rather from what it contained. Likewise, the damage that afflicts the penitent from his theft or fornication does not stem from the nature of the act itself but rather from its being a rebellion against God's command. This applies to every sin.

As for the resolution which emerges therefrom, it is the will to correction and it has a connection with the present. It entails renouncing anything prohibited which he practiced, and the fulfillment of every obli gation which faces him in the present. This has a connection with the past, namely correction of what has preceded; and a connection with the future, namely continued obedience and permanent renunciation of sin unto death.

The requisite of the sincerity of repentance, as far as the past is concerned, is that man should turn his thought back to the first day when he came of age or attained virility, and scrutinize his past [351 life, year by year, month by month, day by day and moment by moment. He should review, in what acts of obedience he was remiss and to which sins he yielded.

If he missed a prayer or performed it while wearing an impure garment or not with the proper intent because he was unaware that the intention is a requisite of prayer, he should perform it in full. If he has doubts as to the number of prayers missed, computing from the period of his attaining majority, subtracting the number of prayers which he feels sure he had performed, he should perform the remainder. He may use common sense, and he will attain the right figure by way of inquiry and careful reckoning.

As for fasting, if he had neglected it during a journey, if he broke the fast intentionally or forgot the proper intention at night and did not make it up, he should, after most careful computation, busy himself with making it up.

As for alms, he should compute his total wealth and the number of years that elapsed since he acquired it. (The computation is not made from the time of his attaining majority, for alms are due even on the property of a youth.) He then discharges that which he feels he probably owes. Further, if he discharged it in a manner inconsistent with his rite, as not having disbursed to all the eight categories or discharged an alternate³⁹⁷ while he is of the Shaf'i rite,³⁹⁸ he should execute all that; otherwise it is not fully satisfactory. The computation of alms and the knowledge of this matter is protracted, and requires lucid consideration: He may have to consult the jurists on how to settle the matter.

As for the pilgrimage, if one had been able, over the years, but his departure did not come to pass, and presently he has become destitute, he still should go on the pilgrimage. If, considering his destitution, he is unable, he must acquire, by licit means, enough for provisions. If he has no means of acquisition nor means, he should request people to grant him from the zakat or charitable funds, the necessary sum for the pilgrimage. If he dies before performing the pilgrimage, he dies in transgression. The Prophet said: 'One who dies without having made the say:

I

pilgrimage, might as well die a Jew or a Christian.¹⁰ Accidental inability succeeding a state of capacity does not cancel man's obligation of pilgrimage.

Such is the way for a man to examine acts of obedience and to correct them.

As for sins, he should trace his hearing, eyesight, tongue, stomach, hand, foot, pudendum and the rest of him limbs, from the beginning of his majority, then look through all his days and hours and detail to himself a record of his transgressions until they all are established, the minor and the major, and he should sift them. Some of them are between God and himself, i.e., do not entail injustice to man. This includes such acts as gazing at a woman unlawful to the man, sitting in a mosque despite a major ritual impurity, touching a Koran before performing an ablution, entertaining a heresy, drinking wine, listening to entertainment, etc., all unconnected with harm to another person.

Repentance of these comes through remorse and contrition, also by reckoning their measure as regards magnitude and duration, and seeking for each of these sins a corresponding good deed. He performs good deeds in proportion to the measure of the transgressions relying on the Prophet's saying: 'Fear God wherever you be and follow an evil deed with a good one to wipe it out.'^b God, moreover, has said: ... SURELY THE GOOD DEEDS WILL DRIVE AWAY THE EVIL DEEDS⁹⁹

Listening to entertainments is atoned by listening to the recitation of the Koran and dhikr sessions. Sitting in a mosque in an impure state is atoned by retreat at a mosque for engaging in worship. Touching the Koran while unclean is atoned by deference to the Koran, extensive reading from it, kissing it often, and⁴⁰⁰ by making a copy of the Book and making it an endowment. The consumption of wine is atoned by charitable donation of a licit beverage which is better and liked by him.

It is impossible to enumerate all the transgressions. The object, however, is treading the opposite path. Illness is cured by its opposite. Every stain, which arose upon the heart through transgression can be erased only by an illumination raised upon it through an opposite good deed. These opposites are proportionate to one another. Therefore, each evil should be expunged with a good of its own kind but opposite in effect. White is cancelled by black, not by heat or cold. This classification and verification are subtleties toward expunging transgression. Expectation is so justified, trust [36] so great that one should not persist in one variety of worship, even though this too is effective in expunging sin.

Such is the rule concerning sins of man towards God. That a thing is atoned by its opposite is indicated by [the Tradition] that the love of the mundane is the beginning of all error, and that the effect, in the heart, of the pursuit of the mundane is delight in it and craving for it. Since faced with anxieties and worries the heart shuns the world, certainly any hurt which befalls the Muslim and draws his heart away from the mundane, will serve as an atonement.

The Prophet said: 'There are sins for which only anxieties atone.'¹⁰ And, according to another version, 'only the anxiety in the search of a livelihood.' A tradition of 'A'isha:⁴⁰¹ 'When man's sins multiply and he has no works by which to atone for them, God brings upon him anxieties, that should become atonement for his sins.'^b It is said that the anxiety which enters the heart, while man is unaware, is the strain of sins, and the worry about them, the feelings of the heart at the eve of Reckoning and the terror of the day of Resurrection.

You might say:

Man worries mostly about his wealth, children and status. This is [in itself] an error. How, then, will it be an atonement?

Know then that love for these is an error, and deprivation of these is an atonement. If man savoured it, the error set in. It has been related that Gabriel entered unto Joseph in the prison. - 'How was my poor father when you left him?' - 'He grieved for you with the sorrow of a hundred bereaved mothers.' - 'What has he, then, with God?' - 'The reward of a hundred martyrs.'

Thus, anxieties also atone for sins against God. This is the rule concerning sins against God.

As for injustices towards one's fellow-men, they too include felony and transgression of God's due. For God has also forbidden the wronging of one's fellow. The correction of such, insofar as they pertain to God's due, is achieved through remorse, contrition, renunciation of similar acts in the future, and the performance of good deeds counted as opposites of the sins. The penitent will requite with benevolence toward men for the hurt he may have caused them.

Illegal seizure of their property he will atone by charitable works from his lawfully held property. Degrading their dignity by slander and vilification will be atoned through praise for co-religionists, telling people of what the penitent knows of the good qualities of one's fellow etc. The taking of life is atoned by manumission of slaves. For this is like giving life, since the slave is lost to himself, and exists only for his master.

Manumission, therefore, is a creation, the maximum of creation man is capable of. The destruction [of life] is countered by the creation [of life]. By this you learn that what we have discussed of following the path of opposites in atonement and annulment, is attested to in the Law, as the atonement for slaying is the manumission of slaves.⁴⁰² But, even if he did all that, it would not be sufficient so long as he has not turned away from injustice to men, be it against life, or property, or dignity, or heart, I mean sheer hurt.

As for matters of life, if a man happened to slay by error, then his repentance is by compensation, through conceding the blood money, either from him or his clan, and its reaching the entitled party. Such is his responsibility until the delivery has been executed. If the murder was committed intentionally, and retaliation was due, then repentance is through [being ready to suffer] retaliation. If he was not identified, he must reveal himself to the avenger who will decide about his life: [the avenger] may forgive him or kill him. Only by such means is the killer's responsibility fulfilled. Concealment is not permitted.

This is not like his having fornicating, drunk wine, stolen, robbed or had part in an illicit affair for which legal punishment under the divine law had been stipulated, for, these cases do not require that the penitent publicly compromise himself, disclose himself or seek, from the ruler, the application of the sacred law. Rather, he should avail himself of God's protection, and carry out God's declared punishment upon himself by various sorts of effort and chastisement. Pardon, in the case of sins toward God alone, is nigh unto the contrite penitents.

If, however, he submits his case to the authorities and the prescribed punishment is imposed, he did his duty; his repentance is sound and accepted by God. This is attested to by what is related of Ma'iz b. Malik, who came to the Prophet and said: 'O Apostle of God, I have stained my soul and fornicated, and I desire that you cleanse me!' The Prophet then turned him away. The next day Mil'iz approached the Prophet: 'O Apostle of God, I have fornicated!' Again the Prophet turned him away. When MA'iz came the third time, the Prophet took up his case, a pit was dug for Ma'iz, [37] then the Prophet gave the order, the man was stoned. People, in this matter, were of two opinions. Some said: 'He perished as his crime engulfed him.' Others said: 'No repentance is more sincere than his.' But the Apostle of God said: 'His repentance surely would, if divided, suffice for a whole people.'¹⁰

A woman of the Ghamid clan came and said: 'O Apostle of God, I have committed adultery, cleanse me!' The Prophet turned her away.

Then, on the morrow, she said: 'O Apostle of God, why do you turn me away? Do you reject me as you did Ma'iz? By God, I am pregnant!' The Prophet said: 'As for now, go away until you bear the child.' When she gave birth she came with an infant boy wrapped in a tatter and said: 'Here, this is the child I bore.' 'Go away and nurse him until he is weaned.' Then, when she weaned him she came with the infant, and in his hand was a piece of bread. 'O Prophet of God, I have weaned him and he has already tasted food.' The child was given over to a man from among the Muslims. The Prophet gave command, she was buried unto the chest, and stoned. Khiilid b. al-Walid⁴⁰³ approached with a stone and cast it upon her head. The blood splashed upon his face and he cursed her. The Apostle of God heard him reviling her, and said:

'Easy, Khalid, by Him in whose hand my soul is, she has certainly repented in such a fashion that if the tax collector repented like her, he would be forgiven.' After which he issued instructions [for the matter's disposition], prayed for her and she was buried

As for retaliation and the punishment of false accusation, the one responsible must expiate his guilt before the one in the right. If the subject is property grasped through unlawful seizure, treachery, or swindle in business matters by means of fraud, such as sale of spurious goods, concealing a defect in the goods sold, undercutting a workman's wage or withholding his wages, all this requires investigation, not from the limit of a man's maturity but from his earliest c, ys. That which is due from a youth's property, the youth, upon his attaining majority, must pay if the trustee failed to do so. If he does not do this, he becomes a transgressor liable for it. For the youth and the adult are equal as regards monetary claims.

Let man, then, be careful of the smallest sums from the first day of his life until the day of his repentance, before he is held responsible on the Day of Judgement. Let him examine before he is examined. One who is not careful of this world, his accounting is protracted in the next.

If his total obligation is, most plausibly and with all possible effort, summed up, let him write it down. Let him, also, record the names of the wronged, one by one, and travel around the world seeking them, to expiate his guilt before them or give them satisfaction. Such repentance is hard on the sinners and the merchants, as they are unable to seek out all their business contacts or the heirs of these. Each one, however, must do as much as is within his power. If he is unable, there remains for him only the path of a profusion of good works that, on the Day of Resurrection, will prove abundant, so that they will be taken and placed on the scales of the wronged claimants. The abundance of his good deeds, however, is measured against his wrongdoings. But if his good works do not counterbalance them, he will be saddled with some evils of the wronged claimants, so that he will perish by the evil of others.

92

93

Such is the path, for every penitent, of repelling the claims of the wronged. This necessitates the investment of a lifetime in good deeds, commensurate with the duration of unjust behaviour. How is this possible when it involves an unknown quantity? And perhaps the end is near? Time being limited, he must be more energetic in accumulating good deeds than he was in gathering sin over extended time. Such is the rule concerning injustices upon his conscience.

As for his actual possessions, let him return to the rightful owner that which is known to belong to that owner. Property, whose rightful owner is not known, should be distributed charitably. If lawful possessions become mixed up with unlawful ones, he must do his best to learn the amount of the illicit property, and distribute charity in that amount, as has been specified earlier in the Book of the Lawful and the Unlawful 404

As for such verbal offense against the heart, as having tormented people or defamed them,⁴⁰⁵ he must seek out everyone who suffered from his tongue or whose heart be hurt by his actions, and seek to expiate his sins with each, one by one. If one has died or disappeared, that matter is forfeit, and correction is possible only through augmenting good deeds to be accepted as substitutes at Judgement. If he finds a claimant who releases his guilt in good faith, then that is his atonement. The penitent must put his offense and opposition before the claimant, [38] for ambiguous pardon is insufficient⁴⁰⁶ Perhaps, if [the wronged party] were to know [all] that, and the magnitude of the offense against him, he would not be inclined to forgiveness, and would store [the violation] until Judgement Day, subtracting it then from the penitent's good deeds or loading it upon his evil record. If the penitent's offense against others includes anything that, were it mentioned or made known, would hurt the wronged person, such as the penitent's fornicating with the wronged person's slave girl or relative, or verbal reference by the penitent to some secret failings, the pain may be increasing however the penitent sought to induce him. Then the penitent's path in search of pardon, is blocked. There remains, then, naught save to seek release from his guilt. Still a guilt will remain. Let him seek to compensate for it through good deeds as in the case of the injustices against those now dead or missing.

[Injurious] remark and characterization, again, is a new evil from which expiation must be sought. Whenever the penitent mentions his offense and announces it to the aggrieved, yet [the latter's] soul does not permit expiation, the penitent's guilt remains. Such is the right of the aggrieved. The penitent must, therefore, subtly win him over, act in his interests, and show love and solicitude such as would take sway over his heart. Indeed, man yields to⁴⁰⁷ beneficence. Everyone who feels aversion to an evil may be swayed by a good deed. When [the aggrieved man's] heart recovers, through the abundance of [the sinner's] affection and solicitude, he will permit himself pardon. If he persist in refusal, the sinner's solicitude and pleas are counted among his good deeds which, at Judgement, will possibly make good for his offense. Let his effort at gladdening the other's heart through tenderness be as great as it was in inflicting harm, or surpass it. At Judgement, this will be taken as his compensation, according to the divine judgement. This is similar to one who, in this world, has damaged property, then offered the equivalent [in reparation], but the owner declined to accept it or absolve him, and the Judge then ordered the owner to accept whether he wanted to or not. That is how God will decree on the Day of Judgement.

In both Sahihs⁴⁰⁸ it is related, in the name of 'Abu Sa'id al-Khudri,⁴⁰⁹ that the Prophet said: "There was, in the past, a man who had killed ninety-nine persons. He inquired after the wisest man upon the earth, and was directed to a monk. He came to the monk and asked: 'One has killed ninety-nine people, is there [a possibility] of repentance for him?' 'No.' The man then killed the monk, completing, thereby, the number of his victims - a hundred. Then he again sought the wisest man in the land, was directed to a learned man, to whom he said: 'One has killed a hundred men, is there repentance for him?' 'Yes,' was the reply, 'who prevents him from repenting? Go to such and such a land, where people⁴¹⁰ serve God, worship with them, and do not return to your land, for it is an evil land.' He set out on the road but midway death overtook him. Then the angels of mercy argued over him with the angels of chastisement. The angels of mercy said: 'He came as a penitent, in his heart directed toward God.' 'He has never done any good,' retorted the angels of chastisement. An angel, in human form, approached, and they appointed him to judge between them. He said: 'Measure the distance to the two lands; he belongs to the one which is nearer.' They measured, and found him nearer the land he sought. So the angels of mercy seized hold of him.¹⁰ According to another version, 'he was closer to the righteous city by a span of the hand, so he became one of it.' In yet another, 'God urged this side to move away and the other side to draw near, then said: Measure what is between them. They found the man closer to the one by a span; he was forgiven.'

94

95

From this you may learn that there is no salvation except through the preponderance of good deeds and even to an atom's measure. The penitent must show an abundance of good deeds. Such is the rule of intent as far as the past is concerned.

As to the determination linked to the future, it consists of man giving a firm undertaking to God, and contracting with Him a firm covenant not to repeat such sins nor their like. This is like the man who, in his sickness, knows that a fruit, for example, will cause him harm. He resolves, with determination, that he will not partake of the fruit so long as he remains ill. This resolution is immediately imperative, even though it can be imagined that craving will overcome him next. One is not, however, a penitent so long as he has not firmed up the resolution in the present. It is inconceivable that a penitent should succeed therein, at the start, except by means of solitude, silence, reducing food and sleep to a minimum, and sticking to lawful nourishment.

If he has lawfully inherited wealth, or a craft by which he can acquire a sufficient amount, let him be content with it. [39] The beginning of all sin is the consumption of the forbidden. How can one be penitent while persisting therein, not content with the lawful and abstinence from the doubtful, unable to give up the cravings for food and raiment? Someone said: 'He who is sincere in giving up desire and conquered himself for God's sake seven times, is no longer afflicted by that desire.' Another said: 'He who has repented from sin and kept to the straight seven years, will never return to it.' The penitent, if he is not learned, should learn what is incumbent upon him in the future and what is forbidden, so that he be able to cleave to uprightness.

Unless man chooses solitude his uprightness is incomplete, even though he may have renounced some sins. Such is the case of him who renounces, for example, drinking wine, fornication, homosexual relation,⁴¹¹ or usurpation, yet this is not full repentance.

Some people said that this repentance is not valid, while others have said that it is. Validity, in this context, is a vague expression. We would say to one who holds it to be invalid: If you mean by this that his abstention from certain sins is of no avail at all, that its incidence amounts to the same as its absence, then great indeed is your error. We know that a maximum of sin causes a maximum of punishment, and that a minimum of sin leads to a minimum of punishment. To one who asserts the validity [of such repentance] we say: If you mean thereby that renun ciation of some sins is necessarily accepted and will lead to salvation or bliss, this, also, is an error. Salvation and bliss come with total abstention from sin. Such is the direct sense. We are not speaking of the subtle secrets of divine forgiveness. If he, who takes the position that such repentance is invalid, says: I mean thereby that repentance amounts to remorse; man feels remorse for theft, for example, as a transgression and not as theft per se. It is impossible that he regret it without [regretting also] fornication, so long as his grief is due to sin being a transgression, for, both have a common cause. A man who grieves over the murder of his child by sword would also grieve over the child's death by knife, because his grief is due to the death of his beloved, whether by sword or knife. Likewise man grieves over missing his Beloved, which occurs through transgression, be it by theft or fornication. How does he grieve over one but not the other? Remorse is a state brought on by the knowledge that transgression, as such, alienates the Beloved.

It is, therefore, inconceivable that it would be so in the cause of some transgressions and not of others. For, if this were possible, it would be conceivable that one repent drinking wine from one jug but not from another. Yet, such is impossible, for the transgression, in both cases, is one, and the jugs are [merely] circumstantial. In the same way, the particular transgressions are [mere] tools of transgression [per se], while transgression, insofar as it is disobedience, is one and the same.

The meaning, therefore, of the invalidity is that God has promised the penitents a rank, and this rank can be achieved only through remorse, but remorse over [only] some of these identical [sins] is not imaginable. It is like the 'case of a property which is predicated upon offer and acceptance: if the offer and acceptance do not take place, we say that the contract is not valid, i.e., that the result, which is the disposition of property, does not occur. This is confirmed by the fact that the result of mere abstention is the elimination of the punishment for the sin given up. The yield of remorse, however, is the atonement of past sin. Remorse over theft atones but not abstention alone. Remorse can only be conceived [as referring to an act's] being a transgression. This applies to all sin. This is an exposition of the opinion of those who deny the soundness [of partial abstention from sin], and an explanation of the denial. It is a clear opinion, which a fair man examines in detail thereby eliminating obscurity.⁴¹²

We also assert that repentance of some sins may mean repentance either of major sins without regard for the minor ones, or of minor without regard for the major, or of one major sin rather than another.

96

97

As for the repentance of major sins without repentance of the minor, it is within the realm of the possible. It is known that the major sins are greater in God's view and are more apt to arouse God's displeasure and wrath. But it is easier to obtain pardon for minor sins. It is not inconceivable, then, for one to repent the greater and feel remorse about them. This is as he who commits an offense against the family of a king and his women and also an offense against his animal. He is fearful about the former offense while he thinks little of the latter. Remorse follows in proportion to the notion about the magnitude of the sin and the conviction that it alienates from God. It is possible to find this in the Law. Many have been the penitents in past ages and not one of them was infallible. Repentance does not call for infallibility.

The physician might caution the patient strongly about honey. He might also caution him, to a lesser degree, against sugar, in a manner that the patient will feel that the harm of sugar might never materialize. The patient might then give up, by doctor's order, honey but not sugar. Such a situation is not at all impossible. If he consumed them both, because of his craving, he might regret having consumed the honey but not the sugar.

Secondly, it is possible that the man repent some major sins and not others, due to his belief that some sins of that degree are more severe and vicious [40] in God's eyes. One may renounce murder, robbery, tyranny and injustices to men because he knows that the human record is not neglected, while pardon for acts which are between man and God is readily achieved. Just as there is disparity between major and minor sins, so it is also possible to differentiate among the major sins themselves, and in the evaluation of the perpetrator. For that reason one might renounce [only] some major sins which are not directed against one's fellow-man. For example, one may renounce wine imbibing but not fornication, since it becomes clear to him that wine is the key to vice, and that [after consuming the wine] he loses his lucidity, he is apt to commit all sins unknowingly. As wine imbibing is graver in his opinion, a fear is aroused in him which forces him to renounce wine in the future and to regret its consumption in the past.

Thirdly, one may renounce a minor sin or some minor sins while persisting in a major sin, with full knowledge of its being a major sin. One may renounce slander, glancing at a woman forbidden, or something of the same order, while persisting in drinking wine. The way this is possible is that any believer is afraid of his sins and more or less regretful of having committed them. Yet, the delight from that sin can be stronger than the heartache brought on by this fear, as factors of ignorance and neglect lead to the weakening of the fear, or due to factors which strengthen craving. Contrition exists but it is neither constant nor strong enough to actuate resolution. If, however, he is free from a craving stronger than he, so that he is master of the drives encountered, fear overcomes the craving, conquers it, and it imposes renunciation of that transgression.

Perhaps the voracity of the sinner for wine intensifies and he is not able to endure it. He also has somewhat of a desire for slander and defamation of people or for glancing at females. His fear of God has reached the point of taming this weaker drive, although not the stronger one. The element of fear then forces the emergence of determination toward abstention. This sinner, however, says to himself: If Satan vanquishes me through the overpowering desire for some sins, it is not proper that I throw off all restraint or let down the reins totally; rather, I shall fight him in some sins, and perhaps I shall prevail over him, and my victory over him in resisting some sin will be an atonement for some of my sins. Were we not to imagine this we would not be able to conceive of the sinner as praying or fasting. One would have to say to him: 'If your prayer is to other than God, it is of no avail, and if it is to God, renounce your depravity. God's command, in all this, is one. It is inconceivable that your prayer intends to achieve closeness to God so long as you do not draw near through abandonment of depravity.'

It would be absurd that he should say to God: 'I am under two commandments and, upon disobedience, I face two penalties. I am able to vanquish Satan over one but am failing to do so about the other. I shall vanquish him as far as I can, and I pray that this may atone for some of my failure due to my excessive craving.' But how is such unthinkable when it is the condition of every Muslim? For any Muslim combines obedience to God and disobedience for no other reason than this. If one understood this, he would understand that the victory of fear over craving for some sins, is quite possible.

When fear pertains to past action it causes remorse. Remorse, then, induces resolution. The Prophet has said: Remorse is repentance. This does not stipulate contrition of all sin. He said: 'One who renounces a sin is as one who has never sinned.' He did not say: 'One who renounces all sins.' These concepts clarify the wrongness of the assertion that partial repentance is impossible due to the essential similarity of the appetites and the equal exposure to divine wrath.

Yes, it is possible that one renounces drinking wine (kha,nr) and does not renounce drinking *nabidh*⁴¹³ because of the disparity between them in the exposure to wrath. One might renounce many sins and not renounce a few, for if the sins are numerous, the effect is to augment punishment. This augments the punishment for the sinful urge to the extent that man fails to oppose it. Some of the urge is left then to divine judgement. Man then is like the ill person who was warned, by the physician, of fruit. He might take in some little amount without doing so in excess. It follows from this that he cannot renounce a thing without renouncing anything similar. It is inescapable that that which he renounced is incompatible with his behaviour, either in the severity of the transgression or the victory of the craving. When this discrepancy affects the belief of the penitent, one can conceive the variation, in this state, of fear and remorse as well as of renunciation. Even though he has not obeyed God in all command and prohibitions, his contrition over that sin, and his loyalty to his resolution to abstain, sets him in the category of him who has not sinned.

98

99

You might ask:

Can an impotent renounce fornication to which he yielded before the incidence of impotence?

I would say:

No. For renunciation means remorse [41] which induces the determination to abstain from that action which he is able to commit. But a deed man cannot execute is gone of itself, not as a result of abstention there -from. I say, however: if, after impotence, illumination and realization occur to him, he is convinced of the harm of fornication to which he yielded, and heartache, remorse and suffering are so aroused in him, that should a desire for coition remain in him, searing remorse would tame and master that desire, I would hope that such would atone for his sin, wipe out his evil deed. For it is beyond doubt that had he repented before the onset of impotence and died following repentance, he would be among the penitents. Even if a situation does not arise in which his craving is stimulated, and in which it can be satisfied, yet, he is penitent in that his contrition has attained such a level as would deflect him from fornication were his desire to surface. It is, therefore, not unthinkable that the strength of contrition should, in the case of an impotent man, reach such a level, albeit while it is not known to himself. Everyone who does not crave for something considers himself capable of renouncing it, through minimal fear, while God is aware of his conscience and the measure of his contrition. Perhaps God will accept it from him; nay, it seems He will.

The truth in all this goes back to the fact that the stain of transgression is effaced from upon the heart by two things: 1) the searing contrition and 2) the intensity of the effort to abstain from sin in the future. With the termination of craving, effort ceases. Yet, it is not inconceivable that contrition would wax to such an extent that it obliterates the craving without the inner struggle. If not for this we might say that repentance is not accepted unless the penitent live for a time struggling with that same craving many times after repenting. Yet the literal sense of the Law does not point at- all to such a condition,

You might say:

If we postulated two penitents, one having lost all urge to sin, and the other retaining it while fighting against it and blocking it, which, then, would be the better?

Know, then, that this is subject to difference of opinion among the learned doctors. Ahmad b. Abi al-Hawi ri and the companions of Abu Sulayman ^{ad-D5} rani⁴¹⁴ opined: The fighter is better since, in addition to repentance, he has the merit of striving (jihad). The doctors of Basra, however, taught: The other one is the better, for, if he becomes lax in his repentance, he will still be nearer to being faultless than the struggler who is liable to relax in his struggle. Each school's tenet contains some truth but fails to encompass the full truth.

The truth of the matter is that one whose urge has been discontinued can be in two [possible] states: firstly, that the discontinuance of the longing is due merely to a relaxation in the craving itself. Then the struggler is better than the one in this state inasmuch as his abstention through struggle is indicative of self-control and the conquest of his drives by his faith, which is a trenchant proof of the strength of conviction and belief. By strength of belief I mean the will-power emerging at the direction of certainty, and taming the craving which emerges at the direction of the demons. The struggle decidedly points to these two powers. The statement [of the Basrans] that this one is more secure, since if he is lax he will still not return to sin, is correct, but the use of the term 'better', in this context, is a mistake. This is like saying that the impotent is better than the virile for he is secure of the peril of lust, or, that the youth is better than the adult for he is more secure [from sin], or, that the weakling is better than the king, who is victorious over his enemies, for the weakling has no enemies while the king, though having been victorious many times, might, sometime, be defeated. These are the words of a man, sound of heart but lacking in understanding of worldly affairs, unaware that glory lies in facing perils and grandeur is conditioned upon defying dangers. One may say that the hunter who has no horse or dog is better in the art of hunting and of higher rank than one who possesses a horse and a dog, for he is safe of the bolting of his horse, and of breaking his limbs when he falls to the ground; he is safe, also, from being bitten and attacked by the dog. This, however, is an error. On the contrary, the owner of a horse and dog, if he is strong and knows how to control them, is better off and more likely to succeed in the hunt.

100

101

The second state is to thwart the longing by virtue of the strength of conviction and the sincerity of the preceding struggle as it reaches the point of taming the fury of the craving until it is controlled by the discipline of the Law, so that it is activated only by a directive the faith and, because of the dominance of the faith over it, it lies dormant. This is a higher grade than that of the struggler who endures the fury of desire and of curbing it. The statement that such a person has not the merit of striving (jihad) fails to grasp the goal of striving, as if [42] striving were an end unto itself. But the end is the elimination of the greed of the enemy lest it should drag you into his cravings. If he fails in his effort to involve you, he will not impede you in following the path of religion. Once you have subdued him and attained the goal, you are victorious, while so long as you continue to strive you are yet in the pursuit of victory. Compare one who has vanquished the enemy and enslaved him, as against one who is engaged in fighting on the battle line and does not know how he will fare. Or, take a man who has taught a dog to hunt, has trained the horse, both staying with him⁴¹⁵ after the dog has lost its voracity and the horse its recalcitrance, and compare him with one who is yet engaged in the difficult animal training. Some people have gone astray on this point, and considered that the struggle is, itself, the ultimate goal. They did not grasp that the struggle is conducted in order to get rid of the impediments on the Way. Others, again, considered that the total curbing and elimination of the desires is an end unto itself, so that one tried that,⁴¹⁶ and failed therein. he then said: 'This is absurd.' He then rejected the Law, and followed the road of licentiousness abandoning himself to the pursuit of [his] passions. All of that is ignorance and error, as we have established that in the Book on the Discipline of the Soul in the volume on the Destructive Matters 4¹⁷

Were you to ask:

What do you say of two penitents, one who forgot sin, did not engage in sinful thoughts, and the other who held sin in full view of his eyes, constantly reflecting on it, and then burning in contrition. Which of the two is better?

Know, then, that this is also subject to controversy. One says: 'True repentance is that you set your sin before your eyes.' The other says: 'True repentance is to forget your sin.' We consider each school correct but in relation to two [different] situations.

The speech of the mystics is always deficient. Indeed, the usage of each of them is to relate only his own [mystic] experience, another's does not concern him. The answers they give differ, therefore, according to the variation in [mystic] experiences. This is a shortcoming as regards mood, will and depth, inasmuch as the person in question is limited in view to his own experience, the other's state being of no concern to him. For his path is to God Himself and to mystic experiences. Man's path to God may be knowledge. But the paths to God are many, even though they differ as to proximity to or remoteness from God. Though they share divine guidance in common, only God knows who is the best guided of them.

I maintain:

To muse of the sin, remember it, -and be distressed by it is an accomplishment in the case of the novice. If he were to forget it, his vexation would not increase nor would his will and urge to follow the Way be strengthened, for then he would be left without the grief and the fear which impedes his reverting to similar sins. For the heedless, this is an accomplishment but for the [mystic] traveler - a deficiency. It is an occupation which prevents from following the Way. The mystic must not swerve from the path, and if he makes progress, and the illumination of gnosis and the shimmering of the mystery is revealed to him, it will engross him, and no scope will remain for attention to previous experiences. This is an accomplishment. But if the traveler to a certain city is hampered on the road by an obstructing river, his trouble, in fording it, is prolonged because he had previously destroyed his bridge. Should he sit on the banks of the river after fording it, and weep, lamenting his destruction of the bridge, this would constitute an additional hindrance engaging him after coping with the first. Truly, if the time was not right for departure, either because it was night and the going was, therefore, impractical, or because there are rivers on the road, and he is fearful of crossing them, let his weeping and sadness, over the destruction of the bridge, go on through the night, so that in the prolonging of grief, his determination not to return to such a situation, will be confirmed. If such admonition has produced in him inner strength not to revert, then it is more appropriate for him to follow the path rather than engage in recounting the destruction of the bridge and weeping over it.

102
103

This is known only to one who understands the path, the goal, the barrier and the way to pursue. We have already alluded to this in the Book of Knowledge's and in the volume on the Destructive Matters of Life ⁴¹⁹

We must, however, say that the prerequisite for the constancy of repentance is that man meditate much on the delights of Paradise to aug ment his longing. If, however, he is a youth, he should not ponder and muse of all that parallels worldly things, such as the heavenly maidens and palaces, for, indeed, such reflections may perhaps stimulate his longing, with the result that he will pursue worldly delights rather than the life to come. Nay, he should reflect, solely, on the delight of gazing exclusively at God's countenance, which has no worldly parallel. [43] Thus, even recollection of sin may arouse desire. The novice, then, might be provoked, and, therefore, forgetfulness, in such a case, is preferable.

You should not be dissuaded from believing this inquiry by what you are told of David's weeping and lamentation.⁴²⁰ Drawing an analogy between yourself and the prophets is an utter distortion, because they may have descended, by word and deed, to the levels befitting their peoples to whom they were sent to give guidance, and they must, therefore, act in a disguise the sight of which may benefit their people, even if it detracts somewhat from the peak of their station. Some masters, whenever they assigned their disciples any type of spiritual exercise, would join them therein, not because they were in need of it after having accomplished their struggle and soul-training, but in order to facilitate the matter for the disciple. This is why the Prophet said: 'I do not forget but I forget to prescribe,'¹⁰ or, in another version, 'but I neglect to prescribe.' Do not wonder at this. Peoples are under the protective wing of the prophets' compassion, as youth stand under the loving wings of their fathers, and as the cattle are under the care of the herdsmen. Have you not seen how a father, when he wishes to talk to his young child, comes down to the child's level of articulation? Thus the Prophet, God bless him, said to Hasan ⁴²¹ 'Kakh' Kakh!',^b when the child took a date, from those assigned to charity, and put it in his mouth. The Prophet did not lack the fluency to say: 'Drop that date for it is forbidden.' Yet when he realized that the child would not understand his locution, he abandoned eloquence and sank to the child's usage. He who teaches an ewe or a bird must make sounds for it, using as a device of instruction chattering or whistling like an animal or bird. Beware lest you neglect such intricacies, the stumbling block of the gnostics, to say nothing of the heedless. We will seek of God, in His tenderness and generosity, good success.

How People differ in the Perseverance of Repentance

Know ye that those who turn unto God in repentance are of four categories.

The first category: the sinner repents and keeps his penitence intact for all his remaining days. He corrects that in which he was remiss, and it does not occur to him to revert to his sins, except for those lapses of habit from which man cannot disengage himself as long as he is not on the level of prophecy. This is integrity of repentance. He who has it goes ahead with good, substituting good deeds for evil. Such repentance is called 'sincere repentance.'⁴²² The name of this calm soul, which returns to its Lord well-pleased, well-pleasing⁴²³ is the 'serene self. These are the people referred to in the Prophet's statement: 'The solitary who are totally devoted to the invocation of God, the invocation frees them of their burden so that they appear at Judgement light [of the burden of sins].'^c Indeed, in this lies an indication that they were oppressed by burdens which the invocation of God removed from them. The people of this class are at [various] levels with respect to their leaning towards appetites: from the penitent, whose desires subsided under the domination of gnosis, upon whom their pressure abated, and who follows the Way undisturbed by fighting them; to the one who incessantly is struggling with the soul but is able to contend with it and deter it.

The differentiation also pertains to the levels of struggle as regards quantity, duration and type. Men differ also as regards the length of lifespan. One is grabbed, dying soon after his repentance, and is gladdened by that for his escape and death before debility. Another is granted time, continues a long strife and endurance, his integrity continuous and his good deeds multiplying. The state of this one is higher and better since every evil is wiped out by a good deed. A scholar said: 'The sin, which the offender committed, is atoned even when it overcomes man ten times as true desire, yet he renounces it, breaking his lust in fear of God.' However, it would be far-fetched to stipulate this, though the great impact of such a rule if imposed is undeniable. However, the weak disciple should not follow this path lest the appetites be aroused, the circumstances brought on for the sin to overcome man, but when he aspires to desist, he may not be able to escape the reins of desire [44] at will. Consequently he will proceed with the sin and he will break his repentance. Rather, the path of repentance is to flee from the outset elements favouring sin, thus barring to man the paths of sin. At the same time, he will seek to conquer his lust as far as possible. Thereby his repentance will be safe from the outset.

104

105

The second category is that of the penitent who follows the path of integrity in the major obedient acts and abandons all mortal abominations, yet is not free of sins which grip him unawares and without premeditation. He suffers, however, from them in the course of his affairs, without intention to commit them. But whenever he commits them he censures himself, regrets, is sad, and renews his resolution to be most careful to avoid circumstances which expose him to such acts. This soul is worthy of being the 'reproachful soul'⁴²⁴ as it rebukes man for the objectionable matters he pursues though with no strong will or calculation or intention.

This is also a high rank albeit inferior to the first class. It is the most frequent state of repentants, as evil is so kneaded into human substance, that rarely is man free from it. Yet, the goal of man's effort is that the good in him should prevail over the evil, so that the balance of good deeds will be heavier and favour his record. But it is extremely rare that the balance of evil deeds would be altogether void. Men of this class hold the good promise from God as He said: THOSE WHO AVOID THE HEINOUS SINS AND INDECENCIES, SAVE LESSER OFFENSES - SURELY THY LORD IS WIDE IN HIS FORGIVENESS⁴²⁵ As each lesser offense results in a minor sin, without man being reconciled to it, it is proper that it be among those lesser offenses which are forgiven. God said: AND WHO, WHEN THEY COMMIT AN INDECENCY OR WRONG THEMSELVES, REMEMBER GOD AND PRAY FORGIVENESS FOR THEIR SINS ... THEIR RECOMPENSE IS FORGIVENESS .. ⁴²⁶ Because of their regret and self censure, God commends them in spite of their wronging themselves.

To men of this grade refers the Prophet's saying, one related on his authority by 'Ali: 'The best of you are all those who are subject to temptation and are contrite.'^o Another tradition puts it thus: 'The believer is like a spike of grain, at times he recovers, and at times he is swayed.'^b Also: 'It is unavoidable that the believer sin, from time to time.' All these passages prove decisively that this measure [of minor infractions] does not invalidate repentance, and does not put the perpetrator in the category of the persistent sinners. To deprive a man of this kind of hope to reach the level of the penitent, is to act like the physician who induces a healthy person to despair of remaining healthy if he partakes of fruit and hot dishes from time to time, though not persistently and continuously; or like the fagih who induces in the student of fiqh - a despair of ever attaining the degree of a fagih, all because, at rare and not prolonged intervals, he may be lax in repetition and let up taking notes. This points out the fault of the physician and the fagih. On the contrary, a [real] religious scholar is he who does not induce people to despair of attaining the grades of felicity because of temporary failures and the yielding to fleeting seizures of evil. The Prophet said: 'All human beings are sinners, and the best of the sinners are the penitent.'⁴²⁰ He also said: 'Brittle and patchy is the believer; the best is he who dies on his patch. That means: brittle because of his sins, patchy in repentance and contrition.'⁴²⁷ God has said: THESE SHALL BE GIVEN THEIR WAGE TWICE OVER FOR THAT THEY PATIENTLY ENDURED, AND AVERT EVIL WITH GOOD ⁴²⁸ But He has not described them as totally devoid of evil.

The third category is that of one who repents and, for awhile, persists in uprightness. Then, the appetites involve him in some sins, and unable to curb the desire he commits them with intent and premeditation. Yet, along with that, he persists in acts of obedience and avoids some sins despite drive and opportunity [to commit them]. But as this desire or two may overcome him, he wishes only that God enable him to curb it and that He protect him from its evil. Such is his aspiration as he satisfies the desire, but in the end he is contrite and says: Would that I had not done it; I will repent it and strive [45] to subdue it. But, he is tempted and puts off repentance, time after time, day after day. This soul is called, 'the tempted soul.'⁴²⁹ About such people God said: AND OTHERS HAVE CONFESSED THEIR SINS; THEY HAVE MIXED A RIGHTEOUS DEED WITH ANOTHER EVIL ⁴³⁰

On account of his assiduity in obedience and his aversion to the sins he perpetrates, his case is hopeful. Perhaps God will turn unto him. Yet, his end is perilous because of his procrastination and postponement. Perhaps, then, he will be snatched before the repentance, and his case will come under [God's] pleasure. If God, in His generosity, corrects him, cures his defect and grants him repentance, he will join the preceding categories. If, however, his misfortune overcomes and his desire overtakes him, then it may be feared that, in the end, he will deserve, for eternity, what divine speech predestined for him (i.e., hellfire). Whenever it is, for example, impossible for the student to avoid the distractions from learning, this difficulty indicates that he is predestined to be an ignoramus, and hope, in his case, becomes weak. When, on the other hand, diligence facilitates learning, it indicates that he was predestined to be one of the learned. Similarly the relation of the joys and attainments of the hereafter to good and bad deeds, according to divine preordination, is like the relation of sickness and health to the consumption of food and drugs, and like the relation of the attainment of soul comprehension, by which the high dignities in this world are merited, to the abandonment of indolence and to diligence in soul training. Just as only a soul, which has become understanding through prolonged training, lends itself to the dignities of leadership, judgeship and advancement in knowledge, so only a sound heart, which has become pure through prolonged purification and refinement, is fit to gain the hereafter, and proximity to the Master of the Universe. Thusly has it been preordained by God's direction. That is why God has said: BY THE SOUL, AND THAT WHICH SHAPED IT AND INSPIRED IT TO LEWDNESS AND GOD-FEARING! PROSPEROUS IS HE WHO PURIFIES IT, AND FAILED HAS HE WHO SEDUCES IT ⁴³¹ Whenever man falls into sin, the sin becomes a debit, repentance a credit, and this is one of the signs of a setback. The Prophet said: 'A man can, indeed, perform for seventy years, the deeds of the people of Paradise, until others say that he is one of the Paradise-dwellers, and there remains between him and Paradise only a span. Then, what is written overtakes him, and he performs an act of the people of hellfire, and enters hellfire.' A Fear of the end, therefore, is prior to repentance. Each breath is an end to that which was prior to it inasmuch as death might be contiguous to it. Let man, then, be attentive to each moment lest he fall into the perilous. Long is regret when it is of no avail.

106

107

The fourth category is that of the penitent who proceeds, for a time, in uprightness but then reverts to the temptation of sin or sins without admonishing his soul to repent and without regret for his action. Rather, he becomes absorbed heedlessly in following his appetites. Such a person is among those who persist in sin. Such a soul is the soul which incites to evil and flees from good ⁴³² Therefore the evil end may be feared, and his affair is in God's pleasure. If he is destined for an evil end, he suffers endless misery; if he is destined for the reward most fair,⁴³³ so that he dies a monotheist, then deliverance from hellfire can be expected for him, at least after some time. Possibly he will be included in the broad pardon because of a hidden inscrutable cause; just as it is not impossible for a man to enter a ruin to find a treasure, and quite accidentally, find it; or to sit at home and be made learned by God without study, as it happened to the prophets. Seeking forgiveness through acts of obedience is like searching for knowledge through effort and repetition, or like seeking wealth through trade and travel. Seeking forgiveness, however, through sheer hope, despite corrupt acts, is like seeking treasures in ruins or knowledge from angelic instruction. If only the one who worked hard could learn! If only the one who traded would gain wealth! If only one who fasted and prayed would be forgiven!

All men are deprived [of ultimate happiness] except those who know. Those who know are all debarred except those who act. Those who act are all precluded except for the righteous, and the righteous are in great peril. Just as one destroyed his house, squandered his wealth, and left himself and his dependents hungry, is considered, by the sensible, as an ignorant and deluded man when he asserts that he anticipates God's generosity in providing for him a treasure to be found under his destroyed home (even though it is riot beyond God's power and generosity), so, one who expects pardon [46] from God's generosity, while he is negligent in obedience, persisting in sin, and not treading the path of forgiveness, is considered, by sensible people, as demented. One can only be astonished at the reasoning of this idiot and his propagating his foolishness in a nice form when he says: 'God is generous, His paradise is not too narrow for one like me, nor does my sin injure Him.' Then you see him traveling overseas and hurtling perils⁴³⁴ in search of dinars. Should he be told: 'Indeed God is generous, the dinars of His treasury do not fall short of your need, and your indolence in abandoning commerce will not harm you; sit, then, in your home and perhaps He will provide for you in an unanticipated manner,' he would consider the speaker stupid and would mock him. He would say: 'What is this nonsense? The heavens do not rain gold and silver. That must be earned. Thus God ordained it, and set His process in motion. God's usage (sunna) is immutable.' Fool that he is, he does not grasp that the Master of the hereafter and the Master of this life is one and the same, and that His usage in both worlds does not vary. This was announced when God said: AND THAT A MAN SHALL HAVE TO HIS ACCOUNT ONLY AS HE HAS LABOURED⁴³⁵ How, then, can the man believe that God is generous in the hereafter but not so in this life? How can he say that laxity in acquiring wealth is not a requisite of divine generosity while laxity in works for [attaining] abiding possession and eternal felicity is such a requisite, and, further, that God, by virtue of generosity, will give him in the hereafter without [human] effort, but usually will hold back, despite man's effort, in this world? He forgets God's word: AND IN HEAVEN IS YOUR PROVISION, AND THAT YOU ARE PROMISED⁴³⁶ God save us from blindness and going astray. This is nothing save standing on one's head and immersion in the darkness of ignorance. To such a man may apply the divine word: AH, IF THOU COULDST SEE THE GUILTY HANGING THEIR HEADS BEFORE

108

109

THEIR LORD! 'OUR LORD, WE HAVE SEEN AND HEARD; NOW RETURN US, THAT WE MAY DO RIGHTEOUSNESS' ⁴³⁷ That is, we have seen that Thou wert right when Thou saidst: AND THAT MAN SHALL HAVE TO HIS ACCOUNT ONLY AS HE HAS LABOURED⁴³⁸ So turn us back, we shall labour. At that point no alteration is possible and he deserves chastisement. We seek refuge in God from the urges of ignorance and doubt, and of suspicion that leads, of necessity, to an evil fate in the hereafter and resurrection.

What must the Penitent do if he sins either with Intention and Dominant Desire or by Chance

Know, that repentance, contrition and action toward atonement through good deeds to counter the sin, as we have mentioned, are incumbent upon him. If the soul, because of the triumph of desire, does not assist toward the resolution to abstain, then he has failed in one of the two imperatives. He should not, however, abandon the second which is to ward off the evil deed with a good one so as to obliterate the former, that he may be of those who blend a righteous deed with an evil one. The good deeds which atone evil, are through the heart, the tongue or the limbs. Let the good deed stand in the stead of the evil with its ramifications.

In his heart let him atone by entreating God for pardon and forgiveness, and by humbling himself with the self-abasement, of the fugitive slave. His humiliation should be manifest to others in reducing his rank among them. The sinful fugitive has nothing to be proud of among other people. Likewise, he should harbour in his heart benevolence toward Muslims, and the resolve to perform the acts of obedience.

His tongue should confess the offense and ask for forgiveness by saying: 'My Lord, I have stained my soul and have done evil, forgive my sins.' Thus he should multiply the kinds of apology that we have cited in the Book on Invocations and Supplications 439

The limbs should be engaged in acts of obedience, charity and various acts of worship. Some sayings of the Companions indicated that pardon of sin may be expected if the sin is followed by eight acts. Four are acts of the heart: repentance or resolution to repent, wish to desist from sin, fear of sin's punishment, and desire of forgiveness. Four are acts of the limbs: that following sin you should pray two rak'as,⁴⁴⁰ then seek God's forgiveness after them⁴⁴¹ saying seventy times: 'Praised by Almighty God,' praising Him even a hundred times; then you give alms, then fast [47] for a day. A saying of the Companions: 'You shall per form the ritual ablution, enter the mosque and pray two rak'as.'^o A tradition: 'You shall pray four rak'as.'^b Another tradition: 'When you have done an evil, follow it with an atoning good deed. A secret [act] should be followed by [another] secret act and a public act by [another] public act.' It is, therefore, said that charity given in secret atones the sins of the night, and charity given openly atones the sins of the day.

It is related in a sound tradition that a man said to the Apostle of God: 'I have taken up with a woman and I have done, with her, all save inter course. Pronounce upon me the judgement of God.' The Prophet said:

'Did you not pray with us the early morning prayer?' 'Yes,' replied the man. The Prophet then said: 'Indeed, good deeds cancel the evil ones. ^{1a} This indicates that contact with women, save fornication, is a minor sin, inasmuch as prayer figures as an atonement, in accordance with the Prophet's statement: 'The five prayers are an atonement for all that happens between them except for the mortal sins.' In all conditions, then, man should every day take himself to account, sum up his evil acts, and strive to cancel them out with good deeds.

You might say:

How can the search for pardon be beneficial without untying the knot of persistence? In the tradition it is related: 'One who seeks pardon from sin, while persisting in it, is as one who mocks the verses of the Koran.'⁴⁴² One used to say: "I seek God's pardon for my saying, 'I seek God's pardon.'" It has been said: Seeking pardon with the tongue is the repentance of liars. Riibi'a al-'Adawiya⁴⁴³ said: 'Our search for pardon needs much apology.'

Know, then, that innumerable traditions have been handed down on the merit of seeking pardon - we have mentioned them in the Book of Invocations and Supplications⁴⁴⁴ - to the point that God connected the quest for pardon with the life of the Apostle. God said: BUT GOD WOULD NEVER CHASTISE THEM, WITH THEE AMONG THEM; GOD WOULD NEVER CHASTISE THEM AS THEY BEGGED FORGIVENESS⁴⁴⁵ One of the Companions used to say: 'We have two assurances of clemency. One of them, the Prophet's being among us, is gone, and only the quest for pardon remains. Were that to disappear, we would perish.'^f We say, then, that the seeking of pardon which is the repentance of liars, is that which pertains merely to the tongue, with the heart having no share, like the utterance of a man who, by habit and with utmost neglect, says: 'I seek God's forgiveness', or when he hears the description of hellfire, says: 'We seek refuge in God from it', without his heart being affected. This refers to the mere movement of the tongue, and is of no avail. Yet, if the heart implores God and prayer to Him is added in the request of pardon, with sincere will, pure intent and desire, then it is, in itself, a pious deed, and may succeed in cancelling out the evil deed. Such is borne out by the traditions handed down on the merit of seeking pardon. The Prophet even said: 'One who seeks pardon does not persist [in sin], even if he reverted [to sin] seventy times during a day.'⁰ [48] This is tantamount to seeking pardon with the heart.

Repentance and the search for pardon have various stages. Even their beginnings are not devoid of gain though the initial gain falls short of the final gain. Sahl,¹⁶ therefore said: 'Never can man do without his Lord. The best man can do is return to Him in every matter. If a man transgresses he should say: "O Lord! Forgive me." When man is through with his sin, he should say: "O Lord! Grant me immunity from sin." If man acts in penitence, let him say: "Lord! Accept it from me." ' Sahl was also asked about the search for pardon which atones sins. He said: 'The beginning of the quest for pardon is compliance (istijdba), then conversion (inaba), and then [full] repentance. Compliance consists of acts of the limbs, conversion - of acts of the heart, and repentance is man's approach to his Master promising to renounce his evil nature. Then he seeks God's pardon for his actual failings, his ignorance of divine grace and his ingratitude. At that point he will be forgiven and he will attain refuge with God, [followed, in order, by] a shift to solitude, stability, elucidation, contemplation, gnosis, confidential discourse, purity, friendship, and then, secret discourse which is intimacy ~^{a7} This does not establish itself in a man's heart until knowledge is his nourishment, invocation (dhikr) his sustenance, contentment his provision and trust in God (tawwakul) his companion. Then God will gaze upon him, raise him unto the throne. His station, then, will be that of the throne bearers.'

Sahl was also asked about the Prophet's statement: 'The penitent is God's beloved.' He said: 'He is beloved when he possesses all that is mentioned in the verse [which begins] :⁴⁴⁸ THOSE WHO REPENT, THOSE WHO SERVE"³⁹ Further, he said: 'The beloved is he who does not engage in that which his beloved abhors.'

The point is that repentance has two effects. The first is the atonement of evil so that man becomes as one who has never sinned. The second is the attainment of various grades so that he becomes a friend. Atonement, also, is of [various] stages. It may be a total obliteration of the sin, or a reduction thereof. The difference depends on the different grades of repentance. The quest for pardon through the heart, and correction by good deeds, even if man is not yet free from persistence

111

sin, is of the initial stage and is not without some benefit. You must not, therefore, think it is irrelevant whether it is present or absent. For men of vision and men of heart know beyond doubt, that the divine word: AND WHOSO HAS DONE AN ATOM'S WEIGHT OF GOOD SHALL SEE IT,⁴⁵⁰ is true and that, just as a grain cast upon the balance is not without effect, so, also, a grain's weight of good is not without effect. If the first grain had no consequence, surely the second would be like it, and the balance would not be upset by the load of them. That is, evidently, impossible. But the balance of good deeds is given preponderance by the atoms of good until it carries weight and lifts away the balance of impious deeds. Beware, lest you belittle the smallest measure of transgression, without disavowing it. You will be⁴⁵¹ like the stupid woman who neglects her spinning excusing herself by the fact that she is unable to produce more than one thread per hour. She said: 'What is the good of one thread? What impact does it have upon a garment?' Fool that she is, she does not comprehend that a worldly garment is achieved thread by thread, and that worldly bodies, despite the expansion of the world's areas, are collections of individual atoms. Supplication and apology with the heart, therefore, are a good deed that does not at all get lost before God.

I say, moreover, that seeking pardon [only] with the tongue is also a good deed inasmuch as such movement of the tongue, even heedlessly, is better than wagging of the tongue, at the same time, in slander against a fellow Muslim or chatter. Nay, it is better than to remain silent [without uttering the quest for pardon]. Its merit is manifest in comparison to silence while, on the other hand, it is a shortcoming by comparison to the action of the heart. That is why one disciple said to his master, Abu 'Uthman al-Maghribi:⁴⁵² 'My tongue, at times, flows with the invocation of God and the recitation of the Koran, yet my heart is heedless.' The master said: 'Thank God, since He engaged one of your limbs in the good cause, accustomed it to invocation, and did not use it in evil nor accustom it to wasteful chatter.' What he mentioned is true. If the limbs become conditioned to good, to the point that this becomes part of their nature, this will repel many a sin. If one who accustomed his tongue to seeking pardon hears another person lie, his tongue reverts spontaneously to its conditioning and utters: 'I ask God's forgiveness!' If one has been conditioned to chatter, his tongue proceeds to say: 'How stupid you are!, or, how ugly is your lie!' If he who has been conditioned to utter 'I take refuge with God' happens to be present at the very beginning of an evildoer's evil, he says, by reflex: 'We seek refuge in God.' But if the tongue is conditioned to chatter, he says: 'God curse him!' Man then sins in one of [these] two types of speech, and is safe with the other. His safety is a consequence of the good habituation of his tongue. Such is one of the meanings of the divine word: GOD LEAVES NOT TO WASTE THE WAGE OF THE GOOD-DOERS;⁴⁵³ and of the passage: AND IF IT BE A GOOD DEED HE WILL DOUBLE IT, AND GIVE FROM HIMSELF [46] A MIGHTY WAGE ⁴⁵⁴ Contemplate how it is doubled when he makes the heedless search for forgiveness a habit of the tongue until, with that habit, he repels the evil of disobedience involved in slander, malediction and officiousness. This is the doubling, in this world, of minor acts of obedience; the doubling in the hereafter is

GREATER, DID THEY BUT KNOW ass

Beware lest you discern, in acts of obedience, only hardships, with the result that your longing for worship wanes. Indeed, this is an intrigue spread out, in his accursedness, by Satan for the deluded. He made them believe that they are insightful and understanding about hidden things and mysteries. [They say:] 'So what is the good of our invocation with the tongue while the heart is heedless?' By this ruse people are divided into three kinds: one who wrongs himself; one who adopts a middle course; and one who proceeds in doing good.

As for the last, he says: 'You are right, O cursed one, but it is a right saying with which you seek a wrong intent. Certainly, then, I should doubly chastise you. I shall defy you in two respects, by adding the movement of the heart to that of the tongue.' He is like one who treats Satan's wound by sprinkling salt on it.

As for the deluded wrongdoer, he feels, in himself, the conceit of sagacity for this minor point. Then, he is incapable of sincerity in the heart, abandoning at the same time the habituation of the tongue in invoking God. He, then, assists Satan, is hung by the rope of his own delusion, so that there is complete collaboration and harmony between the two. This is as it is said: 'The water skin fits its [skin] cover, it fits it and adjusts to it.'

As for the one who follows a middle course, he is unable to defy Satan by associating the heart in [his] practice but understands the deficiency of the movement of the tongue as compared with that of the heart. Yet, in comparison to silence and chatter, he follows the right course persistently, and asks God to involve the heart, with the tongue, in habituation of the good.

The one who proceeds [with spontaneous good] is like the weaver

/ whose weaving was faulted, so he abandoned it, and became a scribe. The failing wrongdoer is like the one who abandoned weaving totally and became a street cleaner. The one treading the middle course is like a man who fails to become a scribe but says: 'I do not deny that weaving is objectionable⁴⁵⁶ Yet, the weaver can be faulted [only] when compared to the scribe and not when compared to the street cleaner. If I am incapable of being a scribe, I will not abandon the weaving.'

That is why Rabi'a al-'Adawya said: 'Our quest for pardon needs much apology.' Do not think that she faults the movement of the tongue as invocation of God. Rather, she faults the heedlessness of the heart. Man must apologize for the negligence of the heart, not for the action of his tongue. If he also refrained from seeking pardon verbally, he needs two entreaties to pardon, not one. That is how you should understand the fault of what is faulted and the praise of what is praised. Else you will remain ignorant of the meaning of the saying of the righteous: 'The good deeds of the pious are the misdeeds of the Near-Stationed.'⁴⁵⁷

These matters are established relatively, and should not be taken absolutely. Nay, the smallest measures of obedience or rebellion should not be held in disdain. That is why Ja'far as-Sadig⁴⁵ said: 'God has concealed three in three. [He concealed] His pleasure with an act of obedience, so that you should not disdain any such act, as perhaps precisely that one pleases Him. He concealed His anger with an act of transgression; so do not belittle any such act, as perhaps precisely this one arouses His wrath. He concealed who is His saint among His worshipers. Do not, then, disdain any one of them, for perhaps it is he who is God's saint.' He added, 'and he hid His response to prayer; do not, then, stop praying; perhaps the divine response will follow it.'

THE FOURTH PILLAR: ON THE REMEDY OF REPENTANCE AND THE WAY OF TREATMENT FOR THE DISSOLUTION OF THE KNOT OF PERSISTENCE⁴⁵⁹

Know that men are of two types. Firstly, there is the 'young man who has no sensual desire', having grown up in [the pursuit of] good and the avoidance of evil. He is the one about whom the Prophet said: 'Your Lord is delighted by a youth who has no sensual desire.'¹⁰ This, however, is extremely rare. Secondly, there is the man who is not without sin. Further, this second group is divided into the persistent and the penitent. It is our aim to explain how the knot of persistence is to be treated, and to indicate the remedy therefor.

114

115

Know, then, that the cure which is repentance is attained only by the remedy. One cannot, however, prescribe the remedy without diagnosing the malady, for remedy means to counteract the causes of the malady. For every disease results from a cause, and the remedy for it consists of dissolving the cause, removing it and cancelling it. A thing is cancelled only by its opposite. The cause of persistence is only heedlessness and appetite. Heedlessness is only opposed by knowledge and appetite - by forbearance in eliminating [50] the factors leading to appetite. Heedlessness is the beginning of error. God has said: AND THOSE - THEY ARE THE HEEDLESS ONES; WITHOUT A DOUBT, IN THE WORLD TO COME THEY WILL BE THE LOSERS ⁴⁶⁰ There is, therefore, no medication [conducive] to repentance except a compound⁴⁶¹ of the sweetness of knowledge and the bitterness of endurance. Just as oxymel combines the sweetness of sugar and the acidity of vinegar, aiming, with each, at a different end in their combined impact, in order that the causes that provoke the bile be curbed, so you must understand the treatment of the heart against the measure of the malady of persistence present in it. Now, this remedy has two roots: 1) knowledge and 2) endurance. These must be explained.

You might ask:

Does every knowledge avail in breaking down persistence or is some specific knowledge necessary?

Know, then, that all kinds of knowledge are remedies for the heart's maladies. Yet, for each malady there is a specific knowledge. Just as the science of medicine is effective in the treatment of disease in general, yet each malady requires specific [specialized] knowledge, so also [is the case of] the treatment of persistence. Let us, then, discuss the specificity of that knowledge by comparison with the diseases of the body so that it be more readily understandable. We say, therefore, that the patient must believe certain propositions.

Firstly, he must believe, in general, that sickness and health have causes which he arrives at by the [exercise of] selection in accord with what God has determined. This belief is at the very root of medicine. For, one who has no faith in it will not engage in therapy, and is sure to perish. What corresponds to this, in our context, is the belief in the root of revelation, namely, that felicity in the hereafter has a cause, obedience, while wretchedness [also] has a cause, transgression. This is the faith in the root of the revelations. This must be secured either by inquiry or conformism - both varieties of faith.

Secondly, the patient must trust a certain physician, i.e., that he is learned in medicine, skilled, and trustworthy in his judgement, not deceiving or lying. Faith on the basis of medicine will not avail the patient, in itself, without this belief. In our context, the corresponding element is the knowledge of the Apostle's veracity, and the belief that all of what he said is true and right, with no falsehood or discrepancy.

Thirdly, the patient must heed the doctor's warning as regards the consumption of fruit and harmful substances in general, so that the fear of deficient protection overcomes him. The intensity of the fear, then, will motivate him to seek protection. In religion the corresponding element is - a) attentiveness to the Koran verses and the traditions which include the call to piety and warning against the commission of sins and the pursuit of cravings, and b) the belief in everything he hears on the subject, without doubt or distrust, so that the fear is aroused in him which reinforces for endurance, that other pillar of treatment.

Fourthly, he must listen to the physician concerning the malady and what to beware of, so that [the physician] might inform him in detail, in the first instance, which of his actions, conditions, food and drinks, may harm him. Not every patient need avoid everything, nor will just any medication avail him. Rather, for each specific malady there is specific information and specific treatment. The corresponding element in religion is that not every person suffers from every craving or sin. Rather, every believer [has a propensity towards] a certain sin or certain sins. But then, his is an immediate and pressing need to recognize that these are sins, that they are injurious, what is the measure of their harm, how to arrive at desisting from them, and, finally, how to atone for such of them as have occurred.

Such knowledge is dealt with by the doctors of religion, the 'ulama', who are the heirs of the prophets. The sinner, then, if he is aware of his transgression, must seek treatment from the doctor, that is, from the 'slim. If the sinner does not know that what he is doing is a sin, the 'alim should inform him thereof. Each 'alim should be responsible for his area, town, quarter, mosque or shrine. He should instruct his folk in their religion, and distinguish that which may harm them from that which may benefit them, that which will make them miserable from that which will make them happy. The 'slim must not wait to be asked about this. Rather, he must devote himself to rallying the people, as the 'ulama' are the heirs of the prophets. The prophets did not abandon the people to their ignorance but, instead, the prophets called upon the people in their assemblies and, originally would go from door to door, seeking the people one by one in order to give them guidance. The sick of heart are not aware of their illness, just as he, upon whose face leprosy has broken out [51] and who has no mirror, does not know of his leprosy as long as another person does not inform him thereof. Such is the personal duty of all the 'ulama'.

All rulers must appoint, in each village and quarter, a devout jurisprudent to instruct the people in their religion. People are born ignorant and bringing the call [of Islam] to them, in both root and branch, is imperative. This world is the abode of the ill inasmuch as only the dead are in the bowels of the earth and only the sick on its face. The ailing in heart are more numerous than the ailing of body. The 'ulama' are the physicians, and the rulers are the custodians of the abode of the ill. Just as the physician surrenders the patient who does not take care of himself or who has been overcome by insanity to a custodian, to confine the patient in fetters, forestalling his damaging himself or others, so every patient that does not respond to the 'alim's treatment is surrendered to the ruler, in order that the ruler restrict possible evil to and from the ailing.

The sickness of the hearts became more widespread than that of the body for three reasons. Firstly, the one who suffers from such is not aware of his being ill. Secondly, its consequence is not visible in this world. This differs from the disease of the body whose end is death [which is] visible and which people naturally shun, while, what follows death is not visible. The consequence of sins is the death of the heart, which is not witnessed in this world. The shunning of sins, therefore, is rare, even though the perpetrator is aware of them. For this reason you will see him, in case of the disease of the heart, relying on God's generosity while striving diligently in the treatment of bodily ailment without reliance on God ⁴⁶² Thirdly, and this is the calamitous affliction, there is the loss of the physician. For, it is the 'ulama' who are the physicians, yet in these times they have been stricken by a sore affliction, the treatment of which is beyond their capabilities. They have found solace in the wide spread of the disease, so that their deficiency is not apparent. They have been forced to mislead the people instructing them in a manner bound to compound their illness. For the destructive affliction is the love for this world. This disease has overcome the doctors. They are, therefore, incapable of cautioning the people against it, for they fear they would be told: 'How do you prescribe treatment [to others], while forgetting yourselves?' For this reason the affliction spread throughout the people, the plague grew, remedy has run out, and, because of the loss of the physicians, the people have perished. Nay, the physicians have engaged in various kinds of misleading. Would that they did not cure, at least they would not aggravate the malady. Would they only remain silent, for when they speak, they care in their sermons only about what may please the masses or win their hearts. They succeed in that only through demoting fear and promoting hope, and speaking of the signs of [divine] mercy, because that is more pleasant to the ear and easier on the tempers. The people, then, leave the exhortatory sessions further emboldened to sin and with greater trust in divine generosity.

Whenever the physician is ignorant or perfidious⁴⁶³ he destroys with the remedy as he applies it in the wrong place. Hope and fear are two remedies, but for two persons of opposing symptoms. One who was overcome with fear, to the point that he completely renounced the world and charged himself beyond endurance, made his life totally miserable, the severity of his intemperance in fear is broken by talking about the reasons for hope, so that he might return to a proper balance. Likewise, one who persists in sin, yet though desirous of repentance, is held back because of despondency and despair, thinking his previous sins too great, is also treated by the reasons for hope, so that he may aspire to the acceptance of repentance, and finally repent.

On the other hand, treating the deluded, who is devoted to sin, by speaking of the reasons of hope, resembles treating with honey the patient who developed a higher fever. That is the practice of the ignorant and the fools. It is the corruption of the physicians, therefore, that is the real problem, totally beyond cure.

You might say:

Speak of the way which the preacher should follow in admonishing the people.

Know, that this is an involved and protracted matter. Yet certainly, we will indicate the types beneficial in breaking down persistence in sin, and inducing people to renounce sin. These are of four types.

The first is that men should mention those verses of the Koran which strike fear in sinners and rebels, as also [similar passages] from the traditions going back to the Prophet and sayings of the Companions [52]. Such, for example, as this statement of the Prophet: 'Dawn does not rise on any day nor does twilight disappear any night but that two angels echo in four voices. One says: "Would only that these creatures had not been created." The other says: "Since they were created would they know what they were created for." The first says: "Would that, since they learned not⁴⁶⁵ why they were created, they acted as they were taught."^o (In some versions: "Would that they sit together and discuss⁴⁶ what they learned.") Finally, the last voice says: "Since they do not act as they were taught, would that they repent their deeds." '

118

119

One of the old masters said: 'When a man sins the Master of the Right orders the Master of the Left, who is in charge of that man, to hold back the pen [about the man] for six hours. If the man repents and seeks for givenness, the sin is not recorded against him. If, however, he does not seek forgiveness, it is recorded.'

Another of the old masters said: 'Whenever a man transgresses, his place upon earth seeks permission to swallow him, and his roof seeks leave, from the heavens, to fall onto him in fragments ⁴⁶⁷ But God says to the heaven and earth: "Desist from my servant and grant him respite. You did not create him, and if you did you would be compassionate towards him; perhaps he will turn to Me and I will forgive him; perhaps he will change to righteousness, and I will change his sin for him into pious deeds." That is the meaning of the verse: GOD HOLDS THE HEAVENS AND THE EARTH, LEST THEY REMOVE: DID THEY REMOVE, NONE WOULD HOLD THEM AFTER HIM.¹⁴⁶⁸

The tradition of 'Umar b. al-Khattiib⁴⁶⁹ 'The seal is attached to the foot of the Throne. When the sacred is violated, and the forbidden permitted, God sends the seal and it is impressed upon the hearts and their contents.'b In the tradition of Mujiihid:⁴⁷⁰ 'The heart is like the open palm. Whenever man sins, a finger contracts until all the fingers contract and the heart is obstructed. That is the sealing.'c Hasan⁴⁷¹ said: 'Between man and God stands a certain boundary of sin. When man reaches it, God seals his heart, and afterward no longer promotes him towards good fate.'

The traditions of the Prophet and the sayings of the Companions on the censure of transgression and the praise of the penitent are innumerable. The preacher should draw from them constantly if he is the heart to God's Apostle. The Prophet bequeathed no dinars or dirhams but knowledge and wisdom which the scholar inherits according to the measure of his attainment.

The second type is the stories of the prophets and the righteous forebears and what misfortunes befell them because of their sins. Such have a strong impact, and are of manifest benefit to the hearts of men. For example, the story of Adam in his rebellion and banishment from Paradise. It is related that when he ate of the tree, the garments vanished from his body and he was left naked. The crown and the diadem were so embarrassed that they sought to disappear from him. Gabriel then came to him, took the crown from his head and loosened the diadem from his forehead. It was announced from above the throne: 'Descend [O Adam and Eve] from My Presence! One who has transgressed against Me cannot be close to Me!' Adam turned to Eve weeping, and said: 'This is the first misfortune of the transgression, we have been removed from the presence of the Beloved.'¹⁴⁷²

It is related that when Solomon was punished for his error, because of the idol which was worshipped in his home [for] forty days, - (It is said: because a woman asked him to give judgement in favour of her father and he said yes but did not do so; or, that because of his attitude toward her he wished in his heart that [53] the judgement be for her father against his opponent.) - his kingdom was taken away for forty days. He fled, forlorn. He would beg, with palm out, but would not be fed. If he said: 'Feed me, for I am Solomon, son of David', he was taken up, driven off and beaten. It is told that he asked for food from a woman's household ⁴⁷³ She, however, chased him away and spat in his face. Another version says: An old woman brought out a jar containing urine and emptied it on his head. [All this happened] until, after the end of the fortieth day of chastisement, God dislodged the seal ring from the belly of the whale, and Solomon put it on⁴⁷⁴ The birds then came and perched on his head. The jinn, devils and beasts also came and assembled round him. Some of those who had offended him apologized. Solomon said: 'I do not blame you for what you have done before, nor do I praise you for your excuse now. Indeed, this affair was [ordained] in the heavens and was inevitable ⁴⁷⁵

It is related in the Isrii'iliyyit that a man married a woman from another town, then sent his servant to bring her to him. She sought to tempt and seduce him. He, however, fought her and resisted the temptation. God made him a prophet. for the blessing of his piety, and he became a prophet among the children of Israel. In the stories of Moses [it is reported] that he said to al-Khadir:⁴⁷⁶ 'For what deed has God revealed to you knowledge of the Hidden?' It is related that the wind was carrying Solomon, and he glanced at his gown, and it was new. He seemed to like it. The wind put him down. He said [to the wind]: 'Why did you do this though I did not order you?' It said: 'But we obey you only when you obey God.'⁴⁷⁷

It is also related that God communicated to Jacob: 'Do you know why I have separated you from your child Joseph?' I FEAR THE WOLF MAY EAT HIM, WHILE YOU ARE HEEDLESS OF HIM⁴⁷⁸ Why did you fear the wolf and not appeal to Me? Why did you consider his brothers' heedlessness, and not consider My guarding him? Do you know why I returned him to you?' Jacob replied: 'No!' God said: 'Because you appealed to Me and said: HAPLY GOD WILL BRING THEM ALL TO ME ⁴⁷⁹ And because you also said: DEPART, MY SONS, AND SEARCH OUT TIDINGS OF JOSEPH AND HIS BROTHER. DO NOT DESPAIR [OF GOD'S COMFORT]'.⁴⁸⁰ Thus, also, when Joseph said to the king's attendant: 'MENTION ME IN THY LORD'S PRESENCE',⁴⁸¹ God said: SATAN CAUSED HIM TO FORGET TO MENTION HIM TO HIS MASTER, SO THAT HE CONTINUED IN THE PRISON FOR CERTAIN YEARS ⁴⁸²

120

121

Such stories are innumerable. The Koran and traditions have not adduced these just for evening entertainment. Rather, their object is .con templation and pondering so that you may learn that even the prophets are not forgiven their minor sins. How, then, can others be forgiven major sins? Certainly, they were fortunate⁴⁸³ that they were swiftly overcome with punishment in this. world, so that it was not put off to the hereafter. The wretched, however, are those given time to increase their misdeeds, for the chastisement of the hereafter is graver and greater. These kinds of stories should also be told, frequently, to those persisting in sin; for it is effective in stimulating the urge for repentance.

The third type is that the preacher should make them realize that one may expect that chastisement for sins is to be expedited in this world, and that the afflictions of man come as a result of his offenses. Many a man, however, is indulgent in the matter of the hereafter, and, because of his ignorance, fears more God's punishment in this world. It is necessary, therefore, to frighten him therewith. In most cases, the chastisement for all the sins [of a person] is expedited in this world, as is related in the story of David and Solomon. Because of his sins a man may become poor, his rank among people may decline, and he may fall into the hands of his enemies. The Prophet said: 'Indeed, a man is deprived of sustenance on account of a sin he commits.'⁴⁸⁴ Ibn Mas'iid⁴⁸⁴ said: 'I reckon that a man forgets knowledge through a sin he commits, and this is the meaning of the Prophet's word: 'One who perpetrated (garafa) a sin, intelligence withdraws from him (faragahu), never to return.'b An old master said: 'The curse is not the black face or loss of wealth; nay, the curse is that you disengage yourself from a sin only to fall into another which is like it or. worse.' It is as he said, for the curse is expulsion and alienation. Unless he is assisted toward the good, evil comes easily to him, and he is removed [from the divine grace]. To be without divine assistance toward success [in acting righteously] is the greatest deprivation. Each sin invites another and it is compounded. Man is then deprived thereby of the beneficial nourishment of social intercourse with the [54] 'ulama' who rebuke sin, and with the righteous; nay, he is detested by God so that the righteous may detest him.

It is related about one of the gnostics that he was walking in mud, holding his clothes, wary of his foot slipping, but he slipped and fell. He got up and was walking in the middle of the mire, crying and saying: 'This is the image of man. Continuously he is wary of sins and avoids them until he tumbles into one and, then, two, after which he plunges into sinning.' This is an allusion that the punishment of sin is expedited by the drift into another sin. That is why Fudayl⁴⁸⁵ said: 'That which you have blamed on the vicissitude of time and the brutishness of brethren, is the result of your sins.' Somebody said: 'I certainly recognize the punishment for my sin in the ill nature of my ass.' Another said: 'I recognize the punishment even in a mouse in my house.' One of the Syrian sufis said: 'I noticed a Christian lad of handsome countenance. I stopped and stared at him. Then, Ibn al-Jala' ad-Dimashgi⁴⁸⁶ passed me. He seized hold of my hand, and I felt embarrassed before him. I said: "O Abii'Abdallah!

By Almighty God, I was amazed by this beautiful form and this masterful piece of workmanship and [by] how it was created for hellfire!" He squeezed my hand and said: "You shall encounter the punishment [for this staring] after awhile." ' The Syrian said: 'I was punished for it thirty years later.' Abu Sulayman ad-Darani said: 'Sexual maturation is a punishment,' and 'no one misses the communal prayer except through the commission of sin.' In a tradition [it is said]: 'What you blame on your time is really due to your deeds which are corrupt.'^a A tradition: "God says: 'The least that I shall do to a man, if he prefers his craving to obedience to Me, is that I shall deprive him of the delight of My discourse.'"^b

It is told of Abu 'Amr b. 'Alwan, in a story that would take too long, that he said: 'One day, as I was standing in prayer, my heart was seized by desire. It continued in my mind until a craving of men was born from it. I fell to the ground, and my entire body turned black. I hid myself at home, and did not emerge for three days. I was purging my body with soap, in the bath. The blackness, however, was only compounded, until, after three nights, it was undone. I then encountered al-Junayd⁴⁸⁷ who had sent for me, summoning me from ar-Raqqā. When I came to him he said to me: "Were you not ashamed before God? I stood before Him but then your soul concealed a craving until it tenderly⁴⁸⁸ overpowered you and removed you from before God. Had I not prayed to God for you and turned to Him in repentance on your behalf, surely you would have met God with that colour." I wondered how he knew of that, for he was in Baghdad while I was in ar-Raqqā.'

122

Know, that whenever man sins be blackens the face of his heart. If he is happy, the blackness becomes apparent upon his exterior so as to rebuke him. If he is wretched, it is concealed from him, until he becomes engrossed in sin and liable to hellfire. There are numerous traditions concerning the injurious [consequences] of sin in this world, such as poverty, sickness, et cetera. But the calamity of sin; in this world, in general, is that man acquires following it another sin. If he is tempted by a thing, it becomes a punishment, and he is deprived of sustenance to compound his wretchedness. Even if bounty comes his way to win him over, he is denied the feeling of gratitude, so that he is punished for his ingratitude. But in the case of the obedient, it is part of the blessing of his obedience that any bounty, for him, is a reward for his obedience and he is divinely assisted toward gratitude for it; while each tribulation becomes an atonement for his sins, and adds, thereby, to his stature.

The fourth type is [for the preacher] to talk of the punishments that befell individual sins such as wine imbibing, fornication, theft, murder, slander, arrogance and envy. These sins are innumerable. To talk of them to the wrong people, is like applying the remedy to the wrong spot. Tha 'Rim should be like the skilled physician, diagnosing first, by the pulse, the external appearance and the reflexes, the internal maladies and, then, engaging in their treatment. By concatenation of circumstances he infers the hidden qualities. In facing what he has learned let him emulate God's Apostle. When someone said to the Prophet: 'O Apostle of God, counsel me but do not overburden me!', the Prophet said: 'Do not be angry.' Another man asked the Prophet: 'O Apostle of God, counsel me.' The Prophet said: [55] 'You must renounce [the aspiration] for other people's wealth. Indeed, such is [true] wealth. Beware of greed, it is the everpresent poverty. Pray a final prayer.⁴⁸⁹ Beware of what one has to apologize for.'^b A man said to Muhammad b. Wasi':⁴⁹⁰ 'Counsel me!' He said: 'I advise you to be an angel in this world and the next!' The man asked: 'How do I [achieve] that?' He said: 'Practice asceticism.'⁴⁹¹

It seems that the Prophet discerned, in the first questioner, the signs of anger, and restrained him therefrom. In the second questioner he discerned the signs of greed and perseverance in this expectation of the wealth of others. Muhammad b. Wasi' discerned in his petitioner, the signs of preoccupation with this world.

A man said to Mu'ad:⁴⁹² 'Counsel me!' He said: 'Be merciful, and I will guarantee you Paradise.'⁴⁹³ Apparently he detected in the man traces of coarseness and harshness.

A man said to Ibrahim b. 'Adham:⁴⁹⁴ 'Counsel me!' He said: 'Be careful about people! You need people, and must be with others. Men are human. But not all men are human. Gone are the human beings (rids) what remains is the monkey (nisnds). I do not consider them as people, nay, they have plunged into the water of despair (ya's).'^c It seems, then, as if Ibn Adham discerned in him the damage of [excessive] association, and pointed to what was prevailing in his situation, at the time. That was his injury [of or by] others. It is more proper that a statement should fit the state of the questioner, rather than that of the speaker.

Mu'awiya⁴⁹⁵s wrote to 'A'isha: 'Write me a letter, giving me therein counsel but make it brief.' She wrote to him: 'From 'A'isha to Mu'awiya, peace be upon you! I heard the Apostle of God say: "One who seeks God's pleasure through men's displeasure, God protects him from the trouble of men, and one who seeks God's displeasure through men's pleasure, God puts him in charge of men."^d Farewell!' Consider her cleverness in how she ventured upon the bane that confronts rulers, namely, the control over men versus the desire to please them.

She wrote him on another occasion: 'Fear God! If you fear God, He will protect you from men. If, however, you fear men, they will not avail you against God. Farewell!'

Therefore, it should be the concern of every counselor to detect the hidden qualities and discern the appropriate conditions, so that he might deal with the significant. To narrate all the spiritual exhortations in the individual cases is impossible, and, to engage in preaching on what does not call for preaching is a waste of time.

You might say:

If the preacher is speaking to an assembly, or is asked for counsel by someone with whose inner state he is unfamiliar, how is he to act?

The path for him, in such a case, is to preach that which is of universal application, generally or mostly. For in the religious studies there are nutriments and remedies. The nutriments are for all, and the remedies are for the sick.

A case in point is what is related of a man who said to Abr Sa'id al Khudri:⁴⁹⁶ 'Counsel me!' He replied: 'You must fear God, it is the beginning of all good. You must exert yourself in jihdd,⁴⁹⁷ it is the monasticism of Islam. You must read the Koran, it is an illumination for you among the earthly host and a remembrance for you among the heavenly host. You must be silent, except for the good. Thus you will triumph over Satan.'

124

125

Also, a man said to Hasan:⁴⁹⁸ 'Counsel me!' He said: 'Honour God's command and He will honour you.'

Lugman⁴⁹⁹ said to his son: 'My son, join the throng around the scholars, but do not dispute with them lest they hate you. Take from this world your subsistence, and spend the rest of your acquisitions for your hereafter. Do not reject this world totally lest you be a burden to and dependent upon others. Fast, so as to curb your craving but not so as to damage your prayer. For prayer is superior to fasting. Do not keep the company of the foolish, and do not associate with the two-faced.' He also said: 'My son, do not laugh without amazement; do not proceed without aim; do not ask of what is of no concern to you; do not squander your wealth to promote the property of another. For your stock is that which you prepared [of good deeds] ahead of time, and the stock of others is that which you leave [to others]. My son, one who is compassionate is treated with compassion; one who is silent is safe; he whose word is good gains, he whose word is evil sins, and he who does not master his tongue regrets.'

A man said to Abu H'azim:⁵⁰⁰ 'Counsel me!' He said: 'Adhere to that which you would consider precious when facing death; [56] avoid that which you would consider a misfortune when facing death.'

Moses said to al-Khadir: 'Counsel me!' Al-Khadir said: 'Be benign and be not angry; be useful, not harmful; eschew obstinacy; go not without need; and do not laugh without wonderment. O son of 'Imran,⁵⁰¹ do not scold sinners for their errors, cry over your own.'

A man said to Muhammad b. Karram:⁵⁰² 'Counsel me!' Ibn Karram said: 'Strive to please thy Creator in the same measure as you seek your own satisfaction.'

A man said to Hamid al-Lafaf: 'Counsel me!' He said: 'Make for your religion a cover like the cover on the Koran, lest⁵⁰³ it should get soiled by troubles.' The man asked: 'What is the cover of religion?' He said: 'Renouncing worldly pursuit except for the minimum; abstention from talking much unless it is necessary; reducing social intercourse to a minimum.'

Hasan [al-Basri] wrote to 'Umar b. 'Abd al-'Aziz⁵⁰⁴ saying: 'Fear that which God has alarmed you about, be cautious of that which God has cautioned you about, and take from what is in your hands (fī yadayka) to what is ahead of you (bayna yadayka). At the time of death the ultimate message shall reach you. Farewell!'

'Umar b. 'Abd al-'Aziz wrote to Hasan asking for his admonition. Hasan replied: 'The greatest terror and the horrors are ahead of you, and you cannot escape from witnessing them, be it in salvation or perdition. Know, that he who takes his soul to account gains, and he who is negligent of his soul loses. He who contemplates the consequences is saved, but he who follows his mood errs. He who is meek gains; he who fears is safe; he who is safe learns by example; he who learns by example gains insight; he who has insight understands, and he who understands knows. If you have slipped, return. If you have regret, uproot [the evil]. If you are ignorant, ask. And, if you are angered, forbear.'

Mitraf b. 'Abdullah⁵⁰⁵ wrote to 'Umar b. 'Abd al-'Aziz: 'This world is an abode of punishment. For it the senseless are gathering [goods] and, by it one who has no knowledge is deluded. O Commander of the Faithful! Be in it like one whose injury is treated, enduring the severity of the remedy for fear of the consequences of the disease.'

'Umar also wrote to 'Adi b. Artā⁵⁰⁶ saying: 'This world is an enemy of God's friends⁵⁰⁷ and of God's enemies. It distresses His friends, and deludes His enemies.' He also wrote to one of his governors: 'You have the power to oppress people. If you intend to wrong one, remember God's power over you. Know that if you cause any trouble to the people, the responsibility remains yours. Know, also, that God takes to account the oppressors on account of the oppressed. Farewell!'

This is how the admonition should be - for the masses or when the preacher does not know the specifics of the case. These exhortations are like the nutriment by which all the people can benefit. But, because of the lack of such as these preachers, the gate of learning from admonition is barred, sins predominate, and decay proceeds apace. The people are afflicted with preachers who parade rhymed prose and recite verses, take upon themselves to talk of that which is beyond the range of their knowledge, and imitate others. The masses lost their respect for the preacher. The preacher's words do not emanate from the heart so as to reach the heart. Rather, the speaker is arrogant, the listener burdened, and each of them is slipping and failing.

Seeking a physician, therefore, is the start of the treatment for the sick, and seeking the 'ulama', is the beginning of treatment for sinners. This is one of the pillars and principles of treatment.

The second principle is forbearance (sabr). The point of the need for forbearance is that the patient's illness is prolonged because he takes what is harmful to him. He consumes that, either because he is unaware it is harmful, or because of the intensity of his craving. Such action has two causes. What we have mentioned is the treatment for the unawareness. There remains, then, the treatment of craving, but we have already discussed the method of its treatment in the Book on Discipline of the Soul⁵⁰⁸. The gist of it is that, when his voracity for a harmful food becomes intense, the patient will perceive the magnitude of its harm. Then he should remove that from his scope of vision and not keep it. Then he will seek to distract himself from it with something which approximates it in form but not in virulence. Then, by virtue of fear, he should overcome the pain caused by abstention. Under all conditions, the bitterness of forbearance is inevitable, and thus he will treat the craving for transgression.

127

126

A young man, for example, when desire overcomes him, becomes incapable of controlling his eye, heart or limbs in the pursuit of his desire. He must realize the harm of his sin by examining the relevant fearful passages⁵⁰⁹ in the Koran and in the Tradition. When his dread is intensified, he keeps his distance from the factors inciting his drive.

The external stimulant of desire is [57] the presence of the object of desire and gazing at it. The treatment is flight and isolation. The internal stimulant is the consumption of delicious foods. Its treatment lies in hunger and prolonged fasting. All this can be achieved only through forbearance. One shows forbearance, however, only from fear, but one fears only from knowledge, and, one gains knowledge only from insight and reflection or from listening and emulation. The first order of business, then, is attendance at invitational assemblies (dhikr); then, listening, with a heart devoid of other engagements, devoted to attention; then reflection on it unto perfect understanding. Thereupon fear will certainly be aroused. With fear rising, forbearance will be facilitated, and the requisites of seeking treatment will develop. Behind that lie divine assistance toward success and divine facilitation.

One who gives, of his heart, proper attention, perceives the dread [of sin] and fear of God, expects recompense and CONFIRMS THE

REWARD MOST FAIR,⁵¹⁰ God eases him to Easing⁵¹¹ BUT AS FOR HIM WHO IS A MISER AND SELF-SUFFICIENT AND CRIES LIES TO THE REWARD MOST FAIR,⁵¹² God will ease him TO THE HARDSHIP⁵¹³ Only the clarification of the paths of guidance falls upon the prophets. Yet, TO GOD BELONGS THE FIRST AND THE LAST^{514, 515}

You might assert:

The entire matter reverts then to [a question of] faith, because renunciation of sin is impossible without forbearance; forbearance is possible only through the experience of fear; fear sets in only through knowledge; knowledge is attained solely through confirming [the belief in] the magnitude of injury caused by sins, and confirmation of the magnitude of sins' harm is confirmation of the belief in God and His Apostle, which is faith. It appears, then, that one who persists in sin does so only because he is not a believer.

Know, that this persistence is not due to the loss of faith but rather to its weakness, inasmuch as every believer believes firmly that transgression is a cause of alienation from God, and is the cause of punishment in the hereafter. The reason, however, for his falling into sin is manifold.

Firstly, the promised punishment is concealed and not in [immediate] attendance. The soul is predisposed to being influenced by what is at hand. The effect upon the soul of the promised chastisement is weak compared to the impact of that which is present.

Secondly, the gratification of the cravings leading to sin are consummate and they immediately grab the throat. Because of habituation and custom, - habit serving as the fifth element⁵¹⁶ - [this pressure] is vigorous and overpowers the soul. The soul finds it hard to shift from the immediate to the fear of the future. That is why it says: NO INDEED; BUT YOU LOVE THE HASTY WORLD AND LEAVE BE THE HEREAFTER,⁵¹⁷ and, NAY, BUT YOU PREFER THE PRESENT LIFE⁵¹⁸ The Prophet expressed how difficult this is in his sayings: 'Paradise is encircled by adversities, and hellfire by cravings';a 'God created hellfire. Then He said to Gabriel: Go and look at it. He looked at it, then said: By Your Glory! No one who hears of it shall enter it. God then encircled it with the desires, then said again: Go look at it. He looked at it and said: By Your Glory! I am afraid that none shall remain who will not enter it. God created Paradise. He said to Gabriel: Go and look at it. He did, and said: By Your might! Everyone who hears will [seek] to enter it. God then surrounded it with adversities and said: Go and look at it. He did, and said: By Your might! I am afraid that none shall enter.'b Thus the immediate oppressiveness of the desires, and the relegation of punishment into the future are two obvious causes in the self abandon despite the presence of the basic faith. Nobody who, while sick and because of his thirst, drinks ice water denies, thereby, the basis of medicine. Nor does he deny the fact that ice water is harmful for him. But the craving overcomes him, and the pain of desisting is supreme, so that the anticipated pain seems minimized.

Thirdly, every believing sinner is, generally, determined to repent and to atone the evil through pious deeds. Further, it has been promised that such will restore him. Continued hope, however, prevails over the natural dispositions, and man keeps postponing repentance and atonement. Yet, since his hope is for divine help towards success in repentance, he may often proceed despite faith toward sin.

128

129

Fourthly, every convinced believer maintains that sins do not necessitate chastisement to the extent of precluding forgiveness. [58] He sins, therefore, and anticipates forgiveness trusting in God's generosity.

These are four causes that lead to persistence in sin, despite the survival of the basic faith.

Certainly, the sinner might come up with a fifth reason, that impairs that basic faith. Namely, he may doubt the authenticity of the prophets. This is unbelief. He is like the one whom the physician cautioned about consuming what would, in his ill state, harm him. If the man cautioned does not consider the warner a medical authority, the patient may deny or doubt the physician. He will, therefore, pay no attention to the doctor. But such is unbelief.

You might say:

What, then, is the treatment for the five causes? I say that it is reflection (fikir).

That is that man persuade himself in the first instance, i.e., the relegation of punishment, that everything that is to come, is [truly]. coming; that, for those who watch, the morrow is nigh, and that death is closer to everyone than his shoe lace; what shall make him know, perhaps the Hour is nigh,⁵¹⁹ and when that which has been put off takes place it is merely the consummation of the prophetic message. He should remind himself that, in this world, he is weary forever for fear of something in the future. Thus, a man travels overseas and undergoes hardship of journeys for the sake of gain which he thinks he might need at another time. Yet if he falls ill, and a Christian physician tells him that drinking cold water will harm him and lead to his death, and cold water is, to his mind, the most delicious of things, he abandons drinking it, despite the fact that the pain of death is only of an instant, if he did not fear what follows it, and departure from this world is [anyhow] inescapable. Yet what is the proportion between his existence in this world to his absence for ever and ever! Let him consider how quickly he is going to abandon his pleasures at the instruction of a non-Muslim with no miracle to support his medicine. Then he will say: 'How does it befit my intelligence that the word of the prophets, supported by miracles, should be inferior in my eyes to that of a Christian who claims [the knowledge of] medicine without any [supporting] miracle and without any confirmation except by the common folk? How can the torment of hellfire be less, to me, than the torment of disease, when each day in the hereafter is like fifty thousand years of this world?'

Through this same contemplation he treats the delight which is overcoming him. He will force himself to abandon it by saying: 'If I am unable to renounce my delights during the days of my life which are few, how, then, shall I ever be able to do so? If I am not able to endure the pain of forbearance, how, then, could I withstand the pain of hellfire? If I am unable to renounce the vanities of this world despite its vexations, disturbances, and the blend of its delight and grief, how can I forgo the bliss of the hereafter?'

As for postponement of repentance, he can treat it by reflection on [the fact] that most of the anguish of the people of hellfire stems from procrastination, as the procrastinator builds on what is not his, namely immortality. Yet perhaps he will not survive, and, if he survives, he may be unable to desist tomorrow, just as he is unable to abstain today. I wish I knew; did he not fail, in the present, only because of the triumph of craving, which craving is not going to leave him on the morrow, but rather is compounded since it is reinforced through habituation. Now, the craving which a man reinforced by habit is not like the one which he did not reinforce. Because of this the procrastinators perish, for they suppose there is a difference between things identical. They do not realize that all days are similar in that forgoing cravings is always painful, on any day.

A fitting analogy is: one who needs to uproot a tree but sees that it is strong and will not be extirpated except with great difficulty. He says: 'I will put it off for a year and then come back to it.' But he knows that the longer the tree survives, the more its deeprootedness increases, while the older he gets the more he becomes weak. There is, then, no stupidity grosser than his in the world: when he, in his prime, fails to stand up to the weak, and begins to anticipate triumph over the rival while he himself is getting weak and the weak one is getting strong.

As for the fourth idea, i.e., the expectation of God's forgiveness, its treatment is as above. The man is like one who dissipates all his property, leaving himself and his family paupers, expecting that God, in His generosity, will provide for him the discovery of a treasure amidst ruins. The possibility of forgiveness of sins [in such a manner] is like this possibility. He is like one who fears spoliation at the hand of oppressors in his country, and [yet], he leaves his treasures in the courtyard of his home. He was able to bury and hide them but did not do so. He said: 'I look to God's generosity, it may bring either inadvertence or distress upon the pillaging tyrant so that he will miss my home, or, when he turns to my home he will be struck down at the gate! Both death and inadvertence are possible. Such things occur in fictional stories, and I anticipate the like from divine kindness.' One who anticipates this, anticipates the possible. Yet he is extremely silly and ignorant. For it may not happen and not be ^{so, 520}

130

131

[59] As for the fifth cause, i.e., doubt, this is unbelief. It is to be treated with those elements which would make him learn the veracity of the prophets. But this would take long. It is possible, however, to treat it with simple knowledge which would befit the bounds of his intelligence. He should be asked: 'Is the truth of what the prophets said, supported as they are by miracles, possible? Or, do you maintain that you know that it is impossible, in the same manner as you know the impossibility of one person being in two places at the same time?' If he says: 'I know that it is as impossible as the latter,' then he is stupid and idiotic. It would seem that such creatures do not exist among sensible people. But if he said: 'I am in doubt about it,' then let him be asked: 'If some unknown person were to tell you, as you were leaving your meal at home for an instant, that a viper had licked it, and put its poison in it, and you could admit his truthfulness, would you then eat the meal or, even be it the most delicious of foods, would you forgo it?' He would answer: 'I would most certainly leave it. I would say: if he has lied, I shall merely miss this food. To forgo it may be hard but sensible. If, on the other hand, he was right, I might lose my life. Compared to the discomfort of abstention from food and its waste, death is harsher.' Say to him then: 'By Almighty God, how can you defer the truth of all the prophets, despite all their miracles, and the veracity of all the saints, scholars and sages, nay, of all categories of sensible people - I do not mean thereby the ignorant of the masses but rather those possessed of intellect - in favour of the truth of one unknown man who may have some purpose of his own?'

All reasonable men believe in the Last Day and acknowledge reward and punishment, even if they differ as to particulars. If they are right, you are on the brink of a chastisement which is to continue forever. If, on the other hand, they are wrong, you miss nothing save some cravings of this passing and vexatious world. There can remain no hesitation for him, if he is intelligent, following this reflection, for there is no comparison between a lifetime and eternity. Nay, were we to presume that the world is filled with a speck, and that a bird gathers, every million years, one granule of it, still surely the speck would come to an end, and eternity would not be diminished at all. How could a sensible man's mind waver about forgoing desires for say, a hundred years, for the sake of bliss eternal? That is why Abu l-'Ala' Ahmad b. Sulayman at-Tanukhu al-Ma'arri⁵²¹ said:

The astrologer and physician both of them Deny the resurrection of the body. "Oh, get ye gone," said I; if your belief 'Tis upon you perdition falls, not me ⁵²²

Therefore, 'Ali said to one whose intelligence fell short of true understanding and was a doubter: 'If what I said is correct, we will all be saved; if not, I am saved and you perish.' That is to say, the sensible man follows the path of safety in all situations.

You might ask:

These matters are evident but they are attained only through reflection. But what about the hearts? They give up reflection about these matters, and consider [them] too burdensome. What is the treatment for the hearts by which to return them to reflection, especially in the case of a man who believes in the basis and ramification of religion?

Know, then, that the impediment to reflection is twofold. Firstly, functional reflection is the reflection of the punishment of the hereafter, its terrors and afflictions, the grief of sinners over their exclusion from the everlasting bliss. This reflection is stinging and painful to the heart. The heart, therefore, shuns it, and takes delight in reflecting on worldly matters for comfort and relaxation. Secondly, reflection is an immediate impediment distracting from the worldly delights and the gratification of cravings. Every man, in every state and with every breath, has a craving which overtakes him and enslaves him. His intellect then becomes subservient to his craving. Therefore, man is busy to set his ruse [to gratify it], and it becomes his delight to pursue the ruse, or to start the gratification of his craving. But reflection holds him back from that.

To treat these two obstructions, he should say to his heart: 'How great is your foolishness in being wary of reflecting on death and what follows it, because of the pain caused by the mention of death, despite the disdain for the pain of struggling with death. How will you endure sustaining it, whenever it happens, seeing that [at the same tune], you are unable to endure the very admission of death and what follows it, and are pained thereby? To treat the second impediment, i.e., that reflection makes you miss worldly pleasures is graver and more decisive. For, pleasures of the hereafter are infinite and unmarred, while the worldly pleasure are quickly obliterated and are mixed with vexations. In this life there is no pleasure free of worry. [The more so] as in repenting of transgressions and in concern for obedience lies delight in conferring with God, repose in perceiving and obeying Him [60] and constant closeness to Him. If the obedient had no other recompense for his deeds than what he feels of the sweetness of obedience and the spirit of intimacy in converse with God, that would surely be sufficient. The more so, when to this is added the bliss of the hereafter. Certainly, this pleasure does not occur at the initial stage of repentance, but after man endures [in penitence] for a long time, the good having become habit as before the evil was. The soul is receptive - as you train it, so it becomes habituated. Good is habit, and evil is [sheer] obstinacy.

132

These reflections, therefore, induce fear which in turn induces the ability to forgo pleasures. The stimulant of these reflections is exhortation of the preachers, and admonitions which penetrate into the heart through innumerable appropriate motifs. Reflection then becomes consonant with temper, and the heart tends toward it. The cause which projects harmony between the temper and the reflection, which [itself] is the cause of goodness, is termed succour (tawflq), inasmuch as succour is the fusion of will and the faculty which is obedience useful unto the hereafter.

It is related in a long tradition that 'Ammar b. Yasir⁵²³ arose and said to 'Ali b. Abi Talib: 'O Commander of the Faithful! Inform us about unbelief. Upon what is it built?' 'Ali answered: 'It is built upon four props: on rudeness; blindness; heedlessness; and doubt. One who is rude scorns the truth, proclaims the false and hates the learned⁵²⁴ One who is blind forgets the invocation [of God's name]. One who is heedless swerves from good sense. One who doubts, the desires mislead him, then, only to be seized by sighing and regret, and what he was not considering [possible] concerning God appears to him now.'

What we have mentioned explains some of the damages wrought by neglect of reflection. So much for [the discussion of] repentance.

If forbearance is one of the pillars of continued repentance, it is imperative to explain it. We will, therefore, discuss it, God willing, in a separate treatise.

The quotations from the hadith lore have been checked with the help of (1) the notes of the editor of the Arabic text, and (2) the Concordance et Indices de la Tradition Musulmane, ed. by A. J. Wensinck, J. P. Mensing, J. Brugmav; 7 vols. (Leiden: Brill, 1936-1969).

Ibn Hanbal's Musnad is referred to in the old (recently reprinted) edition; Bukhari, in the Krehl-Juynboll edition; Tirmidhi, in the edition by A. R. M. 'Uthman, Cairo 1965; Ibn Maja, in the edition by M. F. 'Abd al-Baqi, Cairo 1372-3/1952-3; Darimi, in the Damascus edition, 1349 A.H.; Muslim, in the Cairo (1283) edition. The references to Ibn Hanbal are by volume and page; the other references are by numbers of treatise and section. E.G. IM 37:7 = Ibn Maja, Zuhd, section seven. (References are noted in the translation by lower case letters.)

Key

n.c. non-canonic. The saying in question does not occur in the canonized collections, though it may appear in later collections.

n.t. = not traceable.

B = Bukhari. D = Darimi.

H = Ahmad ibn Hanbal. IM = Ibn Maja. M = Muslim. T = Tirmidhi.

Page

32 a. H. 1376, VI 264; IM 37:30 (N4252). 32 b. IM 5:78 (N 1081).

34 a. IM 37:30 (N 4250); H IV 271, 273, 283.

APPENDIX A

134

35 a. IM 37:30 (N4249) humouristic note: in his rejoicing and utter confusion the man verges on blasphemy.

39 a. IM 36:3 (N 3936).

44 a. D 8:26.

45 a. H V 153, 236. Cf. IM 37:30 (N 4253). 46 a. ? B 8:15-16.

b.

49 a. n.t.

51 a. H IV 395, 404.

b. H 11 1238; IM 37:30 (N 4248).

c, n.c.

d. H 1289.

e. n.t.

f. H 11129, 41.

g. Cf. H V 236. 56 a. H VI 240.

b. H II 400; B 80:4.

c. H 11201.

57 a. The editor points out that in this section al-Ghazali depends on Abu Talib al-Makki.

b. n.c.

58 a. H 1113; B 81:32. 59 a. ?

b. B 55:23, 86:44; H III 131, 134.

c. n.t.

64 a. M 2:16; H II 400; B 9:6. 66 a. n.c.; attributed to 'Ali. 67 a. H II 168, 173.

b. H II 244; B 79:1.

c. H II 377; B 65 on Koran 19:1. 69 a. H V 170; B 81:51. 70 a. Cf. H IV 226. 72.a. H 111230.

73 a. B 97:15, 22, 55. 75 a. H I 379. 76 a. Cf. B 59:8.

b. n.c.

c. H I 173, 174; B 75:3.

d. H 1380; B 78:53.

78 a. Cf. IM, Mugaddima 7 (N 59).

- 80 a. n.c.
 b. H VI 41, 208.
 c. H II 313, 370; IM, N 4328. 81 a. B 2:32.
 82 a. B 80:4. 83 a. B 78:60. 84 a. H IV 357. 86 a. n.c. 88 a. D 5:2.
 b. D 20:74. 89 a. n.c.
 b. H VI 157. 90 a. H III 61f. 91 a. H V 348. 93 a. H 111172. 102 a.
 n.c.
 b. H 11409, 444, 476; B 24:60. 103 a. T, Du'a 128. 104 a. n.c.
 b. H 111387.
 c. n.c.
 105 a. H III 198; IM, N 4251. 106 a. IM, N 76. 109 a. n.t.
 b. n.c.
 c. H V 152.
 d. IM, N 4253.
 e. n.c.
 f. H IV 393, 403.
 110 a. B 80:2 (?), H IV 166 (?). 113 a. H IV 151. 118 a. n.c.
 b. n.c.
 c. n.c.
 120 a. IM 36:22 (N 4022).
 b. n.t. 121 a. n.c.
 b. n.c.
 122 a. B 78:76.
 b. Cf. IM 37:1 (N 4102).

- 123 a. T 34:65.
 127 a. H II 260, 380.
 b. T 36:21 (N 2685).

Index of Persons Mentioned

The numbers refer to the pages of the Arabic edition which are indicated in the translation in brackets.

'Abdallah ibn Salam -	15
'Abdallah ibn 'Umar	14
'Abdallah ibn 'Amr ibn al= As	17
'Abdalrahim	14
'Abdalrahman ibn Abi-l-Qasim	14
AN i 'Amr ibn 'Alwan	54
Abu Bakr	11, 28
Abu Hazim	55
AN Hurayra	22
Abu-l-'Ala'-l-Ma'arri	59
Abu Sa'id al-Khudri	18, 38, 55
Abu Sulayman al-Darani	11, 41, 54
Abu Talib al-Makki	17, 21
Abu 'Uthman al-Maghribi	48
Adam	5, 9, 14, 52

'Adi ibn Arta	56
Ahmad ibn Abi-l-Hawari	41
'A'isha	31, 36, 55
'Ali ibn Abi Talib	60
'Ammar ibn Yasir	60
Dhu-l-Nun al-Misri	15
Eve	52
Fudayl.	14, 54
Gabriel	5, 36, 52
Ghamid	37
Habib ibn Thabit	14
Hamid al-Lafaf	56

138

Hasan ibn 'Ali	43
Hasan al-Basri	5, 26, 52, 55, 56
Hind	9
Ibn 'Abbas	17, 33
Ibn al-Jala'	30, 54
Ibn Mas'ud	14, 17, 53
Ibn Sirin	23
Ibn 'Umar	17
Ibrahim ibn Adham	55
Jacob	53
Ja'far al-Sadiq	49
Joseph	36, 53
Junayd	54
Khadir	53, 56
Khalid ibn al-Walid	37
Lugnlan	12
Ma'iz ibn Malik	36
Michael	5
Mitraf ibn 'Abdallah	56
Moses	53, 56
Mu'adh	55
Mu'awiya,	55
Muhammad	2, 11
Muhammad ibn Karram	56
Muhammad ibn Wasil	55
al-Mujahid	52
Noah	11
Rabi'a al-'Adawiya	47,49
Sahl ibn 'Abdallah al-Tustari	4,48
Sa'id ibn al-Musayyab	14
al-Shafi'i	22, 35
Solomon	52, 53 Sulayman cf. Solomon
Talq ibn Habib	14
'Umar	15, 52
'Umar ibn 'Abdal'aziz	56

Abu Shuja', and al-Ghazzi, Ibn Qasim. Fath al-Qarib. Edited and translated by L.W.C. Van den Berg.

Leiden: Brill, 1984.

Anawati, G.C., and Gardet, L. Mystique musulmane. Paris: J. Vrin, 1961.

- Anawati, M.M., and Gardet, L. Introduction a la Theologie musulmane. Paris: J. Vrin, 1970.
- Arberry, Arthur J.; Sufism: An Account of the Mystics of Islam. London: George Allen and Unwin, 1969(50).
- The Koran, Interpreted*. New York: MacMillan Co., 1955,
- De Boer, T. J. The History of Philosophy in Islam. New York: Dover, 1967.
- al-Ghazzali, Abu Hamid Muhammad. Ha-Podeh min ha-T'ayah vohaTa'ut (The Deliverer from Error). Translated by H. Lazarus-Yafeh. Tel Aviv: Dvir, 1965,
- Ihyd' 'Uhum ad-Din*. 4 vols, Cairo: al-Maktaba at-Tijariyya, n.d.
- al-Munqidh min ad-Dalal. n.p.*. Dar al-Kutub al-Haditha, 1385 A. H.
- The Book of Knowledge*. Translated by N. A. Faris. Lahore: Sh. Muhammad Ashraf, 1970(62).
- The Foundations of the Articles of Faith*. Translated by N. A. Faris. Lahore: Sh. Muhammad Ashraf, 1969.
- The Mysteries of Fasting*. Translated by N. A. Faris. Lahore: Sh. Muhammad Ashraf, 1971(68).
- The Mysteries of Purity*. Translated by N. A. Faris. Lahore: Sh. Muhammad Ashraf, 1974(66).
- Ginzberg, L. The Legends of the Jews. 7 vols. Philadelphia: Jewish Publication Society of America, 1968(09).
- Juynboll, Th. W. Handbuch des Islamischen Gesetzes. Leiden: Brill, 1910.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

140

141

- Lane, E. W. An Arabic-English Lexicon. London: Williams and Nor gate, 1863-93.
- Laoust, H. Les Schismes dans L'Islam. Paris: Payot, 1965. Lazarus-Yafeh, Hava. Studies in Al-Ghazzali. Jerusalem: Magnes Press, 1975.
- Macdonald, D. B. Development of Muslim Theology, Jurisprudence and Constitutional Theory. Lahore: The Premier Book House, 1912(03).
- Maimonides, Moses. Dalalat-l-Ha'irin. 3 vols. Edited by J. Kafih. Jerusalem: Mossad Harav Kuk, 1972.
- _. The Guide to the Perplexed. Translated and annotated by S. Pines. Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1963.
- _. Yad Ha-Hazagah: Mishne Torah. 6 vols. Jerusalem: Pardes, 1955.
- Moore, G. F. Judaism in the First Centuries of the Christian Era. 2 vols. New York: Schocken, 1971(27).
- al-Mutanabbi. Diwan al-Mutanabbi. Edited by F. Dieterici. Berlin: 1961. Naish, C. G. "Al-Ghazali on Penitence." The Muslim World 16(1926): pp. 6-18.
- Nicholson, R. A. Studies in Islamic Poetry. Cambridge: University Press, 1921.
- _. The Idea of Personality in Sufism. Lahore: Sh. Muhammad Ashraf, 1974.
- Obermann, J. Der philosophische and religiose Subjektivismus Ghazafis. Wien-Leipzig: W. Braumueller, 1921.
- Schechter, Solomon. Aspects of Rabbinic Theology. New York: Schocken, 1961(09).
- Underhill, E. Mysticism. New York: World Publishing, 1972(55). Urbach, E. E. The Sages: Their Concepts and Beliefs. 2 vols. Translated by Israel Abrahams. Jerusalem: Magnes Press, 1975. von Grunebaum, G. E. Classical Islam. Translated by K; Watson. Lon

- don: George Allen' and Unwin 1970.
- Watt, W. M. Bell's Introduction to the Qur'an. Edinburgh: University Press, 1970.
- . Islam and the Integration of Society. London: Routledge and Kagan Paul, 1961:
- . Islamic Philosophy and Theology. Edinburgh: University Press, 1962.
- . Muslim Intellectual: A Study of al-Ghazali. Edinburgh: University Press, 1971(63).
- . The Faith and Practice of al-Ghazali. London: George Allen and Unwin, 1953.
- Wensinck, A. J. La Pensee de Ghazzali. Paris: Adrien-Maisonneuve, 1940.
- Wilzer, S. "Untersuchungen zu Gazzalis Kitab at-Tauba." Der Islam 32(1957): pp. 237-309; 33(1958): pp. 51-120; 34(1959): pp. 128-137.
- Wolfson, H. A. Philo. 2 vols. Cambridge: Harvard University Press, 1947.
- al-Zabidi, al-Sayyid al-Murtada. Ithaf al-Sadah al-Muttaḡin bi-Sharh Ihya' 'Ulum ad-Din. Cairo: n.p., 1331 A.H.
- Zolondek, L. Book XX of al-Ghazzali's Ihya'. Leiden: Brill, 1963. Babylonian Talmud. Gateshead: Judaica Press Ltd., 1973. Encyclopedia Judaica. Edited by C. Roth, et al. Jerusalem: Keter, 1972. Shorter Encyclopedia of Islam. Edited by H. A. R. Gibb, and J. H. Kramers, Ithaca: Cornell University Press, 1953.
- The Encyclopedia of Islam*. Second edition. Edited by J. H. Kramers, et al; Leiden: Brill, 1960-.
- Encyclopedia of Religion and Ethics*. 13 vols. Edited by James Hastings, et al. New York: C. Scribner's Sons, 1908-26.
- The Jewish Encyclopedia*. 12 vols. Edited by I. Singer, et al. New York: Funk and Wagnells, 1902.

NOTES

Abbreviation Key

- T - al-Ghazzali, Ihya' 'Ulum ad-Din, vol. 4, pp. 1-60.
- MS - Manuscript referred to in, Hitti, et al., Descriptive Catalogue of the Garrett Collection of Arabic Manuscripts in the Princeton University Library, (Princeton, 1938) no. 1481.
- Z - al-Zayyid al-Murtada al-Zabidi, Ithaf al-Sddah al-Muttaḡin bi-Sharh Ihya' 'Ulum ad-Din.
- C - text of T contained in body of Z.
- D - text of T contained in the margin of Z.
- M - M. Maimonides, Yad Ha-Hazaqah: Mishne Torah.
- K - Koran citation (sura: verse).
- W - S. Wilzer, "Untersuchungen zu Gazzalis Kitab at-Tauba", Der Islam 32 (1957), pp. 237-309.
- W(2) - S. Wilzer, "Untersuchungen zu Gazzalis Kitab at-Tauba", Der Islam 33 (1958), pp. 51-120.
- A-G - G. C. Anawati, and L. Gardet, Mystique Musulmane. EI - Encyclopedia of Islam, second edition.
- SEI - Shorter Encyclopedia of Islam. TB - Babylonian Talmud.
- Studies* - H. Lazarus-Yafeh, Studies in al-Ghazzali.

1. Muhammad Murtada al-Zabidi (1145-1205/1732-91), a distinguished philologist and lexicographer, was born in India and lived, for the greater part of his life, in Egypt. His commentary, The Precious Gift of the God fearing Masters, was printed in thirteen volumes in Fas (1883-96), and in ten volumes in Cairo (1893). Cf. C. Brockelmann, Geschichte der arabischen Litteratur, 1422, II 287f., and Suppl. II 398f.
2. e.g., Genesis 13:33; Exodus 33:11; Leviticus 25:27; 1 Samuel 18:6.

3. e.g. Deuteronomy 4:30, 30:2; I Kings 8:47-8; Jeremiah 3:7, 12, 14, 22, 15:7, 18:8, 44:5; Ezekiel 3:19, 13:22, 18:21, 23, 27, 30, 33:9, 11, 12, 14, 15, 19; Hosea 5:4, 7:10, 14:2, 3.
4. e.g., Deuteronomy 13:18; II Kings 23:26; Jeremiah 4:8, 23:20, 30:24.
5. W(2), p.82.
6. Jonah 3:10. The inhabitants of Ninveh did, in fact, effect an acceptable 'return' and were forgiven.
7. II Kings 23:25. Here the repentance and reforms of King Josiah are lauded. This theme is especially evident in Ezekiel, e.g., 3:19, 33:11, 18:23.
8. e.g., Leviticus 4:1-31. 9. Leviticus 16.
10. e.g., Ezekiel 33:14f.
11. Encyclopedia of Ethics and Religion, s.v. repentance. 12. Zachariah 1:3; Malachi 3:7.
13. As, for example, the tension between and synthesis of ritual atonement and repentance. TB, Yoma 85b.
14. E. Urbach, The Sages: Their Concepts and Beliefs, vol. I, p.463. 15. Encyclopedia of Ethics and Religion, s. v. repentance. 16. E. Urbach, The Sages, vol. I, pp. 462f. 17. TB, Pesachim 54a.
18. TB, Yoma 86b.
19. TB, Berakhot, 34b.
20. H. A. Wolfson, Philo, pp. 252f.; W, p. 291. 21. Philo of Alexandria, c.20 B.C.E.-50 C.E. 22. H. A. Wolfson, Philo, pp. 252, 255. 23. Matthew 3:2.
24. Mark 1:15, 2:17; Matthew 2:17, 9:13, 12:41; Luke 5:32, 11:32. 25. Encyclopedia of Religion and Ethics, s.v. repentance. 26. Galatians 2:20. Cf. Colossians 3:9f. 27. Galatians 2:20; John 3:3, 15, 18, 6:47, 14:1. 28. W(2), pp. 77f.
29. Luke 13:5.
30. Encyclopedia of Religion and Ethics, s. v. repentance. 31. Luke 15:4-10.
32. W(2), p:71; J. Obermann, Der philosophische and religiose Subjektivismus Ghazalr, p.233, note 3. 33. e.g., K 2:155 (160). 34. e.g., K 2:51 (54).
35. e.g., K.2:35 (37).
36. K 40:2(3).
37. K 13:29(30), 25:71.
38. K 3:84(90), 4:21 (17), 4:22 (18), 9:105 (104), 42:24 (25). 39. K 9:113 (112), 66:5.
40. e.g., K 2:35 (37). 41. K 2:222.
42. In dating the Koranic citations I have used the chronologies of Muir, Noldeke, Grimme and the Egyptian edition of the Koran as given in W. M. Watt, Bell's Introduction to the Qur'an, (Edinburgh, 1970), pp. 206-213.
43. K 20:120 (122).
44. K 2:35 (37), 51 (54), 122 (128), 155 (160), 4:20 (16), 67 (64), 9:105 (104), 119 (118), 49:12.
45. e.g., K 12:53, 14:39 (36).
46. e.g., K 7:149 (physical), 7:167 (168) (religious).
47. e.g., K 17:27 (25), 38:18 (19).
48. e.g., K 31:14 (15), 39:11 (8).
49. W(2), p. 73, note 11.
50. K 3:12 (14).
51. K 34:10.
52. K 60:4.
53. W(2), pp. 77f.
54. K 4:22 (18).
55. K 4:21 (17), 8:39 (38), 9:5.
56. K 19:61 (60), 20:84 (82), 25:70f., 28:67. 57. K 66:8.
58. K 2:222.
59. Cf. SEI, s.v. Khatai'a. 60. K 3:129 (135).

61. Encyclopedia of Religion and Ethics, s.v. Arabs (Ancient). 62. K 58:9-10 (8-9).
 63. Leviticus 16. 64. K 11:116 (114).
 65. e.g., K 2:75 (18); 4:112; 26:82. 66. SEI, s.v. Khati'a. 67. K 28:15 (16).
 68. K 2:75 (81), 85:11.
 69. Where both man and god(s) are locked into an immutable causality. Cf. Encyclopedia of Religion and Ethics, s.v. Sin
 146
 147
 (Buddhist).
 70. K 2:284, 3:124 (129).
 71. K 42:35 (37), 53:33 (32).
 72. W. M. Watt, Muslim Intellectual: A Study of al-Ghazzali, pp. 20ff. 73. R. A. Nicholson, The Idea of Personality in Sufism, p. 57. 74. EI, s.v. al-Ghazzali, Abu Hamid Muhammad; EI, s.v. al-Ghazzali, Ahmad. Cf. G. E. von Grunebaum, Classical Islam, pp. 151 ff.; SEI, s.v. madrasa.
 75. Al-Ghazzali, al-Munqidh min ad-Dalal; W. M. Watt published an English translation in his work, The Faith and Practice of al-Ghazzali, pp. 19-85; a Hebrew translation was published by H. Lazarus-Yafeh, Ha-Podeh min Ha-T'ayah Veba-Taut.
 76. W. M. Watt, The Faith and Practice of al-Ghazzali, p. 12. 77. W. M. Watt, Muslim Intellectual, p. 20. 78. Studies, p. 365.
 79. al-Ghazzali, al-Munqidh, p. 126.
 80. EI, s.v. al-Ghazzali, Abu Hamid Muhammad.
 81. Al-Ghazzali viewed withdrawal and extreme asceticism, except a temporary healing regimen, to be as bad as hedonism. Cf. Studies, pp. 429f.
 82. Al-Ghazzali, al-Munqidh, pp. 140f. In reference to al-Ghazzali as renewer, see EI, s.v. al-Ghazzali, Abu Hamid Muhammad.
 83. W. M. Watt, The Faith and Practice of al-Ghazzali, p. 12, L. Zolondek, Book XX of al-Ghazzali's Ihya', p. 16.
 84. Professor Lazarus-Yafeh's pioneering study of al-Ghazzali's linguistic usage is very enlightening in this area. She is able to highlight al-Ghazzali's commitment and contribution as teacher and guide. Studies, pp. 44-248.
 85. For a partial listing, see Studies, pp. 46ff.
 86. P. K. Hitti, Makers of Arab History, p. 156; W. M. Watt, Muslim Intellectual, p. 151; L. Zolondek, Book XX of al-Ghazzali's Ihya', pp. 1ff.
 87. Studies, p. 51.
 88. Al-Ghazzali, "The Beginning of Guidance", The Faith and Practice of al-Ghazzali, trans. W. M. Watt, pp. 107, 151f.
 89. T, p. 27; Studies, p. 349. The idea of such a division was quite common in medieval Islam. It probably was introduced from the Greek philosophical tradition, and also found its way into Judaism and Christianity. See, Studies, p. 391, note 2. 90. Studies, p. 362.
 91. Studies, pp. 352f.
 92. W(2), pp. 75f.
 93. e.g., Free Will and Predestination, The Last Judgement, Belief and Heresy, Ta'wil, etc.
 94. Studies, p. 373.
 95. W. M. Watt, Muslim Intellectual, pp. 151, 153f., 165. Cf. al-Ghazzali, The Book of Knowledge, trans. N.A. Faris, pp. 3-5.
 96. W. M. Watt, Muslim Intellectual, pp. 176f. For an interesting survey of the place of the religious commandments in the philosophy of al-Ghazzali, see the chapter by that name in Studies, pp. 412-436.
 97. Studies, pp. 412f. Law is the starting point on the road to gnosis (ma'rifa). Many sufis viewed law, therefore, as obsolete once one has embarked on the Way. They tended, then, to libertinism. Not so al-Ghazzali. For him the Law remains the basis upon which man elevates himself and it is not to be abrogated. See, W, p. 262.

98. Studies, p. 378.
 99. T, p. 11
 100. W, p. 251.
 101. T, p. 11; W, pp. 252ff.
 102. T, p. 27. Cf. R. A. Nicholson, "Mysticism", The Legacy of Islam, eds. Arnold and Guillaume, pp. 213f.
 103. T, p. 25; W, p. 255.
 104. Cf. E. Underhill, Mysticism, pp. 413-443. 105. Studies, p. 352.
 106. W, pp. 258, 281.
 107. Cf. K 2:191 (195), 222, 9:4, 7, 109 (108). 108. T, p. 31.
 109. W, p. 256.
 110. K. 2:274 (272), 6:52, 13:22, 18:27(28), and others. 111. TB, Berakhot, 17b.
 112. M, Yesodei Ha-Torah, 1:1,6. 113. M, Teshubah, 8:1, 2. 114. W, pp. 257ff. 115. T, p. 23; W, pp. 256, 259. 116. W, p. 270.
 117. Studies, pp. 321ff.
 118. There is a parallel concept in rabbinic Judaism. TB, Avot, 4:21. 119. T, p. 19; Studies, pp. 321 ff. 120. Studies, pp. 322f.
 121. TB, Avodah Zarah, 3a.
- 148
149
122. TB, Berakhot, 56b. 123. T, p. 24.
 124. T, pp. 24, 38, Studies, pp. 322, 425f. 125. W, p. 260.
 126. T, pp. 4, 36; Studies, pp. 429f. Cf. J. Obermann, Der philosophische und religiöse Subjektivismus Ghazaas. 127. T, p. 11; W(2), pp. 78f.
 128. Cf. T, p. 29.
 129. T, pp. 9f.; W, pp. 246f. 130. T, pp. 25f.
 131. W, p. 290. Cf. I Kings 8:46; II Chronicles 6:36; Ecclesiastes 7:21. 132. Genesis 8:21.
 133. T, pp. 7f., 16, 50; W, pp. 294f.
 134. T, pp. 13, 45. Goldziher has pointed out the parallel between galb salim and the biblical leb shdlem. See W, p. 278, note 38. Cf. I Kings 8:61, 11:4, 15:3; I Kings 20:3; Isaiah 38:3; I Chronicles 29:9; II Chronicles 19:9. 135. T, pp. 24-32.
 136. T, p. 50.
 137. T, p. 2.
 138. T, p. 10. Al-Ghazzali does, however, give a mystical interpretation in his book, Mizdn al-'a'ural.
 139. W, pp. 249f. Cf. SEI, s.v. 'isma and sira.
 140. Cf. W. M. Watt, Muslim Intellectual, pp. 82-86. 141. W, p. 250.
 142. T, pp. 52f.
 143. T, pp. 10, 16, 34.
 144. T, pp. 49f.; W, p. 274.
 145. T, pp. 7, 9; Studies, pp. 357-363. 146. W, pp. 275ff.
 147. T, pp. 12f. Cf. TB, Avot, 4:2. 148. T, p. 10; Studies, pp. 312-320.
 149. W, pp. 289f.
 150. W, pp. 278f.; M.G.S. Hodgson, The Venture of Islam, vol. 1, pp. 158f.
 151. W, p. 279; G. F. Moore, Judaism in the First Centuries of the Christian Era, vol. 2, pp. 10ff.
 152. W, p. 280; Studies, pp. 412f.
 153. M. Maimonides, Guide for the Perplexed, I, 54; III, 27, 28, 33, 54. 154. Nonetheless Maimonides emphasized his belief in the ongoing obligatoriness of the commandments. M. Yesodei Ha-Torah, 9:1.
 155. Studies, pp. 412-436.

156. These debates often began and developed within a specific political context. The khariji groups, for example, originated in the upheaval surrounding the caliphate of 'Ali. Most of these groups developed ideologies which became progressively less centered in politics. The political influence of these ideologies, with the exception of shi'ism, were negligible in the time of al-Ghazzali. The political context, therefore, is not mentioned. See, W. M. Watt, Islamic Philosophy and Theology.
157. K 2:75 (81).
158. K 4:35 (31).
159. W. M. Watt, Islam and the Integration of Society, pp. 110-114.
160. W(2), p. 51; W. M. Watt, Islam and the Integration of Society, pp. 94-104.
161. W. M. Watt, Islamic Philosophy and Theology, p. 67; SEI, s.v. al-Mu'tazila.
162. W(2), p. 52; W. M. Watt, Islamic Philosophy and Theology, pp. 32-34.
163. W(2), p. 52; Cf. W. M. Watt, Islamic Philosophy and Theology, pp. 82-89.
164. W(2), p. 67.
165. T, pp. 3, 26ff. There are various levels of Paradise (i.e. salvation). Man's proximity to God will conform to what he has earned in this life. Cf. EI, s.v. al-djanna.
166. T, p. 29; W, p. 270 (text and note 32).
167. W. M. Watt, Islamic Philosophy and Theology, p. 17. Andrae's ideas of salvation through the community of Islam is, at best, misleading by his use of christologically influenced terminology. W, p. 186.
168. This is still consistent with al-Ghazzali positing the transfer of credits or debits between sinners and victims of injustice. T, p. 30.
169. W(2), p. 110.
170. W, p. 300.
171. The dimension of national covenant found in Judaism is not to be found in Islam. Cf. W(2), p. 82.
172. T, pp. 50f. Cf. al-Ghazzali, Ihya' 'Ulum ad-Din, vol. 1, Bk 1.
173. W, p. 286. Note the difference between al-Ghazzali's conception of the 'ulama'; the priests of the Church who had special powers of dispensation and absolution; and the shi'i imams who were con-

151

150

- sidered infallible and charismatic. 174. T, pp. 16f.
175. T, p. 32; W, p. 308.
176. T, p. 33. This is parallel to the rabbinic category of hoteh u-mahti (one who sins and causes others to follow suit which is the only category of sinner universally condemned by talmudic authorities to eternal perdition. Cf/ TN. Sanhedrin, Chapter 11; TB, Avot 5:21.
177. T, pp. 17-20.
178. T, p. 32.
179. W, p. 248; W(2), p. 85. 180. T, p. 16.
181. Studies, p. 358 (based on al-Ghazzali's Kitab Sharh Aja'ib al-qalb).
182. W. M. Watt, Islamic Philosophy and Theology, p. 31.
183. W(2), p. 58. The Mu'tazila's position also had a political dimension. They were involved in the 'Abbasid movement and, like the Khawdrij, they fought the Umayyads. Cf. SEI, s.v. al-mu'tazila. 184. M. G. S. Hodgson, The Venture of Islam, vol. 1, p. 264.
185. W. M. Watt, Islamic Philosophy and Theology, pp. 86ff. There was an expression: 'More obscure than the kasb of the ash'aris.' 186. Philippians 2:12f.
187. T, pp. 5f. Cf. W(2), p. 95.
188. T, pp. 2f.; W, p. 249; W(2), p. 56; Studies, p. 353.
189. T, pp. 6f.; W(2), p. 91 (for a treatment of the parable see note 1 on p. 91).
190. W, p. 282.
191. A. J. Wensinck, La pence de Ghazzali, p. 143. 192. W(2), pp. 97f.
193. T. I. DeBoer, The History of Philosophy in Islam, pp. 57f. 194. T, pp. 4, 24, 27; W(2), pp. 56f.
195. T, p. 50.

196. W(2), p. 60.
197. J. Obermann, Der philosophische and religidse Subjektivismus Ghazalu, pp. 232ff.
198. Ibid., p. 239.
199. T, pp. 30, 45; W(2), p. 68.
200. W. M. Watt, Islamic Philosophy and Theology, pp. 66ff.; SEI, s.v. al-Mu'tazila; W. p. 254; W(2), p. 114. (The other major proposition was God's unity - i.e., no attributes separate from His essence.)
201. W, p. 254.
202. T, p. 28; W(2), pp. Off. 203. T, p. 27; W(2), p. 57.
204. T, pp. Off.; W(2), pp. 115f. 205. T, p. 30.
206. T, p. 15.
207. Studies, pp. 382-388.
208. Al-Ghazzali discusses the necessarily subjective and limited ability of the gnostic to convey to others his acquired insights. Cf. T, pp. 28f.
209. Such borrowing, quite often literal, was not unusual or negatively valued. Cf. Studies, pp. 35f., note 20.
210. Numbers in brackets refer to page in T.
211. MS „„ 1 J1~ t.a .
212. MS ~La,11~r,J1 f r) ~,
213. MS r)1_Jl :Js i-o om.
214. Z, p. 497; Ru'ba b. Bi'a of the Ta'y tribe lost his recalcitrant son Akhzam, and was attacked by the sons of Akhzam, his grandsons. He exclaimed in rhyme that he recognized therein the self same disposition that he had observed in Akhzam. This became proverbial of the recognition of inherited characteristics.
215. MS v I ,t.- in both cases, delete L L, .
216. MS ... is necessary in extricating the human essence from the Satanic impurities...: _ . L.> C,~ L; 'I I L,ai ,; U^{JI}
217. MS ... lesser of the two evils. v J._ I v~,a I .
218. MS j (...;.
219. MS .i h.
220. MS L,J . t.: LJ 1.
221. MS v. U I .L,i1.
222. MS J1: jr l_j t Jw1) Jjl ...JG. 223. MS
224. d. 283/896 225. MS_j.v1
226. T a: (;f; MS ,i (i; Read a: L 227. MS S :.r-.
228. K 24:35
- 152
153
229. MS J1...:
230. K 24:31. 231. K 66:8. 232. MS l .i 233. K 2:222. 234. K 37:94(96). 235. MS_L 1J1. 236. MS ;_ . ~ I ; , i. 237. K 33:62.
238. Koranic idiom. Cf. K 16:79(77) and 54:50. 239. T LA_s ~-,J; ; Read La_m b. 240.

- K 54:49.
241. K 54:50. 242. ل<J I
- 243.: -,4U I 6 and X1.1 I J tt. Cf. al-Ghazzali, The Foundations of the Articles of Faith, trans. N. A. Faris, p.119. 244. Cf. K 8:17.
245. K 9:14.
246. Cf. K 72:27.
247. MS U!-j.
248. MS 1.1.
249. Cf. al-Ghazzali, The Book of Knowledge, trans. N. A. Fans, p.223; Studies, v. 357-363.
250. MS J.ol yl.
251. Cf. K 9:21 and 76:20.
- 252.. Read r__,
253. K 36:8-10.
254. MS om.
255. al-Ghazzali, Ihya' 'Ulum ad-Din, vol. 1, Bk 1. The subject raised here is discussed in section six.
256. K 24:31.
257. al-Ghazzali, Foundations, p. 119; Studies, pp. 264-348.
258. K 17:64(62). 259. K 48:2.
260. MS ash vi•
261. K 83:14.
262. MS ar I, J~
- 1.c~..a
263. MS -ti.
- r
264. MS : L,1 I J LS
265. MS J L, i I. 266. d. 234/849-50.
267. MS yA y.
268. K 34:53(54).
269. K 63:10-11. 270. K 4:22(18). 271. K 4:21(17).
272. Legendary figure of pre-Islamic times to whom great wisdom is attributed. Cf. SEI, s.v. Lukman.
273. cj_ 1.
274. K 2:38(40).
275. K 23:8 and 70:32. 276. K 91:9.
277. Read Cr
278. K 42:24(25). 279. K 40:2(3).
280. MS :j_ '~ ftsZ
- y.
281. d. 713.
282. K 17:27(25).
283. Ibn 'Iyad, d. 802. 284. d. 692-3. 285. MS Lr-6 om.
286. d. 32 A.H.
287. MS r_v S.u.
288. K 8:39(38).
289. A Jew of Medina who accepted Islam, d. 43/663-4. 290. The second Caliph, d. 23/644.
291. Early Sufi who was among the first to develop the teachings of gnosis (ma'rifa), 180/796-246/861. Cf. EI, s.v. Dhu 'l-Nun, Abu 'l-Fayd.
292. al-Ghazzali, Ihya', vol. 3, Bk 1. 293. K 79:24.

294. al-Ghazzali, Ihya', vol. 3. 295. MS √11.

154

296. K 4:35(31).

297. K 53:33(32).

298. The son of Egypt's conqueror, 'Amr. See EI, s.v. 'Amr b. al-'As. 299. One of the earliest Muslims, he was a companion of the Prophet and a Koran reader, d. 32/652-3. See EI, s.v. Ibn Mas'fld. 300. 68/687-8.

301. K 4:35(31).

302. d. 996.

303. MS سج / om.

304. Made of wood of the arak tree. 305. Sa'd b. Malik b. Sinan, 74/693-4. 306.

K 4:35(31).

307. MS t.. L.: I om. 308. K 51:56. 309. MS J.a 1 om.

310. MS V_{1b}.

311. Read ~..a~ .

312. MS

313. MS and C₁;Li1~, yvi ~1, L. 314. Read •L₁11.

315. A small coin of little value.

316. Mystic, author of Qfl al-Qulfb from which al-Ghazzali drew much material, d. 386/998. Cf. EI, s.v. Abu Talib al-Makki. 317. MS and C₁₃ }4.

318. C 1.;₁11.

319. C Y om.

320. C_u L+.

321. K 4:35(31).

322. MS and C سج

323. d. 58/678.

324. MS J (;:) .

325. The great jurist, d. 204/820.

326. An intoxicating beverage made from raisins and dates. 327. K 29:42(43).

328. d. 110/729.

M

329. MS and c^{-L1} L.; U.

155

330. Z, p. 548. al-Zabidi indicates that this refers to Jesus. Cf. Matthew 7:6.

331. MS Lid om.

332. MS ج^{-Y} 1~1com. 333. MS &J...

334. K 29:42(43).

335. MS acid C ILU1.

336. Cf. SEI, s.v. al-lawh al-mahf6z.

337. K 2:111(117), 3:42(47), 3:52(59), 6:72(73), 16:42(40), 19:36(35), 36:82, 40:70(68).

338. al-Ghazzali, Ihya', vol. 1, Bk 2; available in Faris' translation. 339. Lit. - successful, victorious, winner.

340. Al-Janna, within the later theological speculation, is portrayed as a multi-leveled and gradated series of gardens. Cf. EI, s.v.

al-Djanna.

341. Cf. K 83:15.

342. MS and C C:.. G₁•.r..

343. K 104:6-7.

344. Diwan al-Mutanabbi, ed. F. Dieterici, p. 8.

345. Harisa - a sweet pastry made of flour, melted butter and sugar. -346. K 50:36(37).

347. al-Ghazzali, Knowledge, p. 141. 348. K 17:87(85).

349. MS _U 6.

350. al-Ghazzali, Knowledge, p. 141.

351. Cf. K 62:4.

352. Cf. K 2:99(105). 353. K 2:272(269). 354. K 6:91.

355. K 41:30; 46:12(13).

356. al-Ghazzali, Knowledge, p. 94. 357. K 19:72-3(71-2).

358. 21/642-110/728. Preacher and ascetic of the Umayyad period. Had a profound influence on different types of personalities and is extensively quoted in Islamic literature. EI, s.v. Hasan al-Basri.

359. MS _i L.; I om. 360. K 41:46. 361. K 40:17.

156

157

362. K 53:40(39).

363. K 99:7-8. 364. K 4:44(40). 365. Cf. K 101-5.

366. Cf. K 56:26-37, 89(88). 367. Cf. K 33:72. 368. K 59:19. 369.

Cf. K 53:7. 370. K 32:12.

371. al-Ghazzali, lhyd', vol. 4, Bk 5.

372. MS _C

373. Abu 'Abdallah Ahmad b. Yahya b. Jala' al-Baghdadi (III/IX cent.).

374. K 41:46.

375. K 4:44(40). 376. K 53:40-11. 377. K 74:41. 378.

K 61:5.

379. K 13:12(11). 380. K 53:11.

381. Cf. EI, s.v. a'raf. 382. MS ₁₁₅ om

383. 'A'isha bint Abi Bakr, wife of Muhammad, d. 58/678.

384. See note 338 above. 385. K 32:17.

386. Woman mystic and saint, d. 185/801 (Palestine). Cf. SEI, s.v.

Rabi'a al-Adawiya.

387. Evidently with reference to the proverb: [Find out who is going to be] the neighbour before [you take] the house. 388. K 29:64.

389. K 58:9(8)

390. K 9:68(67).

391. K 36:11(12).

392. 'Abdullah ibn 'Abbas, cousin of the Prophet, d. 68/687-8.

393. A term covering folkloristic or moralistic stories preserved in various literary sources which because of their biblical or imagined context are related to the ancient Israelites. See EI, s.v. Isra'iliyat.

394. Dhikr is remembering God with mind or tongue and glorifying Him with certain fixed phrases. There developed two lines in the exposition and function of dhikr, both within Sufi ranks (although not exclusively). Firstly, dhikr is used as a liturgical device, part of the simple prayer regimen. Secondly, dhikr became a technique used in attaining the sufi ittihad [substantial identification] with God. Cf. EI, s.v. Dhikr.

395. C _{a:oi,,a.~./l} Is; (;; aJ _{JrJ} G _r, J I _L I _{v;S.iJ h~ L J i ;J Lw. Lt.: L. L J L S_D}

Lr-J' ~-Y Lt cs°L'''~ I

& ut J I ~:J 1 & U L

cl.

:1.,W 1

1 j;;,1 I ~;

MS ~il h o m ~ ~ u / j L j t J / a,; U .1 S I .L A 396.

397. On the basis of K 9:60 it was claimed that eight categories of people are entitled to benefits from the community alms. Cf. Th. W. Juynboll, Handbuch des Islamischen Gesetzes, pp. 106-7; Abu Shuja', and Ibn Qasim al-Ghazzi, Fath al-Qarlb, ed. and trans. L.W.C. Van den Berg, pp. 246ff.

398. Muhammad ibn Idris ash-Shafi'i, 204/820, the great jurist.

399. K 11:116(114).

400. C and D _v t_j.

401. See note 382 above.

402. Cf. K 4:94(92) and EI, vol. 1, p.25.
 403. Contemporary of the Prophet a.id general in the early conquests,
 d. 21/641-2.
 404. al-Ghazzali, Ihyd', vol. 2, Bk 4. 405. MS r[^].
 406. Cf. al-Ghazzali, Ihya', vol. 3, Bk 4, pp. 143ff.
 407. Lit. - is a slave to.
 408. The two most important canonical collections of Tradition. Both are called Sahih [sound]. They were compiled respectively by Muhammad ibn 'Isma'il al-Bukhari (d. 870) and Muslim ibn al-Hajjaj (d. 875).
 409. Sa'd ibn Malik ibn Sinan Abu Sa'id al-Khudri, 74/693-4. 410. MS I,,;.
 411. C.,I 1J . 412. C Zlc

j1 1I~ ~;,1I

413. See note 326 above. Differentiated from khamr which is made from 158

159

grapes. Cf. SEI, s.v. nabidh.

414. Ibn Abi-l-Hawwari (d. 860) and Abu Suleiman ad-Darani (d. 830), both Syrian mystics. Cf. A-G, pp. 26f.
 415. c_L t_L . , t_L . L , Z, p. 26f. 416. MS e-U j.
 417. al-Ghazzali, Ihyd', vol. 3, Bk 2.
 418. al-Ghazzali, Ihya', vol. 1, Bk 1. 419. al-Ghazzali, Ihyd', vol. 3.
 420. While not explicitly mentioning the biblical story of Uriah, the Koran indicates David's guilt feelings in that regard. Cf. K 38:21-25 and EI, s.v. Dawdd.
 421. Hasan b. 'Ali, the Prophet's grandson. 422. Cf. K 66:8.
 423. Cf. K 89:27-8. 424. Cf. K 75:2.
 425. K 53:33(32).
 426. K 3:129-30(135-6).
 427. D
 . r a : l I j : . . Y : l L l j s - . . . i j L a : l s l L . l t
 428. K 28:54.
 429. Cf. K 12:18. 430. K 9:103(102). 431. K 91:6-10. 432.
 Cf. K 12:53. 433. Cf. K 4:97(95).
 434. MS j 13s> Y 1. 435. K 53:40(39).
 436. K 51:22.
 437. K 32:12. The root NKS appears both in 'handing their heads', and in 'standing on one's head'.
 438. K 53:40(39).
 439. al-Ghazzali, Ihyd', vol. 1, Bk 9.
 440. Bending of the body followed by two prostrations. Part of the Muslim worship rites.
 441. C and D (A. _ . 442. Lit. - God's verses. 443. See note 385 above. 444. See note 438 above.
 445. K 8:33.
 446. Abu Muhammad Sahl ibn 'Abdallah ibn Yunus al-Tustari, d.
 283/896. A-G, p. 34.
 447. Khuila - divine friendship; Cf. hard - friend, with reference to Abraham. See, A-G, p. 26.
 448. MS l.JS i 71. 449. K 9:113(112). 450. K 99:7.
 451. D
 45:. Sa'id b. Salam al-Maghribi, d. 323/935. 453. K 9:121(120), 11:117(115), 12:90.
 454. K 4:44(40).
 455. K 16:43(41); 39:27(26); 68:33.
 456. MS :. a.. Also in Z.

457. Z attributes this remark to Abu Sa'id al-Kharraz, d. 286/899. Cf. Arberry's translation from Farid a-Din 'Attar's, Tadhkirat al-Ayliya, in A.S. Arberry, Muslim Saints and Mystics, pp. 218ff. 458. Ja'far b. Muhammad as-Sadiq, the sixth of the twelve Shi'i Imams, d. 148/756.

459. Or: Persistence Complex. 460. K 16:110(108-9). 461. Lit. - paste, putty.

462. MS a I, fs j 463. C and D LU-.

464. C J. S; s i J I j I ~, m.

465. MS, C and D 11.1. c J. Or else, as T has it: Since they know why they were created, would that they acted in accord with what they know.

466. MS, C and D I P. I ;

467. Cf. K 17:94(92). 468. K 35:39(41).

469. 'Umar ibn al-Khattab, the second Caliph, d. 22/644. al-Zabidi attributes this to Ibn 'Umar (Z, p. 612).

470. Ibn Jabr al-Makki al-Makhzami, 101/722-3. 471. Hasan al-Basri. See note 358 above.

472. Cf. EI, s. v. Adam; H. N. Bialik, and Ravnitski, Sefer Ha-Agada, p. 17, par. 94; L. Ginzberg, The Legends of the Jews, Vol. 1, p. 79.

160

161

473. MS ; r I ~.. 474. MS J U om.

475. Cf. K 38-35, 40; SEI, s.v. Sulaiman; I Kings 11:7 et seq.; I Kings 14:21; TB, Sanhedrin 20b, 21b; TB, Shabbat 56b; TB, Gittin 68b; Kohelet Raba 7; EJ, s.v. Solomon; L. Ginzberg, The Legends of the Jews, vol. 4, pp. 169-172.

476. Cf. SEI, s.v. al-Khadir. A legendary figure associated with the story in the Koran, 18:60-82.

477. Cf. K 21:81; 38:37; The Jewish Encyclopedia, s.v. Solomon; L. Ginzberg, The Legends of the Jews, vol. 4, p. 162. 478. K 12:31.

479. K 12:83. 480. K 12:87. 481. K 12:42. 482. K 12:42.

483. C and D r: i L.

484. 'Abdullah b. Ghafil b. Habib ... b. Hudayl, famous companion of the Prophet, often cited in the Revival, d. ca. 32/652-3. 485. Al-Fudayl ibn 'Iyad, 187/802.

486. According to al-Zabidi (Z, p. 618) this is 'Abdullah b. Ahmad b. Yahya al-Jala' al-Baghdadi. See note 373 above.

487. Abu-I-Qasim b. Muhammad, one of the greatest orthodox exponents of Sufism, d. 298/910. A-G, pp. 34f.; EI, s.v. al-Djunayd.

488. Perhaps this should read i.iJJ L and be translated: ... until it overpowered you in ar-Raqqa ...

489. Cf. Z, La, ' sL t5

490. A-G, p. 139.

491. Lit. - Practice abstention from this world.

492. Mu'ad ibn Jabal, 18/639.

493. Note the rhyme L ., rj • L.r~ .

494. Ibrahim b. Adham, 161/778. A-G, pp. 30f, 495. First Caliph of the Umayyad dynasty, d.

680. 496. See note 304 above.

497. In law jihad consists of military action whose object is the expansion of Islam or its defense. It is a duty but through the ages there developed differing and often limiting applications. By the late Middle Ages the fulfillment of this duty was often viewed as a collective duty whose execution was mandated to the judgement of the ruler. Jihad, however, was considered the more important of the two. It is effort directed upon oneself for the attainment of moral and religious perfection. EI, s.v. Djihad.

498. al-Basri. See note 358 above. 499. See note 272 above.
500. Salamat b. Dinar al-Madani, a famous Follower.
501. 'Imran - father of Mary the prophetess. Cf. K 3:30-1; El, s.v. 'Imran.
502. The ascetic Muhammad b. 'Abdallah as-Sijistani, d. 255/869 in Jerusalem. A-G, p. 31. 503. C)-f.
504. 'Umar II, Umayyad Caliph, d. 720.
505. A contemporary of Hasan al-Basri (I-II/VIII century). 506. 'Umar II's governor in Basra. 507. i.e., the saints.
508. al-Ghazzali, Ihya', vol. 3, Bk. 2. 509. MS, C and D 510. K 92:6.
511. Cf. K 92:7. 512. K 92:8-9. 513. K 92:10. 514. Cf. K 92:11. 515. K 53:25.
516. Air, earth, fire, and water were considered by ancient philosophers to be the four basic elements. 517. K 75:20-1.
518. K 87:16. 519. Cf. K 42:17.
520. MS om. ^{off}: Y_j of the printed edition:
... for this may be impossible and may not happen. 521. The blind poet, d. 1057.
522. R.A. Nicholson, Studies in Islamic Poetry, p. 185. 523. d. 37 A.H.
524. 'Ulama', the religious authorities.

IBN 'ARABI

A Prayer for Spiritual
Elevation and Protection

دُورِ الْإِلَهِيِّ

Study, translation, transliteration and Arabic text

SUHA TAJI-FAROUKI

A Prayer for Spiritual
Elevation and Protection

Muḥyiddīn Ibn ‘Arabī

A Prayer for Spiritual Elevation and Protection

al-Dawr al-a’lā (Ḥizb al-wiqāya)

Study, translation, transliteration and Arabic text

SUHA TAḤI-FAROUKI

ANQA PUBLISHING • OXFORD

IN ASSOCIATION WITH THE
MUHYIDDIN IBN ‘ARABI SOCIETY

Published by Anqa Publishing
PO Box 1178
Oxford OX2 8YS, UK
www.ibn-arabi.com

In association with the Muhyiddin Ibn 'Arabi Society
www.ibnarabisociety.org

© Suha Taji-Farouki, 2006

Suha Taji-Farouki has asserted her moral right under the Copyright, Designs and Patents Act, 1988, to be identified as the author of this work.

All rights reserved. No part of this publication may be reproduced, stored in a retrieval system, or transmitted, in any form or by any means, without the prior permission in writing of the publisher.

Cover design: Michael Tiernan
The front cover design incorporates the prayer title from Yazma Bağışlar 2180.

British Library Cataloguing in Publication Data.
A catalogue record for this book is available from the British Library.

ISBN-10: 0 9534513 0 5
ISBN-13: 978 0 9534513 0 2

Printed in Great Britain by Biddles Limited, www.biddles.co.uk

To God alone belong the Most Beautiful Names, so call upon Him through them

Qur'an 7: 180

I take refuge in the Perfect Words of God from the evil of that which He has created

A saying of the Prophet Muhammad

Whoever recites [this prayer] will be like the sun and the moon among the stars

Muḥammad al-Dāmūnī, al-Durr al-thamīn li-sharḥ Dawr al-a' lā li-sīdī Muḥyī al-Dīn

CONTENTS

Acknowledgements	viii
Foreword by Michel Chodkiewicz	ix
Introduction	1
1 The Dawr Today
Contemporary contexts	5
Damascus	5
Istanbul	8
The United Kingdom	9
2 A Prayer across Time
Historical dimensions	17
Transmitters of the prayer	22
Chains and authorisations	44
Windows onto Islamic culture and thought	48
3 The Prayer for Spiritual Elevation and Protection
Properties	69
The text and its contents	74
Translation and Arabic text	79
Transliteration	98
Appendix: Manuscript copies and chains of transmission	119
Bibliography	127
Index	135

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The author would like to thank The Institute of Ismaili Studies (London) for generously supporting this work, the staff of the Suleymaniye Library (Istanbul) for their help and hospitality, and those who gave their time for interviews or discussions. Thanks are also due to Stephen Hirstenstein and Michael Tiernan.

FOREWORD

MICHEL CHODKIEWICZ

Born in Spain and having died in Syria, like the ‘blessed tree’ mentioned in the ‘Light’ verse of the Qur’an Ibn ‘Arabī (1164–1240) is ‘neither of the east nor of the west’, for he belongs equally to both. Recognized as the Spiritual Master par excellence (al-Shaykh al-Akbar), he has been a source of inspiration and a definitive reference-point for the Muslim mystical tradition from Andalusia to China for more than eight centuries. Christian Europe, which since the Middle Ages had passionately studied so many Arabic authors, was for a long time unaware of him. It had to wait until the end of the nineteenth century before it began to discover some of the hundreds of works he has left us, and even then this interest was at first limited to narrow circles of Orientalists.

In contrast, the last few decades of the twentieth century have seen a sudden increase in the number of translations, critical editions, studies and commentaries on his works. Even more surprisingly, their audience has gradually extended to encompass readers who, a priori, have felt no particular attraction to Islamic culture, and indeed appeared to have no reason to be interested in writings of such intimidating depth. Undoubtedly, such readers felt that an academic approach which focused on the doctrinal authority Ibn ‘Arabī has exercised over sufism took into account only one aspect of the man. As an eminent figure of sainthood the Shaykh al-Akbar is thus not only a Lesemeister: he is also – and even more so, a Lebemeister, since he teaches us not only how to think, but how to live.

Witness, for example, the care he has shown in the five hundred and sixtieth (and final) chapter of his Meccan Revelations (al-Futūḥāt al-makkīya). Here, at the end of thousands of pages, where a veriginous metaphysics is developed in a language of extreme technical precision, he gathers together, using very simple words, the rules of conduct from which, he tells us, both the wayfarer (al-sālik) and the one who has arrived at his destination (al-wāṣil) may benefit. For him – and for every spiritual master worthy of the name – the knowledge of the saints must take hold of the whole person. It is not addressed to the intellect alone.

It is for this very reason too that, within the immense Akbarian corpus, one finds alongside numerous scholarly treatises some quite short texts, which at first sight seem to fall within the domain of simple devotional literature. Yet the reality is utterly different. These prayers (ṣalawāt, aḥzāb, awrād), transmitted from master to disciple, are much more than pious litanies. They are inspired invocations, each structured around a series of Divine Names. Every Name conceals secrets and powers that are its own: it must arise at a precise moment in the recitation in order for it to be effective. Such effectiveness is not magic, however. It presupposes that certain conditions are satisfied, the most important of which is purity of intention. In addition, the diversity of these forms of prayer and the modes of their use – whether regularly or occasionally, at a particular time or not, recited alone or in groups etc. – reflect the variety of individual or collective situations, and of interior dispositions.

It is one of these prayers, al-Dawr al-a' lā (known also as the Ḥizb al-wiqāya), which can be found at the centre of the little book before you. At the centre, for it is surrounded by much precious information. Suha Taji-Farouki does not limit herself simply to establishing the text with rigorous exactitude, and providing a translation and transliteration of it. Combining a meticulous examination of written sources with patient fieldwork, she tells for the first time the long history of this prayer, identifying each of the personalities in the chains of transmission. Based upon many testimonies and from her own observations, she shows above all that the practice of the Dawr lives on today in very diverse milieux. With as much knowledge as empathy, she thus demonstrates the continuing currency of Ibn 'Arabi's teaching.

Paris, 2006

INTRODUCTION

There is a growing body of critical editions, translations and analyses of the works of Ibn ‘Arabī, yet relatively little attention has been paid to dimensions of his corpus of a more specifically liturgical or devotional character.¹ The most extensive collection of prayers attributed to him arises in the major compilation of Sunni devotional texts by the Naqshbandi–Khalidi Ahmed Ziya’uddin Gümüshanevi (d.1894), known by the title Majmū‘at al-aḥzāb.² While a few of these prayers have since been published and some such publications claim, if implicitly, to present critical editions, editors often provide scant (or no) information concerning the manuscripts on which they have drawn,³ and it is consequently difficult in some cases to be certain of their origin or precision. A critical compilation/edition of all these prayers, that rationalises titles and texts, addresses questions of attribution and explores the accompanying commentary tradition, is still to be produced.

As a modest contribution to this end (and taking into account the relatively few studies of Muslim and sufi prayer and prayer texts more generally), this study focuses on a single small prayer which has as its full title al-Dawr al-a’ lā al-muqarrib ilā kulli maqām al-a’ lā (The Most Elevated Cycle that brings one close to Every Station of The Most High), often contracted to al-Dawr al-a’ lā (The Most Elevated Cycle) or Dawr al-a’ lā (The Cycle of The Most High): it is also known as Ḥizb al-wiqāya (The Prayer of Protection).⁴ As in the case of other prayers attributed to him, this does not appear in Ibn ‘Arabī’s bibliographic records (the fihris and ijāza) and is not mentioned in any of his works. Yet as one contemporary sufi shaykh and specialist in his thought has put it, ‘there is a consensus among the people of the Way of God [ahl ṭarīq Allāh] concerning its attribution to the Shaykh al-Akbar.’⁵ A clear majority of the substantial number of manuscript copies surveyed for this study explicitly attribute the prayer to Ibn 'Arabī either in the title or through a chain of transmission. Of those that do not make such an attribution, none attribute it to any other author. Given this and evidence of its widespread circulation and use both past and present, it represents an important element in any project to delimit and clarify the specifically liturgical dimension of Ibn 'Arabī's corpus.

This study examines three major aspects of the prayer. Chapter 1 explores its contemporary life, providing an indication of its circulation and use through examples from different arenas. Chapter 2 focuses on historical dimensions based on manuscript copies spanning the last four centuries, exploring facets of the presentation and transmission of the prayer. Chapter 3 examines perceptions of the prayer's properties and recommendations concerning its use. The discussion touches on aspects of its composition and the interplay within it between invocations of Divine Names, specific supplications and Qur'anic quotations. This chapter also provides a translation of the prayer, an Arabic text resulting from a considered evaluation of copies reviewed, and a transliteration. Finally, an Appendix sets out details of manuscript copies and chains of transmission discussed.

Notes

1. Two exceptions can be mentioned. (a) Ryad Atlagh, 'L'Oraison de personne, donation et noms divins chez Ibn 'Arabī (À propos de Da'wat asmā' Allāh al-ḥusnā attribuée à Ibn 'Arabī)', Bulletin d'Études Orientales LI (1999), pp.41–107 provides a critical edition and discussion of the prayer mentioned in the title, with a lengthy treatment of Ibn 'Arabī's position concerning prayer in general, and the place of the Divine Names in this. (b) Ibn 'Arabī, The Seven Days of the Heart: Prayers for the Days and Nights of the Week (Awrād al-usbū'), tr. Pablo Beneito and Stephen Hirtenstein (Oxford, 2000) provides a detailed discussion of the daily/nightly prayers for the week and a translation based on a critical edition still to be published. Throughout the present study, these daily/nightly prayers for the week attributed to Ibn 'Arabī are referred to as Awrād.

2. See Ahmed Ziya'uddin Gümüshanevi, Majmū'at al-aḥzāb (Istanbul, n.d.), 3 volumes: 1, pp. 2–83.

3. For example, Majmū' ṣalawāt wa awrād sīdī Muhyī al-Dīn Ibn 'Arabī raḍīya Al-lāhu 'anhu, compiled by Muhammad Ibrahim Muhammad Salim (n.p., 2000) encompasses a group of ṣalawāt (prayers upon the Prophet) and the Awrād. Salim is author of Ta'yīd al-ṣūfīya fī'l-majmū'a al-Ḥatīmīya, where he also presents some of these prayers.

4. On the term ḥizb (pl. aḥzāb), which has come to be applied to any single group of supererogatory liturgical formulae, and its relation to wird (with which it is often interchangeable: for example I {see Appendix}, fol. 62b refers to al-wird al-musammā bi'l-dawr al-a' lā [The wird called...]; in Genel 43, fol. 29b, the text of the prayer is headed thus: hādhihi al-awrād al-musammā bi'l-dawr al-a' lā [These are the awrād that are called...]), see Constance E. Padwick, Muslim Devotions: A Study of Prayer-Manuals in Common Use (Oxford, 1996/1961), pp. 20–25; 'Hizb', EI², 3, pp. 513–514; 'Wird', EI², 11, pp. 209–210. On these and other terms commonly applied to liturgical texts (such as du'ā and ḥirz), see also Richard J. A. McGregor, 'A Sufi Legacy in Tunis: Prayer and the Shadhiliyya', IJMES 29 (1997), pp. 263–267; 'Du'a', EI², 2, pp. 617–618; below.

The term dawr (pl. adwār), signifying a turn or revolution, does not appear to be as widely used as ḥizb/wird: indeed, no other case of its use is known to the present author. In our sources the term dawr is applied both to our prayer as a whole, and to its individual verses. Thus some copies (e.g. K) describe each of the prayer's individual verses as a dawr, marking them in order as al-dawr al-awwal, al-dawr al-thānī, etc. D, pp. 6–7 elaborates on the significance of the term in the prayer's name thus: 'This prayer has been called al-Dawr al-a' lā because...it turns upon (yadūru 'alā) the Name of God the Ever-Exalted, from Whom all things begin and to Whom is their end... and because its secrets circulate with (tadūru ma'a) the one who reads it day and night, in secret and in public, awake and asleep, in good health and in sickness, in hard times and good, in this life, the hereafter and the barzakh...[It is] “the most elevated” dawr because of the abundant help and secrets it contains...’ The attempt by McGregor, ‘A Sufi Legacy in Tunis’, p. 266 to apply to the prayer an understanding of the term dawr derived from usage in the context of religious celebrations in contemporary Egypt, where it denotes a vocal piece drawn from colloquial poetry and involving a choral refrain, is unsustainable. Finally, it is notable that Yazma Bağışlar 2934, fol. 39b, describes the prayer as Ḥizb al-dawr al-a’ lā.

Introduction

On the relative scholarly neglect of sufi prayer texts and recitation, see for example McGregor, ‘A Sufi Legacy in Tunis’, p. 255. It is remarkable that no follow-up study to Padwick’s classic work has yet been attempted.

5. Mahmud Mahmud al-Ghurab, al-Ṭarīq ilā Allāh: al-shaykh wa’l-murīd min kalām al-Shaykh al-Akbar (Damascus, 1991), p. 194 n. 1.

1

THE DAWR TODAY

Contemporary contexts

Like all liturgical texts originating with sufi figures, the Dawr al-a' lā effectively has a double life in the modern world. One of these, a continuation of its traditional past, is hidden, mediated through spiritual authority to permit its use exercised by the sufi shaykh to his disciple (murīd) typically in the context of a sufi order or ṭarīqa affiliation, and symbolised by the granting of a special authorisation (ijāza). The other is visible, open and public, a destiny arising out of the shattering of traditional systems and modes in the acquisition and transmission of religious knowledge in Muslim societies, and driven by the impacts of print and other modern information technologies alongside mass literacy.¹ The following examples illustrate this double life, and at the same time convey something of the diversity of contemporary users of the prayer. In general terms, while it appears in some of the many collections of prayers readily available across the Muslim world today, the Dawr is not as well known as other, comparable, prayers.²

Damascus

The prayer is recited collectively during certain of the open weekly gatherings devoted to calling down prayers and blessings upon the Prophet (*majālis al-ṣalāt 'alā al-nabī*³) held at the mosque adjacent to Ibn 'Arabī's mausoleum in the Shaykh Muhyi'l-Din neighbourhood, the Salihyya district, Damascus. During 2003, for example, it was read collectively at two of the eight majālis scheduled each week. One was established quite recently and is held between noon (ẓuhr) and afternoon (‘aṣr) prayers on Friday:⁴ the other, which takes place before dawn (fajr) prayers on Saturday, is long-standing.⁵ The text of the prayer is available in the form of a photocopied sheet stored in the imams’ room in the mosque, from where it is occasionally distributed. It also appears for distribution from time to time in the form of a small pamphlet, often printed together with a hadith or Qur’anic verses.⁶ In addition, some of the larger pamphlets printed specifically for use in various majālis (and effectively the property of those majālis) encompass the prayer.⁷ Reaching a wider circulation, it appears in a popular collection of prayers compiled by former Mufti of Syria Muḥammad Abū’l-Yusr ‘Ābidīn (d.1981) and published by his heirs,⁸ and in a more recent collection distributed free, published as a joint venture between Turkish and Syrian publishers.⁹ It can also be found on the margin of editions of al-Jazūlī’s popular Sunni prayer manual Dalā’il al-khayrāt that circulate in Damascus.¹⁰ Finally, it is presented in one of the many privately published works of an Egyptian sufi shaykh and interpreter–disseminator of Ibn ‘Arabī’s thought long settled in Damascus, Maḥmūd al-Ghurāb.¹¹

The prayer is thus easily accessible to people of all backgrounds in Damascus. At the same time, in some circles there traditional sufi modes of transmission continue. The ijāza in this context is understood to unlock the prayer’s secrets for the murīd in a way that protects him from potential harm: it also ensures that these secrets remain the preserve of those suitably prepared to receive them. The ijāza often encompasses an instruction concerning the time and frequency of recitation. It may require the murīd to situate the prayer, whenever they recite it, within a cluster of other prayers and formulae, or involve making precise additions at certain points in the text. Specific to each murīd, such prescriptions are not arbitrary, and may indeed have been received by the shaykh in a dream or vision. Tailored to the murīd’s level, they may be changed as he advances on the spiritual journey.

The vitality of this mode of transmission can be illustrated through the practice of Aḥmad al-Ḥārūn (d.1962), widely recognised in Damascene sufi circles as an important saint, and his prominent disciples.¹² For example, al-Ḥārūn granted an ijāza to his disciple Maḥmūd al-Ghurāb to read the prayer once every thirty-six hours (this ijāza also encompassed the Awṛād, Ibn ‘Arabī’s daily prayers).¹³ He gave an ijāza to his disciple Mamdūḥ al-Naṣṣ to read it once every twenty-four hours (again, in addition to the Awṛād). Al-Naṣṣ in turn gave his son Muḥammad Sāmīr an ijāza to read the prayer daily, this time preceded by al-Nawawī’s Ḥizb and followed by recitation of sūrat al-Fātiḥa for the souls of the Prophet, Ibn ‘Arabī and al-Ḥārūn.¹⁴

Such instructions for reading the prayer sometimes migrate out of the sphere of esoteric transmission to accompany printed copies, thereby becoming available for general application. For example, ‘Ābidīn prefaces the prayer with a note explaining that his grandfather had received a direct instruction from Ibn ‘Arabī (through a karāma or act of spiritual grace granted the two of them) to read it twice daily, once following the morning (ṣubḥ) prayer and again after the sunset one (maghrib). In the case of a specific matter of importance, Ibn ‘Arabī had instructed him to read it three times following the afternoon prayer.¹⁵ ‘Ābidīn also provides detailed instructions concerning what must be recited before and after the prayer.¹⁶

From the ulama to the illiterate, conviction of the prayer’s potency is widespread in Damascene sufi circles and among Ibn ‘Arabī’s local devotees, who attach themselves to his mosque.¹⁷ One such devotee attributes this potency to the fact that the prayer encompasses many Divine Names, another to its special quality as the summation of all of Ibn ‘Arabī’s teachings, indeed ‘the essence of his entire knowledge.’ Devotees believe that if the prayer is recited with right intention, absolute certainty of its power and the aim of pleasing God while repudiating the pull of this world, it can draw the reciter into the Prophet’s presence (al-ḥaḍra al-Muḥammadiyya): the Prophet then appears to them ‘through Ibn ‘Arabī’, especially in dreams. Drawing on their personal experiences, some point out that whoever reads the prayer with sincerity of heart and utter conviction while making a specific plea will have their wish granted. They relate how they read it with the intention of seeking help in relation to concrete problems, and are always confident of a positive response. For example, one devotee tells how when he recites the prayer with this specific request in mind, Ibn 'Arabī appears to him in dreams and shows him how to solve practical problems at work that require technical knowledge in which he has no training. Whenever he is guided to solve a work problem in this way, he refuses payment for the job, for he attributes his success in it to Ibn 'Arabī's baraka or blessing, through the prayer, rather than his own effort. He relates with gratitude how he has developed a new career and improved his family's material circumstances through the help granted him in response to requests mediated through the prayer.

Istanbul

The earliest printed versions of the prayer appeared in Istanbul during the late 19th century, in Gümüşhanevi's *Majmū'at al-aḥzāb*¹⁸ and the Dalā'il al-khayrāt,¹⁹ for example. The first modern Turkish transliteration of the prayer was published in 1998 by a publishing company owned by a devotee of Ibn 'Arabī. This small booklet also provides the Arabic text and a clarification of the prayer's meanings in Turkish.²⁰ By 2004, more than thirty thousand copies had been printed, distributed free throughout Turkey in response to internet requests, via bookshops, in mail-shots, etc. It is reprinted every few months to meet demand, and people of all kinds order and read it, including many who are outwardly 'çok-modern'.

While the prayer thus circulates openly in print, it is also still transmitted through ijāza granting in 'hidden' sufi circles in Istanbul. For example the Naqshbandi Shaykh Ahmed Yivlik (d.2001) granted ijāzas to read the prayer to certain of his own disciples and to other sufis in Istanbul.²¹ For some his instruction was to read it twice a day, in certain cases following the Awṛād; for others, on its own. His own ijāza to read the prayer is connected to a line of Naqshbandi shaykhs.²²

The United Kingdom

During the late 1960s, a copy of the prayer was brought to London by Bulent Rauf (d.1987), a western-educated descendant of the Ottoman elite. Rauf was the great-grandson of Ismail Pasha (d.1895), khedive of Egypt from 1863 to 1879.²³ Ismail's daughter, Rauf's maternal grandmother, was Princess Fatma Hanim (b.1850), who died some time after the end of World War I.²⁴ Fatma Hanim had commissioned a copy of the prayer to be made for her by the 'Head Calligrapher', apparently in AH 1341/1922–23 CE: it was bound in red leather and embellished with gold. After she died, it came into her grandson's possession.

Rauf became the pivotal figure in a new religious movement that emerged under the name 'Beshara' in the south of England during the early 1970s. In response to the requests of young counterculture seekers interested in the spirituality of 'the east', he conveyed the teaching of Ibn 'Arabī as the basis of a monistic, experiential and supra-religious spirituality. He designed courses in 'esoteric education' aiming at self-knowledge, which were eventually offered in dedicated schools established by the movement.²⁵ Some of the early students noticed Fatma Hanim's beautiful copy of the Dawr in Rauf's possession, and his printed copy of the Awrād. They enquired whether these prayers could be made available in transliteration. Rauf agreed and assigned two students to the task, one of whom could read Arabic. This student rendered the text into Hebrew transliteration (his native tongue), and from that into English transliteration (they had no knowledge of a transliteration system for Arabic). Rauf corrected and completed the text with diacritical marks, and it was distributed to all involved in Beshara. He did not give guidelines for its recitation, but emphasised its protective effect. This text was published in 1981 alongside the original by the Muhyiddin Ibn 'Arabi Society (MIAS), which had been established during the mid-1970s by some of those involved in Beshara.²⁶ The inclusion of the phonetic English transliteration is specifically aimed at the non-Arabic-speaking Beshara constituency (which today has international extent) and others unable to read the Arabic original, making it possible for them to recite the text.²⁷ The MIAS website suggests how the prayer can be used for the purposes of protection: ‘this prayer...protects its recipient. In microfiche form, it is frequently carried as an amulet or displayed in a significant place.’²⁸ Many involved in Beshara wear the microfiche form in a silver encasement on a neck-chain: they also position it above the inside of a main door at home. Sometimes a framed photocopy of the first page of the prayer is displayed. Some read the prayer regularly, while others resort to it in times of difficulty or to ward off perceived evil.

Notes

1. The modern period has witnessed the widening accessibility of sufi resources beyond the initiated and prepared, a trend that has accelerated since the late 20th century. See for example Elizabeth Sirriyeh, Sufi Thought and its Reconstruction, in Suha Taji-Farouki and Basheer M. Nafi, eds., Islamic Thought in the Twentieth Century (London, 2004), pp.123–124; Garbi Schmidt, Sufi Charisma on the Internet, in David Westerlund, ed., Sufism in Europe and North America (London, 2004), pp. 109–126.

On the general impacts of print (and later mass education, literacy and new media) on traditional notions of religious authority and on systems for learning and transmitting religious knowledge, see for example Francis Robinson, ‘Technology and Religious Change: Islam and the Impact of Print’, Modern Asian Studies 27: 1 (1993), pp.229–251; Dale F. Eickelman, The Art of Memory: Islamic Education and its Social Reproduction, in Juan I. Cole, ed., Comparing Muslim Societies: Knowledge and the State in a World Civilization (Ann Arbor, MI, 1992), pp.97–132; idem, Islamic Religious Commentary and Lesson Circles: Is there a Copernican Revolution?, in G. W. Most, ed., Commentaries {Kommentar} (Göttingen, 1999), pp. 121–146.

While our interest here is in the contemporary situation, it should be noted that very few of the liturgical texts associated with the ṭarīqas remained confined to their membership even in pre-modern times.

2. Padwick’s survey of ‘popular’ prayer manuals gathered from cities across the Muslim world during the 1950s encompasses the Dawr, but she does not consider it among their best-known contents. In addition to the examples below, it appears in the popular prayer collection Manba’ al-sa’ādāt, p. 255, published in Beirut: see McGregor, ‘A Sufi Legacy in Tunis’, p. 275 n. 63. Our examples do not encompass the world of Shi’i Islam, but we would point out that the prayer appears to be less widely known and used there than in Sunni contexts.

3. On the ṣalawāt or taṣliya, the practice of calling down prayers and blessings upon the Prophet, see Annemarie Schimmel, And Muhammad is His Messenger: The Veneration of the Prophet in Islamic Piety (Chapel Hill, NC, 1985), pp. 92 ff; Padwick, Muslim Devotions, pp. 152 ff.

4. Held at a time when families gather at home for lunch after the Friday prayer, attendance at this majlis (established in 2001) is not substantial. During February 2003, the majlis was led by Muḥammad Amīn ‘Āshūr, a disciple of the revered Shadhili Aḥmad al-Ḥabbāl al-Rifā’ī. Beginning immediately after the end of the khaṭīb’s lesson, it opened with the calling down of peace and blessings upon the Prophet. A pamphlet was distributed: Ṣalawāt ‘alā al-nabī al-karīm sayyidinā rasūl Allāh li’l-shaykh Aḥmad al-Dardayrī al-Khawātī. ‘Āshūr called for recitation of sūrat al-Fātiḥa for the soul of Ibn ‘Arabī, and the assembly proceeded to recite the Dawr; printed in the pamphlet’s last few pages, at considerable speed. On completing this, the majlis recited sūrat al-Fātiḥa, a ṣalawāt by Aḥmad al-Dardayrī al-Khalwatī, al-Fātiḥa again, and Manzūmat asmā' Allāh al-ḥusnā al-Dardayrīya. A substantial amount of text was completed in forty minutes. 'Āshūr recited al-Fātiḥa and asked those present to recite it for the benefit of certain individuals in need. He then led the majlis in reading sūrat Yā Sīn. Thereafter, the tahlīl (lā ilāha illā Allāh) was repeated. Two majlis 'servants' arrived with large bags of bread, which they began to distribute, marking the end of the majlis. 'Āshūr continued to call down peace and blessings upon the Prophet followed by spontaneous supplication, in which he asked God to grant victory to the Muslims over those who aggress against them, to heal the sick, to forgive those who have transgressed, and to have mercy upon the dead. The congregation affirmed his emotional prayers with 'āmīn' at each pause. Reflecting the concerns of the hour, he asked God to destroy enemy planes, to grant victory to the Palestinians, and to protect Syria, using al-Fātiḥa as an adjuration throughout. He asked God to accept the majlis through the standing of the prophets, their wives and mothers, and the companions and saints, 'especially those at whose doorsteps we sit – Shaykh Muḥyī al-Dīn, and Shaykh al-Nābulusī – through their baraka and karāmāt, achieved through Allāh Himself.' He asked God to compensate anyone who had spent towards the majlis and requested donations for an unnamed person in difficult circumstances.

5. According to one of the mosque imams, this majlis – set apart from all others by recitation of Muṣṭafā al-Bakrī's Wird al-saḥar (known also as al-Faṭḥ al-qudsī wa'l-kashf al-unsī), was established over seventy years ago by the Rifa'i Hāshim Abū Ṭawq (1847–1962). According to Muhammad Mutī' al-Hafiz and Nizar Abaza, Ta'rīkh 'ulamā' Dimashq fī'l-qarn al-rābi' 'ashar al-hijrī' (Damascus, 1986), 2, p. 769, Abū Ṭawq personally led recitation of Wird al-saḥar at the mosque every Saturday before fajr for forty-five years. Some local sources hold that this majlis was instituted by Muṣṭafā al-Bakrī himself together with 'Abd al-Ghanī al-Nābulusī, and suggest that it has been held there continuously since. In 1960, Abū Ṭawq handed responsibility for the majlis to Salīm al-'Amm, who had committed himself to the mosque in 1942.

Al-'Amm opened a majlis during February 2003 with recitation of al-Fātiḥa, Qur'anic verses, supplication and the istighfār (forgiveness) formula. A booklet was distributed: Majmū' al-awrād al-kabīr: yashtamil 'alā al-ma'thūr 'an al-a'imma wa'l-aqtāb min al-ṣalawāt 'alā al-nabī wa'l-awrād wa'l-ad'iya wa'l-adhkār wa'l-aḥzāb wa'l-istighfārāt. Al-'Amm led the majlis in reciting with great beauty Wird al-saḥar, with its repetitions of Divine Names and lyrical flourishes. At a transitional point, the majlis 'servant' distributed halva sandwiches. Al-'Amm launched into spontaneous, at times tearful, supplication. He called for peace upon the Prophet and his companions, ulama, muḥaddithūn, and all people of faith. Salams were addressed to the Prophet, referring to the fact that the majlis was taking place in his presence, and to Muṣṭafā al-Bakrī. After further supplication, recitation of al-Fātiḥa and the calling down of blessings upon the prophet, he returned to the wird. Having completed it, he repeated the tahlīl alone, then followed each time by an emphatic 'Lord have mercy on me!' or 'Lord forgive me!' After further supplication, he led those gathered in reciting the Dawr al-a' lā at some speed. At its end, he emphasised to the majlis the importance of reading the Dawr frequently, at least once a day. With this the majlis ended, as the time for the dawn adhān approached.

6. For example, in 2003 it appeared in a small booklet: al-Dawr al-a' lā li-sīdī sulṭān al-ʿarīfīn wa ʿumdat al-mukāshifīn wa zubdat al-wāṣilīn wa khātimat al-awliyāʾ al-muḥaqqiqīn, al-shaykh al-akbar mawlānā Muḥyī al-Dīn ibn al-ʿArabī, raḍiya Allāh taʿālā ʿanhu wa arḍāhu. It is prefaced by a hadith that stresses the potency of certain Qurʾanic formulae when repeated, and followed by a poem in praise of Ibn ʿArabī by local poet Aḥmad al-Zarrūq (d.1955: on him see Hafiz and Abaza, Taʾrīkh ʿulamāʾ Dimashq, 3, pp.257–259), another hadith (underlining the importance of avoiding the prohibited), the end of the Thursday morning prayer from the Awṛād attributed to Ibn ʿArabī but without explicit identification of its origin, and finally a ṣalawāt by Aḥmad al-Badawī.

7. For example, in the two pamphlets mentioned in notes 5–6 above, on pp. 185–193 of Majmūʾ al-awṛād al-kabīr. The pamphlet Ṣalawāt ʿalā al-nabī al-karīm sayyidinā rasūl Allāh liʾl-shaykh Aḥmad al-Dardayrī al-Khalwatī begins with an open permission to read the ṣalawāt of al-Dardayrī (tracing back his Khalwati initiation to Muṣṭafā al-Bakrī and then Muḥammad b. Sālīm al-Ḥifnāwī). The ṣalawāt is followed by sūrat Yā Sīn, the Dawr and additional ṣalawāt. Pamphlets such as these two carry a statement that they are a waqf of the majlis.

8. Al-Awṛād al-dāʾima maʿa al-ṣalawāt al-qāʾima, collected and arranged by Muhammad Abuʾl-Yusr ʿAbidin, ed. shaykh Bashir al-Bari, former Mufti of Damascus, 4th edn. (Damascus, 1991), pp. 38–45. On ʿAbidin, see Hafiz and Abaza, Taʾrīkh ʿulamāʾ Dimashq, 2, pp.968–973. According to sources in Damascus who knew him, he advised people to read some of Ibn ʿArabīʾ writings daily, suggesting specifically al-Futūḥāt al-Makkīya.

9. Awṛād usbūʿiya liʾl-shaykh al-ʿarīf Muḥyī al-Dīn Ibn ʿArabī (Istanbul and Damascus, n.d.), pp.60–66, published by Kitsan (Istanbul) and Dar al-Bayruti (Damascus). On Kitsan and for further details concerning the genesis of this publication, see below.

10. For example, Abū ʿAbdallāh Muḥammad b. Sulaymān al-Jazūlī, Dalāʾ il al-khayrāt wa yalīhi qaṣīdat al-burda wa qaṣīdat al-munfarija [wa bi-hāmishihi majmūʾat al-awṛād waʾl-aḥzāb waʾl-adʿiya waʾl-istighāthāt], intro., Salah al-Din Abuʾl-Jihad Nakahmayy (Aleppo, 1420), on the margin of pp.241–251: it is among a collection of prayers independent of the Dalāʾ il, added to the text when it was first printed.

11. Al-Ghurab, al-Tarīq ilā Allāh, pp.194–197. Although al-Ghurab suggests that this is a critical edition he does not indicate which or how many manuscripts he used and gives very few variants. (He also presents a critical edition of the Awṛād, for which he again provides little detail on the manuscript base used. See pp.173–193.) Born in Tanta in 1922, al-Ghurab settled in Damascus during the 1950s: on him see further below. For a partial list of his publications, see Ahmad b. Muhammad Ghunaym, al-ʿArīf biʾllāh al-shaykh Aḥmad al-Hārūn: siratuhu wa karāmātuhu (Damascus, 1992), p.67 n.1.

12. Born in al-Salihiyya, Damascus in 1900, al-Ḥārūn worked for many years as a stonemason. He acquired literacy skills late in life, and dedicated himself to studying and writing on the natural sciences and issues of faith. Widely circulating stories of his karāmāt centre on his ability to cure the sick. He reportedly had a very close relationship to Ibn ‘Arabī (his writings include a commentary on K. Mā lā yu’awwal ‘alayhi). Al-Ḥārūn’s relationships with his own disciples had no particular ṭarīqa framework. On him see Ghunaym, al-‘Arif bi’llāh al-shaykh Aḥmad al-Ḥārūn; Hafiz and Abaza, Ta’rīkh ‘ulamā’ Dimashq, 2, pp. 753–762; ‘Izzat Hasriya, al-shaykh Arslān al-Dimashqī wa fīhi lamḥa ‘an al-shaykh Aḥmad al-Ḥārūn (n.p., 1965), pp. 163–180.

13. See al-Ghurab, al-Ṭarīq ilā Allāh, p. 194. Al-Ghurāb first encountered al-Ḥārūn in 1955 and remained with him until his death (interview with al-Ghurāb, Damascus, 2003). For the details of their relationship and perceptions of al-Ghurāb as al-Ḥārūn’s khalīfa, see Suha Taji-Farouki, At the Resting-place of the Seal of Saints: Muḥyī al-Dīn Ibn ‘Arabī and his Mausoleum-Mosque Complex in Contemporary Damascus (forthcoming).

14. Interview with Muḥammad Sāmīr al-Naṣṣ (Damascus, 2004): al-Naṣṣ is a US-trained medical doctor, presently imam in Nafidh Mosque and fiqh teacher at Ma’had al-Fath. A recognised expert in the readings and recitation of the Qur’an (he teaches recitation at the Shaykh Muḥyī’l-Dīn Mosque), he is author of al-Wasīla ilā fahm ḥaqīqat al-tawassul (Damascus, 2003) and Mafhūm al-bid’a bayna al-ḏīq wa’l-sa’a (Damascus, 2002). On him see <http://www.as-shifa.org.uk/ulum/shaykhsamir.htm> and <http://www.ihyaafoundation.com/index.php?page=scholars#samir>. Note that al-Nawawī composed a daily wird and K. al-Adhkār al-yawmīya wa’l-laylīya.

A separate example arises in the Shadhili Muḥammad al-Ḥāshimī al-Jazā’irī {al-Tilimsānī} (d.1961) granting an ijāza to read the prayer to the Rifa’i Muḥammad al-Durra, who granted it to his son, Maḥmūd Muḥammad al-Durra, presently imam at the al-Talha wa’l-Zubayr Mosque in ‘Ayn Tarma on the outskirts of Damascus. Al-Durra has been active in publishing Rifa’i texts: for example, Mi’rāj al-wuṣūl ilā ḥaḍarāt al-riḍā wa’l-qabūl bi-tawajjuhāt sādātīnā al-sāda anjāl al-marḥūm al-sayyid Tāj al-Dīn al-Ṣayyādī (Damascus, 1418) (interview with al-Durra, Damascus, 2004). On al-Ḥāshimī, see Hafiz and Abaza, Ta’rīkh ‘ulamā’ Dimashq, 2, pp. 747–751.

15. Al-Awrād al-dā’ima ma’a al-ṣalawāt al-qā’ima, p. 38.

16. Ibid., pp. 38–39; 45. The supplicant must first recite al-Fātiḥa with the basmala four times, each with the same breath, then the first three verses of sūrat al-An’ām, then a specific ṣalawāt formula seven times, followed by a specific prologue to the Dawr. After completing the Dawr, he must recite sūrat al-Inshirāḥ three times followed by another ṣalawāt, completing by reciting al-Fātiḥa for the Prophet and Ibn ‘Arabī. Historical examples of such recommendations are detailed below.

17. This paragraph draws on interviews in Damascus in 2003–04.

18. Gümüṣhanevi became attached to Abdülhamid II’s court and served his regime and pan-Islamic policies. On him see Alexander Knysh, Islamic Mysticism: A Short History (Leiden, 2000), p. 228; Butrus Abu-Manneh, Shaykh Ahmed Ziya’uddin Gümüṣhanevi and the Ziya’i-Khalidi Sub-order, in Frederick de Jong, ed., Shia Islam, Sects and Sufism: Historical Dimensions, Religious Practice and Methodological Considerations (Utrecht, 1992), pp. 105–117.

19. For example: Reşid Efendi 1135 (AH 1288), Düğümlü Baba 500 (AH 1285), Nafiz Paşa 762 (AH 1285), Hayri Abdullah Efendi 230 (AH 1302). In the first three printings it is pp. 197–203, in the last one, pp. 193–199. In all cases, the text of the Hizb of al-Nawawī is on the margin of the Dawr, and it is followed by al-qaşida al-munfarija. In currency in Istanbul today is a facsimile reprint of Hayri Abdullah Efendi 230 as Delâil-i-Hayrat: Salâvât-i-Şerifler (Istanbul, n.d.). Not all more recent editions of the Dalâ’ il printed in Istanbul incorporate the prayer. For example, it appears in Delâilü’l-Hayrat ve Şevârikü’l Envâr fî zikri’s-salâti ale’n-nebiyyi’l-muhtâr: Delâilü’l-Hayrat ve Tercümesi (Istanbul, n.d.), pp. 288–301, but not in Delâil’ül Hayrât ve Şevârik’ul Envâr (Istanbul, n.d.). Both are pocket versions. The version incorporating the prayer is published (by Yasin Yayinevi) and sold within the orthodox Naqshbandi neighbourhood of Çarşamba in the Fatih district.

20. Şeyh’ül Ekber Muhyiddîn Ibn’ül Arabî (K. S.) Özel Dua’si “Hizb-ud’Devr’ul A’lâ”: Orjinali, Türkçe okunuşu ve Mânâsi (Istanbul, n.d.). The translator is Kemal Osmanbey, a Syrian of Turkish origin, his grandfather having been an official at the court of Sultan Abdülaziz who was granted lands in Syria. Resident in Istanbul since 1988, Osmanbey brought a copy of the prayer from the Shaykh Muhyi’l-Din Mosque for Remzi Gökner, owner of Kitsan publishers. They agreed that Osmanbey would translate it (possibly with the help of Gökner’s wife Şukran Gökner: see below) and Kitsan would publish it. Osmanbey is a medical doctor who currently practises acupuncture. He is particularly interested in the spirit world: his publications include Ruh Aleminde bir Seyahat (Istanbul, 1995) and Haqa’iq ‘an tanâsukh al-arwâh wa’l-ḥassa al-sâdisa (Beirut, 2002). Kitsan, established by Gökner in 1980, specialises in sufi books: its publications include a few Turkish translations of works attributed to Ibn ‘Arabî such as Tuhfe’tüs Sefere and Mevaki’un Nücüm. On Kitsan, see <http://www.kitsan.com>.

21. Yivlik, who worked as a civil servant, has been described by close disciples as ‘a spiritual son and lover of Ibn ‘Arabî’. According to one disciple, he read continuously from the Fuṣūṣ al-ḥikam and al-Futūḥât al-Makkîya and made frequent visits to Ibn ‘Arabî’s tomb in Damascus. While himself not a scholar, he has rendered at least one sufi work into modern Turkish: Selim Divane, Miftah-u müşkilât’ül-ârifîn âdâb-u tariki’l-vâsilîn, tr. from Ottoman by Ahmed Sadik Yivlik (Istanbul, 1998). Yivlik led a circle of about twenty disciples in Istanbul reading translations of Ibn ‘Arabî’s works, including some non-Turks and illiterates. Gökner’s son and wife Şukran were among his close disciples, his wife having personally funded the joint Kitsan–Dar al-Bayruti publication Awrad usbū’îya li’l-shaykh al-‘arif Muhyi’l-Dîn Ibn ‘Arabî detailed above. One thousand copies were published, the majority distributed free in Damascus in 2004, the remainder in Istanbul. Dar al-Bayruti has planned a reprint, which Kitsan has stipulated must also be distributed free. The dedication in the booklet points to the relationship between Şukran Gökner, Yivlik and Ibn ‘Arabî. She writes: ‘To Ahmed Sadiq Yivlik, who made known to me the Shaykh al-Akbar’s stature. May God sanctify his secret and cause him to live in His Spacious Gardens with the Shaykh al-Akbar.' Şukran Göknaar has herself published a few titles with Kitsan, including Rüya Tabirleri. She intends to facilitate production of a Turkish version of the Awrad.

22. His shaykh 'Ali Bahjat Efendi received it from the latter's shaykh Hayrullah Efendi, who received it from his shaykh Ali Bahjat Efendi Ekber. Thanks are due to Mahmud Kiliç for this information.

23. A controversial figure in Egyptian history seen either as an extravagant incompetent or a far-sighted if unlucky modernizer, Ismail eventually became unpopular both at home and with the European powers, and was finally deposed by Sultan Abdülhamid under European pressure. See M. E. Yapp, The Making of the Modern Near East, 1792–1923 (London and New York, 1987), pp. 155–157; 214–215; Albert Hourani, Arabic Thought in the Liberal Age 1798–1939 (Cambridge, 1989), passim. See also Family Tree of Mehmet Ali Bulent Rauf, in Bulent Rauf, The Last Sultans, ed. Meral Arim and Judy Kearns (Cheltenham, 1995).

24. See The Child across Time, in Bulent Rauf, Addresses II (Roxburgh, Scotland, 2001), p. 90. She was the sister of Mehmet Tevfik Pasha, who succeeded his father Ismail as khedive, and of Ahmet Fuad I Pasha, who would become the first king of Egypt.

Fatma Hanim appears to have had a special connection with the Celvetiyye, assuming responsibility with her daughter for restoring the mausoleum-mosque complex of the Celveti saint and effectively the first shaykh of the ṭarīqa Aziz Mahmud Hüdayi (d.1628) in Üsküdar, Istanbul, after it was damaged in a thunderstorm in 1910. On this complex see Raymond Lifchez, The Lodges of Istanbul, in Lifchez, ed., The Dervish Lodge: Architecture, Art and Sufism in Ottoman Turkey (Berkeley, LA and London, 1992), pp. 113–117. On her pivotal role in the renovation (which took place some years after the damage was inflicted) and the gifts and donations she made, see H. Kamil Yilmaz, Azîz Mahmûd Hüdâyî: Hayati, Eserleri, Tarîkati (Istanbul, 1999), p. 262 and n. 20; Kemaleddin Şenocak, Kutbu'l-ârifîn Seyyid Azîz Mahmûd Hüdâyî (K. S.) (Istanbul, 1970) p. 30 n. 2.

25. For a comprehensive study of the movement and associated figures see Suha Taji-Farouki, Beshara and Ibn 'Arabî: A Movement of Sufi Spirituality in the Modern World (forthcoming).

26. The Hizbu-l Wiqāyah of Muhyiddin Ibn 'Arabi (MIAS, Oxford); reprinted 2003. The Awrad were published first in 1979 as Muhyiddin Ibn 'Arabi, Wird (MIAS, Oxford); reprinted 1988.

27. See <http://www.ibnarabisociety.org/Publications.html>.

28. Ibid.

2

A PRAYER ACROSS TIME

Historical dimensions

Based on the manuscript collection in the Suleymaniye Library (Istanbul), which holds over forty distinct copies, it is possible to construct a picture of the transmission, presentation and use of the Dawr during the last four hundred years.¹ Around a half of these copies are explicitly dated, or can be dated approximately based on contextual information: the earliest dates from the late 11th/17th century, the greatest number from the 13th/19th century.² The prayer appears in a variety of settings. For example there are seven commentaries, four in Arabic and three in Ottoman Turkish, the earliest probably from the late 12th/18th century.³ Beautiful individual copies bound alone or with another short prayer and embellished with gold were most likely produced at the request of important figures (like that brought to London by Rauf).⁴ The Dawr sometimes appears as the only prayer alongside several non-devotional works, of which some may also be attributed to Ibn ‘Arabī.⁵ It is found in compilations devoted exclusively to prayers and prayer-commentaries, including at times other prayers attributed to Ibn ‘Arabī,⁶ and other kinds of devotional text.⁷ It appears also in collections of prayers and non-devotional tracts, the latter sometimes attributed to figures associated with the school of Ibn ‘Arabī.⁸ There are copies of the prayer in personal notebooks that hold an intimate record of an individual’s favourite poetic verses, prayers, Qur’anic verses and fragments from the works of various Islamic authorities, in addition to spiritual reflections, supplications, talismans, numerological codes and short devotional texts.⁹

The repeated copying of the prayer in diverse settings bears witness to its circulation and use over the last four hundred years.¹⁰ Pointing to its constituency of readers during the closing years of Ottoman rule, the Suleymaniye copies have been drawn from collections gathered from tekkes and dergas associated with diverse ṭarīqas (such as Şazeli and Dügümlü Baba), madrasas attached to mosques, pashas' collections and collections endowed by sultans. The earlier copies provide some indication of the prayer's users four hundred years ago, but chains of transmission or authorities (sanad, pl. asnād)¹¹ attached to seven copies make it possible to trace the history of its use and transmission beyond the date of our earliest copy to the time of its author. These chains illuminate two aspects in the prayer's transmission. Vertically, they identify key figures in its passage from generation to generation, while suggesting that it has indeed been in continuous use in every generation since its author's day. Horizontally, the chains elucidate the circles within which the prayer was disseminated, pointing to their geographical loci, ṭarīqa affiliations and intellectual orientations and identifying figures who served as a nexus between different circles within the larger network. We give below biographical information concerning figures in six chains,¹² arranged by century from the earliest to the most recent. The treatment does not aspire to be exhaustive, but focuses on significant historical figures.¹³ The chains themselves are presented as they appear in our sources in an Appendix. A diagram of these chains is also provided below, using readily identifiable names as elaborated in the biographical notes. After each name in these notes, the chain(s) in which the figures concerned appear are identified by a capital letter, for ease of location in terms of sources (as set out in the Appendix), and in the diagram (overleaf).

Any discussion of such chains must pay due attention to the cultural and social setting from which they emanate, with its associated practices and priorities. With this in mind, they can be investigated in terms of the plausibility of their individual links, encompassing chronology and the circumstances of the ijāza implicit within and underpinning each link.¹⁴ We attempt such an investigation below. Finally, we consider how the picture that emerges from these chains can illuminate important trends and tendencies in Islamic culture and thought during specific historical periods.

Historical dimensions

Chains of Transmission of al-Dawr al-a'la

Transmitters of the prayer

7th century AH

Sa‘d al-Dīn Muḥammad b. Muḥyī al-Dīn Ibn ‘Arabī
{E} [d.656/1258]

The second son of Ibn ‘Arabī; born in Malatya in AH 618. He left an important diwan. A student of hadith, he visited Cairo and lived in Aleppo.¹⁵

Raḍī al-Dīn Ibrāhīm b. M b. Ibrāhīm b. Abū Bakr b. M al-Ṭabarī al-Makkī {D} [d.722/1322]

Also known as al-Raḍī al-Ṭabarī and Raḍī al-Dīn Abū Ishāq, a Shafi‘i born in AH 636 who held the position of imam at the Maqām Ibrāhīm (‘Station of Abraham’) in Mecca.¹⁶ Son of a shari-fian (Husayni) family respected far and wide for its learning and one of the oldest of the established families in Mecca (Raḍī al-Dīn’s ancestor settled there c.570), well-connected and with top-ranking positions of qāḍī (judge), imam, mufti, khaṭīb (preacher) and teacher passing from generation to generation. Writing in the 17th century, the biographer al-Muḥibbī reported that from 673/1274 the family had held the imamate of the Maqām Ibrāhīm exclusively and continuously.¹⁷ Raḍī al-Dīn studied under prominent figures and became learned in the Shafi‘i madhhab (school of law). He was outstanding in piety, humbleness and charitableness, and never left the Hijaz.¹⁸ The many examples listed by the biographer Ibn al-‘Irāqī suggest that he was a significant figure in transmitting works to his contemporaries, including many visitors to Mecca.¹⁹

Abū Muḥammad al-Qāsim b. Muẓaffar b. Maḥmūd b. Tāj al-
Umanā’ Aḥmad Ibn ‘Asākir {A}

A member of the Banū ‘Asākir clan, which held an important position in Damascus during AH 470–660 and produced a dynasty of Shafi‘i scholars.²⁰ He appears under the full name given here as having received an ijāza from Ibn ‘Arabī for the latter’s K. al-Mu’ashsharāt al-maymūna.²¹ According to Yahya, he also appears in a chain attached to al-Futūḥāt al-Makkīya (where his name is given as Abū Muḥammad al-Qāsim b. al-Muẓaffar b. Muḥammad al-Ṭabīb), for which he also received an ijāza directly from the author.²² In a collection in his hand of works by Ibn ‘Arabī and Ṣadr al-Dīn Qūnawī, al-Qāsim refers to the latter in terms suggesting he may have been among Qūnawī’s disciples.²³ Among those to whom he gave ijāzas is Burhān al-Dīn al-Tanūkhī.²⁴

8th century AH

Sharaf al-Dīn ‘Abd al-Mu’min b. Khalaf al-Dimyātī

{E} [d.705/1306]

Born in AH 613, an Egyptian hadith scholar and one of the most important figures in hadith transmission of the last third of the 7th century AH. He is best known for his mu’jam shuyūkh or dictionary of authorities. This gives the names of his shaykhs and those he met and from whom he received works in many fields, providing a record of hadith and other texts collected during numerous travels in Egypt, the Hijaz, Iraq and Syria.²⁵ His first visit to Syria was in 645. He returned to the north of the country on either side of a visit to Baghdad in 650, and between late 654 and late 656 he stayed several times (or possibly settled continuously) in Damascus.²⁶ The mu’jam includes Muḥammad b. Muḥammad b. ‘Alī Ibn al-‘Arabī Sa’d al-Dīn al-Ṭā’ī al-Dimashqī.²⁷ al-Nūr/Nūr al-Dīn Abū’l-Ḥasan ‘Alī b. ‘Umar b. Abū Bakr al-Wānī [al-Khilāṭī al-Ṣūfī] {F} [d.727/1327]

Born in c.635 or 637 and known as Ibn al-Ṣalāḥ, he settled in Egypt. Two chains attached to al-Futūḥāt al-Makkīya give him transmitting from Ibn ‘Arabī and to Ismā‘īl al-Jabartī.²⁸ The silsila (chain of transmission) of the khirqā akbarīya (akbarian mantle) as given by Muḥammad Murtaḍā al-Zabīdī also passes from Ibn ‘Arabī to him and from him to Ismā‘īl al-Jabartī.²⁹ He appears in the ma‘ājim shuyūkh of certain of his contemporaries.³⁰ He took works from various well-known authorities and was celebrated for his teaching and transmission of hadith, in which he connected young to old during his long life (he died aged 92).³¹

Nāṣir al-Dīn Muḥammad b. ‘Alī b. Yūsuf b. Idrīs al Kurdī al-Ḥarāwī³² {E} [d.781/1379]

Born in Dimyat, his date of birth is given as AH 696/7 (or 687 or 701).³³ Through the agency of his maternal uncle ‘Imād al-Dīn al-Dimyātī, he audited works from Sharaf al-Dīn ‘Abd al-Mu‘min b. Khalaf al-Dimyātī (who died when Nāṣir al-Dīn was eight years old).³⁴ He also received ijāzas from other shaykhs in Cairo. He transmitted to hadith scholars, linked young to old through his long life, and became unrivalled in this field. People sought him out to audit works and acquire samā’s (certificates of audition) from him (the biographer Ibn al-‘Irāqī reports that he studied under him many works received from al-Dimyātī through ijāzas). He was a soldier who served as one of the sultan’s axe-bearers (and was thus known as al-Ṭabardār). He was well known for his piety, probity and love of the good. He transmitted to Muḥammad b. Muqbil al-Ḥalabī.³⁵

9th century AH

Burhān al-Dīn Abū Ishāq Ibrāhīm b. Aḥmad b. ‘Abd al-Wāḥid b. Sa’īd al-Tanūkhī al-Ba’lī³⁶ {A} [d.800/1398]

Known as al-Burhān al-Shāmī, he was born in Damascus in AH 709 and grew up there, but later settled in Cairo (his family originated from Ba’l [Ba’albek]). He received ijāzas from over three hundred (by some accounts nearly four hundred) authorities, including al-Qāsim Ibn ‘Asākir. He studied hadith, fiqh or jurisprudence (in Hama, Aleppo and Cairo as well as other locations) and Qur’an readings/recitation, and was authorised to teach and issue legal opinions. A highly respected scholar, he became 'shaykh of Egypt' both in hadith transmission and Qur'an readings. Among the many who studied under and transmitted works from him was Ibn Ḥajar al-'Asqalānī, who reports that he spent a long time in close companionship with him (and experienced 'the baraka of his supplication'). Ibn Ḥajar detailed hadiths narrated by those listed in al-Tanūkhī's mu'jam, and developed certain of al-Tanūkhī's works on hadith.³⁷ The historian and biographer Shams al-Dīn al-Dhahabī (d.748/1352) also studied under al-Tanūkhī and transmitted hadith from him. When al-Tanūkhī lost his sight, he became known as al-Burhān al-Shāmī 'the Blind'.³⁸

Ismā'īl al-Jabartī al-Zabīdī {F} [d.806/1404]

Charismatic sufi shaykh and ardent follower of Ibn 'Arabī. Together with his disciple 'Abd al-Karīm al-Jīlī (d.832/1429), he disseminated the works of Ibn 'Arabī in Zabid, giving rise to a sufi movement in Rasulid Yemen committed to his teachings and those of his school.³⁹ al-Jamāl/Jamāl al-Dīn [Abū'l-Mahāsīn] Muḥammad b. Ibrāhīm [b. Aḥmad b. Abū Bakr] al-Murshidī [al-Makkī] {D}

Meccan hadith scholar who transmitted works in hadith to 'Umar Ibn Fahd al-Makkī.⁴⁰

Ibn Ḥajar al-'Asqalānī {A} [d.852/1448]

Prominent Egyptian hadith scholar (author of Fath al-bārī, the great commentary on the Saḥīḥ), biographer and Shafī'i mufti; often regarded as the greatest 'ālim (scholar) of his generation, he held the position of Chief Judge of Egypt and Syria for a total of twenty-one years.⁴¹ As noted above, he transmitted from al-Tanūkhī. In evaluating his attitude towards Ibn 'Arabī Knysh describes him as an adversary and critic,⁴² but suggests at the same time that, in spite of some biographers' attempts to depict him as an implacable enemy, Ibn Ḥajar presented the widest possible spectrum of opinions on Ibn 'Arabī and avoided any clear-cut judgement of heresy or unbelief.

On this basis, he concludes that his position can be described as ‘agnostic’.⁴³ Ibn Ḥajar’s writings were for some time to come perhaps the last to present a favourable view of Ibn Taymīya outside of strict Hanbali circles (by the mid-14th century the salafi view of Islam as articulated by Ibn Taymīya was largely eclipsed by the Ash‘ari–sufi ulama establishment, which dominated the Sunni cultural milieu).⁴⁴

Muḥammad Abū’l-Faṭḥ b. Abū Bakr [Zayn al-Dīn/al-Zayn] al-Marāghī [Sharaf al-Dīn al-Qurashī al-Makkī] {F} [d.859/1455]
Known as al-Marāghī al-ṣaghīr (‘the younger’), born in Medina in AH 775, he was a faqīh (jurist) and hadith scholar who left a number of works and appears in many chains of transmission. According to one of them, he transmitted Ibn Arabī’s works and all that he transmitted to Zakariyā al-Anṣārī. He transmitted his fihris (bibliography) to ‘Umar b. Taqī al-Dīn Ibn Fahd’.⁴⁵ He died in Mecca and has been described as a saint.⁴⁶

Muḥammad b. Muqbil al-Ḥalabī al-Ṣīrafī {E} [d.870/1466]
A highly important hadith transmitter (described as musnid al-dunyā fī ‘aṣrihi, ‘the most important hadith transmitter on earth in his time’), as the last remaining person to have transmitted from al-Fakhr Ibn al-Bukhārī’s last living companion (al-Ṣalāḥ M b. Ibrāhīm b. Abū ‘Umar al-Maqdisī al-Ṣāliḥī al-Ḥanbalī), and thus from al-Fakhr himself through a single intermediary.⁴⁷ Those who transmitted hadith from Muḥammad b. Muqbil during his long life participated in the honour associated with his ‘high’ chain of authorities, flowing from his status as last link with a revered, bygone generation. They included Muḥammad b. ‘Abd al-Raḥmān al-Sakhāwī⁴⁸ and Jalāl al-Dīn al-Suyūṭī, to whom Muḥammad b. Muqbil sent a written ijāza (from Aleppo to Egypt) in AH 869.⁴⁹

Sirāj al-Dīn/al-Sirāj ‘Umar [Najm al-Dīn] b. Muḥammad [Taqī al-Dīn] Ibn Fahd al-Makkī {D} [d.885/1480] Known also as Abū’l-Qāsim and Abū Ḥafṣ, a sharifian (al-Hāshimī al-‘Alawī) and a Shafī‘i, he was born c.812. His grandfather had taken his father Taqī al-Dīn (b.787 in Egypt) to settle in Mecca, where he audited works and received ijāzas from many shaykhs, and became a well-respected authority and prolific author.⁵⁰ The family produced a number of important transmitters, including ‘Umar.⁵¹ ‘Umar detailed hadiths narrated by those listed in the mu‘jam of Abū’l-Faṭḥ Muḥammad al-Marāghī, among others.⁵² He transmitted to Zakariyā al-Anṣārī and al-Suyūṭī, among others.⁵³ He left a number of bibliographies and lists of teachers (mashyakha) pertaining both to himself and to others, and various works, including important historical works focusing on Mecca: Itḥāf al-warā bi-akhbār Umm al-Qurā; al-Taysīr bi-tarājim al-Ṭabarīyīn; al-Durr al-kamīn bi-dhayl al-‘Iqd al-thamīn (fī ta’rīkh al-balad al-amīn).⁵⁴

10th century AH

Jalāl al-Dīn al-Suyūṭī {E} [d.911/1505]

Great Egyptian polymath, prolific author and ‘orthodox’ (Shadhili) sufi who spearheaded an apology for sufism and its leading figures. This encompassed a defence of the orthodoxy of Ibn ‘Arabī in, for example, Tanbīh al-ghabī bi-tabrī‘at Ibn ‘Arabī, written as a refutation of al-Biqā‘ī’s Tanbīh al-ghabī bi-takfīr Ibn al-Fāriḍ wa Ibn ‘Arabī.⁵⁵ Those from whom he transmitted included Muḥammad b. Muqbil al-Ḥalabī.⁵⁶

[‘Izz al-Dīn] ‘Abd al-‘Azīz b. ‘Umar Ibn Fahd al-Makkī {D} [d.921–22/1515–16]

A Shafi‘ī known also as Abū’l-Khayr and Abū Fāris, he was born in Mecca in AH 850. He audited works from his father ‘Umar Ibn Fahd al-Makkī and grandfather Taqī al-Dīn. His father acquired ijāzas for him from various scholars including Ibn Ḥajar al-‘Asqalānī,⁵⁷ and took him to audit works from al-Marāghī among others. He then travelled widely through the Hijaz, Egypt, Syria and Palestine, gathering uncountable *samā‘*s and ijāzas. He read works with Zakariyā al-Anṣārī and spent time with al-Sakhāwī, among others.

He distinguished himself particularly in hadith scholarship in the Hijaz (he signed himself khādim al-ḥadīth fī l-ḥaram al-Makkī, ‘the servant of hadith in the Sacred Precinct of Mecca’).⁵⁸ His mu’jam shuyūkh encompasses a thousand shaykhs.⁵⁹ In addition to works on hadith, he produced Nuzhat dhawī al-aḥlām bi-akḥbār al-khuṭabā’ wa’l-a’imma wa quḍāt balad Allāh al-ḥarām (‘The dreamer’s stroll through the stories of preachers, imams and judges of God’s sacred land’). The historian Muḥammad Ibn Ṭūlūn was among those who transmitted from him,⁶⁰ while those to whom he transmitted included Yahyā b. Makram b. Muḥibb al-Dīn {Abū’l-Ma’ālī} b. Aḥmad al-Ṭabarī.⁶¹

Zakarīyā b. Muḥammad al-Anṣārī {F/A} [d.926/1520]

Born in AH 823–24, a revered Egyptian sufi and Shafi’i authority. He studied, among others, under Ibn Ḥajar al-‘Asqalānī,⁶² and became associated with numerous ṭuruq (pl. of ṭarīqa). His renown in the exoteric sciences (especially fiqh: he acted as Shafi’i grand qāḍī for twenty years and his commentaries on Shafi’i law became part of the madrasa curriculum) enabled him to protect his spiritual life from external scrutiny. He shared this dimension only with his closest pupils, such as ‘Abd al-Wahhāb al-Sha’rānī, who regarded him first and foremost as a saint and recorded his karāmāt.⁶³ His many works include some relating to taṣawwuf (sufism), such as commentaries on the writings of al-Qushayrī and Shaykh Arslān.⁶⁴ During the controversy caused in Cairo by the anti-monistic campaign of al-Biqā’ī aimed at Ibn al-Fāriḍ and Ibn ‘Arabī (874/1469), the sultan sought his expert opinion to put an end to the agitation caused by the affair: he defended them.⁶⁵ His many students included Badr al-Dīn al-Ghazzī,⁶⁶ who received ijāzas in all of Zakarīyā al-Anṣārī’s works when he studied under him during a visit to Cairo.⁶⁷ According to one chain, Zakarīyā al-Anṣārī transmitted the works of Ibn ‘Arabī (and all that the latter transmitted) from Abū’l-Faḥ al-Marāghī.⁶⁸

‘Abd al-Wahhāb b. Aḥmad al-Sha‘rānī⁶⁹ {F} [d.973/1565]

Egyptian scholar, Shafi‘i mufti, historian of sufism (through his ṭabaqāt or biographical compilations, among them the immensely popular al-Ṭabaqāt al-kubrā), sufi and apologist for sufis. He was a devoted student and defender of the orthodoxy of Ibn ‘Arabī (through, among others, the ‘deliberate interpolation’ hypothesis),⁷⁰ and popularised his teachings through the accessible and widely circulated al-Yawāqīt wa’l-jawāhir, for example. The best known and most exalted of his teachers was Zakariyā al-Anṣārī, who initiated him into the way in AH 914.⁷¹ His sufism has been described as ‘orthodox, middle-of-the-road’ (he identified with the orthodox way of al-Junayd and attacked the excesses of some ṭarīqas).⁷² His stance as a sufi, *faqīh*⁷³ and scholar of hadith was underpinned by reformist, even salafi, tendencies.⁷⁴

‘Alī b. ‘Abd al-Quddūs al-Shinnāwī {F}

Grandson of Muḥammad al-Shinnāwī (d.932), who was a popular leader and Aḥmadī shaykh (after the popular saint Aḥmad {al-Sayyid} al-Badawī [d.675/1276]) who spread his dhikr (practice of remembrance of God) through the surrounding area from his zāwiya (sufi centre) in Mahallat Ruh west of Cairo, authorising the masses (and even women and children) to arrange dhikr sessions.⁷⁵ Muḥammad al-Shinnāwī had initiated ‘Abd al-Wahhāb al-Sha‘rānī into his way and designated him to teach dhikr and to educate murīds in AH 932.⁷⁶ After Muḥammad’s death his sons, including ‘Abd al-Quddūs, who became his successor, were hostile to the powerful disciple al-Sha‘rānī, but he served them and asked ‘Abd al-Quddūs to guide him as his shaykh. In the event, ‘Abd al-Quddūs became a disciple of al-Sha‘rānī, who initiated and guided him in the Aḥmadī way.⁷⁷ This relationship presumably also encompassed the son of ‘Abd al-Quddūs, ‘Alī, father of Abū’l-Mawāhib Aḥmad al-Shinnāwī.

Muḥammad Badr al-Dīn al-Ghazzī {A/E} [d.984/1576]

His family migrated from Gaza to Damascus ten generations before he was born in AH 904, and quickly became well established and respected there for its learning. His father Raḍī al-Dīn reportedly took Badr al-Dīn while a toddler to a shaykh who conferred upon him the khirqā, taught him dhikr and gave him ijāzas.⁷⁸ Early instruction received from his father was supplemented by instruction from the ulama of Damascus (he studied hadith and taṣawwuf in particular under Badr al-Dīn Ḥasan Ibn al-Shuwaykh al-Maqdisī). He accompanied his father to Cairo at the age of twelve, and stayed there for five years, during which time he studied under various authorities, particularly Zakariyā al-Anṣārī. His father also acquired ijāzas for him from Jalāl al-Dīn al-Suyūṭī and introduced him to the saints of Egypt. They returned to Damascus in 921.

Badr al-Dīn launched a long career in Damascus as a teacher (including in the Umayyad Mosque) and Shafī'i mufti. He produced many works, assumed several positions and drew students from far and wide, among them the great-grandfather of 'Abd al-Ghanī al-Nābulusī, Ismā'īl (d.993).⁷⁹ He loved the sufis and was at pains to advise them if he heard they had acted in a way contrary to the shari'a. A respected and prominent figure, he was the father of Najm al-Dīn al-Ghazzī.

11th century AH

Abū'l-Mawāhib Aḥmad b. 'Alī b. 'Abd al-Quddūs al-Shinnāwī
{F} [d.1028/1619]

Also known as al-Khāmī and hailing from the important Egyptian sufi al-Shinnāwī family, he was born in 975/1568 in Mahallat Ruh west of Cairo and studied in Cairo and Medina, where he settled.⁸⁰ A prominent sufi, he became the leading shaykh of the Naqshbandiyya in Medina in his time. The order was introduced to Medina (with the Shattariyya) by the Indian Shaykh Šibghatallāh b. Rūḥallāh al-Sindī (al-Barwajī), who settled there in 1596 or 1605: he initiated al-Shinnāwī, became his teacher, and authorised him to educate murīds, teach the dhikr and confer the khirqā.⁸¹ While he studied hadith with its major scholars, al-Shinnāwī does not appear to have been regarded as a hadith scholar himself.⁸² Nonetheless, he emerged as a dominant figure in the intellectual milieu of the Haramayn, where he was an outspoken adherent of the doctrine of waḥdat al-wujūd (the Oneness of Being). His many students included Ṣafī al-Dīn al-Qushāshī (who venerated his teacher as the saintly ‘Seal of his time’). Brockelmann lists five of al-Shinnāwī’s works, including al-Iqlīd al-farīd fī tajrīd al-tawḥīd, on which al-Nābulusī later wrote a commentary.⁸³

‘Abd al-Qādir b. Muḥammad b. Yaḥyā al-Ḥusaynī al-Ṭabarī al-Makkī al-Shāfi’ī {D} [d.1033/1624]

Grandson of Yaḥyā b. Makram b. Muḥibb al-Dīn al-Ṭabarī {D}, member of important sharīfian family long established in Mecca and holders of the imamate of the Maqām Ibrāhīm since AH 673. Born in 976, by the age of twelve ‘Abd al-Qādir had memorised the Qur’an and led Ramadan night prayers at the Maqām. From 991, he studied with prominent shaykhs (including, for example, al-Shams Muḥammad al-Ramlī al-Miṣrī al-Shāfi’ī and ‘Abd al-Raḥmān al-Sharbīnī), having received an ijāza from some of them to pass on the works he had already memorised. After encompassing a broad range of disciplines and works, he composed numerous texts, including, for example, Durrat al-aṣḍāf al-sanīya fī dharwat al-awṣāf al-Ḥusaynīya, ‘Uyūn al-masā’il min a’yān al-rasā’il, Iḥām al-majāri fī iḥām al-Bukhārī and ‘Arā’ is al-abkār wa gharā’ is al-afkār. The biographer al-Muḥibbī describes him as ‘the imam of Hijazi imams’.⁸⁴

Najm al-Dīn al-Ghazzī {A/E} [d.1061/1651]

Born in 977/1570, he attended the public lessons of his father Badr al-Dīn al-Ghazzī and received ijāzas from him while still a child (Badr al-Dīn died when Najm al-Dīn was seven years old). He studied under and received ijāzas from various scholars,⁸⁵ then held office and taught from a young age in several locations, continuing thus throughout his long life. He was Shafi’i mufti in Damascus for thirty-five years up to his death (from 1025). He also taught hadith and read al-Bukhārī in the Umayyad Mosque for twenty-seven years (from 1034).⁸⁶ Among his numerous and well-known students was Ismā'īl, the father of 'Abd al-Ghanī al-Nābulusī (d.1062).⁸⁷ He was also an early teacher and shaykh of 'Abd al-Ghanī al-Nābulusī⁸⁸ himself and of Ibrāhīm al-Kūrānī.⁸⁹ His numerous writings encompass works on hadith, tafsīr (exegesis), fiqh, taṣawwuf and travelogues. As a historian, he is author of the biographical work al-Kawākib al-sā'ira bi-a'yān al-mi'a al-āshira, and its continuation Luṭf al-samar wa qatf al-thamar: min tarājim a'yān al-ṭabaqa al-ūlā min al-qarn al-ḥādī 'ashar. His reputation and particularly his expertise in hadith⁹⁰ became known beyond Syria, especially in the Hijaz. He made twelve trips to the Haramayn: during the last one (1059), he was inundated with requests for ijāzas, including from scholars such as al-Shams Muḥammad al-Bābilī, who expressed their admiration for his exceptional knowledge.⁹¹ As far as his ṭarīqa affiliations are concerned, the primary one was to the Qadiriyya. Some of his contemporaries described him as one of the three abdāl (category of saints) in Syria.⁹²

Ṣafī al-Dīn Aḥmad b. Muḥammad b. Yūnus al-Qushāshī
{B/C/D/F} [d.1071/1661]

Hailing from a Jerusalem family with sharifian descent, his father (whose shaykh was the Maliki Muḥammad b. 'Īsā al-Tilimsānī) migrated to Medina. Ṣafī al-Dīn's early education was under his father's wing, and included a trip to Yemen in AH 1011, where he joined circles of prominent ulama. Returning to Medina after a stay in Mecca, he met Abū'l-Mawāhib al-Shinnāwī, who initiated him into the sufi way. He studied under al-Shinnāwī, Ṣibghatallāh and numerous other shaykhs (perhaps as many as one hundred), becoming affiliated to many ṭarīqas including the Qadiriyya, Shattariyya, Shadhiliyya and Naqshbandiyya. He developed a close attachment to al-Shinnāwī, married his daughter, and became his khalifa (deputy) in life and later his successor as shaykh in the Shattariyya. A charismatic figure, he attracted a large influx of students and disciples in Medina and became established as one of the greatest sufis of his time, as well as a teacher of theology and shari'a in his own right.⁹³ Ibrāhīm al-Kūrānī was the most prominent of his students (and al-Qushāshī was al-Kūrānī's major and most influential teacher): another was ‘Abdallāh b. Sālim al-Baṣrī (d.1134).⁹⁴ He has been counted as one of four influential ulama who would shape the Medinan intellectual milieu of the late 17th century. Thanks to his charisma and learning, al-Qushāshī left behind a cohesive group of followers loyal to his approach and cutting across fiqh madhhabs and sufi ṭarīqas.⁹⁵

Al-Qushāshī was described by the biographer al-Muḥibbī as ‘the imam of all those who believed in waḥdat al-wujūd’.⁹⁶ His importance in transmitting the doctrines of the school of Ibn ‘Arabī to various parts of the Muslim world through his students has been emphasised: for example, the Sumatran ‘Abd al-Ra’ūf Singkel was a student of his for twenty years.⁹⁷ Al-Qushāshī has been identified as a link in one of the still ‘living’ chains of transmission of the khirqā akbarīya. He reportedly claimed the office of Seal of Muhammadan Sainthood for himself, attaining this after having studied under five teachers.⁹⁸

Al-Qushāshī’s interest in theology has been recognised: while the majority of his writings were glosses or commentaries on major sufi tracts (such as al-Jīlī’s al-Insān al-kāmil) as well as works on uṣūl (the principles of the faith), he thus also compiled three treatises on the issue of kasb (acquisition), a principal concept of Asha’ri doctrine, at least one of which invited some controversy. He was also involved in hadith scholarship, encompassing sufi interpretations of hadith⁹⁹ and an approach that adumbrated emerging trends that became more distinct in the next generation.¹⁰⁰ On this and other grounds, a possible (embryonic) reformist tendency can be identified alongside his mystical vocation and commitment to maintaining sufi traditions.¹⁰¹

Zayn al-‘Ābidīn b. ‘Abd al-Qādir al-Ṭabarī al-Ḥusaynī al-Makkī al-Shāfi‘ī {D} [d.1078/1667]

Born in AH 1002, he studied under his father ‘Abd al-Qādir b. Muḥammad b. Yahyā al-Ḥusaynī al-Ṭabarī and the prominent shaykhs of Mecca and Medina such as ‘Abd al-Wāḥid al-Ḥiṣārī al-Mu‘ammar, receiving ijāzas from them. Among others, Muḥammad al-Shillī Bā‘alawī and al-Ḥasan b. ‘Alī al-‘Ujaymī al-Makkī received ijāzas from him. He was not as celebrated as his father.¹⁰²

12th century AH

Ibrāhīm al-Kūrānī {B/C/D/F} [d.1101/1689]

The most outstanding of Aḥmad al-Qushāshī's disciples, he shared a special relationship with his teacher, and became his son-in-law and designated heir.¹⁰³ Born in 1023/1615, al-Kūrānī studied a wide range of subjects under many teachers in his native Shahrazur and then in Baghdad, Damascus, Cairo and Medina, where he finally settled.¹⁰⁴ He was initiated into and authorised to teach several ṭarīqas including the Shattariyya, Qadiriyya, Chishtiyya and his primary ṭarīqa, the Naqshbandiyya. On al-Qushāshī's death in 1661 he succeeded him as supreme shaykh of the Shattariyya as well as in his major teaching post,¹⁰⁵ and as 'the chief exponent of Ibn 'Arabī's legacy in Medina'.¹⁰⁶

A Shafi'i 'ālim, al-Kūrānī's importance to the intellectual life of Medina in his time is such that he has been described as 'the doyen of the city's ulama'.¹⁰⁷ His influence reached far beyond Medina, however, as the 'undisputed leader' of the school of Ibn 'Arabī in his epoch.¹⁰⁸ For example, his influence on Indonesian Islam has been documented, mediated through his important Indonesian disciples like 'Abd al-Ra'ūf Singkel.¹⁰⁹ One of al-Kūrānī's works on the principle of wahdat al-wujūd, Ithāf al-dhakī, was written at the request of Indonesian disciples, and another (refuting an earlier denunciation of the principle as heretical pantheism by Nuruddin Raniri [d.1666] of Aceh) was produced for an Indonesian audience.¹¹⁰ Leading Indian ulama requested a fatwa from him (among the prestigious ulama of the Hijaz) in 1682 on the ideas of Aḥmad Sirhindī (d.1624), founder of the Mujaddidiyya branch of the Naqshbandiyya, whom they opposed.¹¹¹

A versatile and prolific author, al-Kūrānī's interests encompassed hadith, fiqh and kalām (theology) alongside taṣawwuf. His emphasis on hadith as a source for understanding and defining aspects of religion and for shari'a (and thus his role in the rising 17th–18th century interest in hadith scholarship as a means for reforming fiqh and theology) was such that, after his death, there was a remarkable increase among his Medinan students and junior colleagues in writing commentaries on hadith collections.¹¹² Described as having been 'by nature a conciliator',¹¹³ his complex intellectual position reconciled his loyalty to Ibn 'Arabī's teaching with commitment to a salafi outlook. He thus reinterpreted the doctrine of waḥdat al-wujūd in accordance with the orthodox Islamic view by emphasising the Qur'an and Sunna as the ultimate frame of reference and insisting on the interdependency of the sufi vision and the obligations of shari'a 'in accordance with al-salaf al-ṣāliḥ (the venerable forefathers)'. It seems he undertook to revisit the major issues of sufism and theology with a view to reconstructing their dominant modes (expressed through waḥdat al-wujūd and late Ash'ari dogma), in order to bring them into line with what he saw as the original Islamic view, drawing on the legacy of Ibn Ḥanbal and Ibn Taymīya (and the latter's student Ibn Qayyim al-Jawzīya) in projecting his vision of this original view.¹¹⁴ On this basis, he stands as a significant precursor to the reformist currents that were to gain powerful expression across the Muslim world during the 18th century. Effectively replacing al-Qushāshī's authority, he served as an important point of reference for a large number of ulama throughout the 18th and early 19th centuries, contributing to the rehabilitation of Ibn Taymīya and to opening the door for the re-emergence of the salafi school of thought in different parts of the Muslim world.¹¹⁵

Muḥammad al-Budayrī al-Dimyāṭī {B} [d.1140/1728]

Known as Ibn al-Mayyit, he hailed from a sharifian family whose ancestor came to Dimyat from Jerusalem. After his early education in Dimyat, he moved to al-Azhar. During 1091–92 (1680–81) he joined Ibrāhīm al-Kūrānī for a year, became closely identified with him and studied under him works on taṣawwuf, hadith and fiqh. While he regarded himself principally as a Naqshbandi (he later shifted this affiliation to a Sirhindī silsila specifically), he had affiliations to several ṭarīqas. He travelled between Dimyat, Cairo, Medina and Jerusalem, and became acquainted in each place with the most illustrious circles of ulama of the time. In Cairo he was closely associated with the Bakrīs, and in Damascus with the circles of ‘Abd al-Ghanī al-Nābulusī and his disciples.¹¹⁶ He was highly regarded as a hadith scholar and sufi teacher. Muṣṭafā al-Bakrī studied hadith with him in Jerusalem and was initiated into the Naqshbandiyya by him. Al-Budayrī was also the main teacher of Muḥammad b. Sālim al-Ḥifnāwī.¹¹⁷

‘Abd al-Ghanī al-Nābulusī {A/E} [d.1143/1731]

Damascene sufi, hadith scholar,¹¹⁸ traveller and poet. His prolific writings are underpinned by veneration of Ibn ‘Arabī and defence of his metaphysical system, and dominated by the concept of waḥdat al-wujūd: he considered himself Ibn ‘Arabī’s spiritual son and disciple, and was his devotee and interpreter. He taught at the Umayyad Mosque and the Salimiyya madrasa at Ibn ‘Arabī’s mosque–tomb complex (from AH 1115), but his self-appointed role was as defender of sufism and its controversial practices and doctrines. His stance provoked serious criticism and attack, especially because he taught the works of Ibn ‘Arabī to common folk as well as to the elite.¹¹⁹ Affiliated to the Qadiri and Naqshbandi ṭarīqas, he seems to have had limited participation and interest in ṭarīqa sufism, and to have set more store by his own uwaysi or ‘Theo-didactic’ sufism, including especially his link to Ibn ‘Arabī as uwaysi master (although he himself had close disciples, this was not in a ṭarīqa framework).¹²⁰

By the age of twelve, ‘Abd al-Ghanī had already received ijāzas (including in Ibn ‘Arabī’s works) in the company of his father Ismā‘īl from Najm al-Dīn al-Ghazzī among other high-ranking ulama such as ‘Abd al-Bāqī Taqī al-Dīn b. Mawāhib al-Ḥanbalī (the Hanbali mufti of Damascus). His father, who was his first teacher and who died when he was twelve, appears as the prior link in several of ‘Abd al-Ghanī’s ijāzas in hadith collections and the writings of Ibn ‘Arabī: he had in fact been given the ijāzas of his father en masse as a child.¹²¹ It is noteworthy that one of his last compositions was a commentary on the ṣalawāt of Ibn ‘Arabī.¹²²

Ṭāhir b. Ibrāhīm b. Ḥasan al-Kūrānī [Muḥammad Abū'l-Ṭāhir] {D} [d.1145/1733]

Born in Medina in 1081, he studied with his father Ibrāhīm al-Kūrānī and other great shaykhs, including his father's colleagues and associates like al-Ḥasan b. 'Alī al-'Ujaymī al-Makkī and 'Abdal-lāh b. Sālīm al-Baṣrī.¹²³ He took his father's position as a teacher in the Prophet's Mosque in Medina and rose to assume the position of Shafi'i mufti in the city for a time. On his father's death he succeeded him as supreme shaykh of the Shattariyya (but the leading position of the ulama of Medina fell to one of Ibrāhīm's students). His works include Ikhtisār sharḥ shawāhid al-Riḍā al-Baghdādī.¹²⁴ The students who attended his many lessons (through which his father's teachings continued to be disseminated) included the Indian hadith scholar Muḥammad Ḥayāt al-Sindī (d.1163/1749),¹²⁵ who taught hadith in Medina for twenty-five years to numerous students, among them Muḥammad b. 'Abd al-Wahhāb. They included also the great Indian Naqshbandi reformist Shāh Walī Allāh (d.1177/1763). The latter's stay in Medina during 1731–32 in Ṭāhir's circle had a lasting impact on his intellectual orientations: according to Shāh Walī Allāh's son, it amounted to a turning point in his career.¹²⁶ Al-Kattani observes that his own transmission from Ṭāhir proceeds via Muḥammad Sa'īd Sunbul, among others.¹²⁷

Muṣṭafā Kamāl al-Dīn al-Bakrī {A/B/C} [d.1162/1749]

Born in Damascus and reputed to have revived the Khalwati ṭarīqa in the Arab mashriq (east) of the 18th century. He was the most celebrated and important disciple of 'Abd al-Ghanī al-Nābulusī: he read several of Ibn 'Arabī's works under him during his sojourns in Damascus and his own writings were to be profoundly influenced by Ibn 'Arabī's thought. He studied hadith under Muḥammad al-Budayrī al-Dimyātī in Jerusalem and under 'Abdallāh b. Sālīm al-Baṣrī: he was also a student of al-Kūrānī's son Ilyās (d.1138), who had moved to Damascus.¹²⁸ He was initiated into the Naqshbandiyya, Qadiriyya and Khalwatiyya, in the latter case by a shaykh who followed the way of the Qarabashiyya branch. Al-Bakrī became his sole successor on the shaykh's death in 1121/1709, having earlier been granted a general permission to initiate and appoint khalīfas. He went on to gain many disciples especially in Cairo and Jerusalem: his most important khalīfā was Muḥammad b. Sālīm al-Ḥifnāwī. Al-Bakrī was a prolific writer (mainly on sulūk and adab, the sufi path, its culture and manners, but he also composed awrād {pl. of wird}, of which the best known is Wird al-saḥar). Like his teacher al-Nābulusī (on whom he wrote a reverential biography, and from whom he records that he received a general ijāza for all his lines of transmission and a specific one for his writings), he laid claim to a direct relation to Ibn 'Arabī, and direct authorisation by him. Like him, he too made several extensive journeys, moving especially between Jerusalem and Cairo, where he died.¹²⁹

Muḥammad Sa'īd (b. Muḥammad) Sunbul [al-Makkī]
{D} [d.1175/1762]

Prominent Meccan scholar and Shafi'i mufti: he transmitted from Ṭāhir b. Ibrāhīm al-Kūrānī among others, and to his son Muḥammad Ṭāhir Sunbul, among others.¹³⁰

Muḥammad b. Sālīm al-Ḥifnāwī/al-Ḥifnī¹³¹{B/C} [d.1181/1767]

An important disciple and associate of Muṣṭafā al-Bakrī involved in renewing activity of the Khalwatiyya in Egypt. He was born in AH 1100 in Hifna, a village in the Bilbis district of Egypt, and studied from a young age in Cairo. On receiving ijāzas from his teachers there (the best known including Muḥammad al-Budayrī al-Dimyātī, through whom he received his Naqshbandi affiliation), in 1122 he established lessons in logic, fiqh, uṣūl, hadith and kalām attended by many students. He produced many works and became known for his karāmāt. He had been introduced to the sufi way by a certain Aḥmad al-Shādhilī al-Maghribī (known as al-Maqqarī): he then met Muṣṭafā al-Bakrī in 1133, who initiated him into the Qarabashiyya-Khalwatiyya and trained him in its path. Al-Bakrī eventually placed him above all his khalīfas, and he became the only one he had invested with absolute authority who also survived him. Al-Ḥifnāwī is reputed to have succeeded in reviving the ṭarīqa across Egypt, attracting large numbers of people and introducing it to the community of ulama at al-Azhar. Among his important khalīfas/disciples were Maḥmūd al-Kurdī, ‘Abdallāh al-Sharqāwī (Shaykh al-Azhar) and Aḥmad al-Dardayr, who is perhaps the best known.¹³²

Muḥammad al-Tāfilātī al-Khalwatī {B} [d.1191/1777]

Brockelmann gives his full name as Muḥammad b. Muḥammad b. al-Ṭayyib al-Tāfilātī al-Maghribī,¹³³ al-Murādī as Muḥammad b. Muḥammad al-Ṭayyib al-Mālikī al-Ḥanafī al-Tāfilātī al-Maghribī.¹³⁴ The narrative here is based on al-Murādī’s biographical entry.¹³⁵ Born in Morocco, al-Tāfilātī first studied under his father, a man of moderate learning. Before reaching puberty he taught students al-Sanūsīya, which he had studied under Shaykh Muḥammad al-Sa’dī al-Jazā’irī. He travelled to Tripoli and from there to al-Azhar in Cairo. He remained in Egypt for two years and eight months and studied under Muḥammad b. Sālim al-Ḥifnāwī, among many others. While travelling by sea to visit his mother he was captured and taken to Malta, where he was held for over two years. He engaged there in a lengthy debate on matters of Muslim belief with Christian monks, among them one with some knowledge of Arabic. This monk eventually gave up the debate defeated, astonished that such knowledge could be held by someone young enough to be his grandson. Muḥammad’s renown spread in Malta among monks and notables, and he was treated respectfully wherever he went. A vision he had eventually sealed his release and he made for Egypt, travelling from there to the Hijaz several times. He went to Yemen, Oman, Basra, Aleppo, Damascus and Anatolia (al-Rūm) and settled in Jerusalem, where he was appointed Hanafi mufti. His works number some eighty: in addition to his commentary on the prayer (al-Durr al-aghla bi-sharḥ al-Dawr al-a’lā),¹³⁶ Brockelmann mentions his Ḥusn al-istiḳṣā’ bi-mā ṣaḥḥa wa thabata fī’l-masjid al-aḳṣā.¹³⁷ Al-Tāfilātī appears in the chains of authorities of various later Damascene scholars.¹³⁸

Maḥmūd al-Kurdī {C} [d.1195/1780–81]

A khalīfa of Muḥammad b. Sālim al-Ḥifnāwī and known also as al-Khalwatī, he was born in Kurdistan. He adopted a life of pious devotion, asceticism and isolation early on, and is reputed to have met frequently with Khidr and to have received the contents of al-Ghazālī's Ihyā' 'ulūm al-dīn without reading. When aged eighteen he saw al-Ḥifnāwī in a dream, and was told that this was his shaykh. He travelled to Egypt to find him, was initiated by him into the Khalwati way and eventually granted an ijāza to bring people into it: al-Ḥifnāwī would send those who wished to enter the way to him. He also developed a close relationship with Muṣṭafā al-Bakrī, whom he had met when the latter came to Cairo. He was celebrated for his baraka and the fact that he frequently saw the Prophet in dreams. After al-Ḥifnāwī's death al-Kurdī reportedly brought many people into the way and appointed khalīfas himself. He produced a treatise as the result of a dream in which he saw Ibn 'Arabī give him a key and tell him to 'open the vault' (there is a commentary by his khalīfa and Shaykh al-Azhar 'Abdallāh al-Sharqāwī on this). He is also author of al-Sulūk li-abnā' al-mulūk.¹³⁹

Muḥammad Kamāl al-Dīn al-Bakrī, Abū'l-Futūḥ

{A} [d.1196/1781–82]

Born in Jerusalem in 1143/1731, he was shaykh to the historian al-Murādī (author of the biographical work Silk al-durar).¹⁴⁰ Among others, he studied under Muḥammad b. Sālim al-Ḥifnāwī and Muḥammad, a third son of Ibrāhīm al-Kūrānī. He took the Khalwati ṭarīqa from his father Muṣṭafā al-Bakrī. His works include a biography of his father, Kashf al-ẓunūn fī asmā' al-shurūḥ wa'l-mutūn, a commentary on al-Ṣalāt al-Mashīhiya and a diwan.¹⁴¹

Muḥammad b. Maḥmūd b. 'Alī al-Dāmūnī {C} [d. after 1199/1785]

In full Muḥammad b. Maḥmūd b. 'Alī al-Dāmūnī al-Shāfi'ī al-Khalwatī al-Naqshbandī al-Jalwatī, from al-Damun, Palestine: author in 1199/1785 of Hikam.¹⁴² He entitled his commentary on the prayer al-Durr al-thamīn li-sharḥ Dawr al-a' lā li-sīdī Muḥyī al-Dīn.

He describes how he was asked by his close and saintly companion Ḥusayn al-Ḥiṣnī¹⁴³ to elaborate for him the contents of the prayer. Having consulted and sought a guiding sign, he spent a few days in the hope of receiving divine permission to proceed, seeking this through the mediation of Ibn ‘Arabī, who might reveal the prayer’s secrets to him as its author. Once permission was received, he began. Al-Dāmūnī mentions Ibn ‘Arabī first among his teachers ‘whose insight is elixir’. Having detailed his chain of authorities, he adds that he has ‘another, more elevated, chain – for it is from me to [Ibn ‘Arabī]: it was he who gave me to drink of his pure wine, quenching my thirst in the world of similitudes, then guided me to him. It was he who brought me to live in Damascus, and gave me permission to guide elite and common folk alike. Thanks be to God for these momentous blessings, and for the greatest blessing of all: my attachment (intisābī) to this imam.’¹⁴⁴ His father Maḥmūd b. ‘Alī al-Dāmūnī authored a defence of al-Nābulusī, al-Shihāb al-qabasī fī radd man radda ‘alā ‘Abd al-Ghanī.¹⁴⁵

13th century AH

Ibrāhīm b. Ismā‘īl b. ‘Abd al-Ghanī al-Nābulusī

{E} [d.1222/1807]

Ibrāhīm’s father Ismā‘īl (b.1085) was the only one of ‘Abd al-Ghanī’s sons to survive him. Born in AH 1138, Ibrāhīm became an outstanding ‘ālim’ of his time.¹⁴⁶ A prominent member of Damascene society, he inherited his father’s teaching post at the Salimiyya mosque,¹⁴⁷ and became shaykh qurrā’ (leading Qur’an reciter).¹⁴⁸ The confluence of several chains of transmission relating to al-Futūḥāt al-Makkīya through him is noteworthy.¹⁴⁹

Muḥammad al-Jundī al-‘Abbāsī al-Ma‘arrī {A} [d.1264/1848]

He served as Hanafi mufti in his place of origin, Ma‘arrat Nu‘man, Syria. Initially a follower of Shaykh Khālīd al-Naqshbandī, who was responsible for spreading the Naqshbandiyya-Mujaddidiyya widely among Arabs, Kurds and Turks during the early 19th century, it is most likely that al-Jundī did not maintain contact with his successors after Shaykh Khālīd's death in 1242/1827.¹⁵⁰

Muḥammad Amīn al-Jundī al-‘Abbāsī al-Ma‘arrī

{A} [d.1285/1868]

Born in Ma‘arrat Nu‘man, Syria in AH 1229, he was educated by his father Muḥammad al-Jundī,¹⁵¹ from whom he took the Khalwati way. In Aleppo he studied hadith under Maḥmūd Efendi al-Mar‘ashī and was a student of the mufti ‘Abd al-Raḥmān al-Mudarris. Returning to Ma‘arrat Nu‘man, he served there as qāḍī and then as mufti following his father's death in 1264, until 1266 when he was summoned to Damascus to serve as Arab scribe of the Turkish army in Syria. In 1277 he was appointed Hanafi mufti of Damascus, and remained in this post until his removal in 1284. Thereafter he was appointed to the Ottoman state shūrā (council) in the capital, and served on several important official missions. His writings (some in Arabic, others Ottoman Turkish) include a work on the excellence of Syria, and a diwan. His Ottoman Turkish commentary on the Dawr was written in 1280, while he was still Hanafi mufti of Damascus. A reformist ‘ālim, he was proficient in the teachings of Ibn ‘Arabī as well as the new sciences of the era. When the Amir ‘Abd al-Qādir al-Jazā‘irī settled in Damascus, al-Jundī became one of his close associates: he also participated with him in rescuing Christians, and wrote poetry in praise of him.¹⁵²

Muḥammad Ṭāhir Sunbul [al-Makkī] {D}

Son of Muḥammad Sa‘īd Sunbul, prominent Hijazi scholar who transmitted from his father and transmitted to, among others, Yāsīn b. ‘Abdallāh al-Mīrghanī.¹⁵³

Muḥammad Yāsīn b. ‘Abdallāh b. Ibrāhīm al-Mīrghanī {D}

‘Abdallāh b. Ibrāhīm al-Mīrghanī al-Makkī al-Ṭā‘ifī the father (d.1207/1793), known as al-Maḥjūb, was a prominent sufi and influential ‘ālim. Born in Mecca into a sharifian family, he attached himself to Yūsuf al-Mahdalī (who was known as al-quṭb or the axis of his time) and became an uwaysi sufi after the latter's death, receiving learning directly from the Prophet. While stories of his karāmāt are plentiful, he also left a substantial number of works.¹⁵⁴ He has been counted as part of the late 18th century reformist network, of which the Haramayn was the crossroads (his students included Muḥammad Murtaḍā al-Zabīdī, for example). The Mīrghanī family appears to have been politically active: in 1166/1752–53, a time of political upheaval in Mecca, 'Abdallāh had moved to Ta'if apparently as a result of his opposition to the Zaydi sharifs.¹⁵⁵

One of 'Abdallāh's sons became the father of Muḥammad 'Uthmān al-Mīrghanī (d.1852). Born a year after his grandfather 'Abdallāh's death, 'Uthmān became one of the most important students of the major reformist Moroccan sufi teacher Aḥmad b. Idrīs (d.1837), and founder of the Khatmiyya (or Mīrghaniyya) order.¹⁵⁶ 'Uthmān's paternal uncle Muḥammad Yāsīn became his guardian upon the death of his father when 'Uthmān was ten years old. Himself childless, Muḥammad Yāsīn took on his nephew's education. Muḥammad Yāsīn later taught hadith to another student of Aḥmad b. Idrīs, the Yemeni al-Ḥasan 'Ākish, when he came to Mecca. He was also a teacher of Muḥammad b. 'Alī al-Sanūsī (d.1276/1859), Aḥmad b. Idrīs' closest student and founder of the Sanusiyya ṭarīqa, when he arrived in Mecca in 1241/1826. Muḥammad Yāsīn wrote at least one work, 'Unwān ahl al-'ināya 'alā kashf ghawāmiḍ al-nuqāya, a gloss on al-Suyūṭī's Itmām al-dirāya.¹⁵⁷

Abū'l-Maḥāsīn Muḥammad b. Khalīl (al-Mashīshī) al-Qāwuḡī al-Ṭarābulusī al-Shāmī al-Ḥanafī {D} [d.1305/1888]

Possibly also known as Shams al-Dīn, he was born in 1225/1810, and was a hadith scholar, sufi and faqīh. He has been described as 'musnid bilād al-Shām' ('the most important hadith transmitter of Greater Syria') of his time, and his chains occupied a pivotal role well into the 20th century in most of Egypt, Syria and the Hijaz. He transmitted from many scholars, including Muḥammad b. 'Alī al-Sanūsī, al-Burhān al-Bājūrī and Yāsīn b. 'Abdallāh al-Mīrghanī (he wrote a commentary on al-Mu' jam al-wajīz by 'Abdallāh al-Mīrghanī).¹⁵⁸ A prolific writer, he produced some one hundred works, including many on hadith.¹⁵⁹ His al-Ṭawr al-aghla' alā al-wird al-musammā bi'l-Dawr al-a' lā was printed in Damascus, AH 1301.¹⁶⁰ Brockleemann also lists a commentary on Hizb al-bahr entitled Khulāṣat al-zahr 'alā Hizb al-bahr.¹⁶¹ Noteworthy, too, is his Shawāriq al-anwār al-jalīya fī asānīd al-sāda al-Shādhiliya, for al-Qāwuqjī was a Shadhili shaykh and founder of a sub-order of the ṭarīqa which seems to have taken his name.¹⁶² He died in Mecca.¹⁶³

Chains and authorisations

The chains elucidated here are embedded in a vast web of interconnections among members of the ahl al-'ilm (community of scholars) spanning the centuries of Islamic history, a network of personal contacts forming a highway along which authority, learning and baraka have travelled from the past into the future while criss-crossing the lands of Islam. Individuals sought out ijāzas through personal contact with shaykhs who had themselves acquired ijāzas through personal contact: the ijāza was thus in part 'an emblem of a bond to a shaykh'.¹⁶⁴ While it served the forging of connections to powerful men of the learned elite (those older and more knowledgeable), it also made possible the appropriation of some of their authority, and that of others in the associated chains of transmission. Finally, it acted as a vehicle for the acquisition and transmission of baraka, of which 'ilm or learning was one important form. The conferring of an ijāza thus admitted an individual to a particular scholarly and spiritual genealogy, and this was just as important as the precise identity and content of the work(s) transmitted (if indeed not more important in some circumstances). In general terms, the mujīz (granter of an authorisation) was the key to insertion into chains of transmission of 'ilm so highly valued that the resulting pedigrees rivalled blood-lines in importance.¹⁶⁵ This importance is reflected in the careful attention given to recording and incorporating chains of transmission of texts, as in the case of the Dawr.

Turning to the plausibility of individual links within our chains and the ijāzas that underpin them, those links identified appear generally compatible with the chronology, known associations (especially relations with shaykhs and teachers) and geographical movements of the figures in question. Of particular interest are nine links underpinned by ijāzas conferred on young children who typically had not yet reached the age of reason.¹⁶⁶ In some cases, as set out above, we have reports of these children receiving ijāzas from the authorities in question in the company of their fathers (and in one case, of the father soliciting ijāzas specifically for them, another common practice).¹⁶⁷ Perhaps a ‘child ijāza’ stands up more successfully to scrutiny when the text concerned is a small prayer which children, accustomed to memorising Qur’an from an early age, could readily have committed to heart at the instigation of fathers eager to place them under its protection, and to acquire for them the potential benefits associated with the accompanying ijāza and chain.¹⁶⁸

Insertion of an individual into one of our chains through an ijāza conferred on them the baraka of the line of transmission, intensifying the baraka of the prayer itself. It also brought them into ultimate contact with the prayer’s author. It was not just a case of acquiring, committing to memory and inscribing on the heart the prayer text (itself undoubtedly baraka bearing and encompassing the ‘perfect and complete’ Word, as we shall see below), something which could be done from a written copy. Initiation into the prayer was thus as much a case of participating in the spiritual lineage anchored in its saintly author and transmitted through a living shaykh.¹⁶⁹ Moreover, it is likely that even into the modern period prayers like the Dawr were mainly experienced as oral performances rather than written texts, further underlining the importance of personal contact.

Regarding certain specifics of our chains, we might ask whether any of our figures appear in chains of transmission associated with other works by Ibn ‘Arabī. Yahya lists a number of such chains which can be compared with the six examined here.¹⁷⁰ {E} from Ibn ‘Arabī through to al-Suyūṭī is repeated in four chains, viz. 2a (attached to RG 13a, Akhbār mashāyikh al-Maghrib; RG 30, ‘Anqā’ mughrīb; RG 38, al-Arba‘ūn ḥadīth; RG 134, al-Faṭḥ al-Fāsī; RG 135, al-Futūḥāt al-Makkīya; RG 150, Fuṣūṣ al-ḥikam; RG 336, al-Kashf al-kullī and RG 725, al-Taḥṣīr) and 6a, 6e and 6f (all three attached to RG 135, al-Futūḥāt al-Makkīya).¹⁷¹ In like fashion, {F} from Ibn ‘Arabī through to al-Qushāshī is repeated in chain 6d attached to al-Futūḥāt al-Makkīya (with the link between Zakarīyā al-Anṣārī and al-Jabartī al-Zabīdī missing, viz., Abū’l-Faṭḥ Muḥammad b. al-Qaymānī al-Marā’ī) and from Ibn ‘Arabī through to al-Sha’rānī in chain 6c attached to al-Futūḥāt al-Makkīya with the same omission. The missing chain of authorities linking al-Qushāshī back to Ibn ‘Arabī in {B} and {C} as elaborated in {F} is thus mostly corroborated by Yahya’s 6d i.¹⁷² Chains 6a, b, c, d, e and f (all attached to al-Futūḥāt al-Makkīya) all culminate in the grandson of ‘Abd al-Ghanī al-Nābulusī, Ibrāhīm b. Ismā‘īl (see {E}). Finally, several well-known links appearing in our chains reappear in those listed in Yahya: these include Badr al-Dīn al-Ghazzī ~ Najm al-Dīn al-Ghazzī ({A}; Yahya’s 6b and 6d ii) and Ibn Ḥajar al-‘Asqalānī ~ Zakarīyā al-Anṣārī ({A}; Yahya’s 6d).

Referred to briefly above, al-Qushāshī’s chain of transmission from Ibn ‘Arabī stands out for the important place it occupies on our chain map, for his status, and for his association with the prayer in a further copy, where its attribution to Ibn ‘Arabī and a description of its properties are given on his authority.¹⁷³ Al-Tāfilātī {B} and al-Dāmūnī {C} both refer to this chain without elaboration using the phrase bi-sanadihi al-muttaṣil ilā [Ibn ‘Arabī] (‘through his chain of transmission going back to [Ibn ‘Arabī]’), implying perhaps that it was very well known at the time.¹⁷⁴ (It is noteworthy that the silsila of the khirqā akbarīya as given by al-Murtaḍā al-Zabīdī also connects al-Qushāshī to Ibn ‘Arabī without elaboration.)¹⁷⁵ {F} provides an indication of one chain from Ibn ‘Arabī to al-Qushāshī, while {D} provides an alternative through Zayn al-‘Ābidīn al-Ṭabarī al-Makkī.¹⁷⁶

More than five generations after Ibn ‘Arabī’s death, key geographical foci in the routes of the prayer mapped through the chains are the Hijaz (Mecca and Medina); Syria (Damascus); Egypt (Cairo); and Palestine (Jerusalem). Two 17th–18th century figures who served as a nexus between different geographical centres through their travels are Muḥammad al-Budayrī al-Dimyātī {B} and Muṣṭafā al-Bakrī {A/B/C}.¹⁷⁷ Al-Budayrī connected the influential Hijazi centre¹⁷⁸ with Cairo (where al-Ḥifnāwī studied under him), and with Jerusalem (where Muṣṭafā al-Bakrī studied under him). Al-Bakrī, too, connected Damascus and Cairo (as well as Jerusalem), but without the direct Hijazi link:¹⁷⁹ born in 1688 CE, al-Bakrī's link to Ibrāhīm al-Kūrānī (d.1689 CE) in {C} should most likely be ruled out in favour of an omission, probably of the latter's son Ilyās, with whom al-Bakrī studied in Damascus. It is noteworthy that al-Tāfilātī apparently first acquired the prayer from al-Ḥifnāwī during his early sojourn in Cairo, making it possible for him to transmit it during his extensive travels thereafter. Such figures often formed part of very extensive scholar networks, through which the prayer may well have been transmitted into more distant regions of the Islamic world.¹⁸⁰

A strong Naqshbandi or Khalwati association is evident among the figures in our chains from the 17th century,¹⁸¹ but for many of them multiple ṭarīqa affiliations were the norm, especially prior to the 18th or 19th centuries. The prayer was thus used alongside liturgical and devotional prescriptions associated with particular ṭarīqa affiliations, whether multiple or single. Prayers attributed to the eponymous founders of ṭarīqas have found a natural constituency among those affiliated to these ṭarīqas, where they have also been routinely recited in collective rituals. Indeed the emergence of an independent ṭarīqa from an existing one has often been accompanied by the composition of new aḥzāb (pl. of ḥizb).¹⁸² Although not associated exclusively with any particular ṭarīqa, the saintly stature of the Dawr's author appears to have secured its circulation and use within many different ṭarīqas.

Windows onto Islamic culture and thought

How can the chains discussed here, which encompass several major figures of Islamic scholarship and taṣawwuf, illuminate trends in historical Islamic culture and thought? Alongside those who may be described as non-reformist (and who appear to have been uncompromising in their defence of sufi culture, including its more controversial elements), it is noteworthy that these figures also feature ulama of reformist orientation, those critical of aspects of the prevailing religious-cultural milieu and the existing order. Some sought to contain sufi 'excesses' by reasserting the interdependence of spheres of taṣawwuf and shari'a, and addressed other aspects of the dominant culture by emphasising the primacy of the Qur'an and Sunna as the ultimate framework for religious understanding and the source of shari'a. Such ulama often expressed appreciation for the reformist legacy of Ibn Taymīya (d.1328), and their positions evince salafi tendencies, whether in matters of kalām or fiqh, attitudes towards madhhab affiliation, or the emphasis of hadith scholarship as a means to reassert scriptural primacy, for example. Focusing on such figures in the chains serves to highlight the complex, overlapping identities of historical Islamic culture, which could contemplate a profound commitment to sufism (including the embrace of waḥdat al-wujūd) alongside a salafi-inspired reformist outlook (the latter dimension being at times underreported in the context of Ibn 'Arabī studies). While its content presents no specific doctrinal problem, the use and transmission of the prayer by such figures nonetheless furnishes evidence of their conviction of its author's importance (and saintly status), underlining an inclusive commitment to his legacy upheld in tandem with salafi tendencies.

In the 9th/15th century, Ibn Ḥajar al-ʿAsqalānī's association with the prayer is noteworthy in the light of his ambivalence towards Ibn 'Arabī, and his favourable view of Ibn Taymīya.¹⁸³ His reservations concerning the prayer's author, such as they were, did not invalidate for him the baraka that flowed from use of it, received through a chain directly from its author. In the 10th/16th century ‘Abd al-Wahhāb al-Sha‘rānī’s association with the prayer is noteworthy when viewed not in terms of his capacity as an apologist for Ibn ‘Arabī, but as the first in a long line of late reformist or salafi-oriented sufi ulama, followed in the 11th–12th/17th–18th centuries by the highly influential al-Qushāshī (heir to al-Sha‘rānī’s legacy) and especially his student Ibrāhīm al-Kūrānī, and the latter’s students of the next generation. As in al-Kūrānī’s case, a number of these later sufi-salafi ulama re-interpreted waḥdat al-wujūd, in its capacity as the most controversial aspect of sufi doctrine, to make it conform to Islamic orthodoxy. At the same time, they evinced a rising interest in Ibn Taymīya’s intellectual legacy (following its virtual eclipse by the mid-14th century with the rise to dominance of taṣawwuf allied with Ash‘ari theology),¹⁸⁴ and thus perhaps contributed to a re-emergence or revival of the salafi school from the late 17th century.¹⁸⁵ In the 13th/19th century, the two al-Jundīs, father and son, can finally be mentioned. The former was a follower of the shari‘a-minded reformist Naqshbandi Shaykh Khālīd, who had called for returning to the Qur’an and Sunna, yet read the works of Ibn ‘Arabī and felt a spiritual affinity with him.¹⁸⁶ Muḥammad Amīn al-Jundī the son was a reformist ‘ālim in his own right and also a close associate of the Amir ‘Abd al-Qādir (whose own reformist tendencies and shari‘a-minded, scripturalist sufism combined with a devotion to Ibn ‘Arabī have been widely noted, and whose ulama followers launched the Salafi reform movement in Syria).¹⁸⁷

The blending of sufi and salafi thought is thus illustrated by several of the figures associated with the prayer, both in pre-modern and modern periods. Within this blend, which itself became increasingly significant for later reformists or ‘revivalists’, it was salafism that came to prominence under the conditions and pressures of modernity.¹⁸⁸ Were it possible to map the continuation of the chains discussed here across the 20th century, it would be of interest to ascertain the orientations of new links in terms of this framework, and in particular to discover whether any who avail themselves of the prayer’s baraka can be counted as contemporary salafis, seeking inspiration in Ibn Taymīya's legacy.¹⁸⁹ A defining aspect in the self-appropriation of the 'salafi' banner in the modern world has of course been a powerful anti-sufism, in which Ibn 'Arabī's legacy looms large. This is not the whole story, however. Through the inclusive tendencies of some of the most eminent historical figures of 'ilm and taṣawwuf associated with it, this small prayer of Ibn 'Arabī points up with striking clarity the anomalous character of the uncompromising salafi–sufi dichotomy perpetuated in some contemporary Muslim circles.

Notes

1. The Turkish collections offer what is arguably the most important manuscript base for the works of Ibn 'Arabī in general. We have supplemented the specific Suleymaniye collection, the largest by far, with copies from the following Turkish libraries: University of Istanbul Library Collection, Ulu Cami (Bursa), Genel (Inebey, Bursa), Beyazid (Istanbul), Mevlana Museum (Konya), Ankara Milli. Relating to the Suleymaniye collection, the following errors in Osman Yahya, Histoire et classification de l'oeuvre d'Ibn 'Arabī (Damascus, 1964), 1, p.294 (RG 244) can be pointed out. Dügümlü Baba 4146 and 4137 and Esad Efendi 4036 are unrecognisable numbers; Dügümlü Baba 194, Hacı Mahmud Efendi 461 and Esad Efendi 1330 are irrelevant. Şehid Ali Paşa 2796 is a fragment of the Awṛād that sometimes appears described as Istighātha but here is described as Hizb al-Shaykh al-Akbar. Note also that Ulu Cami 954 (Bursa) is irrelevant.

2. All of the copies surveyed here are thus relatively late. It may well be that earlier copies can be uncovered: Yahya, Histoire, 1, p.294 lists those in Damascus, Cairo, Rabat, Paris and Berlin not examined in this study and apparently undated.

3. For details of four of these which have chains of transmission attached and a fifth without, see Appendix. The remaining two, both in Ottoman Turkish, are as follows: (i) 'Alī al-Waṣfī b. Ḥusayn al-Ḥusaynī (Hacı Mahmud Efendi 4217, detailed commentary on individual words and phrases fols. 1a–94a; the text of the prayer is repeated with further comments verse by verse fols. 99b–110a), dated AH 1261. (ii) Anonymous (Hacı Reşid Bey 104), undated, 20 fols. For additional copies of some of the commentaries referred to here and further commentaries on the prayer held in collections outside of Turkey, see Yahya, Histoire, 1, pp.294–295.

It has been suggested that the first sustained systematic commentary on a sufi prayer is that composed by Dā'ūd Ibn Bākhilā (d.733/1332) on al-Shādhilī's Hizb al-baḥr. See Richard J. A. McGregor, Sanctity and Sainthood in Medieval Egypt: The Wafā' Sufi Order and the Legacy of Ibn 'Arabī (Albany, NY, 2004), pp.34–35.

4. Other examples include Hacı Mahmud Efendi 4141 (dated AH 1275), Yazma Bağışlar 2180 (undated and followed by a wird attributed to Abū Bakr b. 'Abdallāh al-'Aydarūs and an untitled anonymous supplication), A 5705 [University of Istanbul Library] (dated 1793 CE and followed by a prayer by Abū'l-Ḥasan al-Shādhilī and a ṣalawāt attributed to Ibn 'Arabī: see below), A 4344 [University of Istanbul Library] (dated AH 1318, each line surrounded by a gold-leaf border, with only eight lines per page) and Nafiz Paşa 702, on which see note 6 below.

5. For example, I. Note that Ankara Milli 489 binds together the Dawr (as part of an undated hand) with works by Ibn 'Arabī (e.g. R. al-Alif, Mashāhid al-asrār, K. al-Bā') in several hands.

6. Examples include G, K (Ṣalawāt kubrā), M, Şazeli 106 (Istighātha, Awṛād, Ṣalawāt kubrā), Esad Efendi 1330 (Ṣalāt sharīfa), A 5705 [University of Istanbul Library] (Ṣalawāt sharīfa), Nafiz Paşa 702 (an undated compilation of the Awṛād and the Dawr), Genel 43 (Awṛād dated AH 1179, copy made in Damascus) and Arif-Murad 58 (printed, undated, encompassing the Awṛād). Şazeli 106 encompasses the date AH 1139. Esad Efendi 1330 is dated from AH 1194 to 1219.

7. For example, M. Note that Esad Efendi 1330 includes prayers by al-Nawawī, al-Shādhilī and Ibn Mashīsh. Esad Efendi 267 (undated) encompasses a treatise on the names of the Prophet and one on the names of his Companions who were at Badr, plus a commentary on a prayer by al-Shādhilī. Şazeli 106 encompasses prayers by al-Shādhilī, al-Nawawī, Najm al-Dīn Kubrā, al-Shāfi‘ī, ‘Abd al-Qādir al-Jilānī, Ma‘rūf Karkhī, Imām ‘Alī and supplications of the prophets. L encompasses among others the protective prayer of Abū Madyan Shu‘ayb. Genel 43 has Ḥizb al-naṣr by al-Shādhilī and others; Arif-Murad adds Ḥizb al-baḥr of al-Shādhilī, al-Ṣalawāt al-munjīya and other short prayers.

8. Şazeli 157 (undated), for example, includes prayers and prayer-commentaries, poems and works by Isma‘il Hakki Bursevi (including a commentary on the prayer of Ibn Mashīsh), Sari ‘Abdullah Efendi (including Maslak al-‘ushshāq) and Nawa‘i Efendi (parts of a commentary on the Fuṣūṣ al-ḥikam).

9. Examples are J, F, and Hacı Mahmud Efendi 6287 (possibly dated AH 1252), the latter by Muḥammad ‘Abd al-Jalīl al-Mawṣilī al-Jilī. See also Beyazid 7880 (undated), Esad Efendi 3674 (possibly dated AH 1203 or before).

10. The copying of texts was often done out of a desire for benefit or baraka, out of love for the author, or as a means whereby the copyist endeavoured to bring themselves into the living or dead author’s presence. For examples relating to devotees of Ibn ‘Arabī who copied his works after his death, see Michael Chamberlain, Knowledge and Social Practice in Medieval Damascus, 1190–1350 (Cambridge, 1994), p. 144. Some believed that copying had a talismanic power bringing spiritual benefit: Chamberlain cites the example of Ibn al-Jawzī, who requested that after his death all the pens with which he had copied hadith should be gathered and heated in water, which was to be used to wash his corpse. Comparing ‘ilm with prayer, some writers urged copyists to carry out their work only when in a state of ritual ablution. See ibid. p. 136.

11. On the general notion of sanad, literally a support or stay, applied to the chain of authorities that validates transmitted knowledge, see ‘Sanad’, EI², Supplement 9–10, p. 702 (for the related term isnād [pl. asānīd] applied in the context of hadith transmission, see ‘Isnad’, EI², 4, p. 207). In setting out their chains of transmission, some of our sources explicitly use the term sanad. Within the chains, some use the verbs akhadha ‘an and rawā ‘an (to take/transmit from) and others ajāza (to grant permission, reflecting the fact that an ijāza underpins each link in a chain).

12. A seventh chain attached to the prayer (and the Awṛād) is recorded in Yahya, Histoire, 2, p. 540 (no. 1, attached to RG 16a) and discussed in Ibn ‘Arabī, The Seven Days of the Heart, pp. 174–175. While we do not discuss this chain here we would point to the fact that the transmitter from Ibn ‘Arabī died in AH 727: this suggests a possible ‘child ijāza’ (on which see below). G, apparently its original source, has been the basis of a number of printings (Hacı Mahmud Efendi 4179, Düğümlü Baba 490 and 489, for example).

13. Biographical notes provided here vary in length depending on how well known a figure is, the availability of information and the accessibility of sources: detail is provided when this is of interest or relevance to our focus and/or is not readily accessible to the non-Arabist.

14. For a fascinating glimpse of the cultural and social context within which the significance and operation of the ijāza can be properly understood (as played out in late 12th to mid-14th century CE Damascus), see Chamberlain, Knowledge and Social Practice, ch. 4. The author points to the prestige attached to scholarly pedigrees in the form of chains of transmission, and the concern of the learned elite to emphasise them as an integral part of their strategies of social survival, advanced through cultural practices associated with knowledge. The same emphasis is reflected in the production of the mashyakha or mu' jam literature, a genre listing the shaykhs an individual had studied with or heard hadith from.

Of our chains, {A} and {E} are associated with an ijāza in which the transmitter grants permission to a specific individual to read the prayer, thus perpetuating the chain. Ijāzas addressed to a specific individual arise also in Hacı Mahmud Efendi 4141 (fol. 9a, dated AH 1275) and in Esad Efendi 1442 (fol. 52a, undated). In the latter case it encompasses the Awrad as well as the Dawr and is granted to Muḥammad Rafī' Efendi by Muḥammad 'Umar b. 'Abd al-Jalīl al-Baghdādī, who describes himself as khādim ni'āl al-sāda al-Qādirīya, and has added the Dawr and ijāza at the end of this copy of K. al-Rashahāt al-anwarīya fī sharḥ al-awrad al-akbarīya: on the margin of the Awrad, the latter is by Ḥasan al-Kurdī. According to Carl Brockelmann, Geschichte der arabischen litteratur (Leiden, 1943–49) [hereafter 'GAL'], II, pp. 453, 473, Ḥasan b. Mūsā al-Kurdī al-Qādirī al-Bānī al-'Alawānī al-Jilānī al-Kūrānī al-Naqshbandī (d.1148/1735) also wrote Risāla fī qawl al-Shaykh al-Akbar wa qawl al-Jilī and Risāla fī anna 'ilm Allāh muḥīt bi-nafsihi am lā. Yahya, Histoire, 1, p. 289 records him as author of a commentary on Ibn 'Arabī's K. al-Ḥikam (RG 233).

15. See Aḥmad b. Muḥammad al-Maqqarī, Nafḥ al-tīb min ghuṣn al-Andalus al-raṭīb, ed. Ihsan Abbas (Beirut, 1968), II, p. 170. For further biographical references, his inclusion in samā's and a discussion of the possible identity of his mother (Khātūn Maryam bint Muḥammad, known as Umm al-Jawbān: Sa'd al-Dīn was apparently also known as al-Jawbān and 'Alā' al-Dīn), see Claude Addas, Quest for the Red Sulphur: The Life of Ibn 'Arabī (Cambridge, 1993), pp. 265 n. 118, 86–87, 228; Stephen Hirtenstein, The Unlimited Mercifier (Oxford, 1999), pp. 261–62 n.30; also p. 182.

16. See Aḥmad b. 'Abd al-Raḥīm b. al-Ḥusayn Ibn al-'Irāqī, al-Dhayl 'alā al-'ibar fī khabar man 'abar, ed. Salih al-Mahdi 'Abbas (Beirut, 1989), 2, p. 527. On him see also 'Abd al-Hayy b. 'Abd al-Kabir al-Kattani, Fihris al-fahāris wa'l-athbāt wa mu' jam al-ma'ājim wa'l-mashyakhāt wa'l-musalsalāt, ed. Ihsan 'Abbas (Beirut, 1982–86), p. 431; Shams al-Dīn al-Dhahabī, Dhayl ta'rīkh al-Islām, ed. Mazin b. Salim al-Bawazir (Riyadh, 1998), p. 202.

The Maqām Ibrāhīm is the (site of) the miraculous stone on which Ibrāhīm is believed to have stood while building the Ka'ba, and which bears his footprints. Through the revelation of Q 2: 125, the Prophet established the site as a place of prayer (Ibrāhīm and Ismā'il had reportedly prayed there when they had completed their work of building). In early Islam, the stone was encased in a wooden box and raised on a platform, usually locked inside the Ka'ba. Today it stands in a glass encasement about twenty cubits from the Ka'ba, and pilgrims perform two prayer cycles as close as possible behind it. See 'Maqam Ibrahim', EI², 6, pp. 104–107.

17. On the family see Muḥammad b. Faḍlallāh (Amīn) al-Muḥibbī, Khulāṣat al-athar fī a'yān al-qarn al-ḥādī 'ashar (Cairo, 1284), 2, pp. 461–462.

18. See Aḥmad Ibn Hajar al-'Asqalānī, al-Durar al-kāmina fī a'yān al-mī'a al-thāmina, ed. Muhammad Sayyid Jadd al-Haqq (Cairo, 1966), 1, p. 56.

19. At times alongside his brother, al-Ṣafī al-Ṭabarī: for these examples, see Ibn al-'Irāqī, al-Dhayl 'alā al-'ibar, index. See also al-'Asqalānī, al-Durar al-kāmina, 1, p. 56.

It may appear that Raḍī al-Dīn was born too late to have transmitted directly from Ibn 'Arabī (who died when he was four years old), but the possibility of such a link in the form of a 'child ijāza' (perhaps through the agency of his father or another male relative) cannot be ruled out: on such ijāzas see below.

We must mention the possibility that instead of the figure identified here, Raḍī al-Dīn al-Ṭabarī might be the Shafī'i mufti and member of the same family Aḥmad b. 'Abdallāh al-Ṭabarī al-Makkī (d.694) listed by Yahya, Histoire, 1, p. 133 as a defender of Ibn 'Arabī. There is no evidence that the latter was known as Raḍī al-Dīn/al-Raḍī, however. Other members of the important al-Ṭabarī al-Makkī family appear later in chain {D}.

It is noteworthy that Ibn 'Arabī had encountered the previous imam of the Maqām Ibrāhīm during a visit to Mecca in AH 598, in the person of the father of Niẓām, Shaykh Abū Shujā' Zāhir b. Rustam al-Iṣfahānī (d.609/1212), from whom he received an ijāza for Tirmidhī's collection of hadith. See Addas, Quest for the Red Sulphur, pp. 209–210; Ibn al-'Arabī, The Tarjumān al-Ashwāq, ed. Reynold A. Nicholson (London, 1978), p. 3.

20. See 'Ibn 'Asakir', EI², 3, pp. 713–715. Ibn 'Arabī himself listed another figure called al-Qāsim Ibn 'Asākīr among his own hadith instructors, who died in 600/1203. See Alexander Knysh, Ibn 'Arabī in the Later Islamic Tradition: The Making of a Polemical Image in Medieval Islam (Albany, NY, 1999), p. 334 n. 118.

21. Yahya, Histoire, RG 484. See A3320 [University of Istanbul Library], fol. 17a. Note that this ijāza including Ibn 'Asākīr is not recorded in Histoire, 2, p. 393. The same work arises in Halet Efendi 245, where it appears under a different title, R. al-Ḥurūf bi'l-manẓūmāt: fol. 260b records him transmitting the work through an ijāza from Ibn 'Arabī, and fol. 271a records him receiving an ijāza for it from Ibn 'Arabī and from his son 'Imād al-Dīn.

22. See Yahya, Histoire, 2, p. 540, chain 6b.

23. See Esad Efendi 1413, frontispiece. The author thanks Stephen Hirtenstein for this and manuscript information above relating to Ibn 'Asākīr.

24. See al-Kattani, Fihris al-fahāris, p.221: see also p.581.
25. On him see EI², 2, p.292; Georges Vajda, ed., Le Dictionnaire des autorités de 'Abd al-Mu'min al-Dimyati (Paris, 1962). For a list of his writings, see Brockelmann, GAL, II, p.88; Sup. II, p.79.
26. See Vajda, ed., Le Dictionnaire des autorités, p.12.
27. Ibid., p.123. He does not appear in the index of samā's, however.
28. See Yahya, Histoire, 2, p.540, chains 6c and d.
29. See Addas, Quest for the Red Sulphur, p.320.
30. Such as Ibn 'Abd al-Ghanī al-Maqdisī: see al-Kattani, Fihris al-fahāris, p.645; also pp.638, 997.
31. For examples of his students, teaching and transmissions, see al-Dhahabī, Dhayl ta'rīkh al-Islām, pp.152, 409, 455, 369; al-'Asqalānī, al-Durar al-kāmina, 3, p.163.
32. The full name given here follows that in Ibn al-'Irāqī, al-Dhayl 'alā al-'ibar, 2, p.492: the author also spells the name al-Ḥarrāwī, while all other sources do not double the r (we follow this majority position here). 'Abd al-Ḥayy Ibn al-'Imād, Shadharāt al-dhahab fī akhbār man dhahab (Cairo, 1351), 6, p.272 gives as his full name Nāṣir al-Dīn Muḥammad b. Yūsuf b. 'Alī b. Idrīs al-Ḥarāwī {al-Ṭabardār}. Al-'Asqalānī, al-Durar al-kāmina, 4, p.216 gives it as Muḥammad b. 'Alī b. Yūsuf b. Idrīs al-Dimyātī al-Ḥarāwī {Nāṣir al-Dīn al-Ṭabardār}. None of these refer to him as 'Abū Ṭalḥa' or as 'al-Zāhid'. Al-Kattani, Fihris al-fahāris, p.319 mentions 'Abū Ṭalḥa al-Ḥarāwī al-Zāhid' and p.549 Muḥammad b. 'Alī b. Yūsuf al-Ḥarāwī (Nāṣir al-Dīn), evidently the same person. Note that the name is spelled differently in all three appearances in chains in Yahya, Histoire, 2, pp.540–541 (as Ṭalḥa al-Ḥarrāwī, Abū Ṭalḥa al-Kharrāwī, and Abū Ṭalḥa al-Ḥarrawī).
33. For the former see Ibn al-'Irāqī, al-Dhayl 'alā al-'ibar, 2, p.492 and Ibn al-'Imād, Shadharāt al-dhahab, 6, p.272. For the latter see al-'Asqalānī, al-Durar al-kāmina, 4, p.216.
34. See Ibn al-'Irāqī, al-Dhayl 'alā al-'ibar, 2, pp.492–493; Ibn al-'Imād, Shadharāt al-dhahab, 6, p.272.
35. See al-Kattani, Fihris al-fahāris, pp.319 and 549. This gives, respectively, Abū Ṭalḥa al-Ḥarāwī al-Zāhid and Muḥammad b. 'Alī b. Yūsuf al-Ḥarāwī transmitting (p.319 Ibn 'Arabi's works specifically) from Sharaf al-Dīn al-Dimyātī, and to Muḥammad b. Muqbil al-Ḥalabī.
36. Al-'Asqalānī, al-Durar al-kāmina, 1, p.11 gives his full name as Ibrāhīm b. Aḥmad b. 'Abd al-Wāḥid b. 'Abd al-Mu'min b. Sa'īd b. Kāmil b. 'Alwān al-Tanūkhī.
37. In each case al-'Asqalānī describes his contribution through the expression takhrīj. In relation to works of hadith this typically means 'to quote, publish or give the isnād' of a hadith. (It may also indicate 'bringing out' the implications of hadith for the rules of fiqh, encompassing an explanation of use and shortness of associated chains of transmission, and making for easy identification of hadith relevant to specific subjects.) See Roy Mottahedeh, Review of Richard W. Bulliet, The Patricians of Nishapur (Cambridge, MA, 1972), Journal of the American Oriental Society 95: 3 (1975), p.492.

38. See further al-Kattani, Fihris al-fahāris, pp. 220–222, 1014, index; al-‘Asqalānī, al-Durar al-kāmina, 1, pp. 11–12.

39. On him see Knysh, Ibn ‘Arabī, pp. 226, 237; idem, ‘Ibn ‘Arabī in the Yemen: His Admirers and Detractors’, JMIAS XI (1992), pp. 44 ff; for detailed sources discussing his biography and work, p. 59 n. 35.

40. See al-Kattani, Fihris al-fahāris, pp. 553, 110–111. The name al-Murshidī may refer to one of his ancestors or Munyat Rashid, an Egyptian village. Note the appearance of al-Murshidī in a chain relating to the Ḥizb of al-Nawawī: p. 1144.

41. On him see EI², 3, pp. 776–778.

42. Knysh, Ibn ‘Arabī, pp. 26, 135.

43. Ibid., pp. 128–129; see also chs. 5, 8; idem, Ibn ‘Arabī in the Later Islamic Tradition, in S. Hirtenstein and M. Tiernan, eds., Muḥyiddin Ibn ‘Arabī: A Commemorative Volume (Shaftesbury, 1993), pp. 308, 313. Similarly, Yahya, Histoire, 1, pp. 130, 134 includes Ibn Ḥajar both among the mufti defenders and opponents of Ibn ‘Arabī.

44. See Basheer M. Nafi, ‘Tasawwuf and Reform in Pre-Modern Islamic Culture: In Search of Ibrahim al-Kurani’, Die Welt des Islams 42: 3 (2002), p. 329. Cf. idem, ‘Abu al-Thana’ al-Alusi: An ‘Alim, Ottoman Mufti, and Exegetist of the Qur’an’, IJMES 34 (2002), p. 466.

By the term salafi we refer here to a view of Islam shaped by the defining principles of the legacy of Aḥmad Ibn Taymīya (d.1328), whose vision of Islam represented an attempt to restore the pristine faith as understood and practised by the salaf al-ṣāliḥ or righteous forefathers of the Islamic community. These principles served to reinstate the ultimate authority of the original Islamic texts against the accumulated Islamic tradition, to protect tawḥīd, uphold the absence of contradiction between revelation and reason, and establish the unity of the community. Ibn Taymīya’s call to return to a direct understanding of the Qur’an and hadith was in opposition to the invocation of Greek philosophical concepts/tools by Ash‘ari and Mu‘tazili theological schools (which threatened to undermine the proper relationship of reason to revelation). It was also set against unreserved following of the opinions of the madhāhib (legal school) founders through taqlīd. He rejected sectarian and madhhab-based divisions and denounced the excesses of popular taṣawwuf and the doctrine of waḥdat al-wujūd for its threatened undermining of tawḥīd and divine transcendence. Given its reformist thrust, this legacy was eventually to become a major source of inspiration for those Sunni ulama who sought to challenge the dominant culture of Ash‘arism and to reform aspects of sufi belief and practice. For a concise introduction to Ibn Taymīya’s thought and legacy, see Itzhak Weismann, Taste of Modernity: Sufism, Salafiyya and Arabism in Late Ottoman Damascus (Leiden, 2001), pp. 263–268. See further Henri Laoust, Essai sur les doctrines sociales et politiques de Taki al-Din Ahmad b. Taimiya (Cairo, 1939).

45. Al-Kattani, Fihris al-fahāris, pp. 319, 554.

46. Ibid., pp. 617, 554.

47. On Hanbali faqīh al-Fakhr Ibn al-Bukhārī (Abū’l-Ḥasan ‘Alī b. Aḥmad b.

‘Abd al-Wāḥid al-Maqdisī, AH 596–690), see ibid., pp. 633–634. On his importance as a hadith transmitter by virtue of his ‘high’ chain, see pp. 588, 947, 1013.

48. See for example ibid., p. 991.

49. Ibid., p. 549. For further accounts of Muḥammad b. Muqbil transmitting to al-Suyūṭī, see pp. 627, 634.

50. On the father see ibid., p. 270.

51. Ibid., p. 910 ff.

52. Ibid., pp. 617, 911.

53. Ibid., pp. 110–111, 669.

54. Ibid., p. 669; al-Taysīr bi-tarājīm al-Ṭabarīyīn is also known as al-Tabyīn fī tarājīm al-Ṭabarīyīn: see al-Muḥibbī, Khulāṣat al-athar, 2, p. 457.

55. On him see EI², 9, pp. 913–916; for details concerning his contribution to the late 9th-century AH debate concerning Ibn ‘Arabī’s teachings see Knysh, Ibn ‘Arabī, pp. 79–81, 119–120, 213, 223. Yahya, Histoire, 1, p. 134 lists him among the defenders of Ibn ‘Arabī. See also Knysh, Ibn ‘Arabī in the Later Islamic Tradition, pp. 312, 316–317.

56. Al-Kattani, Fihris al-fahāris, p. 1014.

57. See also ibid. p. 853.

58. Ibid., pp. 755–756.

59. See ibid., pp. 619, 755.

60. Ibid., pp. 755–756, 677, 684.

61. See ibid. pp. 756, 1125, 853, also 958–959.

62. See Najm al-Dīn al-Ghazzī, al-Kawākib al-sā’ira bi-a’yān al-mi’a al-’āshira, ed. Jibrail S. Jabbur (Harissa, Lebanon, 1959), 1, pp. 197–198.

63. See Michael Winter, Society and Religion in Early Ottoman Egypt: Studies in the Writings of ‘Abd al-Wahhab al-Sha’rānī (New Brunswick, NJ, 1982), pp. 54–55; EI², 11, p. 406. For autobiographical accounts transmitted from Zakarīyā al-Anṣārī to al-Sha’rānī and other accounts related by al-Sha’rānī concerning him, see for example al-Ghazzī, al-Kawākib al-sā’ira, 1, pp. 196–198, 200–201. His early reputation for a love of the sufis, for attending their dhikr sessions and studying their works, had led his peers to suggest that he would be ‘no use’ as a faqīh: when he went on to excel in the exoteric sciences, some of them became jealous. See ibid., pp. 198, 200.

64. See al-Ghazzī, al-Kawākib al-sā’ira, 1, p. 202.

65. See ibid., pp. 203–204 (as al-Ghazzī puts it, ‘He understood through dhawq {spiritual ‘taste’} the words of the folk, and would explain what the people of the way said in the most perfect way, providing excellent answers concerning this if part of it appeared ambiguous to people.’); Knysh, Ibn ‘Arabī, p. 212; Th. Emil Homerin, From Arab Poet to Muslim Saint: Ibn al-Farid, His Verse and His Shrine (Columbia, SC, 1994), pp. 69–73; Winter, Society and Religion, pp. 163–164. Yahya, Histoire, 1, p. 134 lists him among the defenders of Ibn ‘Arabī.

66. See al-Ghazzī, al-Kawākib al-sā’ira, 1, p. 199.

67. Ibid., p. 202.

68. Al-Kattani, Fihris al-fahāris, p. 319.

69. Also spelled Sha'rawī: see Brockelmann, GAL, II, p. 441.

70. See for example Knysh, Ibn 'Arabī in the Later Islamic Tradition, p. 311; Winter, Society and Religion, pp. 165–172. The 'deliberate interpolation' hypothesis was a historical stratagem used in Islamic culture to deal with difficulties presented by certain texts from the perspective of 'orthodoxy'. It was used to exonerate Ibn 'Arabī, for example, by casting doubt on the attribution of the Fuṣūṣ al-ḥikam to him in its extant form, on the grounds that specific problematic statements had been inserted into the text.

71. Winter, Society and Religion, p. 55.

72. See EI², 9, p. 316. On him see further Winter, Society and Religion.

73. See for example David Commins, Islamic Reform: Politics and Social Change in Late Ottoman Syria (New York and Oxford, 1990), p. 50; for his attitude towards the madhāhib and madhhab affiliation see Winter, Society and Religion, pp. 224, 236–241.

74. See Nafi, 'Abu al-Thana' al-Alusi', p. 489 n. 7.

75. See Winter, Society and Religion, p. 57; al-Ghazzī, al-Kawākib al-sā'ira, 1, pp. 97–98.

76. Winter, Society and Religion, pp. 99, 139–140. This was the only one of his many shaykhs to give him such authorisation. Al-Sha'rānī expressly referred to al-Shinnāwī as al-Aḥmadī. Several of his other shaykhs were also Aḥmadīs, associated with the Ahmadiyya, 'the order of Aḥmad al-Badawī': ibid., p. 98. More commonly known as the Badawiyya, this is characterised by a popular cult centred on al-Badawī, his mawlid and his tomb in Tanta, Egypt. For al-Sha'rānī's accounts of al-Shinnāwī conversing with al-Badawī at the latter's tomb see al-Ghazzī, al-Kawākib al-sā'ira, 1, p. 98.

77. Winter, Society and Religion, pp. 99, 138.

78. This was Abū'l-Faṭḥ Muḥammad al-Iskandarī al-Mazzī. The account here draws on al-Ghazzī, al-Kawākib al-sā'ira, 3, pp. 3–10.

79. See Barbara Rosenow von Schlegell, Sufism in the Ottoman Arab World: Shaykh 'Abd al-Ghani al-Nabulusi (d.1143/1731), PhD thesis, University of California, Berkeley, 1997, p. 29.

80. See Brockelmann, GAL, II, p. 514.

81. See al-Muḥibbī, Khulāṣat al-athar, 1, p. 244; Martin van Bruinessen, 'Origins and Development of the Sufi Orders (tarekat) in Southeast Asia', Studia Islamika (Jakarta) 1: 1 (1994); idem, 'Shari'a Court, Tarekat and Pesantren: Religious Institutions in the Sultanate of Banten', Archipel 50 (1995), p. 179. On Şibghatallāh (d.1015/1606–07), see Atallah S. Copt, 'The Naqshbandiyya and its Offshoot, the Naqshbandiyya-Mujaddidiyya in the Haramayn in the 11th/17th Century', Die Welt des Islams 43: 3 (2003), p. 323. He had received Ibn 'Arabī's doctrine (which he propagated in the Haramayn) from his shaykh Wajīh al-Dīn al-'Alawī (d.1609), an 'outstanding advocate' of Ibn 'Arabī and his doctrine in India. See further Khaled El-Rouayheb, 'Opening the Gate of Verification: The Forgotten Arab-Islamic Florescence of the 17th Century', IJMES 38 (2006), pp. 271; 247 n. 51.

82. See John O. Voll, ‘‘Abdallah Ibn Salim al-Basri and 18th Century Hadith Scholarship’’, Die Welt des Islams 42: 3 (2002), p. 367.

83. See Brockelmann, GAL, II, p. 514. He also wrote Risāla fī waḥdat al-wujūd: see al-Muḥibbī, Khulāṣat al-athar, 1, p. 244.

84. This paragraph is based on al-Muḥibbī, Khulāṣat al-athar, 2, pp. 457–464.

85. On his teachers see Najm al-Dīn al-Ghazzī, Luṭf al-samar wa qatf al-thamar min tarājīm a’yān al-ṭabaqa al-ūlā min al-qarn al-ḥādī ‘ashar, ed. Mahmud al-Shaykh (Damascus, 1981), 1, pp. 31–36. Particular mention should be made of his shaykh Shihāb al-Dīn Aḥmad b. Yūnus al-‘Īthāwī, Shafī’i mufti.

86. See ‘Abd al-Razzaq al-Bitar, Hilyat al-bashar fī ta’rīkh al-qarn al-thālith ‘ashar (Beirut, 1993/1961), 1, p. 153; al-Ghazzī, al-Kawākib al-sā’ira, 1, pp. xi–xxi. For further details of his posts see al-Ghazzī, Luṭf al-samar, 1, pp. 45–55.

87. See al-Ghazzī, Luṭf al-samar, 1, p. 97.

88. See von Schlegell, Sufism, pp. 32, 43, 78; Zuhayr Khalil al-Burqawi, ‘Abd al-Ghanī al-Nābulusī wa taṣawwufuhu (Amman, 2003), p. 95.

89. Al-Ghazzī, Luṭf al-samar, 1, p. 96; Muḥammad Khalīl b. ‘Alī al-Murādī, Silk al-durar fī a’yān al-qarn al-thānī ‘ashar (Cairo, 1301), 1, p. 5; Nafī, ‘Tasawwuf and Reform’, p. 321.

90. For his works in this field see al-Ghazzī, Luṭf al-samar, 1, pp. 108–111.

91. See al-Muḥibbī, Khulāṣat al-athar, 4, p. 199.

92. Ibid., p. 200; see also al-Ghazzī, Luṭf al-samar, 1, p. 84.

93. John O. Voll, ‘Muhammad Hayya al-Sindi and Muhammad Ibn ‘Abd al-Wahhab: An Analysis of an Intellectual Group in Eighteenth-century Madina’, Bulletin of the School of Oriental and African Studies 38: 1 (1975), pp. 32–33 indicates something of al-Qushāshī’s importance to 18th-century Medinan ulama circles based on intellectual lineages among them leading back to him.

94. See ibid., p. 34. Editor of the six major Sunni collections of hadith and described by al-Jabartī as ‘the seal of hadith scholars’, al-Baṣrī was a teacher of Muḥammad Ḥayāt al-Sindī. On him see Voll, ‘Abdallah Ibn Salim al-Basri’, pp. 356–372.

95. See Nafī, ‘Tasawwuf and Reform’, pp. 312–320.

96. Al-Muḥibbī, Khulāṣat al-athar, 1, p. 345.

97. See EI², 5, pp. 525–526. On Singkel see below. Note that al-Qushāshī was centrally involved in the polemic engaged with Sirhindī’s khalīfa Ādam al-Banūrī during meetings in Medina on specific points of doctrine as interpreted by Ādam. See Copt, ‘The Naqshbandiyya’, pp. 332–337.

98. Michel Chodkiewicz, Seal of the Saints: Prophethood and Sainthood in the Doctrine of Ibn ‘Arabī (Cambridge, 1993), pp. 135–136; al-Muḥibbī, Khulāṣat al-athar, 1, p. 345.

99. ‘mazj al-ḥaqā’iq bi’l-aḥādīth al-nabawīya’ as described in al-Kattani, Fihris al-fuhāris, p. 971.

100. See Voll, ‘Abdallah Ibn Salim al-Basri’, p. 368.

101. See Nafi, 'Tasawwuf and Reform', p. 314 (and for further detailed sources on al-Qushāshī, see p. 312 n. 10–13); cf. al-Kattani, Fihris al-fahāris, p. 971.

102. Al-Muḥibbī, Khulāṣat al-athar, 2, pp. 195–196. Voll, 'Muhammad Hayya al-Sindi', p. 33 n. 8 mentions him in passing among a group of teachers in 18th-century Medina. His brother 'Alī (d.1070/1659–60) was imam and Hanafi mufti at the Ḥaram (Sanctuary) in Mecca. See Coptý, 'The Naqshbandiyya', pp. 330–331.

103. See al-Muḥibbī, Khulāṣat al-athar, 1, p. 345.

104. For a detailed overview of his education, see Nafi, 'Tasawwuf and Reform', pp. 321 ff.

105. Voll, 'Muhammad Hayya al-Sindi', p. 34.

106. See Alexander Knysh, 'Ibrahim al-Kurani (d.1101/1690), An Apologist for waḥdat al-wujūd', JRAS Series 3, 5: 1 (1999), p. 46.

107. Martin van Bruinessen, 'Kurdish 'Ulama and their Indonesian Disciples', at http://www.let.uu.nl/~martin.vanbruinessen/personal/publications/Kurdish_ulama_Indonesia.htm, 20pp: pp. 4–5. On his stature see further El-Rouayheb, 'Opening the Gate', p. 274.

108. Knysh, 'Ibrahim al-Kurani', p. 45. Van Bruinessen, 'Kurdish 'Ulama', p. 5 describes the mature al-Kūrānī as 'the leading representative of Ibn 'Arabī's doctrines in Medina and perhaps throughout the entire Muslim world.'

109. Singkel became particularly close to al-Kūrānī, who gave him an ijāza to teach the Shattariyya ṭarīqa. He was the first to introduce the ṭarīqa to Indonesia, establishing it there as a moderate force as part of a broader reconciliation of mystics and legalists, and was thus a major influence on the revival of orthodox sufism, combined with shari'a, in Sumatra. See van Bruinessen, 'Kurdish 'Ulama', p. 4; Voll, 'Muhammad Hayya al-Sindi', p. 39; idem, 'Abdallah Ibn Salim al-Basri', p. 370; Anthony Johns, Islam in Southeast Asia: Problems and Perspectives, in C. D. Cowan and O. W. Walters, eds., Southeast Asian History and Historiography: Essays Presented to D. G. E. Hall (Ithaca, NY, 1976), pp. 314–319.

110. Van Bruinessen, 'Kurdish 'Ulama', p. 5; Nafi, 'Tasawwuf and Reform', pp. 334 ff. On al-Kūrānī's role in transmitting hadith via the Yemeni Mizjaji family, see John O. Voll, Linking Groups in the Networks of Eighteenth Century Revivalist Scholars: The Mizjaji Family in Yemen, in Nehemia Levtzion and John O. Voll, eds., Eighteenth-Century Islamic Renewal and Reform (Syracuse, NY, 1987), p. 76.

111. Al-Kūrānī responded himself and also asked his student Muḥammad b. 'Abd al-Rasūl al-Barzanjī to respond. The latter wrote two treatises (dated 1682 and 1683) severely criticising Sirhindī: these were endorsed by leading ulama of the Hijaz, who agreed unanimously that Sirhindī's ideas amounted to serious deviation. (It is unlikely, however, that al-Kūrānī would have agreed that Sirhindī be labelled an unbeliever [kāfir]: see Coptý, 'The Naqshbandiyya', pp. 338–345, which also illuminates the political context of the Indian request for a fatwa, and the interests of the Sharif of Mecca in his relations with the Mughal ruler.) Many more works of the same kind appear to have been written in the context of this controversy over Sirhindī's views: see further Yohanan Freidmann, Shaykh Ahmad Sirhindī: An Outline of his Thought and a Study of his Image in the Eyes of Posterity (Montreal and London, 1971), pp. 7–8, 96–97; Athar Abbas Rizvi, A History of Sufism in India, II (New Delhi, 1983); van Bruinessen, ‘Kurdish ‘Ulama’, p. 5.

On Sirhindī, who projected himself as the renovator of the second millennium and sought to replace the doctrine of waḥdat al-wujūd with that of waḥdat al-shuhūd, mounting a comprehensive reformist challenge to the ṭarīqas aimed at reconciling taṣawwuf with the shari‘a and reinstating the centrality of the Sunna, see further Muhammad Abdul Haq Ansari, Sufism and Shari‘ah: A Study of Shaykh Ahmad Sirhindī’s Efforts to Reform Sufism (Leicester, 1986).

Nafi, ‘Tasawwuf and Reform’, pp. 324–235, 247 points out that when al-Kūrānī joined the Naqshbandiyya through al-Qushāshī this was not through the Sirhindī line: later in his career, however, his students were initiated through this line.

112. See Basheer M. Nafi, ‘He was a Teacher of Ibn ‘Abd al-Wahhab: Muhammad Hayat al-Sindi and the Revival of the Traditionist Methodology’, unpublished paper. Voll, ‘‘Abdallah Ibn Salim al-Basri’, p. 366 suggests that his approach to hadith studies formed part of an emergent, more textualist, mode. Note also that al-Kūrānī was a teacher of ‘Abdallāh b. Sālīm al-Baṣrī in hadith instruction: see ibid. pp. 364–365. On the interest in hadith scholarship among ulama with strong sufi affiliations in the 17th and 18th centuries, see John O. Voll, ‘Hadith Scholars and Tariqahs: An Ulama Group in the 18th Century Haramayn and their Impact in the Islamic World’, Journal of Asian and African Studies XV: 3–4 (1980), pp. 264–272.

113. See for example EI², 5, p. 433; Knysh, ‘Ibrahim al-Kurani’, p. 42.

114. As Nafi, ‘Tasawwuf and Reform’ pp. 323–324 points out, al-Kūrānī’s view of Ibn Taymīya was positively influenced by his main Damascene teacher, Hanbali mufti and the most eminent Hanbali ‘ālim in Damascus at the time, ‘Abd al-Bāqī Taqī al-Dīn b. Mawāhib al-Ḥanbalī (d. 1070/1660). See also idem, ‘He was a Teacher’.

In relation to issues of kalām and late Ash‘arism, Nafi surveys al-Kūrānī’s treatment of such questions as the Qur‘an and the divine speech, the attributes of God, and the concept of kasb (acquisition of actions), pointing out where he parted company with late Ash‘ari dogma and declared his adherence to the salafi position, at the same time serving the end of rehabilitating the latter in dominant sufi–Ash‘ari circles. See Nafi, ‘Tasawwuf and Reform’, pp. 330–334, 339–342. He suggests that, in rejecting corporeity, anthropomorphism and allegorical interpretation, al-Kūrānī effectively constructed ‘a salafi foundation for Sufism’. See ibid. p. 337. For details of al-Kūrānī’s views on waḥdat al-wujūd, which amount to ‘an attempt to legitimate [it] not only in the eyes of the strict Muslim but even in the eyes of the...salafi’, see ibid. pp. 337–338.

It is noteworthy that ‘Abd al-Ghanī al-Nābulusī disagreed profoundly with al-Kūrānī’s (strongly salafi) view regarding the issue of kasb: see von Schlegell, Sufism, p. 19 n. 51. For other reactions to his views on free will, see El-Rouayheb, ‘Opening the Gate’, p. 281 n. 86.

Note finally an ijāza and advice from al-Kūrānī addressed to specific individuals (dated AH 1095 and 1096, respectively) concerning their perusal of Ibn ‘Arabī’s works and the issue of reading these with/to others. He clarifies the attitude and approach appropriate to a beneficial and blessed reading and discussion of Ibn 'Arabī's words (viz., bi-sharṭ al-īmān bi'l-mutashābihāt ma'a laysa kamithlihi shay'), warning that holding rigidly to the belief of the theologians (mutakallimūn) in such reading will be fruitless. Thus, if they find someone with the right attitude (idhā ra'aytum aḥadan yu'min bi'l-mutashābihāt al-qur'āniya wa'l-tanzīh), then it is fine to read with him. See A 3239 [University of Istanbul Library], fol. 151a.

115. See Nafi, 'Tasawwuf and Reform', pp. 342, 350.

116. On his relationship with al-Nābulusī, see 'Abd al-Ghanī al-Nābulusī, al-Haqīqa wa'l-majāz fī riḥlat bilād al-Shām wa Miṣr wa'l-Hijāz, ed. Riyad 'Abd al-Hamid Murad (Damascus, 1989), p. 324 ff.

117. See Nafi, 'Tasawwuf and Reform', pp. 346–347; al-Kattani, Fihris al-fahāris, pp. 216–218.

118. His Dhakhā'ir al-mawārith fī'l-dalāla 'alā mawāḍi' al-aḥādīth set out all the books of sound hadith collections by the first transmitters' names: see von Schlegell, Sufism, p. 3.

119. Ibid., p. 49.

120. See ibid., chs. 2–4. For further detail on al-Nābulusī, see Elizabeth Sirreyeh, Sufi Visionary of Damascus: 'Abd al-Ghanī al-Nabulusi, 1641–1731 (London and New York, 2005); Bakri Aladdin, Abdalghani al-Nabulusi (d.1143/1731): oeuvre, vie et doctrine, 2 vols., PhD thesis, University of Paris I, 1985; al-Burqawi, 'Abd al-Ghanī al-Nābulusī wa ṭasawwufuhū; EI², 1, p. 60.

121. See von Schlegell, Sufism, pp. 33, 43, 250–251. Al-Nābulusī explicitly mentioned in relation to al-Futūḥāt al-Makkīya that he had inner (bāṭinī) paths of transmission which he could not make public.

122. See ibid., p. 8.

123. See Voll, 'Abdallah Ibn Salim al-Basri', pp. 363, 369.

124. For further detail see al-Kattani, Fihris al-fahāris, pp. 495–496; al-Bitar, Ḥilyat al-bashar, 2, p. 715; al-Murādī, Silk al-durar, 4, p. 27; Voll, 'Muhammad Hayya al-Sindi', pp. 33, 39; Knysh, 'Ibrahim al-Kurani', p. 46.

125. On him see Nafi, 'He was a Teacher'; Voll, 'Muhammad Hayya al-Sindi'.

126. See Aziz Ahmad, 'Political and Religious Ideas of Shah Wali-ullah of Delhi', The Muslim World LII: 1 (1962), p. 22; J. M. S. Baljon, Religion and Thought of Shah Wali Allah, 1702–1762 (Leiden, 1986), pp. 5–6; Hafiz A. Ghaffar Khan, 'Shah Wali Allah: On the Nature, Origin, Definition and Classification of Knowledge', Journal of Islamic Studies 3: 2 (1992), pp. 203–213; Nafi, 'Tasawwuf and Reform', p. 344.

A third student was the leading Naqshbandi shaykh in Medina, Ismā'īl b. 'Abdal-lāh al-Uskudārī (d.1182/1768–69). See Copty, 'The Naqshbandiyya', p. 345.

127. See al-Kattani, Fihris al-fahāris, p. 497.

128. See Nafi, 'Tasawwuf and Reform', p. 347.

129. See EI², 1, pp. 965–966; Voll, 'Abdallah Ibn Salim al-Basri', p. 369; von Schlegell, Sufism, pp. 55–58, 128, 277. Frederick De Jong, Mustafa Kamal al-Din al-Bakri (1688–1749): Revival and Reform of the Khalwatiyya Tradition? in Levzion and Voll, eds., Eighteenth-Century Islamic Renewal and Reform, pp.117–132 revisits earlier projections of al-Bakrī inspiring a Khalwati revival in the 18th century and reforming the Khalwati way. For another view, see B. G. Martin, A Short History of the Khalwatiyya Order of Dervishes, in N. Keddie, ed., Scholars, Saints and Sufis: Muslim Religious Institutions since 1500 (Berkeley, CA, 1972), pp.275–305.

130. Al-Kattani, Fihris al-fahāris, pp.100–102. See further index.

131. Note that in chain {B} ‘al-Ḥanafī’ is a misreading of al-Ḥifnī by the copyist. The same copyist misreads al-Bakrī as al-Kubrā.

132. On al-Ḥifnāwī see ‘Abd al-Rahmān al-Jabartī, ‘Ajā’ib al-āthār fī’l-tarājim wa’l-akhbār (Beirut, n.d.), 1, pp.339–354; de Jong, Mustafa Kamal al-Din al-Bakri, pp.118, 120, 126–7. For his writings see al-Murādī, Silk al-durar, 4, p.49. For further sources on him, see Nafi, ‘Tasawwuf and Reform’, p.347 n.121. Note that al-Ḥifnāwī had himself assumed the position of Shaykh al-Azhar from 1757/58 until his death in 1767.

Al-Dardayr introduced certain changes to the litany of the Khalwati ṭarīqa, incorporating into this his Ṣalawāt and Manzūma (see ch. 1 n.4). These changes were retained by most of the ṭarīqa branches that emerged later. See de Jong, Mustafa Kamal al-Din al-Bakri, pp.127, 132 n.82.

133. Brockelmann, GAL, II, p.436.

134. Al-Murādī, Silk al-durar, 4, p.102. The Wadi Tafilat in the southeast region of Morocco was the centre of the Kharijite emirate centred on Sijilmassa (8th–9th centuries CE). The Idrisid dynasty originated from this region.

135. See ibid., pp.102–108. For further sources, see al-Kattani, Fihris al-fahāris, pp.268–269.

136. B; A 4305 [University of Istanbul Library] is another copy (40 fols.) apparently dated AH 1273.

137. Brockelmann, GAL, II, p.436; see also I, p.580. For further details of his works, see al-Kattani, Fihris al-fahāris, pp.268–269.

138. For example, al-Kuzbarī al-Waṣīt [Muḥammad b. ‘Abd al-Rahmān], son of the foremost hadith scholar in the Syrian Ottoman provinces (d. AH 1221). He also appears in the thabat (list of authorities) of Maḥmūd Ḥamza al-Ḥusaynī (d.1305). See al-Kattani, Fihris al-fahāris, pp.485, 880.

139. On him see al-Jabartī, ‘Ajā’ib al-āthār, 1, pp.553–558; 348, drawn on here.

140. De Jong, Mustafa Kamal al-Din al-Bakri, p.117; von Schlegell, Sufism, pp.57 n.157; 277.

141. See al-Murādī, Silk al-durar, 4, pp.14–15.

142. Brockelmann, GAL, Sup. II, p.479.

143. Son of an important notable family of Damascus.

144. C, fols. 2b–3a.

145. Brockelmann, GAL, Sup. II, p.474.

146. Al-Bitar, Ḥilyat al-bashar, 1, p.3.

147. See von Schlegell, Sufism, pp.36 ff.

148. See Aḥmad al-Budayrī al-Ḥallāq, Ḥawādith Dimashq al-yawmīya, 1154–1175/1741–1762, ed. Ahmad ‘Izzat ‘Abd al-Karim (Damascus, 1959), p. 52.

149. See Yahya, Histoire, 2, pp. 540–541.

150. On Muḥammad al-Jundī see al-Bitar, Ḥilyat al-bashar, 1, pp. 349–350; Weismann, Taste of Modernity, p. 61.

Khālīd al-Naqshbandī (1776–1826) was born in Shahrzur in northern Iraq. He studied there, in Damascus and the Hijaz and travelled to Delhi, where he studied with the leading Naqshbandī master, who gave him an ijāza and an instruction to spread the ṭarīqa in the Ottoman lands. His successes in this during the first part of the 19th century (he appointed at least 67 khalīfas among Kurds, Turks and Arabs) were such that the line he initiated became known as the Naqshbandiyya-Khalidiyya (or Mujaddidiyya-Khalidiyya). He lived consecutively in Sulaymaniyya, Baghdad and Damascus. On him see Albert H. Hourani, Sufism and Modern Islam: Mawlana Khalid and the Naqshbandi Order, in Hourani, ed., The Emergence of the Modern Middle East (London, 1981), pp. 75–89; Weismann, Taste of Modernity, chs. 1–2; van Bruinessen, ‘Kurdish ‘Ulama’, pp. 9–10; Butrus Abu-Manneh, ‘Salafiyya and the Rise of the Khalidiyya in Baghdad in the Early Nineteenth Century’, Die Welt des Islams 43:3 (2003), pp. 364–367.

151. In chain {A} Amīn al-Jundī refers to his father simply as Muḥammad Efendī al-Jundī, while his note at the end of the commentary identifies his father as ‘Muḥammad Sa‘īd Efendī min sulālat Āl Ramaḍān b. al-ḥajj Ishāq Efendī al-muftī fi madīnat Aṭana [al-Astāna?] fi-mā maḍā min al-zamān.’ (A, fol. 52a) He also signs himself in the same place as ‘Jundī Zāde Muḥammad Amīn al-‘Abbās al-muftī bi-Dimashq’. Al-Bitar, Ḥilyat al-bashar, 1, p. 343 confirms Amīn’s descent from al-‘Abbās, the Prophet’s uncle, and includes in his full name a mention of Ishāq thus: Amīn Efendī b. Muḥammad b. ‘Abd al-Wahhāb b. Ishāq b. ‘Abd al-Raḥmān b. Ḥasan b. Muḥammad al-Jundī al-Ma‘arrī. (Note the existence of a near contemporary also named Amīn b. Muḥammad Sa‘īd in al-Bitar, Ḥilyat al-bashar, 1, p. 342.)

152. See al-Bitar, Ḥilyat al-bashar, 1, pp. 343–364; Muhammad Jamil al-Shatti, A‘yān Dimashq fi’l-qarn al-thālith ‘ashar wa nisfal-qarn al-rābi’ ‘ashar, 1201–1350 (n.p., 1972), 2nd edn., pp. 67–69. For further references, see Weismann, Taste of Modernity, p. 216 n. 72–73.

On the thought of the Amir ‘Abd al-Qādir and the Akbari awakening among the ulama of Damascus associated with him, see Michel Chodkiewicz, The Spiritual Writings of Amir ‘Abd al-Kader (Albany, NY, 1995); Weismann, Taste of Modernity, chs. 5–6; Commins, Islamic Reform, pp. 26–30: on his rescue of Christians, p. 28.

153. See al-Kattani, Fihris al-fahāris, p. 1137; R. S. O’Fahey, Enigmatic Saint: Ahmad b. Idris and the Idrisi Tradition (London, 1990), p. 66 n. 44. There is some confusion in the literature surrounding this man. Al-Kattani records a Muḥammad Ṭāhir b. Sa‘īd Sunbul al-Makkī [index and e.g. pp. 364, 805, 1147], but also gives a Muḥammad Ṭāhir b. Sa‘īd Sunbul al-Madanī [e.g. pp. 199, 694], as given also by O’Fahey. {In places, al-Kattani refers simply to a Muḥammad Ṭāhir Sunbul. To add to the confusion, al-Bitar, Ḥilyat al-bashar, 2, p. 747 gives a Ṭāhir b. Sa‘īd Sunbul known as ‘Sunbul al-Dimashqī’ (1150–1218): see also 3, p.1325, where he gives Muḥammad b. Sa‘īd Sunbul (d.1218).} The verification in the literature of the existence of a Muḥammad Ṭāhir b. Sa‘īd Sunbul of the Hijaz, who transmitted from his father and to Yāsīn al-Mīrghanī, is ultimately what concerns us: al-Kattani’s crucial reference gives Yāsīn transmitting from Ṭāhir without specifying whether he is al-Makkī or al-Madanī: see p.1137. On his association with the Mīrghanī family, see O’Fahey, Enigmatic Saint, pp.65–66.

154. Al-Bitar, Hilyat al-bashar, 2, pp.1101–1102, drawing on al-Jabartī, ‘Ajā’ ib al-āthār. See also O’Fahey, Enigmatic Saint, pp.61, 143. R. S. O’Fahey and Bernd Radtke, ‘Neo-Sufism Reconsidered’, Der Islam 70: 1 (1993), p.58 suggest that he may have fought back against the Wahhabi doctrine on the issue of saintly mediation.

155. O’Fahey, Enigmatic Saint, p.143.

156. On this order see ‘Mirghaniyya’, EI², 7, p.124. On ‘Uthmān, see O’Fahey and Radtke, ‘Neo-Sufism Reconsidered’, p.58.

157. See O’Fahey, Enigmatic Saint, pp.93, 132–133, 143 n.34. See further al-Kattani, Fihris al-fahāris, pp.103, 122, 197, 253, 557, 904, 906 and 1143.

158. On this transmission, see for example al-Kattani, Fihris al-fahāris, p.1137.

159. See ibid., pp.104–106. Another printed work is al-Lu’lu’ al-marsū’ fī-mā lā aṣl lahu aw aṣluhu mawḍū’ (Cairo, 1305): ibid., p.106; Brockelmann, GAL, Sup. II, p.776.

160. A second printing is entitled K. al-Ṭawr al-aghla fī sharḥ al-Dawr al-a’lā (Cairo, n.d.).

161. See Brockelmann, GAL, Sup. II, p.776; cf. McGregor, Sanctity and Sainthood, pp.176–177 n.50.

162. See D, front page and p.159, for example. His own shaykh was reportedly a Shadhili namesake of ‘Abd al-Wahhāb al-Sha‘rānī, whom al-Qāwuqjī admired greatly and whom he projected as an important link in chains of Shadhili teachers: see Winter, Society and Religion, pp.70, 88. He also wrote Barwāriq al-anwār al-jalīya fī asānīd al-sādāt al-ṣūfīya: al-Kattani, Fihris al-fahāris, p.254.

163. On him see further al-Kattani, Fihris al-fahāris, index (under Muḥammad b. Khalīl al-Qāwuqjī).

164. See Chamberlain, Knowledge and Social Practice, p.89.

165. See for example ibid., pp.109–110.

166. The principle of the pre-eminent value attached to oral testimony in Islamic culture was maintained from early times through an increasingly elastic application of the ijāza to transmissions that could not be guaranteed by direct study of the text transmitted and the effective meeting between a transmitter and a receiver capable of understanding the text (which could often require a considerable period of companionship between the two). While early authorities such as al-Shāfi‘ī expressed serious reservations concerning this, ijāzas that did not denote a genuine authentication of learning actually accomplished became widely accepted in practice. The ‘child ijāza’ is one of several such categories: others are ijāzas granted to children still unborn or for works yet to be written; those obtained through a casual encounter or short, unplanned interview; those requested and granted through correspondence without any actual meeting between the authority and the receiver (signalling an ‘approval’ of existing knowledge rather than actual transmission), and the ‘general ijāza’ encompassing an entire oeuvre and typically granted without the actual hearing of texts. See ‘Idjaza’, EI², 3, pp.1020–1022; further von Schlegell, Sufism, pp.53, 125–128; Richard W. Bulliet, The Patricians of Nishapur (Cambridge, MA, 1972), p. 50. Note that by focusing on the ijāza as an authentication of knowledge acquired through transmission based on the direct study of a text and the effective meeting between a transmitter and a receiver capable of understanding it (and designating all other kinds of ijāza in contrast as ‘formulaic’ or ‘fictitious’), there is a danger of neglecting other dimensions of its significance and role. Highlighted here, these other dimensions come to the fore in the case of a small prayer such as the Dawr, which required neither great feats of understanding nor a lengthy spell of companionship and direct study.

Links apparently underpinned by ‘child ijāzas’ in our chains are: {D} Ibn ‘Arabī ~ Raḍī al-Dīn al-Ṭabarī; {F} Ibn ‘Arabī ~ al-Wānī; {A} Zakarīyā al-Anṣārī ~ Badr al-Dīn al-Ghazzī; {E} al-Suyūṭī ~ Badr al-Dīn al-Ghazzī; {E} al-Dimyāṭī ~ al-Ḥarāwī; {E} al-Ḥarāwī ~ al-Ḥalabī; {A and E} Badr al-Dīn al-Ghazzī ~ Najm al-Dīn al-Ghazzī; {A and E} Najm al-Dīn al-Ghazzī ~ ‘Abd al-Ghanī al-Nābulusī; {E} ‘Abd al-Ghanī al-Nābulusī ~ Ibrāhīm b. Ismā‘īl b. ‘Abd al-Ghanī al-Nābulusī.

167. To give another example, when the historian ‘Abd al-Raḥmān Abū Shāma’s son died aged eight, his father wrote that he had taken him to hear hadith and other texts from over one hundred and seventy shaykhs. See Chamberlain, Knowledge and Social Practice, p. 140. Fathers would take their sons to shaykhs for baraka. In hadith transmission, they might take them very young to the oldest shaykhs in order to shorten the chain between them and the Prophet, raising concerns that ‘one’s shaykhs and their shaykhs were too young to understand the content of what they transmitted’. See ibid., p. 139; cf. Bulliet, The Patricians of Nishapur, pp. 50–51, emphasising that ‘the most important educational link was between the child and the old man’. In general, the insertion of young people into chains of transmission formed a central part of their initiation into the culture of the learned elite. See Chamberlain, Knowledge and Social Practice, pp. 88, 118–119, 124–125, 139–140.

168. Compare, for example, with Najm al-Dīn al-Ghazzī’s general ijāza, received from his father Badr al-Dīn who died when he was seven, in all 41 of Zakarīyā al-Anṣārī’s works. See al-Ghazzī, al-Kawākib al-sā’ira, 1, p. 202.

169. As a general point, young people in medieval Damascus were cautioned against ‘taking texts as shaykhs’ and were urged to read only under the personal supervision of a shaykh: among other things, this would link them with all those who had transmitted the text before them, conferring on them the baraka of the line of transmission. See Chamberlain, Knowledge and Social Practice, pp. 138–139, 141–142, 148.

170. See Yahya, Histoire, 2, Addenda B and D.

171. The same chain from Ibn ‘Arabī to al-Suyūṭī appears in al-Kattānī’s description of one route via which he transmits all of Ibn ‘Arabī’s works (and all that the latter himself transmitted): see Fihris al-fahāris, p. 319.

172. The chain from al-Qushāshī back to Zakarīyā al-Anṣārī appears also in an ijāza in al-Qushāshī's hand for the Ṣaḥīḥ: see al-Kattani, Fihris al-fahāris, p. 971.

173. I, fol. 62a. Alongside al-Qushāshī, Ibrāhīm al-Kūrānī, al-Dimyātī, al-Ḥifnāwī and al-Bakrī, Zakarīyā al-Anṣārī, the Ghazzīs and 'Abd al-Ghanī al-Nābulusī deserve mention for their critical positions within the chain map.

174. In this context the possibility of this being shorthand for a direct, uwaysi connection to Ibn 'Arabī is greatly weakened by the specific phraseology used.

175. See Addas, Quest for the Red Sulphur, p. 320.

176. Note that al-Qushāshī gives his silṣila in 'ṭarīq al-shaykh Muḥyī al-Dīn' thus: al-Qushāshī ~ Abū'l-Mawāhib al-Shinnāwī ~ his father 'Alī b. 'Abd al-Quddūs ~ 'Abd al-Wahhāb al-Sha'rānī ~ Jalāl al-Dīn al-Suyūṭī ~ Kamāl al-Dīn M b. M b. 'Abd al-Rahmān al-Shāfi'ī (also known as Imām al-Kamālīya) ~ Shams al-Dīn M b. M al-Jazarī ~ Zayn al-Dīn Abū Ḥafṣ 'Umar b. al-Ḥasan b. Yazīd b. Amīla al-Marāshī ~ 'Izz al-Dīn Aḥmad b. Ibrāhīm al-Fārūthī al-Wāsiṭī ~ Ibn 'Arabī. See Aḥmad al-Qushāshī, al-Simṭ al-majīd fī talqīn al-dhikr wa'l-bay'a wa ilbās al-khirqa wa salāsil ahl al-tawḥīd (Haydarabad, AH 1327/28), pp. 105–106. Cf. p. 122: al-Qushāshī ~ his father and al-Shinnāwī ~ Ismā'il al-Jabartī ~ Jamāl al-Dīn al-Dajā'ī al-Zabīdī ~ Burhān al-Dīn Ibrāhīm b. 'Umar b. 'Alī al-'Alawī al-Zabīdī ~ Jamāl al-Dīn 'Abd al-Ḥamīd b. Kūhī al-Ashkāhī ~ Najm al-Dīn 'Abdallāh b. M al-Iṣfahānī ~ 'Izz al-Dīn Aḥmad al-Fārūthī al-Wāsiṭī ~ Ibn 'Arabī. The author thanks Michel Chodkiewicz for providing this.

177. It has been argued that the travels of ulama combined with the wide influence of sufi ṭarīqas to make the 18th century in particular a time of increasing cosmopolitan interaction in parts of the Muslim world. See Levtzion and Voll, Introduction, in Levtzion and Voll, eds., Eighteenth-Century Islamic Renewal and Reform, p. 5.

178. The Haramayn were an important meeting place given their central location and the requirement for the pilgrimage, but scholars and students also came there from all parts of the Muslim world specifically to teach and study: rich exchange took place there among scholars, particularly in Medina. See ibid., p. 7; Voll, 'Hadith Scholars and Tariqahs', pp. 264 ff. As Coptý, 'The Naqshbandiyya', pp. 321–322 details, the reputation of the Haramayn as centres of learning was enhanced as a result of Mamluk and Ottoman support for institutions and positions associated with both 'ilm and taṣawwuf.

179. As well as serving as gateways to the Haramayn, Cairo and Damascus were important centres of learning in their own right.

180. On general patterns of communication and interaction among scholars at this time, see Levtzion and Voll, Introduction, p. 8.

181. The influence of both ṭarīqas became particularly widespread from the following century: see, for example, Butrus Abu-Manneh, 'Transformations of the Naqshbandiyya, 17th–20th Century: Introduction', Die Welt des Islams 43:3 (2003), p. 303. Significantly, El-Rouayheb, 'Opening the Gate', pp. 264, 271–273 links the growing and increasingly open support for the doctrine of waḥdat al-wujūd and for Ibn 'Arabī in the Arab lands of the Ottoman Empire from the 17th century to the spread there of originally non-Arab ṭuruq, such as the Naqshbandiyya and the Khalwatiyya.

182. McGregor, Sanctity and Sainthood, p. 74 points to the Wafa'iyya's emergence from the Shadhiliyya as a case in point.

183. Note that he also appears in chains attached to al-Futūḥāt al-Makkīya: see Yahya, Histoire, 2, p. 540, 6b and 6d ii.

184. See Nafi, 'Tasawwuf and Reform', p. 329.

185. For different views in the debate concerning the possible characterisation of the constitutive elements of this position in terms of a rising revivalist/reformist 'neo-Sufism' (in combination with certain other elements) see, for example, O'Fahey, Enigmatic Saint, pp. 2 ff.; O'Fahey and Radtke, 'Neo-Sufism Reconsidered', and Ahmad Dallal, 'The Origins and Objectives of Islamic Revivalist Thought, 1750–1850', Journal of the American Oriental Society 113: 3 (1993), pp. 341–359.

The affiliation of several of these ulama to the Naqshbandiyya is noteworthy: Medina was a major centre for the ṭarīqa during the 17th century. See van Bruinessen, 'Shari'a Court', p. 179; Voll, 'Hadith Scholars and Tariqahs', p. 268; Copty, 'The Naqshbandiyya', p. 322. While one cannot generalise about this ṭarīqa as a whole, it was to develop a strong tradition of reform at least through the Mujaddidi line. On attitudes towards Ibn 'Arabī in the ṭarīqa prior to Sirhindī, see Hamid Algar, 'Reflections of Ibn 'Arabī in Early Naqshbandi Tradition', JMIAS X (1991), pp. 45–66.

186. See Algar, 'Reflections of Ibn 'Arabī', p. 60. On his legacy, see Weismann, Taste of Modernity, ch. 2. As Abu-Manneh, 'Salafiyyah' demonstrates, Shaykh Khālīd's call came substantially as a reaction (and challenge) to the expansion in Baghdad of an at least partly Wahhabi-inspired Salafi worldview. He provided an alternative religious path for the community, projected as better reflecting the substance of Islam than Salafi beliefs alone (as embodied in the city's rising Salafi trend). Shaykh Khālīd was heir to the legacy of Shāh Walī Allāh, 'whose belief in waḥdat al-wujūd did not stop him from writing a treatise on the virtues of Ibn Taymīya and embracing a range of his ideas'. See Nafi, 'Abū al-Thana' al-Alusi', p. 488.

187. See David Commins, 'Abd al-Qādir al-Jazā'irī and Islamic Reform', The Muslim World 78 (1988), pp. 121–131; idem, Islamic Reform, pp. 26–30. On the Salafiyya of late Ottoman Damascus see Weismann, Taste of Modernity, ch. 8.

188. Cf. Stefan Reichmuth, 'Arabic Literature and Islamic Scholarship in the 17th/18th Century: Topics and Biographies', Die Welt des Islams 42: 3 (2002), p. 287.

189. Such a line of enquiry might also be pursued by expanding the characterisation of contemporary users summarised earlier.

3

THE PRAYER FOR SPIRITUAL ELEVATION AND PROTECTION

Properties'

Many who have presented or transmitted the prayer during the last four hundred years have emphasised the importance of reciting it diligently and of taking it, as one puts it, 'as a regular practice (wird)'.² Several recommend that it be recited every morning and evening,³ and some in the morning only. Others add that it should also be recited in times of difficulty or distress.⁴ One way to encourage regular reading has been to tie the prayer to the Awṛād, as in some ijāzas associated with it among certain contemporary sufi circles discussed earlier. In one copy the prayer is integrated into a daily/nightly reading cycle, repeated fourteen times: an opening prayer (ḥizb iftitāḥ), a numbered interface text (ḥiṣār), Ibn 'Arabī's wird for the day/night, the Dawr and a concluding prayer (ḥizb al-ikhtitām).⁵ Other copies incorporate it after the full complement of the Awṛād:⁶ where this is not the case, the owner of an Awṛād copy sometimes adds it by hand at the end.⁷ Yet there are many more cases where the prayer is not associated with the Awṛād,⁸ and several copies offer specific advice concerning what should be recited before⁹ and after¹⁰ it without reference to the Awṛād. Such recommendations typically encompass the ṣalarwāt, invocations of Divine Names and formulae emphasising God's unique power, but there are many variations.¹¹

In more substantial treatments recommendations concerning recitation of the prayer are intertwined with a detailing of its special properties (khawāṣṣ), for the latter are activated only through its proper use. Commentators and copyists outdo each other in describing these. By way of illustration, a particularly comprehensive statement of the prayer's properties by the AH 12th–13th century commentator al-Dāmūnī (written in rhymed prose in Arabic) is given below.¹²

I ask Allāh...that [the prayer] may benefit whoever recites it with sincerity and firm inner belief, and that it may achieve their desired end for whoever perseveres in the benefits it contains, for He is the One who Bestows with Noble Generosity, the One who Knows the condition of those who recite. Whoever uses what is in the prayer or recites it with complete inner belief may achieve their desired goal, but whoever recites it or uses its benefits while raising objections will gain nothing but distress and corruption. I include...some of the benefits of this great prayer, in respect to which the response will never fail provided that one has a pure heart. Among its benefits are the following:

Whoever reads it regularly and diligently morning and evening need not fear poverty, blindness or broken bones. He will be in God's secure custody en route and at rest on land and at sea. He need not fear beasts of prey, loss of his possessions, accidents, aches and pains, illnesses, shadow companions (male and female), disobedient and insolent jinn, or malicious storm demons.¹³ He need not fear the arrows of war, for he will always be victorious, never defeated. He need not fear any kind of enemy, human or jinn.¹⁴ He need not fear highway robbers, for Allāh will rip to utter shreds anyone who stands against him. If the one who recites the prayer boards a ship, he need not fear harm or malady, being taken captive, drowning, or any epidemic, be it airborne or earth-bound, on land or at sea, nor the ship being holed and torn apart.¹⁵

Whoever recites the prayer will be safe from enemies and evil oppressors and from all the unjust and envious in all the worlds.¹⁶ He will be respected and well-liked by all who see him, and they will be unable to endure being away from him. He will be like the sun and the moon among the stars: the heavenly and earthly worlds will love him all his life. He will be protected from migraine, headache, throbbing and shooting pain, tooth, ear, eye and stomach ache, facial palsy, hemiplegia, convulsions, and every malady that afflicts humankind.¹⁷ He will be protected from devilish insinuations and thoughts, will have pleasant dreams, and will see only what gladdens him in all his days.

Whoever recites [the prayer] will be released from imprisonment, constraint and captivity, especially if his reciting is deep-rooted and strong. [Reciting the prayer] makes childbirth easy for the divorcee, and through it every pressing need is met. It removes fevers and chills, and brings home strays and runaways. It reminds one of the Testimony of Faith (shahāda) at the time of death, and helps one in the questioning of the two angels, and in the fear caused by sudden death.¹⁸ It awakens the heart from the slumber of heedlessness, and helps in sincere repentance and in erasing one's lapses and errors. It elevates one to the highest stations, in this world and after death. It preserves one from association with the Evil One¹⁹ and from the serious afflictions that affect babies.²⁰ It safeguards the one who recites it from all kinds of jinn, from colic and neuralgia, and from all winds, especially the ill wind²¹ of the evening and morning. It protects against the sting of scorpions and the bite of vipers and snakes, against infectious diseases and plague, and whatever harms humankind. It thwarts black magic and all machinations, and the knots of ill-intent.²² It repels from whoever recites it the army and soldiers of the enemy, bequeaths the memorising of knowledge and the meanings of the glorious Qur'an, and preserves the heart and mind from thoughts [insinuated by] the accursed [Satan]. If recited after ʿaṣr it removes misery and poverty, especially if sūrat al-Wāqīʿa is recited too, because this sūra is an irresistible force.²³

We have mentioned just some of the benefits: strive for them, you who have freed yourself from bondage to habits. Benefit is in accordance with sincerity, faithfulness and firm inner belief; lack of benefit results from distrust and ignominious objecting.

The one who firmly believes will be in enduring felicity in this world, in the isthmus (barzakh) and on the Appointed Day, while the one who raises objections will be in a painful torment: hell suffices for him, an evil resting place.

These results arise only through the [spiritual] breaths (al-anfās), that is, by receiving [instruction regarding] them from Masters of Wisdom (al-sāda al-akyās).²⁴ If someone is without these [spiritual] breaths, it is as if he builds a wall without a foundation. However, if he can't find a perfect one (al-kāmil), then he should make pure his intention in this matter, and perhaps he will acquire some of these benefits, if his innermost intention is good. What we have mentioned is sufficient for those who seek, and the [prayer's] benefits are not hidden from the perfect ones.

Many of the properties detailed above and in comparable lists reflect the preoccupations of a pre-modern world in which forces of nature, often attributed to active but imperceptible spirits such as the jinn, were a potent reminder of the precariousness of human life.²⁵ Special liturgical texts attributed to various saints of early and medieval Islam served at the front line in the effort to ward off these threats to life and limb, by subduing such forces.²⁶ They could also be used to neutralise the potential hostility or harmful intentions of jinn in any other circumstances, as indeed those of fellow men. The protective power attributed to such texts conferred a talismanic character upon them, reflected in the sense which has become attached to terms such as ḥizb and ḥirz commonly used to designate them²⁷ (and in the instructions for use that often accompany them). The power or baraka of such texts is perceived to derive from that which inheres in the Qur'anic verses, ṣalawāt (and sometimes muḥaṭṭa'āt or letter clusters prefacing certain sūras) they encompass.²⁸ The saintly stature of their authors confers a particular efficacy upon them, for it is believed that the prayers of a saint are more likely to be heard. As inspired compositions bestowed only upon saintly figures, such texts indeed serve as vehicles for their authors' spiritual authority²⁹ and, of more immediate interest to the suppliant, for the unique intercessory potential that flows from their closeness to God as His friends.

Taking its place in this liturgical arsenal, the Dawr appears alongside a wide range of other protective prayers in our sources, notably the aḥzāb of Abū'l-Ḥasan al-Shādhilī³⁰ and the ḥirz of Abū Madyan,³¹ but also less well-known prayers with properties of healing or defending against the plague, for example.³² Commentators draw out the protective potential of the Dawr by sketching talismans and 'magic squares' with words, letters and numbers: these represent individual verses, and are often accompanied by details of their specific uses.³³ Copyists enhance this protective quality by inserting additional supplications with protective force.³⁴ While most of our sources stress the importance of reciting the prayer if its protective and other benefits are to be enjoyed,³⁵ the talismanic character of the text is highlighted by the latest of our commentators, al-Qāwuqjī, who suggests that such benefits accrue from simply carrying the text. The dead, too, can benefit, he adds, for if it is buried with them they will be protected from the torment of the grave.³⁶

As al-Dāmūnī's list makes clear, the prayer's powers also encompass the materialisation of 'positive' effects with regard to relations in the world, in particular the awakening of esteem and affection in people's hearts. Some mention that it can bring forth obedience 'in both earthly and heavenly realms' to whoever recites it. Other lists add to this the power to facilitate exigencies of buying, selling and other kinds of transaction.³⁷ Of particular interest to those who travel the spiritual journey of taṣawwuf, further benefits are reflected in the prayer's title. One copyist thus offers the following version of this: Ḥizb al-wiqāya li-man arāda al-wilāya, 'prayer of protection for one who strives for close friendship [with God]'.³⁸ Commentators and copyists repeat that people of verification who are sincere in service have 'tried and tested' the prayer's special properties. Through their pure, elevated spiritual resolution (himma), they have experienced its benefits and witnessed uncountable secrets.³⁹

According to commentators and copyists, the prayer is thus 'an eternal secret': it is 'a sharp sword' that emanates from 'the most secret of affairs'.⁴⁰ As in the case of other prayers, they attribute the powers of the Dawr to the Qur'anic verses and Divine Names it encompasses.⁴¹ The benefits associated with both elements are explained, but commentators pay particular attention to the Divine Names,⁴² citing well-known Qur'an and hadith texts that urge use of these in supplication and detail the benefits that are associated with them.⁴³ As al-Dāmūnī puts it, the Names are thus 'the door – indeed the keys to the locked doors, and they encompass a speedy response for anyone who orients his heart to his Lord.'⁴⁴ Al-Tāfilātī repeats a caution advanced by scholar-mystics that the Divine Names should be used not for the exclusive end of earthly fortune, but out of pure obedience to His command to use them in supplication. Thus entrusting matters to God, he explains, it becomes possible for one to succeed in worshipping Him as the goal, and in having one's earthly requests met consequentially.⁴⁵

Like al-Dāmūnī, most commentators and copyists single out as a sine qua non for actualising the prayer's benefits the sincerity of the reader's intention, and their purity of heart.⁴⁶ Some explicitly add to this the need, to which al-Dāmūnī alludes, for 'permission from a guide (murshid) perfect in knowledge and conduct'.⁴⁷ In the absence of such guidance, however, recitation of the prayer is still encouraged (with pure intention), as is the hope for actualising at least some of its potential benefits.⁴⁸ This suggests that such recitation without a specific ijāza was countenanced, in evidence and perhaps even relatively widespread by the late 18th century, adumbrating popularisation of the prayer in the following centuries.

The text and its contents

It seems more appropriate in discussing a prayer like the Dawr to think in terms of a stable text and its variants, rather than a critical edition. As a living text in constant use, versions displaying small differences have become established as equally acceptable across time, reflecting a cumulative process of variation taking place at the interface between oral transmission and committing to writing, and possibly compounded by the operation of personal preference and tricks of memory. The variants of which they are aware (which they may have discovered in written copies they have surveyed) have indeed been carefully marked by some who have presented the prayer in the last few centuries, pointing to a conviction of the equal validity and prayerful importance of each of these.⁴⁹ At the same time, copyists and commentators implicitly showcase their own ‘personal’ text, which they may have received through an authorisation from a shaykh.

Towards establishing a stable text of the prayer and identifying accepted variations in this we surveyed a wide range of written copies, in the hope of building a picture of how it has been recorded (and thus recited) and transmitted through the last four centuries. There are numerous differences in these copies: perhaps somewhat surprisingly, these also touch the Qur’anic content. In some cases this reflects a legitimate Qur’anic alternative, but in others it must be attributed to inaccuracy of presentation.⁵⁰ Many apparent textual differences in prayer copies can of course be put down to errors of hearing, memorisation, reading or copying, but there are also interpolations, some pious, others explanatory in character. We do not mention each and every difference in the notes accompanying the text, as is often done in critical editions. As our target is a text we hope may serve as a ‘standard’ version that is readily usable, only significant and interesting differences felt to constitute genuine variations are recorded. In preparing the text the aim was to bring out in the best possible form the meanings of the prayer and the sentiments that infuse it, while paying due attention to internal structure and consistency (both of the overall text and its individual verses), literary dimensions, and aspects of auditory texture like rhythm and fluency.

One might legitimately ask why it is worthwhile to produce such a text. First, from a devotional perspective it can be important for those who use the prayer to be confident of reciting an authentic and accurate text. Differences between printed versions specifically (i.e.

those actually in use today for devotional purposes) reviewed by the present author may not appear great, but they are significant enough to be noteworthy. Moreover, there are grammatical errors and spelling inaccuracies in several of these. Second, the identification of a stable text makes possible a well-founded mapping in the prayer of characteristic motifs and subtleties of its author's perspective.

The text we present is based on thirteen copies set out in the Appendix, all but one of them in the form of unpublished manuscripts. These are the most important of the copies reviewed, selected for their association with a chain of transmission, a specific date (paying particular attention to the earliest specifically), or a known figure.⁵¹ Two further copies with full vowels were closely consulted for clarity. Five of the copies used arise in commentaries on the prayer. Particular care must be exercised in working with these as the greater volume of text involved can make it more likely for the copyist (or scribe) to introduce errors.⁵²

The Dawr has thirty-three verses, suggesting the image of the traditional string of prayer-beads (tasbīḥ; subḥa). Its recitation also evokes the image of a necklace: Divine Name pairs and Qur'anic texts form focal points of precious stones, strung together and set off by supplications and rhythmic word chains. Each verse begins with the invocation of two Divine Names and ends in Allāh, the Complete or Unifying Name (al-ism al-jāmi'), with which the prayer as a whole also begins (Allāhumma).⁵³ Within each prayer verse the Names invoked, the specific object of the supplication and the Qur'anic text are integrated, the latter (more precisely its Qur'anic context) effectively furnishing an illustrative and explanatory scenario for the former.

As Qur'anic texts and invocations of Divine Names form the prayer's outstanding features, the notes that accompany the translation elaborate on these areas specifically.⁵⁴ Where this is not given in the prayer we provide the full Qur'anic verse, indicating how the author of the prayer has quoted this.⁵⁵ We detail the immediate context of each Qur'anic text quoted, making it possible to elaborate the relationship between this and the specific object of supplication.

The notes also identify Names invoked that do not derive from the traditional list of ninety-nine,⁵⁶ pointing up those among them that can be found in the Qur'an.⁵⁷

In rendering the Names into English we have drawn on Ibn 'Arabī's explication of these in his K. Kashf al-ma'na 'an asmā' Allāh al-ḥusnā.⁵⁸ Here he provides a threefold elaboration of the qualities of each Name as the servant might relate to them: first, from the perspective of the servant who has 'absolute need' for these qualities, since they denote the Essence (al-ta'alluq); second, a spiritual knowledge and realisation of the meanings of these qualities as they relate to the Divine Himself and as they relate to the servant (al-taḥaqquq); and third, in the manifestation of these qualities in the servant in a manner appropriate to the servant, just as they appear in Him (al-takhalluq).⁵⁹ To bring out this understanding of the qualities of the Names it was necessary in several cases to provide extended meanings in the translation, given in square brackets. Beyond this, a few such brackets are also used as an aid to accuracy and clarity in rendering the sense of the original (including some Qur'anic texts) into English.

With respect to the prayer's Qur'anic content, over a third of the Qur'anic texts incorporated take the form of a direct divine address to a prophet, or appear on the tongue of a prophet. Moses (Mūsā) features most frequently among them, but there are also utterances by Abraham (Ibrāhīm) and Joseph (Yūsuf), for example.⁶⁰ Prayer verse 13, which incorporates part of a Qur'anic verse concerning Joseph, serves to illustrate the rich and subtle composition which shapes the prayer text, while pointing also to the operation of different levels of meaning within it. Taken from the story of Joseph in sūrat Yūsuf, the Qur'anic verse in question tells of the impact of Joseph's stunning beauty on the women invited by the wife of the Egyptian in whose employ he was. They had been whispering maliciously that she had been soliciting him, but when they saw him they were so astounded that they cut their hands with the knives provided for the banquet to which she had invited them. The verse ends with their exclamation 'This is no mortal; he is no other than a noble angel!’ In verse 13 of the prayer, the supplicant solicits a vision of the Divine Beauty, as in the vision experienced by the women of the beauty embodied by Joseph. The request is addressed through the Names of Majesty (invoking explicitly the Names al-ʔalīl and al-Kabīr), so that through them the Divine Beauty will descend in His Solicitous Majesty. Verse 13 thus alludes to an experience of utter awe in the face of Beauty which discloses the Divine Majesty, Perfection and Solicitude (ijlāl, ikmāl, iqbāl).⁶¹ The framing of the request in terms of the metaphor of ‘clothing with a robe’ resonates immediately with Joseph’s own ‘cloak of many colours’, but also with the khirqā or sufi mantle, a symbol of those Perfect Servants in whom the divine qualities appear through the mysteries of takhalluq referred to above.

Regarding the literary style of the prayer, while it is impossible to emulate the original an effort has been made to retain characteristic features of this in translation, particularly those relating to auditory texture. These include the ending of each of the prayer’s verses in ‘Allāh’,⁶² and the frequent multiple word chains. In the latter case repeated word patterns that help build rhythm (using particular forms of the verbal noun, for example) cannot be repeated in translation.⁶³

It remains finally to underline the embedded-ness of the prayer text (like other works of Ibn ‘Arabī) in the universe of traditional Muslim piety, a universe ultimately rooted in the revealed text with its leitmotifs of man’s utter dependence and vulnerability, and the potential nobility of his aspirations and destiny.

TRANSLATION AND ARABIC TEXT

The Most Elevated Cycle that brings one close to Every Station of The Most High

by Shaykh Muḥyī al-Dīn
Muḥammad b. ‘Alī b. al-‘Arabī

الدَّورُ الْأَعْلَى

المُقَرَّبُ إِلَى كُلِّ مَقَامٍ الْأَعْلَى

للشيخ محي الدين محمد بن علي بن العربي

تحقيق سهى التاجي الفاروقي

In the Name of Allāh, the All-Compassionate, the Most Merciful

1. O Allāh! O You who are the Ever-Living, the Self-Subsisting!
In You I establish my protection: shelter me with the shielding, protective sufficiency and safeguarding, the reality and proof, the stronghold and security of In the Name of Allāh.⁶⁴
2. Admit me, O You who are the First and Last, to the hidden domain of the unknowable, secret and encompassing treasure of As Allāh wills! There is no power save in Allāh.⁶⁵
3. Unfurl over me, O You who choose Clemency [over censure], who Veil in Protection,⁶⁶ the sheltering wing, the covering veil, the preservation and deliverance of Hold fast to the bond of Allāh.⁶⁷
4. Build around me, O You who are the All-Encompassing,⁶⁸ the All-Powerful, the secure, encircling wall, the glorious canopy, the might and majesty of That is better, that is of the signs of Allāh.⁶⁹
5. Place me under Your protection, O You who are Observant [of all needs] and Responsive [to all requests]: preserve my soul and faith, my family and children, my home and estate, through the watchfulness, protectiveness and timely relief and assistance of But [Satan] will not hurt them anything, save by the leave of Allāh.⁷⁰

بِسْمِ اللَّهِ الرَّحْمَنِ الرَّحِيمِ

١ اللَّهُمَّ يَا حَيُّ يَا قَيُّوْمُ بِكَ تَحَصَّنْتُ فَاحْمِنِي بِحِمَايَةِ كِفَايَةِ وَقَايَةِ حَقِيقَةِ

بُرْهَانِ حِرْزِ أَمَانِ بِسْمِ اللَّهِ

٢ وَأَدْخِلْنِي يَا أَوَّلُ يَا آخِرُ مَكْنُونٍ غَيْبٍ سِرِّ دَائِرَةِ كَنْزِ مَا شَاءَ اللَّهُ لِقُوَّةِ

الْأَبَالَةِ

٣ وَأَسْئَلُ عَلَيَّ يَا حَلِيمُ يَا سَتَّارُ كَنْفَ سِتْرِ حِجَابِ صِيَانَةِ نَجَاةِ

وَأَعْتَصِمُوا بِحَبْلِ اللَّهِ

٤ وَابْنِ يَا مُحِيطُ يَا قَادِرُ عَلَيَّ سُورِ أَمَانِ إِحَاطَةِ مَجْدِ سُرَادِقِ عِزِّ¹

عَظْمَةِ ذَلِكَ خَيْرٌ² ذَلِكَ مِنْ آيَاتِ اللَّهِ

٥ وَأَعِزَّنِي يَا رَقِيبُ يَا مُجِيبُ وَأَحْرُسْنِي فِي نَفْسِي وَدِينِي وَأَهْلِي

وَوَلَدِي وَدَارِي وَمَالِي³ بِكَلاَةِ إِعَاذَةِ إِغَاثَةِ⁴ وَلَيْسَ بِضَارِّهِمْ شَيْئًا⁵ إِلَّا

بِإِذْنِ اللَّهِ

-
1. A: word missing. B: missing but gives as alternative
 2. D omits ذلك خير but gives as alternative
 3. Order of the last four words varies, some omit مالي or داري
 4. D, E and M add إِعَاذَةِ
 5. D: وما هم بضارين به من احد (Q.2:102)

6. Shield me, O You who Protect [from corruption] and Repel [all evil],⁷¹ by Your Names, Verses and Words, from the evil of Satan and of the powerful, such that if an oppressor or tyrant treats me unjustly, he will be taken by An enveloping chastisement of Allāh.⁷²
7. Deliver me, O You who Abase [those who would set themselves above You] and who Avenge [without pardon], from Your iniquitous slaves who wrong me and from their minions, such that if one of them intends me ill, Allāh will forsake him, *Setting a seal upon his hearing and his heart, and laying a cover on his seeing. Who then will guide him, after Allāh?*⁷³
8. Protect me, O You who Seize and Vanquish, from their treacherous deception: repel them from me censured, driven away in blame and routed, through the damaging, corrupting and destruction in And there was no host to help him, apart from Allāh.⁷⁴
9. Let me taste, O You who are Ever Glorified and Praised,⁷⁵ Ever Sanctified and Holy, the sweet delight and intimate converse of *Come forward and fear not; for surely you are among those who are secure*⁷⁶ in the shelter of Allāh.

- ٦ وَقَنِي يَا مَانِعُ يَا دَافِعُ^٦ بِأَسْمَائِكَ^٧ وَأَيَاتِكَ وَكَلِمَاتِكَ شَرَّ الشَّيْطَانِ
وَالسُّلْطَانِ فَإِنْ ظَالِمٌ أَوْ جَبَّارٌ بَغَى عَلَيَّ أَخَذْتُهُ غَاشِيَةً مِنْ عَذَابِ اللَّهِ
٧ وَنَجِّنِي يَا مُدْلٍ يَا مُنْتَقِمٌ مِنْ عِبِيدِكَ الظَّالِمَةِ^٨ الْبَاغِينَ عَلَيَّ وَأَعْوَانِهِمْ
فَإِنْ هُمْ لِي مِنْهُمْ أَحَدٌ^٩ بِسُوءِ خَذَلَهُ اللَّهُ^{١٠} وَخَتَمَ عَلَى سَمْعِهِ وَقَلْبِهِ وَجَعَلَ
عَلَى بَصَرِهِ غِشَاوَةً فَمَنْ يَهْدِيهِ مِنْ بَعْدِ اللَّهِ
٨ وَاكْفِنِي يَا قَابِضُ يَا قَهَّارُ خَدِيعَةَ مَكْرِهِمْ وَارْدُدْهُمْ عَنِّي مَذْمُومِينَ
مَذْمُومِينَ مَدْحُورِينَ بِتَخْسِيرِ تَغْيِيرِ تَدْمِيرِ^{١١} فَمَا كَانَ لَهُ مِنْ فِتَّةٍ يَنْصُرُونَهُ
مِنْ دُونِ اللَّهِ
٩ وَأَذِقْنِي يَا سُبُّوحُ يَا قُدُّوسُ لَذَّةَ مُنَاجَاةٍ أَقْبَلُ وَلَا تَخَفْ إِنَّكَ مِنْ الْأَمِينِينَ فِي كَنْفِ^{١٢} اللَّهِ

-
6. E, G, H, I, J and M: نافع: C: رافع: H adds يا باري
7. B and C: بِحَقِّ أَسْمَائِكَ
8. D, E, F, G, H, K and M: الظالمين
9. A, D, E, G, L and M: احد منهم
10. G and H: أَخَذَ لَهُ اللَّهُ (H gives خَذَلَهُ اللَّهُ as alternative)
11. Word chain varies: some give تجسير / تحسير instead of or in addition to تدمير and give تكبير instead of or in addition to تخسير
12. E and I: بِفَضْلِ اللَّهِ and in margin فِي كَنْفِ or فِي كَنْفِ اللَّهِ بِفَضْلِ اللَّهِ ; F, G, J and K: بِفَضْلِ اللَّهِ. H omits the phrase and proceeds directly from مِنَ الْآمِنِينَ to verse 10, thus collating verses 9 and 10 into a single verse. Note that the Qur'anic verse ends with الْآمِنِينَ

10. And let them taste, O You who inflict Harm and take away Life, the exemplary punishment, the evil consequences and annihilation in *So the last remnant of the people who did evil was cut off. Praise belongs to Allāh.*⁷⁷
11. Make me safe, O You who are Peace of Perfection, the Giver of Security, from the sudden sorties of the enemy forces, through the aim of the beginning of the verse *For them are good tidings in the life of this world and in the hereafter. There is no changing the words of Allāh.*⁷⁸
12. Crown me, O You who are the Sublimely Magnificent, the One who Raises in Honour, with the crown of the awesome grandeur, the majestic dominion, the sovereignty, might and magnificence of *And do not let their saying grieve you. Indeed the honour and glory belong to Allāh.*⁷⁹
13. Clothe me, O You who are Solicitous in Benevolent Majesty, the Incomparably Great, in the robe that renders the august majesty, complete perfection and attentive solicitude in *And when they saw him, they so admired him that they cut their hands, saying 'May we be saved by Allāh!'*⁸⁰
14. Bring down upon me, O You who are the Eminent in Affection, the Constant in Love, love [extended] from You, so that through it the hearts of Your servants will be guided to me, yielding to me with love, affectionate and unwavering, from the filling with love, the softening of hearts and the coming into loving union in *They love them as if it were love for Allāh, but those who believe are more ardent in love for Allāh.*⁸¹

١٠. وَأَذْفَهُمْ يَا ضَارُّ يَا مُمِيتُ نَكَالٍ وَبَالٍ زَوَالٍ فَقُطِعَ دَابِرُ الْقَوْمِ الَّذِينَ
ظَلَمُوا وَالْحَمْدُ لِلَّهِ

١١. وَأَمْنِي يَا سَلَامُ يَا مُؤْمِنُ¹³ صَوْلَةٌ جَوْلَةٌ دَوْلَةٌ الْأَعْدَاءِ بِغَايَةِ بَدَايَةِ آيَةٍ
لَهُمُ الْبُشْرَى فِي الْحَيَاةِ الدُّنْيَا وَفِي الْآخِرَةِ لَا تَبْدِيلَ لِكَلِمَاتِ اللَّهِ

١٢. وَتَوَجَّجْنِي يَا عَظِيمُ يَا مُعِزُّ بِتَاجِ مَهَابَةٍ كِبْرِيَاءِ جَلَالِ¹⁴ سُلْطَانِ مَلَكُوتِ
عِزِّ عَظْمَةٍ¹⁵ وَلَا يَحْزُنْكَ قَوْلُهُمْ إِنَّ الْعِزَّةَ لِلَّهِ

١٣. وَالْبِسْنِي يَا جَلِيلُ يَا كَبِيرُ خِلْعَةِ اجْلَالِ اِكْمَالِ¹⁶ اِقْبَالِ فَلَمَّا رَأَيْتُهُ
اَكْبَرْتُهُ وَقَطَعَنْ أَيْدِيَهُنَّ وَقُلْنَ حَاشَ لِلَّهِ

١٤. وَالْقِي يَا عَزِيزُ يَا وَدُودُ عَلَيَّ مَحَبَّةٌ مِنْكَ فَتَنْقَادَ وَتَخْضَعَ¹⁷ لِي بِهَا
قُلُوبُ¹⁸ عِبَادِكَ بِالمَحَبَّةِ وَالْمَعَزَّةِ وَالْمَوَدَّةِ مِنْ تَعْطِيفٍ تَلْطِيفٍ¹⁹ تَأْلِيفٍ
يُحِبُّونَهُمْ كَحُبِّ اللَّهِ وَالَّذِينَ آمَنُوا أَشَدُّ حُبًّا لِلَّهِ

13. E adds يَا مُهْمِنُ in margin as alternative

14. C: جمال. G, H and M omit word

15. K adds جبروت; some change the order to سُلْطَانِ مَلَكُوتِ

16. Some give instead جلال and كمال; some add جمال and vary the order

17. A: حَتَّى تَنْقَادَ وَتَخْضَعَ

18. G, H, I, J, L and M omit word

19. F, G, H, I, J and K omit word

15. Show upon me, O You who are the Manifest and Hidden, traces of the luminous mysteries of *He loves them and they love Him: [they are] soft towards the believers, hard on the unbelievers, striving in the path of Allāh.*⁸²
16. Turn my face, O Allāh, O You who are the Eternal Refuge, the Essential Light, with the sheer purity, beauty, intimacy and illumination of *So if they dispute with you, say, 'I have surrendered myself to Allāh'.*⁸³
17. Beautify me, O You who are the Originator [in Beauty] of the heavens and the earth,⁸⁴ who possess Sublime Majesty and Ennobling Generosity, with the flawless fluency, supreme eloquence and surpassing skill in *'Unloose the knot upon my tongue, so that they understand my words'*⁸⁵ through the kindly, merciful gentleness of *Then their skins and their hearts soften to the remembrance of Allāh.*⁸⁶
18. Gird me, O You who are the Most Severe in Assault,⁸⁷ the All-Compeller, with the sword of awesome forcefulness and invincible power, from the glorious strength, omnipotence and might in *There is no help to victory except from Allāh.*⁸⁸
19. Give me ever, O You who Expand and Open up to Victory, the joyful delight in *'My Lord, lay open for me my chest, and ease for me my task'*⁸⁹ through the subtle sentiments, the inner affections in *Did we not lay open for you your chest?;*⁹⁰ and through the happy exuberance and glad tidings in *That day the believers shall rejoice, in the victorious help of Allāh.*⁹¹

- ١٥ وَأَظْهَرُ عَلَيَّ يَا ظَاهِرُ يَا بَاطِنُ أَثَارَ اسْرَارِ أَنْوَارٍ يُحِبُّهُمْ وَيُحِبُّونَهُ
أَذَلَّةٍ عَلَى الْمُؤْمِنِينَ أَعِزَّةٍ عَلَى الْكَافِرِينَ يُجَاهِدُونَ فِي سَبِيلِ اللَّهِ
- ١٦ وَوَجَّهَ اللَّهُ يَا صَمَدُ يَا نُورُ وَجْهِي بِصَفَاءِ جَمَالِ أَنْسِ اشْرَاقٍ²⁰
فَإِنْ حَاجُّوكَ فَقُلْ أَسَلَمْتُ وَجْهِي لِلَّهِ
- ١٧ وَجَمَّلَنِي يَا بَدِيعَ السَّمَاوَاتِ وَالْأَرْضِ يَا ذَا الْجَلَالِ وَالْإِكْرَامِ
بِالْفَصَاحَةِ وَالْبَلَاغَةِ وَالْبَرَاءَةِ²¹ وَأَحْلَلَ عُقْدَةً مِنْ لِسَانِي يَفْقَهُوا قَوْلِي
بِرَافَةِ رَحْمَةٍ²² رِقَّةً ثُمَّ تَلِينَ جُلُودَهُمْ وَقُلُوبَهُمْ إِلَى ذِكْرِ اللَّهِ
- ١٨ وَقَلَّدَنِي يَا شَدِيدَ الْبَطْشِ يَا جَبَّارُ بِسَيْفِ الْهَيْبَةِ²³ وَالشَّدَّةِ وَالْقُوَّةِ وَالْمَنْعَةِ مِنْ بَأْسٍ جَبَرُوتٍ عِزَّةٍ وَمَا النَّصْرُ إِلَّا مِنْ عِنْدِ اللَّهِ
- ١٩ وَادِمَ عَلَيَّ يَا بَاسِطُ يَا فَتَّاحُ بِهِجَةً مَسْرَّةً رَبِّ اشْرَحْ لِي صَدْرِي
وَيَسِّرْ لِي أَمْرِي بِلَطَائِفِ عَوَاطِفِ²⁴ أَلَمْ تَشْرَحْ لَكَ صَدْرَكَ وَبَشَّائِرِ
بَشَائِرِ²⁵ وَيَوْمَئِذٍ يَفْرَحُ الْمُؤْمِنُونَ بِنَصْرِ اللَّهِ

-
20. Some add to this chain جلال or بهجة or ضياء
21. B, C, D and F: والبراعة والبلاغة
22. B, D omit word
23. G and H omit word
24. H and I add: عوارف
25. C omits word. D: وببشارة اشارة (with alternative وببشائر بشارت)

20. Send down upon my heart, O Allāh, O You who are the Most Subtly Benevolent, the Supremely Kind [who establishes True Welfare],⁹² faith, tranquillity and peaceful calm,⁹³ that I may be of Those who have faith and whose hearts are at peace in the remembrance of Allāh.⁹⁴
21. Pour over me, O You who are the Superlatively Forbearing and Steadfast, to Whom all Gratitude is due for Your blessings, the steadfastness of those who have armed themselves with the unshakable resolve, certitude and empowerment of 'How often has a small unit overcome a sizeable one, by the permission of Allāh'.⁹⁵
22. Preserve me, O You who are the All-Preserving Guardian, to Whom all things are Entrusted, before me and behind me, on my right and on my left, above me and below me, through the ever-present, witnessing, assembling hosts of He has attendant angels, before him and behind him, watching over him by the command of Allāh.⁹⁶
23. Plant firm my feet, O Allāh, O You who are the One who Stands [over every soul],⁹⁷ the Forever Enduring,⁹⁸ as You made firm the one who said 'How should I fear what you have associated [with Him], when you do not fear [the fact] that you have established associates beside Allāh?'⁹⁹
24. Help me, O You who are the Best Protector, the Most Excellent Helper,¹⁰⁰ against the enemy, in the way that You helped the one to whom [his people] said 'Are you making fun of us?' He replied, 'I take refuge in Allāh'.¹⁰¹
25. Support me, O You who Demand¹⁰² and Prevail in Victory,¹⁰³ with the strengthening support of Your Prophet Muhammad, upon whom be the blessings and peace of Allāh, who was given the mighty and honoured rank of We have sent you as witness, bearer of good tidings and warner, so that you [all] may have faith in Allāh.¹⁰⁴

- ٢٠ وَأَنْزِلِ اللَّهُمَّ يَا لَطِيفُ يَا رَوْفُ بِقَلْبِي الْإِيمَانَ وَالْأُطْمِينَانَ وَالسَّكِينَةَ²⁶ لَاكُونَ مِنَ الَّذِينَ آمَنُوا وَتَطْمَئِنُّ قُلُوبُهُمْ بِذِكْرِ اللَّهِ
- ٢١ وَأَفْرِغْ عَلَيَّ يَا صَبُورُ يَا شَكُورُ صَبْرَ الَّذِينَ تَدْرَعُوا²⁷ بِثَبَاتٍ يَقِينٍ
تَمَكِّنِ كَمْ مِنْ فِتْنَةٍ قَلِيلَةٍ غَلَبَتْ فِتْنَةً كَثِيرَةً بِإِذْنِ اللَّهِ
- ٢٢ وَاحْفَظْنِي يَا حَفِيزُ يَا وَكِيلُ مِنْ بَيْنِ يَدَيَّ وَمِنْ خَلْفِي وَعَنْ يَمِينِي
وَعَنْ شِمَالِي وَمِنْ فَوْقِي وَمِنْ تَحْتِي بِوُجُودِ شُهُودِ جُنُودٍ لَهُ مُعَقَّبَاتٌ مِنْ
بَيْنِ يَدَيْهِ وَمِنْ خَلْفِهِ يَحْفَظُونَهُ مِنْ أَمْرِ اللَّهِ
- ٢٣ وَثَبَّتِ اللَّهُمَّ يَا قَائِمُ يَا دَائِمُ قَدَمَيَّ كَمَا ثَبَّتَ الْقَائِلَ وَكَيْفَ أَخَافُ مَا
أَشْرَكْتُكُمْ وَلَا تَخَافُونَ أَنْكُمْ أَشْرَكْتُكُمْ بِاللَّهِ
- ٢٤ وَأَنْصُرْنِي يَا نِعَمَ الْمَوْلَى وَيَا نِعَمَ النَّصِيرِ عَلَى الْأَعْدَاءِ²⁸ نَصْرَ
الَّذِي قِيلَ لَهُ اتَّخَذْنَا هُزُوءًا قَالَ أَعُوذُ بِاللَّهِ
- ٢٥ وَأَيِّدْنِي يَا طَالِبُ يَا غَالِبُ بِتَأْيِيدِ نَبِيِّكَ مُحَمَّدٍ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ
الْمُؤَيَّدِ²⁹ بِتَعَزِيزِ تَوْقِيرِ أَنَا أَرْسَلْنَاكَ شَاهِدًا وَمُبَشِّرًا وَنَذِيرًا لِتُؤْمِنُوا بِاللَّهِ

26. B, F, K and M add وَالْوَقَارَ

27. C, H and M: تَضَرَّعُوا

28. F, G, H, I, J and M: اَعْدَائِي. D omits the phrase, but gives as alternative

29. B, C, D, F, G, H: الْمُؤَيَّدِ

26. Suffice me, O You who Suffice in every need,¹⁰⁵ who Restore [to Wholesomeness],¹⁰⁶ against [all] afflictions and ills, through the great benefit and lesson in *If We had sent down this Qur'an upon a mountain, you would have seen it humbled, reduced to rubble out of the fear of Allāh.*¹⁰⁷
27. Confer upon me, O You who Bestow Blessings Freely, who Provide Nourishment and Sustenance, the arising, arriving and accepting of the arranging, making easy and rendering suitable for use [contained] in *Eat and drink of the provision of Allāh.*¹⁰⁸
28. Enjoin on me, O You who are Wholly and Only One,¹⁰⁹ the Utterly Unique,¹¹⁰ the [constant duty of the] word of Oneness, which You imposed upon Your beloved Muhammad, upon whom be the blessings and peace of Allāh, when You said *Know then that there is no god but Allāh.*¹¹¹
29. Invest me, O You who are the Close Friend and Patron, the Supremely High, with Your close friendship, protective care and keeping, and flawless wholesomeness, through the utmost provision, favour and support of *That is of the grace of Allāh.*¹¹²
30. Give me, O You who are Rich beyond need, the Noble who respond in Generosity [to all requests], the honour of felicity, esteem, munificence and unconditional forgiveness, as You honoured *Those who lower their voices in the presence of the Messenger of Allāh.*¹¹³

- ٢٦ وَكَفَّنِي يَا كَافِي يَا شَافِي الْإِدْوَاءَ وَالْأَسْوَاءَ³⁰ بِعَوَائِدِ فَوَائِدِ لَوْ
أَنْزَلْنَا هَذَا الْقُرْآنَ عَلَى جَبَلٍ لَرَأَيْتَهُ خَاشِعًا مُتَصَدِّعًا مِنْ خَشْيَةِ اللَّهِ
٢٧ وَآمَنْنُ عَلَى يَا وَهَّابُ يَا رَزَّاقُ بِحُصُولِ وَصُولِ قَبُولِ تَدْبِيرِ³¹ تَيْسِيرِ
تَسْخِيرِ كُلُّوْا وَاشْرَبُوا مِنْ رِزْقِ اللَّهِ
٢٨ وَالْزَمْنِي يَا وَاحِدُ يَا أَحَدُ كَلِمَةِ التَّوْحِيدِ³² كَمَا أَلَزَمْتَ حَبِيبَكَ مُحَمَّدًا
صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ حَيْثُ قُلْتَ فَأَعْلَمُ أَنَّهُ لَا إِلَهَ إِلَّا اللَّهُ³³
٢٩ وَتَوَلَّنِي يَا وَلِيُّ يَا عَلِيُّ بِالْوِلَايَةِ وَالْعِنَايَةِ وَالرِّعَايَةِ³⁴ وَالسَّلَامَةِ بِمَزِيدِ
إِيرَادِ إِسْعَادِ إِمْدَادِ³⁵ ذَلِكَ مِنْ فَضْلِ اللَّهِ³⁶
٣٠ وَآكْرَمْنِي يَا غَنِيُّ يَا كَرِيمُ بِالسَّعَادَةِ وَالسِّيَادَةِ وَالْكَرَامَةِ وَالْمَغْفَرَةِ
كَمَا أَكْرَمْتَ الَّذِينَ يَغْضُونُ أَصْوَاتَهُمْ عِنْدَ رَسُولِ اللَّهِ

-
30. Some give ^{الادواء} instead of ^{شرّ الاعداء}. Some split the pair of Names, giving in varying order: ^{يا كافي الاسواء} ^{يا شافى الادواء}:
31. C, E, G, H, J and M omit word. B, D and L give it after ^{تيسير}
32. A, B, C, E, F, H and K give: ^{التقوى}
33. B, C, H, J and L omit verse ٢٨
34. Some omit this or the preceding word or change their order
35. C, D and J add ^{ذلك خير}
36. F and L give instead ^{ذلك فضل الله} (Q.57:21; 62:4)

31. Turn to me, O You who Turn constantly in Forgiveness, the Clement, with pardon and counsel, so that I may be of *Those who, when they commit an indecency or wrong themselves, remember Allāh and ask for forgiveness of their wrong-doings – and who forgives wrong-doings save Allāh?*¹¹⁴
32. Seal my days, O You who are the All-Compassionate, the Most Merciful, with the finest conclusion [of] those who are delivered and [those] who are full of hope: *O My servants who have transgressed against yourselves, do not despair of the mercy of Allāh.*¹¹⁵
33. Bring me to dwell, O You who are the All-Hearing, the Ever-Near,¹¹⁶ in a Garden prepared for the god-fearing: *Their call therein is ‘Glory to You, O Allāh’, their greeting therein is ‘Peace’, and their call culminates in ‘Praise belongs to Allāh’.*¹¹⁷

O Allāh, O Allāh, O Allāh, O Allāh!

O You who are Pure Beneficence,
O You who are Pure Beneficence,
O You who are Pure Beneficence,
O You who are Pure Beneficence!

O All-Compassionate One, O All-Compassionate One,
O All-Compassionate One, O All-Compassionate One!

O You who are Sheer Mercy, O You who are Sheer Mercy,
O You who are Sheer Mercy, O You who are Sheer Mercy!

٣١ وَتُبْ عَلَيَّ يَا تَوَّابُ يَا حَلِيمٌ³⁷ تَوْبَةً نَّصُوحاً لَّا كُفُونَ مِنَ الَّذِينَ إِذَا
فَعَلُوا فَاَحْشَةً أَوْ ظَلَمُوا أَنْفُسَهُمْ ذَكَرُوا اللَّهَ فَاسْتَغْفَرُوا لِذُنُوبِهِمْ وَمَنْ
يَغْفِرُ الذُّنُوبَ إِلَّا اللَّهُ³⁸

٣٢ وَاخْتِمْ لِي يَا رَحْمَانُ يَا رَحِيمُ بِحُسْنِ خَاتِمَةِ النَّاجِينَ وَالرَّاجِينَ³⁹ يَا
عِبَادِي الَّذِينَ أَسْرَفُوا عَلَى أَنْفُسِهِمْ لَا تَقْنَطُوا مِنْ رَحْمَةِ اللَّهِ
٣٣ وَاسْكِنِّي يَا سَمِيعُ يَا قَرِيبُ جَنَّةً⁴⁰ أُعِدَّتْ لِلْمُتَّقِينَ⁴¹ دَعَاؤُهُمْ فِيهَا
سُبْحَانَكَ اللَّهُمَّ وَتَحِيَّتُهُمْ فِيهَا سَلَامٌ وَآخِرُ دَعَاؤُهُمْ أَنْ الْحَمْدُ لِلَّهِ

يَا اللَّهُ يَا اللَّهُ يَا اللَّهُ يَا اللَّهُ

يَا نَافِعُ يَا نَافِعُ يَا نَافِعُ يَا نَافِعُ

يَا رَحْمَانُ يَا رَحْمَانُ يَا رَحْمَانُ يَا رَحْمَانُ

يَا رَحِيمُ يَا رَحِيمُ يَا رَحِيمُ يَا رَحِيمُ⁴²

-
37. F, I and K give instead يا تَوَّاب يا رَحِيم G gives instead يا حَكِيم يا تَوَّاب
38. H and J omit verse ٣١
39. H gives والراجين من انعطاف رحمة قل . I gives والراجين قل A, B, E and K give والراجين الذين
الراجين الذين قلت فيهم C gives قيل لهم
40. Some (including A, B, D and L) add عَدْنِ
41. A, B, E, F, G, I, J, K and L add: الذين
42. The copies vary in the number of repetitions of these Names. The Names

The Prayer for Spiritual Elevation and Protection

I ask of You through the sacred sanctity of these Names, Verses and Words,¹¹⁸ an authoritative strength that brings success,¹¹⁹ a bountiful livelihood, a joyful heart, abundant knowledge, beneficent works, a luminous grave, an easy account [on the Day of Reckoning] and a goodly portion in Paradise. May Allāh bless our master Muhammad and his family and companions; may the peace of Allāh be upon them, a plentiful peace, until the Day of Resurrection. Praise be to Allāh, Lord of the worlds.

وَأَسْأَلُكَ⁴³ بِحُرْمَةِ هَذِهِ الْأَسْمَاءِ وَالْآيَاتِ وَالْكَلِمَاتِ⁴⁴
 سُلْطَانًا نَصِيرًا وَرِزْقًا كَثِيرًا⁴⁵ وَقَلْبًا قَرِيرًا
 وَعِلْمًا غَزِيرًا⁴⁶ وَعَمَلًا بَرِيرًا⁴⁷ وَقَبْرًا مُنِيرًا
 وَحِسَابًا يَسِيرًا وَمُلْكًا فِي الْفِرْدَوْسِ كَبِيرًا
 وَصَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَى سَيِّدِنَا مُحَمَّدٍ وَعَلَى آلِهِ وَصَحْبِهِ وَسَلَّمْ تَسْلِيمًا كَثِيرًا
 إِلَى يَوْمِ الدِّينِ
 وَالْحَمْدُ لِلَّهِ رَبِّ الْعَالَمِينَ⁴⁸

used also vary, with the occasional addition/substitution of e.g. رافع, دافع and نور. Alongside the one represented here, another common version is as follows: يا نافع يا رحمان يا رحيم; 3 or 4 x يا الله. At this point further text is added in K (al-Ḥiṣārī comments on fol.120a that he received this version through a chain connecting his shaykh to Ibn ‘Arabī); it appears as an alternative in A and D. The version given here follows K with some amendments:

وَبِقُدْرَةِ بِسْمِ اللَّهِ الرَّحْمَنِ الرَّحِيمِ ارْفَعْ قُدْرِي وَأَشْرَحْ صَدْرِي وَيَسِّرْ أَمْرِي وَأَرْزُقْنِي مِنْ حَيْثُ لَا أَحْتَسِبُ
 بِفَضْلِكَ وَإِحْسَانِكَ وَكَرَمِكَ. يَا هُوَ يَا هُوَ يَا هُوَ. كَهَيْعِصَ حَمِّ عَسَقٍ. وَأَسْأَلُكَ بِجَمَالِ الْعِزَّةِ وَجَلَالِ الْهَيْبَةِ
 وَعِزِّ الْقُدْرَةِ وَجَبْرُوتِ الْعِظَمَةِ أَنْ تَجْعَلَنِي مِنْ عِبَادِكَ الصَّالِحِينَ الَّذِينَ لَا خَوْفَ عَلَيْهِمْ وَلَا هُمْ يَحْزَنُونَ

43. E, J, K and L add اللهم
44. E and K add ان تجعل لي من لدنك
45. Some add or substitute واسعاً and/or يسيراً. Phrase missing in J
46. Phrase وعلماً غزيراً missing from G and H
47. Phrase وعملًا بريرًا missing from F, G, H and J; given as alternative in M
48. Some copies give different expanded versions of the ṣalawāt al-Dawr al-a‘lā al-muqarrib ilā kulli maqām al-a‘lā

Bismi-llāhi-r-raḥmāni-r-raḥīm

1. Allāhumma yā Ḥayy yā Qayyūm, bika taḥaṣṣantu fa-ḥminī bi-ḥimāyati kifāyati wiqāyati ḥaqīqati burhāni ḥirzi amāni bismi-llāh
2. wa-adkhilnī yā Awwal yā Ākhir, maknūna ghaybi sirri dā’ irati kanzi mā shā’a-llāh lā qūwata illā bi-llāh
3. wa-asbil ‘alayya yā Ḥalīm yā Sattār, kanafa sitri ḥijābi ṣiyānati najāti wa-‘taṣimū bi-ḥabli-llāh
4. wa-bni yā Muḥīt yā Qādir ‘alayya sūra amāni ihāṭati majdi surādiqi ‘izzī ‘aẓamati dhālika khayrun; dhālika min āyāti-llāh
5. wa-a’idhnī yā Raqīb yā Mujīb, wa-ḥrusnī fī nafsī wa-dīnī wa-ahlī wa-waladī wa-dārī wa-mālī, bi-kalā’ati i’ādhati ighāthati wa-laysa bi-ḍarrihim shay’an illā bi-idhni-llāh
6. wa-qinī yā Mānī’ yā Dāfi’ bi-asmā’ik wa-āyātik wa-kalimātik sharra-sh-shayṭāni wa-s-sulṭān, fa-in ṣālimun aw jabbār baghā ‘alayya akhadhathu ghāshiyatun min ‘adhābi-llāh
7. wa-najjinī yā Mudhill yā Muntaqim min ‘abīdika-ẓ-ẓalama al-bāghīn ‘alayya wa a’wānihim, fa-in hamma lī minhum aḥadun bi-sū’ khadhalahu-llāh wa-khatama ‘alā sam’ihi wa-qalbihi waja’ala ‘alā baṣarihi ghishāwatan fa-man yahdīhi min ba’ di-llāh

8. wa-kfinī yā Qābiḍ yā Qahhār khadī‘ata makrihim, wa-rdudhum ‘annī madhmūmīn madh‘ūmīn madḥūrīn bi-takhsīri taghyīri tadmīri fā-mā kāna lahu min fī‘atin yanṣurūnahu min dūni-llāh
9. wa-adhiqnī yā Subbūḥ yā Quddūs ladhdhata munājāti aqbil wa-lā takhaf; innaka mina-l-āminīna fī kanafi-llāh
10. wa-adhiqhum yā Ḍārr yā Mumīt nakāla wabāli zawāli fā-quṭi‘a dābiru-l-qawmi-lladhīna ṣalamū; wa-l-ḥamdu li-llāh
11. wa-āminnī yā Salām yā Mu‘min ṣawlata jawlati dawlati-l-a‘dā‘i bi-ghāyati bidāyati āyati lahumu-l-bushrā fī-l-ḥayāti-d-dunyā wa-fī-l-ākhirā; lā tabdīla li-kalimāti-llāh
12. wa-tawwijnī yā ‘Azīm yā Mu‘izz, bi-tāji kibriyā‘i jalālī sulṭānī malakūti ‘izzī ‘aḥamati wa-lā yaḥzunka qawluhum; inna-l-‘izzata li-llāh
13. wa-albīsnī yā Jalīl yā Kabīr, khil‘ata ijlālī ikmālī iqbālī fā-lammā ra‘aynahu akbarnahu wa-qatṭa‘na aydiyahunna wa-qulna ḥāsha li-llāh
14. wa-alqi yā ‘Azīz yā Wadūd ‘alayya maḥabbatan minka fa-tanqāda wa-takhḍa‘a lī bihā qulūbu ‘ibādika bi-l-maḥabba wa-l-ma‘azza wa-l-mawadda, min ta‘ṭīfī talṭīfī ta‘līfī yuhibbūnahum ka-ḥubbi-llāh; wa-lladhīna āmanū ashaddu ḥubban li-llāh
15. wa-aḥzir ‘alayya yā Zāhir yā Bāṭin āthāra asrāri anwāri yuhibbuhum wa-yuhibbūnahu adhillatin ‘ala-l-mu‘minīn a‘izzatin ‘ala-l-kāfirīn yujāhidūna fī sabīli-llāh
16. wa-wajjihi-llāhumma yā Ṣamad yā Nūr wajhī bi-ṣafā‘i jamālī unsi ishrāqī fā-in ḥājjūka fā-qul aslamtu wajhī li-llāh

17. wa-jammilnī yā Badī‘a-s-samāwāti wa-l-arḍ, yā Dha-l-Jalālī wa-l-Ikrām, bi-l-faṣāḥa wa-l-balāgha wa-l-barā‘a wa-ḥlul ‘uqdatan min lisānī, yafqahū qawlī bi-ra‘ fati raḥmati riqqati thumma talīnu julūduhum wa-qulūbuhum ilā dhikri-llāh
18. wa-qallidnī yā Shadīda-l-baṭsh yā Jabbār bi-sayfi-l-hayba wa-sh-shidda wa-l-qūwa wa-l-mana‘a, min ba‘si jabarūti ‘izzati wa-ma-n-naṣru illā min ‘indi-llāh
19. wa-adim ‘alayya yā Bāsīṭ yā Fattāḥ, bahjata masarrat rabbi-shrah lī ṣadrī, wa-yassir lī amrī bi-laṭā‘ifi ‘awāṭifi a-lam nashrah laka ṣadrak wa-bi-ashā‘iri bashā‘iri wa-yawma‘idhin yafraḥu-l-mu‘minūna bi-naṣri-llāh
20. wa-anzil allāhumma yā Laṭīf yā Ra‘ūf bi-qalbī-l-īmān wa-l-iṭmīnān wa-s-sakīna, li-akūna mina-lladhīna āmanū wa-taṭma‘innu qulūbuhum bi-dhikri-llāh
21. wa-afrigh ‘alayya yā Ṣabūr yā Shakūr ṣabra-lladhīna tadarra‘ū bi-thabāti yaqīni tamkīni kam min fi‘atin qalīlatin ghalabat fi‘atan kathīratan bi-idhni-llāh
22. wa-ḥfaznī yā Ḥafīẓ yā Wakīl min bayni yadayya wa-min khalfī, wa-‘an yamīnī wa-‘an shimālī, wa-min fawqī wa-min taḥtī, bi-wujūdi shuhūdi junūdi lahu mu‘aqqibātun min bayni yadayhi wa min khalfihi, yahfazūnahu min amri-llāh
23. wa-thabbiti-llāhumma yā Qā‘im yā Dā‘im qadamayya, kamā thabbatta-l-qā‘il wa-kayfa akhāfu mā ashraktum wa-lā takhāfūna annakum ashraktum bi-llāh
24. wa-nṣurnī yā Ni‘ma-l-Mawlā wa-yā Ni‘ma-n-Naṣīr ‘ala-l-a‘dā‘i naṣra-lladhī qīla lahu atattakhidhunā huzuwā; qāla a‘ūdhu bi-llāh

25. wa-ayyidnī yā Ṭālib yā Ghālib, bi-ta'yīdi nabīyika Muḥammad ṣalla-llāhu 'alayhi wa-sallam, al-mu'ayyad bi-ta'zīzi tawqīri innā arsalnāka shāhidan wa mubashshiran wa-nadhīrā, li-tu'minū bi-llāh
26. wa-kfinī yā Kāfī yā Shāfī, al-adwā'a wa-l-aswā'a, bi-'awā'idi fawā'idi law anzalnā hadha-l-qur'āna 'alā jabalin la-ra'aytahu khashī'an mutaṣaddi'an min khashyati-llāh
27. wa-mnun 'alayya yā Wahhāb yā Razzāq bi-ḥuṣūli wuṣūli qabūli tadbīri taysīri taskhīri kulū wa-shrabū min rizqi-llāh
28. wa-alzimnī yā Wāḥid yā Aḥad kalimata-t-tawḥīd kamā alzamta ḥabībika Muḥammad ṣalla-llāhu 'alayhi wa-sallam, ḥaythu qulta fa-'lam annahu lā ilāha illa-llāh
29. wa-tawallanī yā Walīy yā 'Alīy bi-l-wilāya wa-l-'ināya wa-r-ri'āya wa-s-salāma bi-mazīdi īrādi is'ādi imdādi dhālika min fadli-llāh
30. wa-akrimnī yā Ghanīy yā Karīm bi-s-sa'āda wa-s-siyāda wal-karāma wa-l-maghfira kamā akramta-lladhīna yaghuḍḍūna aṣwātahum 'inda rasūli-llāh
31. wa-tub 'alayya yā Tawwāb yā Ḥalīm tawbatan naṣūḥā, li-akūna mina-lladhīna idhā fa'alū fāḥishatan aw ḡalamū anfusahum dhakaru-llāh fa-staghfarū li-dhunūbihim wa-man yaghfiru-dh-dhunūba illa-llāh
32. wa-khtim lī yā Raḥmān yā Raḥīm bi-ḥusni khātimati-n-nājīn wa-r-rājīn yā 'ibādiya-lladhīna asrafū 'alā anfusihim lā taqnaṭū min raḥmati-llāh
33. wa-askinnī yā Samī' yā Qarīb jannatan u'iddat li-l-muttaqīn, da'wāhum fihā subḥānaka-llāhumma wa-taḥiyyatuhum fihā salām, wa-ākhiru da'wāhum ani-l-ḥamdu li-llāh

The Prayer for Spiritual Elevation and Protection

yā Allāh, yā Allāh, yā Allāh, yā Allāh

yā Nāfi‘, yā Nāfi‘, yā Nāfi‘, yā Nāfi‘

yā Raḥmān, yā Raḥmān, yā Raḥmān, yā Raḥmān yā Raḥīm, yā Raḥīm, yā Raḥīm, yā Raḥīm wa-as’aluka bi-ḥurmati hādhihi-l-asmā’ wa-l-āyāt wa-l-kalimāt sulṭānan naṣīrā, wa-rizqan kathīrā, wa-qalban qarīrā, wa-‘ilman ghazīrā, wa-‘amalan barīrā, wa-qabran munīrā, wa-ḥisāban yasīrā, wa-mulkan fi-l-firdawsī kabīrā, wa-ṣalla-llāhu ‘alā sayyidinā Muḥammad wa-‘alā ālihi wa-ṣaḥbihi wa-sallama taslīman kathīrā, ilā yawmi-d-dīn, wa-l-ḥamdu li-llāhi rabbi-l-‘ālamīn

Notes

1. The following discussion draws only on Arabic sources: further examples in Ottoman Turkish arise in Yazma Bağışlar 2934 and Hacı Mahmud Efendi 3950, for example.

2. See F, fol. 144b. The signification of wird here is that of a specified time devoted regularly to such practice. The wird is thus often understood to comprise a set, supererogatory personal devotion observed at specific times, usually at least once during the day and once more at night. See ‘Wird’, p.209.

3. See Hacı Mahmud Efendi 4061, Esad Efendi 1442, Düğümlü Baba 506, I.

4. Beyazid 7880 recommends reading it three times in the morning. M recommends that it be read a little before the dawn prayer, D and F after it.

5. Nafiz Paşa 702: for a complete cycle, see for example fols. 4a–14b.

6. G, M, Arif-Murad 58, Şazeli 106, Genel 43, the latter added in a different hand.

7. For example, Esad Efendi 1442: the Dawr is added at the end of K. al-Rashaḥāt al-anwarīya fī sharḥ al-awrād al-akbarīya, itself on the margin of the Awrād.

8. The great majority of copies of the Awrād likewise appear without the prayer. To mention an early example, Veliyuddin 1833 encompasses (alongside the Awrād) K. Marwāqī’ al-nujūm, K. al-Isrā’ (copy dated AH 977, made in Damascus at the shrine of Ibn ‘Arabī by Jibrīl b. Zayn al-‘Ābidīn al-Ghazzī), extracts from al-Futūḥāt al-Makkīya and parts of the Tarjumān al-ashwāq, plus a supplication for the Day of ‘Arafa, from al-Futūḥāt al-Makkīya.

9. Beyazid 7880 recommends that Ḥamīd Wahhāb be recited 76 times before each reading of the prayer. M recommends beginning with the ṣalawāt and then repetition of ya Ḥayy, ya Qayyūm 174 times. Genel 43, fol. 29b details the following ‘keys’ to the prayer:

O Allāh! O You in whose hand are the keys of the secrets of the unknowns, and the lamps of the lights of the hearts! I ask You through our master Muḥammad (may the peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him), to open for me the locked doors of these treasures, and to unveil for me the realities of these symbolic allusions. Yā Hū yā man Hū {7 times}. I ask You to bless the Sun of the gnostic sciences of Your Names, the Source of the secrets of Your light, who is the noble original Light-Tree and the radiant outpouring of the Origin, and the one who possesses the knowledges of the chosen (al-‘ulūm al-iṣṭifā’īya), under whose banner the prophets march. [I ask you to bless him] by the number of those You have created and sustained, from whom You have taken life and to whom You have given life, until You resurrect those You have annihilated. Yā Laṭīf {129 times}, al-ṣalāt wa’l-salām ‘alayka yā rasūl Allāh {29 times}, Allāhu laṭīf bi-‘ibādīhi yarzuqu man yashā’ wa huwa’l-Qawī al-‘Azīz {10 times}.

The Prayer for Spiritual Elevation and Protection

10. Hacı Mahmud Efendi 4137 and Genel 43 recommend reciting sūrat al-Inshirāḥ and the ṣalawāt three times on completion. Hacı Mahmud Efendi 4146 recommends reciting Yā lā ilāha illā Allāh al-Raḥīm al-Raḥīm 15 times. One copy on which our copy 'I' draws gives a special supplication at the end, the only one in our sources that encompasses specific mention of the prayer's author as saintly intercessor. The supplication proceeds thus (fol. 64a):

O Allāh, by Your permission and grace grant that the spiritual reality (rūḥānīya) of the Muhammadan Heir, the shaykh and my master Muḥyī al-Dīn Muḥammad b. 'Alī al-'Arabī (may Allāh sanctify his secret) be of support to us, that it intercede and mediate for us with the Envoy of Allāh (may the peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him), and that it bring us glad tidings of the Compassionate Beatitude. Expand my chest, elevate my standing, and provide for me my sustenance without debit or credit, and be for us not against us, O You from Whom all help is sought. Amen. By Your Mercy, O Most Merciful of the Merciful.

11. An example of such introductory and concluding recommendations currently circulating in print in Damascus is that provided by Abū'l-Yusr 'Ābidīn, referred to earlier.

12. See C, fols. 3b–5a.

13. The Arabic plurals quranā', tawābi', marada and zawābi' require clarification. Used in the Qur'an eight times, qarīn (pl. quranā') denotes an inseparable or intimate companion, commonly referring to man's spirit companion. According to Q 4: 38, Satan can be a qarīn (he indeed follows men everywhere), and Q 43: 36 describes God assigning 'a satan' to man as a qarīn when he turns away from the remembrance of Him. See also Q 50: 27. The oldest exegetical tradition posits a qarīn at the side of every human in the form of a satan or jinn who tempts him to evil (even prophets have such a satan-companion, but the Prophet Muḥammad converted his own to Islam). At the same time, there is at his side an angel, who induces him to good. These figures should not be confused with the recording angels. See 'Qarin', EI², 4, pp. 643–644. There are several hadith references to the quranā': see for example Muslim, 4, 260 and 50: 69 [after A.J. Wensinck, A Handbook of Early Muhammadan Tradition (Leiden, 1927)].

Tābi'a (pl. tawābi') refers to a jinn female, who loves a man and follows him everywhere: it does not appear in the Qur'an. Mārid (pl. marada) denotes someone who is insolent in rebellion: it is used in the Qur'an thus, and applied by extension to Satan (it is also a bad jinn's name). Zawba'a (pl. zawābi') denotes a suddenly rising wind that whips up whirling sand or dust clouds, but also a terrible and malicious jinn believed to preside over such windstorms and hurricanes.

14. On the jinn in the Qur'anic worldview and in Muslim folklore, see The Message of the Qur'an, tr. and explained by Muhammad Asad (Bristol, UK, 2003), Appendix III; 'Djinn', EI², 2, pp. 546–549.

15. Suggested here are the kinds of property associated with al-Shādhilī's popular Ḥizb al-baḥr, which asks that the sea be 'subjugated' to those who are crossing it.

16. Associated with the evil eye, envy is recognised as a source of harm in Q 113: 5. The phrase mā shā'a Allāh (As God wills!) is used as protection against it: see Padwick, Muslim Devotions, p. 88.

17. A popular belief that the jinn could inflict various illnesses, especially those involving paralysis (such as hemiplegia) is noteworthy here. See 'Djinn', p. 548.

18. On the shahāda as the desired final utterance at the moment of death and the visitation and questioning of the two angels Munkar and Nakīr on the first night in the tomb (according to the hadith), see Padwick, Muslim Devotions, pp. 132–133, 278–279, respectively.

19. qarīn al-sū': literally 'the one who associates with evil' or 'the one for whom evil is an associate', Satan. According to Q 4: 38, 'the one for whom Satan is a companion; what an evil companion he has!'

20. This is a loose rendering of umm al-ṣibyān. Classical dictionaries suggest this may denote baby colic, or epilepsy. According to a hadith the Prophet said 'When a man has a newborn child and utters the adhān (the call to prayer) in his right ear and the iqāma (the second call) in his left ear, umm al-ṣibyān will not affect the child.' Cited by al-Ghazālī under 'Etiquette Concerning Having Children', in Marriage and Sexuality in Islam: A Translation of al-Ghazali's Book on the Etiquette of Marriage from the Ihya', tr. Madelain Farah (Salt Lake City, UT, 1984), p. 114, including details of the hadith. Note finally the association of the root meaning of the word with the (sterile) east wind.

21. Literally the red wind: al-rīḥ al-aḥmar. The general association in this list of jinn (themselves fashioned out of 'the fire of scorching winds' according to Q 15: 27) with winds that cause ill health is noteworthy. For examples of the Prophet's prayers for protection from the evil of the wind, see A. H. Farid, Prayers of Muhammad (Lahore, 1999), p. 233.

22. al-'uqūd, literally knots; also compacts or bargains struck. Note also 'aqada nāṣiyatahu: he tied his forelock in preparation to attack or do harm to someone, and Q 113: 4, where the 'blowing upon knots ('uqad)' denotes occult activities.

On the widespread persistence in Muslim societies of the belief in and practice of magic (and the role in it of the jinn, under the command of a practitioner), advice concerning how to protect oneself from its effects and attitudes towards it among various contemporary Muslim authorities, see for example Remke Kruk, 'Harry Potter in the Gulf: Contemporary Islam and the Occult', British Journal of Middle Eastern Studies 32: 1 (2005), pp. 47–73; <http://www.muttaqun.com/jinn.html> and <http://www.islamawareness.net/Jinn/>. Texts of Qur'an and hadith of course affirm the reality of magic, but tend to refer to it in condemnatory terms (with some exceptions).

23. Literally: 'an army difficult to repel'.

24. On the notion of [spiritual] breaths in Ibn 'Arabī's thought, see William C. Chittick, The Sufi Path of Knowledge: Ibn al-'Arabī's Metaphysics of Imagination (Albany, NY, 1989), p. 402 n. 18. In the present context, the reference is possibly to 'the fragrances of nearness to God'. Chittick cites Ibn 'Arabī thus: 'When the Gnostics smell the perfume of these breaths...they come to know a divine person who has the mystery which they are seeking and the knowledge which they want to acquire...'

The Prayer for Spiritual Elevation and Protection

25. To take an example from Damascus, al-Budayrī's chronicle of daily life in the city during a period of al-Dāmūnī's lifetime records floods, severe cold, earthquakes and windstorms (as well as swarming locusts, the spread of leprosy and devastating outbreaks of plague). See al-Budayrī, Ḥawādith Dimashq al-yawmīya, pp.52, 56–57, 223, 228, for example.

26. As Michael Gilsenan, Saint and Sufi in Modern Egypt: An Essay in the Sociology of Religion (Oxford, 1973), pp.33–34 points out in relation to the notion of baraka, according to the traditional Muslim view there is 'a whole complex of forces, thought in an ultimate sense to constitute as well as to govern the world. There are maleficent powers to be warded off by the saints, by amulets, talismans, verses of the Qur'an, the virtuous life, and trust in God. And where the balance turns against you there is the final radical explanation of the mystery of God's will.'

27. As Padwick, Muslim Devotions, pp.23, 25 points out, use of the term ḥizb evinces an 'unacknowledged tendency...towards semi-magical protection', while the term ḥirz (often used as synonymous with ḥizb) in the title of a prayer can indicate its use as a talisman or amulet. A ḥizb or ḥirz often comprises a selection of Qur'anic verses and small supplications printed in a tiny booklet which can be easily carried on the person: this may be referred to by a further synonym, ḥijāb. A very well-known example printed as a tiny booklet and frequently carried is al-Ḥiṣn al-ḥaṣīn min kalām rabb al-ālamīn ('The Impregnable Fortress from the Words of the Lord of the Worlds'), compiled by Shams al-Dīn M b. M al-Jazarī (d.833/1429): see below. Use of the term ta'wīdh (and other derivatives from the same root) to denote protective or 'refuge-taking' prayers, often worn as amulets, must finally be noted (these include the final two sūras of the Qur'an, al-mu'awwidhatān). See further Padwick, Muslim Devotions, ch. 6; 'Tilsam', EI², 10, pp.500–502; 'Tamima', EI², 10, pp.177–178. For examples of the Prophet's prayers in the formula of seeking refuge in God, see Farid, Prayers of Muhammad, pp.245–249.

28. Indeed, as Padwick, Muslim Devotions, p.xxii notes, some are simply strings of Qur'anic verses 'with more or less connection of subject', put together for devotional use.

For an introduction to perceptions concerning the power of the Word of God and prayer, and the general spheres of use to which sufi prayers have been put, see Carl Ernst, The Shambhala Guide to Sufism (Boston and London, 1997), pp.89–91.

29. Compare with McGregor, Sanctity and Sainthood, pp.35, 74.

30. Eight different prayers by al-Shādhilī appear in our sources, the most frequent being Ḥizb al-baḥr (which has been described as the most famous of all aḥzāb: see 'Ḥizb', p.513) and Ḥizb al-naṣr. On Ḥizb al-baḥr see McGregor, Sanctity and Sainthood, pp.34–35; on the use of aḥzāb attributed to al-Shādhilī in the contemporary Tunisian Shadhiliyya, see idem, 'A Sufi Legacy in Tunis', pp.269–271.

31. Abū Madyan Shu'ayb b. al-Ḥusayn al-Anṣārī (d.549/1198), a seminal figure of sufism in Muslim Spain and North Africa and profoundly influential on Shadhili and Qadiri traditions: on him see The Way of Abu Madyan: The Works of Abu Madyan Shu'ayb, tr. and compiled by Vincent J. Cornell (Cambridge, 1996); EI², 1, pp. 137–138. Known fully as Ḥirz al-aqṣām, this is not included in Cornell's collection of Abū Madyan's works.

The juxtaposition of prayers associated with the Shadhili tradition (that of Ibn Mashīsh can also be mentioned in this context) with those of Ibn 'Arabī reflects the strong appreciation within this tradition for the legacy of Ibn 'Arabī. Perhaps also relevant in this regard is the appearance of muqatta'āt in some versions of the prayer ending, as form a prominent feature of al-Mahdawī's ṣalawāt (see Pablo Beneito and Stephen Hirtenstein, 'The Prayer of Blessing [upon the Light of Muhammad] by 'Abd al-'Azīz al-Mahdawī', JMAS XXXIV (2003), p. 28 n. 43 and p. 30 n. 47), and of Ḥizb al-baḥr (the latter encompassing the same letter clusters that appear in some of the Dawr endings).

32. For an example of the former, see L, fols. 133 onwards; for the latter, see Hasan Husnu Paşa 583 fol. 212b, where the prayer is followed by a supplication concerning plague reported from Abū Ḥanīfa. Şazeli 106 presents a particularly interesting range of aḥzāb and aḥrāz with many different uses, including soothing crying babies and meeting enemies, for example.

While individual prayers have been associated with specific spheres of protection there does not appear to have been a strict division among them, and copyists may have drawn on a common pool of properties. Thus the description of the Dawr's properties in Dügümlü Baba 490, fols. 31b–32a, appears also in G, fols. 66a–67a, where it applies to Abū Madyan's Ḥirz al-aqṣām, which prayer is omitted from the former compilation (on the relationship between these two compilations see Appendix): the copyist simply replaces ḥirz with Ḥizb al-wiqāya throughout the description of properties. Note also in this regard the comprehensive scope of the properties attributed to al-Ḥiṣn al-ḥaṣīn, set out in the preamble to it.

33. Particularly in D, but al-Dāmūnī also states his intention in his commentary to 'bring out some of the talismans and secrets' of the prayer (see C, fol. 3b), and provides some squares towards the end of his work. On talismanic 'magic squares', typically consisting of 9 or 16 compartments incorporating numbers or letters representing words (for example the letters of the Name Allāh written in a different order four times), see 'Tilsam', p. 501; 'Wafq', EI², 11, pp. 28–31.

34. For example Nafiz Paşa 702 adds on the margin of eight out of fourteen copies of the prayer presented a supplication that begins thus (towards the end of the prayer, for example fol. 25b) and ends with sūrat al-Ikhlāṣ (note that the same supplication is woven into the prayer before the end ṣalawāt in I):

I establish my protection from all of His creatures in a fortress whose foundation is lā ilāha illā Allāh, whose wall is Muḥammad rasūl Allāh, whose key is lā ḥawla wa lā qūwata illā bi'llāh al-'Alīy al-'Azīm...

M follows his recommendation concerning the prayer's recitation (see n. 9 above) with this supplication (fol. 109b):

The Prayer for Spiritual Elevation and Protection

This is a magnificent, blessed protective prayer. In the Name of God the Creator, the Greatest: a protection against what I fear and am wary of. There is no power for any creature before the Creator. Kāf Hā' Yā' 'Ayn Šād. Hā' Mīm Sīn Qāf. All faces submit to the Living, the Self-Subsisting [Q 2: 111]. May whoever perpetrates oppression fail. God is sufficient as Protector and He is the Most Excellent Trustee.

35. As McGregor, 'A Sufi Legacy in Tunis', p.267 suggests, prayers perhaps acquire 'an added spiritual dimension' when recited: see also pp.269–270.

36. D, p.6. See also The Hizbu-l Wiqāyah of Muhyiddin Ibn 'Arabī. Compare with Padwick, Muslim Devotions, pp.278–279.

37. See for example F, fol. 144b; D, p.6; Düğümlü Baba 506, fol. 2a and I, fol. 62a.

38. Yazma Bağışlar 2934, fol. 39b. D, p.6 points to its benefits for 'reaching the ranks of spiritual mastery' (bulūgh marātib al-siyāda).

39. See B fol. 2a; F, fol. 144b.

40. See K, fol. 51b; F, fol. 144b; D, p.3.

41. Al-Ḥiṣārī indeed refers to the prayer as al-Ḥizb al-qur'ānī. See K, fol. 51b. It is noteworthy that some copyists mark Qur'anic verses in red (e.g. G), while others mark the Divine Names thus (e.g. I). A few add the numerical value of each Name close to it (e.g. Hasan Husnu Paşa 583, fols. 211b–212b).

The preamble to al-Ḥiṣn al-ḥaṣīn furnishes an example of this intense focus on the power of Qur'anic verses and Divine Names, the former as a remedy (shifā') and vehicle for mercy, the latter as a medium for supplication, in the context of a popular ḥirz.

42. Certain commentaries elaborate at length on the choice, location and significance of Divine Names in the prayer: their treatment must form the subject of a separate study.

43. See C, fols. 5a–b; B, fols. 3a, 4a; I, fol. 62a (the explanation in the latter is given on al-Qushāshī's authority). Qur'an 7: 180 and Muslim, Dhikr, no. 6, respectively, are cited.

44. C, fol. 5a. It is a fundamental principle of all prayerful supplication (du'ā') for requests to be addressed to God through the evocation of His Names and Attributes, for His Essence is unknowable and unapproachable, and He cannot be understood in an affirmative way in respect of it: the particular Names and Attributes used thus define and shape the supplication. This pattern assumes a sophisticated expression in the Dawr, as illustrated below. See 'Du'a', EI², 2, p.618; Padwick, Muslim Devotions, pp.104–107.

45. B, fol. 3b. He cites the similitude of someone who seeks the good offices of one of the ministers serving the most powerful king on earth in seeking the corpse of a dog or a donkey: the king will surely respond by throwing him out.

46. Note that al-Dāmūnī repeats in his preamble and concluding remarks the need for 'complete inner belief', reflecting a central principle elaborated in discussions of the conditions and rules (adab) of prayer (du'ā'), that contribute towards a guarantee of efficacy: for it to be received by God, one must pray with a feeling of conviction that the prayer will be answered. See ‘Du’a’ p. 618. On the common emphasis of sincere intention in the preamble to prayers see also Padwick, Muslim Devotions, pp. 52–54. This emphasis is well illustrated in the preamble to al-Ḥiṣn al-ḥaṣīn.

47. B, fol. 2b; I, fol. 62a, for example.

48. See ibid. By way of further encouragement for its use without a guide, I and B cite the saying ‘If you are not one of them, then emulate them, for there is success and salvation (falāḥ) in emulating the noble.’

49. Variants are denoted by the term nuskhā (copy) in the margin.

50. Among others, examples of such inaccuracies arise in the following copies and verses of the Dawr: A verse 15, C verse 23, and H verse 7.

51. Given that four chains of transmission pass through Ibrāhīm al-Kūrānī, the apparent source of H, the question arose as to whether there might be consistency between H, B, C, D and F (and possibly also I, which apparently emanated from al-Qushāshī, from whom al-Kūrānī received the prayer). In the event the attempt to identify an al-Kūrānī (or any other) ‘family’ or ‘version’ of the prayer was not felt to be a fruitful approach (by way of illustration, we would cite the existence of differences even between H and H2: see Appendix).

52. Copyists can forget to distinguish the text of the prayer from that of the commentary (often done using red ink or a red over-line), or mark parts of the commentary thus as prayer text. Confusion can also arise when an unmarked word from the prayer text appears in a gloss on another word in it, or when the commentator’s explanations require him to alter the constructions in which specific words or phrases appear, and the associated vowels. Examples arise in B, fols. 9a, 23b, 24b, 27b, 34a; C, fol. 76a; and D, p. 37.

53. This All-Comprehensive Name denotes ‘not only the Essence of God but also the sum total of every attribute that the Essence assumes, in relationship to the creatures.’ See Chittick, The Sufi Path of Knowledge, p. 20. For an introduction to the Divine Names and Attributes in Ibn ‘Arabī’s thought see ibid., pp. 8–11; 33 ff.

54. We also comment in passing on similarities with the Awṛād, but no systematic or thorough comparison is attempted. In addition, we point out examples of resonances with certain traditional prayers of the Prophet.

It should be noted that we do not attempt a detailed analysis of the content, structure, imagery and literary composition of the prayer, and the commentaries identified earlier are not applied to such an end. It is felt that the associations within each verse (between verbs used to express supplications, Names invoked, Qur’anic texts and word chains), and progressions within and between particular clusters of the prayer’s verses, are best left to the reader’s close contemplation.

55. Renderings of Qur’anic text, indicated in the translation in italics, are loosely based on A. J. Arberry, The Koran Interpreted (Oxford, 1991), which has been extensively adapted as appropriate. The numbering of verses used in Qur’anic references follows that in The Holy Qur’an: Translation and Commentary by A. Yusuf Ali (n.p., n.d.).

56. The traditional list according to a well-known version of a hadith transmitted by Abū Hurayra can be found in Abū Ḥāmid al-Ghazālī, The Ninety-nine Beautiful Names of God: al-Maṣṣad al-asnā fī sharḥ asmāʾ Allāh al-ḥusnā, tr. with notes by David B. Burrell and Nazih Daher (Cambridge, 1999), pp.49–51. Another version of this list, also given on the authority of Abū Hurayra, substitutes other Names for some of the ninety-nine in the first one: see pp. 167–169.

57. Some Names appear in neither version of the list but are noted as such in the Qurʾan or derived from expressions associated with the Divine therein. See ibid., pp. 167–169.

58. Ibn ʿArabī, K. Kashf al-maʿna ʿan asmāʾ Allāh al-ḥusnā, ed. and tr. Pablo Beneito (Murcia, Spain, 1997): 2nd revised edn.

59. See ibid., p. 11. For elaboration, see Chittick, The Sufi Path of Knowledge, pp. 21–25 (on takhalluq) and pp. 48, 60 (on taʿalluq). The same terms were used by al-Mahdawī and apparently first expounded by Abū Madyan: see Beneito and Hirtenstein, ‘The Prayer of Blessing [upon the Light of Muhammad] by ʿAbd al-ʿAzīz al-Mahdawī’, p. 30 n. 49.

60. There does not appear to be any direct correlation between the structure of the prayer as a whole and the inclusion (and order of inclusion) of particular prophets, however. It is also noteworthy that supplications by prophets in the Qurʾanic text are used in the prayer in an indirect manner, as illustrated by verses 17 and 19, in contrast with such usage as arises in Ḥizb al-baḥr, for example: see McGregor, Sanctity and Sainthood, pp. 44–46.

61. On Ibn ʿArabī’s projection of the true relationship between Divine Beauty and Majesty, and the human response to these, see his K. al-Jalāl waʾl-jamāl, tr. by R. T. Harris, JMIAS VIII (1989), pp. 5–8.

62. For this reason we do not use the translation ‘God’.

63. Another example of the use of such word chains in the genitive case in a text attributed to Ibn ʿArabī arises in Khuṭba ukhrā [Another Preface] (Ṣehit Ali 1341, fols. 405b–406a, part of a collection of Ibn ʿArabī’s works dated AH 724). Here we see, for example, bi-wiṣāli ittiṣāli jamāli kamāli and iftitāḥi arwāḥi irtiyāḥi misbāḥi rawāḥi riyāḥi and idrāji ibrāji zujāji sirāji wahnāji. The author thanks Stephen Hirtenstein for this information.

64. Every sūra of the Qurʾan but one is prefaced by ‘In the Name of Allāh, the All-Compassionate, the Most Merciful’, and the Dawr, like all other all prayers, opens with it. Both this and a contraction of it (‘In the Name of Allāh’, referred to in shorthand as the basmala) permeate Muslim oral and written expression. On its application before action as a consecration, its quality as a word of power, and its popular use as an amulet (its description in this verse as a ḥirz is noteworthy), see Padwick, Muslim Devotions, pp. 94 ff.

65. Q 18: 39, in full: ‘Why did you not say, on entering your garden, “As God wills! There is no power save in God!” If you see me less than you in wealth and children.’ Part of the parable of the two men, one of them boasting to the other that he has been given greater wealth and strength, declaring that he did not believe his garden would ever perish, nor that the Resurrection would come to pass. On observing his attitude, his companion asked why he did not acknowledge God's generosity and power, for He may invert their fortunes, and ruin his garden, as indeed happened.

Like the basmala, the phrases mā shā'a Allāh and lā qūwata illā bi'llāh (and the expanded version of the latter lā ḥawla wa lā qūwata illā bi'llāh, referred to in shorthand as the ḥawqala) also permeate Muslim expression. Note that the ḥawqala is described as a treasure (kanz) also in the Sunday morning prayer in the Awṛād, where it is also tied to the unknowable (min khazā' in al-ghayb): see Ibn 'Arabī, Wird, p. 7.

66. Al-Sattār is not one of the ninety-nine Names, but appears in supplications and devotional literature. For example, the Wednesday morning prayer in the Awṛād encompasses anta Sattār al-'uyūb (You are the One who Veils shortcomings), and invokes God through this attribute (yā Sattār): see Ibn 'Arabī, Wird, p. 32.

67. Q 3: 103, in full: 'Hold fast to the bond of God, together, and do not scatter; remember God's blessing upon you when you were enemies, and He brought your hearts together, so that by His blessing you became brothers. You were on the brink of a pit of Fire, and He delivered you from it; thus God makes clear to you His signs, so haply you will be guided.' The verse is addressed to those who have attained to faith.

68. The Name al-Muḥīṭ appears in the alternative version of the list of ninety-nine given on the authority of Abū Hurayra, and the expression muḥīṭ appears several times in the Qur'an in reference to the Divine, as in Q 2: 19, 3: 120, 8: 47, 41: 45, 85: 20, 4: 108, 4: 126 (e.g. 'God encompasses everything'; 'God encompasses the things they do').

69. Q 7: 26, in full: 'Children of Adam! We have sent down on you a garment to cover your nakedness, and as a thing of beauty; and the garment of godfearing (libās al-taqwā) – that is better; that is of the signs of God; haply they will remember.'

70. Q 58: 10, in full: 'Conspiring secretly together is of Satan, that the believers may sorrow; but he will not hurt them anything, except by the leave of God. And in God let the believers put all their trust.' Q 58: 9 urges the believers not to conspire secretly together in sin, enmity and disobedience to the Prophet, but in piety and godfearing.

The root 'awadha, which signifies seeking God's protection or refuge, is of course always applied in relation to the seeking of protection against Satan, as in the formula a'ūdhu bi'llāh min al-shayṭān al-rajīm. On refuge-taking or protection seeking (ta'awwudh) in Muslim prayer, see Padwick, Muslim Devotions, ch. 6.

71. Al-Dāfi' is not one of the ninety-nine Names, but is used in supplications and devotional literature (for example, yā Dāfi' al-balā': O You who Repel misfortune). The Tuesday morning prayer in the Awṛād encompasses idfa' 'annī kayd al-ḥāsīdīn ('Repel from me the deceitful plots of the envious!'), and the Wednesday morning prayer invokes God through this attribute (yā Dāfi'): see Ibn 'Arabī, Wird, pp. 25, 32, respectively.

72. Q 12: 107, in full: 'Do they feel secure that there shall come upon them no

The Prayer for Spiritual Elevation and Protection

enveloping of the chastisement of God, or that the Hour shall not come upon them suddenly when they are unaware?’ Q 12: 106 provides the reference: ‘And the most part of them believe not in God, but they associate other gods with Him.’ Ghāshiya refers specifically to the Resurrection (which covers and encompasses all of mankind), or to Hellfire, which will overspread the faces of the unbelievers.

This verse of the prayer is the first of several in which an imprecatory aspect is expressed, through which the supplicant seeks harm for those who justly deserve it.

73. Q 45: 23, in full: ‘Has thou seen him who has taken his caprice to be his god, and God has led him astray out of a knowledge, setting a seal upon his hearing and his heart, and laying a cover on his seeing? Who then will guide him, after God? What, will you not remember?’ Note that the part of this Qur’anic verse cited in the prayer forms the second part of a conditional clause (thus pointing to a hypothetical future): in the Qur’anic verse it describes something past.

74. Q 28: 81, in full: ‘So, We made the earth to swallow him and his dwelling and there was no host to help him, apart from God, and he was helpless.’ This refers to Qārūn, one of the people of Moses to whom God had given great treasures, but who became insolent towards his people and boastful. The prayer captures the significance of Qārūn’s destruction both for the supplicant and for those who have mistreated him. (Qārūn is often identified with the Biblical Korah, but this has been called into question. See The Message of the Qur’an, p. 672 n. 84.)

Note the occurrence of the phrase ‘driven away in blame and routed’ (madh’ūman madhūran) in Q 7: 18, addressed to Iblis on his expulsion from Paradise.

75. al-Subbūh is not one of the ninety-nine Names. It appears twinned with al-Quddūs in the Wednesday evening prayer of the Awrād: see Ibn ‘Arabī, Wird, p. 29; further Ibn ‘Arabī, The Seven Days of the Heart, p. 87.

76. Q 28: 31, in full (beginning with a continuation of the divine address to Moses from within the burning bush): “‘Cast down your staff!’ And when he saw it quivering like a serpent, he turned round retreating, and did not turn back. “Moses, come forward and fear not; for surely you are among those who are secure.”

77. Q 6: 45. Truncated here, the Qur’anic verse continues: ‘the Lord of the worlds’. It appears at the end of a series addressed to the Prophet, explaining how messengers were sent to communities before him, how they forgot what they had been reminded of, and how they were suddenly seized and confounded.

The pairing of verses 9 and 10 of the Dawr is noteworthy. In verse 9, the supplicant requests what is desirable and beneficial for himself; in verse 10, he seeks what is harmful for his enemies. Benefit bestowed by the Divine (through the Name al-Nāfi’) pivots on the provision of that which is enjoyable (ladhdha, mentioned in verse 9) according to Ibn ‘Arabī, while the Names al-Nāfi’ and al-Dārr are twinned opposites. See Ibn ‘Arabī, K. Kashf al-ma’na, p. 178.

78. Q 10: 64, in full: ‘For them are good tidings in the life of this world and in the hereafter. There is no changing the words of God; this is the mighty triumph.’ Q 10: 62–63 provides the reference: ‘Surely God’s friends – no fear shall be on them neither shall they sorrow. Those who believe, and are godfearing – ...’

79. Q 10: 65, in full: ‘And do not let their saying grieve you. Indeed the honour and glory belong to Allāh altogether; He is The All-Hearing, The All-Knowing.’ The Qur’anic verse is addressed to the Prophet Muhammad regarding his dealings with the polytheists.

80. Q 12: 31, in full: ‘When she heard of their malicious talk, she sent to them and prepared for them a banquet and gave to each of them a knife. “Come forth and attend to them”, she said. And when they saw him, they so admired him that they cut their hands, saying “May we be saved by God! This is no mortal; he is no other than a noble angel.”’ See earlier discussion for the Qur’anic context.

81. Q 2: 165, in full: ‘Yet there be men who take to themselves compeers apart from God; they love them as if it were love for God; but those who believe are more ardent in love for God. O if the evildoers might see – when they see the chastisement – that power altogether belongs to God, and that God is terrible in chastisement.’

82. Q 5: 57, in full: ‘O believers, whosoever of you turns from his religion, God will assuredly bring forth a people He loves, and who love Him; [they are] soft towards the believers, hard on the unbelievers, striving in the path of God, not fearing the reproach of any reproacher. That is God’s bounty; He gives it unto whom He will; and God is All-embracing, All-knowing.’

83. Q 3: 20, in full: ‘So if they dispute with you, say, “I have surrendered myself [my face] (wajhī) to God, and whosoever follows me!” And say to those who have been given the Book and to those who have not, “Have you surrendered [to Him]?” If they have surrendered, they are rightly guided; but if they turn their backs, your duty is but to deliver the Message. And God sees His servants.’ (Note that wajh, literally ‘face’, denotes by extension one’s will or self.) Q 3: 19 refers to disputes between the Prophet and the People of the Book: ‘The true religion with God is Islam. Those who were given the Book were not at variance except after the knowledge came to them, being insolent one to another. And whosoever disbelieves in God’s signs, God is swift at the reckoning.’

84. Al-Badī’ (one of the ninety-nine Names) appears twice in the Qur’an as here (Q 6: 101 and 2: 117).

85. Q 20: 27–28. This is part of a supplication made by Moses in response to the divine instruction to go to the transgressing Pharaoh.

Note the resonance in this part of the prayer verse with a request that appears in a prayer taught by the Prophet to ‘Alī to help in memorising the Qur’an, thus: Al-lāhumma badī’ al-samāwāti wa’l-arḍ dhā’l-jalālī wa’l-ikrām...as’aluka bi-jalālīka...an tutliqa bi-hi lisānī... For the full text and details of the hadith, see Farid, Prayers of Muhammad, p. 227.

86. Q 39: 23, in full: ‘God has sent down the most excellent discourse as a Book, consistent within in its oft-repeated [truths], at which shiver the skins of those who fear their Lord; then their skins and hearts soften to the remembrance of God. That is God’s guidance, whereby He guides whomsoever He will; and whoever God leads astray has no guide.’

The Prayer for Spiritual Elevation and Protection

87. This is not one of the ninety-nine Names. Q 85: 12 gives ‘Surely your Lord’s assault is terrible (inna baṭsha rabbika la-shadīd)’. See also Q 44: 16.

88. Q 3: 126, in full: ‘God ordained this but as a glad tidings to you, and that your hearts might thereby be at rest. There is no help to victory except from God, the All-Mighty; the All-Wise.’ The Qur’anic context is the battle of Uhud; the immediate reference is to the reminder that God’s help would be forthcoming, as it was at Badr (two clans among the Prophet’s forces at Uhud had been on the point of losing heart and joining the deserters). See also Q 8: 10, referring to the battle of Badr.

89. Q 20: 25–26, part of a supplication uttered by Moses, on receiving the divine instruction to go to the transgressing Pharaoh, continued by the Qur’anic verses included in prayer verse 17: see n. 85 above.

90. Q 94: 1. The opening verse of sūrat al-Inshirāḥ, used in times of difficulty. Revealed very soon after Q 93 during the early years of his mission and a time of considerable trial for the Prophet, it reassures him of God’s continuing help. The juxtaposition in the prayer verse of this Qur’anic verse with Q 20: 25, conveying Moses’ request for the ‘expansion of his breast’, is noteworthy.

91. Q 30: 4–5, in full (including 3): ‘The Byzantines have been vanquished in the nearer part of the lands; after their being vanquished, they will be victorious in a few years. To God belongs the Command before and after. That day the believers shall rejoice in the victorious help of God; He helps whomsoever He will, and He is the All-Mighty, the All-Compassionate.’ ‘That day’ is understood to be a prediction of the battle of Badr which took place 8–9 years later, during which the Muslims would rejoice at their decisive victory over the unbelievers of Quraysh. (It refers also to the victories of Heraclius over the Persians: Badr coincided with a stage in these.)

92. This pair of Names appears (in reverse order) in the Wednesday morning prayer of the Awṛād. See Ibn ‘Arabī, Wird, p. 32.

93. On iṭmīnān and sakīna, the latter denoting both God-inspired peace of mind and the presence of God, see Padwick, Muslim Devotions, pp. 122–125.

94. Q 13: 28. Truncated here, it ends: ‘Surely in God’s remembrance the hearts are at rest.’

95. Q 2: 249, uttered on the tongue of the small band of believers who went out with Saul (Ṭālūt) to meet Goliath (Jālūt) and his hosts, then routed them by the leave of God. In full: ‘And when Saul set out with his forces he said “God will try you with a river; whoever drinks of it is not of me, and whoever does not taste it is of me (as are those who scoop just a mouthful).” But they drank of it, except a few of them. When he crossed it, together with those who believed along with him, they said “We have no power today against Goliath and his forces!” Yet those who were certain that they would meet God said “How often has a small unit overcome a sizeable one, by the permission of God! God is with those who are patient in adversity.”’ Note that Q 2: 250 continues with their supplication on meeting Goliath and his forces, thus: ‘Our Lord! Pour out over us steadfastness, make firm our feet and give us aid against the people of the unbelievers.’ The prayer verse 21 uses the same language and imagery as arises in their supplication (afrigh ‘alaynā ṣabran wa thabbit aqdāmanā...).

96. Q 13: 11, in full: 'He has attendant angels, before him and behind him, watching over him by the command of God. God changes not what is in a people, until they change what is in themselves. If God wills evil for a people, there is no turning it back. Apart from Him, they have no protector.' Q 13: 9–10 explains the encompassing of the unseen and the visible by the Divine Knowledge, with the following effect (achieved through the surrounding recording angels): 'Alike of you is he who conceals what he says and he who proclaims it, he who hides himself in the night, and he who sallies by day.'

Note the resonance in this prayer verse with a request that appears in a prayer attributed to the Prophet, which he reportedly recited every morning and night: Al-lāhumma aḥfaznī min bayna yadayya wa min khalfī wa 'an yamīnī wa 'an shimālī wa min fawqī... For details of the hadith see Farid, Prayers of Muhammad, pp. 150–151.

97. Al-Qā'im is not one of the ninety-nine Names but appears, for example, in Q 13: 33: 'What, He who stands over every soul for what it has earned? And yet they ascribe to Allāh associates (a-fa-man huwa qā'im 'alā kulli nafsin bi-mā kasabat wa ja'alū li'llāhi shurakā')'.

98. Al-Dā'im appears in the alternative list of ninety-nine Names given on the authority of Abū Hurayra: see al-Ghazālī, The Ninety-nine Beautiful Names of God, p. 167.

99. Q 6: 81, in full: 'How should I fear what you have associated [with Him], when you do not fear [the fact] that you have established associates beside God, concerning which He has not sent down on you any authority? Which of the two parties has better title to security, if you have any knowledge?' This is on the tongue of Abraham, while he was disputing with his people concerning his repudiation of their polytheism.

100. These two Names appear thus together in Q 8: 40 (see also 22: 78); for further examples of references to God as the Protector of those who believe, see Q 47: 11 and 3: 150. They are not among the ninety-nine Names.

101. Q 2: 67, in full: 'And when Moses said to his people "God commands you to sacrifice a cow." They said, "Are you making fun of us?" He replied, "I take refuge in Allāh lest I should be one of the ignorant."' The context is the well-known exchange between Moses and his people, which culminated in their sacrificing the cow.

102. Al-Ṭālib is not one of the ninety-nine Names. It arises in the Wednesday morning prayer of the Awṛād (anta...al-Ṭālib wa'l-maṭlūb) for example: see Ibn 'Arabī, Wird, p. 31. Cf. Q 58: 21.

103. Al-Ghālīb is not one of the ninety-nine Names but is used in the Qur'an of the Divine in 12: 21, thus: 'Allāh prevails in His purpose, but most men know not' (wa Allāh ghālīb 'alā amrihi wa lākin akthar al-nās lā ya'lamūn). Cf. Q 58: 21.

104. Q 48: 8–9, in full: We have sent you as witness, bearer of good tidings and warner, so that you [all] may have faith in God and His Messenger, and succour Him and reverence Him, and that you may give Him glory dawn time and evening.'

105. Al-Kāfī appears in the alternative list of ninety-nine Names given on the authority of Abū Hurayra: see al-Ghazālī, The Ninety-nine Beautiful Names of God, pp. 167. In the sense of sufficiency, the root verb appears of the Divine several times in the Qur'an in relation to His sufficiency as a Guardian (wakīl), a Reckoner (ḥasīb), a Helper (naṣīr), a Protector (walī), as One who knows (ʿalīm), and as a Witness (shahīd), for example. See for example Q 4: 81, 33: 39, 25: 31, 4: 45, 4: 70, 4: 166; also 33: 25.

106. Al-Shāfi is not one of the ninety-nine Names: the root is used in the Qur'an to characterise its own contents (e.g. Q 17: 82 and 41: 44); see also Q 10: 57; 9: 14.

107. Q 59: 21. Truncated here, the verse ends: 'And those similitudes – We strike them for men; haply they will reflect.'

108. Q 2: 60, in full: 'And when Moses sought water for his people We said, "Strike with your staff the rock", and there gushed forth from it twelve fountains; all the people knew now their drinking place. "Eat and drink of the provision of God, and do not make mischief in the earth, spreading corruption." The part of this verse quoted in prayer verse 27 is on the tongue of Moses.

109. This Name, which appears in the traditional list of ninety-nine, is always twinned in the Qur'an with al-Qaḥḥār. See Q 40: 16, 39: 4, 38: 65, for example.

110. Al-Aḥad appears in the alternative list of ninety-nine Names given on the authority of Abū Hurayra: see al-Ghazālī, The Ninety-nine Beautiful Names of God, p. 167. (See also Q 112: 1: 'Say: "He is Allāh, One."')

111. Q 47: 19, in full: 'Know then that there is no god but God, and ask forgiveness for your sin, and for the believers, men and women. And God knows your comings and goings and your lodging.' The word of Oneness (kalimat al-tawḥīd) is shorthand for the first part of the shahāda.

112. Q 12: 38, in full thus: 'And I have followed the creed of my forefathers Abraham, Isaac (Iṣḥāq) and Jacob (Ya'qūb). Not ours is it to associate others with God. That is of the grace of God to us, and to all mankind; but most men are not thankful.' This is on the tongue of Joseph, in the context of a discussion of their dreams with his fellow prisoners: he had been imprisoned following his refusal to bow to the demands of his employer's wife.

Note that the three terms in the phrase bi'l-wilāya wa'l-'ināya wa'l-ri'āya appear together also in the Sunday morning prayer of the Awṛād, thus: bi-'ayn al-rahma wa'l-'ināya wa'l-ḥifẓ wa'l-ri'āya wa'l-ikhtisās wa'l-wilāya. See Ibn 'Arabī, Wird, p. 9.

113. Q 49: 3, in full: 'Surely those who lower their voices in the presence of the Messenger of God, those are they whose hearts God has tested for godfearing; they shall have forgiveness and a mighty wage.' The verse appears in a sequence advising the believers how they should behave in the presence of the Prophet and towards each other.

114. Q 3: 135. Truncated here, after a pause the Qur'anic verse ends: 'and who do not knowingly persist in the things they did.' This verse appears in a sequence describing the righteous, whose reward will be Paradise. Note that the Qur'anic verse begins with 'And', which is omitted in prayer verse 31.

115. Q 39: 53, in full: 'Say! "O My servants who have transgressed against yourselves: do not despair of the mercy of God. Surely God forgives sins altogether; Surely He is the All-Forgiving, the All-Compassionate."'

116. Al-Qarīb appears in the alternative list of ninety-nine Names given on the authority of Abū Hurayra (see al-Ghazālī, The Ninety-nine Beautiful Names of God, p. 167), and is used of the Divine in Q 2: 186, 11: 61 and 34: 50 (in the final case, in the pair here: Samī‘ Qarīb).

117. Q 10: 10. Truncated here, it ends: ‘Lord of the worlds.’ Q 10: 9 provides the reference: ‘Surely those who believe, and do righteous deeds, their Lord will guide them for their belief; beneath them rivers flowing in gardens of bliss.’

‘A Garden prepared for the god-fearing’ is a contraction of a description appearing in Q 3: 133: ‘And vie with one another, hastening to forgiveness from your Lord, and to a Garden whose breadth is as the heavens and the earth, prepared for the god-fearing.’

118. Perfect and complete, the power of the Word of God is repeatedly acknowledged in prayer and invocation (see for example ‘Tamima’, p. 177; Padwick, Muslim Devotions, p. 86). The Prophet is reported to have said that whoever recites the formula a‘ūdhu bi-kalimāt Allāh al-tāmmāt min sharri mā khalaq in the morning and the evening will never come to harm: for details of the hadith see Farid, Prayers of Muhammad, p. 150. Ibn ‘Arabī advised use of this formula (incorporating the word kullihā after kalimāt Allāh al-tāmmāt) by the traveller alighting for rest during the night, to protect his night-camp from harm: see Ibn ‘Arabī, al-Futūḥāt al-Makkīya (Beirut, n.d.), IV, p. 505.

119. Sulṭān naṣīr arises as the object of a request in Q 17: 80 (which furnishes a much-used supplication), thus: ‘And say: “My Lord, lead me in with a sincere ingoing, and lead me out with a sincere outgoing; grant me from You an authoritative strength that brings success.”’

APPENDIX

Manuscript copies and chains of transmission

Copies A–I used in presenting the Arabic text are detailed below. With respect to chains of transmission, the lengthy epithets attached to figures are omitted unless they are of specific help for the purposes of identification: titles and positions are retained. Of these chains, to our best knowledge only D and G have been printed.

A. Hacı Mahmud Efendi 3950

Al-Jundī commentary (in Ottoman Turkish) dated AH 1280: 52 fols., some vowels. Al-Jundī claims that this chain (fols. 50b–51a) encompasses the Dawr and ‘all of Ibn ‘Arabī’s other awrād and writings’. He provides an ijāza in the Dawr and the ṣalawāt of Ibn ‘Arabī to ‘Abd al-Nāfi‘ Efendi.

Jundī Zāde Muḥammad Amīn al-‘Abbās, Mufti of Damascus ~ his father Muḥammad Efendi al-Jundī ~ ‘Umar al-Bāqī ~ Muḥammad Kamāl al-Dīn al-Šiddīqī ~ his father Muṣṭafā al-Bakrī al-Šiddīqī ~ ‘Abd al-Ghanī al-Nābulusī ~ Najm al-Dīn al-Ghazzī ~ Badr al-Dīn al-Ghazzī ~ al-qāḍī Zakarīya al-Anṣārī ~ ḥāfiẓ Ibn Ḥajar al-‘Asqalānī ~ Ibrāhīm ‘Abd al-Wāḥid al-Tanūkhī ~ Qāsim b. ‘Askar (sic) ~ Ibn ‘Arabī

B. Dügümlü Baba 506

Al-Tāfilātī commentary (in Arabic) copy dated AH 1251 (Medina): 30 fols., with some vowels. Al-Tāfilātī claims that this chain (fol. 3a) encompasses the Dawr and ‘all of Ibn ‘Arabī’s writings’. He adds that he has chains of authorities other than this one, but does not specify them.

Muḥammad al-Tāfilātī al-Khalwatī, Mufti of Jerusalem ~ his teacher Muṣṭafā al-Kubrā (sic) al-Khalwatī and his shaykh Muḥammad

b. Sālim al-Ḥanafī (sic) al-Miṣrī; the latter two ~ their shaykh Muḥammad al-Budayrī al-Dim'yātī ~ his shaykh Mullā Ibrāhīm al-Kūrānī al-Madanī ~ his shaykh Aḥmad al-Qushāshī al-Dajānī al-Madanī, via his chain to Ibn 'Arabī

C. Hacı Mahmud Efendi 4212

Al-Dāmūnī commentary (in Arabic) undated: 83 fols., no vowels. Chain appears fol. 3a.

Muḥammad Maḥmūd b. 'Alī al-Dāmūnī ~ his teacher Maḥmūd al-Kurdī al-Kūrānī ~ Muḥammad b. al-shaykh al-Sālim al-Ḥafnāwī (sic) ~ Muṣṭafā al-Bakrī ~ Mullā Ibrāhīm al-Kurdī al-Kūrānī al-Madanī ~ Aḥmad al-Qushāshī al-Dajānī, via his chain to Ibn 'Arabī

D. Al-Qāwuqjī commentary

Printed version in Arabic (Damascus, AH 1301), copy of Hacı Mahmud Efendi 4213: 160 pp., with few vowels, ending in a commentary on the ṣalawāt of Ibn 'Arabī (pp. 106 ff.). Al-Qāwuqjī explains that he transmits the Dawr 'like Ibn 'Arabī's other resplendent works' through this chain (pp. 3–4).

Muḥammad b. Khalīl al-Qāwuqjī al-Ṭarābulusī ~ Yāsīn b. al-quṭb 'Abdallāh al-Mīrghanī al-Makkī ~ Muḥammad Ṭāhir Sunbul ~ his father Muḥammad Sa'īd Sunbul ~ Muḥammad Ṭāhir al-Kurdī ~ his father Ibrāhīm al-Kūrānī al-Kurdī ~ Ṣafī al-Dīn al-Qushāshī ~ Zayn al-Ābidīn al-Ṭabarī ~ his father 'Abd al-Qādir b. Muḥammad b. Yaḥyā ~ his grandfather Yaḥyā al-Ṭabarī al-Makkī ~ al-ḥāfiẓ 'Abd al-'Azīz b. al-ḥāfiẓ 'Umar b. Fahd ~ his father ~ al-Jamāl Muḥammad b. Ibrāhīm al-Murshidī ~ Abū Muḥammad 'Abdallāh b. Sulaymān al-Shināwizī ~ Raḍī al-Dīn al-Ṭabarī al-Makkī ~ Ibn 'Arabī

E. Hacı Mahmud Efendi 4053

Copy of prayer alone, undated: 5 fols. with full vowels. Chain (fol. 5a) added in a different hand, viz. that of 'Alī Efendi, granting an ijāza to read the Dawr to Aḥmad Muẓaffar b. Muṣṭafā Mas'ūd.

'Alī Efendi b. Sulaymān b. al-shaykh Muṣṭafā b. al-shaykh 'Abd al-Karīm (may be crossed out) 'Umar, teacher in Dār al-'Alīya ~

‘Abdallāh Ṣidqī al-Diyarbakrī, also called al-Qirmānī {or, ‘Abdallāh Ṣidqī ~ al-Diyarbakrī, also called al-Qirmānī} ~ his brother Muḥammad Zanqī{?} ~ Ismā‘īl Īdanjakī in Medina (al-mujāwir fī) ~ Ibrāhīm the grandson {of} ‘Abd al-Ghanī al-Nābulusī ~ his grandfather ‘Abd al-Ghanī al-Nābulusī ~ his shaykh Najm al-Dīn al-Ghazzī ~ his father Badr al-Ghazzī ~ al-ḥifẓ al-Suyūṭī ~ al-Shams Muḥammad b. Muqbil al-Ḥalabī ~ Abū Ṭalḥa al-Ḥarāwī al-Zāhidī (sic) ~ al-Sharaf al-Dimyāṭī ~ Sa‘d al-Dīn Muḥammad b. al-Shaykh al-Akbar ~ his father Ibn ‘Arabī

F. Reşid Efendi 1051

Personal compilation of prayers, ṣalawāt, Qur’anic verses, supplications, poems (including Ka‘b b. Zuhayr’s famous Bānat Su‘ād), an alphabetical list of the names of the Companions who fought at Badr (compiled apparently at the request of a ruler), fragments from al-Buṣayrī and al-Suyūṭī, a ḥizb by Abū’l-Ḥasan al-Shādhilī, a list of the Prophet’s names, his wives and a summary of the signs of the Mahdi drawn from the hadith. The hand throughout is apparently that of Muḥammad Musawwid Zāde al-Ṭarabzūnī. No vowels, 160 fols. Note that fol. 144a carries the date AH 1169 (the Dawr begins on fol. 144b). (The earliest date in the compilation is 1159; the latest is 1171.) The chain appears on fol. 145a.

Muḥammad al-shahīr bi-Musawwid Zāde al-Ṭarabzūnī ~ Ibrāhīm ~ Khayr al-Dīn ~ Muḥammad al-mashhūr bi-Kāmil Zāde al-Ṭarabzūnī ~ ‘Abd al-Raḥmān al-Mawṣilī ~ his shaykh Faṭḥ Allāh al-Mawṣilī ~ his shaykh Khalīl al-Baghdādī al-ṣūfī ~ Ibrāhīm al-Madanī al-ṣūfī ~ Ṣafī al-Dīn Aḥmad b. Muḥammad al-ṣūfī ~ his shaykh Abū’l-Mawāhib Aḥmad b. ‘Alī b. ‘Abd al-Quddūs al-‘Abbāsī al-Shinnāwī then al-Madanī al-ṣūfī ~ his father ‘Alī b. ‘Abd al-Quddūs ~ his shaykh ‘Abd al-Wahhāb b. Aḥmad al-Sha‘rāwī al-ṣūfī ~ his shaykh Zayn al-Dīn Zakarīyā b. Muḥammad al-qāḍī al-faḥīh al-ṣūfī ~ Abū’l-Faṭḥ Muḥammad b. al-Qaymānī{?} al-Marāghī al-ṣūfī ~ his shaykh Sharaf al-Dīn Ismā‘īl b. Ibrāhīm ‘Abd al-Ṣamad al-Hāshimī al-‘Uqaylī al-Jabartī al-Zabidī al-ṣūfī ~ Abū’l-Ḥasan ‘Alī b. ‘Umar al-Wānī al-ṣūfī ~ Ibn ‘Arabī

G. Laleli 1520

Beautiful gold-embellished compilation in a single hand of prayers attributed to Ibn ‘Arabī (the Awṛād, Dawr al-a’lā, Ḥizb al-aḥādīya, Tawajjuh waqt al-saḥar, Tahsīn) followed by a prayer attributed to Abū Madyan and a list of the names and dates of death of the rightly guided caliphs and the imams of the main four Sunni fiqh madhāhib: 70 fols., dated AH 1164 (f. 67b). The introduction gives an ‘open’ ijāza (to anyone wishing to read the texts in question) and a chain which appear to be associated with the entire contents of the compilation of ‘awṛād and adhkār’. (See manuscript frontispiece; Beneito and Hirtenstein, The Seven Days of the Heart, pp. 174–175, giving a translation and discussion of this ijāza and chain. We give the chain below for the sake of completeness). The Dawr text (fols. 31a–36a) is very clear and has full vowels. (Note that, sometimes omitting some of the smaller texts, Düğümlü Baba 490 and 489 and Hacı Mahmud Efendi 4179, the last used by Beneito and Hirtenstein, all printed facsimiles, are versions of Laleli 1520, retaining the ijāza and chain.)

Muḥammad al-Madanī b. Sa’d al-Dīn al-Baṣrī ~ Muḥammad b. ‘Alī al-‘Alawī al-Yamanī ~ ‘Abd al-Shakūr al-Mu‘ammar ~ Shāh Mas‘ūd al-Iṣfārā’īnī al-Mu‘ammar ~ ‘Alī al-Qūnawī ~ Ibn ‘Arabī

H. Hamidiye 1440

Compilation in a single hand of works by Ibrāhīm b. Ḥasan al-Kūrānī: Majmū‘at rasā’il, including Maslak al-ta’rīf bi-taḥqīq al-taklīf ‘alā mashrab ahl al-kashf wa’l-shuhūd al-qā’ilīn bi-tawḥīd al-wujūd,¹ 200 fols., addressing theological issues relating to the doctrine of waḥdat al-wujūd. Contents recorded from AH 1086 to 1094 in al-Kūrānī’s presence in Medina by a disciple, several of them in al-Kūrānī’s home on the outskirts of Medina² and one at the rear of al-Ḥaram al-Sharīf al-Nabawī (the Prophet’s Noble Sanctuary) there.³ The Dawr (fols. 31b–32b) is the only prayer in this collection and the only text not by al-Kūrānī. It has few vowels. Note that the copy of the text ending on fol. 31a is dated AH 1089 (and made at al-Kūrānī’s house on the outskirts of Medina), which is likely also to be the date of the Dawr copy, which it can be presumed was recorded from al-Kūrānī alongside his own works.

It is noteworthy that Ragīb Paşa 1464 (193 fols.) is a second compilation of the same overall title as H, in a different hand from the latter: there is no evidence in this case that the scribe was al-Kūrānī's disciple. It seems that al-Kūrānī requested that a second copy of H (which we can call H2) be made after that compilation had been completed in 1094. Some texts thus give the same details of time/place as texts in H. Others then add a 'final copy' date some five or six years later. The Dawr (fols. 31a–32 b)⁴ follows on the same page on the end of a text by al-Kūrānī concerning which it is recorded that the rough copy was made from al-Kūrānī in his house on the outskirts of Medina in AH 1089 and the final one copied out in his house adjacent to Bāb al-Raḥma of the Prophet's Mosque in AH 1094.⁵ The Dawr is followed (fol. 32b) by a verse from al-Shāfi'ī, an anonymous supplication and an untitled and un-attributed portion of Ibn 'Arabī's Tuesday morning wird.

I. Pertev Paşa 644

Compilation in a single hand of works by or attributed to Ibn 'Arabī (K. al-Hū, K. al-Ḥaqq, K. al-Ḥalāla, K. al-Bā', K. al-Naşā' ih, R. al-Anwār) plus various other texts, including a fragment from al-Sulamī and a prayer by Abū'l-Ḥasan al-Shādhilī. The Dawr (fols. 62b–64a) is prefaced by a discussion of its properties. Undated, but the preface suggests that this version was received from al-Qushāshī.

J. Murad Buhari 320

Personal compilation of prayers, talismans, poems, etc. dated AH 1203 (fol. 127a) in the hand of, and signed by Muḥammad b. Muḥammad b. 'Abdallāh al-Ḥādī. The Dawr (fols. 60b–63a) is without vowels.

K. İzmirli Hakki 3635

Compilation in a single hand of prayers (including al-Ṣalāt al-kubrā attributed to Ibn 'Arabī and prayers by al-Shādhilī) and accompanying commentaries, 160 fols. Commentary on the Dawr by Ḥusayn

b. Ismā'īl b. Muṣṭafā al-Ḥiṣārī (fols. 51b–120b, the text of the prayer repeated fols. 121b–125b), entitled Kashf al-kurūb wa fath jamī' al-abwāb wa kashf al-lughūb. Copy dated AH 1282 (fol. 125b), but the preamble has the author report that he wrote the commentary in AH 1205 (fol. 51b). (Copy A 3470 [University of Istanbul Library] is incomplete and undated.)

L. Esad Efendi 415

Collection in a single hand of Ottoman Turkish and Arabic religious texts and prayers (including the hırz of Abū Madyan), 161 fols. The Dawr (fols. 158b–161a) has some vowels and is dated AH 1220.

M. Reşid Efendi 501

Compilation in a single hand of prayers by Ibn 'Arabī (Ḥizb al-'arīf bi'llāh, Du'ā' asmā' Allāh al-ḥusnā, Ḥizb al-nūr, the Awrad, Ṣalawāt sharīfā) and others (including those by 'Abd al-Qādir al-Jīlānī, al-Shādhilī, 'Abd al-Ghanī al-Nābulusī, 'Abd al-Wahhāb al-Sha'rānī, al-Shāfi'ī and Imām 'Alī), as well as anonymous supplications and protective prayers, all in one hand, 126 fols. Possibly dates to the lifetime of al-Nābulusī, i.e. before AH 1143, as the copyist, possibly his disciple, refers to him twice in terms that suggest he was still alive (e.g. fol. 94a). The Dawr (fols. 109b–111b) has full vowels and plentiful marginal alternatives.

Alongside these copies, particular attention was paid in producing the text to two copies with full vowels: Nafiz Paşa 702 and Ankara Milli 489.

In addition to those referred to throughout our text and notes, the following copies were also consulted: Izmirli Hakki 1516 (undated), Esad Efendi 1405 (undated), Ulu Cami 936 (dated AH 1194), Esad Efendi 3430 (undated).

Notes

1. Knysh, 'Ibrahim al-Kurani', p. 41 n. 10 refers to a copy of the same title in what may be a comparable collection: Majmū'a, Yahuda Collection, #3869.

2. For example fols. 29a, 30a–b, 34b. Texts here end with comments such as the following (fol. 29a): 'Our shaykh the author, may God cause us to benefit from him, said: "The rough copy was completed at noontime on Tuesday 11th Šafar 1086, in my home in the outskirts of al-Madīna al-Munawwara: the best prayer and blessing be upon the most excellent of its inhabitants..."'

3. See fol. 46a, dated 1088: his disciple (the scribe) here asks God to keep al-Kūrānī safe, to preserve him and give him strong health.

4. The text of the Dawr in H2, which has many vowels, is identical to H with the exception that the scribe fails to incorporate four marginal additions, on one occasion adds his own insertion in the margin (sirr after majd in verse 4), and chooses yahdīhi in verse 7 (given in the margin in H) over the erroneous yahdī (given in the text in H). These differences do not merit its separate inclusion in preparing our text, but they do serve to point up the extent to which copyists and scribes have felt justified in showcasing a 'personal' version of the prayer.

5. For example, fol. 31a has: 'The author, may God cause us to benefit from him, said: "The rough copy was completed before noon on Thursday 30th Muḥarram at the beginning of 1089 in my house on the outskirts of al-Madīna al-Munawwara... the final copy (lit. its copying out and embellishment) was completed on the afternoon of Saturday the 22nd of Rajab 1094 in my house adjacent to Bāb al-Raḥma of the Prophet's Mosque.'" Similar examples arise in fols. 30a and 26a.

Note that the latter part of this compilation encompasses two additional texts by al-Kūrānī (one of them recorded in 1084 and another after his death) and two by al-Ghazālī. From f. 95a (encompassing one of the additional al-Kūrānī texts) it is in a second hand.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Printed sources

- ‘Abidin, Muhammad Abu’l-Yusr, compilation. al-Awrād al-dā’ima ma’a al-ṣalawāt al-qā’ima, ed. Bashir al-Bari (Damascus, 1991).
- Abu-Manneh, Butrus. ‘Salafiyya and the Rise of the Khalidiyya in Baghdad in the Early Nineteenth Century’, Die Welt des Islams 43: 3 (2003), pp. 349–372.
- Shaykh Ahmed Ziya’uddin Gümüshanevi and the Ziya’i-Khalidi Sub-order, in Frederick de Jong, ed., Shia Islam, Sects and Sufism: Historical Dimensions, Religious Practice and Methodological Considerations (Utrecht, 1992), pp. 105–117.
- ‘Transformations of the Naqshbandiyya, 17th–20th Century: Introduction’, Die Welt des Islams 43:3 (2003), pp. 303–308.
- Addas, Claude. Quest for the Red Sulphur: The Life of Ibn ‘Arabi (Cambridge, 1993).
- Ahmad, Aziz. ‘Political and Religious Ideas of Shah Wali-ullah of Delhi’, The Muslim World LII, 1 (1962).
- Aladdin, Bakri. ‘Abdalghani al-Nabulusi (d.1143/1731): oeuvre, vie et doctrine, PhD thesis, University of Paris I, 1985.
- Algar, Hamid. ‘Reflections of Ibn ‘Arabi in Early Naqshbandi Tradition’, JMIAS X (1991), pp. 45–66.
- Ansari, Muhammad Abdul Haq. Sufism and Shari’ah: A Study of Shaykh Ahmad Sirhindi’s Efforts to Reform Sufism (Leicester, 1986).
- Arberry, A. J. The Koran Interpreted (Oxford, 1991).
- Asad, Muhammad, tr./explanation. The Message of the Qur’an (Bristol, 2003).
- al-‘Asqalānī, Aḥmad Ibn Ḥajar. al-Durar al-kāmina fī a’yān al-mī’a al-thāmina, ed. Muhammad Sayyid Jadd al-Haqq (Cairo, 1966).
- Atlagh, Ryad. ‘L’Oraison de personne, donation et noms divins chez Ibn ‘Arabi (À propos de Da’wat asmā’ Allāh al-ḥusnā attribuée à Ibn ‘Arabi)’, Bulletin d’Études Orientales LI (1999), pp. 41–107.
- Baljon, J. M. S. Religion and Thought of Shah Wali Allah, 1702–1762 (Leiden, 1986).

Bibliography

- Beneito, Pablo and Stephen Hirtenstein. 'The Prayer of Blessing [upon the Light of Muhammad] by 'Abd al-'Azīz al-Mahdawī', JMLAS XXXIV (2003), pp. 1–58.
- al-Bitar, 'Abd al-Razzaq. Ḥilyat al-bashar fī ta'rīkh al-qarn al-thālith 'ashar (Beirut, 1993/1961).
- Brockelmann, Carl. Geschichte der arabischen litteratur (Leiden, 1943–49).
- al-Budayrī al-Ḥallāq, Aḥmad. Ḥawādith Dimashq al-yawmīya, 1154–1175/1741–1762, ed. Ahmad 'Izzat 'Abd al-Karim (Damascus, 1959).
- van Bruinessen, Martin. 'Kurdish 'Ulama and their Indonesian Disciples', at http://www.let.uu.nl/~martin.vanbruinessen/personal/publications/Kurdish_ulama_Indonesia.htm.
- 'Origins and Development of the Sufi Orders (tarekat) in South-east Asia', Studia Islamika (Jakarta) 1: 1 (1994), pp. 1–23.
- 'Shari'a Court, Tarekat and Pesantren: Religious Institutions in the Sultanate of Banten', Archipel 50 (1995), pp. 165–200.
- Bulliet, Richard W. The Patricians of Nishapur (Cambridge, MA, 1972).
- al-Burqawi, Zuhayr Khalil. 'Abd al-Ghanī al-Nābulusī wa ṭaṣawwufuhu (Amman, 2003).
- Chamberlain, Michael. Knowledge and Social Practice in Medieval Damascus, 1190–1350 (Cambridge, 1994).
- Chittick, William C. The Sufi Path of Knowledge: Ibn al-'Arabi's Metaphysics of Imagination (Albany, NY, 1989).
- Chodkiewicz, Michel. Seal of the Saints: Prophethood and Sainthood in the Doctrine of Ibn 'Arabi, tr. Liadain Sherrard (Cambridge, 1993).
- The Spiritual Writings of Amir 'Abd al-Kader (Albany, NY, 1995).
- Commins, David. 'Abd al-Qadir al-Jaza'iri and Islamic Reform', The Muslim World 78 (1988), pp. 121–131.
- Islamic Reform: Politics and Social Change in Late Ottoman Syria (New York and Oxford, 1990).
- Copt, Atallah S. 'The Naqshbandiyya and its Offshoot the Naqshbandiyya-Mujaddidiyya in the Haramayn in the 11th/17th Century', Die Welt des Islams 43: 3 (2002), pp. 321–348.
- Cornell, Vincent J., tr./compilation. The Way of Abu Madyan: The Works of Abu Madyan Shu'ayb (Cambridge, 1996).
- Dallal, Ahmad. 'The Origins and Objectives of Islamic Revivalist Thought, 1750–1850', Journal of the American Oriental Society 113, 3 (1993), pp. 341–359.

- al-Dardayrī, Aḥmad. Ṣalawāt ‘alā al-nabī al-karīm sayyidinā rasūl Allāh li’l-shaykh Aḥmad al-Dardayrī al-Khalwatī (Damascus, n.d.).
- al-Dhahabī, Shams al-Dīn. Dhayl ta’rīkh al-Islām, ed. Mazin b. Salim al-Bawazir (Riyadh, 1998).
- Divane, Selim. Miftah-u müşkilāt’il-ārifīn ādāb-u tarīki’l-vāsīlīn, tr. from Ottoman, Ahmed Sadik Yivlik (Istanbul, 1998).
- Eickelman, Dale F. Islamic Religious Commentary and Lesson Circles: Is there a Copernican Revolution?, in G. W. Most, ed., Commentaries {Kommentar} (Gottingen, 1999), pp. 121–146.
- The Art of Memory: Islamic Education and its Social Reproduction, in Juan I. Cole, ed., Comparing Muslim Societies: Knowledge and the State in a World Civilization (Ann Arbor, MI, 1992), pp. 97–132.
- Encyclopaedia of Islam*, eds. C.E. Bosworth et al. (Leiden, 1954–), new edn., selected articles.
- Ernst, Carl. The Shambhala Guide to Sufism (Boston/London, 1997).
- Farah, Madelain, tr. Marriage and Sexuality in Islam: A Translation of al-Ghazali’s Book on the Etiquette of Marriage from the Ihya’ (Salt Lake City, UT, 1984).
- Farid, A. H. Prayers of Muhammad (Lahore, 1999).
- Freidmann, Yohanan. Shaykh Ahmad Sirhindi: An Outline of His Thought and a Study of His Image in the Eyes of Posterity (Montreal and London, 1971).
- Gümüshanevi, Ahmed Ziya’üddin. Majmū‘at al-aḥzāb (Istanbul, n.d.).
- al-Ghazālī, Abū Ḥāmid. The Ninety-nine Beautiful Names of God: al-Maqṣad al-asnā fī sharḥ asmā’ Allāh al-ḥusnā, tr. with notes, David B. Burrell and Nazih Daher (Cambridge, 1999).
- al-Ghazzī, Najm al-Dīn. al-Karwākib al-sā’ira bi-a’yān al-mi’a al-‘āshira, ed. Jibraīl S. Jabbur (Harissa, Lebanon, 1959).
- Lutf al-samar wa qatf al-thamar min tarājīm a’yān al-ṭabaqa al-ūlā min al-qarn al-ḥādī ‘ashar, ed. Mahmud al-Shaykh (Damascus, 1981).
- Ghunaym, Ahmad b. Muhammad. al-‘Arif bi’llāh al-shaykh Aḥmad al-Ḥārūn: sīratuhu wa karāmātuhu (Damascus, 1992).
- al-Ghurab, Mahmud Mahmud. al-Ṭarīq ilā Allāh: al-shaykh wa’l-murīd min kalām al-Shaykh al-Akbar (Damascus, 1991).
- Gilsenan, Michael. Saint and Sufi in Modern Egypt: An Essay in the Sociology of Religion (Oxford, 1973).
- al-Hafiz, Muhammad Muti’ and Nizar Abaza. Ta’rīkh ‘ulamā’ Dimashq fī’l-qarn al-rābi’ ‘ashar al-hijrī (Damascus, 1986).

Bibliography

- Hasriya, 'Izzat. al-shaykh Arslān al-Dimashqī wa fīhi lamḥa 'an al-shaykh Aḥmad al-Ḥārūn (n.p., 1965).
- Homerin, Th. Emil. From Arab Poet to Muslim Saint: Ibn al-Farid, His Verse and His Shrine (Columbia, SC, 1994).
- Hourani, Albert H. Arabic Thought in the Liberal Age, 1798–1939 (Cambridge, 1989).
- 'Sufism and Modern Islam: Mawlana Khalid and the Naqshbandi Order', in Albert H. Hourani, ed., The Emergence of the Modern Middle East (London, 1981), pp. 75–89.
- Ibn 'Arabī, Muḥyī al-Dīn. Awṛād usbū'īya li'l-shaykh al-'arif Muḥyī al-Dīn Ibn 'Arabī (Istanbul and Damascus, n.d.).
- al-Dawr al-a' lā li-sīdī Sulṭān al-'Ārifīn wa 'Umdat al-Mukāshifīn wa Zubdat al-Wāṣilīn wa Khātimat al-Awliyā' al-Muḥaqqiqīn, al-Shaykh al-Akbar Mawlānā Muḥyī al-Dīn ibn al-'Arabī, raḍiya Allāhu ta'ālā 'anhu wa arḍāhu (Damascus, n.d.).
- al-Futūḥāt al-Makkīya (Beirut, n.d.).
- Şeyh'ül Ekber Muhyiddīn Ibn'ül Arabī (K. S.) Özel Dua'si "Hizb-ud'Devr'ul A'lā": Orjinali, Türkçe okunuşu ve Mânâsi (Istanbul, n.d.).
- The Hizbu-l Wiqāyah of Muhyiddin Ibn 'Arabi (Oxford, 2003).
- Kitāb al-Ḥalāl wa'l-jamāl, tr. R. T. Harris, JMIAS VIII (1989), pp. 5–32.
- Kitāb Kashf al-ma'na 'an asmā' Allāh al-ḥusnā, ed. and tr. Pablo Beneito (Murcia, Spain, 1997).
- Majmū' ṣalawāt wa awṛād sīdī Muḥyī al-Dīn Ibn 'Arabī raḍiya Allāhu 'anhu, compiled by Muhammad Ibrahim Muhammad Salim (n.p., 2000).
- The Seven Days of the Heart: Prayers for the Days and Nights of the Week (Awṛād al-usbū'), tr. Pablo Beneito and Stephen Hirtenstein (Oxford, 2000).
- The Tarjuman al-Ashwāq, ed. Reynold A. Nicholson (London, 1978).
- Wird (Oxford, 1988).
- Ibn al-'Imād, 'Abd al-Ḥayy. Shadharāt al-dhahab fī akhbār man dhahab (Cairo, 1351).
- Ibn al-'Irāqī, Aḥmad b. 'Abd al-Raḥīm b. al-Ḥusayn. al-Dhayl 'alā al-'ibar fī khabar man 'abar, ed. Salih al-Mahdi 'Abbas (Beirut, 1989).
- Ibn al-Jazarī, Shams al-Dīn. al-Ḥiṣn al-ḥaṣīn min kalām rabb al-'ālamīn (n.p., n.d.).

- al-Jabartī, ‘Abd al-Raḥmān. ‘Ajā’ib al-āthār fī’l-tarājim wa’l-akhbār (Beirut, n.d.).
- al-Jazūlī, Abū ‘Abdallāh Muḥammad b. Sulaymān. Dalā’il al-khayrāt wa yalīhi qashīdat al-burda wa qashīdat al-munfarija [wa bi-hāmishihi majmū‘at al-awrād wa’l-aḥzāb wa’l-ad‘iya wa’l-istighāthāt], introduced by Salah al-Din Abu’l-Jihad Nakahmayy (Aleppo, 1420).
- Delāil-i-Hayrat: Salāvāt-i-Şerifler (Istanbul, n.d.).
- Delāil’ul Hayrāt ve Şevārik’ul Envār (Istanbul, n.d.).
- Delāilü’l-Hayrat ve Şevārikü’l Envār fī zikri’s-salāti ale’n-nebiyyi’l-muhtār: Delāilü’l-Hayrat ve Tercümesi (Istanbul, n.d.).
- Johns, Anthony. Islam in Southeast Asia: Problems and Perspectives, in C. D. Cowan and O. W. Walters, eds., Southeast Asian History and Historiography: Essays Presented to D. G. E. Hall (Ithaca, NY, 1976), pp. 314–319.
- de Jong, Frederick. Mustafa Kamal al-Din al-Bakri (1688–1749): Revival and Reform of the Khalwatiyya Tradition?, in Nehemia Levtzion and John O. Voll, eds., Eighteenth-Century Islamic Renewal and Reform (Syracuse, NY, 1987), pp. 117–132.
- al-Kattani, ‘Abd al-Hayy b. ‘Abd al-Kābir. Fihris al-fahāris wa’l-athbāt wa mu’jam al-ma’ājim wa’l-mashyakhāt wa’l-musalsalāt, ed. Ihsan ‘Abbas (Beirut, 1982–86).
- Khan, Hafiz A. Ghaffar. ‘Shah Wali Allah: On the Nature, Origin, Definition and Classification of Knowledge’, Journal of Islamic Studies 3: 2 (1992), pp. 203–213.
- Knysh, Alexander. ‘Ibrahim al-Kurani (d.1101/1690), An Apologist for wahdat al-wujud’, JRAS Series 3, 5, 1 (1999), pp. 39–47.
- Islamic Mysticism: A Short History (Leiden, 2000).
- Ibn ‘Arabi in the Later Islamic Tradition, in Stephen Hirtenstein and Michael Tiernan, eds., Muhyiddin Ibn ‘Arabi: A Commemorative Volume (Shaftesbury, Dorset, 1993), pp. 307–327.
- Ibn ‘Arabi in the Later Islamic Tradition: The Making of a Polemical Image in Medieval Islam (Albany, NY, 1999).
- ‘Ibn ‘Arabi in the Yemen: His Admirers and Detractors’, JMIAS XI (1992), pp. 38–64.
- Kruk, Remke. ‘Harry Potter in the Gulf: Contemporary Islam and the Occult’, British Journal of Middle Eastern Studies 32, 1 (2005), pp. 47–73.
- Laoust, Henri. Essai sur les doctrines sociales et politiques de Taki al-Din Ahmad b. Taimiya (Cairo, 1939).

Bibliography

- Levtzion, Nehemiah and John O. Voll, Introduction, in Nehemia Levtzion and John O. Voll, eds., Eighteenth-Century Islamic Renewal and Reform (Syracuse, NY, 1987), pp. 3–20.
- Lifchez, Raymond. The Lodges of Istanbul, in R. Lifchez, ed., The Dervish Lodge: Architecture, Art and Sufism in Ottoman Turkey (Berkeley, Los Angeles, and London, 1992) pp. 73–129.
- Majmū' al-awrād al-kabīr: yashtamil 'alā al-ma'thūr 'an al-a'imma wa'l-aqtāb min al-ṣalawāt 'alā al-nabī wa'l-awrād wa'l-ad'iyā wa'l-adhkār wa'l-aḥzāb wa'l-istighfārāt* (Damascus, n.d.).
- al-Maqqarī, Aḥmad b. Muḥammad. Nafḥ al-ṭīb min ghuṣn al-Andalus al-raṭīb, ed. Ihsan Abbas (Beirut, 1968).
- Martin, B. G. A Short History of the Khalwatiyya Order of Dervishes, in Nikki R. Keddie, ed., Scholars, Saints and Sufis: Muslim Religious Institutions in the Middle East since 1500 (Berkeley, 1972), pp. 275–305.
- McGregor, Richard J. A. 'A Sufi Legacy in Tunis: Prayer and The Shadhiliyya', IJMES 29 (1997), pp. 263–267.
- Sanctity and Sainthood in Medieval Egypt: The Wafā' Sufi Order and the Legacy of Ibn 'Arabī (Albany, NY, 2004).
- Mottahedeh, Roy. 'Review of Richard W. Bulliet, The Patricians of Nishapur (Cambridge, MA, 1972)', Journal of the American Oriental Society 95: 3 (1975), pp. 491–495.
- al-Muḥibbī, Muḥammad b. Faḍlallāh [Amīn]. Khulāṣat al-athar fī a'yān al-qarn al-ḥādī 'ashar (Cairo, 1284).
- al-Murādī, Muḥammad Khalīl b. 'Alī. Silk al-durar fī a'yān al-qarn al-thānī 'ashar (Cairo, 1301).
- al-Nābulusī, 'Abd al-Ghanī. al-Ḥaḳīqa wa'l-majāz fī riḥlat bilād al-Shām wa Miṣr wa'l-Ḥijāz, ed. Riyad 'Abd al-Hamid Murad (Damascus, 1989).
- Nafi, Basheer M. 'Abu al-Thana' al-Alusi: An 'Alim, Ottoman Mufti, and Exegetist of the Qur'an', IJMES 34 (2002), pp. 465–494.
- 'He was a Teacher of Ibn 'Abd al-Wahhab: Muhammad Hayat al-Sindi and the Revival of the Traditionist Methodology', unpublished paper.
- 'Tasawwuf and Reform in Pre-Modern Islamic Culture: In Search of Ibrahim al-Kurani', Die Welt des Islams 42: 3 (2002), pp. 307–355.
- al-Nass, Muhammad Samir. Mafhūm al-bid'a bayna al-dīq wa'l-sa'a (Damascus, 2002).
- al-Wasīla ilā fahm ḥaḳīqat al-tawassul (Damascus, 2003).

- O'Fahey, R. S. Enigmatic Saint: Ahmad b. Idris and the Idrisi Tradition (London, 1990).
- and Bernd Radtke, 'Neo-Sufism Reconsidered', Der Islam 70: 1 (1993), pp. 52–87.
- Padwick, Constance E. Muslim Devotions: A Study of Prayer-Manuals in Common Use (Oxford, 1996/1961).
- al-Qushāshī, Aḥmad. al-Simṭ al-majīd fī talqīn al-dhikr wa'l-bay'a wa ilbās al-khirqā wa salāsīl ahl al-tawḥīd (Hyderabad, AH 1327/28).
- Rauf, Bulent. Addresses II (Roxburgh, Scotland, 2001).
- The Last Sultans, ed. Meral Arim and Judy Kearns (Cheltenham, 1995).
- Reichmuth, Stefan. 'Arabic Literature and Islamic Scholarship in the 17th/18th Century: Topics and Biographies', Die Welt des Islams 42, 3 (2002), pp. 281–288.
- Rizvi, Athar Abbas. A History of Sufism in India (New Delhi, 1983).
- Robinson, Francis. 'Technology and Religious Change: Islam and the Impact of Print', Modern Asian Studies 27: 1 (1993), pp. 229–251.
- El-Rouayheb, Khaled. 'Opening the Gate of Verification: The Forgotten Arab–Islamic Florescence of the 17th Century', IJMES 38 (2006), pp. 263–281.
- al-Shatti, Muhammad Jamil. A'yān Dimashq fī'l-qarn al-thālith 'ashar wa nisf al-qarn al-rābi' 'ashar, 1201–1350 (n.p., 1972).
- Schimmel, Annemarie. And Muhammad is His Messenger: The Veneration of the Prophet in Islamic Piety (Chapel Hill, NC, 1985).
- von Schlegell, Barbara Rosenow. Sufism in the Ottoman Arab World: Shaykh 'Abd al-Ghani al-Nabulusi (d.1143/1731), PhD thesis, University of California, Berkeley, 1997.
- Schmidt, Garbi. Sufi Charisma on the Internet, in David Westerlund, ed., Sufism in Europe and North America (London, 2004), pp. 109–126.
- Şenocak, Kemaleddin. Kutbu'l Ārifīn Seyyid Azīz Mahmūd Hüdāyī (K. S.) (Istanbul, 1970).
- Sirriyeh, Elizabeth. Sufi Thought and its Reconstruction, in Suha Taji-Farouki and Basheer M. Nafi, eds., Islamic Thought in the Twentieth Century (London, 2004), pp. 104–127.
- Sufi Visionary of Ottoman Damascus: 'Abd al-Ghani al-Nabulusi, 1641–1731 (London and New York, 2005).
- Vajda, Georges, ed., Le Dictionnaire des autorités de 'Abd al-Mu'min al-Dimyati (Paris, 1962).

Bibliography

- Voll, John O. ‘‘Abdallah Ibn Salim al-Basri and 18th Century Hadith Scholarship’’, Die Welt des Islams 42: 3 (2002), pp.356–372.
- ‘Hadith Scholars and Tariqahs: An Ulama Group in the 18th Century Haramayn and their Impact in the Islamic World’, Journal of Asian and African Studies XV 3–4 (1980), pp.264–272.
- Linking Groups in the Networks of Eighteenth Century Revivalist Scholars: The Mizjaji Family in Yemen, in Nehemia Levtzion and John O. Voll, eds., Eighteenth-Century Islamic Renewal and Reform (Syracuse, NY, 1987), pp.69–92.
- ‘Muhammad Hayya al-Sindi and Muhammad Ibn ‘Abd al-Wahhab: An Analysis of an Intellectual Group in Eighteenth-century Madina’, Bulletin of the School of Oriental and African Studies 38: 1 (1975), pp.32–39.
- Weismann, Itzhak. Taste of Modernity: Sufism, Salafiyya and Arabism in Late Ottoman Damascus (Leiden, 2001).
- Wensinck, A. J. A Handbook of Early Muhammadan Tradition (Leiden, 1927).
- Winter, Michael. Society and Religion in Early Ottoman Egypt: Studies in the Writings of ‘Abd al-Wahhab al-Sha‘rani (New Brunswick, NJ, 1982).
- Yahya, Osman. Histoire et classification de l’oeuvre d’Ibn ‘Arabi (Damascus, 1964).
- Yapp, M. E. The Making of the Modern Near East, 1792–1923 (London and New York, 1987).
- Yilmaz, H. Kamil. Azîz Mahmûd Hüdâyî: Hayati, Eserleri, Tarîkati (Istanbul, 1999).
- Yusuf Ali, A. The Holy Qur’an: Translation and Commentary (n.p., n.d.).

Internet sources

- <http://www.ibnarabisociety.org/Publications.html>
- <http://www.ihyaafoundation.com/index.php?page=scholars#samir>
- <http://www.islamawareness.net/Jinn/>
- <http://www.kitsan.com>
- <http://www.muttaqun.com/jinn.html>
- <http://www.as-shifa.org.uk/ulum/shaykhsamir.htm>

INDEX

- ‘Ābidīn, Abū’l-Yusr 6, 7, 13n8,
104n11
Abraham (Prophet Ibrāhīm) 53n16,
77, 115n99, 116n112
Abū Hurayra 110n56, 111n68,
115n98, 115n105, 116n110,
117n116
Abū Madyan 52n7, 106n31, 110n59,
122
Abū Shāma, ‘Abd al-Raḥmān 66n167
Abū Ṭawq, Hāshim 12n5
adab 38, 108n46
Aḥmadī/Ahmadiyya (Badawiyya) 29,
58n76
al-‘Alawī, Wajīh al-Dīn 58n81
Aleppo 22, 24, 26, 39, 42
al-‘Amm, Salīm 12n5
al-anfās (sing. nafas) 72, 105n24
Ash‘ari; Ash‘arism 26, 33, 35, 49,
56n44, 61n114
‘Āshūr, Muḥammad Amīn 11n4
Awṛād (al-usbū‘) 3n1, 3n3, 7–9,
13n6, 13n11, 16n26, 51n1, 53n14,
109n54, 111n65, 111n66, 111n71,
112n75, 114n92, 115n102, 116n112,
122–124
al-‘Aydārūs, Abū Bakr b. ‘Abdallāh
51n4
al-Azhar 35, 39, 40, 63n132

Bā‘alawī, Muḥammad al-Shillī 33
Bāb al-Raḥma (Prophet’s Mosque, Medina) 123, 125n5
al-Bābilī, al-Shams Muḥammad 32
al-Badawī, Aḥmad 13n6, 29, 58n76
Badawiyya see Aḥmadī/Ahmadiyya
Baghdad 23, 34, 64n150, 68n186
al-Bājūrī, al-Burhān 43
al-Bakrī, Muḥammad Kamāl al-Dīn
b. Muṣṭafā 40
al-Bakrī, Muṣṭafā Kamāl al-Dīn
12n5, 13n7, 36–38, 40, 47, 63n129,
67n173, 119, 120
Banū ‘Asākir 22
al-Banūrī, Ādam 59n97
baraka 8, 12n4, 25, 40, 44, 45, 48,
49, 52n10, 66n167, 66n169, 72,
106n26
al-Barzanjī, Muḥammad b. ‘Abd al-Rasūl 60n111
basma 14n16, 110n64, 111n65
al-Baṣrī, ‘Abdallāh b. Sālim 33, 37,
59n94, 61n112
Beshara 9–10
al-Biqā‘ī, Burhān al-Dīn 27, 28
al-Budayrī al-Dimyāṭī, Muḥammad
35–38, 47, 120

Cairo 22, 24, 28–30, 34–36, 38–40,
46, 47, 67n179
Celvetiyye 16n24
Chishtiyya 34

Dalā’ il al-khayrāt 6, 8, 13n10, 15n19
Damascus 5–8, 15n21, 23, 24, 29–31,
34, 36, 37, 39, 41, 42, 44, 46, 47,
53n14, 61n114, 63n143, 64n150,
66n169, 68n187, 106n25
al-Dāmūnī, Maḥmūd b. ‘Alī 41
al-Dāmūnī, Muḥammad
b. Maḥmūd 40, 41, 46, 70, 73, 74,
106n25, 107n33, 108n46, 120
al-Dardayr, Aḥmad (also al-Dardayrī)
12n4, 39, 63n132
dawr (cycle) 3n4
‘deliberate interpolation’ hypothesis
29, 58n70
al-Dhahabī, Shams al-Dīn 25
dhikr (pl. adḥkār) 29, 30, 57n63
Dimyat 24, 35

- al-Dimyātī, ‘Imād al-Dīn 24
 al-Dimyātī, Sharaf al-Dīn ‘Abd al-Mu’min 23, 24, 66n166,
 67n173, 121
 Divine Names 3n1, 7, 12n5, 69, 74, 76–78
du‘ā’ see supplication
Du‘ā’ asmā’ Allāh al-ḥusnā 124
- Egypt 9, 23, 26, 27, 30, 38–40, 43, 46 evil eye 105n16
- Fatma Hanim 9, 16n24
fihris 1, 26, 27
fiqh; faqīh 24, 26, 28, 29, 32–35, 38,
 43, 48, 55n37, 56n47, 57n63
Fuṣūṣ al-ḥikam 15n21, 46, 52n8, 58n70 al-Futūḥāt al-Makkīya 13n8, 15n21,
 23, 41, 46, 62n121, 68n183
- al-Ghazālī, Abū Ḥamid 40, 125n5
 al-Ghazzī, Badr al-Dīn 28–31, 46,
 66n166, 168, 119, 121
 al-Ghazzī, Jibril b. Zayn al-‘Ābidīn
 103n8
 al-Ghazzī, Najm al-Dīn 30, 31, 46,
 66n166, 66n168, 119, 121
 al-Ghazzī, Raḍī al-Dīn 30 al-Ghurāb, Maḥmud Maḥmud 6, 7
 Goliath (Jālūt) 114n95
 Gümüşhanevi, Ahmed Ziya’üddin 1, 8
- al-Ḥādī, Muḥammad b. ‘Abdallāh 123 hadith 6, 22–38, 42–44, 48, 52n11,
 54n20, 55n37, 56n44, 61n112,
 62n118, 63n138, 66n167, 74,
 104n13, 110n56
 al-Ḥalabī al-Širafī, Muḥammad
 b. Muqbil 24, 26, 27, 57n49, 121
 Hanafi 39, 41, 42, 60n102
 Hanbali 26, 36, 56n47, 61n114 al-Ḥanbalī, ‘Abd al-Bāqī Taqī al-Dīn
 b. Mawāhib 36, 61n114
 Ḥaram (Meccan Sanctuary; Sacred Precinct of Mecca) 28, 60n102
 Haramayn (Mecca and Medina) 31,
 32, 43, 58n81, 67n178, 67n179
 al-Ḥarawī, Nāṣir al-Dīn Muḥammad
 b. ‘Alī, 24, 66n166, 121
 al-Ḥārūn, Aḥmad 6–7 al-Ḥāshimī, Muḥammad (al-Jazā’irī al-Tilimsānī) 14n14
ḥawqala 107n34, 111n65
 al-Ḥifnāwī, Muḥammad b. Sālim
 (also al-Ḥifnī) 13n7, 36, 38–40,
 47, 67n173, 120
 Hijaz 22, 23, 27, 28, 32, 34, 39, 43, 46, 60n111, 64n150, 65n153
himma 73
ḥirz (pl. aḥrāz) 3n4, 72, 107n32,
 108n41, 110n64
Ḥirz al-aqsām 73, 107n31, 107n32, 124 al-Ḥiṣārī, ‘Abd al-Wāḥid al-Mu‘ammār 33
 al-Ḥiṣārī, Ḥusayn b. Ismā‘īl 97n42,
 108n41, 124
al-Ḥiṣn al-ḥaṣīn 106n27, 107n32,
 108n41
 al-Ḥiṣnī, Husayn 41
ḥizb (pl. aḥzāb) 3n4, 47, 69, 72, 73
Ḥizb of al-Nawawī 7, 15n19, 56n40
Ḥizb al-aḥadīya 122
Ḥizb al-‘arīf bi’llāh 124
Ḥizb al-baḥr 44, 51n3, 52n7, 104n15,
 106n30, 107n31, 110n60
Ḥizb al-naṣr 52n7, 106n30
Ḥizb al-nūr 124
 Hüdayi, Aziz Mahmud 16n24
 al-Ḥusaynī, ‘Alī al-Waṣfī
 b. Ḥusayn 51n3
- Ibn ‘Abd al-Wahhāb, Muḥammad 37
 Ibn ‘Arabī, ‘Imād al-Dīn Muḥammad
 b. Muḥyī al-Dīn 54n21
 Ibn ‘Arabī, Muḥyī al-Dīn (Shaykh
 Muḥyī al-Dīn; the Shaykh al-Akbar) 1, 2, 3n1, 5–9, 11n4,
 14n12, 15n21, 17, 22–29, 33–38,
 40–42, 45, 46, 48–50, 51n1, 51n5,
 52n12, 54n19–21, 58n70, 61n114,
 67n176, 77, 104n10, 107n31,
 110n61, 110n63, 117n118, 119–124

- Ibn 'Arabī, Sa' d al-Dīn Muḥammad
b. Muḥyī al-Dīn 22, 23, 121
- Ibn 'Asākir, Abū Muḥammad
al-Qāsim b. Muzaḥfar 22–24, 119
- Ibn Bākhilā, Dā'ūd 51n3
- Ibn al-Bukhārī, al-Fakhr 26
- Ibn Fahd al-Makkī, 'Abd al-'Azīz
('Izz al-Dīn) b. 'Umar 27, 28, 120
- Ibn Fahd al-Makkī, Muḥammad
(Taqī al-Dīn) 27
- Ibn Fahd al-Makkī, Sirāj al-Dīn
'Umar b. Muḥammad (Taqī al-Dīn) 25–27, 120
- Ibn Hajar al-'Asqalānī, 25–28, 46,
48, 55n37, 119
- Ibn Idrīs, Aḥmad 43
- Ibn Mashīsh, 'Abd al-Salām 52n7,
107n31
- Ibn al-Shuwaykh, Badr al-Dīn Ḥasan
al-Maqdisī 30
- Ibn Taymīya, Taqī al-Dīn
Aḥmad 26, 35, 48–50, 68n186
- Ibn Ṭūlūn 28
- ijāza* 5–8, 18, 23, 24, 26–8, 30–33,
36, 38, 40, 44, 45, 52n11, 54n21,
61n114, 65n166, 69, 74, 119, 120,
122
- 'child ijāza' 36, 45, 52n12, 54n19,
65n166
- 'ilm (and ahl al-'ilm) 44, 52n10
- Indonesia 34
- Iraq 23, 64n150
- al-Iṣfahānī, shaykh Abū Shujā' Zāhir
b. Rustam 54n19
- al-ism al-jāmi'* 76
- Ismail Pasha 9, 16n23
- Istanbul 8, 16n24, 17
- Istighātha* 51n1, 51n6
- al-Jabartī al-Zabīdī, Ismā'il 23–25,
46, 67n176, 121
- al-Jazā'irī, 'Abd al-Qādir (Amir) 42,
49, 64n152
- al-Jazā'irī, Muḥammad al-Sa' dī 39
- al-Jazarī, Muḥammad b. Muḥammad Abū'l-Khayr Shams al-Dīn (also Ibn al-Jazarī) 67n176, 106n27
- al-Jazūlī, Abū 'Abdallāh Muḥammad
b. Sulaymān 6
- Jerusalem 32, 35–40, 47, 119
- al-Jilī, 'Abd al-Karīm 25, 33
- jinn 70, 72, 104n13, 104n14, 105n17,
105n22
- Joseph (Prophet Yūsuf) 77–78,
116n112
- al-Jundī, Muḥammad 41, 42, 49, 119
- al-Jundī, Muḥammad Amīn
b. Muḥammad 42, 49, 119
- kalām* see theology
- karāma* (pl. karāmāt, act of spiritual grace) 7, 12n4, 14n12, 28, 38, 43
- kasb* (acquisition) 33, 61n114
- al-Kattānī, 'Abd al-Hayy b. 'Abd al-Kabir 37, 66n171
- Khālid al-Naqshbandī, shaykh Ḍiyā'
al-Dīn 41, 42, 49
- Khalidiyya see Naqshbandiyya-
Khalidiyya
- Khalwati/Khalwatiyya 13n7, 37, 38,
40, 42, 47, 63n129, 63n132
- Khatmiyya (Mirghaniyya) 43
- khawāṣṣ* (special properties) 2, 69–74
- Khidr 40
- khirqā* 23, 30, 33, 46, 78
- K. Kashf al-ma'na 'an asmā' Allāh al-ḥusnā* 77
- K. al-Mu'ashsharāt al-maymūna* 23
- K. al-Rashaḥāt al-anwarīya fī sharḥ al-awrād al-akbarīya* 53n14, 103n7
- al-Kūrānī, Ibrāhīm b. Ḥasan 32,
34, 35, 37, 47, 49, 67n173, 109n51,
120–123
- al-Kūrānī, Ilyās b. Ibrāhīm 37, 47
- al-Kūrānī, Muḥammad b. Ibrāhīm 40
- al-Kūrānī, Ṭāhir b. Ibrāhīm
(Muḥammad Abū'l-Ṭāhir) 37, 38,
120
- al-Kurdī, Ḥasan b. Mūsā 53n14
- al-Kurdī, Maḥmūd (al-Khalwatī) 39, 40, 120

- London 9, 17
- Ma'arrat Nu'man 41–42
- madhhab* (pl. madhāhib) 22, 33, 48, 56n44, 58n73, 122
- al-Maghribī, Aḥmad al-Shādhilī (al-Maqqarī) 38
- magic squares 73
- Mahallat Ruh 29, 30
- al-Mahdalī, Yūsuf 43
- al-Mahdawī, 'Abd al-'Azīz 107n31, 110n59
- majlis* (pl. majālis) al-ṣalāt 'alā al-nabī 5, 6
- Majmū'at al-aḥzāb* 1, 8
- Malatya 22
- Maliki 32
- Malta 39
- Manẓūmat asmā' Allāh al-ḥusnā al-Dardayrīya* 12n4, 63n132
- Maqām Ibrāhīm ('Station of Abraham') 22, 31, 53n16, 54n19
- al-Maqdisī al-Ṣāliḥī al-Ḥanbalī, al-Ṣalāḥ Muḥammad 26
- al-Marāghī, Muḥammad Abū'l-Faṭḥ (al-Marāghī al-ṣaghīr) 26–28, 121
- al-Mar'ashī, Maḥmūd Efendi 42
- mārid* (pl. marada) (disobedient and insolent [jinn]) 70, 104n13
- Maryam bint Muḥammad (Khātūn) 53n15
- mashyakha* 27, 53n14
- mausoleum of Ibn 'Arabī (also shrine; tomb) 5, 15n21, 36, 103n8
- Mecca 22, 26, 27, 31–33, 42–44, 46, 60n102
- Medina 26, 30, 32–6, 46, 67n178, 68n185, 119, 121–123
- al-Mīrghanī, 'Abdallāh b. Ibrāhīm (al-Maḥjūb) 42–44, 120
- al-Mīrghanī, Muḥammad 'Uthmān 43
- al-Mīrghanī, Muḥammad Yāsīn b. 'Abdallāh 42, 43, 120
- Mirghaniyya see Khatmiyya
- Morocco 39, 63n134
- Moses (Prophet Mūsā) 77, 112n76, 113n85, 114n89, 114n90, 115n101, 116n108
- al-Mudarris, 'Abd al-Raḥmān 42
- Muḥammad see Prophet Muḥammad
- al-Muḥibbī, Muḥammad b. Faḍlallāh (Amīn) 22, 31, 33
- Muhyiddin Ibn 'Arabi Society (MIAS) 9, 10
- mu' jam shuyūkh* (pl. ma'ājim shuyūkh) 23–25, 27, 28, 53n14
- muqaṭṭa'āt* 72, 107n31
- al-Murādī, Muḥammad Khalīl b. 'Alī 40
- murīd* 5, 6, 29, 30
- al-Murshidī, al-Jamāl Muḥammad (Abū'l-Maḥāsin) 25, 56n40, 120
- al-Murtaḍā al-Zabīdī (Muḥammad Murtaḍā) 24, 43, 46
- Mu'tazili; Mu'tazilism 56n44
- al-Nābulusī, 'Abd al-Ghanī 12n4–5, 31, 32, 36–38, 41, 61n114, 62n116, 66n166, 67n173, 119, 121, 124
- al-Nābulusī, Ibrāhīm b. Ismā'il b. 'Abd al-Ghanī (grandson of 'Abd al-Ghanī) 41, 46, 66n166, 121
- al-Nābulusī, Ismā'il (son of 'Abd al-Ghanī) 41
- al-Nābulusī, Ismā'il (father of 'Abd al-Ghanī) 32, 36
- al-Nābulusī, Ismā'il (great-grandfather of 'Abd al-Ghanī) 30
- Naqshbandi/Naqshbandiyya 8, 15n19, 30, 32–38, 47, 61n111, 67n181, 64n150, 68n185
- Naqshbandiyya-Khalidiyya (also Mujaddidiyya-Khalidiyya) 1, 64n150
- Naqshbandiyya-Mujaddidiyya 34, 41, 68n185
- al-Naṣṣ, Mamdūḥ 7
- al-Naṣṣ, Muḥammad Sāmīr 7, 14n14
- Palestine 27, 40, 47
- Prophet Muḥammad (Messenger;

- Envoy of God) 7, 14n16, 40, 43,
54n16, 103n9, 104n13, 105n20,
113n79, 113n85, 114n90, 115n96,
116n113, 117n118
- Prophet's Mosque (Medina)
(al-Masjid al-Nabawī) 37, 123
- Prophet's Noble Sanctuary (Medina)
(al-Ḥaram al-Sharīf al-Nabawī)
122
- Qadiri/Qadiriyya 32, 34, 36, 37,
107n31
- Qarabashiyya (Khalwatiyya) 37–39
qarīn (pl. quranā) (spirit companion)
70, 104n13
qarīn al-sū (the Evil One; Satan) 71,
105n19
- Qārūn 112n74
- al-Qāwuqjī, Muḥammad b. Khalīl
(Abū'l-Maḥāsīn) 43, 44, 73, 120
- Qūnawī, Ṣadr al-Dīn 23
- Qur'an (also Qur'anic worldview)
31, 35, 45, 48, 49, 56n44, 61n114,
71, 74, 77
- Qur'anic quotations (also texts; verses) 2, 74–77, 106n26–28,
108n41
- al-Qushāshī, Ṣafī al-Dīn Aḥmad
31–35, 46, 49, 61n111, 67n176,
120, 121, 123
- al-Ramlī, al-Shams Muḥammad 31
- Rauf, Bulent 9, 17
- al-Sakhāwī, Muḥammad b. 'Abd al-Raḥmān 26, 27
al-salaf al-ṣāliḥ, 35, 56n44
salafī/salafism 26, 29, 35, 48–50,
56n44, 61n114
- Salafī/Salafiyya (19th-century reform movement) 49, 68n186
ṣalawāt; taṣliya; al-ṣalāt 'alā al-nabī (calling down peace and blessings upon the Prophet Muḥammad)
11n4, 12n5, 14n16, 69, 72, 103n9,
104n10
- al-Ṣalāt al-Mashhīya* 40
Ṣalāt/Ṣalawāt of Ibn 'Arabī (Ṣalawāt kubrā; Ṣalawāt and Ṣalāt sharīfa)
3n3, 36, 51n6, 119, 120, 123, 124
Ṣalawāt of al-Dardayr 12n4, 63n132
al-Salihiyya 5, 14n12
Salimiyya madrasa 36, 41
samā' (certificate of audition) 24, 27 sanad (chain of transmission or authorities) 2, 18, 41, 44–46, 48,
49, 52n11, 66n167, 76, 119–122
al-Sanūsī, Muḥammad b. 'Alī 43
Satan 71, 104n13, 105n19, 111n70
Saul (Tālūt) 114n95
Shadhili/Shadhiliyya 14n14, 27, 32,
43, 65n162, 106n31
al-Shādhilī, Abū'l-Ḥasan 73, 121,
123, 124
Shafī'i 22, 23, 25–31, 34, 37, 38,
54n19, 59n85
al-Shāfi'i, Muḥammad b. Idrīs
(al-Imām) 65n166, 123, 124
shahāda 71, 105n18, 116n111
Shahrāzur 34, 64n150
al-Sha'rānī, 'Abd al-Wahhāb 28, 29,
46, 49, 57n63, 58n76, 121, 124
al-Sharbīnī, 'Abd al-Raḥmān 31 sharī'a 34, 35, 48, 60n109, 61n111
al-Sharqāwī, 'Abdallāh 39, 40
Shattariyya 30, 32, 34, 37, 60n109
Shaykh Muhyi'l-Din Mosque 5–7,
15n20
al-Shinnāwī, Abū'l-Mawāhib Aḥmad
b. 'Alī b. 'Abd al-Quddūs 29–32,
67n176, 121
al-Shinnāwī, 'Alī b. 'Abd al-Quddūs
29, 67n176, 121
al-Shinnāwī, Muḥammad 29, 58n76
Ṣibghatullāh b. Rūḥullāh al-Sindī
(al-Barwajī; al-Barūjī) 30, 32, 58n81 silsila 23, 35, 46, 67n176
al-Sindī, Muḥammad Ḥayāt 37,
59n94
Singkel, 'Abd al-Ra'ūf 33, 34
Sirhindī, Aḥmad 34, 35, 59n97,
68n185

- al-Sulamī, Muḥammad b. Ḥusayn
(Abū ‘Abd al-Raḥmān) 123
Sunbul, Muḥammad Sa‘īd 37, 38,
120
Sunbul, Muḥammad Ṭāhir
b. Muḥammad Sa‘īd 38, 42,
64n153, 120
Sunna 35, 48, 49, 61n111
supplication (du‘ā’) 3n4, 103n8,
108n44, 108n46, 117n119
sūrat al-An‘ām 14n16
sūrat al-Fātiḥa 7, 11n4, 12n5, 14n16
sūrat al-Ikhlāṣ 107n34
sūrat al-Inshirāḥ 14n16, 104n10,
114n90
sūrat al-Wāqī‘a 71
sūrat Yā Sīn 12n4, 13n7
sūrat Yūsuf 77, 113n80
al-Suyūṭī, Jalāl al-Dīn 26, 27, 30,
43, 46, 57n49, 66n166, 66n171,
67n176, 121
Syria 23, 27, 32, 41–43, 46, 49

al-ta‘alluq 77
al-Ṭabarī al-Makkī, ‘Abd al-Qādir
b. Muḥammad b. Yahyā 31, 33, 120 al-Ṭabarī al-Makkī, Aḥmad
b. ‘Abdallāh 54n19
al-Ṭabarī al-Makkī, Raḍī al-Dīn Ibrāhīm b. Muḥammad 22,
66n166, 120
al-Ṭabarī al-Makkī, Yahyā b. Makram
b. Muḥibb al-Dīn 28, 31, 120 al-Ṭabarī al-Makkī, Zayn al-‘Ābidīn
b. ‘Abd al-Qādir 33, 46, 120 tābi‘a (pl. tawābi‘) (female jinn companion) 70, 104n13 al-Tāfilātī, Muḥammad 39, 46, 47, 74, 119
al-taḥaqquq 77
Tahsīn 122
al-takhalluq 77, 78

takhrīj 55n37
talisman 73, 106n27, 107n33
al-Tanūkhī, Burhān al-Dīn Abū Ishāq Ibrāhīm (al-Burhān al-Shāmī) 23–25, 119
ṭarīqa (pl. ṭuruq) 5, 11n 1, 14n12, 18,
28, 29, 32–36, 47, 61n111, 67n177
Tarjumān al-ashwāq 103n8
Tawajjuh waqt al-saḥar 122 ta‘wīdh; ta‘awwudh (taking refuge)
106n27, 111n70
theology (kalām) 33–35, 38, 48,
61n114
al-Tilimsānī, Muḥammad b. ‘Īsā 32

al-‘Ujaymī al-Makkī, al-Ḥasan
b. ‘Alī, 33, 37
umm al-ṣibyān 71, 105n20
al-Uskudārī, Ismā‘īl b. ‘Abdallāh
62n126
uṣūl (principles of the faith) 33, 38
uwaysi sufism; uwaysi sufi 36, 43,
67n174

waḥdat al-wujūd (Oneness of Being)
31, 33–36, 48, 49, 56n44, 61n114,
67n181, 68n186, 122
Walī Allāh, Shāh 37, 68n186
al-Wānī, Nūr al-Dīn Abū’l-Ḥasan ‘Alī b. ‘Umar 23, 66n166, 121 wird (pl. awrād) 3n4, 38, 69, 103n2
Wird al-saḥar 12n5, 38

Yemen 25, 32, 39
Yivlik, Ahmed 8, 15n21

Zakariyā al-Anṣārī, 26–30, 46,
66n166, 67n172, 173, 119, 121
al-Zarrūq, Aḥmad 13n6
zawba‘a (pl. zawābi‘) (storm demon)
70, 104n13

‘Whoever recites this prayer will be like the sun and the moon among the stars’

This is the first study of a widely used and much-loved prayer by Ibn ‘Arabī. The Dawr al-a‘lā (‘The Most Elevated Cycle’), also known as the Hizb al-wiqāya (‘The Prayer of Protection’), is a prayer of remarkable power and beauty. It is said that whoever reads it with sincerity of heart and utter conviction, while making a specific plea, will have their wish granted.

This precious book provides a definitive edition of the Arabic text, a lucid translation and a transliteration for those unable to read Arabic. In addition, there is an illuminating analysis of the transmission and use of the prayer across the centuries. Of particular interest are the major figures in Islamic scholarship and mysticism who have been associated with it, and perceptions of its properties.

Suha Taji-Farouki is Research Associate at the Department of Academic Research and Publications, The Institute of Ismaili Studies (London), and Lecturer in Modern Islam at the Institute of Arab and Islamic Studies, University of Exeter. She has published widely on aspects of modern Islam and Islamic thought.

محمد صالح المنجد

ANQA
PUBLISHING

ISBN 0-9534513-0-5

9 780953 451302

www.ibn-arabi.com
publishing@anqa.co.uk

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢

الجزء الرابع

[السفر الثاني]

بسم الله الرحمن الرحيم

المرحلة في علم الطبيعي

إن الترتيب الطبيعي وإن استدعى تقديم مباحث الجواهر وأقسامها - على مباحث الأعراض وأقسامها لكن أخرنا البحث عن الجواهر لوجهين أحدهما أن أكثر أحوالها لا يبرهن إلا بأصول مقررة في أحكام الأعراض. و ثانيهما أن معرفتها شديدة المناسبة لأن يقع في العلم الإلهي و علم

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٣

المفارقات الباحث عن ذوات الأشياء وأعيانها دون أن يقع في الفلسفة الباحثة عن الكليات والمفاهيم العامة وأقسامها الأولية فلهذين الوجهين قدمنا أحكام الأعراض على مباحث الجواهر وفيها مقدمة وفنون

أما المقدمة ففي بيان عدد المقولات

وهي عند الفلاسفة عشرة الجوهر والتسعة الباقية العرضية وهي الكم والكيف والإضافة والأيّن والوضع ومتى و الملك وأن يفعل وأن ينفعل.

وفيها مباحث أربعة أحدها إثبات أن كلا منها جنس لما تحته وهو لا يظهر إلا بخمسة أمور - الأول اشتراك الأقسام التي جعلت تحت كل من هذه العشرة في معنى وما هو أقل ما يجب في الجنس.

الثاني أن يكون ذلك المعنى الذي هو جهة الاشتراك وصفا ثبوتيا لأن السلوب لا تكون أجناسا للموجودات اللهم إلا أن يكون عنوانات يشار بها إلى معاني كلية - كما في الجوهر والكيف.

الثالث أن يكون الوصف الثبوتي مقولا على ما تحتها بالتواطؤ لا بالتشكيك - إذ التشكيك عندنا لا يكون إلا في الوجودات لا في الماهيات والوجود غير داخل في الماهيات.

الرابع أن يكون داخلا فيما تحتها من الأنواع لا أعراضا خارجا الخامس أن يكون تمام الماهية الجزء المشترك بينهما و ثانيها أن هذه العشرة لا يوجد اثنان منها داخلين تحت جنس ولم يوجد في كلام الأقدمين برهان على هذا.

بل الشيخ حكى أن من الناس من زعم أن الفعل والانفعال هما نفس الكيفية وهذا فاسد لأن التسخين مثلا لو كان هو السخونة لكان كل مسخن متسخنا و لكانت الحركة متسخنا و هو باطل.

و أما التسخن و التسود فهو طلب السخونة و طلب السواد و طلب الشيء يستحيل

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٤

أن يكون ذلك الشيء لاستحالة كون الشيء طلبا لنفسه و من الناس من جعل المقولات أربعا الجوهر والكم والكيف و جعل النسبة جنسا للشيء الباقية و وافقهم صاحب البصائر و صاحب المطارحات جعلها خمسة هذه الأربعة و الحركة و له حجة على الحصر فيها سننقلها أولا ثم نبين وجه الخلل فيها [قال فيها] و لما حصرنا المقولات المشهورة في خمسة وجدنا بعد ذلك في موضع لصاحب البصائر حصرها في أربع و هي الأربعة المذكورة قال و إذا اعتبرت الحصر الذي ذكره لا تجده صحيحا فإن الحركة لم تدخل تحت الجوهر لأنها عرض و لا تحت الكم لأنها ليست نفس الكم - و إن كان لها تقدير و لا يلزم من كون الشيء متقدرا كونه كما بذاته و ليست بكيف - فإن الكيفية هيئة قارة لا تقتضي القسمة و لا النسبة لذاتها و إن عرض لها النسبة إلى المحل.

عقدة و حل -

أقول هذا الكلام كما يرد ظاهرا على الحصر المذكور يرد على الحصر للعرض في التسع حيث إنهم يجعلوا الحركة مقولة أخرى فهذه عقدة على القائلين لكل من المذهبين فيجب دفعها و الحل أن الحركة هي عبارة عن نحو وجود الشيء التدريجي الوجود و لا ماهية له إلا الكون المذكور و الوجود خارج عن الماهيات الجوهرية و العرضية و الطبيعية التي يلحقها الجنسية لا يجوز أن يكون خارجا عن ماهية الأنواع فالحركة ليست بجنس فضلا عن أن تكون مقولة و الذي يذكر في مباحث الحركة أن وحدتها قد تكون جنسية و نوعية و شخصية فذلك باعتبار ما تعلق به.

ثم قال فإذا الأقرب لمن يريد أن يحصر المقولات في الخمسة أن يقول الماهية

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٥

التي هي وراء الوجود إما أن يكون جوهر أو غير جوهر و هو الهيئة فهي إما أن يتصور ثباتها أو لا يتصور فإن لم يتصور ثباتها فهي الحركة و إن تصور ثباتها فإما أن لا يعقل دون القياس إلى غيرها فهي الإضافة و إما أن يعقل دون ذلك فإما أن يوجب المساواة و اللامساواة و التجزي أو لا فإن أوجب فهو الكم و إلا فهو الكيف فالكيف قد وقع في آخر التقسيم و له مميزات عن كل واحد من أطراف التقسيم فهو من حيث هو هيئة امتاز عن الجوهر و من حيث إنها قارة امتاز عن الحركة و من حيث إنها لا تحتاج في تصويره إلى تصور أمر خارج عنه و عن موضوعه امتاز عن الإضافة و من حيث إنها لا تحوج إلى اعتبار تجز امتاز عن الكم و اشتمل تعريفه على جميع أمور يفصله عن المشاركات الأربعة فهذا هو بيان الحصر في الخمسة ثم أخذ في بيان أن متى و الأين و غيرهما لا يعقل إلا مع النسبة و ساق الكلام في واحد واحد إلى آخر هذا الكلام.

بحث آخر معه اعلم أن النسبة ليست أمرا مستقلا الماهية يمكن تعقلها من حيث هي هي مع قطع النظر عن المنسوب و المنسوب إليه و لا أيضا يمكن تجريدها في العقل عن المنتسبين و كل ما لم يمكن تجريدها لا في الخارج و لا في العقل عن شيء و لا أيضا يمكن اعتبارها من حيث هي معزولا فيه النظر عما عداه فلا يمكن أخذه طبيعة محمولة على جزئيات لها إلا مع ذلك الشيء فالنسبة لا تكون جنسا أو نوعا محمولا على ما تحتها إلا مأخوذا معها جنس ما هي نسبة له أو نوعه فكون النسبة جنسا أو نوعا أو شخصا لا يستصح و لا يستقيم إلا بأن يكون ذو النسبة بما هو ذو النسبة أحد هذه الأمور.

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٦

فإذا تقرر هذا فنقول النسبة المكانية وهي الأين مثلا يجوز كونها جنسا لكل ما يؤخذ معها المكان من النسب و كذا مقولة متى وهي نسبة الشيء إلى الزمان يصح وقوعها باعتبار أخذها مع الزمان جنسا لكل نسبة يؤخذ معها نوعا من الزمان فيكون تلك النسب المأخوذة مع الأنواع أنواعا لمتى و ما يؤخذ معها أشخاص الزمان أشخاصا - مندرجة تحت مقولة متى لاندرج تلك الأشخاص الزمانية تحت مطلق الزمان فإذا لو وجد لهذه المعاني السبعة التي تحصلت باعتبارها ماهيات النسب السبع معنى جامع مشترك متواطىء داخل في قوامها لأمكن القول بأن النسبة جنس لهذه النسب السبع كما لو كان ذلك المعنى جنسا فرضا للزمان و المكان و لنفس الأجزاء التي لذوات الأوضاع و نفس الكيفية التي في أن يفعل و أن يفعل و كذا للجوهر باعتبار نسبة الإضافة و كذا لأطراف الملك كالقميص و العمامة و منهم من جعل المضاف جنسا للسته الباقية النسبية - و الشيخ أبطل ذلك القول بأن كون الشيء منسوباً و إن استلزم كونه مضافاً لكن الثاني عارض للأول غير داخل في تلك الستة فإن كون الشيء في الدار مثلا هي نسبته التي هو بها أين و هذه النسبة ليست إضافة بل أيناً.

ثم إذا اعتبرت التكرير وجدت الموصوف بالأين يعرض له من حيث هو ذو أين - أن يصير معقول الماهية بالقياس إلى ما هو فيه من حيث هو محوي و ذلك حاو لا من حيث هو أين فقط بل من حيث هو محوي و ذلك حاوية فيعرض له الإضافة و كما أن كون الشيء بياضا شيء و كونه لذي البياض شيء آخر كذلك كون الشيء في مكان شيء و كونه ماهية مقولة بالقياس إلى غيره شيء آخر و الأول موضوع للثاني من حيث أن يصير النسبة شاملة للطرفين الحاوي و المحوي و هذا معنى قولهم إن النسبة تكون لطرف واحد و الإضافة للطرفين.

و ثالثها أنه لا مقولة خارجة عن هذه العشرة و الشيخ احتج على ذلك بحجة ضعيفة اعترف برداءتها و لذلك طويناها فإن قيل هنا أمور خارجة عن العشرة كالوحدة و النقطة و الآن الوجود و الشيئية و الحركة و الاعتبار العامة و كذلك الفصول

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٧

البسيطة و مفهوم المشتقات كالأبيض و الحار و أمثالهما و كذلك الأعدام كالعمى و الجهل قلنا أما الأعدام بما هي عدم فيجب خروجها لأن كلامنا من الأمور الوجودية و هي من جهة ملكاتها كالعلم و البصر ملحقة بالملكات بالعرض و كلامنا فيما بالذات - و كذلك حكم المشتقات و المركبات لأن الوحدة معتبرة في تقسيم الممكن إلى هذه العشرة كما أن الوجود معتبر و أما خروج نفس الوجود فلأن الكلام في الماهيات و الوجود خارج عنها كما علمت و أما الوحدة فهي عندنا نفس الوجود كما علمت و أما النقطة فهي عدمية و أما الحركة فهي نحو من الوجود كما أشرنا إليه و أما الفصول البسيطة فهي بالحقيقة عبارة عن الوجودات الخاصة للماهيات النوعية و أما الشيئية و الممكنية من الأمور الشاملة فلا تحصل لها إلا بالخصوصيات.

قال الإمام الرازي لقائل أن يقول إن الوحدة و النقطة داخلتان في مقولة الكيف - لأنهما عرض لا يتوقف تصوره على تصور شيء خارج عن حامله و لا يقتضي قسمه و لا نسبه في أجزاء حامله و الشيخ لم يتعرض لإبطال هذا الوجه أقول قد علم وجه اندفاعه.

واعلم أن الشيخ حكى عن بعضهم إدخالهما في الكم ثم أبطل ذلك بأن الكم - ما يقبل المساواة والمفاوتة لذاته و ذلك لا يحمل عليهما و حكى عن قوم أنهم أبطلوا ذلك بأن الوحدة مبدأ للكم المنفصل و النقطة مبدأ للكم المتصل و المبدأ خارج عن ذي المبدأ و إلا لكان مبدأ نفسه ثم أبطل هذا الإبطال بأن الوحدة ليست مبدأ إلا لقسم من الكم و هو المنفصل و النقطة إن ثبت مبدئيتها فهي ليست أيضا مبدأ إلا للكم المتصل فلا يلزم من كون كل منهما مبدأ لبعض الأنواع أن يصير مبدأ لنفسه و حكى عن آخرين

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٨

أنهم يدخلونها تحت مقولات كثيرة باعتبارات مختلفة فالنقطة من حيث هي طرف من المضاف و من حيث هي هيئة ما من الكيف و ذلك باطل لأن الماهية الواحدة يستحيل أن يتقوم بجنس و بما ليس ذلك الجنس.

و الشيخ قد سلم خروج هذه الأمور عن المقولات العشر و ذلك لا يناقض دعوى عشرية الأجناس العالية فإن الدعوى أن كل ما كانت له ماهية متحصلة من جنس و فصل فهو تحت إحدى هذه المقولات فالبسائط كنفس الأجناس العالية و الفصول الأخيرة و الأنواع البسيطة و الهويات الشخصية خروجها غير قادح في الحصر كما أن من ادعى أن أهل المدينة عشرة أقوام فإذا وجدنا أقواما بداءة غير متمدين لم يقدح ذلك في دعوى عشرية المدينين.

و رابعها عن كيفية انقسام هذه المقولات إلى أنواعها فلا بد من تحقيق أن تقسيمها إلى أقسامها هل هي بالفصول أو بالعوارض و تقسيمها إلى العوارض أيضا قد يكون مطابقا للتقسيم بالفصول كما إذا قسمنا الحيوان إلى قابل العلم و غير قابل العلم - فإنه يطابق لتقسيمه إلى الناطق و غير الناطق و قد لا يكون كتقسيم الحيوان إلى الذكر و الأنثى

الفن الأول في مقولة الكم و إثبات وجودها و وجود أقسامها و إثبات عرضيتها و فيه فصول

فصل (١) في تعدد الخواص التي بها يمكن معرفة ماهية الكم المطلق و هي ثلاث

الأولى التقدير و المساواة و المفارقة

و هي أمور إضافية لكن عروضها للأشياء من جهة أنها كم أو ذو كمية لا بسبب الطبيعة الجسمية العامة أو الخاصة -

الثانية قبول القسمة

و هي تشتمل على قسمين أحدهما كون الشيء بحيث - يمكن أن يتوهم فيه شيان مثله و يتوهم لكل من الشئيين أيضا شيان مثل الأول و

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٩

هكذا لا يقف إلى غير النهاية و هذا المعنى يلحق المقدار لذاته و لا يوجب لحوقه للجسم تغييرا فيه و حركة له مكانية و الثاني حدوث الافتراق و الانفكاك و هو عبارة عن حدوث هويتين للجسم بعد أن كانت له هوية واحدة من نوعهما و لا بد في هذا المعنى من حركة و انفعال و هذا المعنى من عوارض المادة و يستحيل عروضه للمقدار كما ستعلم في مباحث الهيولى و لكن تهيو المادة لقبول هذه الانقسام إنما هو بسبب المقدار - و لا يلزم من كون الشيء مهينا للمادة لقبول معنى أن يكون ذلك الشيء مستعدا لذلك المعنى و إلا لكان كل معد مستعدا لما يعد و لا يلزم أيضا بقاء ذلك المقدار عند حصول الانقسام كما أن الحركة تعد الجسم لأن يسكن في مكان فهي لا تبقى مع السكون.

الثالثة كونه بحال يمكن أن يصير معدودا بواحد

و ذلك لأنه قد ثبت كما سيجيء أن الجسم المتصل واحد قابل لانقسامات انفكاكية غير متناهية لكن لا يجوز خروج الجميع من القوة إلى الفعل و كل جسم صح أن يقال يجب أن يكون انقساماته متناهية و صح أن يقال يجب أن يكون انقساماته غير متناهية و كلا المعنيين من عوارض المادة بواسطة المقدار.

فإذا تقرر هذا فنقول كل جسم قابل للتصنيف إلى غير النهاية و التصنيف في المقدار تضعيف في العدد و بالجملة كل تبعض في المقدار تكثير في العدد و العدد غير متناه في جانب الزيادة و هو منته في جانب النقصان إلى الواحد و المقدار غير متناه في طرف النقصان و هو منته في طرف الزيادة و لما ظهر أن المقدار لذاته قابل للتجزئة و جب أن يكون لذاته قابلا للتعدد فإذا الكم مطلقا سواء كان منفصلا بالفعل كالعدد أو منفصلا بالقوة بالفعل كالمقدار فإنه قابل لأن يوجد فيه واحد يصير هو معدودا بذلك الواحد - فظهر بهذا التحقيق أن للكمية خواص ثلاث لا يشاركها غيرها فبعضهم اقتصر على الأولى في التعريف فقال عرض يقبل المساواة و عدمها و هو ضعيف لأن المساواة لا يمكن تعريفها - إلا بكونها اتحادا في الكم فيكون دوريا و بعضهم من ضم إليها الخاصة الثانية و هي قبول

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٠

القسمة و هو خطأ لأنه تعريف بالأخص حيث إن قبول القسمة من عوارض الكم المتصل - لا المنفصل إلا بالاشتراك الاسمي فالأولى ما فعله الشيخان فعرفاه بأنه الذي بذاته - يمكن أن يوجد فيه شيء واحد عاذا فهذا صحيح لا يختلف في المتصل و المنفصل و ليس فيه دور لأن الواحد استعمل فيه و هو مساوق للوجود غني عن التعريف و كذلك العدد غني عنه

فصل (٢) في الفرق بين المقدار و الجسمية و ذلك من ستة أوجه

أربعة منها مبنية على نفي الجزء الذي لا يتجزى

فالأول أن الجسم الواحد يتوارد عليه المقادير المختلفة

و الجسمية المخصوصة باقية بحالها كالشمعة المتشكلة بأشكال مختلفة يتوارد عليها الأبعاد الطولية و العرضية و العمقية مع إثبات ذاتها في حد جسميتها فيدل على كون تلك المقادير زائدة على الجسمية فإن قيل الجسم الكروي إذا انعكس لم يتغير مقداره إذ هو مساو لما كان أولا في المساحة فنقول إنك ستعلم أن المساوي قد يكون بالفعل و قد يكون بالقوة و إن أمثال هذه الأشكال المختلفة لا مساواة لها بالحقيقة إلا بالقوة و الذي بالقوة ليس بموجود بعد.

و الوجه الثاني أن الأجسام مشتركة في الجسمية و مختلفة في المقادير

و هذا المسلك لا يحتاج إلى تعاقب المقادير على الجسم الواحد و اعترض صاحب حكمة الإشراق بأنه كما أن الأجسام مشتركة في الجسمية و مختلفة في المقادير فهي كذلك مشتركة في كونها متقدرة فإن كان اشتراكها في الجسمية و اختلافها في المقادير المخصوصة يوجب كون المقادير أعراضا زائدة على جسميتها لزم أن يكون اختلافها في المقادير المخصوصة بعد اشتراكها في أصل المتقدريه يوجب أن يكون المقادير المخصوصة أعراضا زائدة على متقدريتها حتى يكون مطلق المقدار عرضا و المخصوص

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١١

عرضا آخر و ذلك محال و إلا لزم التسلسل المحال كما يظهر بأدنى تأمل فكما لم يلزم بل بطل أن يكون أصل المقدار موجودا مغايرا للمقدار المخصوص إلا في الذهن بحسب التعيين و الإبهام فكذلك جاز أن يكون الأجسام مشتركة في الجسمية و متميزة بمقاديرها المخصوصة و إن لم يكن المقدار موجودا مغايرا للجسمية أقول هذا البحث قوي جدا و ستعلم وجه انحلاله.

الوجه الثالث أن الأجسام صح أن يكون بعضها مقدرا للبعض عادا له

و بعضها مقتدرا معدودا بالآخر فالمقدار العاد في أكثر الأمر يخالف المتقدر المعدود فليست المقدرية و المعدودية بنفس الجسمية التي يستحيل أن يخالف فيها جسم جسما و الإراد المذكور متوجه عليه أيضا.

الوجه الرابع أن الجسم الواحد يسخن فيزداد حجمه

من غير انضمام شيء إليه - و لا لوقوع خلاء فيه لاستحالة و يبرد فيصغر حجمه من غير انفصال شيء منه أو زوال خلاء كان و ذلك الجسم محفوظ الهوية في الحالين فهو مغاير للمقادير و هذه الحجة أيضا مبنية على نفي الجزء الذي لا يتجزى لا بتناء التخلخل و التكاثر على نفيه.

الوجه الخامس أن وجود السطح من توابع المادة

على ما ستقيم البرهان عليه و تابع المادة ليس نفس الجسمية لأنها مقومة إياها متقدمة عليها بالعلية فإذن السطح مغاير للجسمية و إذا ثبت عرضية السطح ثبت عرضية الخط لكونه من عوارض على وجه أولى.

و السادس الخط و السطح غير داخليين في معنى الجسم

لأن من عقل أو فرض جسما غير متناه فقد عقل و فرض جسما لا جسما لكونه محالا فلما صح انفكاكهما عن الجسم لذاته و إن لم ينفكا عنه بسبب غير الجسمية فثبت مغايرتهما إياه و سيما الخط بصحة انفكاكه عن الجسم بل و عن البسيط في الوجودين كما في الكرة الساكنة - و أما الكرات المتحركة دائما التي تعينت فيها مناطق و محاور فإن الجسمية فيها متقدمة على حركاتها المتقدمة على تعيين الدوائر و الخطوط فيستحيل أن

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٢

يتقوم الجسمية بها و إلا لزم تقدم الشيء على نفسه و هو محال. و لقائل أن يقول ما ذكرتموه منقوض بالهيولى و الصورة فإنهما داخلتان في قوام الجسم و قد لا يعلمها من علم الجسم و الذهول عنهما عند العلم بالجسم لا ينافي كونهما مقومين له فكذلك هاهنا و الجواب أن من علم الجسم جوهرًا مركبا من الجواهر الفردة - فلم يعلم حقيقة الجسم و من علمه جوهرًا متصلا بلا مادة فعلم حقيقته و إن كان علما ناقصا و من علمه مادة بلا صورة فما علمه بالحقيقة ثم من جعل المقادير مقومة للجسم جعلها من باب الصورة لا من باب المادة و أيضا لما صح أن يكون الهيولى مجهولة - عند ما يكون الصورة معلومة لا جرم و جب تغايرهما فكذلك إذا علمنا الجسمية و شككنا في وجود السطح كان وجوده مغايرا لوجود الصورة.

حكمة مشرقية

إن الذي أفاض علينا من بحر فضله في عرضية المقادير التعليمية للجسم الطبيعي هو أنا نمهد أولا أن كل ما هو داخل مع

شيء آخر في حقيقة معنى جنسي فلا بد أن يكون مبادي أحدهما و مقوماته و مكملاته بعينها مبادي و مقومات و مكملات للآخر أيضا و كذا أقسام أحدهما يدخل في أقسام الآخر فإذاً لو كانت الجسمية عين المقدار - لكان محصل أحدهما محصل الآخر و لا شبهة في أن الجسمية بالمعنى الذي هو جنس - يفتقر إلى مقومات فصلية و مع انضمام الفصول الأولية قد يحصل لها أنواع إضافية - هي أيضا إذا أخذت من حيث هي هي بلا شروط يكون معاني غير تامة مفتقرة إلى فصول أخرى بعد تلك الفصول و هكذا إلى أن ينتهي إلى أنواع محصلة لا يتصور تحصيل بعدها و الجسمية بالمعنى الذي هو مادة يفتقر إلى صورة كمالية كالعنصرية - و بعد انضمامها إلى أخرى كالنممية و أخرى كالحساسة و أخرى كالناطقة ثم هذه المبادي و المقومات التي في القبيلتين كلها من الأحوال و الكمالات التي كان

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٣

الافتقار إليها في تحصيل الموجود بما هو موجود أو في الجوهر بما هو جوهر أو في الجوهر المنفعل بما هو جوهر منفعل أو في الجوهر المنفعل المكيف بالكيفية المزاجية بما هو ذو مزاج أو في النامي من حيث نموه أو في الحيوان من جهة حيوانية - و أما المقدار المطلق الجنسي فإذا احتاج إلى معنى فصلي يجب أن يحتاج إليه من جهة كمية و مقدارية فلا جرم يتحصل أولا بكونه جسما تعليميا و سطحا و خطأ - فإنها من العوارض الأولية للمنقسم من حيث هو منقسم إنه هل انقسامه في جهة فيتحصل خطأ أو في جهتين فيتحصل سطحا أو في جهات فيتحصل جسما و كذلك كل منها إذا تحصل تحسلا آخر يجب أن يكون تحصله من باب المعاني و الكمالات التي تلحق المقادير بما هي مقادير متصلة كانت أو منفصلة كالطول و القصر كالعادية و المعدودية و التشارك و التباين و المنطقية و الأصمية و غير ذلك فاللازم باطل فكذا الملزوم و بهذا يعلم وجه اندفاع الإشكال الوارد على الوجه الثاني و الثالث جميعا

فصل (٣) في تقسم الكم إلى المتصل و المنفصل

و تقسيم المتصل إلى أنواعه و إن المنفصل هو العدد لا غير و في بطلان القول بأن القول كم منفصل و الثقل و الخفة كم متصل فنقول يطلق لفظ المتصل لمعنيين حال المقدار في نفسه و حاله بالإضافة إلى مقدار آخر. فالأول فصل الكم و له تعريفان أحدهما كون الكم بحيث يمكن أن يفرض فيه أجزاء تتلاقى على الحدود المشتركة. و الحد المشترك ما يكون بداية لجزء و نهاية لآخر و ثانيهما كونه قابلا للانقسامات الغير المتناهية بالقوة و المنفصل يقابله في كلا المعنيين.

و الثاني و هو المعنى الإضافي و هو أيضا على وجهين أحدهما كون مقدارين نهايتهما واحدة كخطي الزاوية و كقسمي الجسم الأبلق و ثانيهما كون مقدارين

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٤

نهاية أحدهما ملازمة لنهاية الآخر في الحركة و المنفصل أيضا يقابله فيهما جميعا. إذا تقرر هذا فنقول الكم المطلق ينقسم إلى متصل بالمعنى الحقيقي و منفصل يقابله و المتصل إما أن يكون ثابتة الذات قارة الأجزاء أو لا يكون الأول هو المقدار المنقسم إلى ما له امتداد واحد و هو الخط أو ما له امتدادان متقاطعان على القيام و هو السطح و يقال له البسيط أو له امتدادات ثلاثة متقاطعة على القوائم و هو الجسم التعليمي و هو أتم المقادير

لقبوله القسمة إلى جهات ثلاث و يقال له التخين و التخن لأنه حشو ما بين السطوح - و العمق لأنه تخن نازل من فوق و السمك لأنه تخن صاعد من أسفل و قد ترسم المقادير الثلاثة على وجه آخر غير ما خرج من هذا التقسيم فيقال الخط ما يرتسم من حركة النقطة على بسيط و السطح ما يرتسم من حركة الخط خلاف مأخذ امتداده - و الجسم ما يرتسم من حركة السطح ارتفاعا و انحطاطا و ستعلم أنه مجرد تمثيل لا تحقيق فيه أما المتصل الذي لا يكون له قرار الذات فهو الزمان و تحقيق ماهيته و أحكامه موكول إلى مباحث الحركة لشدة تعلقه بها.

فظهر أن أقسام الكم المتصل أربعة الخط و السطح و الجسم و الزمان و منهم من ظن أن المكان قسم خامس و هو باطل بل هو قسم من السطح مع إضافة إلى المحوي - عند القائلين بكونه سطحا و سيأتي تحقيق القول بالمكان و أما الكم المنفصل فهو العدد أما كميته فلكونه لذاته معدودا بواحد فيه أو ليس فيه و أما أنه ينفصل فإنه ليس بين أجزائه حد مشترك فإنك إذا قسمت الخمسة إلى ثلاثة و اثنين لم تجد حدا مشتركا بينهما و إلا فإن كان منها بقي الباقي أربعة و إن كان من الخارج كانت الجملة ستة و من المحال أن يوجد كم منفصل غير العدد لأن المنفصل قوامه من المتفرقات - و قوامها من المفردات و هي آحاد و كل منها واحد فالواحد إما أن يؤخذ من حيث هو واحد أو يؤخذ بأنه شيء معين كإنسان أو مثلث و ذلك الشيء واحد - و الوحدة نفس الواحد بما هو واحد لا بما هو ذو خصوصية إذ لا مدخل للخصوصية في كون الشيء واحدا كما علمت في باب الوجود فلا شك في أن الوحدات

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الأربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٥

هي التي يتألف منها لذاتها كمية منفصلة و كم منفصل لذاته يكون ما عدده مبلغ تلك الوحدات دون الحوامل للوحدات فهي حاملة للعدد بالعرض كما أن كلا منها واحد بالعرض.

و بهذا التحقيق ظهر فساد مذهب من ظن أن القول كم منفصل و جعل الكم المنفصل جنسا لنوعين قار و هو العدد و غير قار و هو القول و استدل عليه بأن القول مركب من المقاطع و يتقدر بها و هي أجزاء له و كل ذي جزء مقدر بجزئه و هو كم و الخطأ في الكبرى فإنه ليس كلما يتقدر بجزء فهو كم بالذات بل يجوز أن يكون له حقيقة أخرى و قد عرض له إما مقدار أو عدد و صار له بسببه جزء يعده و المقطع الحرفي ليس جزئيه إلا لأنه واحد و القول كثير فله خاصية الكمية لكونه ذا كثرة لا لذاته كما أن للمقطع خاصة الوحدة لكونه ذا وحدة فإذا لم يلتفت إلى العارض - و التفت إلى ذاته من حيث هي كيفية محسوسة لم يكن القول كمية و لا كما و لا المقطع وحده و لا واحدا و إلا لكانت الأشياء كما بالذات و واحدا بالذات و أما الثقل و الخفة فالذي غرهم في تكمهما أمران أحدهما قبولهما للمساواة و عدمها و الثاني قبولهما للتجزية و كلاهما باطل أما الأول فلأن المساواة في الكم هو أن يفرض لشيء حد ينطبق على حد شيء آخر و ينطبق كليته على كلية الآخر فإن انطبق الحدان الآخران قيل له إنه مساو - و إن لم ينطبق قيل لأحدهما إنه زائد و للآخر أنه ناقص و هذا مما يستحيل ثبوته فيهما لأن الثقل قوة محركة إما طبيعية و هي من باب الجوهر أو الميل الذي هو العلة القريبة للحركة و هو من باب الكيف و محال أن يقع شيء تحت مقولتين بالذات بل لا بد أن يكون أحدهما بالعرض و أما الثاني فلأن قبول التجزئة كما يقال ثقل هذا نصف ثقل ذاك

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الأربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٦

هو بسبب أن حركته في الزمان في نصف المسافة التي للآخر أو في المسافة في نصف الزمان للآخر فعروض هذا المعنى بسبب تأثيره في الحركة المتعلقة بالمسافة والزمان

فصل (٤) في تقسيم آخر للكم وهو التقسيم إلى ذي وضع و غير ذي وضع

الوضع يطلق على معان ثلاثة

أحدها كون الشيء مشاراً إليه بالحس

بالفعل أو بالقوة والإشارة تعيين الجهة التي يخص الشيء من جهات هذا العالم كما في الشفاء و بهذا المعنى للنقطة وضع و ليس للوحدة وضع -

و ثانيها معنى أخص من هذا المعنى

و هو كون الكم بحيث يمكن أن يشار إليه في جهة

و ثالثها معنى يشتمل عليه مقولة من التسع

و هو حالة الجسم من جهة نسبة أجزائه بعضها إلى بعض في جهاته و هذا الوضع لا يقال بالحقيقة الأعلى الجواهر المادية و المعنى الثاني فصل الكم و كأنه منقول من المعنى الثالث الذي هو جزء المقولة فكأنه لما كان وضع الجسم الذي هو من باب الجوهر إنما هو بسبب حال أجزائه بعضها عند بعض ظن أن ذلك أمر يقارنه إذا اعتبر في الجسم الذي من باب الكم و أن لم يكن الجسم الذي من باب الكم و لا السطح و لا الخط يجب له بذاته الجهات و المكان - لكن الجسم التعليمي له أجزاء بالقوة لها اتصال و ترصيف و إلى كل منها إذا فرض موجوداً إشارة أنه أين هو من صاحبه و كذا السطح و الخط فهذا المعنى كالمناسب

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٧

لذلك المعنى فسمي باسمه

و إذا علمت ذلك فنقول الكم إما أن يكون ذا وضع أو لا يكون و الكم ذو الوضع ثلاثة الخط و السطح و الجسم و الباقي غير ذي وضع أما الزمان فظاهر لعدم الاقتران بين أجزائه و أما العدد فلعدم اتصال أجزائه مع أنها ثابتة و توهم بعضهم أن الجسم المتحرك لا وضع له.

و الشيخ أبطل هذا الوهم بأنه إن عني الوضع الذي من المقولة فربما أوهم صدقا و ليس كذلك فإنه فرق بين أن لا يكون للشيء وضع و بين أن لا يكون له وضع قار - كما أنه فرق بين أن لا يكون في أين و بين أن لا يكون في أين قار و كما أن الحركة عند التحقيق لا تخرج الجسم عن أن يكون الجسم ذا أين و إن أخرجه عن أن يكون ذا أين قار فكذلك حال الحركة بالقياس إلى الوضع لكن الوضع الذي يعتبر في مقولة الكم غير ذلك الوضع و هو غير متغير و لا متبدل في الجسم المتحرك و إن تحرك - فإن الحركة لا يعدم شيئاً من شرائط هذا الوضع الذي هو في الكم فإن نسبة أجزائه بعضها إلى بعض بالقرب و البعد محفوظة و إن كانت الحركة لا تحفظ نسبة الأجزاء - إلى جهات العالم و من عادة القوم أن يذكروا هاهنا معاني الطول و هي خمسة و معاني العرض و هي أربعة و معاني العمق و هي أيضاً أربعة لكن أخرنا ذكرها إلى مباحث الجسم الطبيعي لدقيقة و هي أنه إن أريد بالطول و العرض و العمق المعنى الأول أعني نفس الامتدادات فهي كم بالذات من نوع الخط و راجعة إليه و إن أريد سائر المعاني - فهي كميات مأخوذة مع إضافات لا تخرج مفهوماتها

عن أمور طبيعية فذكرها في مباحث الجسم الطبيعي أولى

فصل (٥) فيما ليس بكم بالذات وإنما هو بالعرض وهو على وجوه أربعة

فأولها أن يكون أمرا موجودا في الكم

مثل الأمور التي عددها

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٨

و ثانيها أن يكون الكم موجودا فيه

و ذلك إما متصل أو منفصل فالمنفصل يوجد في المفارقات و الماديات و أما المتصل فيوجد في الماديات و هو ظاهر و في المفارقات عند من ذهب إلى أن في الوجود عالما مقداريا غير هذا العالم المادي و قد يكون المتصل بالذات متصلا و منفصلا بالعرض كالزمان مثلا متصل بالذات و بالعرض من جهة المسافة و منفصل بالعرض بحسب انقسامه إلى الساعات و الأيام إذ لا امتناع في كون الشيء تحت مقولة ثم يعرض له شيء من تلك المقولة و أما المتصل الغير القار بالعرض فهو كالحركة و لذلك يوصف بأوصاف المقادير من الطول و القصر و المساواة و اللامساواة من جهة الزمان و قد يوصف بهذه الأوصاف من جهة المسافة أيضا

و ثالثها ما يكون كميته بسبب حلوله في المحل الذي حصل له الكم

كما يقال للسواد إنه طويل و عريض و عميق بسبب حصوله في محل في الكم

و رابعها أن يكون قوى مؤثرة في أشياء يقال عليها الكم بالذات

فيقال لتلك القوى إنها متناهية أو غير متناهية لا لأن نفس القوة كذلك بل باعتبار اختلاف ظهور الفعل عنها شدة أو عدة أو مدة- و الفرق بين اعتبار الشدة و المدة من وجهين أحدهما أن الزيادة في الشدة يوجب النقصان في المدة و الثاني أن الذي يتفاوت فيه القوى بحسب الشدة [المدة] ربما لا يتفاوت فيه بحسب المدة [الشدة].

إذا وقع الفراغ عن تعريف الكم و أقسامه الأولية فلنشرع في ذكر أحكامه و أقسامه

فصل (٦) في أن الكم لا ضد له أما المنفصل فلوجوه ثلاثة

أحدها أن كل عدد يقوم الأكثر منه و يتقوم بالأقل منه

و الضدان لا يقوم أحدهما الآخر و لا يتقوم به

و ثانيها أنه لا يوجد بين عددين غاية الخلاف

لكونهما غير واقف إلى حد لا يقبل الزيادة و الاثنان و إن كان في غاية الخلاف بالقياس إلى الألف مثلا لا يكون ضده لأن التضاد من الجانبين

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٩

لكن الألف ليس ضدا له لأنه ليس في غاية البعد منه

و ثالثها أن اتحاد الموضوع القريب و التعاقب عليه شرط المتضادين

و ليس العدد كذلك فإن الثلاثة مثلا عبارة عن جميع وحدات يتقوم صورتها باجتماع وحدة و وحدة و وحدة و يستحيل

عروض الاثنينية لموضوعها القريب بعينه إلا بأن يفسد وإلا فموضوع الاثنينية غير موضوع الثلاثة و أما المتصل فليس المقادير الثلاثة الأجسام و السطوح و الخطوط بعضها مضادا للآخر لثلاثة براهين أيضا- الأول أن كلا منها إما قابل للآخر أو مقبول له و المقبول لا بد و أن يتقوم بالقابل فكيف يكون ضده و الثاني أنه لا يوجد مقدار في غاية البعد عن الآخر و الثالث أن موضوعها القريب ليس متحدا.

شكوك وإزالات-

س الزوجية كمية مضادة للفردية

ج إنها ليست من باب الكم لعدم قبولها المساواة و القسمة لذاتها بل هي من باب الكيف و لأن الفردية ليست وجودية لأنها عدم الزوجية فالتقابل بينهما بالعدم و الملكة دون التضاد و لأن موضوعهما ليس واحدا.

س الاستقامة و الانحناء كميتان متضادتان-

ج هما من باب الكيف و أيضا هما فصلان لا يمكن تبدل أحدهما بالآخر إلا بتبدل المحل فالخط المستقيم لا يصير منحنيا- إلا بانعدام السطح الذي فيه فلا يمكن تعاقبهما على محل و هو شرط التضاد.

س المتصل ضد المنفصل مع أنهما كميتان

ج هما فصلان لنوعي الكم و الفصل لا يندرج تحت جنسه بحسب الماهية و إن اندرج تحته بالوجود فلا يكون من أقسام الكم بالذات بل بالعرض على أن أحدهما عديمي إذ الانفصال عدم الاتصال عما

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٠

من شأنه أن يكون متصلا بحسب نوعه كالعناصر أو بحسب جنسه كالفلك.

س المساوي ضد المتفاوت و العظيم ضد الصغير و الكثير ضد القليل و كلها كميات

ج هذه إضافات في كميات لا أنها في أنفسها و ماهياتها كميات على أن أمثال هذه المعاني يستحيل عروض التضاد لها كما ستعلم في باب المضاف.

س المكان الأعلى ضد المكان الأسفل

ج موضوعهما القريب ليس واحدا بالذات و امتنع تعاقبهما على موضوع واحد نعم الحصول في الفوق و الحصول في السفلى متضادان و هما غير المكان و أيضا المكان بما هو مكان ليس بفوق و لا تحت- لأنهما إضافيان بالفوق بالقياس إلى ما تحته و كذلك العكس و الأمور الإضافية- امتنع عروض التضاد لها

فصل (٧) في أن الكم لا يقبل الاشتداد و التضعف

قالوا الفرق بينهما و بين الازدياد و النقص بوجهين-

أحدهما أن الزائد على شيء في الكم يمكن أن يشار فيه إلى مثل و زيادة

و الأشد من آخر في الكيف لا يمكن فيه ذلك.

أقول و لأحد أن يجيب عنه بأن هذا الفرق بحسب اختلاف الموضوع لهما- في حد نفسه فإن الكم في حد نفسه بحيث يمكن أن يشار فيه إلى شيء و شيء آخر- متباين له في الوجود أو الوضع و الكيف ليس كذلك ثم إن فضيلة شيء على آخر من نوعه أو جنسه يجب أن يكون بشيء من بابه فلا جرم كان الأفضل في الكم بأمر متميز في الإشارة بخلاف

الأفضل في الكيف لا لأن طبيعة الاشتداد اقتضت ذلك

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢١

الثاني أن التفاوت بالأزيد و الأنقص غير منحصر

و التفاوت بالأشد و الأضعف منحصر بين طرفي الضدين فإن بينهما غاية الخلاف. أقول و هذا أيضا فرق بحسب معنى خارج عن الازدياد و الاشتداد بل هذا أمر راجع إلى ماهية الكم و ماهية الكيف حيث لا ينتهي أحدهما في الزيادة و ينتهي الآخر فيها مع أن الزيادة معنى واحد فيهما جميعا اللهم إلا أن يصطلح بأن يسمى أحد الاستكمالين بالزيادة و ثانيهما بالاشتداد فيكون مجرد تسمية. قال الشيخ في الشفاء بعد أن حقق أن لا تضاد في الكم و كذلك ليس في طبيعته تضعف و اشتداد و لا تنقص و ازدياد لست أعني بهذا أن كمية لا تكون أزيد من كمية أو أنقص - و لكن أعني أن كمية لا تكون أشد و أزيد في أنها كمية من أخرى مشاركة لها و لا خط أشد خطية أي أشد في أنها ذو بعد واحد من آخر و إن كان من حيث المعنى الإضافي أزيد من آخر أعني الطول الإضافي.

أقول و هكذا حال الكيف عندهم فإن سوادا لا يكون أشد في أنه سواد من آخر لكن وجود هذا أشد و أكمل من وجود ذاك كما أن وجود الخط الطويل أكمل من القصير فالتفاوت في مثل هذه الأمور يرجع إلى اختلاف حال الوجودات دون الماهيات عندنا و الوجود بذاته أشد و أضعف و أتم و أنقص كما علمت. و اعلم أن هذين الوضعين أعني نفى التضاد و نفى الاشتداد و التنقص ليسا من خواص الكم فإن الجوهر لا ضد له و كذا بعض أقسام الكيف لا ضد له و إنما الخواص المساوية للكم هي الثلاثة المذكورة أولا و خاصة رابعة و هي قبول النهاية و اللانهاية فلتكلم فيه

فصل (٨) في إثبات تناهي الأبعاد و عليه براهين كثيرة نذكر منها ثلاثة

الأول و هو المعول عليه أنه لو وجد أبعاد غير متناهية لاستحال وجود حركة مستديرة

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٢

لأننا إذا فرضنا خطا غير متناه و كرة خرج من مركزها خط مواز لذلك الخط فإذا تحركت الكرة حتى صار الخط الخارج من مركزها مسامتا للخط الغير المتناهي بعد أن كان موازيا له فلا بد في الخط الغير المتناهي من نقطة - يقع عليها أول المسامطة و لكن ذلك محال لأنه لا نقطة في ذلك الخط إلا و فوقها نقطة أخرى - و أمكن وقوع الخط الخارج من مركز الكرة بحيث يكون مسامتا لكل واحدة من تلك النقطة و المسامطة مع النقطة فوقانية أبدا قبل المسامطة مع التحتانية لأن المسامطة مع كل منها بميل خاص عن موازاة ذلك الخط و بحصول زاوية خاصة بين الخطين أو بين الخط الموازي و موضع ميله لأنهما كالمبادلتين المتساويتين دائما - فلا جرم لا يحصل مسامطة مع نقطة بزواوية إلا و يحصل قبلها مسامطة أخرى بزواوية أقل مع نقطة فوق تلك النقطة و هكذا و لما كانت النقطة غير متناهية استحال أن يكون هناك نقطة هي أول نقط المسامطة لكن التالي محال لأن هذه الحركة حادثة و لها ابتداء بمعنى الطرف و إن لم يكن لحدوثها أول أن حدثت فيه و ليس لتلك النقطة المتصلة أول لا بمعنى الطرف و لا بمعنى آخر.

شك و اندفاع

و من أكابر المتأخرين من قدح في هذا البرهان بأن حدوث زاوية المسامطة كسائر الزوايا من الأمور التي لا أول لزمان حدوثها فلا يجب أن يكون لنقط المسامطة نقطة أولى كما لا يكون للزوايا التي بإزائها زاوية أولى إذ كل زاوية حدثت بالحركة في أن فزاوية أخرى أقل منها قد حدثت في أن قبل أن حدوثها فلا زاوية توصف بالأولية المطلقة عند ميلان أحد الضلعين عن الآخر بعد انطباقهما فكذا لا نقطة في الخط الغير المتناهي هي توصف بأنها أولى نقط المسامطة. أقول هب أن الزاوية ليس لها أول أن يكون حدوثها بالحركة فيه لكن لها حد أول يبتدئ وجودها منه متعاضدا إلى مبلغ كسائر الأمور التدريجية الحصول

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٣

فعلى وزان حدوث زاوية المسامطة تدريجا كأن يجب حدوث خط من سيلان نقطة التقاطع الذي بين الخط الغير المتناهي و الخط المسامت له على وجه يكون لتلك النقطة السيالة بل للخط الذي حدثت من سيلانها بل لذلك الخط المفروض أولا- أول بمعنى طرف يبتدئ منه النقط المتصلة السمتية و إن لم يكن لها أو للخط المذكور أول بالمعنى الآخر يعني أول الأناث الذي حدثت فيه الزاوية و ما بإزائها من النقط.

البرهان الثاني لو كانت الأبعاد غير متناهية لجاز أن يخرج امتدادان عن مبدأ واحد

كساقبي مثلث لا يزال البعد بتزايد إلى غير النهاية فيكون مقدار الانفراج بين الخطين على نسبة مقدار الامتدادين الغير المتناهي فيكون غير متناه أيضا مع كونه محصورا بين حاصرين هذا خلف و هذا هو المسمى بالبرهان السلمي و قد شرحناه و ما يرد عليه و ما يمكن الذب عنه في شرح الهداية.

البرهان الثالث نفرض بعد أ ب غير متناه إما من الطرفين أو من طرف واحد

و على التقديرين يفرض فيه حد و ليكن ج و حد آخر و هو د فيكون خط ج ب الغير المتناهي في طرف ب أزيد من خط د ب الغير المتناهي في طرف ب بمقدار ج د- فإذا فرضنا انطباق نقطة د على نقطة ج فلا يخلو إما أن يمتدأ معا إلى غير النهاية فيكون الزائد مثل الناقص و هو ممتنع أو يقصر د ب عنه فيكون متناهي في طرف ب منقطعاً- و ج ب أزيد من د ب بمقدار ج د المتناهي فيكون المجموع أعني ج ب متناهي في جهة ب- و هو المطلوب قال الإمام الرازي و على هذا البرهان شك يعسر حله و هو أن تطبيق نهاية الناقص على نهاية الزائد إنما يمكن على أحد وجوه ثلاثة- أحدها أن يتحرك الناقص بكليته إلى جهة نهايته حتى ينطبق نهايته على نهايته أو يتحرك الزائد بكليته عن جهة نهايته حتى ينطبق النهايتان.

و ثانيها أن يزداد الناقص أو ينتقص الزائد حتى يتطابقا في الطرف.

و ثالثها أن يكونا بحالهما و لكنه يوضع نهاية الزائد على نهاية الناقص- و حينئذ يظهر في الزائد فضلة لا ينطبق بها على الناقص بل يبقى متجافية عنه

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٤

ثم لا يزال يزيد تلك الفضلة من جانب إلى جانب حتى يظهر من الطرف الآخر- ثم قال فادعاء التطبيق على الوجه الأول

مصادرة على المطلوب لأن الحركة غير ممكن فيما لا يخلو مكان عنه و بالوجه الثاني لا يلزم منه محال إذ كل منهما بعد النمو و الذبول صار مساويا للآخر و بالوجه الثالث للخصم أن يقول يبقى تلك الفضلة أبدا مع لا تناهي الخطين و لا ينتهي إلى حيث تزول فإذا هما يمتدان إلى غير النهاية - و لا يلزم جعل الناقص مساويا للزائد لأن تلك الفضلة موجودة أبدا.

أقول ادعاء التطبيق على كل واحد من الأنحاء الثلاثة جائز مفيد للمطلوب.

أما على الوجه الأول فحركة الكل أي الزائد و إن سلم أنه غير ممكن - لكن حركة الجزء أي الناقص ممكن فإنه يتصور فيه أن يخلو مكانا و يشغل غيره.

و أما على الوجه الثاني فلأن التطبيق و إن حصل بعد ازدياد الناقص و انتقاص الزائد لكن يفيد ما هو المطلوب لأن تلك الزيادة أو ذلك النقصان بقدر خط ج د فالخط الزائد إذا صار بعد نقصان مقدار متناه عنه مساويا للمتناهي كان متناهيًا لا محالة.

و أما على الثالث فتلك الفضلة المتجافية قدر متناه لأنه بما يقتضيه مقدار ج د - فإذا حصل التطبيق فيما سواها مع المتناهي فعلم تناهي البعد المشتمل على تلك الفضلة و على ما سواها و هاهنا براهين كثيرة تركنا ذكرها مخافة الإطراب و الإسهاب لأن المطلوب حاصل بما دونها

إشكالات و انحالات فلنذكرها على صورة السؤال و الجواب

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٥

س الإنسان كما يشهد فطرته بامتناع حصول الجسم الواحد في مكانين في زمان واحد كذلك يشهد بامتناع انتهاء هذه الأبعاد إلى مقطع لا يتجاوزه فالحكم بامتناعه يوجب الشك في الأوليات.

ج لعل ذلك من بديهة الوهم و لا نسلم أن الجزم به كالجزم في الأوليات مثل الواحد نصف الاثنين بل لا نسلم أن الوهم جازم بوجود البعد الغير المتناهي غاية الأمر أنه يصعب عليه تصور بعد لا يكون بعده بعد آخر.

س أن إنسانا لو وقف على طرف العالم فهل يمكن له مد اليد إلى خارج العالم أو لا يمكن فعلى الأول يلزم الخلف لوجود البعد الخارج عن جميع الأبعاد و كذا على الثاني لوجود جسم يمنع عن ذلك.

ج لا يمكنه ذلك لا لوجود مانع مقداري عنه بل لفقد الشرط بل الشروط - فإن الجسم الذي هناك ليس في طبعه حركة مكانية بل حالة هناك يشبه بأحوال ما في عالم المثال.

س إن العالم لو كان متناهيًا فلو قدرنا أزيد مما هو عليه الآن بذراع كان حيزه أوسع من هذا الحيز و لو قدرنا أزيد بذراعين لكان أوسع من ذلك الأوسع - و هكذا فخارج العالم أحياز وجودية هي مقادير أو ذوات مقادير.

ج هذا مجرد أمر وهمي لا حاصل له في الوجود فلا عبرة به.

س الجسمية حقيقة واحدة كلية غير مقتضية لانحصار نوعها في شخصها كما دل عليه الحس و البرهان جميعا و جزئيات كل كلي غير متناهية عند العقل بحسب القوة و ليس بعضها أولى بالإمكان عن بعض لأن الإمكان إذا كان من لوازم الماهية كان مشتركا بين أفرادها جميعا فإذن في الوجود إمكان أجسام غير متناهية فهي موجودة لأن الواجب عام الفيض و الاستحقاق ثابت فيجب الإيجاد.

ج الموانع قد تكون في خارج الماهية لعدم انحصار المانع فيما هو من لوازم ماهية الشيء فإن الجسمية وإن لم يمنع من الكثرة فالوجود الصوري الذي للفلك

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٦

يمنع أن يكون نوعه إلا في شخص واحد.

س هذا يشكل في جزء من أجزاء الفلك حيث طبيعته الكل فكانت الكثرة والكلية أمراً حاصلاً للطبيعة بالقياس إلى أجزائه فيحتمل عدم التناهي في أعداد ما يشارك تلك الأجزاء.

ج إن جزء الفلك ليس بفلك إذ الفلك بما هو فلك لا جزء له مقدارياً لأنه حيوان يتقوم مادته بصورة نفسانية لا جزء لها بحسب المقدار وطبيعة الفلك ونفسه شيء واحد في الوجود متغاير بالاعتبار إنما الأجزاء المقدارية لجسمية الفلك بالمعنى الذي هي مادة لا بالمعنى الذي هي جنس.

س الزمان لا بداية له ولا نهاية له فلا يكون للكون بداية ونهاية فيجب في الوجود مادة غير متناهية.

ج لا تناهي الكون غير مستلزم للاتناهي المادة لأن الجسم الواحد قد يتشكل بأشكال مختلفة في أحوال مختلفة.

س المقدار كالعدد في قبوله للاتناهي والعظم كالصغر في قبوله للاتناهي.

ج هذا مجرد قياس بلا جامع فلا يفيد وهما فضلاً عن الظن فكيف باليقين - س كما أن الجسم لا ينتهي في الصغر إلى ما لا يوجد أصغر منه وإن كانت الانقسامات كلها لا يخرج إلى الفعل كذلك لا ينتهي إلى العظم إلى ما لا أعظم منه وامتنع وجود عظم غير متناه.

ج ذكر الشيخ أن هذا يصح من وجه ولا يصح من وجه أما الصحة فلك أن تقسم ذراعاً إلى نصفين ثم تنصف النصف و تضم نصفه إلى النصف الآخر ثم تضم نصف الربع إلى ذلك المجموع وهكذا فلا تزال تنقص من هذا الناقص و تزيد في ذلك الزائد إلى غير النهاية و مع ذلك لم يبلغ الزيادات بالجسم المزيد عليه من حد نصف الذراع إلى حد كله و أما عدم الصحة فإن وصول الجسم إلى كل حد في العظم و النمو مستحيل

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٧

و ليس ذلك كالصغر لعدم الحاجة هاهنا إلى شيء خارج عن المقوم كما هناك فإن التزايد إما بسبب مادة تضم أو بالتخلخل و على التقديرين يوجب مواد جسمية غير متناه أو حيز غير متناه و كلاهما محال.

س الحركة القطعية موجودة عند الحكماء و حركة الفلك غير متناهية عندهم - و كل جزء من أجزاء الحركة و هي متباينة الوجود يوجد مع جسم و مسافة ففي الوجود أجسام بلا نهاية.

ج هذا غير مستحيل عندهم إنما المحال وجود أجسام غير متناهية في زمان واحد لا في أزمنة غير متناهية.

س ما ذكرتموه من الحجة منقوض بالنفوس المفارقة من الأبدان من زمان الطوفان إلى ما مضى فإنها أقل من المفارقة من هذا الزمان إلى ما مضى مع كونها غير متناهية.

ج قالت الحكماء كل كثرة لها اجتماع و ترتيب في الطبع أو في الوضع - فدخل اللانهاية فيها ممتنع و أما إذا لم يجتمع كالحركات و الأزمنة أو اجتمعت و لا ترتيب لا في الطبع كالعلل و المعلولات و لا في الوضع كالمقادير فاحتمال الزيادة

و النقصان فيها لا يوجب التناهي و قد أشكل على كثير من أهل النظر هذا إذا لم يشترطوا في احتمالهما للتناهي إمكان المطابقة فصار ذلك شبهه عظيمة وقعوا بسببها في ضلالات كثيرة فمنهم من جحد بقاء النفوس بعد بوار البدن إذ لو بقيت لكان عددها كعدد الأبدان غير متناهية إذ لا أولوية للبعض بالبقاء و لبطلان التناسخ و منهم من ذهب إلى حقيقة التناسخ ليكون أعداد النفوس متناهية و هي متكررة الرجوع إلى أبدانها و منهم من ذهب إلى وجوب تناهي الحركات و الانفعالات و إن أوجب التعطيل في صنع الله

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٨

وجوده حذرا من ارتكاب القول بعدد غير متناه في الأشخاص أو في الأبعاض بوجه من الوجوه كل ذلك لأجل اعتقادهم بأن كل ما يحتمل الزائد و الناقص فهو متناه.

و الذي يكشف عن هذه الشبهة أن العلم بأن كل ما يحتمل الزيادة و النقصان - يكون متناهيًا إما من البديهيات أو من النظريات و الأول باطل و إلا لم يقع الاختلافات فيه بين العقلاء لكنهم اختلفوا فمنهم من زعم أن أجزاء الجسم غير متناهية بالفعل - و منهم من ركب العالم من أجزاء كرية الشكل لا نهاية لها و منهم من قال بالخليط الغير المتناهي و المسلمون اتفقوا على أن معلومات الله و مقدوراته لا نهاية لها و منهم من ذهب إلى أن أنواع الأكوان المقدورة لله تعالى غير متناهية و الجزء الذي لا يتجزى عندهم يمكن حصوله في أحياء غير متناهية على البدل و منهم من أثبت في العدم ذواتا غير متناهية و كذلك يعلم بالبديهة أن مراتب العدد غير متناهية مع أن الألوف الغير المتناهية أكثر من الأحاد الغير المتناهية بألف مرة و الحركات المستقبلية سيما حركات أهل الجنة غير متناهية مع أن كلا من هذه الأمور قابل للزيادة و النقصان.

و إذا ضممنا هذه المعتقدات مع اعتقاد الفلاسفة صار إجماعا منعقدا بين العقلاء - على أن الغير المتناهي مما يجوز أن يقبل الزيادة و النقصان فكيف يكون العلم بامتناعه بديهيا فإذن هذه القضية لا يمكن الجزم بها إلا بالبرهان و ذلك البرهان لا يتقرر إلا فيما يحتمل التطبيق.

و بيانه أن الموجب للتناهي هو أنه يجب انتهاء الناقص إلى حد لا يبقى منه شيء و يبقى من الزائد بعده و هذا إنما يجب أن لو تعذر وقوع جزء من الجملة الناقصة في مقابلة جزءين من الزائدة و إلا لم يجب انتهاء الناقص إلى حد لا يكون بعده للزائد شيء بإزائه منه و ذلك فيما يحتمل الانطباق و فيما يمتنع انطباق جزءين من إحدى الجملتين على جزء واحد من الأخرى كاستحالة وقوع جسمين في حيز

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٩

واحد و كاستحالة وقوع علة و معلول في مرتبة إحداهما فلا جرم إذا شغل جزء من إحداهما بمماساة جزء من الأخرى استحال اشتغاله بعينه بمماساة جزء آخر من الأخرى - و هذا يوجب انتهاء الناقصة إلى حد ينقطع و يبقى بعده من الزائدة شيء هو مقدار الزائدة أو عدده و أما الأمور التي لا انطباق بينها لا بالطبع و لا بالوضع بل بالجعل فقط - فكلما يجعل الوهم من إحدى الجملتين بقوته الخيالية بإزاء الآخر من الأخرى يكون عددا متناهيًا لكن يمكن أن يبقى من الجملتين ما لا يقوي الوهم بل العقل على استحضاره لأن عقولنا و نحن في هذه الدار لا تقدر على أفعال و انفعالات

غير متناهية - فلم يظهر الخلف في البواقي إلا بهذا الشرط و أما الشرط الآخر و هو الحضور فستعلم.

هداية في تحقيق معنى اللانهاية في الحوادث الماضية و المستقبلية

أما الماضية فإذا قلنا للأشخاص الماضية إنها غير متناهية فمعناه إما أن كل واحد من الأشخاص غير متناه و هو ظاهر البطلان و إما أن الجملة حال الاجتماع لها عدد غير متناه فهذا إما بحسب الوجود أو بحسب الوهم و كل منها إما بمعنى العدول أو بمعنى السلب فهذه أربعة أقسام.

أما الأول

و هو كقولنا جملة الأشخاص الماضية أمر له عدد غير متناه فباطل - لأن موضوع القضية أمر غير موجود و ممتنع الوجود لأن جملة أشياء كل منها لا يثبت مع الآخر استحالة وجودها كيف و الجملة بما هي جملة لو كانت موجودة فاما في الماضي أو في الحال أو في الاستقبال أو في كل الأزمنة و كل هذه الأقسام الأربعة باطلة ضرورة.

و كذا القسم الثاني

و هو أن جملة الأشخاص الماضية أمر له عدد غير متناه في الذهن باطل لأن الذهن لا يقوى على استحضار عدد لا نهاية له بالفعل فثبت أن موضوع هذه القضية ممتنع الوجود في الأذهان و في الأعيان فيستحيل أن يحكم عليه بالأحكام الثبوتية و العدولية إلا بأن يقال إن المتهم من جملة الأشخاص الماضية بحيث

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٣٠

أي عدد أخذته يجد غيره حاصلًا فيه و لا ينتهي في الحساب إلى واحد غير مسبوق بغيره.

و أما القسم الثالث

فهو صحيح إذ الحكم السلبي لا يقتضي وجود الموضوع - فصح الحكم بأن ليست الأشخاص متناهية إلى حد و يكفي لصحة هذا الحكم أن يتصور الأشخاص بوجه إجمالي

و كذا القسم الرابع

و هو الحكم السلبي بحسب الوهم بأن يقال كل ما يتوهمه العقل من الأشخاص الماضية فليست مما لا يمكن الزيادة عليه و أما النظر في الحوادث المستقبلية فاما في وجودها و إما في تنهايتها و لا تنهايتها - و أما النظر في وجودها فلا شك أنها ليست بموجودة بالفعل بل بالقوة بمعنى أن كل واحد ممكن الوجود في وقت لا أن الجميع يمكن وجودها في وقت و أما النظر في تنهايتها و عدم تنهايتها.

فاعلم أنه يصح أن يقال الأشياء التي في طريق التكون أنها أبدا متناهية بالفعل - و يصح أن يقال إنها أبدا متناهية بالقوة و يصح أن يقال إنها أبدا غير متناهية لا بالفعل و لا بالقوة كل بمعنى آخر أما أنها متناهية بالفعل أبدا فلأنها أبدا واصلة إلى حد معين - فهي متناهية إليه في ذلك الوقت و أما أنها متناهية بالقوة أبدا فذلك بالقياس إلى النهايات الأخرى التي هي بالقوة و أما أنها غير متناهية لا بالفعل و لا بالقوة فبالقياس إلى النهاية الأخيرة التي لا يكون بعدها شيء آخر و الحاصل أنها بالقياس إلى النهاية الحاضرة متناهية بالفعل و بالقياس إلى ما يستحضر متناهية بالقوة و بالقياس إلى النهاية التي لا يكون بعدها شيء آخر غير متناهية لا بالفعل و لا بالقوة

فصل (٩) في بقية أحكام اللانهاية و هي خمسة أبحاث

البحث الأول أن اللانهاية قد يعنى بها نفس هذا المفهوم و قد يعنى بها شيء آخر
موصوف باللانهاية كما أن العدد قد يعنى به نفس العدد و قد يعنى ذو العدد

الحكمة المتعالية فى الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٣١

ثم إن بعض الأوائل جعل طبيعة اللانهاية مبدأ العالم و هو باطل أما أولا فلأنها معنى عدمي لا تحصل له و أما ثانيا فلأن اللانهاية لا يخلو إما أن يكون منقسما أو لا يكون فإن كان منقسما وجب أن يكون جزؤه مساويا لكله لأنه ليس هناك طبيعة أخرى وراء ذلك المفهوم فيجب أن يكون كل واحد من أجزائه غير متناهية أيضا و هو محال و إن لم يكن قابلا للقسمة فهو غير متناه على المعنى السلب لا على معنى العدول الذي هو المراد.

البحث الثاني فى أن الموصوف باللانهاية لا بد أن يكون مادة لا صورة

لأن الموصوف به طبيعة عدمية و ذلك لأنه لا ينتهي إلى بطلان القوة عنه بل القوة محفوظة فيه دائما و هي متعلقة بالمادة لا بالصورة التي هي بالفعل بل هي جهة الفعلية فخرج من هذا أن ما لا نهاية له لا يكون كلا و جملة لأن الكل صورة تامة أو ذو صورة تامة - و اللانهاية طبيعة عدمية و من هاهنا يتحدثس اللبيب أن هذا العالم طبيعة عدمية حادثة الوجود لا تامة له في نفسه إلا بعالم آخر و هو صورته التامة و فعليته التي لا قوة لها.

البحث الثالث أن الجسم الذي لا نهاية له يستحيل أن يتحرك

لأنه إما أن يكون غير متناهي الجهات كلها فذلك ظاهر إذ لم يوجد لحركته مكان و لم يخل عنه مكان أو يكون متناهي في بعضها فذلك إما بمقتضى طبيعته أو بقسر قاصر فالأول محال إذ الطبيعة الواحدة يتساوى فعلها من كل الجوانب و الثاني لا يخلو إما أن إفادة القاصر ذلك الحد بأن قطعه أو جعله محدودا من غير قطع كما يجعل المتناهي صغيرا بالتكثيف - و كبيرا بالتلطيف و التسخين فعلى التقديرين فشان ذلك الجسم إما أن يكون غير متناه بمقتضى طبيعته و متناهي بالقاصر و سيأتي بطلانه في البحث الرابع ثم على تقدير صحته إذا فرضنا حركة الجسم المحدود من جانب دون جانب إلى الجهة الفارغة عنه فلا يخلو إما أن يخلى من الجهة المقابلة أو لا يخلى فعلى الثاني لم ينتقل إليه بل ازداد حجما من هذا الجانب و إن أخلى فالجهة الغير المتناهية ثم هذه الحركة ليست

الحكمة المتعالية فى الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٣٢

طبيعية لأن مطلوب الطبيعة محدود معين بالضرورة و المحدود لا ينتقل إليه ما لا حد له و إذا لم يكن الحركة طبيعية لم تكن قسرية إذ القسر على خلاف الطبع فحيث لا طبع لا قسر.

البحث الرابع من الحكمة المشرقية أن الجسم الغير المتناهي لا وجود له

فضلا عن أن يكون متحركا أو ساكنا و ذلك لأن العلة القريبة لأحوال الجسم من مقداره و شكله و وضعه و سائر أحواله هي طبيعته السارية فيه و هي قوة جسمانية و كل قوة جسمانية فهي متناهية التأثير و التأثر فلو كان مقدار الجسم غير متناه يلزم صدور فعل غير متناه من القوة الجسمانية و هو محال.

البحث الخامس أن الجسم لو فرض كونه غير متناه لكان فعله و انفعاله واقعا لا في زمان

و ذلك لأنه لو فعل فعلا زمانيا فمفعله إما أن يكون متناهي أو غير متناه - فعلى الأول فمن شأن جزئه أن ينفعل من جزء

من الفاعل فإذا فعل جزء من غير المتناهي في المتناهي أو في جزء منه كانت نسبة ذلك الزمان إلى الزمان الذي يفعل فيه غير المتناهي كنسبة قوة غير المتناهي إلى قوة المتناهي إذ الأجسام كلما كانت أعظم كانت قوتها أقوى و زمان فعلها أقصر فيجب من ذلك أن يكون فعل غير المتناهي لا في زمان و قد فرض في زمان و إن كان ذلك المنفعل غير متناه كانت نسبة انفعال جزء منه إلى انفعال الكل كنسبة الزمانين فيجب أن يقع انفعال كل جزء منه لا في زمان فيكون انفعال الجزء الأصغر أسرع من انفعال الجزء الأكبر

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٣٣

الكائن لا في زمان فيكون الخلف فيه أظهر و أمحل فإذا عرفت ذلك من جهة الفعل - فلك أن تعرف مقابله من جهة الانفعال

فصل (١٠) في أن المقادير هل يمكن تجردها عن المادة و في أحكام أخرى بين الثلاثة

أما الأول فقالوا لا شبهة في أن المقادير المتواردة على الجسم مادية

كما مر فلو فرضنا مقدارا مجردا لكان تجرده إما لماهيته أو للوازم ماهيته أو لأمر عارض - فعلى الأول و الثاني يلزم استغناء هذه المقادير عن المحل لذاتها و هي مفتقره هذا خلف.

أقول و هذا إنما يلزم لو كان المقدار الجسمي طبيعة نوعية غير مشككة - و لا متفاوتة الأفراد في المقدارية و الحكماء جعلوا مراتب الأشد و الأضعف من كيف أنواعا متخالفة مشتركة في الجنس و قد مر أن الاختلاف بالأزيد و الأنقص و الأعظم و الأصغر هو بعينه مثل الاختلاف بالأشد و الأضعف في أنهما بمجرد الكمال و النقص - فإذا لم يكن المقدار طبيعة نوعية بل جنسية لا يلزم اتفاق أفرادها في مقتضى الماهية المشتركة لأنها لا تحصل لها إلا بالفصول و الاقتضاء فرع التحصيل و أما الشق الأخير و هو أن التجرد لأمر عارض فقالوا لا يخلو إما أن يكون أمرا حالا في المقدار أو المقدار حال فيه أو هما حالان في محل آخر فإن كان المقدار حالا فيه فهو إما مفتقر إلى الموضوع أو مستغنى عنه و على أي الوجهين كان المقدار غير مستغن عن الموضوع و إن كان المقدار محلا له فذلك المقدار إن كان مفتقرا إلى الموضوع لذاته امتنع له عروض ما يغنيه عن الموضوع و إن كان غنيا لذاته امتنع له عروض ما يحوجه إليه لأن ما بالذات لا يزول بالغير و إن كانا حالين في محل فالفاسد [فالمطلوب] أظهر.

أقول هذا أيضا موقوف على أن يكون المقدار نوعا محصلا و يكون العارض له عارضا في الوجود و إلا فلاحد أن يختار الشق الثاني و يقول إن حلول ما يحل المقدار ليس حلو لا خارجيا بل بحسب التحليل في الذهن و أن الماهية المقدارية في

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٣٤

ظرف التحليل ماهية ناقصة لا يقتضي شيئا من الغناء و الحاجة إلا بما يتحد معه في الوجود - و يحله عند التحليل كسائر الصور النوعية فإن الجسم بما هو جسم لا يقتضي في ذاته أن يكون حيوانا و لا أن يكون غير حيوان بل كل من الاقتضاءين حصل له بصورة أخرى محصلة للجسمية الطبيعية فهكذا حال التعليمية و ذلك لأن حلول تلك الصور عندنا حلول اتحادي للجسم بما هو جسم.

عقدة و حل عرشي

و لك أن تقول فإذن يلزمك تجويز الخلاء في الخارج لأنه مقدار مجرد.

فاعلم أن الخلاء على تقدير وجوده ليس مجرد مقدار بل مقدار ذو وضع واقع في جهات العالم و المقدار في ذاته لا وضع له بهذا المعنى و قد مر الفرق بين الوضع الذي هو بمعنى المقولة و الذي يوجد في المقادير.

ثم اعلم أن كلما يتصوره الإنسان و له معنى محصل في خياله أو في عقله فيمكن وجوده في الخارج إلا لمانع و المانع إنما هي متحققه في هذا العالم المادي الواقع تحت الجهات القابل للمتضادات و سنقيم البرهان على وجود الصور المفارقة المقدارية في الخارج كما على وجود الصور المفارقة العقلية فيه فإذا تخيلنا الأبعاد الثلاثة من غير أن يلتفت إلى شيء من المادة و أحوالها كان ذلك المتخيل جسماً تعليمياً و لا يوجد في الخيال إلا متناهيها و إذا تخيلنا الجسم المتناهي فقد تخيلنا انقطاعه و نهايته و ذلك هو السطح باعتبار كونه منقسماً في الجهتين لا باعتبار التناهي لكونه عدمياً و العدمي لا يقع تحت مقوله و ذلك السطح باعتبار تجرده عن الأحوال المادية من الألوان و الصقالة و الخشونة و غيرها هو الجسم التعليمي و كذلك الخط التعليمي لكنهما لا يفترقان عن الجسم التعليمي و قد عرفت فيما مضى الفرق بين أن ينظر إلى الشيء لا بشرط أن يكون معه غيره و بين أن ينظر إليه بشرط أن لا يكون معه

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٣٥

غيره فالمقدار ذو الأبعاد الثلاثة يمكنك أن تتخيله بالاعتبارين جميعاً فاما السطح و الخط فلا يمكن تخيلهما إلا بالاعتبار الأول دون الثاني و كذا النقطة.

إذا عرفت هذا فنقول هذه الثلاثة من عوارض الجسم الطبيعي أما بيان عرضية الجسم فمن وجهين أحدهما أنه يزيد و ينقص و الجوهر باق على طبيعة نوعه و ثانيهما أن الجسم البسيط إذا قسم بقسمين كان نصفه مساوياً لكله في الماهية و مخالفاً له في المقدار و لو كان المقدار مقوماً لهما كان الاختلاف فيه اختلافاً في الطبيعة و أما عرضية الثلاثة الباقية فهي فرع وجودها فمن الناس من أنكر كونها وجودية - لكونها عبارة عن نهاية شيء و نهاية الشيء نفاده و فناؤه.

و التحقيق أن لكل من الخط و السطح اعتبارات ثلاثة فالسطح فيه اعتبار أنه نهاية و اعتبار أنه يقبل فرض بعدين على التقاطع القائي و اعتبار أنه يقدر و يمسح و يشكل و يكون أعظم من آخر أو أصغر أو يساويه أما أنه نهاية فليس هو بهذا الاعتبار مقداراً و لا تحت مقولة و لكن لكونه نهاية لشيء هو قابل للأبعاد الثلاثة لزمه من هذه الحيثية أن يكون قابلاً لفرض بعدين فهو بهذا الاعتبار تحت مقولة المضاف و إن [إذا] كان مضافاً لا يكون إلا مقداراً.

و ستعلم الفرق بين المضاف الحقيقي و المشهوري و أما أنه ذو بعدين فليس هو بهذا الاعتبار مقداراً و لا كما بل مقداريته إنما هي باعتبار ما يخالف به سطحاً آخر و لا يمكن أن يخالفه بالمعنى الآخر الوجودي و لا العدمي و لكن من الوجوه كلها عرض أما كونه نهاية فلما مر أنه ليس عدماً بحثاً بل شيئاً هو نهاية فهو من حيث هو نهاية أمر عارض للجسم الطبيعي المتناهي لأنه موجود فيه لا كجزء منه و لا يقوم دونه و

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٣٦

أما كونه عارضاً للمقدار التعليمي فمحل تأمل و أما المعنيان الآخران - فنقول لما ثبت أنه من حيث هو مقدار عرض و

معلوم أن نسبته إلى كونه بحيث يفرض فيه بعدان ليست كنسبة المقدارية إلى الصورة الجسمية بل نسبته إلى ذلك المعنى نسبة الفصل إلى الجنس لا نسبة عارض إلى معروض فكان المجموع عرضاً لا أن أحدهما عرض و الآخر ليس بعرض و على هذا القياس حال الخط في كونه نهاية و في كونه بعداً واحداً و في كونه مقدارا و أما النقطة فليس فيه من هذه الاعتبارات إلا كونها نهاية للخط و إذا ثبت وجود الخط و السطح ثبت عرضيتهما لأن كلا منهما يزول و يطرأ على الجسم الطبيعي و هو بحاله.

و لك أن تستدل على وجودهما بأننا نجد الأجسام متماسة و التماس أن كان بتمام ذواتها أو ببعضها لزم التداخل فهو يكون بأطرافها و ما به التماس يجب أن يكون موجوداً- و التماس بالسطح ظاهر و التماس بالخط كما في المسنمات فإن أشكل عليك وقوع الملاقاة بالعرض فاعلم أن الملاقي و الملاقى له هو الجسم لا محالة لكن باعتبار طرفه و وجهه أن السطح و الخط بالاعتبار الذي هما به طرف عديماني فعلى هذا صح القول بأن تلاقي الجسمين المتلاقيين قد وقع بالذات و الجوهر إذ لا فاصل بينهما و

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٣٧

أنه قد وقع بالخط أو السطح لما مر.

واعلم أن الذي يقال أو ينقل من القدماء أن النقطة ترسم بحركتها الخط و الخط ترسم بحركته السطح و السطح الجسم فهذا إن كان منقولاً من الحكماء فهو إما من رموزهم و تجوزاتهم كما هو عادة الأوائل أو يكون من باب التخيل بأن تفعل النقطة في الخيال بحركتها خطأ يفعل بحركته في جهة أخرى سطحاً يفعل بحركته في جهة ثالثة جسماً كل ذلك في الخيال و أما في الوجود فالجسم يتقدم على البسيط المتقدم على ضلعه المتقدم على طرفه تقدم ذي النهاية على نهايته

فصل (١١) في مباحث أخرى متعلقة بالمقادير

الأول أن المقدار المعين الذي في هذا العالم هو من توابع المادة

لأنه لا يقتضيه الصورة الجسمية لذاتها و إلا لاشتكت الأجسام كلها فيه و لما مر أن الجسم الواحد يختلف عليه المقادير و ليس أيضاً بسبب الفاعل بلا مشاركة المادة لأن الفاعل إذا أعطى مقدارا لصورة جسمية بعد ما لم يكن فذلك إما بأن يتمدد إلى جانب أو بأن ينتقص من جانب و ذلك لا يكون إلا بأن ينفعل و الانفعال من توابع المادة لكن لا مطلقاً بل بسبب أحوال يعرض المادة و يخصص استعدادها لمقدار دون مقدار و الاستعداد أيضاً من باب الإمكانيات فلا ينفك عن طبيعة مخصوصة صورية تفعل بذاتها أو بقسر قاسر و كلاهما يرجع إلى صورة نوعية مع مادة قابلة.

واعلم أن المقدار المعين و إن أمكن تجريدنا عن المادة و لواحقها إما في الخيال أو في عالم آخر لكن لا يمكن تجريد الصورة المعينة عن المادة إلا بأن يصير وجودها وجوداً آخر أقوى و أتم من هذا الوجود حيث يسلب عنه كثير من لوازم هذا الوجود.

الثاني أن الاستقامة و الانحناء فصلان منوعان للخط

لا يمكن أن يكون خط

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٣٨

واحد مورد الاستقامة والانحناء وكذلك الاستواء والاستدارة للسطح فسلان له و كذا مراتب التقويسات المتفاوتة و التدويرات المتفاوتة في الخطوط و السطوح كلها فصول متنوعة تلك الفصول من مقولة كيف كما سيأتي في باب الكيفيات المختصة بالكميات.

الثالث أنه كما أن النقطة غير منقسمة

لأنها نهاية الخط و لو كان لها جزءان كان الآخر هو النهاية فكذلك الخط لا يتجزى في العرض و السطح في العمق بالبيان المذكور فعلم أن النقط إذا اجتمعت لا يحصل من تراكمها الخط لأن الواسطة إن منعت الطرفين عن التداخل [الملاقاة] فانقسمت و إن لم يمنع فتداخلت الجميع - و المقدار لا يحصل إلا من أجزاء متباينة الوضع غير متداخلة و بهذا البيان يظهر أن لا يحصل السطح من تأليف الخطوط و لا الجسم من اجتماع السطوح.

الرابع أنه يستحيل أن يوجد نسبة عددية أو مقدارية

صمتية بين اثنين من هذه الثلاثة بالبيان المذكورة.

الخامس رسم أقليدس النقطة بما لا جزء له

فقل غرضه تمييزها عن المقادير - و إلا فالرسم صادق على الوحدة و الباري جل مجده فمن أراد الرسم لتمييز لها عما سواها فلا بد من قيد آخر فقالوا النقطة شيء ذو وضع لا ينقسم أو لا جزء له و الباري تعالى ليس له وضع و لا إليه إشارة و كذا الوحدة و منهم من رسمها بأنها نهاية للخط.

أقول و لا ينتقض بنقطة رأس المخروط و لا بمركز الكرة لأن الأولى ليست نهاية إلا لسهم المخروط لا لجسمه أو سطحه كما توهمه بعض المتأخرين و الثانية نهاية لأنصاف الأقطار المتقاطعة و لو في الوهم.

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٣٩

واعلم أن كثيرا من أحوال العدد قد ذكرناه في مباحث الوحدة و الكثرة - فبقي علينا من مباحث الكم أمر الزاوية و أمر المكان و أما أحوال الزاوية فنؤخرها - إلى الكيفيات المختصة بالكميات و أما أمر المكان فنذكرها الآن

فصل (١٢) في المكان و إنيته

[حجج المنكرين للمكان و الجواب عنها]

الشيء قد يكون معلوما من جهة بعض أماراته و خواصه دون بعض فيصير مطلوبا من تلك الجهة نفيا و إثباتا و تنوعا و تقسيما و المفهوم من المكان ما يصح أن ينتقل الجسم عنه أو إليه و أن يسكن فيه و أن يكون مشارا إليه بأن يقال للجسم هنا أو هناك و أن يكون مقدرا له نصف و ربع و أن يكون بحيث يمتنع حصول جسمين في واحد منه - فهذه أربع أمارات تصالح عليها المتنازعون لثلا يكون النزاع لفظيا فاختلفوا فيه - فمنهم من أنكر وجوده محتجا بأنه لو كان موجودا لكان إما جوهرًا أو عرضًا و كلاهما محال.

أما الأول فلأنه لو كان جوهرًا لم يكن مجردا لقبوله الوضع فيكون جسما و هو محال لاستلزامه التسلسل لأن كل جسم فله مكان فإذا كان المكان جسما كان له مكان و يتسلسل لا إلى نهاية و لأنه يلزم تداخل الأجسام و أما كونه عرضا فلأنه إما أن يقوم بالتممكن فينتقل بانتقاله فلا يكون الانتقال إليه أو منه بل معه و أيضا لا يكون الجسم فيه بل هو في الجسم

أو يقوم بغير المتمكن فلم يكن من أحوال الجسم المتمكن بل يكون المتمكن شيئا آخر لأن المتمكن من قام به المكان فيجب أن يكون هو الحاوي لا المحوي.
حجة ثانية لهم لو كان المكان لا بد منه للحركة فلا يخلو إما أن يكون المكان محتاجا إلى الحركة وهو محال لتحقيقه مع عدم الحركة أو الحركة محتاجة إليه وهو أيضا

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٤٠

محال لأن العلة للشيء إحدى العلل الأربع وهو ليس بفاعل للحركة لأن فاعلها طبيعة أو إرادة أو قسر ولا عنصر لأن العلة العنصرية لها هي المتحرك ولا صورة وهو ظاهر ولا غاية لأن العلة التمامية للشيء إنما يجب وجودها في الأعيان عند الوصول إلى الغاية والمكان يجب وجوده قبل الوصول إلى الغاية ولأن الكمال إما خاص وإما مشترك والخاص صورة الشيء والمكان ليس صورة المتحرك والمشارك ما يكون له ولغيره والمكان عندكم خاص.
حجة ثالثة لهم لو كان كل جسم في مكان لكانت الأجسام النامية في مكان - وكان مكانها يتحرك معها فكان لمكانها مكان إلى غير النهاية و بطلان التالي يستلزم بطلان المقدم.
حجة رابعة لهم الحركة عبارة عن الانتقال والاستبدال للقرب والبعد - فلو كان هذا الانتقال يوجب مكانا لأوجب للنقطة مكانا لأنها قد يقع لها الانتقال والتالي محال. والجواب أما عن الأولى فبأن المكان إما جوهر مقداري ليس بجسم مادي فلا يلزم التداخل المستحيل ولا التسلسل وإما عرض قائم بغير المتمكن لأنه عبارة عن السطح الباطن من الجسم الحاوي المماس لظاهر المحوي وأما حديث الاشتقاق فقضية غير عقلية فلا يجب ثبوتها فربما لم يوجد كما في كثير من الأعراض ثم لا نسلم أن المتمكن مشتق من المكان بل من التمكن وهو صفة الجسم المتمكن ولو سلم اشتقاقه من المكان فكثيرا ما يشتق الاسم من العرض

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٤١

الكائن في شيء آخر كالمعلوم المشتق من العلم وهو في العالم.
وعن الثانية أن الحركة محتاجة إلى المكان ولا نسلم كون المحتاج إليه منحصرا في أحد الأمور المذكورة فإن الاثنين محتاج إلى الواحد وهو غير العلل الأربع بل المراد ما يتقدم بالطبع وإن كان شرطا غير هذه الأربع.
وعن الثالثة أن النامي يستبدل بنموه مكانا بعد مكان فلا يلزم ما قالوه.
وعن الرابعة بالفرق بين ما بالذات وما بالعرض والقائلون بوجوده قوم منهم من يدعون البداهة وهو أولى وقوم يستدلون عليه بوجوده منها أن الانتقال عبارة عن التغير في الآن لأنه قد يوجد هذا التغير مع ثبات الجوهر وكمه وكيفه ووضعه وسائر الأعراض وقد لا يقع هذا الانتقال ويتغير في كل من تلك الأمور فعلم أن هذا الانتقال هو تغير في الآن أعني في النسبة إلى المكان فثبت وجوده ومنها أن نشاهد سما حاضرا ثم يغيب ويحضر جسم آخر حيث هو فالبداهة تحكم بأن للمتعاقلين مورد مشترك وليس ذلك إلا المكان لأنه هو الذي كان للأول ثم صار للآخر ومنها أن وجود الفوق والسفل معلوم بالضرورة وذلك يقتضي وجود المكان وفي الكل محل تأمل.

[وجه الجمع بين الأقوال]

و اعلم أنه ذكر بعض العلماء وجهها تضبط به المذاهب في أمر المكان و هو أن هذا الأمر المعلوم ببعض الأمارات ليس بخارج عن الجسم و أحواله فهو إما جزء الجسم أو لا فإن كان جزءاً فهو إما هيولاه أو صورته و إن لم يكن جزء و لا شك أنه يساويه فهو إما عبارة عن بعد يساوي أقطاره و إما عبارة عن سطح من جسم يلاقيه - سواء كان حاوياً له أو محوياً له و إما عبارة عن السطح الباطن للجسم الحاوي - المماس للسطح الظاهر من المحوي فهذه خمسة مذاهب و إلى كل منها ذاهب.

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٢

و احتج الذاهب بأنه الهولي

بأن المكان يتعاقب عليه المتمكنات و المادة يتوارد عليه الصور فيكون هو هي و الزاعم بأنه صورة بأن المكان محدود حاصر - و الصورة محدودة حاصرة و القياسان من موجبتين في الشكل الثاني فلا ينتجان - و إن صحح الأول بأن المكان يتعاقب عليه المتمكنات و كلما يتعاقب عليه المتمكنات فهو مادة. و الثاني بأن المكان محدود حاصر و كل محدود حاصر فهو صورة تصوير الكبرى كاذبة و الذي دل أيضاً على فساد هذين المذهبين أمور أحدها أن المكان يترك بالحركة و الهولي و الصورة لا تتركان. و ثانيها أن المكان يطلب بالحركة و هما لا تطلبان بالحركة. و ثالثها أن المركب ينسب إلى الهولي فيقال باب خشبي و لا ينسب إلى المكان

فصل (١٣) في تحقيق ماهية المكان

قد علم في الفصل السابق إنية المكان

[وجود المسلكين في ذلك]

فنقول في تحقيق ماهيته أن الجسم لا شبهة في أنه مال للمكان بكليته فلم يجز أن يكون غير منقسم و لا منقسماً في جهة بل إما في جهتين فيكون سطحاً أو في الجهات فيكون بعداً و إذا كان سطحاً لا يجوز أن يكون حالاً في المتمكن و إلا لانتقل بانتقاله بل فيما يحويه و لا بد أن يكون مماساً للمتمكن حاوياً له من جميع الجوانب و إذا كان بعداً لم يجز أن يكون عرضاً لتوارد المتمكنات عليه و لا مادياً و إلا يلزم تداخل الجواهر المادية فالمكان إما السطح

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٣

المذكور و هو مذهب المعلم الأول و أتباعه كالشيخين و غيرهما و أما البعد المجرد المنطبق على مقدار الجسم بكليته و هو مذهب أفلاطن و الرواقيين و الأقدمين و تابعهم المحقق الطوسي فكانه جوهر متوسط بين العالمين و مما يؤيد مذهبهم أنا سنجيم البرهان على وجود عالم مقداري محيط بهذا العالم لا كإحاطة الحاوي بالمحوي - بل كإحاطة الطبيعة للجسم و الروح للبدن و ليكن المكان من هذا القبيل و هو مؤيد أيضاً بالآمارات كما ستعلم و أصحاب البعد منهم من زعم أن العلم به ضروري لأن الناس كلهم يحكمون أن الماء فيما بين أطراف الإناء و أن مكان نصف الماء نصف مكان كله و كذا لكل جزء جزء منه بأي وجه قسم و منهم من احتج عليه و لهم في ذلك مسلكان أحدهما ما يثبت البعد و ثانيهما ما يبطل السطح -

[ما يبطل المسلك الأول]

أما المسلك الأول فمن وجهين - الأول أن اختلاط الأمور إذا كان منشأ للاشتباه فإنما يزول الاشتباه برفع شيء بعد شيء منها حتى لا يبقى إلا واحد فيحصل التميز والبعد من هذا القبيل - فإننا إذا توهمنا خروج الماء من الإناء وعدم دخول الهواء فيه فيلزم أن يكون البعد الثابت بين أطراف الإناء موجودا وهو المطلوب والثاني أن كون الجسم في المكان ليس بسطحه فقط بل بحجمه فيكون كالجسم ذا أقطار ثلاثة -

[ما يبطل المسلك الثاني]

و أما المسلك الثاني فلوجه - الأول أنه يلزم كون الشيء ساكنا ومتحركا في زمان واحد فإن الطير الواقف في الهواء و السمك الواقف في الماء عند ما يجري الهواء و الماء عليهما متحركان - فإن الذي فرض مكانا لهما قد تبدل عليهما. والثاني أن المكان يجب أن يكون أمرا ثابتا ينتقل منه و إليه المتحرك

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٤

و نهايات المحيط قد يتحرك من موضع إلى موضع و لو بالتبع فلا يكون السطح مكانا. و الثالث أن المكان متصف بالفراغ و الامتلاء و هو نعت البعد لا نعت السطح. و الرابع لو كان المكان سطحاً لم يكن لأجزاء الجسم مكان و هو محال لأن جزء الجسم جسم. و الخامس أن النار بكيته تطلب مكان فوق و الأرض بكيته تطلب مكان أسفل و محال أن يكون المطلوب هو النهاية لكونه عدمياً و لكونه يستحيل أن تحصل ملاقة الجسم بكيته أي بذاتها لها فإن المطلوب هو البعد على الترتيب. السادس أنه يلزم أن لا يكون للجسم الأقصى مكان و ينتقض أيضاً بكثير من الأجسام التي لا مكان [مكانية] لمكانها كجسم طبلي له سطحان مستديران متوازيان منطبقان على سطح جسمين كذلك من الجانبين أو مقعران منطبقان على محدبين فيهما و في تمام دوره نقر و تقعر مستدير و لا يظهر لهذين الجسمين مكان بتفسيرهم. السابع أنه يلزم بقاء المكان بحاله مع نقصان المتمكن بل زيادته مع ذلك النقصان و بقاء المتمكن بحاله مع زيادة المكان فالأول يظهر في الزق المملو ماء أو هواء إذا نقص منه شيء مما فيه و الثاني في الجسم المثقوب و الثالث في الشمعة المجتمعة إذا انبسطت و الجسم إذا قسمت أقساماً متوازية لكن المساواة بين المكان و المتمكن لازمة هذا خلف.

[ادلة القول بالسطح]

و للقائلين بالسطح أجوبة عن هذه الوجوه مذكورة في كتب القوم تركنا ذكرها لأنها ضعيفة و المقرر المشهور عندهم أن مكان كل سافل من الكرات الكلية الثلاثة عشر التي كلها العالم الجسماني كما عليه الجمهور هو سطح باطن ما فوقه و

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٥

ظاهر ما تحته الإمكان الأسفل فإنه باطن الماء و الهواء مع الانفصال الواقع بينهما - فليس للمتمكن الواحد مكان واحد متصل و ليس للمحاط شيء من مكانه الطبيعي - و يمكن الجواب عن هذا بما لا يخلو عن قصور و عمدة ما وقع الاحتجاج به لأصحاب السطح أن المكان لو كان بعدا يلزم اجتماع بعدين متماثلي الماهية من غير امتياز و متى اجتمع المثلان في مادة واحدة فليس بأن يكون أحدهما عارضا و الآخر غير عارض - أولى من أن يكون كلاهما عارضين أو

أحدهما عارضا للآخر فالكل يوجب ترجيحاً بلا مرجح.

و الجواب منع اتحادهما بالماهية النوعية و ربما احتجوا بأن تجويز أن بين طرفي الإناء شخصان من البعد مع أن الماهية واحدة و الإشارة واحدة تجويز كون الشخص الإنساني المشار إليه شخصين بل ليس بأن يكون شخصين أولى من أن يكون أشخاصا كثيرة بل غير متناهية.

و الجواب بعد المنع المذكور أن وحدة الشيء بوحدة آثاره و لوازمه و أسبابه فإذا كانت واحدة كان واحدا و إذا تعددت كان متعددا و آثار البعد و لوازمه غير آثار الجسم و لوازمه فإن الجسم الذي في البعد المذكور يخرج منه و يدخل فيه و هو هو بحاله فعلم أنهما اثنان.

فإن قلت الامتياز بين البعد الذي بين أطراف الإناء و جسم ما متعذر فإن فرض عدم دخول جسم آخر فيه عند خروج الماء منه مستحيل قلنا التميز حاصل بأن ذلك البعد أمر متعين في ذاته و مطلق الجسم لا تعين له إلا بواحد من المخصوصات فإذا امتاز البعد من كل منها امتاز عن الجسم الطبيعي مطلقا.

حجة أخرى للنافين للبعد المجرد قالوا هذه الأبعاد المفارقة إما متناهية أو غير متناهية و الثاني باطل بما سبق من البراهين فتعين كونها متناهية و كل متناه فله

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٤٦

حد أو حدود فيكون مشكلا و ذلك الشكل إما لذاته أو بفعل غيره فإن كان لذاته كان شكل جزئه مساويا لشكل كله لاشتراك كله و جزئه في الطبيعة النوعية و قد ثبت وجوب اتفاق المشتركين في الماهية في لوازمها و لو كان كذلك لما كان الشكل حاصلا لكليه فإذا كان ذاته تقتضي شكلا لم يكن الشكل حاصلا له هذا خلف و إن كان بسبب الفاعل من غير مادة لكان المقدار مستقلا بقبول الفصل و الوصل و التمدد و ذلك محال فبقي أن يكون بسبب المادة فإذا المقدار مادي فيكون جسما فإذا البعد جسم هذا خلف.

حجة أخرى لهم أنا نشاهد الأجسام متمانة من التداخل و منشأ الممانعة ما يقتضي كونا في الحيز لذاته و الذي يقتضي الحصول في جهة و حيز لذاته هو المقدار فقط لا الهيولى أو الصورة و الأعراض أما الهيولى فلأنها في حد ذاتها مجردة عن الوضع و الحيز كما سنبين في موضعه و أما الصورة فلأن الجسم الواحد قد يتحلل فيشغل حيزا

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٤٧

كبيرا و يتكاثر فيشغل حيزا صغيرا مع بقاء صورته الجسمية بحالها فعلم أنها في حد ذاتها ليست شاغلة للحيز و إلا لما اختلفت الشغل مع اتحادها و أما سائر الصور و الأعراض فلا يشغل الأحياء شغلا بالذات بل الشاغل بالذات هو المقدار فعلمنا أن المانع من التداخل هو المقدار فلو كان المكان بعدا يلزم التداخل المستحيل.

أقول الترديد غير حاصر و المانع في كل منها إلا الأعراض و ارد لاحتمال أن يكون المانع من التداخل الهيولى مع المقدار أو الصورة معه أو هو مع المادة- و الذي يؤيد هذا أنا نتخيل مقدارا عظيما مثل العالم بمجموع ما فيه من السماوات و الأرضين و نتخيل مقدارا آخر أضعاف المقدار الأول أو مثله داخلا فيه و هكذا نتخيل فسحة بعد فسحة بحيث لا تمانع فيها و لا تفاسد بل مع بقاء هذه العوالم المقدارية بحالها و كثير من أهل السلوك يشاهدون في بداية سلوكهم عوالم

كثيرة مقدارية لا تراحم ولا تضايق بينها وما يروى عن قائدنا و هاديننا ص - أنه رأى ما بين قبره و منبره روضة من الجنان و رأى في عرض الحائط جنة عرضها السماوات و الأرض و رأى مرة جبرئيل كأنه طبق الخافقين و رأى أمته ليلة المعراج - و قد انسد الأفق بوجوه أختارها.

و أيضا القائلون بأن الرؤية بانطباع شبح المرئي في العضو الجليدي - يلزمهم التداخل في المقدار لكن لما كان مقدار الشبح مجردا و إن كان مقدار العضو ماديا جاز التداخل بينهما فعلم من هذا كله أن المانع من دخول الأجسام - بعضها في حيز بعض ليس مجرد المقدار بل بشرط المادة و السر فيه أن معنى كون الشيء ماديا أنه مصحوب بالقوة و الاستعداد بما هو استعداد لا يجمع الفعلية إلا أن الكم المتصل في قبول التعدد فإذا صار منفصلا انعدمت هويته الاتصالية و في المنفصل قوة الاتصال فإذا اتصلت المنفصلات بطلت هوياتها الاتصالية - فكذا في شأن الجسم أن يحل مكانا و لا يحصل ذلك إلا بزواله مع المكان الأول - و كما لا يحل جسم مكانين معا لا يحل جسمان مكانا واحدا لا لإبء المكان عنهما بل

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٤٨

لإبء أحدهما عن الاجتماع مع الآخر كإبء أجزاء كل جسم أن يجتمع اثنان منها في حيز واحد فعلم أن ذلك من خاصية المادة لا غير.

[دليل كون المكان بعدا ثالثا]

ثم من أمعن النظر في حال كل جسم طبيعي يجد أن في جبلته طلب المكان الطبيعي و المحافظة عليه و ذلك مما له مدخل في صلاح وجود الجسم بما هو جسم - لا بما هو ذو سطح و ليس في طبع الجسم بما هو جسم أن يطلب شيئا لا يوجد له بالحلول - و لا بالمداخلة التامة معه و نفس السطح الذي للحاوي يمتنع الحصول للمحوي و لا المماس له ممكن الحصول له بما هو جسم و قد لا يكون موجودا عند طلب الجسم المكان و الحركة في الكيف و إن كان فيها طلب كيفية لا تكون بعينها حاصلة - إلا أن المتحرك فيها ما دامت حركته يكون له كيفية متصلة إلى أن يتصل إلى تلك الكيفية المطلوبة و كذا الحركة في الكم و الوضع و غيرهما فالمكان إن كان بعدا و الأين نسبة الجسم إليه فحال الحركة فيه كما ذكرنا فيوجد في الحركة فرد من الأين التدريجي المتصل المنطبق على المكان المتصل الممتد بين ابتداء الحركة و انتهائها الذي هو المطلوب بالحركة و أما إذا كان المكان سطحا و الأين عبارة عن نسبة الجسم إليه فلا يتصور فرد تدريجي اتصالي للسطح و لا للنسبة إليه ذا لا سطح في كل آن لاستلزامه تتالي السطوح و تركيب الزمان و المكان من غير المنقسمات - و لا في زمان الحركة فرد زمني من السطح و هذا أيضا يرشدك إلى كون المكان بعدا

فصل (١٤) في الرد على القائلين بالخلاء و هم طائفتان

و الأكثرون منهم زعموا أن الخلاء أمر غير وجودي أي ليس أمرا وجوديا - قال الإمام الرازي نحن نعبر عن مذهبهم بعبارة لا توهم كونه أمرا وجوديا.

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٤٩

فنقول إنا نجوز وجود جسمين لا يتلاقيان و لا يكون بينهما ما يلاقيهما قالوا أما الذي توهم كون الخلاء وجوديا و أن بين

دينك الجسمين أبعادا فذلك وهم كاذب - كما أن من توهم أن خارج العالم خلاء أو ملاء وهم باطل ومنهم من سلم أن الخلاء أمر وجودي والذي يدل على بطلان القول الأول أن الجسمين إذا فرضا بحيث لا يلاقيهما جسم قد يكون ما بينهما قدر ذراع وقد يكون ما بينهما أكثر من ذراع والقابل للمساواة والمفاوتة لا يكون إلا كما موجودا لا موهوما محضا فيكون جوهريا مقداريا لا محالة وهذا بخلاف الأبعاد المتوهمة خارج العام فإنها أمور كاذبة ممتنعة الوجود و أما الذي دل على بطلان مذهب الفريق الثاني أمران.

الأول الخلاء مما يمكن مسحه وتقديره كما مر وهو من خواص الكم هو إما كم أو متكمم و الكم إما منفصل أو متصل و كون الخلاء كما منفصلا باطل لأن حصوله من وحدات غير متجزية و كان يستحيل أن يطابقه الجسم القابل للانقسام لا إلى حد و لأن الكم المنفصل عدد و العدد غير ذي وضع و مكان الجسم ذو وضع فالخلاء إذا كان كما فهو متصل و إن كان كما متصلا فهو إما ذو وضع بالذات أو ذو وضع بالعرض فإن كان الأول فهو جسم و المفروض خلافه و إن كان الثاني فيكون مقارنا لجوهر ذي وضع فلم يكن خلاء هذا خلف.

و هذا التقرير أولى مما قيل فإذا كان كما متصلا بالذات فلا شك أنه كم ذو وضع بالذات فإن الخلاء مقدار و متى كان كذلك استحال أن يوجد إلا في المادة فيكون جسما هذا خلف.

و ذلك لأنه قد مر أن مجرد كون الشيء مقدارا غير مستلزم لكونه ذا وضع و أما إذا كان كما بالعرض فيكون متصلا بالعرض لما عرفت فلم يكن بحيث إذا فرض مجردا عن الأجسام و المقادير يكون قابلا للأبعاد و المفروض خلافه هذا خلف.

و هذا أولى مما يقال فحينئذ لا يخلو إما أن يكون الخلاء حالا في المقدار - أو المقدار حالا فيه أو هما حالان في ثالث فعلى الأول يكون حالا في المادة لأن

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٥٠

المقدار حال فيها و الحال في شيء حال في ذلك الشيء فيكون الخلاء ملاء و كذا على الثاني لأن محل المقدار مادة و على الثالث كان الخلاء جسما إذ لا معنى للجسم إلا الذي فيه قابلية الأبعاد فثبت أن الذي فرض خلاء فهو جسم فالقول به باطل.

حجة أخرى أن الجسم لو حصل في الخلاء لاستحال أن يكون متحركا أو ساكنا و التالي محال فالمقدم مثله بيان الاستلزام أن الخلاء لا يخلو إما أن يكون متشابه الأجزاء أو مختلفها و الثاني محال لأن ما به يخالف جزؤ جزأ إما أن يكون لازما لذلك الجزء أو لا فإن لزم فاللزوم إما لنفس ماهية الجزء أو لأمر زائد عليه.

الأول باطل لأن الخلاء عبارة عن الأبعاد المفارقة فلا اختلاف بين أجزائه في هذا المفهوم كيف و أجزاء المتصل الواحد متشابه في الماهية.

و الثاني أيضا باطل لأن لوازم الماهية مشتركة بين أفرادها و إن كان وجه التخالف عارضا فالفرض زواله لكونه ممكن الزوال حتى يحصل التساوي بين الأجزاء المفروضة للخلاء و إذا كان كذلك استحال أن يكون موضع مطلوبا بالطبع للجسم - و الآخر مهروبا عنه بالطبع و إذا كان كذلك لم يكن للجسم مكان طبيعي فحينئذ لا يكون له سكون طبيعي و لا حركة طبيعية و بهذا ثبت أن لا يكون له حركة و لا سكون قسريان لأن القسر فرع الطبع و لا أن يكون له حركة إرادية أو

سكون إرادي لاستحالة أن يخص أحد المثلين بحكم دون الآخر. أقول و هذه الحجة لا تفيد أزيد من أن لا يكون مجرد البعد مطلوباً داعياً للحركة - فيجوز أن يكون مطلوب المتحرك مكاناً مع ترتيب خاص و أيضاً لا يلزم إذا كان لشيء واحد إمكانية متشابهة أن يمتنع سكونه في واحد منها فإن أمثال هذه المواضع إن اتفق للجسم الحصول فيه وقع بطبعه فيه كحال أجزاء العنصر الكلي كالماء و الهواء و لو لا ذلك لما كان سكون و لا حركة بالطبع لشيء من أجزاء العنصر الواحد في حيزه.

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٥١

حجة أخرى و هي المعول عليها أن الجسم إذا تحرك في مسافة فكل ما كانت مسافته أرق كانت الحركة فيها أسرع و بالعكس أبطأ لأن الرقيق شديد الانفعال و الغليظ شديد المقاومة للدافع فإذا فرضنا حركة في خلاء فهي لا بد أن يكون في زمان لأنها قطع مسافة منقسمة إلى أجزاء بعضها مقطوع قبل بعض بالزمان و لنفرض حركة أخرى لذلك الجسم في ملاً على تلك المسافة و زمانه أطول من زمان عديم المعاق على نسبة معينة و ليكن زمان الأولى عشر زمان الثانية ثم لنفرض حركة ثالثة له في ملاً أرق من ذلك الملاً بنسبة الزمانين فإذا كانت رفته عشرة أضعاف رقة الملاً الأول كان زمان الحركة فيه عشر زمان الحركة الثانية لما قررنا أن زيادة اللطافة توجب نقصان الزمان على نسبتها فوجب أن يكون زمان الحركة الثالثة الذي هو عشر زمان الحركة الثانية مساوياً لزمان الحركة الأولى فيلزم أن يكون الحركة مع العائق كهي لا معه فإن فرضت رقة المسافة الثالثة على نسبة أكثر من نسبة الزمانين كان زمان حركتها أقل من زمان الحركة الخلائية و هذا أشنع حيث يلزم أن يكون الحركة مع العائق أسرع من الحركة لا معه.

و اعترض بأن المحال إنما لزم من إخراج الحركة من أن يستحق لذاتها زماناً معيناً بل جعلتم استحقاقها للزمان بحسب ما في مسافتها من المقاومة - و ذلك باطل لأن الحركة ماهيتها قطع و لا محالة قطع جزء المسافة سابق على قطع الكل و كذا قطع جزء الجزء سابق على قطع الجزء فالحركة لذاتها تستدعي زماناً و

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٥٢

لذلك حركة الفلك في زمان و إن لم يكن لها مقاوم و لا عائق نعم قوام المسافة يوجب طول الزمان لا أصله فإذا ثبت ذلك فالحركات الثلاثة متفقة في أصل الزمان الذي بإزاء أصل الحركة و هو حاصل للحركة التي في الخلاء و أما الذي بإزاء المقاومة فلا شك أنه يقصر لقلة المقاومة و يطول بكثرتها فالساعة الواحدة في مقابلة أصل الحركة - و باقي الساعات بإزاء المقاومة كالتسعة مثلاً فإذا كانت مقاومة أخرى عشر تلك المقاومة - كانت تلك الحركة تستحق ساعة واحدة لأجل ذاتها و عشر تسعة ساعات أعني تسعة أعشار ساعة لأجل ما فيها من المقاومة و المجموع ساعة و تسعة أعشار ساعة فلا يلزم من هذا تساوي زمان ذي المعاق و عديمه و هذا الشك مما أورده صاحب المعبر و استحسنة الإمام الرازي و ستعلم وجه اندفاعه في بحث الميل.

حجة أخرى سيأتي في مباحث الحركة أن الحجر إذا رمي قسراً إلى فوق فهو إنما يتحرك لأن المحرك أفاده قوة تحركه إلى فوق و تلك القوة إنما تبطل لمصادمات الهواء فلو لم يكن في المسافة هواء بل خلاء صرف فلا مصادمة و لا تضعف فلا رجوع للمرمي إلا بعد وصوله إلى سطح الفلك و لما لم يكن كذلك علم أن المسافة غير خالية و هذه ضعيفة

لعدم دلالة على وجود الملا في العالم فضلا عن وجوبه ولا يدل على أزيد من وجود الهواء في بعض المسافات التي يرمى فيها الحجر مع جواز أن يكون في خللها خلاء كثير و بعد ما ينتهي حركتها إلى السماء أيضا خلاء صرف

فصل (١٥) في ذكر أمارات استبصارية تدل على بطلان الخلاء

الأول أن الإناء الضيق الرأس المملو من الماء

إذا كان في أسفله ثقبه ضيقة ينزل الماء منها إذا فتح رأسه و لم ينزل إذا سد فعلم أن عدم نزول الماء مع ثقله الطبيعي - لضرورة امتناع الخلاء و أما النقض بنزول الزيت و بنزول الماء عند اتساع الثقب و بعدم نزوله أيضا إذا كان نصف الإناء فيه هواء فمندفع بأن فرط ثقل الزيت ربما

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٥٣

أوجب زيادة مدافعة الهواء فيضطره ذلك إلى التحرك فإذا لم يجد مكانا وراءه اضطره ذلك إلى مزاحمة الزئبق كما في مزاحمته للماء و دخوله من نواحي الثقب و إن تعذر ذلك احتبس الزئبق و لم ينزل لأن الطبيعة تفعل الأسهل فالأسهل و لا يمتنع أيضا أن يكون وقوف الماء أسهل على الطبيعة من تعظيم حجم الهواء.

الثاني أن الأنبوبة إن أغمس أحد طرفيها في الماء و مص الطرف الآخر

يصعد الماء حال خروج الهواء مع ثقله الطبيعي فما هذه المتابعة منه للهواء إلا لامتناع الخلاء - من هذا القبيل ارتفاع اللحم عند مص المحجمة و تلازم السطوح ليس بسبب أن الخلاء للخلاء قوة جاذبة كما سنبطله و مما يؤيد ذلك أنه إذا أفرط الإنسان في مص القارورة أو المحجمة و كانت رقيقة انكسرت و إذا وضعنا المحجمة على السندان و مصصناها فإنه يرتفع السندان بارتفاعها.

الثالث أنا إذا أدخلنا رأس الأنبوبة في قارورة و سدنا الخل الذي بين عنق القارورة و الأنبوبة

فإذا جذبنا الأنبوبة المصمتة تنكسر القارورة إلى الداخل - و إن أدخلناها تنكسر إلى الخارج و إن مصصنا المجوفة تنقلب هواؤه نارا و ربما ينشق -

الرابع لو أمكن الخلاء فينزل الماء من الأواني الضيقة الرأس و لا يلزم الحاجة إلى صعود الهواء داخل الإناء

فكنا لا نرى النفاخات و البقايق.

و لأصحاب الخلاء متمسكات ضعيفة كلزوم الدور في كل حركة مكانية - أو إيجاب حركة بقعة لانتقال السماوات من مواضعها و بأن التخلخل و التكاثف علامة تحقق الخلاء و بأن النمو بنفوذ جسم في داخل النامي فيكون فيه أجواف خالية و بأن كل جسم لو وجب أن يماس سطحه بسطح جسم آخر يلزم منه تحقق

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٥٤

أجسام بلا نهاية و هو محال و إن لم يجب فجاز أن يوجد جسم لا يجاوره جسم آخر - فجاز الخلاء و الكل مندفع بأدنى تأمل و أقوى متشبثاتهم أنا إذا رفعنا سطحاً أملس واقعا أعلى سطح أملس مثله رفعا متساويا دفعة عند الحس فلا يخلو في الحقيقة إما أن يرتفع بعض أجزاء السطح الأعلى قبل بعض يلزم وقوع التفكك في ذلك الجسم - و هو مما يكذبه

الحس سيما في الحجر و الحديد مثلا أو يرتفع أجزاءه معا فيلزم من ذلك خلو وسطهما وقتا من الزمان من الجسم لأن ذلك الجسم ينتقل من الخارج إلى الوسط و ليس انتقاله من الثقب التي فيها إذ رب جسم لا ثقبه فيه و لو كانت لكان بين كل ثقبين سطح متصل لا محالة فعلم أن انتقال الأجسام إلى الوسط يكون من الجوانب فبالضرورة يحتاج أن يمر بالطرف أولا لا امتناع أن يكون في الوسط دفعة بلا مادة أو بلا استحالة لأن كل استحالة في زمان أو أن يوجد في الوسط حين كونه في الطرف لا امتناع حصول الجسم الواحد في مكانين فإذا كان مرورها بالطرف قبل مرورها بالوسط كان الوسط خاليا قبل ذلك و هو المطلوب.

و جوابه منع إمكان الارتفاع لمثل ذلك السطح الأملس و ما يرفعه من السطوح فلا يخلو من خشونة و تضاريس و إن خفي ذلك على الحس.

و ربما تمسكوا بعلامات أولها أن القارورة إذا مصت مصا شديدا و ضم الثقب بالإصبع ثم كبت الثقب في الماء و أزيل الإصبع دخل فيها ماء كثير فلو كانت مملوءة هواء بعد المص لم يدخل الماء فيها بعد المص كما لم يدخل فيها قبله. و ثانيها لو الصقنا أحد جانبي الزق مع الآخر بحيث لا يبقى فيها شيء من الهواء و شددنا الجوانب شدا و ثيقا ثم رفعنا أحد الطرفين عن الآخر فحصل بينهما جوف خال و هو المطلوب. و ثالثها أن التجربة دلت على إمكان دخول مسيلة في زق مضموم الرأس يزاحم فيه الهواء بحيث انتفخ به فلو لم يكن فيه خلاء لم يمكن دخولها.

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٥٥

و رابعها أنا نرى إناء مملوا من رماد يسعه معه ملء ماء فلو لا أن هناك خلاء لاستحال ذلك. و خامسها أن الدن يملأ شرابا ثم يجعل الشراب بعينه [في زق] ثم يجعلان معا في ذلك الدن بعينه فيسعهما الدن فلو لا أن في الشراب خلاء انعصر فيه مقدار مساحة الزق لاستحال ذلك. و الجواب عما ذكره أولا أنه لو كان العلة ما ذكرتم لما وجب صعود الماء - لأن الهواء الخارج قد وجد مكانا فارغا و فراغ بعض القارورة أمر ممكن عندهم فهذا بأن يستدل به على بطلان الخلاء أولى. و التحقيق أن الكيفيات و الحركات كما تكون طبيعية و قسرية كذلك المقادير قد تكون طبيعة و قد تكون قسرية و المادة الواحدة يجوز أن تقبل مقدارا عظيما - بعد ما قبلت مقدارا صغيرا و حركة المص موجبة للسخونة الموجبة للتخلخل و كانت شديدة التهيو للعود إلى مقدارها الطبيعي فإذا لقيها برد الماء تكاثف عودا إلى مقداره الطبيعي - فتبعه الماء لضرورة الخلاء.

و عما ذكره ثانيا أن الهواء يدخل في مسام الزق و قد جرب ذلك بما يدل على وجوب الملاء فيكون عليهم لا لهم. و عن الثالث بإمكان انقباض ما في الزق أو انبساط محيطته أو ارتفاع جانب منه كل ذلك بقدر ما دخل من رأس المسيلة فيه.

و عن الرابع بأنه كذب محض.

و عن الخامس بأنه يجوز أن لا يظهر تفاوت مقدار الزق في الحب للحس - أو يكون الشراب ينعصر فيخرج منه بخار أو هواء أو يتكاثف فيصير أصغر

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٥٦

فصل (١٦) في أن الخلاء لو ثبت لم يكن فيه قوة جاذبة ولا دافعة للأجسام

زعم محمد بن زكرياء الرازي أن له قوة جاذبة للأجسام ولهذا يحتبس الماء - في الأواني التي تسمى سراقات الماء و ينجذب في الأواني التي تسمى زرقاات الماء و منهم من أثبت له قوة دافعة لها إلى فوق و يدل على بطلان الأول أن الخلاء متشابه الأجزاء فلو كان فيه جذب لما اختص ببعض الجهات و على بطلان الثاني إن الخلاء المحرك إما المبتوث في داخل الجسم أو في خارجه المحيط به.

فعلى الأول إما أن يكون محركاً لأجزائه أو لكليه و الأول محال لأن كل واحد من أجزاء الجسم ليس فيه خلاء فلم يكن حركتها بسبب الخلاء بل بمحرك آخر - فإذا حرك مجموع المحركات مجموع الأجزاء كان الجسم متحركاً لا محالة بسبب ما حركها لا بسبب آخر.

و الثاني أيضاً محال لأن تحريك ما يتركب عن الأجزاء لا يمكن إلا بتحريك أجزائه كما أن علة المركب لا بد أن تكون علة لأجزائه و أما على الثاني فمعلوم أن الخلاء المحيط بجسم كبير لا يصعده إلى فوق فإذا لا ينفع من الخلاء إلا جسم يتخلخل الخلاء بين جزء من أجزائه فرجع إلى أن بعض الأجسام مقتضى طبعه أن يتباعد بعض أجزائه عن بعض فيلزم هرب الأجزاء المتجانسة بعضها عن بعض و هو باطل لأن التجانس علة الضم و يلزم هربها إلى جهات مختلفة مع اتحاد الطبيعة و أيضاً إن لم يكن هناك مهروب عنه فالهرب عنه محال و إن كان فيلزم كون كل منها مهروباً عن نفسه

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٥٧

لاتحاد الماهية وجه آخر الخلاء الموجب للدفع و حركة الجسم إلى فوق لا بد و أن يكون ملازماً له منتقلاً معه فيحتاج الخلاء إلى مكان طبيعي له حتى يكون مطلوباً يتحرك إليه ثم إن لم يكن ملازماً بل لا يزال الجسم يستبدل في حركته خلاء بعد خلاء فلا يكون ملاقاته للخلاء إلا في آن و في الآن الواحد لا يحرك شيء شيئاً و بعد الآن لا يكون ملاقياً له إلا أن يقولوا إن الخلاء يعطي للجسم قوة محركة يحركه إلى جهة و هذا ينافي تشابه الخلاء.

تذنيب -

زعم المتكلمون أن مكان الجسم ما يستقر عليه الجسم فيمنعه من النزول ثم لما تأملوا عرفوا أن الجسم الأسفل ليس بكليته مكاناً للجسم الذي فوقه بل سطح الأسفل هو المكان مع أنهم يجعلون للسهم النافذ في الهواء مكاناً مع أنه ليس تحته ما يمنعه من النزول فلو كان الأسفل مكان سطح منه و من الناس من يجعل السطح مكاناً كيف كان و يقولون كما أن سطح الجرة مكان الماء كذلك سطح الماء مكان للجرة.

و احتجوا بأن الفلك الأعلى ذو مكان لأنه متحرك و ليس له نهاية حاوية من محيط - فمكانه سطح ما تحته و الحجة ضعيفة لأن حركة الفلك ليست مكانية بل وضعية و مما دل على فساد مذهبهم بل مذهب القائلين بالسطح مطلقاً.

أن الجمهور اتفقوا على أن الجسم الواحد ليس له إلا مكان واحد كما مرت الإشارة إليه و من الناس من ذهب إلى أن مكان الجسم جسم يحيط به من جهة الإحاطة - و يرد عليه أنه [يلزم] أن يكون المكان من قبيل الإضافات و أن لا يكون للمحدد مكان - فعلم أن أسلم المذاهب و أتمها القول بالبعد و هذا البعد امتداد غير وضعي لذاته ليست إحاطته للابعد

الجسمانية و لا انطباقه عليها إحاطة و انطباقا لذي وضع بذى وضع آخر و عليه براهين تناهي الأبعاد الوضعية لا يجري في بيان تناهيه لعدم كونه ذا وضع

الحكمة المتعالية فى الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٥٨

لذاته و فوق كل بعد مادي بعد آخر مادي إلى أن ينتهي إلى بعد هو آخر الأبعاد المادية الوضعية و فوقه بعد غير محتاج إلى مادة و لا قوة انفعالية لغلبة أحكام الفعلية و الصورية عليه و هو غير متشكل بشكل من الأشكال الوضعية و لا أيضا يقابل الإشارة الحسية بل يقبل الإشارة الخيالية و يشبه أن يكون المراد بسدرة المنتهى في لسان الشريعة هو آخر الأبعاد الوضعية و بالعرش الذي يستوي عليه الرحمة الإلهية هو ما يحيط بجميع المتماديات الحسية إحاطة غير وضعية فيكون ذا جهتين و واسطة بين العالمين فمن أحد الجانبين و هو الأعلى ينفع عن الحق بالصور و التماثيل و من الجانب الأسفل يتصل بالصور الجسمية النوعية و أبعادها المادية كالخيال الذي فينا فإنه جوهر مقداري ذو فسحة امتدادية و هو ينفع عن الحق بالصور المثالية الفائضة منه عليه و يتصل بالبدن و مقداره المادي لأجل ضعف وجوده ابتداء فإذا استكمل ينفصل عن البدن لا كانفصال جسم عن جسم بل كانفصال كاتب عن كتابته أو قائل عن قوله و موضع تحقيق هذا المقصد حين خوضنا في علم المعاد- و سيأتي باقي مباحث الكم في البحث عن الزمان و من الله العصمة و السداد

الفن الثاني في مقولة الكيف

و هو مشتمل على مقدمة و أربعة أقسام

المقدمة في رسم الكيف و تقسيمه إلى أنواعه الأربعة

أما الرسم

فاعلم أن لا سبيل إلى تعريف الأجناس العالية إلا الرسوم الناقصة إذ لا يتصور لها جنس و هو ظاهر و لا فصل لأن التركيب من الأمرين المتساويين يكون كل منهما فصلا مجرد احتمال عقلي لا يعرف تحققه بل إنما يقام الدليل على انتفائه و لم يظفر للكيف بخاصة لازمة شاملة إلا المركب من العرضية و المغايرة للكم و الأعراض النسبية لكن هذا التعريف لها تعريف للشيء بما يساويه في المعرفة و الجهالة لأن الأجناس العالية ليس بعضها أجلى من البعض و لو جاز ذلك لجاز مثله في سائر المقولات بل ذلك أولى لأن الأمور النسبية- لا تعرف إلا بعد معروضاتها التي هي الكيفيات فعدلوا عن ذكر كل من الكم و الأعراض

الحكمة المتعالية فى الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٥٩

النسبية إلى ذكر خاصته التي هي أجلى فقالوا كما هو المشهور أنه هيئة قارة لا يوجب تصورها تصور شيء خارج عنها و عن حاملها و لا يقتضي قسمة و لا نسبة في أجزاء حاملها- فكونه قارة يميزها عن أن يفعل و عن أن ينفع و كونه لا يوجب تصورها تصور غيرها عن المضاف و الأين و المتى و الملك و كونها غير مقتضية لقسمة يميزها عن الكم- و غير مقتضية لنسبة في أجزاء حاملها عن الوضع و فيه موضع أبحاث.

أحدها أن المفهوم من أن يفعل مؤثرية الشيء في الشيء و ذلك الشيء إما متغير أو ثابت فإن كان ثابتا كانت مؤثريته أيضا ثابتة لأنها من لوازم ماهية المؤثر و لازم الثابت ثابت فقولنا هيئة قارة لا يفيد الاحتراز عنها و إن كان متغيرا لم يكن

المؤثرية حكما زائدا على ذاته بل يكون مؤثرية المتغير كمؤثرية الثابت أمرا عقليا كسائر الإضافات التابعة للذوات فلا حاجة إلى الإخراج عنها بقيد و كذا الكلام في المفهوم من أن ينفع. و ثانيها أن قولنا لا يفيد تصورهما تصور شيء خارج عنها و عن حاملها يفيد

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٦٠

الاحتراز عن تينك المقولتين فلم يكن إلى ذكر القارة حاجة في الاحتراز عنهما - فإن قيل احترزنا به عن الزمان قلنا الزمان خارج بقيد عدم القسمة مع سائر الكميات - لأنه يقتضي قسمة حاملة و هو الحركة. و ثالثها أن الصوت من مقولة كيف لعدم دخوله تحت غيرها و لا تحت الحركة - كما هو رأي أهل التحصيل لكنه هيئة غير قارة لأن أجزاءه غير مجتمعة في آن و هو بين بنفسه و لأنه معلول للحركة و معلول غير القار غير قار. و رابعها أن التعريف صادق على الوحدة و النقطة لا يقال كل منهما يوجب تصوره تصور شيء آخر لأن الوحدة معنى يلزمه عدم الانقسام و النقطة نهاية الخط - لأننا نقول إن كان التغير عن كيف بأنه لا يلزم من تعقله تعقل شيء آخر فلعل أكثر أقسام كيف يخرج عنه إذ لا يمكن تصورنا الاستقامة و الانحناء إلا في المقدار و إن لم نشترط ذلك بل إن لا يلزم من تعقله تعقل شيء خارج عن محله فقد توجه الإشكال فيهما. و خامسها أن الإدراك و العلم و القدرة و الشهوة و الغضب و سائر الأخلاق النفسانية لا يمكن تصورهما إلا بتصور متعلقاتها من المدرك و المعلوم و المشتبه و المغضوب عليه. فإن قيل كل منها لا يقتضي تصوره تصور الغير و لكن تصورهما سابق على تصور متعلقاتها بخلاف النسب و الإضافات فلا بد أن يتصور المنسوب و المنسوب إليه أولا حتى يتصور تلك الأمور النسبية قلنا إن الفرق صحيح إلا أن عبارة التعريف لا تفيده إلا أن يقرأ الأول منصوبا و الثاني مرفوعا و حينئذ لا يلائم هذه القراءة لتمام الرسم. و سادسها هب أنا حملنا عبارة التعريف ما لا يوجب تصوره غيره على ما لا يكون تصوره معلولا لتصور غيره فمع ذلك لا يطرد في الأشكال كالتربيع و التثليث و خواص الأعداد كالجذرية و المكعبية مع أنها معدودة من أنواع كيف. و سابعها أن الهيئة لفظ مشترك بين أمور فيقال هيئة الوجود و هيئة الاستقلال

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٦١

و الاستقرار و يقال هيئة الجوهرية و العرضية و يقال هيئة الجلوس و الاضطجاع و يقال هيئة التأثير و التاثر و ليس لها معنى جامع و الاجتناب عن مثل هذه الألفاظ في التعريفات لازم. و يمكن الجواب عن أكثر هذه الإيرادات لكن الأقرب أن يقال هو عرض - لا يتوقف تصوره على تصور غيره و لا يقتضي القسمة و اللاقسمة في محله اقتضاء أوليا - فبالعرض خرج الباري تعالى و الجوهر و بالذي لا يتوقف تصوره على تصور غيره - خرجت الأعراض النسبية فإن تصوراتها متوقفة على تصور أمور آخر بخلاف الكيفيات فإنه لزم من تصوراتها تصور غيرها إلا أن تصوراتها معلولة و تصورات غيرها و يدخل فيه الصوت إذ لا يتوقف تصوره على تصور غيره و بقولنا لا يقتضي القسمة و اللاقسمة خرج الكم و خرجت الوحدة و النقطة و بقولنا اقتضاء أوليا احترزنا به عن العلم بالمعلومات التي لا تنقسم فإنه لذاته يمنع من الانقسام و لكن ليس ذلك اقتضاء أوليا بل بواسطة وحدة المعلوم.

وَأَمَّا تَقْسِيمُهُ إِلَى أَنْوَاعِهِ

فينحصر بالاستقراء في أقسام أربعة الكيفيات المحسوسة و النفسانية و المختصة بالكميات و الاستعدادية و التعويل في الحصر على الاستقراء و قد تبين بصورة التردد بين النفي و الإثبات فيحصل بحسب اختلاف التعبير عن كل قسم بما له من الخواص طرق متعددة و حاصلها أن الكيف إن كان هو القسم الأول فهو الأول و إن كان الثاني فالثاني أو الثالث فالثالث و إلا فالرابع و المنع عليه ظاهر فلا يصلح إلا وجه ضبط لما علم بالاستقراء على أن بعض الخواص مما فيه خفاء - كتعبير الإمام الرازي عن الكيفيات النفسانية بالكمال و تعبیر الشيخ عنها بما لا يتعلق بالأجسام و عن الاستعداد بما يختص به الجسم من حيث الطبيعة و عن المحسوسات بما يكون فعله بطريق التشبيه أي جعل الغير شبيها كالحرارة لجعل المجاور حاراً أو السواد يلقي شبحه أي مثاله على العين لا كالثقل فإن فعله في الغير التحريك لا الثقل. قال الرازي و هذا تصريح منه بإخراج الثقل و الخفة من المحسوسات مع تصريحه في موضع

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٦٢

آخر من الشفاء عند شروعه في بيان الكيفيات المحسوسة أنها من هذا الباب و ذكر في موضع آخر منه أنه لم يثبت بالبرهان أن الرطب يجعل غيره رطبا و اليابس يجعل غيره يابسا.

أقول و ستعلم الجواب عن هذين الإشكاليين و كتعبيره عن المختصة بالكميات - بما يتعلق بالجسم من حيث الكمية. قال الرازي هذا تضعيع الكيفية المختصة بالعدد يعني من جهة أنها تتعلق بالمجردات - و بهذا اعترض على قولهم إن البحث عن أحوال العدد ما يستغني عن المادة ذهنياً لا خارجاً - هي الرياضيات بأن من جملتها البحث عن أحوال العدد و هو ما يستغني عن المادة في الخارج أيضاً.

أقول كلا البحثين مدفوع بما سيظهر من بحثنا عن حدوث العالم أن العدد لا يعرض للمفارق العقلي لا بالذات و لا بالعرض و هو عارض للنفس واسطة الأبدان و ربما يدفع بأن العدد الذي يبحث عنها في الرياضيات قد يقع في البحث عنه من حيث افتقاره عن المادة في الخارج لتحصيل الأغراض كالمساحة و الجمع و التفريق و الضرب - و القسمة و غير ذلك و فيه نظر.

و ربما يقال المراد ما يتعلق بالجسم في الجملة و إن لم يختص به و كيفيات العدد كذلك و يدفع بأنه حينئذ يكون معنى كون الكيفيات النفسانية ما لا يتعلق بالأجسام أنها لا يتعلق بها أصلاً و ليس كذلك بل المعنى أنها لا يتعلق بها خاصة - بحيث يستغني عن النفس.

أَمَّا الَّذِي ذَكَرَهُ فِي بَيَانِ الْحَصْرِ فِي الْأَنْوَاعِ الْأَرْبَعَةِ فَطَرَقَ أَرْبَعَةً.

الأول ما ذكره الرازي

و هو أن الكيفية إما مختصة بالكمية كالاستدارة

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٦٣

و التربيع و الزوجية و الفردية أو لا و هو إما أن تكون محسوسة أو لا و المحسوس هو المسمى بانفعالات إن كانت سريعة الزوال كحمرة الخجل و بالانفعالية إن كانت راسخة و إن لم تكن محسوسة فإما استعداد نحو الكمال أو لا فالأول

هو المسمى بالقوة إن كان استعدادا نحو الانفعال ولا قوة و ذهنيا إن كان استعدادا شديدا نحو الانفعال و الثاني هو المسمى بالحال إن كان سريع الزوال كغضب الحليم و ملكة إن كانت بطيء الزوال كحلمه فهذا تقسيمه الذي ذكره و من الجائز وجود كيفية جسمانية غير مختصة بالكم و لا محسوسة و لا ماهيتها نفس الاستعداد فلا جرم بأن ما يكون كمالات لا بد و أن تكون كيفية نفسانية لأنه دعوى بغير دليل إلا الاستقراء.

الثاني أن الكيفية إما بحيث يصدر عنها أفعال على التشبيه أو لا

و الأول مثل الحار يجعل غيره حارا و السواد يلقي شبحه في العين و هو مثاله لا كالثقل فإن فعله في جسمه التحريك و ليس ذلك بثقل و الثاني إما أن يكون متعلقا بالكم من حيث هو كم أو لا يكون و الذي لا يكون فإما أن يوجد للأجسام من حيث هي طبيعية أو في النفوس من حيث هي نفسانية.

الثالث الكيفية إما أن تكون متعلقة بوجود النفس أو لا يكون كذلك

و الذي لا يكون فإما أن يتعلق بالكمية أو لا يتعلق و الذي لا يتعلق فإما أن يكون هويتها أنها استعداد أو هويتها أنها فعل فالأول هو الحال و الملكة و الثاني هو المختصة بالكمية - و الثالث القوة و اللاقوة و الرابع الانفعاليات و الانفعالات.

الرابع أن الكيفية إما أن تفعل على طريق التشبيه و هي الانفعاليات و الانفعالات أو لا يكون كذلك

و حينئذ إما أن لا يتعلق بالأجسام و هي الحال و الملكة أو يتعلق و ذلك

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الأربعة، ج ٤، ص ٦٤

المتعلق إما من حيث كميته و هي المختصة بالكميات أو من حيث طبيعتها و هي القوة و اللاقوة و هذه الطرق الثلاث هي التي ذكرها الشيخ في الشفاء و الكل ضعيفة متقاربة

القسم الأول في الكيفيات المحسوسة و فيه خمسة أبواب

الباب الأول في أحكام كلية لهذا القسم و فيه فصول

فصل (١) في خاصيته و في تقسيمه بقسميه و سبب التسمية

أما الخاصة المساوية التي تعم أفرادها

فهي أنها تفعل في موادها أشياء يشاركها في المعنى - فإن الحار يجعل غيره حارا و البارد يجعل غيره باردا و الألوان يقرر أشباحها في البصر قيل هذه الخاصة غير عامة لخروج الثقل و الخفة و لأنه ذكر الشيخ في فصل الأسطقسات من طبيعيات الشفاء في بيان أنه لم سميت الرطوبة و اليبوسة بالكيفيتين المنفعلتين أنه لم يثبت بالبرهان أن الرطب يجعل غيره رطبا و اليابس يجعل غيره يابسا فعلى هذا هاتان المحسوستان - لا تفيدان ميل نفسيهما.

أقول يمكن الجواب بأنهما يفعلان في الحس مثلهما و كذا الثقل و الخفة - فعلم شمول هذه الخاصة لجميع المحسوسات و الذي ذكره الشيخ في أثناء تقسيم الكيفيات أن السواد يلقي شبحه في العين و هو مثاله لا كالثقل فإن فعله في جسمه التحريك و ليس ذلك بثقل معناه أن فعل السواد في البصر لا كفعل الثقل في جسمه - و غرضه الفرق بين الفعل في مادة الإدراك و بينه في مادة الجسم حيث إن الأول مثال الشيء بخلاف الثاني فليس فيما ذكره تصريح بأن الثقل و الخفة ليسا من المحسوسات كما زعمه الرازي و كذا قوله في الرطوبة و اليبوسة إنه لم يثبت بالبرهان جعلهما الغير رطبا و يابسا معناه نفي كونهما فاعليين مثل نفسيهما في المواد لا في القوى

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٦٥

الحسية كيف و قد صرح في كثير من المواضع أن كل محسوس مما له صورة مساوية في الحس و لا فرق في ذلك بين المبصرات كالألوان و بين الملموسات كالثقل و الخفة - و هذا هو الذي وعدناه في الفصل المقدم.

و أما الخاصة الغير الشاملة فكثير

لا يحتاج إلى البيان.

و أما التقسيم

فالكيفية المحسوسة إن كانت راسخة كصفرة الذهب و حلاوة العسل سميت انفعاليات و ذلك لانفعال الحواس عنها أولا و لكونها بخصوصها أو عمومها مانعة للمزاج الحاصل من انفعال العناصر بموادها فالخصوص كما في كفيات المركبات كحلاوة العسل و العموم كما في كفيات البسائط كحرارة النار فإن الحرارة بما هي حرارة قد تكون مانعة للمزاج الحاصل بالتركيب و انفعال المواد و هذا معنى قولهم بشخصها أو نوعها و إلا فالحرارة أنواع كثيرة فالحرارة النارية و إن لم يكن حصولها بانفعال المادة لكن من شأن الحرارة المطلقة أن يحدث بالانفعال في مادة و كذا الحلاوة العسلية و إن لم يكن في العسل على سبيل انفعال من العسل لكنها إنما حدثت على انفعال في أمور تكونت عسلا فانفعلت انفعالا صارت لأجل ذلك حلوة و إن كانت غير راسخة سميت انفعالات لأنها لسرعة زوالها شديدة الشبه بأن تنفعل فهي و إن كانت داخلية في القسم الأول لأجل السببين المذكورين لكنها لقصر زمانها و سرعة زوالها امتنعت عن اسم جنسها و اقتصر على مجرد الانفعال

فصل (٢) في الرد على القول بأن كفيات الأجسام نفس أشكالها و بأنها نفس الأمزجة

زعم بعضهم أن لا حقيقة للكفيات المحسوسة بل هي مجرد انفعالات تعرض للحواس فإذا قيل لا بد لانفعال الحاسة من بعضها دون بعض و ببعض الكفيات دون بعض من سبب و إلا لانفعال البصر من الشفاف مثل ما ينفعل من الملون أجابوا بأن الأجسام

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٦٦

مركبة من أجزاء غير متجزية بالفعل و إن تجزت بالفرض و هي على أشكال متخالفة و على تراكيب و أوضاع متخالفة و ذلك الاختلاف يوجب اختلاف الآثار الحاصلة في الحواس فالذي يفرق البصر يسمى بالبياض و الذي يجمعه بالسواد و كذا في المطعوم - الذي يقطع العضو تحريفا إلى عدد كثير لكون أجزائه صغارا شديدة النفوذ هو الحريف و المتلاقي لذلك القطع هو الحلو و كذلك القول في الروائح و الملموسات كالحرارة و البرودة.

و بالجملة فاختلف الأشكال يوجب اختلاف الإحساسات و الحواس إنما ينفعل من الأشكال لا من كيفية أخرى و هذا المذهب سهل الدفع فإن ما في الحواس صورة المحسوسات و مثالها و مثال الشكل غير مثال الطعم و اللون و غيرهما و سيجيء أيضا في مباحث الكون و الفساد بطلان هذا المذهب - ثم الذي يميز اللون عن الشكل أن الشكل محسوس باللمس و اللون غير محسوس به فأحدهما غير الآخر فإن قيل المحسوس بالحقيقة هو الصورة الحاصلة في الحس فيجوز أن يفيد الشكل المخصوص لآلة البصر أثرا و لآلة اللمس أثرا آخر قلنا الآثار الحاصلة في الحواس إن كانت

أشكالاً و الشكل ملموس فالأثر الحاصل في العين ملموس هذا خلف و إن لم يكن أشكالاً فثبت القول بوجود كـيفيات وراء الأشكال لأن صور الشيء و مثاله لا بد و أن يكون مطابقاً له و مما يحتج به على إثبات هذه الكيفيات أن الألوان و الطعوم و الروائح فيها تضاد بخلاف الأشكال إذ لا تضاد فيها.

حجة أخرى قالوا إن الإحساس بالشكل متوقف على الإحساس باللون و لو كان اللون شكلاً لتوقف الشيء على نفسه قالوا إن الإنسان الواحد قد يرى جسماً واحداً - على لونين مختلفين بحسب وضعين منه كطوق الحمامة يرى مرة شقراء و مرة على لون الذهب بحسب اختلاف المقامات.

و أيضاً السكر في فم الصفاوي مر و في فم غيره حلو فلا حقيقة لهذه الأشياء إلا انفعال الحواس و لا اختلاف الإحساسات إلا اختلاف المنفعلات و الانفعالات بحسب

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٦٧

الأوضاع المختلفة.

و الجواب أما طوق الحمامة فليس المرئي منه شيئاً واحداً بل هناك أطراف الريش ذوات جهات و لكل جهة لها لون يستر لون الجهة الأخرى بالقياس إلى القائم الناظر - فللوضع مدخل في الرؤية لاشتراط المقابلة فيها لأن المرئي هو الوضع و ليس الأجناس مجرد انفعال الحواس عن محسوساتها و ليس صدق اختلاف الإحساسات لانفعالات المنفعلات.

و اعلم أن جماعة زعموا أن الكيفيات نفس الأمزجة و أن المزاج إذا كان على حد ما كان لونا و طعماً معينين و إذا كان على حد آخر و بحال آخر كان لونا و طعماً آخر - و ليس سائر الكيفيات التي تجري مجراها شيئاً و المزاج شيئاً آخر بل كل منها مزاج مخصوص يفعل في اللامسة شيئاً و في الباصرة شيئاً آخر و الذي يدل على بطلانه أن جميع الأمزجة على حدودها الواقعة بين الغايات ملموسة و لا شيء من الألوان ملموساً فليس شيء من المزاج لونا.

و أيضاً فهذه الكيفيات يوجد فيها غايات في التضاد و الأمزجة متوسطة ليست بغاية فهي أمور غير الأمزجة

الباب الثاني في الكيفيات الملموسة

و هي الحرارة و البرودة و الرطوبة و اليبوسة و اللطافة و الكثافة و اللزوجة و الهشاشة و الجفاف و البله و الثقل و الخفة و قد أدخل في هذا الباب الخشونة و الملامسة و الصلابة و اللين فلنذكر كلا منها في هذا الباب و فيه فصول

فصل (١) في حد الحرارة و البرودة

قال الشيخ في الشفاء الحرارة كيفية تفرق بين المجتمعات و تجمع بين المتشاكلات

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٦٨

و البرودة هي التي تجمع بين المتشاكلات و غير المتشاكلات و ذكر في رسالة الحدود في الحرارة أنها كيفية فعلية محركة لما فيه إلى فوق لإحداثها الخفة فيعرض أن يجمع التشابهات و يفرق المختلفات أي صدور هذا الجمع و التفريق ليس صدوراً أولياً بل ذلك تابع للخاصية الأولى و هي التحريك إلى فوق و التخفيف فهذا الرسم المذكور في الحدود أولى من المذكور في الشفاء فإذا فعلت الحرارة فعلها الأولى يحدث بتخليها الكثيف تخلخلاً من باب الكيف - أي رقة القوام و يقابله التكاثف بمعنى غلظ القوام و بتصعيده اللطيف من الأجزاء تكاثفاً - من باب الوضع أي اجتماعاً

للأجزاء الوجدانية الطبع بخروج الجسم الغريب عما بينها و يقابله التخلخل بمعنى انتفاش الأجزاء بحيث يخالطها جرم غريب و معنى الفعلية في الحرارة جعل الغير سببها لا مجرد أثر ما أعم من الحركة و غيرها ليكون قوله فعلية محرركة بمنزلة قولنا جسم حيوان على ما زعمه الإمام.

و بالجملة فالخاصية الأولية للحرارة هي إحداث الخفة و الميل المصعد ثم يترتب على ذلك بحسب اختلاف القوابل آثارا مختلفة من الجمع و التفريق و التبخير و غير ذلك.

و تحقيقه أن ما يتأثر عن الحرارة إن كان بسيطا استحال أولا في الكيف ثم يفضي به ذلك إلى انقلاب الجوهر فيصير الماء هواء و الهواء نارا و ربما يفرق المتشابهات بأن يميز الأجزاء الهوائية من النارية و يتبعها ما يخالطها من الأجزاء الصغار المائية و إن كان مركبا فإن لم يشتد التحام بسائطه و لا خفاء في أن الألفظ أقبل للصعود لزم تفريق الأجزاء المختلفة و يتبعه انضمام كل إلى ما يشاكله بمقتضى الطبيعة و هو معنى جمع المتشاكلات و أن أشد التحام البسائط فإن كان اللطيف و الكثيف القريبين من الاعتدال حدثت من الحرارة القوية حركة دورية لأنه كلما مال اللطيف إلى التصعد - جذبه الكثيف إلى الانحدار و إلا فإن كان الغالب هو اللطيف يصعد بالكلية كالنوشادر و إن كان هو الكثيف فإن لم يكن غالبا جدا حدثت يسيل كما في الرصاص أو تليين كما في الحديد و إن كان غالبا جدا كما في الطلق حدثت مجرد سخونة و احتيج في

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٦٩

تليينه إلى الاستعانة بأعمال آخر و عدم حصول التصعد و التفرق بناء على العائق لا ينافي كون خاصيتها التصعيد و التفريق للمختلفات و الجمع للمتشابهات.

فعلى ما ذكرنا اندفع ما قيل أما أنها يجمع المتشاكلات فليس كذلك لأنها تفرق الماء بالتصعيد و كذلك ترمد الحطب و تفرقه و أما أنها تفرق المختلفات فليس كذلك - لأنها لا تقوى على تفريق الأجزاء العنصرية التي في الطلق و النورة و الحديد و الذهب - و الحيوان المسمى بالسمندر بل قد يجمع بين المتشاكلات [المتخالفات] أيضا كما يزيد بياض البيض و صفرتها تلازما.

لأننا نقول أما تفريق الماء فليس كذلك بل إذا أحالت جزء منه هواء وقع التفرق بينه و بين الماء لاختلاف الطبيعتين ثم يلزم أن يختلط بذلك أجزاء مائية فيصعد مع الهواء بخارا و أما فعلها في الحطب فلأن أجزاءها الأرضية متماسكة بالمائية فإذا فرقت بينهما عرض يتأثر الأجزاء اليابسة الرمادية و أما الطلق و النورة و الحديد فالنار قوية على تسيلها بإعانة الحيل التي يتولاها أصحاب الأكسير و خصوصا إذا أعينت بما يزيد لها اشتعالا كالكبريت و الزرنيخ و أما الذهب فالنار إنما لا تفرقه لأن التلازم بين بسائطه شديد جدا فكلما مال شيء منها إلى التصعد حبسه المائل إلى الانحدار فيحدث من ذلك حركة دورية و لو لا المانع لفرقته النار و عدم الفعل لعائق ليس دليلا على انتفاء الفاعلية - و أما عقد النبض فليس جمعا له بل هو إحالة في قوامه ثم إن النار يفرقه عن قريب بالتقطير - ثم اعلم أن هذا التعريف و كذا نظائرها أعني التي للمحسوسات ليس بحد - فإنه غير مركب من المقومات و لا أيضا برسم لأنه التعريف بلازم بين ينتقل منه الذهن إلى ماهية الملزوم و هاهنا ليس كذلك فإن من لم يشاهد النار لا ينتقل ذهنه من فهم الحركة إلى فوق إذ الجمع بين المتشاكلات و التفريق بين المختلفات - إلى فهم أن المؤثر في ذلك هو الحرارة بل الفائدة في هذه الرسوم لهذه

الكيفيات ذكر خواصها وآثارها بحيث يميزها عن غيرها عند العقل بعد ما أفاده الحس ما هو الممكن في ذلك وهي حاصلة بذكر هذه اللوازم.

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٧٠

واعلم أن من القدماء من أنكر وجود البرودة وجعلها عدما للحرارة و رد بأن الجمود و التكثيف كالسيلان و الترقيق فعلا و جوديان مقابلان لهما و لا يمكن إسناد الفعل الوجودي إلى العدم و لا إلى الجسمية المشتركة فلا بد من وجود كيفيتين و جوديتين - لتكونا مصدرين لهذه الأفعال الأربعة المتقابلة.

ويمكن أن يؤول كلام القدماء بأن وجود الحرارة أقوى من وجود البرودة - فوجود البرودة عادم لشدة الوجود و لذلك فعل الحرارة أشبه بالوجودي من فعل البرودة لأن السكون و الجمود أشبه بالعدم من الحركة و لأن الحرارة قد تكون جوهرًا سماويا كالطبيعة الفائضة من عالم النفوس على أبدان فتفعل أفعالا غريبة مخالفة - لفعل هذه الحرارة العرضية

فصل (٢) في ماهية الحرارة الغريزية و إنيتها

ربما يتوهم أن إطلاق الحرارة على حرارة النار و على الحرارة الفائضة من الأجرام الكوكبية و على الحار الغريزي الفائض من عالم النفوس و على الحرارة الحادثة بالحركة بحسب اشتراك الاسم و ليس كذلك لأنه لمفهوم واحد و هو الكيفية المحسوسة التي توجب التلطيف و التصعيد و إن كانت الحرارة مختلفة بالحقيقة و الذي يشك فيه اختلاف المفهوم إنما هو في إطلاق الحار على النار و على النيران السماوية - و على الطبيعة الفاعلة في الأبدان و على الأدوية و الأغذية التي يظهر منها حرارة في بدن الحيوان و هل في كل من الكواكب و الدواء صفة مسماة بالكيفية المحسوسة - التي تكون في النار أم ذلك توسع و إطلاق الحار على ما منه الحرارة و إن لم يسم في المسمى بالحرارة فيه تردد.

والحق أنه لو ثبت فيما منه الحرارة أنه يفعلها بالذات فهو حار فإن القوى تعرف بأفاعيلها و الأثر من جنس المؤثر و إن فعلها بالعرض بأن يسد المسام أو يجمع

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٧١

الحرارة أو يمنعها عن التخليل فليس بحار.

واختلفوا في أن الحرارة الغريزية التي بها قوام الحياة في الحيوان و النبات هل هي مخالفة بالنوع للحرارة الخارجية أم لا. قال الشيخ في القانون الحار الخارجي إذا حاول أن يبطل الاعتدال فإن الحار الغريزي أشد الأشياء مقاومة له حتى إن السموم الحارة لا يدفعها إلا الحرارة الغريزية - فإنها آلة للطبيعة تدفع ضرر الحار الوارد بتحريك الروح إلى دفعه و يدفع ضرر البارد الوارد بالمضادة و ليس هذه الخاصية للبرودة فإنها إنما تنازع و تعاقب الحار الوارد بالمضادة فقط و لا تنازع البارد الوارد فالحرارة الغريزية هي التي تحمي الرطوبات الغريزية عن أن يستولي عليها الحرارة الغريبة فالحرارة الغريزية للقوى كلها - و البرودة منافية لها و لذلك يقال حرارة غريزية و لا يقال برودة غريزية و حكى في حيوان الشفاء عن المعلم الأول أنه قال الحرارة المعنوية التي بها يقبل البدن علاقة النفس ليس من جنس الحار الأسطقيسي الناري بل من جنس الحار الذي يفيض عن الأجرام السماوية فإن المزاج المعتدل بوجه ما مناسب لجوهر السماء لأنه منبعث عنه و فرق بين الحار السماوي و الحار الأسطقيسي و اعتبر ذلك بتأثير حر الشمس في عين الأعشى دون حر النار فتلك

الحرارة تتبعها الحياة التي لا تتبع النارية و بسببها صار الروح جسماً إلهياً نسبته من المني و الأعضاء نسبة العقل من القوى النفسانية فالعقل أفضل المجردات و الروح أفضل الأجسام.

و زعم الإمام الرازي أنها هي النارية فإن النار إذا خالطت سائر العناصر أفادت حرارتها للمركب طبخاً و اعتدالاً و قواماً لتوسطها بانكسار سورتها عند تفاعل العناصر بين الكثرة المفضية إلى إبطال القوام و القلة العاجزة عن الطبخ الموجب للاعتدال فتلك الحرارة هي المسماة بالحرارة الغريزية و إنما تدفع حر الغريب لأن الحر الغريب يحاول التفريق و تلك الحرارة أفادت من النضج و الطبخ ما يعسر عنده على الغريبة تفريق تلك الأجزاء فهذا السبب يدفع الحرارة الغريزية الحرارة الغريبة فالتفاوت بين الحرارتين ليس في الماهية بل في الدخول و الخروج حتى لو توهمنا الغريبة جزءاً و

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٧٢

الغريزية خارجة لكائن الغريبة تفعل فعل الغريزية.

أقول يلزم على ما ذكره أن يكون الشيء عند انكساره و ضعفه تفعل أفعالا - لا تقوى على شيء منها عند كماله و شدته.

و أيضا الفرق حاصل بين عدم انفعال الشيء عن المفسد المضر و بين أن يدفع ضرره الحاصل فالحرار الغريزي يدفع عن البدن الحرارة الغريبة التي وردت البدن و أمرضتها زماناً و لا شك أن الحرارة الأسطقسية التي في البدن تشتد بورود حرارة أخرى غريبة كمن يحترق بدنه بالنار أو يتسخن بالأهوية الحرارية أو بالحميات فالتى تقاوم هذه الأشياء المقوية لهذه الحرارة و تدفعها عن البدن و تعالجه و تعيده إلى الصحة و السلامة بعد إشراقه على الافتراق و الفساد ما هي هذه الأفاعيل تصدر عن النارية - التي هي مكسورة مقهورة على تقدير وجودها و عدم انخلاعها كسائر الصور الأسطقسية كما هو المذهب المنصور أم هي صادرة عن لا شيء أو عن البرودة التي لا فعل لها إلا القعود و السكون أو عن النفس و النفس لا يعقل إلا بواسطة القوى و الكيفيات - فما أبعد عن الحق قول من نسب التنمية و التغذية و التوليد بما في كل منها من الترتيبات - و التشبيهات و التعديلات إلى الحرارة التي شأنها الإحراق و التفريق.

و أيضا الحرار الأسطقي كباقي الأسطقسات بطبائعها متداعية إلى الانفكاك مجبورة بالقسر على الالتيام فالذي يجبرها على الالتيام و يحفظها عن التفريق هو الحرار الغريزي - باستخدام النفس أو الطبيعة إياه إذ قد ثبت في موضعه أن هذه الأفاعيل الطبيعية لا يتم إلا بشيء من هذه الكيفيات الأربع سيما الحرارة و من نظر حق النظر يعلم أن نسبة الحرارة إلى الطبيعة كنسبة الميل إلى القوى المحركة فكما أن طبيعة النار حارة الجوهر كما أن مفيد الوجود وجودي الجوهر فكذلك مبدأ الحرارة الغريزية نفساً كان أو طبعا طبيعة فلكية أو عنصرية يجب أن يكون حار الذات بذاته لا بحرارة زائدة بل ذاته بذاته حرارة و حارة إلا أن تلك الحرارة نوع آخر أعلى و أشرف من هذه الحرارة و ذاته بالحقيقة نار أخرى أجل من هذه النيران و هي محيطة بهذه لا إحاطة وضعية فقط كإحاطة السماء بكرة الأثير بل إحاطة قهرية عليه غير محسوسة بهذه الحواس بالطبيعة و النفس عندنا

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٧٣

حارتان غريزيتان و لها طبقات كثيرة الروح التي هي مطية النفس في هذا العالم جوهر ناري غير مركب من العناصر كما زعمه الجمهور بل هي من جنس الأجرام السماوية غير قابلة للموت و البرد لكونها حية بالذات نعم قد تعدد و لا يوجد

لأنها تموت و فرق بين الفساد و العدم كما أنه فرق بين الوجود و التكوين و هذه المباحث بعيدة عن أذهان أكثر المستقلين بالفكر فضلا عن المقلدين

فصل (٣) في ماهية الرطوبة و اليبوسة و إنيتها

ورد في كلام بعض المتقدمين أن رطوبة الجسم كونه بحيث يلتصق بما يلامسه - و رده الشيخ بأن الالتصاق لو كان للرطوبة لكان أشد الأجسام التصاقا أشدها رطوبة فما ليس كذلك و إلا لكان العسل أرطب من الماء فالمعتبر في الرطوبة سهولة القبول للتشكل و تركه فهي الكيفية التي بها يكون الجسم سهل التشكل بشكل الحاوي الغريب و سهل الترك له و اليبوسة هي التي يعسر بها قبول الشكل الغريب و تركه و قال الإمام الرازي بأن المعتبر في الرطوبة سهولة الالتصاق و يلزمها سهولة الانفصال فهي كيفية بها يستعد الجسم لسهولة الالتصاق بالغير و سهولة الانفصال عنه و لا نسلم أن العسل أشد التصاقا من الماء إن عנית به سهولة الالتصاق إذ لا شك أن الشيء كلما كان أرطب كان أسهل التصاقا من الماء و إن عנית لشدة الالتصاق أو كثرت دوام الالتصاق فنحن لا نفسر الرطوبة بدوام الالتصاق حتى يلزمها أن يكون الأدوم التصاقا أرطب.

و أيضا ليست الرطوبة نفس الالتصاق حتى يكون الأدوم أرطب بل الالتصاق عرض من باب الإضافة و الرطوبة من باب الكيف بل هي ما به يستعد الجسم للالتصاق و يلزمها لا محالة سهولة الانفصال المنافي لصعوبة الانفصال. أقول اعتراض الشيخ ليس على تفسير الرطوبة بسهولة الالتصاق و الانفصال كما يدل عليه ظاهر كلامه و لهذا يوجد هذا التفسير في بعض كتبه بل مبناه على أنه لا تعرض

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٧٤

في كلامهم بذكر السهولة في جانب الالتصاق و لا بذكر الانفصال أصلا على أن ما ذكره - من استلزام سهولة الالتصاق سهولة الاتصال محل منع.

و قد أورد على اعتبار سهولة الالتصاق أنه يوجب أن يكون اليابس المدفوق جدا - كالعظام المحترقة رطبا لكونه كذلك و يجاب بأنه يجوز أن يكون ذلك لفرط مخالطة الأجزاء الهوائية و هذا إنما يتم على رأي من يقول برطوبة الهواء بمعنى سهولة الالتصاق أعني البلة لو لا مانع فرط اللطافة لا على رأي من لا يقول بها و اعترض على التعريف بسهولة الأشكال بوجوه - منها أن النار أرق العناصر و أطفها و أسهلها قبولاً للأشكال فيلزم أن يكون أرطبها و بطلانه ظاهر و أجيب بأن لا نسلم سهولة قبول الأشكال الغريبة في النار الصرفة و إنما ذلك فيما يشاهد من النار المخالطة بالهواء.

فإن قيل إذا أوقد التنور شهرا أو شهرين انقلب ما فيه من الهواء نارا صرفة أو غالبية مع أن سهولة قبول الأشكال بحالها قلنا لو أوقد ألف سنة فمداخلة الهواء بحالها.

و منها أنه بمقتضى هذا التعريف كان الهواء رطبا لكنهم اتفقوا على أن خلط الرطب باليابس يفيد استمساكا عن التشتت و خلط الهواء بالنيران ليس كذلك فليس رطبا هذا خلف.

و الجواب أن ذلك إنما هو في الرطب بمعنى البلة فإن إطلاق الرطوبة على البلة شائع.

و منها أنها توجب أن يكون المعتبر في كون الجسم يابسا صعوبة قبول الأشكال - فلم يبق فرق بين اليبوسة و الصلابة و يلزم كون النار صلبه لكونها يابسة.

و الجواب أن اللين كيفية تقتضي قبول الغمر في الباطن و يكون للشيء بها قوام غير سيال و الصلابة بخلافه فهما يغييران الرطوبة و اليبوسة بهذا الاعتبار إلا أنه يشبه أن يكون مرجع قبول الغمر و لا قبوله إلى الرطوبة و اليبوسة و الحق أن تعريف الرطوبة بكيفية تقتضي سهولة اللصوق و تركه أولى.

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٧٥

و أما اليبوسة فربما يقال في تحقيقه إن من الأجسام ما يتفرق أجزاءه و يتحرك بسهولة إما لضعف تماسك الأجزاء بعضها ببعض و إما لتركه من أجزاء صغار مع صلابة كل منهما فالأول هو اليابس و الثاني هو الهش فاليبوسة كيفية تقتضي كون الجسم السريع التفرغ عسير الاجتماع.

فظهر الفرق بينها و بين الهشاشة كما بينها و بين الصلابة و أما بيان إنيتهما - فاعلم أنا قد أشرنا إلى أن تفسير الرطوبة بالكيفية التي معها يكون الجسم سهل الالتصاق و تركه أولى فإذا كانت كذلك فهي لا محالة صفة وجودية و هي من المحسوسات لا محالة و كذلك اليبوسة لما مر.

و أما إذا قلنا هي التي لأجله سهل قبول الأشكال فهو كلام مجازي إن أريد به ظاهره فإن السهل و الصعب من باب المضاف و الرطوبة و اليبوسة ليستا منه.

بل التحقيق فيه أن الرطب هو الذي لا مانع له في طباعه عن قبول الأشكال الغريبة - و عن رفضها و اليابس هو الذي في طباعه مانع يمنع من ذلك مع إمكانه فعلى هذا يشبه أن يكون التقابل بينهما بالعدم و الملكة فلم يكن الرطوبة وجودية و لا أيضا محسوسة بالذات بل كان الإحساس بها عبارة عن عدم الإحساس بمانع عن التشكل و الذي يؤكد ما ادعيناه أنهما سواء فسرت بالقابلية أو بعلة القابلية و سواء كانت القابلية صفة عدمية أو وجودية فهي لا يلزم أن تكون صفة زائدة على الجسم أما على تقدير كونها قابلية و القابلية عدمية فظاهر و أما على تقدير كونها قابلية و القابلية وجودية فلأن هذه القابلية حاصلة للجسم لذاته مع سائر القابليات لأن شأن الجسم قبول التشكلات - و لذلك كان هذا القبول حاصلًا لليابس أيضا و أما على تقدير كونها علة للقابلية و القابلية وجودية فلأنه لما كانت قابلية الجسم للأشكال حكما ثابتا لذاته استحال أن يستدعي علة زائدة و أما على تقدير كونها علة للقابلية و هي عدمية فعدم الحاجة إليه أظهر فثبت أن الرطوبة بهذا التفسير ليست وجودية فلا يشبه أنها غير محسوسة و لهذا لا يقع الإحساس بالهواء عند كونها معتدلا لا حر فيه و لا برد و لا حركة و لو كانت رطوبتها وجودية كان

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٧٦

الإحساس به دائما فلم يكن شك في كون هذا الفضاء خلاء.

و اعلم أن الشيخ مال في فصل الأسطقات إلى أن الرطوبة غير محسوسة و ذكر في كتاب النفس أنها محسوسة قال بعض العلماء لعله أراد بالغير المحسوسة هي التي بمعنى سهولة قبول الأشكال و لا بالمحسوسة هي التي بمعنى سهولة الالتصاق أعني البلة و هذا حسن و الله أعلم بالصواب

فصل (٤) في اللطافة و الكثافة و اللزوجة و الهشاشة و البلة و الجفاف

اللطافة قد تطلق على رقة القوام كما في الماء و الهواء و على سهولة قبول الانقسام إلى أجزاء صغيرة جدا و للغلظة

معنيان مقابلان لهما قال في طبيعيات الشفاء يشبه أن يكون التخلخل مشابهاً للطف بالمعنى الأول مع زيادة معنى فإنه يفيد الرقة مع كبر في الحجم و الرقة أيضاً تستلزمه إلا أن التخلخل يدل على الكبر بالتضمن و هي بالالتزام- و يقال التخلخل و يراد به تباعد أجزاء الجسم بعضها عن بعض على فرج يشغلها ما هو الطف منها و هذا المعنى غير مشغول به هاهنا.

ثم قال لكن اللطيف و المتخلخل بالمعنى الأول غير نافع في الفعل و الانفعال إلا بالعرض و قال في قاطيغوريوس يقال التخلخل الانتفاش كالصوف المنفوش و يقال لما إذا صار الجسم إلى قوام أقبل للتقطيع و التشكيل من انفعال يقع فيه و يقال لقبول المادة حجماً أكبر فالأول من الوضع و الثاني من الكيف و الثالث من الإضافة في الكم أو كم ذو إضافة و للتكاثر معان ثلاثة مقابلة لها.

و اعترض عليه بأن اللطيف و المتخلخل بالمعنى الأول هناك هو بعينه الرقة المفسر هاهنا بسهولة قبول التقطيع و التشكيل و قد حكم هناك بأنه غير نافع في الفعل و الانفعال إلا بالعرض مع أنه الذي فسر به الرطوبة فلزم خروج الرطوبة من الكيفيات النافعة فيهما مع أن إثبات ذلك مطلوب له في ذلك الفصل من الطبيعي و الأولى أن يقال سهولة

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٧٧

قبول الأشكال هي الرقة و اللطافة فاما سهولة الالتصاق بالغير و الانفصال هي الرطوبة النافعة في الفعل و الانفعال و الكثافة عبارة عن صعوبة قبول الأشكال.

و أما اللزوجة فكيفية مزاجيه غير بسيطة المعنى لأن اللزج ما يسهل تشكيله بأي شكل أريد و لكن يصعب تفريقه بل يمتد متصلاً فهو مؤلف من رطب و يابس شديد الالتحام و الهش ما يخالفه فهو ما يصعب تشكيله و يسهل تفريقه لغلبة اليابس و قلة الرطب مع ضعف المزاج.

و أما البلة فاعلم أن هاهنا رطباً و مبتلاً و منتقعا فالرطب هو الذي صورته النوعية - تقتضي الرطوبة بمعنى قبول الالتصاق و الانفصال و المبتل ما يعرضه الرطوبة بمقارنة الرطب فإن نفذت الرطوبة في باطنه فهو المنتقع و الجفاف مقابل البلة

فصل (٥) في الثقيل و الخفيف و فيه مباحث

أولها أن الشيخ قال في الحدود الاعتماد و الميل كيفية

بها يكون الجسم مدافعاً لما يمنعه عن الحركة فدل على أنه مبدأ المدافعة لا نفسها و هي غير الحركة كما في الثقيل المسكن في الجو و الزق المنفوخ المسكن تحت الماء فإنه يحس منهما الميل الهابط و الصاعد و غير الطبيعة لأنها قد تكون نفسانية و لعدمها عند كون الجسم في حيزه الطبيعي و لأن المدافعة تشدد و تضعف و الطبيعة بحالها.

و ثانيها أن لمن أثبت الميل أمراً غير المدافعة

أن يقول الحلقة التي يجذبها الجذبان المتساويان حتى وقفت في الوسط لا شك أن كلا منهما أثر فيها فعلاً يمنع عن تحريك الآخر إياها غير المدافعة لعدم حصولها و ليس ذلك نفس الطبيعة لأن فعلها إلى جانبي العلو و السفلى و فعلهما لو تم فإلى جانبين غيرهما فثبت أن لهذه المدافعة مبدأ غير الطبيعة و غير القوة النفسانية.

و ثالثها أن الخفة و الثقل قد عرفهما الشيخ في الحدود

بقوله الثقل قوة طبيعية يتحرك بها الجسم إلى الوسط بالطبع و الخفة قوة طبيعية يتحرك بها الجسم عن

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٧٨

الوسط بالطبع وليس المراد من الوسط نفس المركز بل موضع ينطبق مركز الثقل - أو مركز ثقله على مركز العالم عند كونه في ذلك الموضع و مركز الثقل عبارة عن نقطة - يتعادل ما على جوانبها ثقلا بمعنى أن ثقل كل جانب يساوي ثقل مقابله.

أقول قوله بالطبع ليس مكررا كما زعمه بعض و لا صفة للمركز احترازا عن مراكز الكرات الخارجة المراكز لأن الثقل لا يتحرك إليها بل إلى ما هو المركز بالطبع و هو مركز الجسم الأول الفاعل للجهات كما زعمه الرازي بل صفة للحركة احترازا عن الحركة القسرية على ما هو التحقيق من أن فاعلها هي الطبيعة التي في المقسور - ليخرج عن الثقل الخفيف المتحرك إلى الوسط بالقسر و عن الخفيف الثقيل المرمي إلى الفوق ثم إن قوله قوة [طبيعة] يدل على أن الميل غير الطبيعة سواء كان نفس المدافعة أو ما به المدافعة.

و رابعها أقسام الميل الطبيعي و قسري و نفساني

و الطبيعي لا يكون إلا إلى جهة من الجهات و الجهة الحقيقية اثنتان فالميل الطبيعي اثنتان الثقل و هو الميل السافل و الخفة و هو الميل الصاعد و القسري على خلاف الطبيعي و أما النفساني فقد يكون مستديرا - و قد يكون مستقيما و قد يختلف باختلاف الإرادات.

و خامسها أن الميل الطبيعي لا يوجد في الأجسام عند ما يكون في أحيائها الطبيعية.

قال الإمام الرازي هذا مما نص عليه الشيخ في كتاب السماء و العالم من الشفاء من غير حجة إقناعية فضلا عن البرهانية. أقول هذا في الوضوح بمنزلة لا يحتاج إلى البرهان بعد تصور الميل و مبدئه و لازمه عند عدم المانع.

و سادسها أن الميل قد يراد به نفس المدافعة

و قد يراد به السبب القريب لها - و هو المنبعث من الطبيعة عند حاجتها إليه حين خروجها عن الموضع الطبيعي أو النفس عند الإرادة باستخدام الطبيعة و كما أن من الممتنع وجود حركتين مختلفتي الجهة من الجسم بالذات لأن الحركة الواحدة تقتضي قربا إلى موضع ما و يلزمه البعد عن خلاف

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٧٩

جهته فلو وجدت حركتان كذلك يلزم الجسم الواحد التوجه و عدمه إلى كل من المقصدين فكذلك من الممتنع أن يوجد ميلان مختلفان بالفعل في جسم واحد سواء أريد بالميل نفس المدافعة أو سببها القريب منها فعلى ما ذكرنا اندفع التناقض الذي أورده الإمام الرازي على كلامي الشيخ في الموضعين من الشفاء.

أحدهما ما قال في الفصل الذي تبين فيه أن بين كل حركتين سكونا بالفعل - و لا تصغ إلى قول من يقول إن الميلين يجتمعان فكيف يمكن أن يكون في شيء بالفعل مدافعة إلى جهة و فيه بالفعل التنحي عنها و لا تظن أن الحجر المرمي إلى فوق - فيه ميل إلى أسفل البتة بل فيه مبدأ من شأنه أن يحدث ذلك الميل إليه إذا زال العائق - و الثاني ما قال في الفصل الذي يتكلم فيه في الحركة القسرية السبب في الحركة القسرية قوة يستفيد بها المتحرك من المحرك يثبت فيه مدة إلى أن يبطله مصاكات كانت يتصل عليه مما يماسه و ينحرق به و كلما ضعف بذلك قوي عليه الميل الطبيعي - فقول

قوي عليه الميل الطبيعي يشعر بوجود الميل الطبيعي مع الميل القسري ولكن المراد منه مبدأ المدافعة أو قوتها بمعنى الإمكان الاستعدادي المقابل للفعل و أما الحلقة الساكنة مع أنها المجذوبة إلى جهتين فنحكم بوجود استعداد بعيد للمدافعتين - لا وجودهما و لا وجود مبدئيهما القريين.

و سابعها أن الميل كما يكون إلى الجهات المكانية كذلك يكون إلى المقاصد الكيفية و الكمية و الوضعية

بل الجوهرية كما مضى في مباحث الحركة بل الميل لما كان هو السبب القريب للحركة ينقسم إلى انقسامها فمنها ما يحدث فيه من طباع المتحرك - فتقسم إلى ما يحدثه الطبيعة كميل الحجر عند هبوطه و إلى ما يحدثه النفس كميل النبات إلى التزايد في الكم و إلى الاستحالة في الكيف كميل العنب من الحموضة بل من المرارة إلى الحلاوة و من الخضرة إلى الصفرة و ميل الحيوان عند اندفاعه الإرادي إلى جهة و منه ما يحدث من تأثير قاسر خارج من الجسم كميل السهم عند انفصاله من القوس و الكل عندنا بسبب الطبيعة سواء كانت مستقلة أو مقهورة للنفس أو مقسورة

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٨٠

بأمر خارج لكن المحسوس من هذه الأقسام ليس إلا الميل المكاني و القسري منه يختلف الأجسام في قبوله و التعصي عنه بأمور ذاتية أو عرضية فالاختلاف الذاتي هو ما بحسب قوة الميل الطباعي و ضعفها فالأقوى بحسب الطبع أكثر تعصيا و امتناعا - من قبول الميل القسري و الأضعف أقل امتناعا و الاختلاف العرضي إما لعدم تمكن الفاسد منه كالرملة الصغيرة أو لعدم تمكنه من دفع الممانع كالتنبية أو لتخلخله الذي لأجله يتطرق إليه الموانع بسهولة كالريشة أو لغير ذلك.

و ثامنها أنه كما يجوز اجتماع حركتين متخالفتي الجهة في جسم واحد

إحداهما بالذات و الأخرى بالعرض كحركة الشخص بنفسه في سفينة متحركة يحركه بالعرض كذلك يجوز أن يوجد ميلان مختلفان في جسم واحد بالفعل أحدهما بالذات و الآخر بالعرض كحجر يحمله إنسان يمشي فإنه يحس بثقله و هو ميله بالذات و يخرق الهواء منه و هو ميله بالعرض الذي للإنسان بالذات لكن لا يجوز اجتماع ميلين متخالفين أحدهما بالطبع و الآخر بالقسر كما لا يجوز اجتماع حركتين مختلفتين كذلك نعم الميل يشتد و يضعف أما الطبيعي فبحسب اختلاف الجسم ذي الطبيعة في الكم فالأكبر أشد ميلا من الأصغر أو في الكيف كالتكاثف و التخلخل فالأكثف أشد ميلا للهبوط من الألف و بالعكس للصعود و في الوضع كاندماج الأجزاء و انتفاشها - و قد يختلف أيضا بأسباب خارجة من رقة قوام المسافة و غلظه و أما القسري فبحسب ما أشرنا إليه.

إذا تقرر ذلك فاعلم أنه إذا طرأ على جسم ذي ميل طبيعي بالفعل ميل قسري - يتقاوم السببان أعني القاسر و الطبيعة فإن غلب القاسر و صارت الطبيعة مقهورة حدث ميل قسري و بطل الطبيعي ثم أخذ الموانع الخارجية مع الطبيعة في إفنائه قليلا قليلا - فبأخذ الميل القسري في الانتقاص و قوة الطبيعة في الازدياد إلى أن تقاوم الطبيعة الباقي من الميل القسري فيبقى الجسم عديم الميل ثم تجدد الطبيعة ميلها مشوبا بآثار الضعف الباقية فيها و يشتد بزوال الضعف فيكون الأمر بين قوة الطبيعة و الميل القسري قريبا

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٨١

من الامتزاج الحادث من الكيفيات المتضادة انتهى.

وقد مثل الشيخ حال الميلين الطبيعي و القسري كما يشاهد في الحجر المرمي حالتي صعوده و هبوطه و كيفية التقاوم بينهما بحال الماء في حدوث الحرارة- المنبعثة فيه من تأثير غيره حيث يبطل به البرودة المنبعثة من طباعه إلى أن تزول تلك الحرارة بأسباب خارجة شيئاً فشيئاً فيعود انبعاث البرودة من طباعه فإنه لا يجتمع في الماء حرارة و برودة بل يكون أبداً مكيفاً بكيفية واحدة متوسطة بين غايتي الحرارة الغربية و البرودة الذاتية تارة أميل إلى هذه فتسمى حرارة و تارة أميل إلى تلك فتسمى برودة و تارة متوسطة بينهما فلا تسمى باسميهما و ذلك بحسب تفاعل الحرارة العارضة و الطبيعة مع ما يعاونها من الأمور الخارجية كالهواء المبرد الحاوي لذلك الماء فكذلك لا يجتمع في جسم ميلان- بل يكون دائماً ذا ميل واحد شديد أو ضعيف قسري أو طبيعي و عند تقاوم الميل القسري و الطبيعة- كأنه ينعدم الميل بالكلية لكن الفرق بين الميلين الطبيعي و القسري للحجر و بين البرودة الذاتية و الحرارة القسري للماء أن خلوا الجسم من الميل ممكن كما في كونه عند حيزه الطبيعي و كما في حالة سكونه بين الحركتين الصاعدة القسرية و الهابطة الطبيعية و كما في الحلقة التي تجاذب طرفاه بقوتين متساويتين و لكن خلوا الماء عن مرتبة من الحرارة و البرودة غير ممكن لأن بعض الأضداد يجوز خلوا الموضوع القابل عنها و بعضها لا يجوز خلوه عنها.

و تاسعها أنه هل يجوز اجتماع الميلين إلى جهة واحدة

أحدهما طبيعي و الآخر غريب أما الجسم الإبداعي الذي وجد على كماله الأتم من غير عائق عن ميلها الطباعي- كالأفلاك في حركاتها الوضعية و كالعناصر الكلية في حركاتها لو فرض في العالم خلاء- و هي في غير أحيائها كان ذلك ممتنعاً لأن قاعدة الإمكان الأشرف دلت على أنها في أقصى الممكن من قواها الطبيعية فميلها بالغة إلى الغاية فلا يمكن الزيادة عليها من خارج- و أما في غيرها حيث يكون الجسم معارضا بما يدفعه مثل الحجر الهاوي فإن الهواء يقاومه في ميله فلا يبعد أن يحصل معه معاون من ميل خارج يوجب سرعة حركته.

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٨٢

و عاشرها أن المعتزلة من المتكلمين يسمون الميل اعتماداً

و يقسمون الاعتماد إلى لازم كاعتماد الثقل إلى السفلى و الخفيف إلى فوق و غير الطبيعي مختلفاً و منهم من جعل الاعتماد في الجسم واحداً لكنه يسمى بأسماء مختلفة بحسب الاعتبار فيسمى اعتماد واحد بالنسبة إلى السفلى ثقلاً و إلى العلو خفة و إن لم يكن له بالنسبة إلى سائر الجهات اسم مخصوص.

و ذهب بعض آخر إلى أنها متعددة متضادة لا يقوم بجسم واحد اعتمادان بالنسبة إلى جهتين و منهم كالجبائي على أن الاعتماد لازماً كان أو مختلفاً غير باق.

و قال أبو هاشم بل اللازم باق بحكم المشاهدة كما في الألوان و الطعوم و قال الجبائي إن الاعتماد لا يولد حركة و لا سكونا و إنما ولدهما الحركة- فإن من فتح باباً أو رمى حجراً فما لم يتحرك يده لم يتحرك المفتاح و لا الحجر ثم الحركة في المفتاح و الحجر تولد حركة بعد حركة و تولد سكونه في المقصد و أبو هاشم على أن المولد للحركة و السكون هو الاعتماد.

و استدلل أيضاً بأن حركة الرامي متأخرة عن حركة الحجر المرمي لأنه ما لم يندفع الحجر من حيزه امتنع انتقال يد الرامي

إليه لاستحالة التداخل بين الجسمين و هو ضعيف لأنه إن أريد التأخر بالزمان فاستحالة التداخل لا يوجب ذلك - لجواز أن يكون اندفاع هذا و انتقال ذلك في زمان واحد كما في أجزاء الحلقة التي تدور على نفسها بل الأمر كذلك و إلا لزم الانفصال و إن أريد بالذات فالأمر بالعكس - إذ ما لم يتحرك اليد لم يتحرك الحجر و لهذا يصح أن يقال تحركت اليد فتحرك الحجر دون العكس فالأقرب لمن قال بالتوليد أن المولد للحركة و السكون قد يكون هو الحركة و قد يكون الاعتماد فإنه يولد أشياء مختلفة من الحركات و غيرها بعضها لذاته من غير شرط كتوليد الحركة لأنه السبب القريب لها و بعضها بشرط كتوليده أوضاعا مختلفة للجسم بشرط حركاته و كتوليد عود الجسم إلى حيزه الطبيعي بشرط خروجه عنه و كتوليده للألم بشرط توليده تفرق الاتصال و الأصوات بشرط توليده المصاكة.

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٨٣

هذا تقرير مذهبهم في الميل و أما على قوانين الحكماء فقد علمت أن الميل غير باق في المواضع التي ذكرناها و أنه مما يشتد و يضعف و الشدة و الضعف يوجبان تبدل الشيء لذاته فالميل غير ضروري البقاء في كل جسم بشخصه و إنما الباقي في كل جسم شخصي هو الطبيعة الجوهرية المقومة له و أما الذي استدل به بعض العلماء على بقاء الميل في حال الوصول إلى المطلوب من أنه يفعل الإيصال لأنه المحرك و المدافع إليه - و المدافع هو بعينه الموصل إليه و يمنع انفكاك المعلول عن علته فذلك صحيح يقتضي وجود الميل إلى أن الوصول و لا يقتضي بقاءه كما لا يقتضي بقاء الحركة بل استحالتهم لأن المستدعي للميل و الحركة هو خروج الجسم عما هو المطلوب طبعاً كان أو قسراً أو إرادة و هو غير باق في زمان الوصول إلى المطلوب فلا يمكن الميل المحرك إليه لاستلزامه تحصيل الحاصل.

و حادي عشرها أن الميل هيئة قارة

و إن وقع في بعض أفرادها تدريج و ليس كالحركة التي لا يتصور إلا تدريجاً لشيء كالآل و الكم و غيرهما و ذلك لأن الميل لا بد من وجوده عند الوصولات إلى حدود مطالب غير منقسمة في الحدوث و الموجود في حد غير منقسم كان موجوداً في آن و إن استمر قبله أو بعده أيضاً.

و ثاني عشرها أن لا تفاعل بين الثقل و الخفة

إذ الثقل يوجب حركة الجسم إلى جانب المركز و الخفة إلى جانب المحيط فكل منهما يوجب تباعد جسمه عن جسم الآخر فالوصفان الموجبان تباعد الجسمين إلى غاية التباعد يستحيل أن يجتمعا حتى يتفاعلا.

و قد علمت أن السكون الذي بين حركتي الصاعدة و الهابطة إنما حصل من تفاعل بين الطبيعة و الميل القسري الصاعد لا بين الميلين لعدم اجتماعهما بل هما منعتمان جميعاً في ذلك الزمان إلا في الطرفين ففي آن أوله كان آخر زمان الميل القسري و قد قاومته الطبيعة حتى أزالته و في آن آخره كان أول زمان الميل الطبيعي و قد أحدثته الطبيعة بعد فراغها عن آثار شواغل الميل القسري

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٨٤

فصل (٦) فيما يظن دخوله في الكيفيات اللمسية و ليس منها

فمن ذلك الخشونة و الملاسة و الصلابة و اللين و إنما يقع الاشتباه في مثل هذه الأمور لعدم الفرق بين ما بالذات و ما

بالعرض فالخشونة اختلاف الأجزاء و الملاسة استواءها و هما من باب الوضع على أن المحسوس ليس مجرد الوضع أيضا بل أمر آخر من صلابة أو لين أو حرارة أو برودة أو غيرهما فليسا من هذا الباب.

أما اللين فله صفتان الانغمار الحاصل فيه و هو من باب الحركة مع تقعير في سطحه منها و هو من باب الكيفيات المختصة بالكميات و ليس اللين نفس هاتين الصفتين لأنه موجود مع عدمهما و لأن اللين غير محسوس بالبصر و هما محسوسان به - فاللين عبارة عن استعداد تام نحو الانغمار و كذا الصلب فيه أمور بعضها عدمي و هو عدم الانغمار و بعضها وجودي فمنه المقاومة المحسوسة و منه بقاء الشكل و ليست الصلابة شيئا منها.

أما العدم فظاهر أما الشكل فقد علمت أما المقاومة فلو كانت صلابة كان الهواء الذي في الزق المنفوخ صلبا و كذا الرياح الهابة بل الصلابة هي الاستعداد الطبيعي نحو الانفعال و الاستعداد و الاستعداد ليسا مما يدرك بالحس فضلا عن اللمس فالصلابة و اللين من باب الكيفيات الاستعدادية.

و أما سائر الكيفيات الحاصلة بالامتزاج بين أوائل الملموسات أعني الأربع الفعليتين و الانفعاليتين فاللائق بذكرها موضع آخر حين نشغل بذكر مباحث الأجسام الطبيعية.

و أما الكيفيات المذوقة و إن ناسب أن تردف بهذا المقام لكون المذوق تلو الملموس - لكن أخرناها لكون البحث عنها مختصرا فحاولنا إرداف الكيفيات المبصرة بهذا الموضع - استمدادا من فاعل الخير و الجود و استجلابا لإفاضة العلم و إكمال الوجود

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٨٥

الباب الثالث في الكيفيات المبصرة و فيه فصول

فصل (١) في إثبات الألوان

ذهب بعض الناس إلى أن لا حقيقة للون أصلا

بل جميع الألوان من باب الخيالات كما في قوس قزح و الهالة غيرهما فإن البياض إنما يتخيل من مخالطة الهواء - للأجسام الشفافة المتصغرة جدا لكثرة السطوح المتعاكسة عنها النور بعضها من بعض كما في الثلج فإنه لا سبب هناك إلا مخالطة الهواء و نفوذ الضوء في أجزاء صغار جمادية و كثرة انعكاساته و كما في زبد الماء و المسحوق من البلور و الزجاج الصافي - و أما السواد فمن عدم غور الضوء في الجسم لكثافته و اندماج أجزائه.

و الحاصل أن البياض هو راجع إلى النور و السواد إلى الظلمة و باقي الألوان متخيلة من تفاوت اختلاط الشفيف بالهواء و ربما يسند السواد إلى الماء نظرا إلى أنه يخرج الهواء فلا يكمل نفوذ الضوء إلى السطوح و لأجل هذا يميل الثوب المبلول إلى السواد - و المحققون على أنها كيفيات متحققة لا متخيلة و إن كانت متخيلة في بعض المواضع أيضا - و ظهورها في الصورة المذكورة بتلك الأسباب لا ينافي تحققها و حدوثها بأسباب أخرى - التي هي باستحالات المواد.

[كلام الشيخ في ذلك]

و اعلم أن الشيخ ذكر في فصل توابع المزاج من ثمانية الفن الرابع من الطبيعيات أنه لم يعلم أنه هل يحصل البياض بغير هذا الطريق المذكور أم لا و لكن في المقالة الثالثة من علم النفس قد قطع بوجود ذلك فقال إنه لا شك في أن اختلاط الهواء بالمشف سبب لظهور اللون و لكننا ندعي أن البياض قد يحدث من غير هذا

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٨٦

الوجه بوجوه - أحدها كما في البيض المسلوق فإنه يصير أشد بياضا مع أن النار لم يحدث فيه تخلخلا وهوائية بل أخرجت الهوائية عنه و لهذا صار أثقل.

و ثانيها كما في الدواء المسمى بلبن العذراء فإنه يكون من خل طبخ فيه مرداسنج حتى انحل فيه ثم يصفى حتى يبقى الخل في غاية الإشفاف ثم يطبخ المرداسنج في ماء طبخ فيه القلي و يبالغ في تصفيته ثم يختلط الماءان فينعتقد فيه المنحل الشفاف من المرداسنج و يصير في غاية الإيباض كاللبن الرائب ثم يجف بعد الإيباض فليس إيباضه لأنه شفاف متفرق قد دخل فيه الهواء و إلا لم يجف بعد الإيباض و كما في الجص فإنه يبيض بالطبخ بالنار لا بالسحق و التصويك مع أن تفرق الأجزاء و مداخله الهواء فيه أظهر.

و ثالثها اختلاف طرق الاتجاه من البياض إلى السواد حيث يكون تارة من البياض إلى الغبرة ثم العودية ثم السواد و تارة إلى الحمرة ثم القتمة ثم السواد و تارة إلى الخضرة ثم النيلية ثم السواد يدل على اختلاف ما يتركب عنه الألوان إذ لو لم يكن كذلك لم يكن في تركيب السواد و البياض إلا الأخذ في طريق واحد و لم يكن اختلاف إلا بالشدة و الضعف لهما.

و رابعها انعكاس الحمرة و الخضرة و نحوهما من الألوان إذ لو لم يكن اختلافها إلا لاختلاط المشف بغيره لوجب أن لا ينعكس من الأحمر و الأخضر و غيرهما إلا البياض لأن السواد لا ينعكس بحكم التجربة. هذا تلخيص ما أفاده في الشفاء و دلالة هذين الوجهين على أن سبب اختلاف الألوان لا يجب أن يكون هو التركيب بين السواد و البياض أقوى من دلالتهم على أن سبب البياض لا يجب أن يكون مخالطة الهواء للأجزاء الشفافة مع أن في كل منهما موضع نظر لجواز أن يقع تركيب السواد و البياض على أنحاء مختلفة و أن يقع انعكاس السواد عند الامتزاج لا عند الانفراق.

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٨٧

و العجب أن صاحب كتاب المواقف فهم عن سوء فهمه أو سوء ظنه بمثل الشيخ عن بعض عبارات الشفاء حيث يقول في بيان سبب البياض في الصورة المذكورة أن اختلاط الهواء بالمشف على الوجه المخصوص سبب لظهور لون أبيض و لرؤية لون البياض أنه ينكر وجود البياض فيها بالحقيقة فنسبه إلى السفسطة حاشاه عن ذلك.

و منهم من نفى البياض و أثبت السواد تمسكا بأن البياض ينسلخ و السواد لا ينسلخ - و دفع بأن قولهم للأسود أنه غير قابل للبياض إن عنوا به على سبيل الاستحالة فغير صادق - إذ كذبهم الشيب بعد الشباب و إن عنوا به على سبيل الانصباغ فسيبه أن الصبغ المسود لما فيه قوة قابضة فيخالط و ينفذ و المبيضات غير نافذة و نقل عن أصحاب الإكسير أنهم ينتقلون نحاسا كثيرا برصاص مكلس و زرنخ مصعد و ذلك يبطل ما قالوه و ربما تمسكوا بأن مادة البياض تقبل الألوان و مادة السواد لا تقبلها فدل على أن مادة البياض عارية عن اللون.

و دفع بأنه يجوز أن يكون الحقيقي مفارقا و التخيلي لازما لزوال سبب الأول و لزوم سبب الثاني.

أقول لا شبهة في أن القابل ما دام اتصافه بلون لا يمكن اتصافه بلون آخر فمادة البياض ما دام بياضه لا يمكن أن يتصف

بلون آخر وكذا في السواد و سائر الألوان بلا فرق فإن فرق بأن انسلاخ السواد عن محله غير ممكن كان رجوعا إلى الوجه الأول و انسلاخ الشيء و عدم انسلاخه من أضعف الدلائل على العدم و الوجود فرب وجودي ينسلخ و رب عدمي لا ينسلخ كالأعمى و البصر حيث ينسلخ الوجودي و لا ينسلخ العدمي.

و ربما احتج بأن محل البياض يقبل جميع الألوان و كل ما يقبل الشيء يجب أن يكون عاريا عنه فمحل البياض يجب أن يعرى عن الألوان كلها.

و الجواب أن الصغرى كاذبة لأنه يقبل ما سوى اللون الأبيض الذي فيه فلا يلزم إلا عراؤه عن غير ذلك البياض و إن أريد بالقبول المجامع للفعلية منعنا الكبرى

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٨٨

و هو ظاهر.

و ربما قيل لو كان القابل للشيء واجب الانخلاع عنه لكان ممتنع الاتصاف به و اللازم باطل فكذا الملزوم و هو منفسخ بأن القضية مشروطة فلا يلزم إلا امتناع الاتصاف ما دام قابلا و ذلك حق.

تتمة-

اعلم أن كل ما يحدث من الألوان بسبب طبخ صناعي أو نضج طبيعي - و بالجملة باستحالة للمادة فهو لون طبيعي و كل ما يحدث دفعه في محل و إن كان بعد حركة مكانية فهو لون غير طبيعي كالألوان و القزحية و الزجاجية و ألوان المسحوقات المشقة كالجمد المكسور بأجزاء صغيرة و كلا القسمين موجودان لكن أحدهما مادي حاصل بانفعال المادة و الآخر من تعينات النور الحاصل و اختلاف ظهوره على الأبصار حسب اختلاف المظاهر.

ثم إن القائلين بكون السواد و البياض كيفيتين حقيقتين - منهم من زعم أنهما أصل الألوان و البواقي بالتركيب و ذكروا في بيانه وجوها ضعيفة.

و منهم من ذهب إلى أن أصول الألوان و هي السواد و البياض و الحمرة و الصفرة و الخضرة و البواقي بالتركيب بحكم المشاهدة و لا يخفى أن المشاهدة إنما تفيد أن التركيب المخصوص يفيد اللون المخصوص و أما أن ذلك اللون لا يحصل إلا من هذا التركيب و لا يكون له حقيقة مفردة فلا

فصل (٢) في النور المحسوس

و اعلم أن النور إن أريد به الظاهر بذاته و المظهر لغيره فهو مساوق للوجود

بل

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٨٩

نفسه فيكون حقيقة بسيطة كالوجود منقسما بانقسامه فمنه نور واجب لذاته قاهر على ما سواه و منه أنوار عقلية و نفسية و جسمية و الواجب تعالى نور الأنوار غير متناهي الشدة - و ما سواه أنوار متناهية الشدة بمعنى أن فوقها ما هو أشد منها و إن كان بعضها كالأنوار العقلية لا يقف آثارها عند حد و الكل من لمعات نوره حتى الأجسام الكثيفة فإنها أيضا من حيث الوجود لا تخلو من نور لكنه مشوب بظلمات الأعدام و الإمكانيات كما بيناه في شرحنا لحكمة الإشراق و إن أريد

به هذا الذي يظهر به الأجسام على الأبصار فاختلّفوا في حقيقته فمنهم من زعم أنه عرض من الكيفيات المحسوسة.

و منهم من زعم أنه جوهر جسماني

لكن ينبغي على من يرى أنه عرض أن يعلم أنه ليس من الأعراض التي تحصل بانفعال المادة و بالاستحالة بل يقع دفعة من المبدأ الفياض في محل قابل إياه إما بمقابلة نير و إما بذاته و كذا ينبغي على من يزعم أنه جسم أن يدّعي أنه ليس من الأجسام المادية المشتملة على قوة استعدادية تنفعل بها عن تأثير فاعل غريب فهو على تقدير جسميته يكون خاليا عن الكيفيات الانفعالية - كالرطوبة و اليبوسة و الثقل و الخفة و اللين و الصلابة و أمثالها و كذا عن الكيفيات الفعلية المقتضية لتلك الانفعالات كالحرارة الموجبة للحركة إلى فوق و للتفريق و الجمع و ما شابهها و كالبرودة الموجبة للثقل و الكثافة و الجمود و أمثالها بل لا بد و أن يكون من الأجسام الكائنة دفعة بلا استحالة و انتقال لكن الزاعمين أنه جسم اشتهر بينهم أن النور أجسام صغار تنفعل عن المضيء و يتصل بالمستضيء و ذلك ممتنع لأن أكثر النيرات المضئية أجرام كوكبية دائمة الإنارة لا ينفصل أجزاؤها عنها دائما و إلا يلزمها الذبول و الانتقاص و خلو مواضعها عن تمام مقدارها أو مقدار أجزائها - أو كونها دائمة التحليل مع إيراد البدل عما يتحلل عن جرمها فيكون أجسامها أجساما مستحيلة غذائية كائنة فاسدة و ذلك محال من الفلكيات و أما الذي ذكر في كتب الفن لا يبطال مذهب القائلين بكون الأنوار المبصرة أجساما فوجوه

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٩٠

الأول أنه لو كان النور جسما متحركا لكانت حركة طبيعية و الحركة الطبيعية إلى جهة واحدة دون سائر الجهات لكن النور يقع على الجسم في كل جهة كانت له.

والثاني أن النور إذا دخل من الكوة ثم سدناها دفعة فتلك الأجزاء النورانية إما أن يبقى أو لا يبقى فإن بقيت فهل بقيت في البيت أو يخرج.

فإن قيل إنها خرجت عن الكوة قبل انسدادها فهو محال لأن السد كان سبب انقطاعها فلا بد أن يكون سابقا عليه بالذات أو بالزمان و إن بقيت في البيت فيلزم أن يكون البيت مستنيرا كما كان قبل السد و ليس كذلك و إن لم يبق فيلزم أن يكون تخلل جسم بين جسمين يوجب انعدام أحدهما و هو معلوم الفساد.

و الثالث أن كونها أنوارا إما أن يكون عين كونها أجساما و إما أن يكون مغايرا لها و الأول باطل لأن المفهوم من النورية مغاير للمفهوم من الجسمية و لذلك يعقل جسم مظلم و لا يعقل نور مظلم و إما أن قيل إنها أجسام حاملة لتلك الكيفية تنفصل عن المضيء و تتصل بالمستضيء فهذا أيضا باطل لأن تلك الأجسام إما محسوسة أو غير محسوسة فإن لم تكن محسوسة كانت ساترة لما وراءها و يجب أنها كلما ازدادت اجتماعا ازدادت سترها لكن الأمر بالعكس فإن الضوء كلما ازداد قوة ازداد إظهارا.

و الرابع أن الشمس إذا طلعت من الأفق يستنير وجه الأرض كله دفعة و من البعيد أن ينتقل تلك الأجزاء من الفلك الرابع إلى وجه الأرض في تلك اللحظة اللطيفة - لا سيما و الخرق على الأفلاك ممتنع. أقول و هذه الوجوه في غاية الضعف كما بيناه فيما كتبنا على حكمة الإشراق.

أما الوجه الأول فلأن كون النور جسما لا يستلزم كونه متحركا و لا كون حدوثه بالحركة بل مما يوجد دفعة بلا حركة.

وأما الوجه الثاني فلنأخذ أن يقول إن قيام المجعول بلا مادة إنما يكون بالفاعل الجاعل إياه مع اشتراط عدم الحجاب المانع عن الإفاضة فإذا طرأ المانع لم يقع الإفاضة فينعدم المفاض بلا مادة باقية عنه لأن وجوده لم يكن بشركة المادة فكذا

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٩١

عدمه فعند انسداد الباب عن الإفاضة ينعدم الشعاع عن البيت دفعة ولا فرق في ذلك بين كونه عرضاً أو جوهرًا والسر فيهما جميعاً أن النور مطلقاً ليس حصوله من جهة انفعال المادة - و شركة الهیولی كسائر الجواهر والأعراض الانفعاليات ولذلك لا ينعدم شيء منها دفعة - لو فرض حجاب بينها وبين مبدئه الفاعلي إلا بعد زمان وعقيب استحالة.

وأما الذي ذكره ثالثاً فجوابه أن المغايرة في المفهوم لا تنافي الاتحاد والعينية في الوجود كنفس الوجود فإن مفهومه غير مفهوم الجسم ولكن وجود الجسم حين جسميته - فما ذكره مغالطة من باب الاشتباه بين مفهوم الشيء وحقيقته وإلا لا تنقض الدليل بالوجود لجريانه فيه بأن يقال المفهوم من الموجودية غير المفهوم من الجسمية - ولذلك يعقل جسم معدوم ولا يعقل وجود معدوم.

والحل فيهما جميعاً أن مفهوم النور والوجود غير مفهوم الجسم لكن المفهومات المختلفة قد تكون في الأعيان ذاتاً واحدة من غير تعدد في وجودها وأما المذكور رابعاً - فلأن مبناه أيضاً على الانفصال والقطع للمسافة لا على مجرد الجوهرية والجسمية

فصل (٣) في حقيقة النور وأقسامه

النور غني عن التعريف كسائر المحسوسات وتعريفه بأنه كيفية هي كمال أول للشفاف من حيث إنه شفاف أو بأنه كيفية لا يتوقف الإبصار بها على الإبصار بشيء آخر - تعريف بما هو أخفى وكان المراد به التنبيه على بعض خواصه و المعترفون بأنه كيفية اختلفوا.

فمنهم من ذهب إلى أنه عبارة عن ظهور اللون فقط وقالوا إن الظهور المطلق هو الضوء والخفاء المطلق هو الظلمة والمتوسط بينهما الظل ويختلف مراتبه بمراتب

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٩٢

القرب والبعد عن الطرفين فإذا ألف الحس مرتبة من مراتب الخفاء ثم شاهد ما هو أكثر ظهوراً من الأول وظن أن هناك بريقاً وشعاعاً وليس الأمر كذلك بل ذلك بسبب ضعف الحس والدليل عليه أن ظهور بعض اللامعات بالليل المظلم دون النهار لضعف الحس في الظلمة.

فزعم أنها كيفية زائدة ولذلك إذا قوي البصر بنور السراج لم يراها وكذا نسبة لمعان السراج إلى لمعان القمر ونسبة لمعانه إلى نور الشمس من حيث إن لمعان السراج يزول عند ظهور القمر وهو يزول عند ظهور الشمس والسبب فيه ما ذكرنا من ضعف الحس ومن هؤلاء من بالغ حتى قال ضوء الشمس ليس إلا الظهور التام للونها وذلك يبهل البصر فحينئذ يخفى لونها لا لخفاءه في نفسه كما أنا نحس بالليل بلمعان اللوامع ولا نحس بألوانها لكون الحس لضعفه في الليل يبهله ظهور تلك الألوان فلا جرم لا يحس بها.

ثم إذا قوي في النهار بنور الشمس لم يصير مغلوبا لظهور تلك الألوان فلا جرم يحس بها هذا بيان مذهبهم.
أقول لا بد أولا من تحقيق محل الخلاف في أن النور كيفية زائدة على اللون أو نفس الظهور.

فنقول من قال بأنه نفس الظهور فهو لا يخلو إما أن يريد به الظهور أو مجرد هذه النسبة و الثاني باطل و إلا لكان الضوء أمرا عقليا واقعا تحت مقولة المضاف فلم يكن محسوسا أصلا لكن الحس البصري مما ينفع عن الضوء و يتضرر بالشديد منه حتى يبطل و الأمور الذهنية لا يؤثر مثل هذا التأثير فثبت أن الضوء عبارة عما يوجب الظهور فيكون أمرا وجوديا لكن بقي الكلام في أنه عين اللون أو غيره و قد تكلمنا في ذلك في تعاليقنا على ضوابط الإشرافيين عند مقاوماتنا للوجوه التي ذكرت هناك حتى استقر الرأي على أن النور المحسوس بما هو محسوس عبارة عن نحو وجود الجوهر المبصر الحاضر عند النفس في غير هذا العالم و أما الذي في الخارج بإزائه فلا يزيد وجوده على وجود

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٩٣

اللون و الذي وقع الاستدلال على مغايرتهما فوجوه مقدوحة - الأول أن ظهور اللون إشارة إلى تجدد أمر فهو إما اللون أو صفة نسبية أو غير نسبية و الأول باطل لأن النور إما أن يجعل عبارة عن تجدد اللون أو اللون المتجدد - و الأول يقتضي أن لا يكون مستنيرا إلا في أن تجدد و الثاني يوجب كون الضوء نفس اللون فلا يبقى لقولهم الضوء هو ظهور اللون معنى و إن جعلوا الضوء كيفية ثبوتية زائدة على ذات اللون و سموه بالظهور فذلك نزاع لفظي و إن زعموا أن ذلك الظهور تجدد حال نسبية فهذا باطل لأن الضوء أمر غير نسبي فلا يمكن تفسيره بالحالة النسبية.
و الثاني أن البياض قد يكون مضيئا مشرقا و كذا السواد فلو كان ضوء كل منهما عين ذاته لزم أن يكون بعض الضوء ضدا لبعضه و هو محال لأن ضد الضوء الظلمة.
الثالث أن اللون يوجد بدون الضوء كالسواد الذي لا يكون مضيئا و كذا سائر الألوان و كذا الضوء يوجد بدون اللون كالماء و البلور إذا وقع عليهما الضوء فهما متغايران لوجود كل منهما بدون الآخر.
الرابع أن الجسم الأحمر مثلا المضيء إذا انعكس منه إلى مقابله فتارة ينعكس الضوء منه إلى جسم آخر و تارة ينعكس منه الضوء و اللون معا إذا قويا حتى يحمر المنعكس إليه فلو كان الضوء مجرد ظهور اللون لاستحال أن يفيد لغيره لمعانا ساذجا.

فإن قيل هذا البريق عبارة عن إظهار اللون في ذلك القابل.

فنقول فلما إذا اشتد لون الجسم المنعكس منه ضوءه أخفى ضوء المنعكس إليه و أبطله و أعطاه لون نفسه.

أقول أما الوجه الأول فهو مقدوح بأن ظهور اللون عبارة عن وجوده و هو صفة حقيقية من شأنها أن ينسب و يضاف إلى القوة المدركة و بهذا الاعتبار يقع له التجدد.

و قوله يوجب أن يكون الضوء نفس اللون قلنا نعم و لكنهما متغايران بالاعتبار كما أن الماهية و الوجود في كل شيء واحد بالذات متغايران بالاعتبار فإن الضوء يرجع معناه إلى وجود خاص عارض لبعض الأجسام و الظلمة عبارة عن عدم ذلك الوجود بالكلية و

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٩٤

الظل عبارة عن عدمه في الجملة و اللون عبارة عن امتزاج يقع بين حامل هذا الوجود النوري و حامل عدمه على أنحاء مختلفة و قد مرت الإشارة إلى ضعف الأدلة الموردة على إبطال كون الألوان غير زائدة على مراتب تراكيب الأنوار فعلى هذا صح معنى قولهم الضوء هو ظهور اللون و صح أيضا لو قال أحد إنه غير اللون لأن النور بما هو نور لا يختلف إذ لا يعتبر فيه امتزاج و لا شوب مع عدم أو ظلمة و الألوان مختلفة.

و أما الوجه الثاني فهو أيضا مندفع بما مهدنا و بأن الألوان و إن لم يكن غير النور - إلا أن مراتب الأنوار مختلفة شدة و ضعفا و مع الاختلاف بالشدة و الضعف قد يختلف بوجوه أخرى بحسب تركيبات و تمزيجات كثيرة تقع بين أعداد من النور و إمكانها و فعليتها و قوتها و ضعفها و أصلها و عارضها و أعداد من الظلمة أعني عدم ملكة النور و إمكانها و فعليتها و قوتها و ضعفها و أصلها و فرعها فإن هذه الألوان أمور مادية في الأكثر أو متعلقة بها و المادة منبع الانقسام و التركيب بين الوجودات و الأعدام و الإمكانيات - فليس بعجب أن يحصل من ضروب تركيبات النور بالظلمة هذه الألوان التي نراها فيقع تلك الأقسام في محالها على الوجه المذكور ثم يقع عليها نور آخر بمقابلة المنير و من قال بأن الضوء عين اللون لم يقل بأن كل ضوء عين كل لون كما أن من قال بأن الوجود عين الماهية لم يقل بأن كل وجود عين كل ماهية ليلزمه أن لا يطرا وجود على وجود و لا تضاد وجود لوجود فالألوان متخالفة الأحكام و بعضها أمور متضادة لكن بما هي ألوان لا بما هي أنوار كما أن الموجودات متخالفة الأحكام و بعضها أشياء متضادة لكن بما هي ماهيات لا بما هي موجودات مع أن الوجود و الماهية واحد و كذلك النور و اللون واحد لا يخفى ذلك على من تتبع كلامنا مع قلب ذكي.

و أما الوجه الثالث فسيبل دفعه سهل بما بيناه و كذا الوجه الرابع بأدنى إعمال روية فإن عدم ظهور اللون قد يكون لضعف اللمعان الواقع على شيء و قد يكون لشدة اللمعان فالواقع على المقابل من عكس المضيء الملون قد يكون ضوءه فقط و ذلك

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٩٥

عند قصور الضوء و اللون أو قصور استعداد القابل المقابل و قد يكون كلاهما لقوتهما و قوة استعداد المنعكس إليه على أن الكلام في مباحث العكوس طويل و كون المنعكس من الجسم المضيء إلى جسم آخر ضوءه دون لونه ربما كان لأجل صقالته - فإن الصقيل قد يكون ذا لون و ضوء لكن المنعكس منه إلى مقابله ليس إلا ما حصل من نير آخر بتوسطه على نسبة وضعية مخصوصة بينهما له إليهما لا اللون و الضوء اللذان يستقران فيه فالمنعكس في ذلك المقابل ليس إلا الضوء فقط من ذلك النير لا من المنعكس منه إلا أن يكون المنعكس إليه أيضا جسما صقيلا فيقع فيه حكاية منهما أو من أحدهما أيضا

فصل (٤) في الفرق بين الضوء و النور و الشعاع و البريق و الظل و الظلمة و في أن الألوان إنما تحدث بالفعل عند حصول الضوء

ضوء المضيء إن كان من ذاته لا بأن يفيض عليه من مقابله كما للشمس يسمى ضياء و إلا فعرض كالقمر و يسمى نورا أخذا من قوله تعالى هُوَ الَّذِي جَعَلَ الشَّمْسَ ضِيَاءً وَ الْقَمَرَ نُورًا أي ذات ضياء و ذا نور و اللمعان هو النور الذي به يستر لون الجسم و هو أيضا ذاتي و عرضي و الأول يسمى شعاعا و الثاني كما للمرأة يسمى بريقا و ربما يسمى

العرضي الحاصل من مقابلة المضيء لذاته كنور القمر و نور وجه الأرض الضوء الأول- وإن كان من مقابلة المضيء لغيره كضوء وجه الأرض قبل طلوع الشمس و كضوء داخل البيت من مقابلة الهواء المقابل للشمس فهو الضوء الثاني و الثالث و هكذا على اختلاف الوسائط بينه و بين المضيء بالذات و يسمى ظلاً أولاً و ثانياً و هكذا يتقدم الظل على الضوء بمرتبة- إلى أن ينتهي الضوء بالكلية و ينعدم فيسمى ظلمة و هو عديمي لأننا إذا أغمضنا العين كان حالنا كما فتحنها في الظلمة لا ندرك شيئاً فوجب أن لا يكون كيفية من الجسم المظلم و لأننا لو قدرنا خلو

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٩٦

الجسم عن النور من غير انضيااف صفة أخرى و لا إضافة قوة إمكانية لم يكن حاله إلا هذه الظلمة و متى كان كذلك لم يكن أمراً وجودياً بل سلبياً محضاً.

و اعلم أن الألوان غير موجودة بالفعل في حال كونها مظلمة عند الشيخ و أتباعه- و الدليل عليه أنا لا نراها في الظلمة فهو إما لعدمها أو لوجود عائق عن الإبصار و الثاني باطل فإن الظلمة عدمية و الهواء نفسه غير مانع من الرؤية كما إذا كنت في غار مظلم و فيه هواء كله على تلك الصفة فإذا صار المرئي مستنيراً رأيته و لا يمنعك الهواء الواقف بينه و بينك و ربما يقال هذا التردد غير حاصر لاحتمال شق آخر و هو عدم شرط الرؤية.

و يدفع بأن اللون إذا كان في نفسه من الكيفيات المبصرة فعند وجود الحس الصحيح يجب أن يكون مدركاً و إلا لم يكن في نفسه مرئياً.

و لقائل أن يقول لا شك أن اللون له ماهية في نفسه و له أنه يصح أن يكون مرئياً- فلعل الموقوف على وجود الضوء هو هذا الحكم.

و بالجملة للجسم مراتب ثلاث استعداد أن يكون له لون معين و وجود ذلك اللون و كونه بحيث يصح أن يرى فلم لا يجوز أن يكون المتوقف على وجود الضوء هذا الحكم الثالث لا أصل وجود اللون.

أقول و الأولى أن يجعل هذه المسألة متفرعة على مسألة كون اللون عين الضوء أو غيره فإن كان من مراتب الضوء لم يكن موجوداً حالة الظلمة و إن كان غيره أمكن أن يكون موجوداً في تلك الحالة و لا نراها لفقدان شرط الإبصار.

تذنيب-

ربما يظن أن الظلمة من شرائط رؤية بعض الأجسام كالأشياء التي تلمع بالليل و

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٩٧

نفى الشيخ ذلك و قال لا يمكن أن يكون الظلمة شرطاً لوجود اللوامع مبصرة و ذلك لأن المضيء مرئي سواء كان الرائي في الظلمة أو في الضوء كالنار نراها سواء كانت في الضوء أو في الظلمة و أما الشمس فإنما لا يمكننا أن نراها في الظلمة لأنها متى طلعت لم تبق الظلمة و أما الكواكب و اللوامع فإنما ترى في الظلمة دون النهار لأن ضوء الشمس غالب على ضوئها و إذا انفعل الحس عن الضوء القوي لا جرم لا ينفعل عن الضعيف و أما في الليل فليس هناك ضوء غالب على ضوئها فلا جرم ترى.

و بالجملة فصيورتها غير مرئية ليس لتوقف ذلك على الظلمة بل لما ذكر فظهر أن الظلمة ليست من شرائط هذا الباب

الباب الرابع في الكيفيات المسموعة و فيه فصول

فصل (١) في علة حدوث الصوت

علته القريبة تموج الهواء و سبب التموج إمساس عفيف أو تفريق عفيف كقرع النقارة و قلع الكرباس فيحصل من كلا الأمرين تموج من جهة انقلاب الهواء من القارع - أو انبساطه من القالع إلى الجانبين بعنف شديد فيلزم المتباعد من الهواء أن ينقاد للشكل و الموج الواقعين في المتقارب و هكذا يحدث انصدام بعد انصدام مع سكون قبل سكون إلى أن ينتهي ذلك إلى الهواء الذي عند الصماخ و ليس الصوت نفس التموج كما ظنه بعض

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٩٨

الناس و لا نفس القلع و القرع كما زعمه آخرون فإن التموج محسوس باللمس لأن الشديد منه ربما ضرب عن الصماخ فسده و القلع و القرع محسوسان بالبصر بتوسط اللون و لا شيء من الأصوات يحس باللمس أو البصر فليس التموج بصوت و لا القلع و القرع و أيضا الشيء قد يعلم منه أنه تموج أو قلع أو قرع و يجهل كونه صوتا و قد يعلم الصوت عند ما يكون الأمور الثلاثة مجهولة فهي غير الصوت

فصل (٢) في إثبات وجود الصوت في الخارج

لأحد أن يقول إن الصوت لا وجود له في الخارج بل إنما يحدث في الحس من ملاسة الهواء المتموج و استدلوا على ذلك بأننا كما أدركنا الصوت أدركنا مع ذلك جهته أيضا و معلوم أن أثر الجهة لا يبقى في المتموج الذي عند الصماخ فكان يجب أن لا يدرك جهاتها كما أن اليد تلمس ما تلقاه و لا يشعر به إلا حيث تلمس من غير أن يدرك الفرق بين وروده من اليمين أو من الشمال لأنها لا تدرك إلا حين انتهى إليها و لا التمييز بين الجهات و لما كان بالسمع يقع التمييز بين الجهات و كذا بين القريب و البعيد من الأصوات علمنا أن ندرك الأصوات الخارجية حيث هي فيكون موجودا خارج الصماخ.

و اعترض بأننا إنما ندرك الجهة لأن الهواء القارع للصماخ إنما توجه من تلك الجهة و إنما تميز بين القريب و البعيد لأن الأثر الحادث عن القرع القريب أقوى و عن البعيد أضعف.

ودفع الأول بأن ذا الصوت قد يكون على يمين السامع و يسمع بالإذن الأيسر لانسداد في الإذن الأيمن و له شعور بالجهة و الثاني بأنه باطل و إلا لما كنا ندرك التفرقة بين البعيد القوي و القريب الضعيف و لكننا إذا سمعنا صوتين متساويين في البعد مختلفين بالقوة و الضعف وجب أن يظن اختلافهما بالقرب و البعد.

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٩٩

أقول لكن الإشكال باق بأن المدرك و المحسوس لا بد و أن يكون أمرا موجودا - عند المدرك حالة إدراكه و الموجود عند الجوهر الحاس لا بد و إن يكون ملاصقا له - و هيئة الصوت و شكل التموج و إن كانا موجودين عند السامعة لكن صفتي القرب و البعد غير موجودتين عندها.

و التحقيق أن يقال إن تعلق النفس بالبدن يوجب تعلقها بما اتصل به كالهواء المجاور بحيث كأنهما شيء واحد تعلقت به النفس تعلقا و لو بالعرض فكلما حدث فيه شيء مما يمكن للنفس إدراكه بشيء من الحواس من الهيئات و مقادير

الأبعاد بينها والجهة التي لها وغيرها فأدركت النفس له كما هو عليه

فصل (٣) في سبب ثقل الصوت وحدثه ومعنى الصداء والطنين والحرف

سبب الحدة صلابة المقروع و ملاسته في بعض الأجسام وقصره و شدة انحرافه في بعضها و ضيق منفذ الهواء و قربها من المنفخ في بعضها فيحدث عن هذه الأسباب هيئة - يتأدى إلى السمع على هذه الصورة و هي الزيرية و سبب الثقل أضداد هذه الأسباب و هي البمية و كلاتهما محتملة للزيادة و النقصان فإن زادت الأسباب زادت المسببات على نسبتها و بالعكس.

و أما الصداء فحصله لأن الهواء إذا تموج و قاوم ذلك التموج جسم صلب كجبل أو جدار بحيث لا ينفذ فيه الهواء المتموج بل يرد و ينصرف إلى جانب الخلاف و يكون

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٠٠

شكله شكل الأول و على هيئته كما يلزم الكرة المرمي بها إلى الحائط أن يرجع القهقري - فحينئذ يحدث من ذلك صوت هو الصداء و إذا تكرر ذلك من الجانبين لوجود ما يوجب ذلك الانصراف في الطرفين يسمى طنينا كما يحدث فيما بين الطست المقروع طرفه بقارح و أما الحرف فقد يعرض للصوت كيفية بها يتميز عن صوت آخر يماثله في الحدة و الثقل تميزا في المسموع فتلك الكيفية العارضة هي الحرف في عبارة الشيخ و معروضها في عبارة جمع من العلماء و مجموع العارض و المفروض في عبارة بعضهم.

أقول و الكل صحيح وجهه أن نسبة تلك الهيئة إلى أصل الصوت كنسبة الفصل إلى الجنس لا كنسبة العرض إلى الموضوع فهما موجودان بوجود واحد و إنما العروض في ظرف التحليل العقلي لا في الخارج بأن يمكن و قيد المماثلة بالحدة و الثقل أي الزيرية و البمية احتراز عنهما فإن كلا منهما يفيد تميز صوت عن صوت آخر تميزا في المسموع لكن الصوتين يكونان مختلفين بالحدة و الثقل ضرورة و قيد التميز بالمسموع احترازا عن مثل الطول و القصر و الطيب و غيره فإن التميز بها لا يكون تميزا في المسموع لأنها ليست بمسموعة لكن في كونها من الكيفيات نظر فالأولى به أن يكون احترازا عن مثل الغنة و البحوحة.

بقي الكلام في دلالة قولنا تميزا في المسموع على أن يكون ما به التميز مسموعا - و في أن الحدة و الثقل من المسموعات دون الغنة و البحوحة.

قال بعض العلماء و الحق أن معنى التميز في المسموع ليس أن يكون ما به التميز مسموعا بل أن يحصل به التميز في نفس المسموع بأن يختلف باختلافه و يتحد باتحاده كالحرف بخلاف الغنة و البحوحة و غيرها فإنها قد تختلف مع اتحاد المسموع و بالعكس و لا خفاء في أن هذا التعريف و أمثاله التي للمحسوسات تعريف بالأخفى - بل المقصود مزيد توضيح للماهية الواضحة عند العقل و تنبيه على خواصها

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٠١

فصل (٤) في تقسيم الحروف إلى صامت و مصوت و إلى آني و زماني

الحركات الثلاث تعد عندهم في الحروف و يسمى المصوتة المقصورة و الألف و الواو و الياء إذا كانت ساكنة متولدة

من حركات تجانسها أعني الألف من الفتحة - و الواو من الضمة و الياء من الكسرة يسمى المصوتة الممدودة و هي المسماة في العربية بحروف المد و اللين لأنها كانت مدات للحركات و ما سوى المصوتة يسمى صامتة و يندرج فيها الواو و الياء المتحركتان أو الساكنتان إذا لم يكن قبل الواو ضمة و قبل الياء كسرة.

و ليست الألف إلا مصوتا و إطلاقها على الهمزة بالاشتراك الاسمي و ليس المراد بالحركة و السكون هاهنا ما هي من خواص الأجسام بل الحركة عبارة عن كيفية حاصلة في الحرف الصامت من إمالة مخرجة إلى مخرج إحدى المدات فإلى الألف فتحة و إلى الواو ضمة و إلى الياء كسرة و لا خلاف في امتناع الابتداء بالمصوت.

إنما الخلاف في أن ذلك بسكونه حتى يمتنع الابتداء بالساكن الصامت أيضا أو لذاته لكونه عبارة عن مدة متولدة من إشباع حركة تجانسها فلا يتصور إلا حيث قبلها صامت متحرك و هذا هو الحق لأن كل سليم الحس يجد من نفسه إمكان الابتداء بالساكن و إن كان مرفوضا في لغة العرب و ينقسم الحرف باعتبار آخر إلى آني و زماني لأنه إن أمكن تمديده كالفاء فزماني و إن لم يكن كالطاء فآني.

و إنما يوجد في أول زمان إرسال النفس كما في طلع أو في آخر زمانه كما في غلط و ما وقع في وسط الكلمة يحتمل الأمرين و عروض الآني الصوت يكون بمعنى أنه طرف له كالنقطة للخط و من الآني ما يشبه الزماني كالحاء و الخاء و نحوهما - مما لا يمكن تمديده لكن يجتمع عند التلفظ بواحد منها أفراد متماثلة و لا يشعر الحس باعتبار زمان بعضها عن البعض فيظن حرفا واحدا.

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٠٢

و اعلم أن الحرف الصامت مع المصوت المقصور يسمى مقطعا مقصورا و مع الصوت الممدود يسمى مقطعا ممدودا.

الأول مثل ل بالفتح أو الضم أو الكسر.

و الثاني مثل لا و لو و لي و قد يقال المقطع الممدود بمقطع مقصور مع صامت ساكن بعده مثل هل و قل و بع لمماثلته المقطوع الممدود في الوزن.

و اعلم أن الاختلاف الواقع بين الحروف التسعة و عشرين في لغة العرب و ما سواها في بعض اللغات اختلاف بالنوع فهي أنواع متخالفة يختلف أفراد كل منها بعوارض مصنفة أو مشخصة أما التصنيف فكا لا اختلاف بكونها ساكنا أو متحركا مضموما أو مفتوحا - أو مدغما أو مدغما فيه و غير ذلك و أما التشخيص فكون هذا الباء الذي يتلفظ به زيد الآن أو في وقت آخر و يتلفظ به عمرو في وقت مخصوص و وضع مخصوص و إيراد هذه المسائل أليق بالعلوم الطبيعية

الباب الخامس في الكيفية المذوقة و المشمومات و في إثبات عرضيتهما و فيه فصول

فصل (١) في الطعوم الأجسام إما أن تكون عديمة الطعم أو ذوات طعوم

و الأول هو التفه المسيخ و هو إما عادم الطعم حقيقة و إما عادمه حسا فقط - فإن النحاس و الحديد و أمثالهما مما لا يتحلل منه شيء يغوص في اللسان فيدركه و لكن إذا احتيل في تحليله و تلطيفه ينفصل منه أجزاء صغار يظهر له طعم قوي و أما الذي له طعم فبسائط الطعوم الحاصلة في أفراد تسعة أقسام - الحرافة و الملاحه و المرارة و الدسومة و الحلاوة و التفه و العفوصة و القبض و الحموضة - و ذلك لأن ذا الطعم إما لطيف الجسم القابل أو كثيفة أو معتدلة و الفاعل

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٠٣

في الثلاثة إما حرارة أو برودة أو قوة معتدلة بينهما فالحرار إن فعل في الكثيف حدثت المرارة وإن فعل في اللطيف حدثت الحرافة وإن فعل في المعتدل حدثت الملوحة - و البارد إن فعل في الكثيف فالعفوصة و في اللطيف فالحموضة و في المعتدل فالقبض و المعتدل إن فعل في اللطيف حدثت الدسومة و في الكثيف الحلاوة و في المعتدل التفه - فالحرارة أسخن الطعوم ثم المرارة ثم الملوحة لأن الحريف أقوى على التحليل من المر ثم المالح كأنه مر مكسور برطوبة باردة لأن سبب حدوث الملح مخالطة رطوبة مائية قليلة الطعم أو عديمته أجزاء أرضية محترقة يابسة المزاج مرة الطعم مخالطة باعتدال فإنها إن كثرت أمرت.

و مما يدل على أن المالح دون المر في السخونة أن البورق و الملح المر أسخن من الملح المأكول و العفص أبرد ثم القابض ثم الحامض و لذلك يكون الفواكه الحلوة - أولاً فيها عفوصة شديدة التبريد فإذا اعتدلت قليلاً بإسخان الشمس المنضج لها مالت إلى الحموضة مثل الحصرم و فيما بين ذلك يكون ذا قبض يسير ليس بعفوصة ثم ينتقل إلى الحلاوة و العفص و القابض متقاربان في الطعم لكن القابض يقبض ظاهر اللسان و العفص باطنه أيضاً.

و قد يتركب طعمان في جرم واحد مثل اجتماع المرارة و القبض في الحضض و يسمى البشاعة و كاجتماع الحلاوة و الحرافة في العسل المطبوخ و كاجتماع المرارة و الحرافة و القبض في الباذنجان و كاجتماع المرارة و التفه في الهندباء و يشبه أن يكون هذه الطعوم إنما يكون بسبب أنها مع ما تحدث ذوقاً تحدث بعضها لمساً أيضاً فيتركب من الكيفية الطعمية و من التأثير اللمسي واحد لا يتميز في الحس فيصير ذلك كطعم واحد متميز.

فمن الطعوم المتوسطة بين الأطراف ما يصحبه تفريق و إسخان و يسمى الجملة حرافة و آخر يصحبه تفريق من غير إسخان و هو الحموضة و آخر يصحبه تكثيف و تجفيف و هو العفوصة و على هذا القياس هذا ما يليق بالحكمة من أحكام الطعوم و أما الزائد على هذا القدر فاللائق بإيرادها فيه علم الطب

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٠٤

فصل (٢) في الروائح المشمومة ليس لأنواع الروائح عندنا أسماء إلا من جهات ثلاثة

أحدها جهة الإضافة إلى موضوعاتها كرائحة المسك و رائحة العنبر و رائحة السرجين.

و ثانيها من جهة الموافقة و المخالفة كما يقال طيبة و منتنة من غير تحصيل معنى فصلي فيهما.

و ثالثها أن يشتق لها اسم من شاكلتها للطعم فيقال رائحة حلوة و رائحة حامضة - كان الروائح التي اعتيدت مقارنتها للطعوم ينسب إليها و يعرف فهذا آخر الكلام في أحوال الكيفيات المحسوسة تبعاً لما ذكر في كتب القوم كالشفاء و غيره.

و أما الكلام في كيفية الإحساس بها فسيأتي في القسم الثاني لهذا الفن و هو البحث عن الكيفيات النفسانية و لنا في هذه الكيفيات المحسوسة كلام أرفع من هذا النمط سنعود إلى ذكره و تحقيق وجود آخر لها و غيرها و إثبات أن لها كينونة صورية بلا مادة في عالم آخر غير عالم الأضداد و الاستحالات حين اشتغالنا بعلم المعاد - و موطن النفوس الإنسانية عند المفارقة عن هذه الأجساد

القسم الثاني من الأقسام الأربعة التي للكيف القوة واللاقوة وفيه فصول

فصل (١) في أنواعه أنواع هذا القسم من الكيفية ثلاثة

الأول استعداد شديد على أن يفعل كالممرضية واللين و يسمى باللاقوة.

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٠٥

و الثاني استعداد شديد على أن لا يفعل كالمصاحية والصلابة.

و الثالث استعداد شديد على أن يفعل كالمصارعية و هذان القسمان يسميان بالقوة أما المعنى المحصل الذي يشترك فيه هذه الثلاثة و يكون تمام الأمر المشترك الذاتي لها حتى يكون نوعا لمطلق الكيف و جنسا لهذه الثلاثة فقد ذكر أمران - أحدهما أنه استعداد جسماني كامل نحو شيء من خارج.

و ثانيهما أنه المبدأ الجسماني الذي به يتم حدوث أمر خارج بمعنى أن حدوثه مترجح به و الثاني أولى من الأول لأن الاستعداد من باب المضاف إذ لا يعقل إلا بين شيئين مستعد و مستعد له فكيف يكون نوعا من الكيف و هذا الرسم متناول للأقسام الثلاثة لأن الفاعل و المنفعل يشتركان في أن حدوث الحادث إنما يتم بها.

ثم إن القوة على الانفعال يترجح بها حدوث ذلك الانفعال و كذا القوة للمقاومة يترجح بها حدوث المقاومة و القوة على الفعل كذلك و الأقسام الثلاثة المشتركة في كونها مبادي جسمانية لحدوث حوادث مترجحة بها.

قال الشيخ في قاطيقورياس و أما الجنس الآخر من أجناس الكيفيات التي هي أنواع الكيفية العامة فيجب أن يتصور على أنه استعداد جسماني كامل نحو أمر خارج بجهة من الجهات لا القوة التي هي في المادة الأولى و لا قوة الجواز فإن كل إنسان بالقوة صحيح و مريض لكن يتمه الاستعداد حتى يصير هذه القوة بحكم الجواز الطبيعي - وافرة من جهة أحد طرفي النقيض فلا يكون في قوة الشيء أن يقبل المرض أو أن يصرع غيره فقط كيف كان بل أن يكون قد يترجح قبول المرض على قبول الصحة أو يرجح - لا قبول الصرع على قبول الصرع و المصاحية و الممرضية و الهيئة الصارعية و الهيئة الانصراعية و الصلابة المترجح فيها أن لا ينغمر و اللين المترجح فيها أن ينغمر من هذا الباب انتهى.

ثم اعلم أنه لا خلاف في أن القوة على الانفعال و القوة على المقاومة داخلتان تحت هذا النوع و أما أن القوة على الفعل هل هي داخلية تحت هذا النوع فالمشهور أنها منه و الشيخ أخرجها منه و هو الحق كما سيظهر لك وجهه فإذا أريد تلخيص معنى

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٠٦

جامع للقسمين دون الأمر الثالث فيقال إنه كيفية بها يترجح أحد جانبي القبول و الالاقبول لقابليها.

و أما بيان أن القوة على الفعل لا تصلح أن تكون داخلية تحت هذا النوع كما ذهب إليه الشيخ فيحتاج أولا إلى أن يعرف أصلا كلياً و هو أن جهات الفعل دائما يكون من لوازم الذات لأن كل ذات لها حقيقة فلها اقتضاء أثر إذا خلي و طبعه و لم يكن مانع يفعل ذلك الأثر فلا يحتاج في فعلها إلى قوة زائدة عليها و إذا فرض إضافة قوة أخرى لها لم يكن تلك الذات بالقياس إليها فاعلة لها بل قابلة إياها و إذا اعتبرت الذات و القوة معا كان المجموع شيئا آخر إن كان له فعل كان فعله لازما من غير تراخي استعداد له لحصول ذلك الفعل و لو فرض ذلك الاستعداد للفاعلية له كان يلزمه أولا قوة

انفعالية لحصول ما يتم به كونه فاعلا فذلك الاستعداد المفروض لم يكن بالحقيقة لفاعليته بل لانفعاله فليس للفاعلية استعداد بل للمنفعالية أولا وبالذات وللفاعلية بالعرض - فثبت مما بينا بالبرهان أن لا قوة ولا استعداد بالذات لكون الشيء فاعلا بل إنما القوة والاستعداد للانفعال ولصيورة الشيء قابلا لشيء بعد أن لم يكن

فصل (٢) في تحقيق ما ذكرناه بوجه تفصيلي

قال الشيخ في قاطيقورياس لمشكك أن يتشكك في أنه هل المصارعة في هذا الباب داخلة من حيث إن لا ينصرع أو من حيث ينصرع فإن كانت من حيث لا ينصرع يكون المثونة في دفع الشك خفيفة و يكون هذا الجنس هو تأكد أحد طرفي ما عليه القوة الانفعالية في أن يفعل و أن لا يفعل لكنه يعرض أن يضع استعدادا من حيث يحرك غيره من الأقسام - إذ لا يصلح أن يوجد في الأجناس الأخرى أو يصعب و إن كان من حيث ينصرع فإن الشبهة الأولى تتأكد و كأنك قد فهمتها و لسنا نعني بالقوة المصارعية القوة الأولى المحركة النفسانية التي هي جوهر لا يقبل الأشد و الأضعف بل هذه ككمال لتلك من جهة مواتاة

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٠٧

الأعضاء نسبتها إليه نسبة شدة الذكاء و الفهم إلى النفس الناطقة.

فنقول الآن المصارعة يجب أن يعلم أنها متعلقة بأمر ثلاثة أمر في البدن و أمر في القوة المحركة و أمر في القوة الدراكة أما ما يتعلق في القوة الدراكة فهي معرفة ما صناعية بحبل المصارعة كمعرفه صناعة الرقص و الضرب بالعود. و بالجملة فهو من أصناف المعرفة بكيفية أفعال تتعلق بالحركة كصناعة البناء و الكتابة و أما ما يتعلق بالقوة المحركة فهو ملكة يحسن بها تصريف العضل على إدراك الغرض في المصارعة فهاتان إما حالتان إن ضعفتا و إما ملكتان إن قويتا و تمكنتا و ليسا من الأمور البدنية الصرفة.

و أما الثالث و هو الباقي فهو أمر بدني يقوى و هو كون الأعضاء بحيث يعسر عطفها و نقلها فهذا من هذا الباب فقد زالت الشبهة و تقرر أن هذا الجنس هو استكمال استعداد أحد طرفي ما عليه القوة بمعنى الجواز حتى يكون شديد الاستعداد لوجود ما إذا وجد كان انفعالا بالفعل كالمراضية أو شديد الاستعداد لأن لا يوجد فيه و هذا كالمصاحبة. و بالجملة فإن هذه القوة إما أن يستكمل آخذة نحو التغير عن الحالة الطبيعية الملائمة و هو اللاقوة و إما أن لا يتغير عنها و هي القوة الطبيعية انتهى.

و ربما قيل إن القدرة على تلك الأفعال لها اعتبار من حيث إنها قدرة و اعتبار من حيث إنها قدرة شديدة و من حيث إنها فاعلة بسهولة فهي من حيث إنها قدرة فهي من الحال أو الملكة و من حيث إنها شديدة أو فاعلة بسهولة فهي من هذا النوع.

فأجيب كما في الشفاء بأن الذي فيه قوة أن ينصرع أشد ففيه قوة الصرع حاصلة لكنها ضعيفة و الذي فيه قوة الصرع أشد ففيه قوة الانصرع حاصلة لكنها ضعيفة ففي كل منهما قوة الأمرين حاصلة و لكنها في أحدهما أقوى و في الآخر أضعف فهذا الاختلاف إما أن يكون في الماهية أو في العوارض فإن كان في الماهية وجب أن لا يكون شدة القوة خارجة عن ذات القوة فإن الشيء لا يختلف باختلاف ما ينضم إليه من الخارج و إذا لم يكن الشدة موجودا آخر بل القوة القوية

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٠٨

موجود واحد و هو بماهيته الوجدانية مخالفة للقوة الضعيفة فإذا كانت تلك الحقيقة داخلية في أحد الجنسين امتنع دخولها في الجنس الآخر وإن كان الاختلاف بينهما في العوارض فذلك باطل و مع بطلانه يفيد المقصود. و أما وجه بطلانه فلأنه يلزم أن يكون قوة واحدة باقية يعرض له الشدة لا لقوة أخرى انضافت إليها بل كيفية غير القوة تقارن القوة فيصير بها أشد تأثيرا و فعالة و هذا محال و أما بيان أنه مع بطلانه يفيد المقصود فلأن القوة القوية إذا كانت من نوع القوة الضعيفة و القوة الضعيفة غير داخلية في هذا القسم من الكيفية فالقوة القوية غير داخلية فإن مثل الشيء إذ لم يكن تحت جنس لم يكن الشيء أيضا تحت ذلك الجنس.

و مما يحتج به أيضا على بطلان مذهبهم أن الحرارة لها قوة شديدة على الإحراق - فلو كانت داخلية في هذا الباب مع دخولها في الجنس المسمى بالانفعاليات و الانفعالات لزم تقومهما بجنسين و هو محال فثبت بهذا أن القوة الشديدة غير داخلية في هذا الجنس

فصل (٣) في تحقيق أن اللين و الصلابة من أي جنس من أجناس الكيف

قد مرت الإشارة في قسم الكيفيات اللمسية إلى أن أحدهما أعني الصلابة استعداد طبيعي نحو اللانفعال و الآخر أعني اللين استعداد طبيعي نحو الانفعال فليس أحدهما بأن يجعل عدما للآخر أولى من العكس فإذن ليس التقابل بينهما تقابل العدم و الملكة - فهما إذن كفتان وجوديتان و لكن لأحد أن يقول ذلك الاستعداد الطبيعي يلزمه ثلاثة أشياء أحدهما عدمي و الآخران وجوديان أما العدمي فهو اللانغمار و أما الوجوديان فأحدهما المقاومة المحسوسة و الثاني بقاء شكله على ما كان عليه و ذلك الاستعداد لا يجوز أن يكون عدما لأنه علة الأمرين الوجوديين و علة الوجودي

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٠٩

وجودي فذلك الاستعداد أمر وجودي.

و أيضا فالانغمار كما سبق عبارة عن حركة في سطح الجسم مقارنة لحدوث شكل مخصوص فيه و استعداد له لقبول الحركة لأنه جسم طبيعي و استعداد له لقبول ذلك الشكل لأنه متكمم و إذا كان كونه جسما طبيعيا ذا كمية هو العلة لهذه القابلية امتنع أن يكون هناك كيفية أخرى تفيد هذه القابلية لأن ما ثبت لذات الشيء لا يكون بعلة أخرى و إذا ثبت أن استعداد الانفعال ليس بكيفية زائدة و جب أن يكون الاستعداد نحو اللانفعال لعله وجودية أو يستحيل أن يكون سببه نفس المادة التي هي علة للاستعداد و لا أيضا زوال وصف عن المادة إذ ليس الاستعداد للانفعال علة وجودية حتى يكون زوالها علة الاستعداد للانفعال فالاستعداد للانفعال أمر وجودي فمن هذه المعاني يغلب على الظن أن التقابل بينهما تقابل العدم و الملكة.

أقول يمكن حل هذا الإشكال بأن تعريف الأشياء الواقعة تحت الأجناس المحصلة - قد يكون بأمور عدمية أو نسبية أو بشيء يكون تحت جنس آخر و ما نحن فيه أي كون الصلب بحيث لا ينغمر تعريف لأمر وجودي بصفة عدمية و كون اللين بحيث ينغمر تعريف له بنوع من مقولة أخرى و هي بمقولة أن ينفع فكون اللين و الصلابة وجوديتين تحت هذا النوع من الكيفية أعني القوة و اللاقوة لا ينافي تعريف أحدهما بعدمي و الآخر بوجودي من مقولة أخرى.

و أما قول القائل أن علة قابلية الجسم اللين لقبول الانغمار هي كونه جسما متكما فممنوع إذ لا نسلم أن مجرد الجسمية

الطبيعية مع المقدارية يكفي لقبول هذا النحو من الحركة على هذا الشكل وهي الانغمار وإن كفا لقبول مطلق الحركة و مطلق الشكل فإذا لم يكف الجسمية مع المادة الأولى و الكمية للانغمار فلا بد هاهنا من حالة وجودية أخرى هذا ما سنح لي في دفع الإشكال.

لكن بقي شيء آخر وهو أن الاستعداد و الاستعداد أمور عقلية كالإمكان و الامتناع و الوجوب و نظيرها فهي إما عدمية أو إضافية و الإعدام ليست تحت مقولة و الإضافات تحت

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١١٠

مقولة الإضافة.

فبقي الكلام في أمور هي مقتضية لعدم أو إضافة لكن نعلم بالضرورة أنه إذا حصلت الجسمية مع بعض الكيفيات الجسمية كالحرارة و البرودة و الرطوبة و اليبوسة حصلت مثل هذه الاستعدادات و إن لم يكن كيفية وجودية أخرى يسمى الاستعدادية و ليس المخلص عن هذا إلا بأن يقال إن كون المادة بحيث يكون الإمكان الذي فيه نحو القبول أو اللاقبول قريبا من الفعل بسبب كيفية أو شدة كيفية حصلت فيها حالة غير الإمكان و الجواز العقلي لأن ذلك غير قابل للقرب و البعد و لا الرجحان لأحد الطرفين بخلاف هذا الإمكان و غير نفس الكيفية و لا داخله في باقي المقولات

القسم الثالث في الكيفيات التي توجد في ذوات الأنفس

و هي على الجملة منقسمة إلى الحال إن لم تكن راسخة و إن كانت راسخة سميت بالملكة - قيل الافتراق بينهما افتراق بالعوارض لا بالفصول إذ لا يجب تغايرهما بالذات فإن الأمر النفساني في ابتداء تكونه قبل صيرورته مستحكما يسمى حالا فإذا صار هو بعينه مستحكما سمي ملكة فيكون الشخص الواحد قد كان حالا ثم تصير ملكة كما أن الشخص الواحد قد كان صبيا ثم يصير رجلا.

أقول من أراد أن يعرف فساد هذا القول فينبغي أن ينظر في أمر الحال و الملكة في باب العلم فإن الحال هو الصورة الحاصلة و هي من الأعراض التي موضوعها النفس.

و أما إذا صار العلم ملكة فلا بد أن يتحد النفس بجوهر عقلي و به يصير جوهرها فعلا لمثل تلك الصور و أمثالها و الفاعل كيف يكون متحد الهوية مع المفعول كيف و هذا الاستحكام كمالية لما كان أولا حالا غير مستحكم و عندهم أن الأشد و الأضعف مختلفان نوعا فهما بأن يختلفا شخصا كان أولى.

واعلم أنه إذا كان مفهوم الملكة يدخل فيه قوة ما أو قدرة ما فحصول الصورة العلمية

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١١١

الثابتة لنفوس الأفلاك و غيرها من الصفات كالقدرة و الإرادة التي لها و كذا علوم العقول - كما اشتهر عند متأخري الحكماء و قوم ممن قبلهم أنها صور زائدة فيها يخرج عن الحال و الملكة لأنها ليست سريعة الزوال و لا بطيئة الزوال و ليست قوة قريبة و لا بعيدة بل فعل مجرد لصور حاصلة و ليست أيضا داخله في سائر الكيفيات الاستعدادية و لا المحسوسة و لا التي في الكميات فيشكل الأمر فيها على قانونهم في تقسيم الكيف إلى أنواع محصورة في الأربعة فإذا أريد تعميم التقسيم بدلت النفسانية بكمال غير محسوس - و لا يؤخذ في حد الملكة القوة و القدرة بل هيئة ثابتة لا

يحسن جنسها أو يؤخذ لها قسم آخر.

فيقال إما حال أو ملكة أو أمر آخر غيرهما لتدخل فيها الإرادة الكلية لنفوس الأفلاك و صورها الثابتة العلمية فيكون كمالات غير استعدادي يوجب ثابت لا يزول و يكون قسيم الحال و الملكة.

و اعلم أنه يندرج تحت هذا النوع أعني الحال و الملكة أنواع كثيرة غير محصورة لكن المذكور منها في كتب هذا الفن عدد قليل و أما في كتب الصوفية فعد من منازل السائرين و مقامات العارفين مبلغ كثير كسبعمئة و نحوها فلنذكر من الأنواع التي جرت العادة بذكرها هاهنا كلا في مقالة إلا العلم فإنه لشرفه و غموض مسائله أفردنا للبحث عن أحكامه و أحواله بابا على حدة و أما سائر الكيفيات كالقوي و الأخلاق فها نذكرها في فصول

فصل (١) في القدرة

قد مر تحقيق القدرة في البحث عن معنى القوة من أنها حالة نفسانية

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١١٢

للحيوان بها يصح أن يصدر عنه الفعل إذا شاء و لا يصدر عنه إذا لم يشأ و ضد ذلك هو العجز و كل منهما قد يختلف بالقياس إلى بعض الأفعال دون بعض إذ ليس معنى القادر مطلقاً أن يصح منه صدور كل ما يشاء و إلا لم يصح إطلاق القادر على غير الباري جل اسمه من الحيوانات و غيرها فرب قادر لم يصح منه إلا صدور بعض قليل من الأشياء و لا صدوره و هذه القدرة التي في الحيوان صفة إمكانية - متساو نسبتها إلى وجود الفعل و عدمه و صدوره و تركه لكن إذا ضمنت المشية أي الإرادة إليها خرجت نسبتها عن صرف الإمكان إلى أحد الجانبين فصار تعلقها بأحد الجانبين إما واجبا إن بلغت الإرادة إلى حد الإجماع أو راجحا إن بقي التردد.

و أما القدرة التي هي عين المشية التي هي عين العلم بوجه الخير و النظام الأتم - فهي خارجة عن حدود الإمكان باللغة إلى حد الوجوب كما في الباري جل ذكره فقدرته ليست من الكيفيات النفسانية التي إذا قيست إلى ممكن آخر لم يجب وجوده عند وجودها - و لا عدمه عند عدمها لعدم العلاقة السببية و المسببية بينها و ليست نسبة قدرة الله تعالى إلى الموجودات كلها هذه النسبة أي الإمكان فقط لأنها كلها بقدرة الله وجدت و وجبت - فقدرته تامة الفعل لأنها عين العلم و الإرادة و قدرة الحيوان ناقصة فلو كانت قدرة الحيوان عين إدراكه و إرادته لفعل أو ترك لكانت تامة واجبة الفعل عنها فكانت حينئذ فعلا لا قوة و كان الفعل معها واجبا لا ممكنا فقط فقد علمت أن نسبة القدرة التي هي في الحيوان إلى القدرة التي معها العلم و الإرادة نسبة النقص إلى الكمال و كل ما يوجد

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١١٣

في الناقص يوجد في التام إلا ما يرجع إلى القصور و الفتور من الأمور العدمية و الإمكانية. فلهذا يصح إطلاق القدرة على ذات الباري جل اسمه بمعنى أنه إن شاء فعل و إن لم يشأ لم يفعل و إن كانت المشية عين قدرته و كذا العلم الأتم الأحكم بمعنى أن وجودا واحدا علم و إرادة و قدرة و كلها موجودة بوجود وحداني صمدي و لو كان الشرط في القدرة أن لا يكون عين الإرادة و لا مستلزمة إياها حتى يلزم أن يوجد زمان كان القدرة و لم يكن فيه المشية لمقدور لا لوجود و لا لعدم أو لا بد أن يكون وقت كانت المشية غير المشية التي لوجود هذا المقدور و لم يكن

هناك هذا المعنى العام للقدرة بل معنى آخر خارجا بتمامه أو بعضه من المعنى الذي وقع التعريف به للقدرة فإن التعريف المشهور شامل للقدرة التامة و الناقصة جميعا وإذا شرط فيها كونها مع عدم الإرادة أو إرادة العدم لزم كونها ناقصة فإن القدرة إذا كملت جهات مؤثرته و مبدئته وجب أن يقترن بالإرادة و وجب أن يوجد معها صدور الأثر بلا تراخ فهذه هي القدرة التامة

فصل (٣) في الإرادة

و هي في الحيوان من الكيفيات النفسانية و يشبه أن يكون معناها واضحا عند الفعل [العقل] غير ملتبس بغيرها إلا أنه يعسر التعبير عنها بما يفيد تصورها بالحقيقة و هي تغاير الشهوة كما أن مقابلهما و هي الكراهة تغاير النفرة و لذا قد يريد الإنسان ما لا يشتهي كشرب دواء كريهه ينفعه و قد يشتهي ما لا يريده كآكل طعام لذيث يضره و فسرهما المتكلمون بأنها صفة مخصصة لأحد طرفي المقدور و قيل هي في الحيوان شوق متأكد إلى حصول المراد و قيل إنها مغايرة للشوق المتأكد فإن الإرادة هي الإجماع و تصميم العزم إذ قد يشتهي الإنسان ما لا يريده و قد يريد ما لا يشتهي كما ذكرنا و الفرق بينهما بأن الإرادة ميل اختياري و الشوق ميل طبيعي.

قيل و لهذا يعاقب الإنسان المكلف بإرادة المعاصي و لا يعاقب باشتهاؤها و

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١١٤

هو: جعلوا مبادي الأفعال الاختيارية التي للحيوان خمسة التصور و اعتقاد النفع أو دفع الضرر و الشوق و الإجماع المسمى بالإرادة و القوة المحركة.

و الأولون إنما أسقطوا الإجماع و جعلوه نفس الشوق المتأكد و في جعل القصد و الإرادة من الأفعال الاختيارية نظر إذ لو كان الأمر كذلك لاحتاج إلى قصد آخر و يلزم التسلسل و القول بأن البعض اختياري دون البعض تحكم لا يساعده الوجدان - بل الظاهر أنه إذا غلب الشوق تحقق الإجماع بالضرورة و مبادي الأفعال الاختيارية ينتهي إلى الأمور الاضطرارية التي تصدر من الحيوان بالإيجاب فإن اعتقاد اللذة أو النفع يحصل من غير اختيار فيتبعه الشوق فيطيعه القوة المحركة اضطرارا فهذه أمور مترتبة بالضرورة و الاختيار في الحيوان عبارة عن علمه و الشوق التابع له سببا للفعل و قدرته عبارة عن ذلك السبب للفعل كالقوة المحركة التي للأعضاء و أما إرادة الله فعند الحكماء - هو عبارة عن علمه بنظام العالم على الوجه الأتم الأكمل.

فإن هذا العلم من حيث إنه كاف في وجود النظام الأتم و مرجح لطرف وجودها على عدمها إرادة و العلم فينا أيضا إذا تأكد يصير سببا للوجود الخارجي كالماشي على شاطئ جدار ضيق العرض إذا غلبه توهم السقوط يصير سببا لسقوطه و من هذا القبيل تأثير بعض النفوس بالهمة و العين الذي علم تأثيره بالتجارب و أخبار المخبر الصادق فلا يستبعد أن يكون العلم الأزلي سببا لوجود الكائنات

فصل (٣) في حد الخلق و أقسامه

الخلق ملكة يصدر بها عن النفس أفعال بالسهولة من غير تقدم روية و ليس الخلق عبارة عن القدرة على الأفعال لأن القدرة نسبتها إلى الضدين واحدة كما سبق - و ليس أيضا عبارة عن نفس الفعل لأنه عبارة عن كون النفس بحال يصدر عنها الصناعة - من غير روية كمن يكتب شيئا و لا يروي في كتابة حرف أو يضرب بالعود و لا يروي

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١١٥

في كل نقرة نقرة بل ربما يتبدل في فعله إذا روى لأن مبدأ فعله هذا بعد أحكام الملكة ليس روية بل شيء نسبته إلى الروية كنسبة الطبيعة إلى الفكر والطبيعة شيء مخالف للروية وإن لم يكن يخالف العلم في كثير من الطبائع كالطبائع الفلكية إذ طبيعتها عين العلم والشعور بلا روية والخلق كأنه شيء متوسط بين الطبيعة وهذه الإرادة الفكرية وكأنه أمر حاصل عقيب تعمل واكتساب فليس للأفلاك والمبادي خلق بل مبادي أفاعيلها كلها طبيعة أو عقل وليس الخلق أيضا يلزمه المبدئية للفعل بل كونه بحيث إذا أريد الفعل يصدر بلا صعوبة وروية وكذلك ملكة العلم للعالم ليس أن يحضر المعلومات بل أن يكون مقتدرا على إحضار معلوماته من غير روية.

واعلم أن كل حال وملكة فهو صفة وجودية لا محالة وكل صفة وجودية فهي من حيث إنها صفة وجودية كمال سواء سميت فضيلة في العرف أو الاصطلاح أو الشرع أو رذيلة لكن بعض تلك الصفات مما يوجب زوال كمالات أخرى مخصوصة بنفوس شريفة وبعضها ليست كذلك بل يزيد بها تلك النفوس شرفا وبهاء فهذه هي الفضائل للقوة العاقلة التي للإنسان وأضدادها هي الرذائل لها وما من رذيلة للنفوس الإنسانية كالشره والفجور والتهور والجربزة إلا وهي فضيلة لبعض النفوس السافلة فإن إفراط الشهوة كمال للبهائم رذيلة للإنسان لمكان نفسه الناطقة.

واعلم أن الحكمة بمعنى إدراك الكليات والعقليات الثابتة الوجود كمال للإنسان بما هو إنسان كلما زاد كان أفضل. وأما غيرها من الملكات فلها طرفا إفراط وتفریط ومتوسط بينهما والفضيلة في المتوسط لا في الطرفين. أما الإفراط فلأن حصولها ضار لغيرها أعني ملكة العلم الذي هو أصل الفضائل - وأما تفریطها فلأن عدمها بالكليّة أو نقصانها المفرط يوجب فقد ما يتوقف عليها من تحصيل الخير الباقي وهو الكمال العقلي. واعلم أن رءوس الفضائل النفسانية والأخلاق الإنسانية التي هي مبادي الأعمال

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١١٦

الحسنة ثلاثة الشجاعة والعفة والحكمة ومجموعها العدالة وهذه الحكمة غير الحكمة بالمعنى الأول التي إفراطها أفضل ولكل واحد من هذه الثلاث طرفان هما رذيلتان.

أما الشجاعة فهي الخلق الذي يصدر عنه الأفعال المتوسطة بين أفعال التهور والجبن - وهذان الطرفان رذيلتان. وأما العفة فهي الخلق الذي يصدر عنه الأفعال المتوسطة بين أفعال الفجور والخمود وهذان الطرفان رذيلتان. وأما الحكمة فهي الخلق الذي يصدر عنه الأفعال المتوسطة بين أفعال الجربزة والغباوة وهذان الطرفان رذيلتان واشتبه على بعض الناس وظن أن الحكمة العملية المذكورة هاهنا هي بعينها ما هو قسيم الحكمة النظرية حيث يقال إن الحكمة إما نظرية وإما عملية وذلك الظن فاسد كما أشرنا إليه فإن هذه الحكمة العملية خلق نفساني يصدر منه الأفعال المتوسط بين أفعال الجربزة والغباوة.

وأما إذا قالوا الحكمة منها ما هو نظري ومنها ما هو عملي لم يريدوا به الخلق لأن ذلك ليس جزءا من الفلسفة بل التي هي إحدى الفلسفتين أرادوا بها معرفة الإنسان بالملكات الخلقية أنها كم هي وما هي وما الفاضل منها وما الردي منها ومعرفة كيفية تحصيلها واكتسابها للنفس أو إزالتها وإخراجها عن النفس ومعرفة السياسات المنزلية والمدنية - و

بالجملة معرفة الأمور التي لنا مدخلية في إدخالها في الوجود وإخراجها عن الوجود بوجه وهذه المعرفة ليست غريزية بل متى حصلنا كانت حاصلة لنا من حيث هي معرفة وإن لم نفعل فعلا ولم نتخلق بخلق فلا يكون أفعال الحكمة العملية الأخرى موجودة لنا من حيث هي معرفة.

و بالجملة إن الحكمة العملية قد يراد بها نفس الخلق وقد يراد بها العلم بالخلق - وقد يراد بها الأفعال الصادرة عن الخلق فالحكمة العملية التي جعلت قسيمة للحكمة العلمية النظرية هي العلم بالخلق مطلقا وما يصدر منه وإفراطه أيضا فضيلة كما مر

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١١٧

و الحكمة العملية التي جعلت إحدى الفضائل الثلاث هي نفس الخلق المخصوص المبين لسائر الأخلاق وإفراطه كتفريطه رذيلة.

فظهر الفرق بين البابين وإذا عرفت ذلك فمجموع الأخلاق الثلاثة المتوسطة - بل هيئة اجتماعها عدالة ومقابلة الجور في أي جانب كان من الأطراف وهي المعبر عنها بالصراط المستقيم الواقع على متن الجحيم أو ما يوجب استحقاق عذاب الجحيم

فصل (٤) في حقيقة الألم واللذة

الموجود من كلام الحكماء في تعريف اللذة والألم هو إدراك الملائم وإدراك المنافي. و زعم بعض الأطباء كمحمد بن زكرياء الرازي أن اللذة عبارة عن الخروج عن الحال الغير الطبيعية والألم عبارة عن الخروج عن الحالة الطبيعية فعلى هذا لم يكن لشيء من اللذات والآلام وجود دائمى والتجربة أيضا يقوي هذا الظن فإننا نشاهد أن جميع ما يعد من أقسام ما يقع به اللذة في هذا العالم إنما غاية اللذة بها عند أوائل حدوثها وإذا استقرت زالت اللذة فكم من صاحب ثروة أو جاه أو مشتهي لطيف لا يكون لذته كلذة فقير بشيء نزر حقير منها لا يعد في الحساب معها لحقارته وكذلك قياس الآلام فإن أكثر الآلام بل كلها إذا دامت ولم يتجدد شيء منها لم يكن بها تألم لصاحبها كما نشاهد من كثير من الممنونين بالجراحات والمصائب والأمراض أفراح في كثير من أوقات اتصافهم بها فلا بد لحل

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١١٨

هذا الإشكال.

فنقول إما سبب هذا الظن فذلك من باب أخذ ما بالعرض مكان ما بالذات - وذلك لأن اللذة لا تحصل إلا بإدراك فهذه اللذات الحسية لا تتم إلا بإدراكات حسية - والإدراك الحسي سيما اللمسي منه لا يكون إلا بانفعال الآلة عن ورود الضد وإذا استقرت الكيفية الواردة لم يحصل انفعال فلم يحصل شعور فلا تحصل لذة لمسية وغيرها - إلا عند تبدل الحال الغير الطبيعي فلاجل ذلك ظن أن اللذة نفسها هي ذلك الانفعال - وأما بيان بطلان هذا الظن فلأن الإنسان قد يستلذ من النظر إلى الصور الحسنة - التي لم يكن عالما بوجودها مشتاقا إليها سابقا حتى يقال بأن النظر إليها يدفع ضرر الاشتياق وألم الفراق وكذلك ربما يدرك مسألة علمية من غير طلب وشوق إليها ولا تعب فكري في تحصيلها كما في عقيب

انحلال الشبهات المشكلة التي قد تعب في حلها حتى يقال بأن الاستلذاذ لها لأجل زوال أذى الانزعاج الفكري و كذلك إذا أعطي له مال عظيم أو منصب جليل لم يكن متوقعا له و لا طالبا لحصوله حتى يقال بأن حصول هذه الأمور يدفع الم الطلب و الشوق مع أن كل هذه الأمور لذيدة فبطل هذا المذهب.

قال الشيخ في رسالة في الأدوية القلبية الفرحة لذة ما و كل لذة هي إدراك لحصول الكمال الخاص بالقوة المدركة مثل الإحساس بالحلو للحاسة الذوقية و بالعرف الطيب للحاسة الشمية و الشعور بالانتقام للقوة الغضبية و الشعور بالمتوقع النافع - و هو الأمل للقوة الظانة أو المتوهمة و كل كمال فهو أمر طبيعي و ينعكس و كل شعور بأمر طبيعي للقوة فهو التذاذها له و ربما يتفق في بعض القوى أن لا يلتذ إلا عند مفارقة الحالة الغير الطبيعية كان الثبات على الحالة الطبيعية لا يكون لذيدا وإنما وقع هذا السهو بسبب أخذ ما بالعرض مكان ما بالذات و قد عرف في كتاب سفسطيقا أن هذا أحد المغالطات.

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١١٩

أما بيان هذا في مسألتنا هذه فهو أن من المدركات ما لا يدرك إلا عند الاستحالة - و هو مثل الملموسات فإن الكيفية إنما تحس بها ما دام العضو اللامس مضادا لها في الكيفية و ينفع عنها فإذا انفعل و استقر صارت الكيفية مزاج العضو فلم يحس به إذ كل حس فهو باستحالة ما و الشيء لا يستحيل عن نفسه و لهذا لا يتأذى صاحب الدق بالحرارة الشديدة التي هي أشد من حرارة الحمى المحرقة و يتأذى صاحب الحمى المحرقة بما هو دون ذلك و ذلك لأن حرارة الدق متمكنة من الأعضاء كالمزاج لها و مزاج الأعضاء يخالفها و حرارة الحمى المحرقة طارية عليها و الأطباء يخصون ما يجري مجرى الدق - باسم سوء المزاج المستوي و ما يجري مجرى المحرقة باسم سوء المزاج المختلف - و قد تبين أن السبب في عدم الالتذاذ بما يستقر من الكمالات الحسية هو عدم الإدراك - و سبب اللذة عند ابتداء الخروج إلى الحالة الطبيعية هو حصول الإدراك و لما عرض أن كان حصول الإدراك مع الخروج من الحالة الغير الطبيعية عرض أن كان اللذة مع الخروج عنها فظن أن ذلك سببها و ليس الأمر كذلك بل السبب حصول الكمال فهذا هو سبب اللذة انتهى. و ذكر في القانون أن الوجد الإحساس بالمنافي.

و قال في الفصل الأخير من المقالة الثامنة من إلهيات الشفاء أن اللذة ليست إلا إدراك الملائم من جهة ما هو ملائم. و قال في فصل المعاد من المقالة التاسعة إن القوى تشترك في أن شعورها بموافقها و ملائمها هو الخير و اللذة الخاصة بها و موافق كل واحد منها بالذات و الحقيقة - هو حصول الكمال الذي هو بالقياس إليه كمال بالفعل قال فخر المناظرين اللذة و الألم حقيقتان غنيتان عن التعريف.

إذ كما أن التصديقات المكتسبة يجب أن تنتهي إلى تصديق غني عن البرهان - و كذلك التصورات المكتسبة يجب انتهائها إلى تصورات غنية عن التعريف و كما أن القضايا الحسية لا يحتاج صحتها إلى البرهان كعلم الإنسان بألمه و لذته فتصور هذه

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٢٠

الأمور المتقدمة على التصديق بها أولى بأن يكون غنيا عن التعريف بل هاهنا بحث لا بد منه و هو أن معرفة الحال التي

نجدها من النفس التي سمينها باللذة ^أ هي نفس إدراك الملائم ^{أو} أمر مغاير لذلك الإدراك و بتقدير كونه مغايرا لذلك الإدراك ^أ هو معلول له - ^{أو} لشيء آخر ^{و إن} لم يوجد إلا مع ذلك الإدراك.

فهذه أمور لا بد من البحث عنها و إلى الآن لم يتضح عندي شيء من هذه الأقسام بالبرهان و لكن الأقرب أن الألم ليس هو نفس إدراك المنافي لأن التجارب الطبية شهدت بأن سوء المزاج الرطب غير مؤلم مع أنه محسوس و لو كان الأمر الغير الطبيعي هو نفس الألم لاستحال أن يوجد مع عدم الألم و به ثبت أيضا أن إدراك المنافي وحده لا يكفي في اقتضاء الألم انتهى أقول دعواه أولا بأن اللذة و الألم و العلم أمور غنية عن التعريف كما أن علمنا بأن لنا لذة ^{أو} ألما غني عن البرهان بل هما أولى بالغناء عن التعريف من القضية الحسية بالغناء عن البرهان ينافي اعترافه ثانيا بالجهل بامتياز كل منهما عن العلم بالمنافي و الملائم ^{أو} اتحادهما مع ذلك العلم.

ثم استدلاله ثالثا على أن الألم ليس نفس الإدراك بالمنافي و لا مستلزما له أيضا - فهذا عجيب من مثله في الفضل و البراعة.

و أما البرهان على أن اللذة هي عين الإدراك بوجود الكمال و كذا الألم عين الإدراك بما يضاد الكمال ففي غاية الوضوح و الإنارة بعد تحقيق الإدراك و الوجود و الكمال أما الوجود فليس الأمر فيه كما توهمه هو و من في طبقته و أتباعه من المتأخرين - من أنه أمر عقلي انتزاعي كالشيئية و الممكنية و أمثالهما بل هو أمر عيني حقيقي يطرد به العدم فهو نفس هوية الشيء و به يتشخص كل ذي ماهية و الوجود مختلف في الأشياء ذوات الماهيات لأن وجود الإنسان مثلا غير وجود الفرس و وجود السماء غير وجود الأرض و الوجود بهذا المعنى كما أنه متفاوت في أنواع الماهيات كذلك مما يشتد و يضعف و يكمل و ينقص و وجود كل شيء هو خير له و كمال ذلك الوجود كمال الخير له و زوال

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٢١

ذلك الوجود منه شر له و وبال و زوال كماله أيضا شر دون ذلك الشر سواء أدرك وجوده ^{أو} كمال وجوده ^{أو} لم يدرك ^{أو} أدرك عدمه ^{أو} عدم كماله ^{أو} لم يدرك كما في الجمادات و غيرها فإن الوجود ^{أو} الكمال شيء و إدراك ذلك الوجود ^{أو} الكمال شيء آخر.

و أما العلم و الإدراك مطلقا فليس كما زعمه هذا التحرير عبارة عن إضافة محضة بين العالم و معلومه من غير حاجة إلى وجود صورة و إلا فلم يكن منقسما إلى التصور و التصديق و لا أيضا متعلقا بالمعدوم حين عدمه و لا أيضا حصل علم الشيء بنفسه إذ لا إضافة بين الشيء و المعدوم و لا بينه و بين نفسه بل المراد بالعلم هو نفس الصورة الموجودة المجردة عن المادة ضربا من التجرد للذات المجردة أيضا ضربا من التجرد من حيث تجرده و مراتب التجريد متفاوتة فللمحسوسة عن أصل المادة و للمتخيلة عنها و عن الوضع و للمعقولة عنهما و عن المقدار أيضا.

و هذه الصورة مماثلة للمعلوم و هي قد تكون مماثلة للعالم كعلم الإنسان بذاته إذا كان بصورة زائدة عليها و قد يكون عينه كوجود الصورة المجردة القائمة بذاتها فإن تلك الصورة علم و معلوم و عالم أيضا لصدق مفهوماتها الثلاثة عليها و قد يكون مماثلا لبعض قوى العالم كعلم الإنسان بالمحسوسات الملائمة لحواسها كالألوان الملمعة و الأصوات الطيبة و الروائح البهية و المطاعم الشهية و الملابس الناعمة - و قد يكون الصورة مضادة للعالم ^{أو} لبعض قواه فالأول كشعور الإنسان بصورة جهله و حمقه و رذائله.

و أما الثاني فكأحساسه بالألوان الكدرة المظلمة و الأصوات الكريهة و الروائح الممتنة و المذوقات المرة العفصة و الملابس الخشنة.

فإذا تقررَت هذه المعاني فعلم أن الوجود في نفسه خير و بهاء كما أن العدم في نفسه شر على ما حكم به الفطرة و إذا حصل الوجود لشيء كان خيرا و بهاء لذلك الشيء و العلم عبارة عن ضرب من وجود شيء لشيء فيكون أيضا كمالاته إلا أن يكون مضرا و مضادا لكمال آخر له فإن وجود الحرارة لو أمكن اجتماعه مع البرودة و حصوله لها

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٢٢

لكان كمالاتها لكن لما كان وجودها للبرودة يوجب زوال وجودها الذاتي الذي كان لها فيكون عائدا إليها بالعدم لذاتها و كل صفة يكون وجودها لشيء مستلزما لعدم ذات ذلك الشيء لم يكن كمالاته بل شر و آفة لكن لا بما هو وجود بل بما هو معدوم لوجوده فالشر بالذات هو العدم.

فكل علم بما هو غير مضاد لوجود العالم به فهو خير له و ذلك الخير لا محالة لذة - لما مر أن الوجود خير سواء أدرك أو لم يدرك لكن متى كان ذلك الخير نفس الإدراك - كان إدراكا هو محض الخير كان لذة و بهجة إذ كل أحد يعلم أنه إذا كان لشيء كمال و قوة كما يتصور في حقه من الوجود و كان مدركا لذلك الكمال الشديد بلا آفة كان ملتذا و متى لم يكن له شعور بذلك الكمال لم يكن له لذة فاللذة إذن عين الشعور بالكمال.

و قولنا و متى لم يكن له شعور بكماله لم يكن له لذة ليس غرضنا إثبات هذا الحكم بالدوران بل ندعي بعد ما قدمنا من المقدمات أن الوجود خير و إدراك حصول الخير للمدرك خير آخر لذلك المدرك و كل إدراك يكون ذلك الإدراك بعينه خيرا و بهاء للمدرك أو لبعض قواه و أجزاءه فهو عين اللذة و البهجة له لذاته أو لأجل بعض قواه و لذلك إذا حصل للشيء أمر وجودي يؤدي إلى زواله أو زوال شيء من كماله أو كمال قواه و كان ذلك الأمر صورة إدراكية له فإدراكه عين وجود ذلك المزيل المضاد و كل وجود مزيل مضاد لشيء إذا حصل كان ضارا له و الإدراك الضار بالشيء ألم له لا محالة و لو لم يكن ذلك الضار إدراكا لم يكن بعينه ألما كما إذا فرق بين أجزاء جسم و زالت وحدته الاتصالية كان ذلك شرا و خيرا له و ليس بالم.

و أما إذا وقع تفرق اتصال في العضو اللمس و حصلت في الحس صورته كانت صورة التفرق منافية لصورة الكمال الذي هو الاتصال و كانت تلك الصورة الإدراكية عين التفرق كانت بعينها شرا و ألما. و اعلم أن صورة التفرق غير نفس التفرق بوجه و عينه بوجه إذ لو كانت نفس التفرق

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٢٣

لم يكن ألما إذ لا ألم للهوى و لا للعدم و لو لم يكن صورة مساوية له في المعنى لم يكن منافيا للاتصال الذي هو الكمال و لا أيضا علما بل معلوما و المعلوم الخارج عن المدرك لا يكون ألما له و لا لذة لأن ما خرج عن الشيء ليس كمالاته و لا ضد كمال له.

و بالجملة فاللذة كمال خاص بالمدرك بما هو إدراك لذلك الكمال و الألم ضد كمال خاص بالمدرك بما هو إدراك لذلك الضد.

فثبت بالبرهان أن اللذة نفس الإدراك بالملائم و الألم نفس الإدراك بالمنافي.
و أما استدلاله على أن الألم غير الإدراك بالمنافي بأن سوء المزاج الرطب غير مؤلم مع أنه مناف.
فجوابه بعد تسليم أنه غير مؤلم أنا لا نسلم أن إدراكه حاصل لما هو مناف له - فإن الألم إدراك المنافي لذلك المدرك لا
لغيره ففي الإنسان قوى متعددة ربما كان منافي بعضها مدركا للآخر من غير أن يكون منافيا له و مدرك بعضها منافيا
للآخر من غير أن يكون مدركا له فلم يحصل فيه ألم و لأن سوء المزاج البارد مما يوجب زوال الحس اللمسي وإذا لم
يكن حس لم يكن ألم له و إن كان مدركا لحس آخر مما لم يكن منافيا له كالتخيل أو التعقل فإن تخيل سوء المزاج و
تعقله ليس مولما للخيال و العقل بل إنما المؤلم هو الإدراك الذي لحامل ذلك المزاج اعنى القوة اللمسية التي له إن كانت
موجودة غير متبلدة و لا متخدرة كما في نحو الفالج و غيره فصاحب الفالج ليس متألما ذا وجع لعدم الحس اللمسي
الذي له هذه الآفة.
و بما ذكرنا ظهر اندفاع إشكال آخر و هو أن المريض قد يلتذ بالحلاوة و هي مما لا يلائمه بل يمرضه و يتنفّر عن
الأدوية و هي مما يلائمه و ينفعه فدل على أن اللذة

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٢٤

غير إدراك الملائم و الألم غير إدراك المنافي.
و وجه الدفع أن الحلو ملائم لقوته الذوقية و ليس آفة لها بالفعل بل قوة و كمالاتها و كذا الأدوية البشعة ليست ملائمة و
لا نافعة للقوة الذوقية و إنما عدم ملائمة الحلو و وجود ملائمة البشع لأن ذلك يوجب زيادة الخلط الردي المنافي لمزاج
البدن و هذا يوجب دفع ذلك الخلط الردي فيعود ذلك وبالا و هذا نفعاً لا لأجل إدراكيهما و لو فرض الإدراك للحلو
حاصلا و لم يعرض أمر آخر كان خيرا محضاً و لذة.
و لو أدرك البشاعة و المرارة و لم يعرض أمر آخر كان شراً محضاً و ألماً و الأمر العارض هو الذي يخرج الدواء خلطاً
موزياً أو يحيله إلى خلط جيد يتغذى به أو يقوي البدن فلهذين الأمرين يحصل الضرر و الانتفاع لا بمجرد الإدراكين الأولين

فصل (٥) في إبطال القول بأن المؤلم الموجه في الجميع هو تفرق الاتصال

قال إمام الأطباء جالينوس إن السبب الذاتي للوجع و هو الألم الحسي

هو تفرق الاتصال فإن الحار إنما يوجع لأنه تفرق الاتصال و البارد إنما يوجع أيضاً إذ يلزمه تفرق الاتصال لخلاف جانب
الجمع و التكثيف و الأسود في المبصرات يؤلم لشدة جمعه و الأبيض لشدة تفريقه و المر و الحامض يؤلم لفرط
تفريقه و العفص لفرط تقبيضه فيتبعه تفرق الاتصال و كذا الأصوات القوية يؤلم بالتفرقة بعنف من الحركة الهوائية عند ملاصقته للصماخ.

و بالجملة فالأطباء اتفقوا على أن تفرق الاتصال سبب ذاتي للوجع.

أقول لا شك أن لفظه اللذة و الألم عند العامة لا يطلقان إلا للحسي فقط بناء على عدم تفتنهم بنحو آخر من الوجود و لا
شبهة في أن موضوع كل حس جسم لطيف - متفاوت في اللطافة له صورة اتصالية و له أيضاً كيفية مزاجية اعتدالية
فسبب الألم إما زوال اتصاله بورود الانفصال أو زوال مزاجه بورود ضد المزاج.

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٢٥

فلهذا وقع الاختلاف بينهم فجالينوس و أكثر الأطباء على أن السبب الذاتي هو تفرق الاتصال و سوء المزاج المختلف سبب بالعرض و غيرهم كجماعة من المتأخرين - منهم الإمام الرازي على العكس و الشيخ على أن كلا منهما يصلح سببا بالذات كما يكون بالعرض و على كل منها احتجاجات و استدلالات أعرضنا عن ذكرها مخافة التطويل الممل و تفاصيلها موجودة في شرح العلامة الشيرازي للقانون.

و استدلل في المباحث المشرقية على بطلان مذهب الأطباء بوجوه

الأول أن تفرق الاتصال يرادف الانفصال

و هو عديم فلا يصلح علة للوجع لأنه وجودي.

الثاني أنه لو كان سببا للوجع لكان الإنسان دائم الوجع

لأنه دائما في تفرق الاتصال بواسطة الاغتذاء و التحلل لأن الاغتذاء و النمو إنما يكونان بنفوذ الغذاء في الأعضاء و التحلل إنما يكون بانفصال شيء من الأعضاء.

لا يقال هذا التفرق لكونه في غاية الصغر لا يؤلم إذ لا يحس بالمه سيما و قد صار مألوفاً بدوامه.

لأننا نقول كل تفرق و إن كان صغيرا لكن جملتها كثيرة جدا لأن التغذية و النمو شيء غير مختص بجزء دون جزء و إذا كان كذلك فلو كان تفرق أجزاء البدن غير مؤلم لكان كل تفرق كقطع العضو كذلك لأن حكم الأمثال واحد و لما لم يكن كذلك علمنا أن التفرق غير مؤلم لذاته بل إذا كان معه سوء مزاج.

الثالث أن التفرق لو كان سببا بالذات لما وقع الأثر متأخرا عنه بحسب الزمان و اللازم باطل

لأن قطع العضو متى حصل بآلة في غاية الحدة و بأسرع زمان لا يحس بالألم إلا بعد لحظة ربما يحصل فيها سوء المزاج.

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٢٦

الرابع أن تفرق الاتصال لو كان مولما لكان الجراحة العظيمة أشد إيلاما من لسعة العقرب

لكون التفرق في الجراحة أكثر.

و الجواب

أما عن الأول فبان الانفصال و نظائره من الأمور التي تحدث - في المواد القابلة عقيب استعداداتها بأسباب و شرائط ليست أعداما صرفة لا حظ لها من الوجود - بل لها قسط من الوجود و لما هياتها تحصل في الخارج كسائر الماهيات الضعيفة الوجود و وجودها عبارة عن كون موضوعاتها بحيث ينتزع منها عنواناتها و مفهوماتها السلبية - من جهة اقتران تلك الموضوعات بنقائص و قصورات و استصحابها إياها لا لذواتها فهي من العوارض لا من الذاتيات فهي بأنفسها من الشرور بالذات و كذا العلم بها - لأن كل علم متحد مع المعلوم به و لأجل ذلك صح عد الألم من الشرور بالذات.

و من هاهنا يندفع الشبهة التي أوردها بعض المتأخرين على الحكماء - حيث حكموا بأن الشرور بالذات هي الأعدام لا غير مع أننا نعلم بالضرورة أن الألم و هو إدراك المنافي شر بالذات و الإدراك أمر وجودي و ذلك لأن الإدراك للشيء هو بعينه وجود ذلك الشيء إن ذهننا فذهنا و إن خارجا فخارجا فكما أن وجود الإنسان هو عين معنى الإنسان في الخارج و

كذلك وجودات الأعدام في الخارج كالتفرق و العمى و الصمم و الجهل هي نفس تلك الأعدام فكذا إدراكات تلك الأعدام اعنى حضورها للقوة المدركة فهذا الحضور و الإدراك من أفراد العدم بالذات - و لهذا يكون الألم شرابا لذات و إن كان من أفراد الوجود.

و الحاصل أن حقيقة الوجود في هذه الأمور العدمية التي هي أعدام الملكات هي بعينها حيثية العدم في الخارج كسائر الوجودات مع ماهياتها في الخارج و كذا حكم شرعية الآلام التي هي بعينها حضورها للمشاعر و خيريتها في كونهما متحدتين بالذات - متغايرتين بحسب المفهوم كالماهية و الوجود فافهم ذلك و اغتنم به فإنه كسائر نظائره

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٢٧

لا يوجد في غير هذا الكتاب و ربما يجب عما ذكره بأن الانفصال و كذا التفرق له معنيان عدمي هو زوال الاتصال - و وجودي هو حدوث كثرة الاتصالات و المتصلات و هذا هو المؤلم دون ذلك العدم. أو نقول المراد من التفرق حركة بعض الأجزاء عن بعض و هو غير مرادف للانفصال الذي هو بمعنى عدم الاتصال و لو سلم ذلك فيلزمه لا محالة كون هيئة العضو فاقدة كماله اللائق به و أمكن إدراكه من هذه الجهة فيكون موجبا بذاته بمعنى أنه ليس بتوسط سوء المزاج و إن كان بتوسط ما يلزمه من خروج الهيئة العضوية عن كمالها و لو سلم فالمراد بالسبب هاهنا المعد أي الفاعل لإعداد العضو لقبول الوجود لا المؤثر الموجد و لا امتناع في كون التفرق العدمي بحيث متى حصل اقتضى الألم كسوء المزاج و هذا أجوبة جدلية.

و التحقيق ما ذكرناه أولا و أما عن الثاني و الثالث فبأننا لا نعني بكون تفرق الاتصال مؤلما أن نفسه مؤلم أو هو تمام علة الألم بحيث لا يتخلف عنه الوجود بل نعني أن الصورة الحسية من التفرق إن كانت في عضو حساس مع التفات النفس إليه و الشعور به من غير أن يصير تلك الصورة مستمرة مألوفة لما مر من أن الوجود بما هو وجود مألوف مطبوع - و كون التفرق ألما بشرط أن يدرك من جهة كونه منافيا لكيفية العضو أو اتصاله فهو مؤلم بالذات بمعنى عدم التوقف على سوء المزاج بل من جهة ما يلزمه من فقدان هيئة العضو أو مادته كماله اللائق به و حينئذ يجوز أن لا يكون للتفرق الواقع في الاغتذاء - و التحلل صورة مدركية للحس أو يكون قدر ما يدركه من الصورة مألوف لا يضر و لا يؤلم - أو يكون إدراكه لا من جهة كونه منافيا و تفرقا بل من جهة كونه نافعا للبدن بتبقيّة الصحة و القوة و تنقية البدن عن الفضول.

و ما ذكره من لزوم استواء التفرقات في الأحكام ظاهر الاندفاع كيف و التفرق الغذائي طبيعي دائم في أجزاء صغيرة يترتب عليه للبدن مصالح كثيرة و قطع العضو ليس كذلك على أن التحقيق عندنا أن التغذية و التنمية ليستا مستلزميتين لمداخلة

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٢٨

أجزاء الغذاء بين أجزاء المغتذي و النامي كما سيجيء في مباحث إثبات القوى النفسانية في علم النفس. و أقول أيضا إن الإنسان لم يكن له نحو من الوجود من بدو خلخته إلى هذا الحد الذي بلغ إليه عمره إلا هذا الوجود التحليلي فيمكن أن يكون دائم الألم لكن لما لم يدرك نحو آخر من الوجود الذي ليس فيه هذا النحو من التفرق ظن أن

لا أَلَمَ له و لذلك لو فرض إنسان قد أدرك ما لأهل النشأة الباقية من الوجود الذي لا يشوبه هذه الأعدام و التفرقات ثم كلف بالبقاء في هذا العالم لمات وجعا و تألما.

و بالجملة هذا التفرق الحاصل بالتحلل كالحركة الجوهرية التي أثبتناها للطبائع التي نحو وجودها وجود تبدلي حدوثه في كل آن يوجب زوال الحادث في الآن السابق و مع ذلك لا يقع الإحساس بألم التفرقة في هذا الوجود لما بينا من أن القوة الدراكة وجودها هذا الوجود و وجود الشيء غير مؤلم له كما أن سوء المزاج لأحد ربما يكون مثل المزاج الصحيح لغيره فكان مؤلما لهذا ملذا لذلك و أما الذي ذكر من عدم تألم مقطوع العضو دفعه إلا بعد لحظة فهذا لا يقتضي عدم كون صورة القطع مؤلمة فإن القطع إن كان مع شعور به و التفات إليه كان مؤلما البتة و إن كان مع عدم الشعور و الالتفات فلا يدل على ما ادعاه ألا ترى أن من صرف فكره إلى أمر أهم شريف كالخائض في مسألة علمية أو إلى أمر خسيس أيضا كاللعب بالشطرنج أو متوسط كالابتلاء بوجع أقوى أو الوقوع في معركة أو الاهتمام بمهم دنيوي ربما لا يدرك ألم الجوع و العطش و كثير من الموزيات و كذا حكم المستلذات.

و أما الجواب عن الرابع فبان ذلك إنما يلزم لو كان ألم لسع العقرب أيضا لتفرق الاتصال فقط و هو ليس بلازم لجواز أن يكون لما يحصل بواسطة الكيفية السمية من سوء مزاج مختلف يكون أقوى تأثيرا من الجراحة العظيمة. و ما ذكره إنما يرد نقضا على من لم يجعل التأثير إلا لتفرق الاتصال دون سوء المزاج كما اشتهر من جالينوس و أتباعه على أنه يمكن الجواب من قبلهم بأن

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٢٩

سبب الإيلام الشديد في السموم ربما كان لأجل تقطيعات كثيرة في العضو مع وجود القوة الحسية و أما قطع العضو ففيه تفرق واحد و مع ذلك لم يبق القوة اللمسية - التي للعضو المفصول بل للباقي كان المحل الباقي الذي وصل أثر القطع إليه أو قبل ذلك القطع أقل قدرا من العضو الذي سرى فيه أثر التفرق الحاصل من ذلك السم.

و اعلم أن لكل من هذه المذاهب وجه صحيح - أما الذي ذكره الأطباء فيمكن تصحيحه بأن المؤلم ليس نفس تفرق الاتصال بل صورته الحادثة لأن هذه الموجودات جسمانية الوجود و الوجود كما مر عين الوحدة فوجودها يتقوم بوحدة الاتصال و التفرق ضده و ضد الوجود سبب ذاتي للألم لأن إدراكه كما مر هو الألم.

و أما مذهب مخالفيهم و هو أن المؤلم هو سوء المزاج فلأن نسبة الكيفية المزاجية إلى الوحدة الاتصالية كنسبة الصورة إلى المادة و الشيء شيء بصورته لا بمادته فالحيوان حيوان بصورة مزاجه لا بمادة جسده إلا بالعرض حتى لو أمكن صورة الكيفية المزاجية الحيوانية بلا مادة لكان حيوانا فضعف كل حيوان بما هو ذلك الحيوان من حيث الصورة مزاج آخر يخالف مزاجه و من حيث المادة اتصال آخر يخالف اتصاله و جانب الصورة هو الأصل فالمضاد المؤلم بالذات له هو سوء المزاج المختلف له لا تفرق اتصاله.

و أما مذهب الشيخ و من تبعه و هو الأصح الأحق فلأن التركيب بين المادة و الصورة اتحادي فصلاحي كل منهما صلاح الآخر و فساده فساده

فصل (٦) في أن المؤلم أي نوع من سوء المزاج

اشترط الشيخ في سوء المزاج المؤلم أن يكون حارا أو باردا لا رطبا و يابسا

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٣٠

و أن يكون مختلفا لا متفقا.

أما الأول فلأن الرطوبة و اليبوسة من الكيفيات الانفعالية

دون الفعلية و أورد عليه بأنه إن أريد أنهما ليستا فاعلتين و المؤلم بالذات فاعل فيشكل بجعل اليبوسة سببا لتفريق الاتصال أو كليهما لكثير من الأمراض فليكونا سببين للوجع بهذا المعنى من غير توسط تفرق الاتصال فلا ينحصر السبب فيه و في سوء المزاج الحار أو البارد و أما السبب بالذات بمعنى المؤثر بالطبع فلا دليل على كون الحار و البارد و تفرق الاتصال كذلك و إن أريد أن الوجع إحساس ما و الإحساس انفعال و الانفعال لا يكون إلا عن فاعل و هما ليسا من الكيفيات فيشكل بتصريح الشيخ في مواضع من كتبه بل إطلاق القوم على أنهما من الكيفيات المحسوسة بل أوائل الملموسات - و عند خروجهما عن الاعتدال يكونا متنافيين فإدراكهما من حيث هما كذلك يكون ألما.

ثم ذكر الشيخ أن سوء المزاج اليابس قد يكون مؤلما بالعرض لأنه قد يتبعه لشدة القبض تفرق الاتصال المؤلم بالذات و اعترض بأن الرطب أيضا قد يستتبعه بواسطة التحديد [التمديد] اللازم لكثرة الرطوبة المحوجة إلى مكان أوسع. و أجيب بأن ذلك إنما يكون في الرطوبة التي مع المادة فيكون الموجب هو المادة لا الرطوبة نفسها.

و أما الثاني فلأن سوء المزاج المتفق غير مؤلم

و لذلك سمي بالمتفق و المستوي حيث شابه المزاج الأصلي في عدم الإيلام و ذلك لأنه عبارة عن الذي استقر في جوهر العضو و أبطل المقاومة و صار في حكم المزاج الأصلي فلا انفعال فيه للحاسة فلا إحساس فلا ألم و أيضا المنافات إنما يتحقق بين شيئين فلا بد من بقاء المزاج الأصلي عند ورود الغريب لتحقيق إدراك كيفية متنافية لكيفية العضو فيتحقق الألم.

و أيضا الدق أشد حرارة من الغب لأن الجسم الصلب لا يتسخن إلا عن حرارة قوية و لأنها تستعمل فيه مبردات أقوى مما يستعمل في الغب و لأنها تؤدي إلى ذوبان مفرط

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٣١

من الأعضاء حتى الصلبة منها و صاحب الدق لا يجد من التهاب ما يجده صاحب الغب - و ما ذلك إلا لكون سوء المزاج المتفق لا يحس به و أيضا المستحم في الشتاء يشمئز بدنه عن الماء الفاتر و يتأذى به ثم إنه بعد ذلك يستلذه و يستطيعه ثم إذا استعمل ماء حارا تأذى به ثم بعده يستلذه ثم إذا استعمل الماء الأول استبرده و تألم به و ذلك لما ذكرنا.

و توضيح ذلك أن المنافاة وصف لا يتحقق إلا عند ثبوت أمرين ليكون أحدهما منافيا للآخر فإذا كان لعضو كيفية فورد عليه ما يضاد كفيته فلا يخلو إما أن يكون الوارد عليه قد أبطل كيفية ذلك العضو أو لم يبطل فإن أبطل فلم يكن هناك كيفيتان بل هناك كيفية واحدة فلم يكن المنافات حاصلة فلا يكون الألم حاصلا و أما إذا كان الوارد لا يقوى على إبطال كيفية العضو فحينئذ يكون المنافاة حاصلة بين كيفية العضو و كيفية الوارد عليه فحصل الشعور بتلك المنافات حينئذ فلا جرم يتحقق الألم فهذا هو السبب في أن سوء المزاج المتفق لا يؤلم و سوء المزاج المختلف يؤلم هذا ما قيل.

أقول فيه شك و تحقيق.

أما الشك فهو أن قوام العضو الشخصي بالكيفية الشخصية المزاجية فإذا ورد شخص آخر مناف لها في التشخص مساو لها في النوع وجب أن يبطل الأولى - وإلا لزم اجتماع المثليين بل المتنافيين في محل واحد فإذا بطلت الأولى فبأي قوة أدركت الثانية.

وأما التحقيق فهو أن الأولى وإن بطلت فصورته المحسوسة حاضرة عند النفس و كانت مألوفة للنفس فيتأدى بورود الثانية الموجب لزوال المألوفة و قوام العضو في كل وقت بكيفية أخرى من عوض المزاج و حافظ الجميع هو النفس لا العضو.

و اعلم أن سوء المزاج المختلف قد لا يوجع بل لا يدرك أصلا و ذلك إذا كان

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٣٢

حدوثه بالتدريج فإن الحادث منه أولا يكون قليلا جدا فلا يشعر به و بمنافاته و في الزمان الثاني يكون الزيادة على تلك الحالة غير مشعور بها و كذا في كل زمان و هذا بخلاف ما يحدث دفعه فإنه لكثرتة يكون مدركا ثم يستمر إدراكه ما دام مختلفا

فصل (٧) في تفصيل اللذات و تفضيل بعضها على بعض

كل من اللذة و الألم ينقسم بحسب القوة المدركة إلى العقلي و الوهمي و الخيالي و الحسي و ينحصر في هذه الأربعة عند البحث و التحقيق أما الحسي فظاهر كتكيف العضو اللامس بالكيفية الملموسة الشهية و الذائق بالحلاوة.

و أما الخيالي فكتخيل اللذات الحاصلة و المرجوة الحصول للظفر و الانتقام.

و أما الوهمي فكالظنون النافعة و الأمانى المرغوبة كما قيل

أمانى إن تحصل تكن غاية المنى وإلا فقد عشنا بها زمنا رغدا

و أما العقلي فلأن للجوهر العاقل أيضا كمالات و أن يتمثل فيه ما يتعقله من الواجب تحصيله بقدر الاستطاعة ثم ما يتعقله من صور معلوماته الثابتة المترتبة أعني نظام الوجود كله تمثلا مطابقا خاليا عن شوائب الظنون و الأوهام بحيث يصير عقلا مستفادا و عند من تصير النفس بعينها متحدة بالعقل الذي هو كل هذه الموجودات فيصير حينئذ لاذا و لذة و ملتذا في باب اللذة العقلية لا ذا لذة فقط.

و بالجملة لا شك أن هذا الكمال خير للجوهر العاقل و هو مدرك لهذا الكمال عند ذلك فإذا هو ملتذ بذلك فهذه هي اللذة العقلية و أما الألم العقلي فهو أن يحصل لما من شأنه ذلك الكمال ضده و يدرك صورة ضده من حيث هو ضده و أما من ليس من شأنه أن يحصل له ذلك فهو فارغ عن هذا الألم.

ثم إذا قايستنا بين هذه اللذة العقلية و التي لسائر القوى سيما الحس فالعقلية

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٣٣

أكثر كمية و أقوى كيفية.

أما الأول فلأن عدد تفاصيل المعقولات أكثر بل يكاد أن لا يتناهى و وجودها أدوم فلا ينقطع.

و أما الثاني فلأن العقل يصل إلى كنه الموجود المعقول و الحس لا يدرك إلا ما يتعلق بالظواهر و القشور فيكون

الكمالات العقلية أكثر وأدوم وأتم وإدراكاتها كذلك فاللذات التابعة لهما على قياسهما وبحسب هذا يعرف حال الآلام عند التنبه لفقد تلك الكمالات.

و اعلم أن اللذة العقلية إذا كملت فهي خارجة عن جنس الكيفيات النفسانية - لأنها حينئذ جوهر عقلي لا كيفية نفسانية. فإن قيل الحسي من اللذة والألم أيضا ينبغي عدهما من الكيفيات المحسوسة - دون الكيفيات النفسانية. أجيب بأن المدرك بآلة الحس هو الكيفية التي يلتذ بها أو يتألم منها كالحلاوة والمرارة وأما نفس اللذة والألم التي هي الإدراك والنيل فلا سبيل للحواس الظاهرة إلى إدراكها.

أقول هذا مما ذكره بعض الفضلاء وهو ليس بسديد لأن المراد باللذة والألم ليس المعنى العقلي النسبي وإلا لكانا من مقولة المضاف بل المراد ما يستلذه النفس أو يتألم به وهما من جنس الإدراك والإدراك كما هو التحقيق هو الصورة لا النسبة.

فالتحقيق أن يقال إن ما يعد من جنس الكيفيات المحسوسة هي الموجودة في مواد الأجسام لا الموجودة في آلات الإدراك من حيث هي آلات الإدراك وهذه الموجودة في الحواس إنما يطلق عليها اسم الحرارة والبرودة والحلاوة والمرارة من باب إطلاق ماهية المعلوم على العلم كما يقال في العلم بالجواهر إنه جوهر معناه أنه معقول من ماهية جوهرية مع أنه من الكيفيات النفسانية فالعلم بالجواهر جوهر ذهني عرض خارجي نفساني كما سنبين في باب العقل والمعقول فكذا إطلاق

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الأربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٣٤

المحسوس على الحس أي الصورة الموجودة في آلة النفس فتلك الصور كلها كيفيات نفسانية عندنا وليس شيء منها محسوسا لأحد بإحدى الحواس ولا يمكن إدراكها إلا بالنفس لا بالحس إذ لا توسط للحس في الحس بل في المحسوس الخارج عنه.

فإن قلت فما قولك في اللذة البصرية فإن المحسوس بالبصر هو الأمر الخارجي - إذ لو كان الإبصار بانطباع صورة المرئي في العضو المخصوص لزم فساد انطباع العظيم في الصغير وغير ذلك من المفاسد.

قلت مذهبا في الإبصار أمر آخر غير المذاهب المشهورة فإنه يتمثل الصورة المبصرة للنفس في غير هذا العالم وتلك الصورة أيضا ليست من جنس هذه الكيفيات - المسماة بالحسيات بل لونها وشكلها من جنس الكيفيات النفسانية وهي قائمة بالنفس لا بآلة البصر قيام المفعول بالفاعل لا الحال بالمحل فليدرك غور هذا التحقيق فإنه شريف جدا نافع في علم المعاد وموعد بيانه غير هذا الموضع.

ومما ينبغي أن يعلم هاهنا أنه نقل عن جالينوس أنه قال إن اللذة والألم يحدثان في الحواس كلها وكما كان الحس أكثر كانت مقاومته مع الوارد أكثر فكان الألم واللذة أقوى والطف الحواس البصر لأنه يتم بالنور الذي يشبه النار التي هي الطف العناصر فلا جرم لا يكون اللذة والأذى في البصر إلا قليلا والسمع أقل لطافة من البصر لأن آتة الهواء المقروع فلا جرم صارت اللذة والأذى في هذه الحاسة أكثر منها في البصر ثم الشم أقل لطافة من السمع لأن محسوسه البخار وهو أغلظ من الهواء - فلا جرم اللذة والأذى في الشم أكثر منها في البصر والسمع والذوق أغلظ من الشم لأن آتة الرطوبة العذبة في درجة الماء فلا جرم اللذة والأذى في الذوق أكثر واللمس أغلظ من جميع الحواس لأنه في

قياس الأرض فكانت مقاومته مع الوارد أقوى و أبطأ

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٣٥

فلا جرم صارت اللذة و الأذى فيه أقوى.

أقول إن جالينوس لم يكن حكيم النفس و لا لطيف القلب ذكيا فما ذكره يلزم منه أن يكون لذة الخيال أضعف من اللذات الحسية كلها إذ لا يتصور هناك مقاومة - و كذا اللذة العقلية و كأنه لم يدركها.

ثم المقاومة و عدمها مما لا مدخل لها في أصل اللذة و الألم بل لو كان ففي دوامها - إذ لذة كل قوة بإدراك صورة ملائمة لها و ألمها بصورة ضدها نعم لكل قوة حد من حدود الوجود بعضها أقوى و بعضها أضعف و بعضها الطف و بعضها أكثف و أقوى الوجودات أقواها لذة.

و لا نسلم أن ما هو أكثف فهو أقوى و ما هو الطف فهو أضعف و لا نسلم أيضا أن النار أضعف العناصر و الأرض أقوى بل العكس في الجميع أولى و أحق عند التحقيق - فإن وجود الجن و الشياطين أقوى من وجود الحيوان و الإنسان و لهما أفاعيل شاقة و أعمال قوية لا يقدر على عشر من أعشارها البشر كما هو متواتر الصدق إجمالا و إن كانت الخصوصيات آحاديا و أيضا الفلك و ما فيه لا شبهة في أنها الطف من العناصر - و هي مع ذلك أقوى و أقوم منها من غير شبهة فإدراكها أقوى فيكون الذ فعلم أن الألفظ أقوى إدراكا فيكون أشد إلذاذا.

و أما حال هذه الحواس فالوجه في تفاوت إدراكاتها لمدرجاتها أن المزاج الحيواني حاصل من هذه المواد العنصرية و نفسه منبعثة من مزاجه.

ثم الغالب على بدنه الأرض ثم الماء ثم البخار ثم الهواء ثم النار و بعدها ابتدئ الأرواح و الأفلاك و الأملاك فلهذا الغالب على أكثر الأفراد بحكم المناسبة الجنسية إدراك الملموسات ثم المطعومات ثم المشمومات ثم المسموعات و المبصرات ثم المتخيلات و المظنونيات ثم العقليات و اليقينيات و هكذا قياس لذاتهم و آلامهم التابعة لمدرجاتهم

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٣٦

فصل (٨) في تعقيب ما قاله الشيخ في لذة الحواس و حل ما يشكل فيه

قال في الفصل الثالث من المقالة السادسة من علم النفس من طبيعيات الشفاء

الحواس منها ما لا لذة لفعلها في محسوساتها و لا ألم.

و منها ما يلتذ و يتألم بتوسط المحسوسات فأما التي لا لذة لها و لا ألم فمثل البصر - فإنه لا يلتذ بالألوان و لا يتألم بذلك بل النفس يتألم بذلك و يلتذ و كذا الحال في الأذن - فإن تألمت الأذن من صوت شديد و العين من لون مفرط كالضوء فليس تألمها من حيث يسمع أو يبصر بل من حيث يلمس فإنه يحدث فيه ألم لمسي و كذلك يحدث فيه بزوال ذلك لذة لمسية.

و أما الشم و الذوق فإنهما يتألمان و يلتذان إذا تكيفا بكيفية مناصرة أو ملائمة.

و أما اللمس فإنه قد يتألم بالكيفية الملموسة و قد يلتذ بها و قد تلتذ و يتألم بغير توسط كيفية من المحسوس الأول بل بتفريق الاتصال و التيامه انتهى ما قال الشيخ و اعترض عليه بعض شارحي القانون و هو المسيحي بقوله هذا في غاية

الإشكال.

أما أولاً فإنه كان يرى و يعتقد أن المدرك للمحسوسات الجزئية هي الحواس - فمذهبه في هذا الموضع إما أن يكون هو ذاك أو لا يكون فإن كان الأول فيكون ناقض كلامه في البصر و السمع و إن كان الثاني فيكون قوله في غير السمع و البصر قولاً فاسداً.

و أما ثانياً فلأن كل واحد من الحواس له محسوس خاص يستحيل أن يدركه غيره و بديهية العقل حاكمة بهذا و حينئذ نقول كيف يتصور أن يقال إن القوة اللامسة الحاصلة في الأذن و العين هي المدركة للصوت المفرط و اللون الموزني. و أما ثالثاً فلأن ذلك مناقض لحدة اللذة و الألم فإنه حد اللذة على ما عرفت - بأنها إدراك الملائم من حيث هو ملائم و الملائم للقوة الباصرة إدراك المبصرات الحسية

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٣٧

لا اللمسية.

و أما رابعاً فلأن إدراك هذه المحسوسات إما أن يكون لذة و ألماً للحواس أو لا يكون فإن قال بالأول يكون إدراك البصر للألوان الحسنة لذة و إدراكه للألوان الموزية ألماً و إن قال بالثاني فلا يكون للمس لذة و لا ألم و لا للشم و الذوق و إن كان لذة و ألماً للبعض دون بعض كان ذلك ترجيحاً من غير مرجح و هو محال لأن هذه الحواس الخمس كلها وسائط للنفس في إدراك المحسوسات الجزئية.

ثم قال المسيحي و الحق عندي في هذه المسألة أن يقال الملائم للقوة الباصرة الألوان الحسنة و القوة السامعة الأصوات الطيبة و كذلك في باقي الحواس و إن إدراكها لهذه الأمور لذة بناء على أن الإدراك حضور صورة المدرك للمدرك - و إذا كان كذلك فيكون كل من الحواس الظاهرة له اللذة إذ لا معنى للذة إلا إدراك الملائم من حيث هو ملائم و كذا الألم و قال الإمام الرازي في كتاب المباحث بعد نقل كلام الشيخ هذا ما قاله الشيخ و هو الحق. فإن قيل لا شك أن الملائم للبصر هو الإبصار فكيف زعم الشيخ أن العين لا تلتذ بذلك مع أنه حد اللذة بأنها إدراك الملائم.

فنقول أما نحن فلا نساعد على أن في العين قوة مدركة بل المبصر و السامع هو النفس و هذه الأعضاء آلات لها في هذه الإدراكات فاندفع عنا هذا الإشكال.

و أما على مذهب الشيخ فالعذر أن الألوان ليست ملائمة للقوة الباصرة فإنه يستحيل اتصاف القوة الباصرة بالألوان بل إدراك الألوان أمر يلائم للقوة الباصرة - و الشيخ لم يجعل حصول الملائم لذة بل جعل إدراكه لذة و الباصرة إذا أبصرت حصل لها الملائم الذي هو إدراك الألوان و لم يحصل له إدراك هذه الملائم فإنها لم يدرك كونها مدركة بل النفس تدرك الأشياء و تدرك أنها أدركت تلك الأشياء فلا جرم يحصل لها اللذة.

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٣٨

ثم اعترض على نفسه فيما اختاره من أن المدرك هي النفس لا الحواس - و في هذا التوجيه الذي ذكره لكلام الشيخ بما لم يقدر على دفعه معه أنه ادعى أولاً حقية كلام الشيخ فقال ما حاصله أن هذه المحسوسات إما أن يسلم كونها ملائمة

لهذه الحواس أو يقال الملائم للحواس هو الإحساس لا المحسوس فإن سلم كون المحسوس ملائما للحواس كان إدراكها إدراكا للملائم.

فقوله بعد ذلك البصر لا يلتذ بالألوان يناقض قوله اللذة هي إدراك الملائم وأما أن منع من ذلك و زعم أن الملائم لها هو الإحساس لا المحسوس فلا يخلو إما أن نقول بأن حصول الملائم هو اللذة أو إدراكه هو اللذة فإن قال بالأول لزمه تسليم لذة البصر وإن قال بالثاني لزمه أن لا يثبت اللذة في حاسة اللمس لأنه ليس الملائم لها الملموسات بل الإحساس بها وليس لها إدراك لذلك الإحساس فهذا وجه الإشكال انتهى كلامه

و قال العلامة الشيرازي في شرح الكليات للقانون

بعد ما نقل كلام المسيحي وفيه نظر.

أما فيما ذكره أولا فبأن لا نسلم أن مذهب الشيخ أن المدرك للمحسوسات هي الحواس بل لا مدرك ولا حاكم ولا ملتذ ولا متألم عند الشيخ وغيره من الراسخين في الحكمة غير النفس وإطلاق هذه الألفاظ على الحواس بضرب من المجاز وإسناد معانيها إلى الحواس من أغلاط المتأخرين كالإمام الرازي ومن اقتفى أثره إلا أن إدراكها يختلف فمن المدركات ما يدركها بذاتها كالكليات.

ومنها ما يدركها بواسطة الآلات وهي الجزئيات وذلك بأن يتكيف آلات الحواس بالمحسوسات الخاصة بها فتدركها النفس وذلك لأن الإدراك حضور صورة المدرك فيما به يدرك ولأنها تدرك الكليات بذاتها والجزئيات بآلاتها يكون حضور الكليات في ذاتها وحضور الجزئيات المحسوسة في آلات الحواس لكن لما كان الإحساس انفعال الحاسة بل آلتها عن محسوسها الخاص وجب انفعال آلة كل حاسة عن محسوسها

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٣٩

الخاص بها وتكيفها بذلك المحسوس إلا أن انفعال بعض آلات الحواس وتكيفها بمحسوسها - يكون بحيث إن النفس يدركها حيث ينفع الآلات عن محسوساتها كالذائقة والشامة واللامسة.

ومنها ما لا يكون كذلك كالباصرة والسامعة ولهذا فإن الإنسان يدرك لذة الحلو في الفم ولذة الرائحة الطيبة في الشم ولذة النعومة في آلة اللمس - ولا يدرك لذة الصور الحسنة في الجليدية ولا في ملتقى العصبتين ولا لذة الصوت في العصبية المستفرشة وإن كانت آلتا السمع والبصر يتكيفان بالكيفيات المسموعة والمبصرة لا لما قيل إن انفعال بعض آلات الحواس وتكيفها بمحسوسها زمني وانفعال آلات البعض آني فالأول كاللامسة والذائقة والشامة وأما الثاني فكالباصرة والسماعة والهمم إلا على طريق الندرة كما إذا نظرنا إلى ضوء قوي أو خضرة شديدة وصدقنا النظر فيه ثم حولناه إلى غيره فبقى الضوء والخضرة في الجليدية - وكذا في آلة السمع قد يبقى تكيفها زمانا يسيرا كما يقال الصوت بعد في أذني.

فمراد الشيخ أن آلة الثلاث الأول تنفع عن محسوسها زمانا له قدر بحيث يدركها النفس وتلتذ أو تتألم وآلة الأخيرين لا تنفع عن محسوسها ولا يتكيف بها زمانا له قدر بحيث يدركه النفس فتلتذ أو تتألم.

هذا ما قالوه وهو كلام رخو سخي لا شتراك الحواس في كون إدراكها آتيا - وأما أن بعضها آني وبعضها زمني فغير مسلم فمن ادعاه فلا بد من دليل.

ثم إن الشيخ لم يذهب إلى أن آلي السمع والبصر لا يتكيفان بمحسوساتها بل يتكيفان به كتكيف الثلاث البواقى بمحسوساتها إلا أن السمع والبصر لا يلتذان بالمسموعات والمبصرات من حيث يسمع ويبصر بخلاف البواقى فإن الذائقة تلتذ من حيث تذوق والشامة من حيث تشم واللامسة من حيث تلمس والسبب فيه ما ذكرنا من أن النفس تدرك لذة الثلاث من حيث يتكيف آلاتها بمحسوساتها ولا يدرك لذة الآخرين حيث يتكيف آلتاهما بمحسوسيهما.

الحكمة المتعالية فى الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٤٠

و على هذا فالجواب الحق أن يقال لا نسلم أن مذهبه ذلك و سنده ما ذكرناه.
و أما فيما ذكره ثانيا فلأن الشيخ لا يقول إن المدرك للصوت العظيم واللون المفرط لامسة الأذن والعين بل المدرك لهما هو السامعة والباصرة والمتألم آلة لامستها بطريق تفرق اتصال يحدثه الصوت المفرط فى لامسة الأذن واللون الموزي فى لامسة العين.

و أما آلة السمع والبصر فلا يتألم منهما لأن إدراكهما آتى لا زمانى على ما قيل لبطلان ذلك بل لأنهما لا يتألمان من حيث يسمع ويبصر.

و أما فيما ذكره ثالثا فلأنه مبني على أن الملائم للقوة الباصرة إدراك المبصرات - و على أن الشيخ ذهب إلى أن مدرك المبصرات لامسة العين وهما ممنوعان لأن الملائم والموافق إنما يكونان للنفس لا لغيرها من القوى ولأنه ذهب إلى أن المتألم من اللون الموزي هو لامسة العين لا باصرة العين والمدرك باصرتها لا اللامسة وهو كلام حق.

و أما فيما ذكره رابعا فلأننا لا نسلم أنه إن كان ألما ولذة فى البعض دون البعض - كان ذلك ترجيحاً من غير مرجح وهو إدراك النفس لذة الحواس حيث ينفعل آلاتها عن محسوساتها.

و أما الحق الذى اختاره فباطل لأن الملائم والموافق إنما يكونان للنفس لا للقوى - وأن القوة لا تدرك شيئاً ليقال إن إدراكها لهذه الأمور هي اللذة فهذا ما عندي فى هذا المقام انتهى كلام العلامة الشيرازي

أقول وفيه أبحاث

أما أولا فلأن ما ذكره من أن لا ملتذ ولا متألم إلا النفس فليس على إطلاقه بصحيح فإن النفس ذات نشأت متفاوتة فقد يتحد بالعقل وقد يتحد بالحواس وإذا اتحدت بالعقل الفعال يفعل فعله وإذا اتحدت بالحواس تفعل فعلها ومعلوم أن فعل الحواس يناسب الحواس وفعل كل حاسة يناسب تلك الحاسة وإدراك المناسب لذة

الحكمة المتعالية فى الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٤١

فيجب أن يكون لذة السمع والبصر بإدراك المسموع والمبصر كما أن لذة الثلاث البواقى بإدراك محسوساتها من غير فرق.

و أما ثانيا فلأن الفرق الذى ذكره من أن إدراك النفس للمحسوسين الأولين - لا يكون حيث ينفعل الآلة وإدراكها للمحسوسات الثلاثة الباقية يكون حيث ينفعل الآلة على تقدير تسليمه لا مدخل له فى الفرق بين الموضعين فى إثبات اللذة لبعض الحواس وعدمها للبعض الآخر فإن كلام الشيخ ناص فى وجود اللذة وعدمها للآخرين وكون محل الإدراك غير موضع الانفعال فى بعضها وعينه فى بعض آخر لو فرض تسليمه وصحته فأى مدخلية لهما فى كون أحدهما منشأ

لذة الحواس دون النفس و الثاني منشأ لذة النفس دون الحواس.

و أما ثالثا فلأن إدراك الحواس ليس إلا تكيفها بصور محسوساتها و هو قد اعترف بأن آتني السمع و البصر قد تكيفا بمحسوسيهما و لا شبهة في أن التكيف بصورة المدرك الملائم إذا كان إدراكا كان لذة لا محالة لأنه إدراك الكمال و إدراك كل كمال لشيء كان لذة لذلك الشيء به فيلزم من ذلك أن يكون إدراكهما لمحسوسيهما الذي هو تكيفهما بكيفيتي ذينك المحسوسين لذة لهما فما السبب فيما حكم بأن السمع و البصر لا يلتذان بالمسموع و المبصر من حيث يسمع و يبصر - بخلاف البواقي.

فإن قال السبب أن النفس تدرك لذة هذه الثلاث من حيث يتكيف الآلة و لا يدرك لذة الآخرين حيث يتكيف الآلة. قلنا لا نسلم ذلك و على فرض تسليمه لا يوجب هذا الفرق فرقا في اللذة و عدمها فإن حيث و حيث لا مدخل له فيما نحن بصدده إذ اللذة تابع الإدراك فالإدراك إن كان للنفس كانت اللذة لها و إن كان للحس كانت اللذة له. و أما رابعا فلأن منعه لكون الملائم لقوة الباصرة إدراك المبصرات غير وارد فإن الملائم لكل قوة إدراك ما يناسبها و لا شبهة في أن اللون و الضوء كمال للمشف

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٤٢

و اللطيفة الجليدية مشفة و إدراكها كمال ملائم لها.

فالصواب في جواب المسيحي عما أورده ثالثا على الشيخ أن يقال للعين قوة لمسية و قوة بصرية لأن في جرمها ما يكون من باب الملموسات و فيه أيضا ما يكون من باب الألوان و الأضواء و ما يدرك بالعين كذا اللون المفرط و كذا الضوء الشديد أيضا فيه جهتان جهة مبصرة و جهة ملموسة فالإبصار بالباصرة و اللمس باللامسة فلا تناقض لاختلاف الموضوعين و الإدراكين و المدركين.

و أما خامسا فالذي ذكره أخيرا في إبطال الحق الذي اختاره المسيحي ليس بحق بل الحق حقه و الباطل إبطال ذلك الحق و كلام الشيخ أيضا حق لكن المسيحي لم يقدر على فهمه و حل الإشكال الوارد عليه و إنني لقضيت العجب من هؤلاء النحارير الثلاثة أعني المسيحي و الرازي و الشيرازي و غيرهم من شراح القانون و سائر العلماء بعدهم حيث لم يقدر أحد منهم على حل ما ذكره الشيخ و تحقيقه مع اعتنائهم بالتفتيش له و البحث عنه و الحمد لله على ما من علينا من فضله و حكمته.

فنقول لتحقيق هذا المقام إن الحيوان بما هو حيوان حاصل الهوية من جوهر جسماني تكيف بكيفية مزاجية من باب أوائل الملموسات و لكل حيوان بل لكل عضو منه حد اعتدالي من حدود تلك اللسمية و صلاحه و فساد منوطان بانحفاظ هذه الكيفية المزاجية نوعا أو شخصا و بعدمه و له في هذه الكيفية كمال و نفس و له قوة مدركة لهذه الكيفية يسمى باللامسة و هي سارية في كل بدنه و أجزائه إلا ما شد و الأعضاء الحسية كالعين و الأذن و اللسان و الخيشوم أيضا داخلية فيما يسري فيه قوة اللمس كما هي داخلية فيما يسري تلك الكيفية اللسمية.

و لا شك أن اللذة هي إدراك الملائم من حيث هو ملائم و الألم إدراك ضده من حيث هو ضده و قد مر أن الملائم لكل شيء ما يكون كمالا و قوة له و كمال الشيء يجب أن يكون من نوعه و ضده من نوع جنسه القريب فإدراك الملموسات الملائمة كمال للقوة اللسمية التي في سائر الأعضاء فيكون لذة لها بالذات و للنفس بواسطتها و إدراك ضدها يكون ألما

لها بالذات و للنفس بالواسطة فالملائم و المنافي للحيوان بما هو حيوان

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٤٣

إنما هما من جنس الملموسات و إدراكهما لذة ألم للقوة الحيوانية اللمسية التي لا يخلو منها و من مدركها حيوان. ثم بعد هذه الكيفية اللمسية و قوة إدراكها اللمسي في قوام بدن الحيوان الكيفية الذوقية التي بها و بقوة إدراكها ينحفظ بدنه و يبقى إلى غاية نشوه و كما أن بدنه من جنس الملموسات و كماله منوط بكمالها كذلك من جنس المذوقات التي يغتذي بها- فللقوة الذوقية كمال ذوقي و بإزائه لذة ذوقية و لها مناف من هذا الباب و لأجله ألم- و بعد هاتين الكيفيتين درجة كمالية من مدركات الشامة لم يحتج إليها أعضاؤه الكثيفة كثير احتياج في القوام إلا أنها مما يتغذى بها لطائف أعضائه كالأرواح البخارية فلأن الروح كمال الروح فيكون للقوة الشامة باللطيفة التي في الخيشوم لذة في إدراك الروائح الطيبة و ألم في إدراك الشمائم المنتنة الكريهة و كل هذه الكيفيات الثلاث- مما يتصف به البدن الحيواني و أعضاؤه.

و أما مدركات الباصرة و السامعة فالحيوان بما هو حيوان غير متحصل القوام منها و لا شيء من أعضائه متقوم بالنور أو الصوت لأن كيفية الضوء من الهيئات البعيدة عن أعماق الجسم بما هو جسم فضلا عن الحيوان لأنه جسم كثيف ظلماني و إنما يعرض الضوء و اللون التابع له لسطوحه و أطرافه الخارجة عن حقيقة الجوهر و ماهيته. و كذا الصوت الذي هو أبعد الأعراض عن حقيقة جسم ذي الصوت فليس الجسم الحيواني و لا عضو من أعضائه ذا كيفية مبصرة أو مسموعة حتى يكون حصول شيء منهما كمالا له فيكون إدراكه إدراك الكمال المناسب لذلك العضو فيكون لذة و إدراك ضده إدراكا للمنافي نعم إدراك المبصرات النورية لذة و كمال للقوة النفسانية الباصرة لا للعين و إدراك الأصوات الحسنة لذة و ملائم للقوة النفسانية السمعية لا للأذن فالملائم و المنافي لهذين العضوين غير الملائم و المنافي لهاتين القوتين بخلاف الملائم و المنافي للقوى الثلاثة الشمية و الذوقية و اللمسية فإنهما بينهما ملائم و مناف للأعضاء.

و بالجملة الحيوان بما هو حيوان من جنس الملموس و المطعوم و المشموم و ليس

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٤٤

الحيوان بما هو حيوان من جنس الأصوات و الألوان و لهذا إذا قطع عنه الملموس ساعة يهلك- و المطعوم يوما أو يومين يموت و المشموم زمانا قصيرا أو طويلا يتضرر به و لا كذلك إذا بقي في غار مظلم قطع عنه الأنوار و الألوان و الأصوات إذ لا يتفاوت حاله اللهم إلا الحيوان الإنساني لمكان نفسه التي هي من عالم الأنوار و عالم النسب الشريفة العددية فيلتذ عن رؤية الأنوار و استماع النغمات الموزونة و يتألم عن الظلمات و الألوان الكدرة الموحشة و أما تضرر العين عن الضوء الشديد أو اللون المفرط- فمن جهة لامسة العين إذ لا يخلو الهواء المتوسط المماس للعين عن كيفية حر شديد- أو برد شديد في الصورتين يتضرر بها العين و كذا كضرر الصماخ عن الصوت الشديد- فلاجل مصادمة الهواء القارح للصماخ كما لوح إليه الشيخ لا أن اللامسة أدركت الضوء و الصوت و لا أن الباصرة و أدركت الهواء الملموس أو السامعة لمست القارح من الهواء- فالملخص أن الملائم و المنافي للحواس التي هي قوى جسمانية و

لآلاتها ومحالها التي هي أجسام مركبة كثيفة هو من مدركات اللامسة والذائقة والشامة. وأما مدركات الباصرة والسماعة فليست ملائمة ولا منافية لمواضع إدراكاتهما - ولا لهما من حيث هما حالتان للعين والأذن بل من حيث هما قوتان للنفس فلا جرم ثبت للثلاث الأول لذات وآلام ولا تثبت لهما تين لذة ولا ألم بل للنفس بواسطتهما فهذا ما عندي في هذا المقام والله ولي الفضل والإنعام

فصل (٩) في الصحة والمرض وهما من الكيفيات النفسانية

أما الصحة فعرّفها الشيخ في أول القانون بأنها ملكة أو حالة تصدر عنها الأفعال من الموضوع لها سليمة وليست كلمة أو للترديد المنافي للتحديد بل للتنبيه على أن جنس الصحة هو الكيفية النفسانية سواء كانت راسخة أو غير راسخة فلا يختص بالراسخة كما زعم البعض على ما قال الشيخ في الشفاء إنها ملكة في الجسم الحيواني يصدر عنه لأجلها

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٤٥

أفعاله الطبيعية وغيرها سليمة غير مئوفة لخروج ما هو صحة بالاتفاق فليس هناك شك لا في ذاتي ولا في عرضي على ما قاله صاحب المباحث إنه لا يلزم من الشك في اندراج الصحة تحت الحال أو الملكة شك في شيء من مقومات الصحة بل في عوارضها لأن المخالفة بين الحال والملكة إنما هي بعارض الرسوخ وعدمه على أنك قد عرفت ما فيه وهذا التعريف شامل لصحة الإنسان وغيره من الحيوانات وما ذكره صاحب المباحث بأنه يتناول صحة النبات أيضا وهو ما إذا كانت أفعاله من الجذب والهضم والدفع سليمة غير سديد لأن الحال والملكة إنما يكونان من الكيفيات النفسانية أي المختصة بذوات الأنفس الحيوانية على ما صرحوا به وعلى هذا يلزم في تعريف الشفاء تكرار. اللهم أن يراد بالملكة والحال الراسخ وغير الراسخ من مطلق الكيفية - أو يراد بالأنفس أعم من الحيوانية والنباتية وكلاهما خلاف الاصطلاح.

وأما ما ذكر في موضع آخر من القانون أن الصحة هيئة بها يكون بدن الإنسان في مزاجه وتركيبه بحيث يصدر عنه الأفعال كلها صحيحة سليمة فمبني على أن الصحة المبحوث عنها في الطب هي صحة الإنسان والمراد بصحة الأفعال وسلامتها خلوصها عن الآفة بكونها على المجرى الطبيعي على ما يناسب المعنى اللغوي - فلا يكون تعريف صحة البدن والعضو بها تعريف الشيء بنفسه.

ولهذا ذكر بعضهم أن الصحة في الأفعال أمر محسوس وفي البدن غير محسوس - و تعريف غير المحسوس بالمحسوس جائز.

واعترض بأن قوله تصدر عنه الأفعال مشعر بأن المبدأ تلك الملكة أو الحال - وقوله من الموضوع مشعر بأن الموضوع أعني البدن أو العضو هو المبدأ وأجيب بوجهين - أحدهما أن الصحة مبدأ فاعلي والموضوع قابلي والمعنى كيفية يصدر عنها الأفعال الكائنة من الموضوع الحاصلة فيه صحيحة سليمة.

و ثانيهما أن الموضوع فاعل واسطة بمنزلة آلة العلة الفاعلية والمعنى ما يصدر

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٤٦

لأجلها وبواسطتها الأفعال من الموضوع ولكن جعل البدن فاعلا والقوة النفسانية آلة غير مرضي فإن البدن بما هو بدن

قابل و القابل لا يكون فاعلا.

و التحقيق أن القوى الجسمانية لا يصدر عنها أفعالها إلا بشركة موضوعاتها- لأن أفعالها كذواتها متقومة بالموضوع و المادة فالمسخن مثلا هو النار و النارية علة لكون النار مسخنة لغيرها فالمراد أن الصحة علة لكون البدن مصدر الفعل السليم- و هذا المعنى مفهوم واضح في عبارة القانون في التعريف الثاني و أوضح منه في عبارة الشفاء لأن اللام في التعليل أوضح من الباء و هي من عن فاندفاع الاعتراض عنها في غاية الوضوح.

و أما المرض فقد عرفه الشيخ بأنه هيئة مضادة للصحة أي ملكة أو حالة يصدر عنها الأفعال من الموضوع لها غير سليمة و ذكر في موضع من الشفاء أن المرض من حيث هو مرض بالحقيقة و هو عدم لست أعني من حيث هو مزاج أو الم و هذا مشعر بأن بينهما تقابل العدم و الملكة و وجه التوفيق بين كلاميه على ما أشار إليه بعض الفضلاء.

و هو أن الحصة عنده هيئة هي مبدأ سلامة الأفعال و عند المرض تزول تلك الهيئة و تحدث هيئة هي مبدأ الآفة في الأفعال فإن جعل المرض عبارة عن عدم الهيئة الأولى و زوالها فبينهما تقابل العدم و الملكة و إن جعل عبارة عن نفس الهيئة الثانية فبينهما تقابل التضاد و كأنه يريد أن لفظ المرض مشترك بين الأمرين أو حقيقة في أحدهما مجاز في الآخر و إلا فالإشكال باق.

و قيل المراد أن بينهما تقابل العدم و الملكة بحسب التحقيق و هو العرف الخاص على ما مر و تقابل التضاد بحسب الشهرة و هو العرف العامي لأن المشهور أن الضدين أمران ينسبان إلى موضوع واحد و لا يمكن أن يجتمعا كالزوجية و الفردية لا بحسب التحقيق ليلزم كونهما في غاية التخالف تحت جنس قريب و قد عرفت في مبحث التقابل تخالف الاصطلاحين.

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٤٧

و أن الشيخ قد صرح بذلك حيث قال إن أحد الضدين في التضاد المشهور قد يكون عدما للآخر كالسكون للحركة و المرض للصحة لكن قوله هيئة مضادة- ربما يشعر بأن المرض أيضا وجودي كالصحة و لا خفاء في أن بينهما غاية الخلاف- فجاز أن يجعلوا ضدين بحسب التحقيق مندرجين تحت جنس واحد هو الكيفية النفسانية و اعترض صاحب المباحث بأنهم اتفقوا على أن أجناس الأمراض المفردة ثلاثة- سوء المزاج و سوء التركيب و تفرق الاتصال و لا شيء منها بداخل تحت الكيفية النفسانية المسماة بالحال و الملكة.

أما سوء المزاج فلأنه إما نفس الكيفية الغريبة التي بها خرج المزاج عن الاعتدال على ما يصرح به حيث يقال الحمى حرارة كذا و كذا و هي من الكيفيات المحسوسة- و إما اتصاف البدن بها فهو من مقولة أن ينفع.

و أما سوء التركيب فلأنه عبارة عن مقدار أو عدد أو وضع أو شكل أو انسداد مجرى مخل بالأفعال و ليس شيء منها داخلا تحت الحال و الملكة و كذا اتصاف البدن بها و ذلك لأن المقدار و العدد من الكميات و الوضع مقولة برأسها و الشكل من الكيفيات المختصة بالكميات و الاتصاف من مقولة أن ينفع.

و أما تفرق الاتصال فلأنه عديم لا يدخل تحت مقولة و إذا لم يدخل المرض تحت الحال و الملكة لم يدخل الصحة تحتها لكونه ضدا لها هذا حاصل تقريره لا ما ذكره في المواقف- من أن سوء المزاج و سوء التركيب و تفرق الاتصال إما من المحسوسات أو الوضع أو عدمه [أو العدم] فإنه اختصار مخل كما قيل و العذر بأنه لم يعتد بباقي المحتملات

لظهور بطلانها ظاهر البطلان لأن قولنا سوء التركيب إما مقدار مخل بالأفعال أو عدد أو وضع أو انسداد مجرى كذلك ليس بيانا للمحتملات بل للأقسام كما لا يخفى.

و أما الجواب عن الاعتراض المذكور ففي غاية السهولة وهو أن تقسيمهم المرض بكذا وكذا فيه مسامحة والمراد منه منشأ المرض إما سوء المزاج أو سوء التركيب أو تفرق الاتصال فالمقصود أنه كيفية نفسانية تحصل عند أحد هذه الأمور

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٤٨

و تنقسم باعتبارها وهذا معنى ما قيل إنها منوعات أطلق عليها اسم الأنواع وذلك كما يطلق الصحة على اعتدال المزاج أو المزاج المعتدل فيقال مزاج صحيح مع أن المزاج من الكيفيات المحسوسة

فصل (١٠) في الوسطة بين الصحة والمرض

ثم وقع الاختلاف بينهم في ثبوت الوسطة بين الصحة والمرض وليس الخلاف في ثبوت حالة لا يصدق عليها الصحة ولا المرض كالعلم والقدرة والحياة إلى غير ذلك مما لا يحصى بل في ثبوت حالة و صفة لا يصدق معها على البدن أنه صحيح أو مريض - بل يصدق أنه ليس بصحيح ولا مريض فأثبتها جالينوس كما للناقهين والمشايخ والأطفال و من ببعض أعضائه آفة دون البعض.

ورد عليه الشيخ أن الذي رأى أن بين الصحة والمرض وسطا هو حال لا صحته ولا مرضه وإنما ظن ذلك لأنه نسي الشرائط التي ينبغي أن تراعى في حال ما له وسط وما ليس له وسط وتلك الشرائط أن يفرض الموضوع واحد بعينه في زمان واحد بعينه وأن يكون الجزء واحدا بعينه والجهة والاعتبار واحدة بعينها فإذا فرض كذلك و جاز أن يخلو الموضوع عن الأمرين كان هناك واسطة فإن فرض إنسان واحد واعتبر منه عضو واحد أو أعضاء معينة في زمان واحد و جاز أن يكون معتدل المزاج سوي التركيب أو لا يكون معتدل المزاج سوي التركيب بحيث يصدر عنه جميع الأفعال - التي يتم بذلك العضو والأعضاء سليمة وأن لا يكون كذلك فهناك واسطة وإن كان لا بد من أن يكون معتدل المزاج سوي التركيب أو لا يكون معتدل المزاج سوي التركيب - إما لأنه أحدهما دون الآخر أو لأنه ليس ولا واحد بينهما واسطة انتهى كلامه وهو قد اعتبر في المرض أن لا يكون جميع أفعال العضو سليمة إما لكونه عبارة عن عدم الصحة التي هي مبدأ سلامة جميع الأفعال أو عن هيئة لها يكون شيء من الأفعال

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٤٩

مؤثرا ولا خفاء في انتفاء الوسطة حينئذ.

وأما إذا اعتبر في المرض أن يكون جميع الأفعال غير سليمة بأن يجعل عبارة عن هيئة يكون جميع أفعال العضو أعني الطبيعية والحيوانية والنفسانية مؤثفة فلا خفاء في ثبوت الوسطة بأن يكون بعض أفعال العضو سليما دون البعض وإن اعتبرت آفة جميع الأعضاء فثبوت الوسطة أظهر وعلى هذا يكون الاختلاف مبني على الاختلاف في تفسير المرض. ولأجل ذلك قال صاحب المباحثات ويشبه أن يكون النزاع لفظيا فمن نفي الوسطة أراد بالصحة كون العضو الواحد أو الأعضاء الكثيرة في وقت واحد أو أوقات كثيرة - بحيث يصدر عنها الأفعال سليمة وبالمرض أن لا يكون كذلك و من أثبتها أراد بالصحة كون كل الأعضاء بحيث يصدر عنها الأفعال سليمة وبالمرض كون كل الأعضاء بحيث يكون أفعاله

مؤوفة و في كلام الشيخ ما يشعر بابتنائه على الاختلاف في تفسير الصحة حيث ذكر في أول القانون أنه لا يثبت الحالة الثانية إلا لأن يحدوا الصحة كما يشتهون و يشترطوا شروطا ما بهم إليها حاجة و ذلك مثل اشتراط سلامة جميع الأفعال ليخرج صحة من يصدر عنه بعض الأفعال سليمة دون البعض و من كل عضو ليخرج صحة من بعض أعضائه صحيح دون البعض و في كل وقت ليخرج صحة من يصح شتاء و يمرض صيفا و من غير استعداد قريب لزوالها ليخرج صحة المشايخ و الأطفال و الناقهين

فصل (١١) في الفرح و الغم و غيرهما

قد يعرض للنفس كفيات تابعة لانفعالات تحدث فيها لما يرتسم في بعض قواها من الأمور النافعة و الضارة.

فمنها الفرح و الغم

فالفرح هو كيفية نفسانية يتبعها حركة الروح إلى خارج البدن طلبا للوصول إلى الملد و الغم و هو كيفية نفسانية يتبعها حركة الروح إلى داخل

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٥٠

البدن خوفا من موذ واقع عليها [عليه].

و منها الشهوة

و هو كيفية نفسانية يتبعها حركة الروح إلى الظاهر جذبا للملائم طلبا للتلذذ.

و منها الغضب

و هو كيفية نفسانية يتبعها حركة الروح إلى الخارج دفعا للمنافر طلبا للانتقام.

و منها الفزع

و هو ما يتبعها حركة الروح إلى الداخل خوفا من الموزي واقعا كان أو متخيلا.

و الحزن

و هو ما يتبعها حركة الروح إلى الداخل قليلا قليلا.

و منها الهم

و هو ما يتبعها حركة الروح إلى الداخل و الخارج بحدوث أمر يتصور منه خير يقع أو شر ينتظر و هو مركب من خوف و رجاء فأيهما غلب على الفكر تحركت النفس إلى جهته فللخير المتوقع إلى جهة الظاهر و للشر المنتظر إلى جهة الداخل - فلذلك قيل إنه جهاد فكري.

و منها الخجل

و هو ما يتبعها حركة الروح إلى الداخل و الخارج لأنه كالمركب من فزع و فرح حيث ينقبض الروح إلى الباطن ثم يخطر ببالي أنه ليس فيه كثير مضرة فينبسط ثانيا و هذه كلها إشارة إلى ما لكل واحد منها من الخواص و اللوازم - و إلا فمعانيها واضحة عند العقل و كثيرا ما يتسامح فيسر بنفس الانفعالات كما يقال الفرح انبساط القلب و الغم انقباضه و الغضب غليان دم القلب و الغم انحصار القلب و انقباض الدم الذي فيه و السرور انبساط القلب و الدم و ذلك باطل لأن كلا منها كيفية نفسانية إذا عرضت يلزمه هذه الانفعالات في الجوهر المنفعل عن النفس و هي لطيفة بخارية.

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٥١

و منها الحقد

و هو كيفية نفسانية لا يوجد إلا عند غضب ثابت و أن لا يكون الانتقام في غاية السهولة و لا في غاية العسر أما أن الغضب يجب أن يكون ثابتاً فلأنه لو كان سريع الزوال لم يتقرر صورة الموزي في الخيال فلا يجتذب النفس إلى طلب الانتقام - و أما أنه يجب أن لا يكون الانتقام في غاية السهولة فلوجهين أحدهما أن الانتقام إذا كان سهلاً اشتغلت النفس بحركة الانتقام و اشتغال النفس بالقوة المحركة يمنعها من الاشتغال بانحفاظ صورة أخرى. و ثانيهما أن الشوق إلى الانتقام إذا اشتد و لم يكن منه خوف بلغ تأكده و سهولة حصوله أن صار عند الخيال كالحاصل و الحاصل لا يطلب حصوله فلا جرم لا يبقى الشوق إلى تحصيله و لذلك فإن الانتقام من الضعفاء لما كان سهلاً سقط التشوق إليه و الدليل على أن حال الخيال في الرغبة و الرهبة مبني على المحاكيات لا على الحقائق كما ينفر النفس عن العسل إذا شبه بمرة مقيئة و عن سائر المطاعم و المشارب إذا كانت صورها شبيهة بصور أجسام مستقذرة و كذلك الشيء الذي يسهل حصوله نزل عند الخيال منزلة الحاصل فلا يبقى شوق إلى تحصيله و أما أنه يجب أن لا يكون الانتقام في غاية العسر بل يكون في محل الطبع فلأن الموزي إذا كان عظيماً مثل الملوك فإن اليأس عن الانتقام منه و الخوف يمنع ثبات صورة الشوق إلى الانتقام في النفس فثبت بهذا أن الحقد إنما يوجد عند وجود غضب ثابت متوسط بين الشدة و الفتور

فصل (١٢) في أسباب الفرح و الغم

اعلم أن الله سبحانه خلق بقدرته جرماً لطيفاً روحانياً قبل هذه الأجسام الكثيفة الظلمانية و هو على طبقات متفاوتة في اللطافة كطبقات السماوات و هو المسمى بالروح النفساني و الحيواني و الطبيعي بحسب درجاته الثلاث في اللطافة و جعله للطافته و توسطه بين العقول و الأجسام المادية مطية للقوى النفسانية تسري بها في الأعضاء الجسدانية

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٥٢

و جعل التعلق الأول من القوى النفسانية مختصاً بهذا الروح و فائضاً ثانياً بتوسطه في الأعضاء البدنية و مادة الروح لطيف الأخلاط و بخاريتها كما أن مادة خلقة الجسد من كثيف الأخلاط و أرضيتها فنسبة الروح إلى صفوة الأخلاط كنسبة الجسد إلى كدرها و كما أن الأخلاط إنما يتجوهر منها الأعضاء لامتزاج بينها يؤدي إلى صورة واحدة مزاجية يستعد بها لقبول الأحوال التي لم يستفد من العناصر كذلك الصفوة من الأخلاط إنما يتجوهر منها الأرواح لقبول القوى النفسانية التي لم يستفد من البسائط.

ثم إنك ستعلم أن المبدأ الإلهي عام الفيض دائم الجود لا لتخصيص فيضه و جوده من قبله بواحد دون واحد و لا بوقت دون سائر الأوقات بل إنما يقع التخصيص بواحد أو وقت دون واحد و وقت آخرين من جهة تخصيص المواد و الأسباب الناشئة من قبلها لا من قبله فلا جرم لا بد لنا أن نعرف الأسباب المعدة لوجود هذه الكيفيات النفسانية - لأن لا يعترينا شك في عدم تغير واجب الوجود و صفاته الأولية أعادنا الله من ذلك - فاتفق الحكماء و الأطباء على أن الفرح و الغم و الخوف و الغضب كيفيات تابعة للانفعالات الخاصة بالروح الذي ينبعث عن التجويف الأيسر من القلب و يسري

صاعدا لطيفه إلى الدماغ وهابطا كثيفه إلى الكبد و سائر الأعضاء.

ثم إن كلا من هذه الانفعالات يشتد و يضعف لا بسبب الفاعل فإنما يتبع في اشتداده و ضعفه اشتداد استعداد جوهر المنفعل و ضعفه.

و الفرق بين القوة و الاستعداد كما وقعت الإشارة إليه في مباحث القوة و الفعل و في غيرها أن القوة تكون بعيدة و الاستعداد قريبا و أن القوة على الضدين سواء و الاستعداد على الضدين لا يكون سواء فإن كل إنسان يقوى على أن يفرح و يحزن إلا أن منهم من هو مستعد للفرح فقط و منهم من هو مستعد للغم فقط و الاستعداد استكمال القوة بالقياس إلى أحد المتقابلين فلنذكر السبب لحصول الاستعداد للفرح.

فنقول إن الذي يعد النفس للفرح أمور ثلاثة

كما ذكره الشيخ في رسالته في

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٥٣

الأدوية القلبية.

الأول كون الروح على أفضل أحواله في الكم و الكيف

أما في الكم فهو أن يكون كثير المقدار و ذلك لأمرين.

أحدهما أن زيادة الجوهر في الكم يوجب زيادة القوة في الشدة كما تبين في الأصول الطبيعية.

و الثاني أنه إذا كان كثيرا فيبقى منه قسط و اف منه

في المبدأ و يبقى قسط و اف للانبساط الذي يكون عند الفرح لأن القليل ينحل به الطبيعة و تضبطه عند المبدأ أو لا يمكنه من الانبساط و أما في الكيف فأن يكون معتدلا في اللطافة و الغلظ و أن يكون شديد النورانية و افره جدا فيكون مشابقتها لجوهر السماء شديدة فهذه هي أسباب الاستعداد للذة و الفرح و اللذة كالجنس للفرح الذي هو كالنوع فالروح التي في القلب إذا كانت كثيرة المقدار معتدلة في المزاج ساطعة النورانية كانت شديدة الاستعداد للفرح و إذا عرفت ذلك ظهر أن المعد للغم إما قلة الروح كما للناقهين - و المنهوكين بالأمراض و المشايخ و أما غلظته كما للسوداويين و المشايخ فلا يبسط لكثافتها و أما رفته كما للنساء و المنهوكين فلا يفي بالانبساط و أما ظلمته كما للسوداويين.

الثاني أمور خارجية و هي كثيرة - قال الشيخ فمنها قوية و منها ضعيفة و أيضا منها معروفة و منها غير معروفة و مما لا يعرف ما قد اعتيد كثيرا و كل ما اعتيد كثيرا سقط الشعور به و الأسباب المفرحة و الغامة ما كان منها قويا و ظاهرا فلا حاجة إلى ذكره و أما الأخرى فمثل تصرف الحس في ضياء العالم و الدليل على إلذاهه إيحاش ضده و هو الإقامة في الظلمة و مثل مشاهدة الشكل و الدليل على تفريجه غم الوحدة.

و في هذا الاستدلال نظر إذ لا يلزم من كون الشيء على صفة كون ضده على ضد تلك الصفة فإن الشيخ نفسه قد بين في كتاب الجدل أن هذه قضية مشهورة و هي

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٥٤

باطلة في نفسها فعلى هذا لا يلزم من كون الظلمة موحشة أن يكون تصرف الحس في ضياء العالم لذيدا و مثل التمكن

من المراد في الوقت و الاستمرار على توقف مقتضى القصد من غير شاغل و كذا العزائم و الآمال و ذكر ما سلف و رجاء ما يستقبل و تحدث النفس بالأمانى و المحادثة و الاستغراب و الاغتراب و التعجب و الإعجاب و مصادفة حسن الإصغاء من المجاور و المساعدة و الخديعة و التلبس و الغلبة في أدنى شيء و غير ذلك.

و أما الأسباب العامة الخارجة فمقابلات هذه الأمور المذكورة و هي مثل تذكر الأخطار التي عرضت و الآلام التي قوسيت و الأحقاد و ما غاظ من المعاملات و المعاشرات و مثل توهّم المخاوف في المستقبل و خصوصاً من الواجب عن مفارقة هذه الدار الدنيا التي تصرف عنها قناعة العاقل بما لا بد منه و الفكر في غيره من المهمات الأخروية التي يجب السعي فيها و مثل الانقطاع عن الشغل و الفكر العارض و القصور عن المراد و غير ذلك مما لا يحصى فهذه و أمثالها ترد على نفس المستعد للغم فتغمه - ثم التخيّل بفوته في السوداوي مما يعين ذلك بإيراد الأشباه و المحاكيات لما يوحش و يغم و إنما يقوى التخيّل في السوداوي لئيس مزاج الروح الموضوع فتخف حركتها و لإعراض العقل عن القوى الباطنة لفساد مزاج الروح التي فيها و اختصاص حركاتها على مقتضى ما يعد له ذلك المزاج و الكيفية الرديّة المظلمة.

الثالث أن تكرّر الفرح يعد النفس للفرح

و تكرّر الغم بعد النفس للغم لما ذكره الشيخ أن كل فعل ذي ضد إذا تكرّر فإن القوة عليه تشتد و كل قوة تشتد يصير استعدادها أشد.

و بيانه بوجهين أحدهما الاستقراء فإن الجسم إذا سخن مراراً متوالية استعد لسرعة التسخن و كذا إذا أبرد و كذا إذا تخلخل و كذا إذا تكثف و القوى الباطنة تصير لها عند تكرّر أفعالها و انفعالاتها ملكة قوية ما كان حالاً و بمثل هذا تكتسب الأخلاق.

و ثانيهما القياس المأخوذ عن المشهودات فإن كل انفعال حدث للشيء فهو مناسب لجوهره و المناسب للشيء معاند لضده و المعاند للضد إذا تمكن مراراً نقص من

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الأربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٥٥

استعداد القوة عليه للقابل له فيزداد في استعداد ضده الذي هو مناسبه.

فهذا هو بيان هذا المعنى بالاستقراء و القياس المقبولي.

و أما التحقيق البرهاني فالكلام فيه أرفع من هذا النمط إذ المقصد أيضاً ليس في الجلالة بحيث لم يجز الاكتفاء فيه بما دون البرهان اللامي الدائمي و إن كان ذلك أيضاً مقدوراً بل يصح القناعة فيه بما يؤكد الظن كما فعله الشيخ فقال على طريقة البحث الطبيعي و هو أن الفرح يلزمه أمران - أحدهما تقوية القوة الطبيعية.

و الثاني تخلخل الروح لما يكلفها الفرح لأنه كيفية نفسانية و النفس متصرفة في الروح التي هي مطية قواها من الانبساط و يتبع [منبع] تقوي القوة الطبيعية أمور ثلاثة.

أحدها اعتدال مزاج الروح.

و ثانيها كثرة توليدها بدل ما يتحلل.

و ثالثها حفظها عن استيلاء التحلل عليه أما تخلخل الروح فيتبعه أمران - أحدهما الاستعداد للحركة و الانبساط للطف

القوام و الثاني انجذاب المادة العادية إليه بحركته بالانبطاش إلى غير جهة الغذاء و من شأن كل حركة بهذه الصفة أن تستتبع ما وراءها لتلازم صفائح الأجرام و امتناع الخلاء.

و بالجملة انجذاب المتأخر عند سيلان المتقدم كما في الرياح و كذلك المياه- فتكرر الفرح بهذا المعنى يعد للفرح و أما الغم إذا تكرر اشتدت القوة عليه لأن الغم يتبعه أمران مقابلان للوصفين التابعين للفرح.

أحدهما ضعف القوة الطبيعية.

و الثاني تكاثف الروح للبرد الحادث عند انطفاء الحرارة الغريزية لشدة الانقباض و الاحتقان من الروح و يتبع ذلك أضداد ما ذكرنا فثبت أن تواتر الفرح بعد الفرح يعد الروح للفرح و تواتر الغم بعد الغم يعد الروح للغم فالفرحان لا يعمل فيه من

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٥٦

الغامات إلا القوى و يعمل فيه المفرحات الضعيفة و الممنو بالغم حاله بالضد مما ذكر

فصل (١٣) في ضعف القلب و قوته و الفرق بين الأول و بين التوحش و كذا بين الثاني و بين النشاط

و اعلم أن هاهنا حالة هي ضعف القلب و أخرى هي التوحش و ضيق الصدر و هما متشابهان و بينهما فرق و كذلك هاهنا حالة هي قوة القلب و أخرى هي النشاط و انشراح الصدر و هما أيضا متشابهان و بينهما فرق و يشكل الفرق بينهما لتلازمهما في أكثر الأمر- و لأن الأولين يظن بهما حالتان انفعاليتان و الثانيةين يظن بهما حالتان فعليتان و بين طرفي كل واحد من القسمين فرق ظاهر من وجوه-

أما الأول

فليس بمتلازمين لأنه ليس كل ضعيف محزانا و لا بالعكس و أيضا ليس كل قوي القلب مفراحا و بالعكس.

و أما الثاني

فلأن الحدود متخالفة و ذلك لأن ضعف القلب حال بالقياس إلى الأمر المخوف من جهة قلة احتماله و ضيق الصدر حال بالقياس إلى الأمر الموحش من جهة قلة احتماله و المخوف هو الموزني البدني و الموحش هو الموزني النفساني.

و أما الثالث

فلأن اللوازم النفسانية مختلفة فضعف القلب يحرك إلى الهرب و التوحش و ضيق الصدر قد يحرك إلى الدفع و المقاومة و يرغب كثيرا في ضد الهرب و هو البطش و لذلك فإن القوة كثيرا ما يفتر عند ضعف القلب مع أنها كثيرا ما تهيج عند التوحش و أيضا أن في ضعف القلب انفعالين انفعال بالتأذي و انفعال بالتشوق إلى حركة المباعدة و في ضيق الصدر انفعال واحد و هو بالتأذي فقط و ليس يلزم من ذلك التشوق إلى الهرب على سبيل الطبع بل ربما اختار مقتضاه لغرض آخر فيكون ذلك شوقا اختياريا لا شوقا حيوانيا و ربما اختار المقاومة و البطش.

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٥٧

و أما الرابع

فلأن اللوازم البدنية متخالفة لأن ضعف القلب يلزمه عند حصول الموزني الذي يخصه خمود من الحرارة الغريزية و

استيلاء من البرودة و ضيق الصدر يلزمه كثيرا عند حصول الموزي الذي يخصه اشتعال من الحرارة الغريزية.

و أما الخامس

فلأن الأسباب الاستعدادية متخالفة فإن ضعف القلب قد يتبع لا محالة رقة الروح بإفراط و برد المزاج و ضيق الصدر قد يتبع كثافة الروح و سخونة مزاجه

فصل (١٤) في سبب عروض هذه العوارض البدنية لأجل تكيف النفس بتلك الكيفيات النفسانية

اعلم أن العوالم متطابقة و النشأة متحاكية كل ما يعرض في أحد العوالم ينشأ منه ما يوازنه و يحاكيه في عالم آخر و هكذا الإنسان عالم صغير مشتمل على ثلاث مراتب أعلاها النفس و أدناها البدن بما فيه من الخلط الصالح و هو الدم و أوسطها الروح فكما سنح في النفس كيفية نفسانية يتعدى أثر منه إلى الروح و بواسطته ينزل في البدن و كلما يسنح حالة جسمانية للبدن يرتقي أثر منه بواسطة الروح إلى النفس فالنفس و البدن متحاكيان متعاقبان لعلاقة السببية و المسببية بينهما بوجه - و كما أن جوهر أحدهما يحاكي جوهر الآخر فكيفه لكيفها و انفعاله لانفعالها و استحالاته لاستحالاتها و هكذا حكم الروح الذي هو برزخ بينهما فإذا طرأت كيفية نفسانية كاللذة سواء كانت عقلية أو خيالية مثلا و هو كما علمت صورة كمالية علمية أو خيالية بطراً بسببها انبساط في الروح الدماغية المعتدل و بتوسطه للبدن اهتزاز

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٥٨

و ظهور للدم الصافي و احمرار للوجه.

و إذا طرأ على النفس خوف أو ألم ينقبض الروح إلى الداخل و بتوسطه يحدث في البدن انقباض في الوجه و اصفرار في الوجه و هكذا القياس في سائر الكيفيات النفسانية و العوارض البدنية و كما أن الروح مطية للقوى النفسانية فالدم أيضا مركب لهذه الروح يتحرك بحركتها تارة إلى الخارج و تارة إلى الداخل و ذلك إما دفعة و إما قليلا قليلا و الحركة إلى الخارج قد يكون للذة و النشاط و قد يكون للغضب و قد يكون للرجاء و التوقع و ما يجري مجراه و الحركة إلى الداخل قد يكون للألم و الحزن و قد يكون للخوف و الهرب و الفكر و ما يجري مجراه.

ثم الحركات الخارجية و الداخلية متفاوتة في الزمان كالسرعة و البطء و في الكم كالانبساط و الانقباض و في الكيف كاشتداد الحرارة و الحمرة في الدم و مقابلهما و كذا متفاوت الحركة في هذه المعاني بحسب اشتداد الكيفية النفسانية الباعثة إياها و ضعفها ففي الغضب الشديد يتحرك الروح مع مركبه الذي هو الدم إلى الخارج دفعة.

و ربما ينقطع مدده أو ينطفئ بسبب الاحتقان فيموت صاحبه و في الفرح يتحرك يسيرا يسيرا إذا كان الفرح معتدلا و في الفرح المفرط و إن كانت حركته بحسب الزمان بطيئا لكن بحسب الكم يكون انبساطه عظيما فربما يؤدي إفراطه إلى زوال الروح بالكلية و كذا الحال في الحركة إلى الداخل ففي الفزع الشديد دفعة و في الحزن قليلا قليلا و فيهما أيضا قياس ما ذكرنا على العكس و قد يتفق أن يتحرك إلى الجهتين في وقت واحد إذا كانت الكيفية النفسانية يعرضها عارضان مثل الهم فإنه قد يعرض معه غضب و حزن فيختلف الحركتان و مثل الخجل فإنه ينقبض أولا إلى الباطن ثم يعود العقل فينبسط المنقبض فيثور إلى الخارج و يحمر اللون

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٥٩

فصل (١٥) في مناسبة ما بين شيء من تلك الكيفيات النفسانية وبين الدم الذي هو حامل الروح الحامل لآثار تلك الكيفيات

قال الشيخ الدم الكثير الصافي إن كان معتدل القوام والمزاج أعد للفرح - لكثرة ما يتولد منه من الروح الساطع و أما إن كان كثيرا و صافيا و معتدل القوام - لكنه زائد في السخونة أعد للغضب لكثرة اشتعاله و سرعة حركته فاما إن كان الدم كثيرا و صافيا لكنه رقيق القوام بارد مائي أعد للجبن و لضعف القلب لأن الروح المتولد منه يكون ثقیل الحركة إلى الخارج قليل الاشتعال لبرده و رطوبته فيقل فيه الاستعداد للفرح و الغضب و يكون لرقته سهل التحلل و لبرده قليل التولد و الدم الكدر الغليظ الزائد في الحرارة يعد للغم و الغضب الثابت الذي لا ينحل أما الغم فلما يتولد من الروح الكدر و أما الغضب فله سرعة اشتعاله لحرارته و أما ثبات الغضب فلأنه كثيف إذا تسخن لم يبرد بسرعة.

و أما غضب الدم الصفراوي الرقيق فيكون أسرع هيجانا و أسرع انحلالا لأن الروح المتولدة عن ذلك الدم أشد حرارة و هو مع ذلك غير كثيف و إذا كان دمه صافيا مشرقا كان مع ذلك مفراحا و الدم الغليظ الغير الكدر إذا كان زائدا في الحرارة و هو في النواذر كان صاحبه غير محزان و يكون شجاعا قوي القلب و يكون غضبه أقل لأن المفرحية تكسر من الغضب و المحزنة تعد للغضب لأن الغضب حركة إلى الدفع و المفرحية مناسبة للذة و اللذة يكون الحركة فيها نحو الجذب - و هذا الإنسان يكون غضبه في الأمور عظيما و يكون شديدا لتسخن روحه و لذلك بعينه قليل الخوف و الدم الغليظ الغير الكدر الزائد في البرودة يكون صاحبه لا محزانا و لا مفراحا و لا يشتد غضبه و يكون جنبه إلى حد و يكون بليدا في كل أمر سالما لأن روحه يكون شبيه دمه و الدم الغليظ الكدر و الزائد في البرودة يكون صاحبه متوحشا

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٦٠

محزانا ساكن الغضب إلا في أمر عظيم و ثبت غضبه دون ثبات الحار المزاج الذي يشاكله في سائر الأوصاف و فوق ثبات الرقيق القوام و يكون حقودا.

قال الشيخ في سبب شدة الفرخ في شارب الخمر و شدة الغم في السوداوي أما الأول

فلأن الخمر إذا شربت باعتدال ولدت روحا كثيرة معتدلة في الرقة و الغلظ شديدة النورانية و ذلك هو السبب الأول و سببته للفرخ أن الروح إذا كانت كثيرة معتدلة ساطعة يستعد للانفعال من أدنى سبب من المفرحات فإن المستعد للشيء يكفيه أضعف أسبابه مثل الكبريت في الاشتعال فإنه يشتعل بأدنى نار لا يشتعل الحطب بأضعافها و لهذا يكثر فرخ شارب الخمر حتى يظن به أنه يفرح لذاته - و ليس كذلك لأن حدوث أثر لا عن مؤثر محال.

و السبب الثاني

أن تلك الأرواح يكون الدماغية منها شديدة الرطب و شديد التموج لما يتصعد إليها من البخارات الرطبة المضطربة فلرطوبتها لا يدعن للتحريك اللطيف الروحاني و لاضطرابها لا يدعن للتشكيل الروحاني و حينئذ يصعب على العقل - أن يستعمله في الحركات الفكرية فيعرض القوة العقلية عنها إغراضا بقدر مقتضى حالها ريثما يعتدل مزاجها و يسكن تموجها.

و إذا قل استعمال العقل لتلك الأرواح صارت تلك الأرواح مشغولة بما يرد عليها - من الأسباب الخارجة و لذلك تأثرها

من الأسباب النافعة في اللذة أكثر من تأثرها من الأسباب النافعة في الجميل و من النافعة في الحال أكثر من النافعة في المستقبل و من الذي بحسب الظن أكثر من الذي بحسب العقل.

و السبب الثالث

أن الحس الظاهر أقدر على تحريك الروح الباطن من العقل على تحريكه و لذلك فإن العقل إذا استصعبت الروح الباطن عليه استعان بالحس فيمكن منه كما في العلوم الهندسية و إذا كان كذلك قل تأثير المفرحات المستقبلية - و الجميلة و العقلية في نفس الشارب و استولى عليه تأثر المفرحات اللذيذة و العاجلة

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٦١

و الحسية و لأن استعداده شديد فيكفيه منها أدنى سبب كما للصبي فيظن أنه يفرح بلا سبب و ذلك محال فقد اجتمع لشارب الخمر أمور ثلاثة.

أحدها استكمال جوهر روحه في الكم و الكيف.

و ثانيها اندفاع الأفكار العقلية عنه التي ربما يكون أسبابا للغم.

و ثالثها استعمال تخيله و تفكره في المحسوسات الخارجة التي هي أسباب اللذة فلا جرم يكمل فرحه و يقوى نشاطه. أقول هذه الأمور المذكورة إذا اطلع عليها ناقص العقل يصير منشأ لإقدامه على فعل الشرب و أما إذا اطلع عليها عاقل يصير بعض هذه الأسباب بل كلها باعثا لإعراضه عنه و إن لم يصل إليه حكم الشريعة الإلهية سيما و قد نص على تحريمه و تقبيحه بأبلغ تأكيد فإن الإنسان مخلوق للنشأة الثانية و كماله العقلي إنما يحصل بارتحاله عن هذه النشأة و رجوعه عنها إلى جوار الله و عالم ملكوته و ذلك بمطالعة العقليات الدائمات و الابتهاج بها دون الحسيات الدائرات و التلذذ بها.

و أما الثاني فهو غم السوداوي فلأن حاله بالضد من ذلك و الأسباب في حقه أضداد لتلك الأسباب فإن جوهر روحه قليل المقدار ضعيف الكيفية فينفع من الأسباب المؤذية و الغامة لاستعداده للغم فيكون قوي التخيل مصروفا في الأمور البعيدة المستقبلية لأن روحه التي في البطن الأوسط من الدماغ تخفف حركتها بجفافها لما يفيد السوءاء من اليبس. ثم إنه لقوة تخيله تصور الأشباه و المحاكيات للأمور الموحشة و الغامة فكانه يشاهدها قائمة في الخارج واقعة عليه فيكثر غمه و أكثر ما في هذه الفصول إنما نقلناها عن المقالة التي جمعها الشيخ في الأدوية القلبية. و هذه المسائل و إن كانت أنسب بالطبيعات إذ كان المنظور إليه فيها ما يعرض الجسم من حيث انفعاله و لكن نظرنا فيها إلى نحو الوجود لأنواع الكيفيات النفسانية و أحوالها و عوارضها و ما يطابقها و ما يوازها من أحوال الجسم و عوارضه و هذا

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٦٢

آخر الكلام في هذا القسم من الكيفيات

القسم الرابع في الكيفيات المختصة بالكميات و فيه ثلاث مقالات

و قبل الشروع فيها نورد بحثين

الأول في معرفة حقيقة هذا النوع

و هي أنه كيفية تعرض أولا للكمية و بواسطتها للجسم.

فإن قلت الخلقة عبارة عن مجموع اللون و الشكل و هي تعرض أولا للجسم الطبيعي فإنه ما لم يكن جسم طبيعي لم يكن هناك خلقة قيل الأمور العارضة لكمية - منها ما هي عارضة لها بما هي هي و منها ما هي عارضة بما هي كمية شيء مخصوص - كالفطوسة و هي التعيير العارض لمقدار جسم مخصوص هو الأنف و في كلا القسمين يكون العارض من عوارض الكمية عند كثير من العلماء.

و أما أنا فأقول أما الكيفيات النفسانية فمعلوم أنها ليست من عوارض الكم - و أما الاستعدادية و اللا استعدادية فليست حاملها العمق و بتوسطه الجسم بل يحملها المادة المنفصلة بتوسط صورة توجبها و أما المحسوسة فهي أيضا مما يوجبها انفعالات الجسم المادي بما هو مادي منفعل فلا بد أن يكون المختصة بالكميات مما ليس فيه انفعال أصلا. فيرد الإشكال علينا في أمرين أحدهما الخلقة أنها من أي الكيفيات فأقول الخلقة يشبه أن يكون وحدتها غير حقيقية لأنها ملتزمة من أمرين من الشكل و هو من الكيفية المختصة بالمقدار و من اللون و هو من الكيفية المحسوسة و ثانيهما اللون فإن حامله هو السطح كما عرفت فإن الجسم بنفسه غير ملون بل معنى كونه ملونا أن سطحه ملون فإذا يتوجه هاهنا أن يكون اللون و كذا الضوء داخلين في هذا النوع لأن حاملهما الأول هو السطح مع أنهما داخلان تحت النوع المسمى بالانفعاليات و الانفعالات فيكون الحقيقة الواحدة داخلية تحت

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٦٣

جنسين و هو محال و هذا الإشكال مما استصعبه بعض.

فأقول هما من عوارض السطح لكن من جهة ما يعرض لجسمه من مزاجه المخصوص و لو كانا من عوارض السطح لذاته لكان كل سطح ملونا مضيئا و ليس كذلك.

و البحث الثاني في أقسامه و هي أربعة

في المشهور الأول الشكل و هو ما أحاط به حد أو حدود إحاطة تامة و الزاوية و هي ما أحاط به خطان يلتقيان عند النقطة أو ما أحاط به سطح أو سطوح ينتهي بنقطة أو يتلاقى عند نقطة إحاطة غير تامة.

الثاني ما ليس بشكل و لا زاوية مثل الاستقامة و الاستدارة.

و الثالث هو المسمى عندهم بالخلقة و هي ما يحصل من اجتماع اللون و الشكل.

و الرابع الكيفيات العارضة للعدد مثل الزوجية و الفردية و الترييع و التجذير و التكعيب.

ثم المسائل المهمة التي يجب أن يبحث عنها في هذا الموضوع هي هذه أحدها أن يعرف المعنى الجامع لهذا الجنس و ثانيها النظر فيما قيل من الرسم المشهور و ثالثها تحقيق الحال في أن الشكل من الكيف و ليس من الوضع و رابعها حال الزاوية أنها في أي مقولة هي واقعة و خامسها حال الخلقة و أنها كيف وقوعها في جنس واحد - من أنواع عند القائلين به و سادسها حال ما يجري مجراه إذا اتفق إن كان يصدق عليه مقولتان فإلى أيهما ينسب الواحد الحاصل من الجملة.

أما البحث عن المعرفة فقد أشرنا إليه فيدخل في التعريف الشكل و الاستقامة و الانحناء و التسطیح و التحديد و التكعيب و التعيير و الزوجية و الفردية و أما الاعتراض عليه بحال اللون فقد دفعناه و كذا أشرنا إلى وجه الدفع في

انتقاض التعريف بالخلقة - من أنها ليست ذات وحدة حقيقية و كل مركب ليس ذا وحدة حقيقية فلا بأس باندرجاه تحت جنسين لكن الشيخ لم يسلك هذا المسلك و إلا لزم كون الخلقة بالذات من هذا النوع و إن كان أحد جزئيه من نوع آخر.

فقال إن الأمور التي تعرض للكمية منها ما يعرض للكمية نفسها لا بشرط أنها

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٦٤

كمية لشيء و منها ما يعرض للكمية في نفسها بشرط أنها كمية لشيء فيكون الكمية هي المعروض الأولى له في ذلك الشيء ثم الشيء فليس إذا كان لا يعرض له أمر - إلا و هو كمية شيء يجب أن يكون إذا عرض له الأمر لم يكن عروضه أولياً فإنه لا سواء قولنا إن الكمية يعرض له الأمر عند ما يكون في شيء و قولنا إن الكمية إنما يعرض لها الأمر لأنها في الشيء الذي عرض له الأمر كما لو قال أحد في النفس لا يعرض لها النسيان إلا و هي في البدن لم يدل ذلك على أن النسيان إنما يعرض للبدن و بتوسطه للنفس كما أن الحركة تعرض للبدن و بتوسطه يقال على بعض قوى النفس ثم اللون حامله الأول هو السطح كما هو المشهور.

و تحقق في العلم الطبيعي أن الجسم في نفسه غير ملون بل معنى أنه ملون أن سطحه ملون فالخلقة تلتئم من شيء حامله السطح بذاته أو ما يحيط به السطح و هذا الشيء هو الشكل و شيء حامله السطح و لكن كونه نهاية لجسم ما طبيعي و هذا الشيء هو اللون فإذا الخلقة تلتئم من أمرين حاملهما الأول هو الكم و بسببه يقال على الجسم انتهى ما ذكره الشيخ.

و قد عرفت ما فيه و أما سائر الأبحاث فيجيء في بعض الفصول

المقالة الأولى في الاستقامة والاستدارة و فيه فصول

فصل (١) في حقيقتهما

قد عرفت استقامة الخط بكونه بحيث أي نقطة فرضت فيه كانت بالكلية على سمت واحد أي لا يكون بعضها أرفع و بعضها أخفض و هذا التعريف منسوب إلى أقليدوس - و قد عرفت أيضاً بكونه أقصر الخطوط الواصلة بين نقطتين و هذا منسوب إلى أرشميدس - و يرد الإشكال إما على تعريف أقليدوس فللزوم الدور فإن كون النقطة

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٦٥

المفروضة أو الموجودة على سمت واحد معناه على بعد واحد و هو معنى الخط المستقيم بعينه و إما على تعريف أرشميدس فبأن المستدير يمتنع أن يصير مستقيماً فإذا امتنع ذلك امتنع التطبيق بينهما و إذا امتنع التطابق امتنع الحكم بأن أحدهما أقصر أو أزيد و سيأتي ما فيه.

و الحق أن المطلوب بديهي و التعريفات للتنبيه على بعض الخصوصيات و قد عرفت أيضاً المستقيم بأنه الذي يطابق أجزاءه بعضها بعضاً على جميع الأوضاع فإن المستدير إذا قطع منه شيء فربما ينطبق عليه في بعض الأوضاع كما إذا جعل محدب كلا القوسين في جهة واحدة دون وضع آخر كما إذا جعل محدب أحدهما في غير جانب محدب الآخر. و قد عرفت بوجه رابع و هو أنه الذي إذا ثبت نهايته و أدير لم يتغير وضعه - يعني أنه إذا قتل لم يتغير وضعه و أما

القوس فعند الفتل يتغير الجهة المحدبة إلى غير وضعها و بوجه خامس هو ما يمكن أن يستر طرفه وسطه إذا وقع طرفه في مقابلة إحدى العينين بعد ضم الأخرى و المناقشة في كل منها مدفوعة بما ذكرناه و هذه التعاريف ما خلا الرابع جارية في السطح المستوي

فصل (٢) في معرفة الدائرة وإثبات وجودها

اعلم أن هذا الجنس من الكيفيات التي في الكميات بعضها عارضة للمنفعلة و بعضها للمتعصل أما التي للمنفصل فبعضها معلومة الوجود بالضرورة لا يحتاج إلى حجة كالزوجية و الفردية و غير ذلك و بعضها نظرية يبرهن عليه في صناعة الحساب و أما عرضيتها فلكونها من عوارض العدد و هو عرض و عارض العرض أولى بأن يكون عرضا و أما التي تعرض للمقادير فليس وجودها ضروريا بينا و ليس للمهندس أن يبرهن على وجودها جميعا بل له أن يأخذ بعضها عن الفيلسوف على طريق التسلم و يبرهن على وجود الباقي كما في القياسات الاستثنائية التي مقدمها الاستثنائية كانت ثابتة في

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٦٦

موضع آخر فإن سائر الأشكال إنما يبين له بوضع الدائرة و تسليم وجودها فإن المثلث الذي هو أول أشكالها المسطحة يصح وجوده إن صحت الدائرة و كذا المربع و الخمس و سائر الأشكال المسطحة و المجسمة.

و أما الكرة

فإنما يصح وجودها على طريق المهندسين إذا أدير دائرة في دائرة و الأسطواني إذا حركت دائرة حركة يلزم فيها مركزها في أول الوضع لزوما على الاستقامة و المخروط إذا حرك مثلثا قائم الزاوية على أحد ضلعي القائمة حافظا لطرف ذلك الضلع مركز الدائرة و دائرا بالضلع الثاني على محيط الدائرة.

أما تعريف الدائرة

فهو سطح مستوي يحيط به خط واحد يفرض في داخله نقطة كل الخطوط المستقيمة الخارجة منها إليه متساوية و تقييد النقطة بالدخول غير لازم في التعريف فإنه لو قيل الدائرة سطح يحيط به خط واحد يمكن أن يفرض نقطة كل الخطوط الخارجة منها إليه متساوية لكان صحيحا.

و اعلم أنه لا شك في وجود الخط المستقيم و أما الدائرة فقد أنكرها أكثر مثبتي الجزء الذي لا يتجزى فوجب على الحكيم دون غيره كما عرفت بأن يقيم البرهان على وجودها و للحكماء في إثبات الدائرة حجج ثلاث - الأولى أنا إذا تخيلنا بسيطا مستويا و خطا مرسوما في ذلك البسيط و تخيلنا إحدى نقطتيه ثابتة و الأخرى متحركة حولها إلى أن يعود إلى الموضع الذي بدئت منه فإنه يحدث دائرة لأن ما رسمته النقطة مسافة لا عرض لها فهي إذن خط مستدير و الأبعاد في جميع الجوانب من النقطة الثابتة إلى ذلك المستدير متساوية لأنها بمقدار ذلك المستقيم فثبت القول بالدائرة. و ثانيها أن الأجسام البسيطة أشكالها الطبيعة كما ستعرفه هي كرات و إذا قطعت الكرة بسطح مستوي حدثت لا محالة دائرة.

و ثالثها أنا إذا فرضنا جسما ثقيلا و نجعل أحد طرفيه أثقل من الآخر - و نجعله قائما على السطح قياما معتدلا مماسا له بطرف الأخف فلا شك أن الطرف الملاقي

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٦٧

منه للسطح يماس بنقطة منه نقطة من السطح إذا أميل ذلك الجسم حتى سقط فلا يخلو إما أن يثبت تلك النقطة التي منه بمنزله رأس المخروط موضعها أو لا يثبت - فإن ثبت فكل واحد من النقط التي فرضت في رأس المتحرك قد فعلت ربع دائرة وإن لم يثبت فلا يخلو إما أن يكون مع حركة هذا الطرف إلى أسفل يتحرك الطرف الآخر إلى فوق فيكون كل نقطة فرضت في جانبي ذلك الجسم بل في قسميه الصاعد والهابط قد فعلت دائرة فيحصل من هذه النقاط دوائر بعضها محيطة بالأخرى - و مركز الجميع هي النقطة المحدودة بين القسم الصاعد والهابط أو يكون غير صاعد بل متحركا على السطح منجرا على بعد منه فيفعل الطرف الآخر خطا منحنيا غير مستدير وهذا الشق محال لأن هذا الانجرار ليس طبيعيا ولا أيضا قسريا لأن القاسر ليس إلا أن الطرف العالي لثقله يحرك إلى الأسفل وليس يدفع هذا الطرف إلى تلك الجهة بل إن دفعه على حفظ الاتصال ودفعه على خلاف جهة حركة العالي - كان ذلك لثقل العالي و اتصاله بالسافل فيضطر إلى ترفع السافل حتى يهبط منحدرًا فينقسم الجسم إلى قسمين فيعود ما ذكرناه من وجود الدائرة بل الدوائر وإذا ثبت الدائرة ثبت المثلثات و القوائم الزاوية و المربع و المستطيل و بإثباتها يثبت المجسمات. أما الكرة فمن الدائر كما وصفنا و أما المخروط بأقسامه من قائم الزاوية وحادها ومنفرجها فمن أقسام المثلث و أما المكعب فمن المربع و أما الأسطوانة فمن المستطيل - وإذا ثبت الدائرة ثبت المنحني أيضا و ذلك إذا قطع المخروط أو الأسطوانة بسطح محارف غير مواز للقاعدة و لا قائم عليها و قد علمت في بيان اتصال الجسم إلزام القائلين بالجزء للاعتراف بوجود الدائرة على طريقتهن وإذا ثبت الدائرة على أصلهم بطل أصلهم من إثبات الجزء بإقامة الحجج الهندسية عليهم بإلزامهم كون مربع قطر المربع مساويا لضعف مربع ضلعه فيلزم عليهم النسب الصمية في كثير من المقادير و لا يمكن تلك النسبة في العدد مطلقا و بإلزامهم قسمة الخط على أي وجه أريد مثل أن يكون بحيث

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٦٨

ضرب مجموعة في أحد قسميه كمربع القسم الآخر و لا يمكن تلك في كل عدد بل في بعض الأعداد إلى غير ذلك

فصل (٣) في أن المستقيم و المستدير يتخالفان نوعا و تحقيق أن الكيفية بأي معنى يكون فصلا للكمية

أما [المطلب] الأول

فنقول لا شبهة في أن بين أفراد المستقيم و المستدير تخالفا فهو إما بالعوارض الخارجية أو بالفصول الذاتية لكن الأول باطل و ذلك لأن الموصوف بالاستقامة أعني الخط لا يخلو إما أن يجوز عند العقل بقاؤه و زوال وصف الاستقامة - و جريان وصف الانحناء عليه أو لا يجوز إذ لا واسطة بينهما لا جائز أن يبقى الخط بعينه في الحالين جميعا و ذلك لأن الخط نهاية السطح و عارضة كما أن السطح نهاية الجسم و عارضة و لا يمكن أن يتغير حال النهاية إلا و يتغير حال ذي النهاية فما لم يتغير حال السطح في انبساطه و تماديه لا يمكن أن يتبدل حال الخط من الاستقامة إلى الاستدارة أو بالعكس و ما لم يتغير حال الجسم في انبساطه و تماديه لا يمكن أن يتبدل حال السطح فإن الكري من الجسم غير المكعب و الدائرة من السطح غير المربع و إذا صار المعروض معروضا آخر بالعدد كان العارض غير العارض الأول بالعدد فإذا امتنع بقاء المستقيم من الخط بعينه مع زوال الاستقامة فعلم أن الاستقامة إما فصله أو لازم فصله و كذا

المستدير من الخط يستحيل زوال استدراته إلى الاستقامة أو إلى استدارة أخرى مع بقاءه بعينه. فعلم أن الاستدارة و كذا أفرادها المتخالفة في شدة التقويس و ضعفها فصول ذاتية أو لوازمها فالدوائر المختلفة بالعظم والصغر متخالفة بالنوع و على هذا القياس أحوال السطوح في استوائها و تحديباتها من أنها مقومات و منوعات لا عوارض و مصنفات فمحيطات الكرات المختلفة بالعظم و الصغر متخالفة بالنوع فالجسم إذا انحنى بعد ما لم يكن فلا بد

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٦٩

هناك من تفرق اتصال و تقطع انبساطه يوجب كون السطح منقسماً إلى سطوح و كذا المستوي من السطح إذا التوى يوجب انقسام الخط إلى الخطوط و القسمة في المقادير توجب إبطالها فإن السطح الواحد لا يجوز أن يكون موضوعاً للانبساط و الانزواء و لا الخط الواحد موضوعاً للطول و القصر و لا الجسم التعليمي الواحد يجوز أن يصير موضوعاً للعظم و الصغر بل التخلخل معناه كون المادة الأولى مما يتوارد عليه أفراد المقادير.

و أما المطلب الثاني

فاعلم: أن الفصول البسيطة مجهولة الأسامي إلا باللوازم و لا يجوز أن يكون ماهية الفصل غير ماهية الجنس بل الفصول بالحقيقة هي وجودات مخصوصة يلزمها ماهية الجنس و ليس لزوم الجنس لها و عروضه إياها عروضاً خارجياً أو ذهنياً بمعنى أن يكون للعارض وجود و للمعروض وجود آخر بل وجود الفصول بعينه نحو من أنحاء وجود الجنس لكن العقل بضرب من التحليل يحكم بالمغايرة بينهما من جهة التعيين و الإبهام كما بين الوجود الشخصي و الماهية النوعية. إذا تقرر هذا فنقول لكل وجود فصل لازم مخصوص كما أن له لازماً مشتركاً هو المعنى الجنس فلما لم يمكن التعبير عن الوجود و التسمية له عبر عنه بلازمه المخصوص و سمي باسمه لما مر في صدر هذا الكتاب أن الوجودات الخاصة بمجهولة الأسامي و إنما الأسامي للمعاني الذهنية و الكليات المعقولة فإذن قد ظهر أن مثل الاستقامة و الاستدارة و الكروية و التكعب و سائر الأشكال و الزوايا التي هي من باب الكيف ليست بفصول ذاتية بالحقيقة للكم المتصل و كذا الزوجية و الفردية و التشارك و التباين و المجذورية و الأصمية ليست بفصول بالحقيقة للكم المنفصل بل إنما هي لوازم فصول و علامات لها أقيمت مقامها فلا يلزم هاهنا كون ماهية واحدة تحت مقولتين بالذات و الآخر بالعرض.

تفريع.

الدوائر المختلفة بالصغر و الكبير مختلفة لما علمت أنه يستحيل أن ينتقل

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٧٠

الخط الواحد من انعطاف مخصوص إلى انعطاف آخر مع بقاءه في الحالين - فكان ذلك الانعطاف المخصوص من لوازم ماهية النوعية فما قاله المهندسون إن وتر الزاوية القائمة من كل دائرة هو ربع الدور و مقداره تسعون درجة و كذا مقدار نصفه دائماً خمس و أربعون درجة و هو وتر نصف القائمة من القسي ليس مما يوجب أن يكون أرباع الدوائر المختلفة بالعظم و الصغر متساوية بل يلزم أن تكون متشابهة لاتحادها في الزاوية التي هي أوتارها أو في النسبة إلى كل الدور فالاتحاد بين تلك القسي ليس في الماهية و لوازمها بل في أمر خارج فهي ليست متماثلة بل متشابهة أو متناسبة و كذا

الحكم في سائر أجزاء الدوائر المتناسبة من القسي

فصل (٤) في أن المستقيم والمستدير ليسا متضادين

و ذلك لوجهين أحدهما أن الموضوع القريب للاستقامة والاستدارة ليس واحدا بالعدد كما عرفت و وحدة الموضوع القريب شرط للتضاد بين أمرين و الوجه الآخر أن بين المتضادين غاية التخالف فالمستقيم وإن كان في غاية التخالف عن المستدير لكن ليس كل مستدير في غاية التخالف عن المستقيم و أحد الشئيين إذا كان ضدا للآخر يكون الآخر ضدا له فلو كان مطلق الاستقامة مضادا لمطلق الاستدارة لكان المستقيم الشخصي يضاده مستدير شخصي واحد فإن ضد الواحد بالشخص واحد بالشخص كما أن ضد الواحد بالعموم واحد بالعموم و ليس الأمر هاهنا كذلك - فإن كل خط مستقيم مشار إليه أمكن أن يصير و ترا القسي غير متناهية لا تشابه بين اثنين منها و ليس فيها ما هو على غاية البعد من المستقيم و ضد الواحد لا يكون إلا واحدا كما مر فلم يكن شيء منها ضدا له و إذا لم يكن شيء من تلك القسي ضدا للوتر - فلم يكن الوتر أيضا ضدا له إذ التضاد من النسب المتكررة في الجانبين فإذا لم يوجد مستدير يكون في غاية الخلاف عن المستقيم لم يثبت بينهما فكذا بين المستديرات

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٧١

بطريق أولى

فصل (٥) فيما قيل من منع النسبة بين المستقيم والمستدير من المساواة والمفاضلة

قالوا لا يمكن المساواة بينهما مستدلين بأن المستقيم لما امتنع أن يصير مستديرا فامتنع أن يصير منطبقا عليه فإذا امتنع الانطباق بينهما امتنع أن يوصف أحدهما بأنه مساو للآخر أو أزيد أو أنقص فلا يوصف بأنه نصفه أو ثلثه أو عاد له أو مشارك له.

و أورد عليهم أنا نعلم يقينا أن الوتر أقصر من قوسه و أن القسي المتحدة الوتر بعضها أقصر من الأخرى. فأجاب بعضهم تارة بعدم تسليم ذلك كما بين الخط و السطح و الجسم و سائر الأجناس المتخالفة و تارة بتسليم مطلق الزيادة و النقصان دون تجويز المساواة - كما يعلم يقينا أن كل زاوية مستقيمة الخطين أعظم من زاوية حادة عن قوس و خط مستقيم مماس له و أصغر من زاوية تحدث بين قطر الدائرة و محيطه لكن يستحيل أن يقع المساواة بين مستقيمة الخطين و مختلفهما.

و صاحب المباحث رجع الأول فقال و الأولى أن يمنع كون القوس أعظم من الوتر كيف و الأعظم ما يوجد فيه الأصغر و ليس يمكن أن يوجد في القوس مثل الوتر - بل ذلك بحسب الوهم و أن المستدير لو أمكن صيرورته مستقيما لكان حينئذ يوجد فيه مثله و زيادة و لما لم يكن ذلك كان التفاوت بحسب وهم غير ممكن الوجود.

أقول لقائل أن يقول هم صرحوا بأن التطبيق بين الدائرة و الخط المستقيم - وإن لم يمكن بحسب الإن دفعه لأن الملاقة بينهما في كل أن لا يمكن إلا بنقطة لكن يمكن الانطباق بينهما بحسب الزمان كما في الكرة المدحرجة على سطح مستو فإن

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٧٢

كان كذلك أمكن اتصافهما بالمساواة و المفاضلة و لذلك عرف أرشميدس الخط المستقيم بما سبق ثم استحاله أن يصير شيء شيئا آخر لا يستلزم استحاله انطباقه عليه - لكن يمكن دفعه بأن اشتغال الزائد على المثل بالقوة القريبة من الفعل معتبر في المفاضلة و ذلك متنف هاهنا إذ ليس بعض المستدير مماثلا في الماهية للمستقيم.

اللهم إلا أن يقال إن المماثلة بينهما باعتبار الجنس القريب المأخوذ مجردا عن الزوائد العقلية [الفصلية] من الاستقامة و الاستدارة أعني المقدار الخطي المنقسم في جهة واحدة فقط دون غيرها من المخصصات فإن هذه التعليميات أمور خيالية - للوهم أن يجردوها عن الموارد و نحن نعلم أن الخيال يقدر أن يصير المنحني مستقيما و المستقيم منحنيا مع بقاءه و إن لم يمكن للخيال أن يتخيل مطلق المقدار مجردا عن خصوصيات الخطية و السطحية و الجسمية لشدة إبهامه الجنسي.

فلأجل ذلك ساغ القول بوجود النسبة بين الخطين المختلفين و السطحين المختلفين بوجه من الوجوه كما في الوجود الزماني أو بحسب الخيال لا بحسب الخارج و لا في الوجود الدفعي.

و هذا ما يمكن أن يقال و بالله التوفيق

المقالة الثانية في الشكل و فيه فصول

فصل (١) في تعريفه

قد عرفه المهندسون بأنه الذي يحيط به حد واحد أو حدود و هو مسطح و مجسم - و ذو الحد إذا كان سطحاً كان حده خطأ و إذا كان جسماً كان حده سطحاً و أما النقطة فلم يكن حداً للشكل إذ الهيئة الحاصلة للخط باعتبار كونه محدوداً بنقطتين لا يسمى شكلاً و لا الخط

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٧٣

باعتباره و إن كانت إحاطتهما بالخط تامة لا كما زعمه بعضهم أنه يخرج بقيد كون الإحاطة تامة أما كون المحيط حداً واحداً فكما للدائرة و الكرة و أما كونه حدوداً متعددة فكما للمربع و المكعب و كما لنصف الدائرة و نصف الكرة إذا كانت الحدود مختلفة.

فإذا تقرر ذلك فنقول في كل شكل أمور ثلاثة أحدها الموضوع - و الثاني حده أو حدوده و الثالث الهيئة الحاصلة فيه. فالمربع مثلاً حقيقة ملتزمة من سطح و حدود أربعة و هيئة مخصوصة يسمى بالتربيع و هي مغايرة لذلك السطح و الحدود و لذلك لا يحمل عليه و عليها و لا شيء منهما يحمل عليه.

فلا يقال التربيع ما يحيط به الحدود الأربعة و لا العكس و لا التربيع هو السطح و لا العكس لأن المربع عبارة عن سطح يوصف بكذا و كذا و لا شك أن السطح و إن أخذ مع ألف قيد فإنه لا يخرج من كونه سطحاً فظهر أن هذه المقادير المحدودة ليست من باب الكيف و لا يجوز أن يكون المركب من المقدار و الهيئة المخصوصة من باب الكيف و إن لم يكن من باب الكم أيضاً لما علمت من امتناع كون ماهية واحدة تحت مقولتين أو جنسين متباينين و قد علمت أيضاً أن ما يعد من الفصول الذاتية لأنواع المقادير و الأعداد ليست هذه الكيفيات بل هي أمور مجهولة تعرف بهذه اللوازم و لا استحالة في كون بعض المقولات لازماً لبعض أخرى في الوجود فإذن قد وضح أن الذي يمكن أن يعد من باب الكيف هو الهيئة العارضة فإذا ثبت هذا فيشبه أن الرسوم المذكورة في الأشكال غير محققة للأمور التي هي من باب الكيف بل

لما يستعمله المهندسون و كذا الأحكام فيقولون هذا الشكل مساو لشكل آخر أو أعظم أو أصغر أو نصفه أو ثلثه كما يقولون أن المسدس على الدائرة أعظم منها و الذي في الدائرة أصغر منها و أن الزاوية القائمة في المثلث المتساوي الساقين ضعف كل من الباقيين و كل منها نصفها فإنما يعنون بذلك المقدار المشكل لا شكله لأن الشيء الذي يحيط به الحدود بالذات هو المقدار و المقدار كم بالذات و الشكل كيف و كيف

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٧٤

ليس بكم فإن المربع غير التربيعة و المدور غير التدوير.
أقول بقي هاهنا شيء آخر و هو أنه كما أن الواحد قد يعنى به نفس الواحد بما هو واحد و قد يعنى به شيء آخر هو واحد و كذا المضاف قد يعنى به نفس المضاف لا مقولة أخرى كالجوهر أو الكم أو غيرهما هو المضاف و قد يعنى به شيء آخر هو ذو إضافة - كذا الأب الموصوفة بأنه أب فكذا الحكم هاهنا فالمثلث يمكن أن يراد به نفس المثلث لا شيء آخر ذو تثليث كما يقال أبيض و يعنى به العارض فحينئذ لم يبق بين الشكل و المشكل فرق و أيضا لو فرض مقدار المثلث مجردا عن المادة كما في التخيل لا يحتاج في كونه مثلثا إلى كيفية عارضة له حتى يصير بها مثلثا بل ذاته بذاته مثلث و تثليث أي ما به يكون الشيء مثلثا.

و أما إن أريد بهذه الأشكال نفس المعاني المصدرة الانتزاعية فليست حينئذ إلا أمرا عقليا اعتباريا من باب النسب الإضافية العقلية كالشيئية و الجوهرية و أمثالها - فالمهندس يريد بالأشكال نفس هذه المقادير المحدودة فهي إشكال و مشكلات كما وصفنا و أما غيرهم فيريدون بالشكل المعنى العارض للمواد الطبيعية المأخوذ مفهومه من حالة انفعالية تعرض للجسم الطبيعي من جهة مقداره.

هذا ما تيسر لنا في تحقيق هذا المقام و هو ثاني تلك الأبحاث المشكلة لكننا نقول يشتهيه أمر هذه الهيئة الشكلية بأمر الوضع و هو ثالث الأبحاث الخمسة المذكورة في صدر الكلام في هذا النوع فلتكلم فيه

فصل (٢) في أن الهيئة المذكورة هل هي من الكيف أو من الوضع

أما وجه الاشتباه بين الشكل و الوضع فلأن الشكل هيئة حاصلة

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٧٥

في المقدار أو المتقدر من جهة إحاطة حده أو حدوده به و أن الوضع باعتبار أحد معانيه - هو الهيئة الحاصلة للشيء بسبب نسبة أجزائه بعضها إلى بعض و لا شك أن التربيعة مثلا هيئة حاصلة للشيء بسبب نسبة أطرافه و حدوده إليه فهو من الوضع.

و أما وجه الحل فنقول قد عرض هذا الغلط من جهة اشتراك الاسم في معاني الوضع فيقال وضع لحصول الشيء في موضعه و هذا هو نفس مقولة الأين و يقال لكون الشيء مجاورا لشيء من جهة مخصوصة كما يقال هذا الخط عن يمين ذلك الخط و هذا المعنى نوع من مقولة المضاف بل هو نفس المجاورة و لا شك أن ماهيته معقولة بالقياس إلى غيره و يقال وضع للهيئة الحاصلة للجسم بسبب نسبة بعض أجزائه إلى بعض في الجهات بسبب حصول الوضع الإضافي لأجزائه حتى إذا وجدت أجزاؤه على إضافي ما لبعضها إلى بعض حصل للكل بسبب ذلك هيئة و هي الوضع.

فهذا المعنى هو المقولة فالمجاورة المخصوصة صفة للأجزاء من باب الإضافة - و الوضع صفة للمجموع فإن الجلوس نوع من الوضع صفة للجالس ب كله و المجاورة المخصوصة بين كل عضو منه و عضو آخر هي صفة للأعضاء و مع ذلك لا بد أن يكون لها نسبة إلى ما يخرج عنها إذ لو ثبت نسب الأعضاء و بقية الأجزاء الداخلة على نسبها و زالت النسبة بينها و بين الخارج عن جواهرها لم يكن الجالس جالسا.

فإذا تقرر هذا فمن قال إن الشكل هو الوضع فقد غلط من وجوه.

أحدها أنه أخذ الحدود مكان الأجزاء و إنما الاعتبار في الوضع بالأجزاء و في الشكل بالحدود.

و ثانيها أنه زعم أن هذا الوضع من المقولة الخاصة و ليس كذلك بل من

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٧٦

المضاف و الذي من المقولة هو وضع أجزاء الشيء عند شيء خارج أو مباين لا وضع أجزاءه في نفسه.

و ثالثها أنه زعم أن الشيء إذا كان متعلقا بمقولة فهو منها و ليس كذلك فإن المربع لا يحصل إلا بعدد الخطوط و ليس المربع عددا بل مقدارا فالتربيع و إن حصل من وضع بين حدوده لا يلزم أن يكون من الوضع فلم يكن الشكل داخلا في مقولة الوضع.

فإن قلت أليسوا جعلوا الكيف ما لا يوجب تصوره تصور غيره و هيئة التربيع يوجب تصورها تصور غيرها فإن تلك الهيئة لا يمكن تصورها إلا عند تصور النسب بين أطراف المربع التي لا يعقل إلا بعد تعقل السطح و أطرافه.

قلنا هذه الكيفية أعني الشكل ليس أن تصورها مما يتضمن تصور غيرها و إن كان تصورها بسبب تصور غيرها و بين المعنيين فرق فإن الشكل هيئة تحصل للشيء بسبب هيئة نسبية تحصل بين أطرافه لا أنه بعينه تلك الهيئة النسبية بل الشكل صفة قارة - و ما بين الحدود إضافات كالميمنية و الميسرية و الفوقية و التحتية و غيرها من صفات المجاورة.

فقد علم أن الشكل لا يتعلق بالوضع بمعنى المقولة بل بالوضع الذي من الإضافة على وجه السببية لا الدخول.

ثم إن الدائرة لا يتعلق بهذا الوضع أيضا بل يتم حقيقتها بأن لحددها هيئة خاصة في الانحناء و أما هيئة محيط الدائرة و محيط الكرة و أمثالها فهي هيئات بسيطة من هذا الباب و إن لم يسم إشكالا لعدم صدق الرسوم عليها إلا أن يعمم في التعريف.

و قيل الشكل هيئة تحصل للمقدار من جهة كونه محدودا بحد أو من جهة كونه حدا للمحدود

فصل (٣) في حال الزاوية و أنها من أي مقولة هي و هو البحث الرابع

أما الفرق بينها و بين الشكل

فبأن الزاوية إنما هي زاوية لأجل كون المقدار

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٧٧

محدودا بين حدين أو حدود متلاقية بحد فالمسطحة مثلا هو الشيء الذي يحيط به حدان متلاقيان بنقطة سواء أحاط معهما ثالث أو رابع أو لا يحيط فإن لم يحط معهما ثالث - فلا يخلو أيضا حداه يلتقيان عند حد مشترك آخر لهما أو لا يلتقيان بالفعل سواء التقيا إذا مدا أو لم يلتقيا و لو مدا في الوهم إلى غير النهاية فإن التقيا فيكون كمحيطي الإهليلجي و

الهلالى والنعلى و غير ذلك.

فالسطح الذي لا يتحدد بثالث

فحاله من حيث كونه بين حدين متلاقين أو هو من تلك الحيشية زاوية و الذي يتحدد بحد أو حدود غيرهما أو يتحدد بحددين يلتقيان في الجانبين فحاله تلك أو هو من تلك الحيشية شكل فإن لم يعتبر كون السطح و إن أحيط به في جميع الجوانب الإحالة من جهة حديه الملتقيين بنقطة واحدة كان بهذا الاعتبار زاوية و بالاعتبار المذكور شكلا فالنظر في السطح بكونه بين حدين يلتقيان عند نقطة غير النظر فيه بكونه محدودا في جميع الجوانب سواء كان بخط كالدائرة أو بخطين كنصفها و كالأهليلجى.

فالأول اعتبار الزاوية و الثاني اعتبار الشكل فالحد نظير الحد و المقدار نظير المقدار و الهيئة نظير الهيئة فكما أن المهندس إذا قال شكل ذهب إلى المشكل فكذا إذا قال زاوية كان المراد السطح ذا الزاوية.

و كذا إذا قيل منصفة أو مضعفة أو عظمى أو صغرى و كذا الكلام في الزوايا المجسمة بحسب الاعتبارات المذكورة فإذا يمكن أن يظن أحد أن الخلاف في أن الزاوية كم أو كيف بعينه الخلاف في كون الشكل كما أو كيفا حتى يرجع إلى تخالف اصطلاحى المهندسين و غيرهم لو لا شيء يمنع عن ذلك و هو أن ذا الزاوية المسطحة لا ينقسم إلا في جهة واحدة و هي الجهة التي بين الضلعين المحيطين لا الجهة الأخرى التي بين الرأس و القاعدة.

و كذا المجسمة لا تنقسم إلا في جهتين دون الثالثة التي بين رأس المخروط و قاعدته فهذا مما يوجب الشك في أمر الزاوية هل المسطحة منها هي عين السطح

الحكمة المتعالية فى الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٧٨

و المجسمة عين الجسم عند المهندس أو غيرهما.

و كذا الهيئة العارضة

هل عرضت للسطح في المسطحة و للجسم في المجسمة أو غيرهما و لأجل هذا الشك قد تكلف بعض الناس بما لا يعنيه و هو أن الزاوية جنس آخر من الكم متوسط بين الخط و السطح و في المجسمة بين السطح و الجسم ظانا أن الخط يتكون عن حركة النقطة و السطح من حركة الخط بتمامه و كليته على عمود عرضا فإذا ثبت أحد طرفيه و يحرك فعل شيء بين الخط و السطح و كذلك بين السطح و الجسم و هو توهم فاسد فإن المقدار الذي بين الخطين سطح بالضرورة لانقسامه إلى جهتين من حيث هو سطح و كذا المقدار الذي عند تلاقي السطوح إلى نقطة تقبل القسمة إلى ثلاث جهات بالضرورة فهو جسم بالضرورة و إن كان سطح الزاوية من حيث هو ذو زاوية أو زاوية لا يقبل الانقسام إلا في جهة و كذا قياس الجسم الذي هو ذو زاوية أو زاوية لا ينقسم إلا في جهتين دون أخرى.

فالحق أن الزاوية المسطحة عند المهندس سطح محدود في الواقع اعتبر تحديد بعض جهاته دون بعض باعتبار هيئة عارضة له و عند الطبيعي نفس تلك الهيئة العارضة للسطح بالاعتبار المذكور.

و كذا في المجسمة فهذا هو حال البحث الرابع من تلك الأبحاث و هاهنا شيء آخر و هو أن الهيئة الحاصلة للمقدار الجسمى باعتبار وقوعه بين سطحين يلتقيان عند خط سواء كان أحدهما قائما على آخر قياما معتدلا أو مائلا إليه أو عنه هل يسمى زاوية مجسمة أم لا.

قال الشيخ في قاطيغورياس الشفاء بالحري أن يكون هاهنا معنى جامع للزاوية التي عن خطين و التي عن سطوح عند نقطة و التي عن سطحين عند خط و يكون هذا المعنى الجامع كون المقدار ذا حدود فوق واحدة ينتهي عند حد واحد مشترك لها من حيث هو كذلك - فإن حصل اسم الزاوية لهذا المعنى الجامع لم يكن بعيدا عن الصواب و كان انتهاء الزاوية المجسمة عند النقطة لا لأنه زاوية إذ له من تلك الحيثية أن ينتهي حدوده

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٧٩

عند حد واحد ثم عرض إن كانت الحدود خطوطا عرض إن كانت النهاية نقطة ثم إن أبي أحد هذا و جعل اسم الزاوية للمقدار من حيث هو منته إلى نقطة لم أناقشه فيه و صار معنى الزاوية أخص مما ذكرناه و خرج من جملة الزاوية و من جملة الشكل شيء يعرض أيضا للمقادير من جهة الحدود

فصل (٤) في احتجاج كل من الفريقين في أمر الزاوية أنها كم أو كيف

احتج القائل بأنها كم

لقبولها القسمة و قبولها المساواة و اللامساواة و هذا مشترك بين الكم و كيف المختص به و الفرق بينهما بأن في أحدهما بالذات و في الآخر بالعرض - فأصل قبول القسمة و المساواة و عدمها على الإجمال لا يكفي في هذا المطلب. و احتج ابن الهيثم على إبطال ذلك بأنه قال كل زاوية فإن حقيقتها تبطل بالتضعيف مرة أو مرات و لا شيء من المقدار تبطل حقيقته بالتضعيف مرة أو مرات فلا شيء من الزاوية بمقدار.

بيان ذلك أن القائمة إذا ضوعفت مرة واحدة ارتفعت حقيقتها و إلحاده إذا ضوعفت مرات بطلت حقيقتها فثبت أن الزاوية تبطل بالتضعيف.

أقول يمكن الجواب بأن الزاوية نوع من المقدار أو صنف منه و تضعيفها و إن أبطلها من حيث كونها نوعا مخصوصا و لكن لم يبطلها من حيث كونه مقدارا - فإن الثلاثة مثلا نوع من العدد إذا ضوعفت لم يكن المجموع ثلاثة بل ستة فبطلت بالتضعيف من حيث كونها نوعا خاصا و لم يبطل من حيث كونها عددا ألا ترى أن القوس كنصف الدائرة خط بالاتفاق فإذا ضوعفت لم يبق كونها قوسا بل خطأ مستديرا.

و احتج من قال إنها من كيف

بأنها تقبل المشابهة و اللامشابهة و ليس ذلك بسبب موضوعها الذي هو الكم فإذن ذلك لها بالذات فيكون كيفا.

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٨٠

و أما قبولها المساواة و عدمها فبسبب موضوعها الذي هو الكم كما أن الأشكال يقبل ذلك بسبب موضوعاتها. و يرد عليه أن اتصاف الشيء بصفة إذا لم يكن بالذات كان إما بواسطة معروضة أو بواسطة عارضة فما لم يبطل كون اتصاف الزاوية بالمشابهة بواسطة أمر عارض لم يظهر بمجرد إبطال كون الاتصاف بها بواسطة المقدار المعروض إن قول المشابهة عليها قول بالذات و هم ما أبطلوا ذلك فلم يظهر ما ادعوه.

و الإنصاف أن وزان الزاوية كوزان الشكل في أن فيها مقدارا قابلا للقسمة و المساواة و اللامساواة و غيرها في ذاته و مقدارا من حيث كونه معروضا لهيئة خاصة - تحصل لأجل تلاقي خطية عند نقطة كما في المسطحة مثلا و نفس تلك

الهيئة العارضة.

فالأول أي المقدار بما هو مقدار بل السطح بما هو سطح مع قطع النظر عن عارضة خارج عن كونه زاوية.

و المعنى الثاني هو الزاوية عند المهندسين.

و المعنى الثالث هو الزاوية عند غيرهم و لا اشتباه في هذه المعاني إنما الإشكال فيما مر أن السطح المذكور لم يخرج من كونه سطحاً لأجل كونه ذا هيئة مخصوصة فلما ذا لا يقبل الانقسام في الجهتين كسائر السطوح المكيفة بالكيفيات الأخر كاللون و أمثاله.

و الحل ما أشرنا إليه و نوضح ذلك فنقول في الفرق بين هذه الكيفية و الكيفية الانفعالية بأن تلك الكيفيات تحل في نفس المقدار بل في ذي المقدار من حيث ذاته المنقسمة - فلا جرم ينقسم بانقسام المحل بأي قسمة وقعت.

و هذا بخلاف عروض الكيفيات التي تخص بالكم فإن حلولها في الأكثر لأجل هيئات التناهي و الانقطاع و التناهي معنى يخالف معنى المقدار لأنه عدم المقدار مع شيء ذي إضافة إليه و المقدار المأخوذ مع نهاية مخصوصة أو وحدة خاصة لا يلزم أن يكون منقسماً بأجزاء متماثلة مماثلة للكل المأخوذ بتلك الحثية كالدائرة مثلاً فإنها سطح معروض لوحدة خاصة من جهة حده و نهايته و هو غير قابل للقسمة بأجزاء متماثلة مماثلة للكل

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٨١

إذ ليست أقسامه كلها دوائر بأي وجه انقسم.

و أما قولك نصف دائرة أو ثلث دائرة فالمراد منه جزء مادته لا جزء صورته - فمعنى نصف الدائرة كونه نصف ذلك السطح بما هو سطح لا بما هو سطح معروض لخط واحد و هذا كما يقال نصف الفلك أو نصف الحيوان و أريد به نصف المادة بما هي مادة - لا بما هي جنس و لا بما هي مقيدة بكمال مخصوص.

فهكذا حال الزاوية فإنها تقبل الانقسام بأجزاء يمكن أن ينحفظ فيها القيد المأخوذ بكماله إلا فيما يرجع إلى الجزئية و الكلية فإن الكمال الساري في أبعاد الشيء - لا بد و أن يكون جزؤه كجزئه أصغر من حصة الكل كالكل و ذلك القيد هو كون السطح عند ملتقى الخطين فلا جرم انقسمت بخط يقع بين الخطين المتلاقين أخذاً من الوتر إلى الرأس أو بخطوط كذلك إلى لا نهاية لأنها تنحفظ في جميع هذا النحو من القسمة حال الحثية المذكورة إلا فيما هو من ضرورات التجزئة بالمتماثلات كما مر و لا يقبل الانقسام بنحو آخر من حيث كونه زاوية لعدم انحفاظ تلك الحثية فيه و إنما ينقسم من جهة أخرى بما هي سطح فقط لا بما هي زاوية و نظير حال الزاوية في قبول القسمة في إحدى الجهتين دون الأخرى حال الأسطوانة المستديرة أو المضلعة و هي مقدار و جسم بلا شبهة لكنه من حيث كونه ذا شكل أسطواني أو شكلاً أسطوانياً قابلاً للقسمة في جهة - ما بين القاعدتين دون باقي الجهات لعدم انحفاظ الهيئة إلا في تلك القسمة دون غيرها - و إنه ولي الهداية

فصل (٥) في نفي الأشد و الأضعف و التضاد في الأشكال

هذا الجنس من الكيفيات لا يقبل الاستحالة فلا يقبل التضاد فلا مربع أشد تربيعاً من مربع و لا عدد أشد زوجية من عدد آخر و ذلك لأن كلما يقبل الأشدية فلا بد أن ينازع بالأضعف و الأشد في الموضوع القريب كالسواد و البياض و الحرارة

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٨٢

و البرودة في الانفعاليات و كالمصاحية و الممرضية في القوة و اللاقوة و كالعلم و الجهل و السخاوة و البخل في النفسانيات فينسلخ الموضوع من بعضها إلى البعض - انسلاخا من كيفية منها و تلبسا بالأخرى و هذا دأب جميع الأضداد التي بينها وسائط - التي ليس زوال الموضوع عن أحدها مقارنا لوجود الطرف الآخر بل ربما خلا عن الطرفين إلى توسط فهذه الوساطة كأنها محدودة كالعدالة التي في حاق الوسط بين إفراطين و العفة التي هي متوسط بين إفراطين لكن هذه المتوسطات إذا قربت المواد الجزئية و اعتبرت في الأشخاص ربما لم يعتبر توسطها الحقيقي فقل عدالة زيد أشد من عدالة عمرو و إن كانت العدالة بحسب ما يدرك بالحد لا بالحس لا يقبل الأزيد و الأنقص.

و أما هذا الجنس الرابع من الكيفية التي تختص بالكم فهي من الأمور التي لا أشدية و لا أضعفية لها فلا أضداد لها كالمربع و الخمس و غير ذلك فإنها لا تقبل الأشد و الأضعف و لا الأزيد و الأنقص فإذا زيد المربع فيراد بالمادة لا بصورة التربيع و لم يتيسر زيادة المادة مع اتحاد التربيع الحقيقي بل تشكلا شبيها به قد خفي عند الحس تخالفه له فيكون تربيع أصح من تربيع آخر لكونه تربيعا حسيا لا حقيقيا كالعدالة في زماننا هذا فإنها توجد بحسب الحس لا بحسب الحقيقة فيقال فلان عدل من فلان.

و أما كون حرارة أشد من حرارة أخرى أو سواد أشد من سواد آخر فليس ذلك بحسب الحس فقط بل بالحقيقة و ليس حال الحرارتين في أن أحدهما أشد - كحال التربيعة في أن أحدهما أصح تربيعا بل ذلك بحسب الحقيقة و هذا بحسب الحس كالعديتين فالربع الحسي كالعادل الحسي يقبل الأشد و الأضعف حسا لا حقيقة.

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٨٣

و قد علمت أن الاستقامة و الاستدارة لا يقبل التضاد و كذا التحديب و التقعير ليسا بمتضادين لأن محل هذه الكيفيات إما الخطوط و إما السطوح فيستحيل أن يصير السطح المقتب مستويا أو مقعرا مع بقاءه في الحالين فسقط ظن من توهم أن في الأمور السماوية تضادا لأجل ما فيها من التقعير و التقعير لأن موضوعهما سطحان متغايران يمتنع اتصاف أحدهما بمثل ما يتصف به الآخر.

و أما الزوجية و الفردية فيتوهم في ظاهر الأمر أنهما متضادتان و ليس كذلك - لعدم تعاقبهما على الموضوع و لأن كل معنيين و إن سميا باسمين محصلين لا يكفي في كونهما متضادين عدم اجتماعهما في الموضوع فإن الفرد و إن كان محصل الاسم لكنه غير محصل المعنى إذ الزوج هو العدد المنقسم إلى متساويين و الفرد هو الذي ليس كذلك فمجرد كونه لا ينقسم لا يوجب إلا سلبا يقارن جنس الموضوع لا نوعه و هذا لا يوجب الضدية فإن فهم للفردية معنى محصل فذلك المعنى أكثر أحواله أنه معنى مباين لا يشارك في الموضوع هذا خلاصة ما ذكره الشيخ في هذا المقام

المقالة الثالثة في حال الخلقة و كيفيات الأعداد و فيه فصول

فصل (١) في حال الخلقة و هو البحث الخامس

إنك علمت مما ذكر مرارا أن وحدة الوجود معتبرة في جميع الحقائق في

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٨٤

كل تقسيم بحسب حال المقسم ففي التقسيم إلى الأنواع يعتبر الوحدة النوعية و في الأشخاص الشخصية و إلا فلم يكن شيء من التقسيمات منحصرًا عقلا في أقسامه كالكلمة إذا قسمت إلى أنواعه لم تكن منحصرة في الاسم و الفعل و الحرف بل يلزم أنوع غير متناهية في الكلمة بحسب تركيب بعضها إلى بعض أنحاء من التركيب فإذا قلنا أن يقول إن الخلقة عبارة عن مجموع اللون و الشكل كل واحد منهما داخل تحت جنس آخر فلو جعلتم لكل شيئين يجتمعان نوعية على حدة بلغت الأنواع إلى حد اللانهاية - لا مرة واحدة بل مرارا غير متناهية.

فالجواب إما بما أشرنا إليه سابقا إذ لا داعي يلجئنا إلى القول بكون الخلقة كيفية وحدانية أو حقيقة واحدة و إن كان الاسم واحدا إذ كثيرا ما يكون الاسم واحدا محصلا و المسمى كثيرا أو غير محصل.

و إما بأن نقول إن الشكل إذا قارن اللون حصل بسبب وجودهما كيفية أخرى بها - يصح أن يقال إنه حسن الصورة أو قبيح الصورة فهما كالسببين لوجود الخلقة لا المقومين لماهيته - فالحسن و القبح الحاصلان للشكل وحده أو للون وحده غير الحسن و القبح الحاصلين للخلقة - فلما حصل للخلقة خاصة لم يحصل لواحد منهما و لا للمجموع على سبيل التوزيع فعلم أنه يحصل هاهنا هيئة مخصوصة عند اجتماعهما فلا جرم كانت هاهنا هيئة منفردة سميت بالخلقة - موصوفة بالحسن و القبح بالمعنى المغاير لما في كل واحد من اللون و الشكل من حسنهما و قبحهما لكن هذا الوجه إنما يتم إن لو ثبت أن الحسن اللازم لخلقة ما ليس أمرا تأليفيا مركبا من حسن اللون و حسن الشكل و كذا القبح و هذا محل تأمل و ليس البحث من المهمات فلا بأس بإغفاله

فصل (٢) في أنه هل يجوز تركيب في الأعراض من أجناس و فصول أو مادة و صورة عقليتين

المشهور عند الجمهور عدم تجويز أن يكون لأنواع من الأعراض تركيب

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٨٥

من جنس و فصل تجويزهم في الجواهر و لأجل ذلك استشكلوا حال الخلقة في أن يكون نوعا واحدا من الكيفيات. و الشيخ أجاب عنهم بأن لا نمنع أن يكون أعراض مركبة من أعراض كيف و العشرة عرض لأنه عدد فهو كم مركب من خمسة و خمسة و المربع عرض و هو ملتئم من أن يكون هناك محدود و حدود أربعة بل نعني أن الجواهر قد يوجد فيها ما يناسب طبيعة جنسها و ما يناسب طبيعة فصلها و إن لم يكن أحدهما طبيعة الجنس و الآخر طبيعة الفصل و الأعراض لا يوجد فيها ذلك و إن وجدت لها أجزاء فلا يكون جزء منها جنسا و الآخر فصلا.

أقول و في كلامه بعض مؤاخذه فأولا أنه قد صرح في الإلهيات أن العدد كالعشرة ليس مركبا من الأعداد كالخمسة و الخمسة للعشرة و لا الأربعة و الستة و لا غيرهما بل من الآحاد فالحق أن ماهية العدد أمر بسيط لا اختلاف أجزاء فيها لكنها ضعيفة الوحدة لأنها عين الكثرة فاختلاف أنواعها بمجرد زيادة الكثرة و نقصها فلاجل ذلك لا تمامية لأنواعها.

و ثانيا أن المربع سواء أريد الهيئة العارضة أو الذي رامه المهندسون فهي ماهية

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٨٦

بسيطة بحسب الخارج و إن كان لها جنس و فصل عقليان عند التحليل فإن السطح و الخطوط الأربعة و النقاط ليست أجزاء لحقيقة المربع أو التريبع و إلا لزم تركيب حقيقة واحدة من أجناس مختلفة و هو محال كما أفاده هو و غيره من

الحكماء المحصلين - بل الأمور المذكورة من الشرائط الخارجية دون المقومات.

و أما تحقيق البحث السادس و هو أن يعرف ما يتركب وجوده من مبدئي أثرين - إلى أيهما أميل فقد أشرنا في نظير هذا المقام عند مباحث الصور النوعية إلى قاعدة وضعناها لتعرف حال الشيء الصوري في أنه جوهر أو عرض بها يعرف أن المشكوك فيه جوهر أو عرض فقد وضع هاهنا نظير تلك القاعدة.

فقال الشيخ لا يخلو إما أن أحدهما أولى بأن يكون موصوفا و الآخر صفة - كالمربع الذي يعنى به سطح ذو هيئة فإن السطح هو الموصوف و الهيئة عارضة له فالجملة من مقولة الموصوف فإن السطح ذا الهيئة سطح لا هيئة و المجموع يحق عليه أنه سطح.

و أما إذا اختلفا و ليس أحدهما أولا للشيء و الآخر ثانيا بسبب الأول و بعده - فإن ذلك الاجتماع منهما يكون جمعا عرضيا و لا يكون على سبيل أمر له اتحاد في طبعه - و يكون كحال الكتابة و الطول فلا يكون للكتابة و الطول اجتماع يحصل منه جملة واحدة فلا يستحق ذلك مقولة بل يدخل في المجموع و المجموع مركب فيكون مقولات هذه الأشياء أيضا مركبة من مقولات.

أقول التحقيق أن الواقع تحت شيء من المقولات أو الأجناس لا يكون إلا أمرا وحدانيا و التركيب لا يكون إلا بحسب ما يخرج عنه و حقيقة المربع ليست إلا مقدارا فقط مع تعيين خاص و ذلك التعين هو فصله المتحد مع جنسه في الوجود و الجعل و وجود الخطوط و الزوايا و النقاط كلها من لوازم ذلك الفصل لا من أجزائه و هكذا الأمر في جميع الأشكال المسطحة و المجسمة الكثيرة الأضلاع و غيرها فالمجسم الذي هو ذو اثني عشر ضلعا مخمسات مثلا مقدار واحد يتحصل بفصل واحد لا تركيب له إلا

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٨٧

باعتبار اللوازم و لو سألت الحق فالأمر فيما يسمى بالمركبات الجوهرية أيضا يجري مجرى ما ذكرناه لكن الحدود قد يؤخذ من ذات الشيء باعتبار معنى يعمه و غيره و معنى يخصه كلا المعنيين في ذاته من حيث هي مصداق لهما و قد يؤخذ من أمور مكتنفة - فالجنس من مادته و الفصل من صورته و إن كانت الصورة بحيث يكون فيها كفاية في جميع المعاني التي توجد في مادتها المقومة بتلك الصورة و سترجع إلى زيادة إمعان لهذا المطلب إن شاء الله تعالى

فصل (٣) في خواص الأعداد و كيفياتها

البحث عن هذه الأمور أليق بالعلوم الجزئية مثل الأرثماطقي و المساحة و غيرها و الذي نختر أن نذكره هاهنا أمور - أحدها أن لا تضاد بين أحوال العدد كالزوجية و الفردية و العادية و المعدودية و الصمم و التشارك و القسمة و الضرب فإن هذه الأمور بعضها مما يفقد فيه بعض شرائط التضاد و بعضها مما يفقد فيه أكثر الشرائط في التضاد و الجمع مشترك في أن لا اشتراك لاثنيين متخالفين منها في موضوع واحد قريب لهما و بعض الطرفين مما يكون أحدهما عدما و بعضها كالقلة و الكثرة و إن فرضا وجوديين ليس في كل منهما غاية التخالف عن الآخر فلا تضاد في خواص العدد كما لا تضاد في أصل الأعداد.

و ثانيها أن لا اشتداد و تضعف و لا ازدياد و تنقص في تلك الخواص لما مر من أن الموضوع لا يستحيل من فرد إلى فرد فكما أن القوس الواحد لا يشتد في تقوسه و انحناؤه إلى انحناء أشد بل يبطل عند ذلك فكذلك لا يشتد العدد في

زوجيته أو تكعبه و تجذيره إلى زوجية أخرى أتم زوجية كزوج الزوج أو جذر الجذر أو كعب الكعب إلا بأن يبطل موضوعه إلى موضوع آخر.

و ثالثها أن الزوجية و الفردية ليستا من الأمور الذاتية لأنهما مقولتان على ما

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٨٨

تحتهما من الأعداد المتخالفة الأنواع بمعنى واحد محصل و لو كانتا ذاتيتين لبعض ما يدخل فيهما لكانتا ذاتيتين للكل مما يدخل فيهما إذ لا مزية للبعض على البعض في نفس شيء من هذين المعنيين فيلزم أن يكون معنى الزوج داخلا في حقائق جميع الأزواج - و كذا الفرد في جميع الأفراد و إذا كان كذلك لكانا نعرف عددا إلا و نعرف بالبداهة أنه زوج أو فرد و ليس كذلك فإن العدد الكثير لا يعرف زوجيته و فرديته إلا بالتأمل فعرفنا أنهما ليسا بذاتيين و إلا لكانا بين الثبوت لما تحتتهما و ليكن هذا آخر ما قصدنا إirاده من الكلام في مقولة الكيف و لواهب العقل ثناء لا يتناهى و لرسوله و اله صلاة لا تحصى

الفن الثالث في بقية المقولات العرضية و فيه مقالات

المقالة الأولى في المضاف و فيه فصول

فصل (١) في ابتداء الكلام في المضاف

اعلم أن لجميع المقولات اقتداء بالموجود و الواحد إذ قد يراد بالموجود مثلا الموجود البحث و قد يراد به المنعوت به و قد يراد به الشيء الموجود كالإنسان مع صفة الوجود.

فالأول كالكلي المنطقي.

و الثاني كالكلي الطبيعي.

و الثالث كالكلي العقلي و هو المجموع المركب من المعقول الأول كالإنسان

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٨٩

و المعقول الثاني كالنوع المنطقي و كذا حال الأبيض في إطلاقه تارة على العارض - و تارة على المعروض و تارة على المجموع إلا أن ظرف العروض و نحوه مختلفان في هذه الأقسام الثلاثة.

ففي الأبيض و أشباهه كان العروض في الخارج و الموضوع اعتبر فيه الوجود الخارجي و القضية التي حكم فيها على شيء بأنه أبيض مثلا خارجية مفاد الحكم و مطابقة فيها ثبوت شيء لشيء و اتصافه به في الخارج و هو فرع على ثبوت المحكوم عليه و المثبت له في ذلك الظرف و في الكلي و كذا الجزئي أو النوع أو الجنس أو ما يجري مجراها - يكون العروض في الذهن.

و الموضوع اعتبر فيه الوجود الذهني و القضية التي حكم فيها على شيء بأنه كلي أو جزئي أو نوع أو ذاتي أو عرضي أو قضية أو قياس مثلا ذهنية مفاد الحكم و مطابقة فيها ثبوت شيء لشيء و اتصافه به في الذهن فقط و هو فرع على ثبوت المحكوم عليه - و المثبت له في ذلك الظرف و في الوجود و الواحد يكون العروض في اعتبار التحليل - و الموضوع اعتبر فيه حال ذاته من حيث هي مجردة عن الوجودين.

و القضية التي حكم فيها على الماهية بأنها موجودة أو واحدة أو علة أو معلول أو واجبة أو ممكنة ليست خارجية صرفة و إن كان المحمول وجودا خارجيا كقولنا الإنسان موجود و لا ذهنية صرفة و إن كان المحمول وجودا ذهنيا كقولنا الإنسان معقول بل حقيقة واقعية مفاد الحكم و مطابقة فيها هو الاتحاد بين معنى الموضوع و معنى المحمول في الوجود و هو متفرع على تحصيل معنى الموضوع و ماهيته من حيث هي في ظرف التحليل إذا جرده العقل عن كل ما هو زائد عليه من حيث نفسه و ذاته سواء كان من عوارض وجوده أو من عوارض ماهيته كنفس الوجود و الإمكان و المجعولية و نظائرها.

فإذا تقرر هذا فنقول فكذاك حكم المضاف في الاعتبار الثلاثة فإنه قد يراد بالمضاف نفس معنى الإضافة وحدها و قد يراد به الأمر الذي عرضت له الإضافة و قد

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٩٠

يراد به مجموع الأمرين.

و أما الاعتبار الثاني فهو خارج عن غرضنا.

و أما الاعتبار الأول فهو المقولة و أما الاعتبار الثالث فهو مجموع الاعتبارين.

و لما كان الوقوف على المجمل أسهل من الوقوف على المفصل بتحليل بسائطه - لا جرم عرفت الحكماء المضاف في أوائل المنطق أعني فن قاطيغورياس بأنه الذي ماهيته مقولة بالقياس إلى غيره و هذا الرسم يندرج فيه الإضافات و المضافات و المعنى بكون ماهية الشيء مقولة بالقياس إلى غيرها هذا ليس مجرد كون تعقل ماهيته مستلزما لتعقل شيء آخر كيف كان و إلا لكان كل ماهية بالقياس إلى لازمها من مقولة المضاف و ليس كذلك فإن كثيرا من الملزومات و اللوازم لها ماهيات مستقلة في معقوليتها و هي في حدود أنفسها ليست من مقولة المضاف بل معناه أنه لا يتقرر ماهيته في الذهن و لا في العين - إلا و يكون الآخر كذلك مثل الأبوة لا يتقرر لشيء في أحد الوجودين إلا و يكون البنوة متفرقة للآخر

فصل (٢) في تحقيق المضاف الحقيقي

و لك أن تقول هذا الرسم فاسد فإن قولهم مقولة بالقياس إلى غيرها يرجع حاصل القياس فيه إلى الإضافة أو إلى نوع من الإضافة فيكون تعريفا للشيء بنفسه أو بما يتوقف عليه هذا مفهوم قولهم بالقياس إلى غيرها.

و أما مفهوم كون الشيء مقولا بالقياس إلى غيره أنه يحوج تصورها إلى تصور أمر خارج عنه فربما قيل لهم إن عنيتم به أنه يحوج تصويره إلى تصور أمر خارج أنه يعلم به فيلزم الدور في المتضايقين و إن عني أنه يكون معه فكثير من غير المتضايقين كذلك كالسقف يعقل معه الحائط و ليس ماهيتهما ماهية المضافين قالوا ينبغي أن يعقل معه من جهة ما هو بإزائه فإذا بوحت و فتش عن هذه الموازنة يرجع إلى معنى الإضافة.

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٩١

و قريب من هذا قول من قال إن المضاف هو الذي وجوده أنه مضاف و قد اعتذر بأن المضاف الذي أخذ في التعريف غير المضاف المحدود بل الذي في الحد هو المضاف المركب و هو أشهر من المضاف البسيط.

وقد أورد في كتب الفن ما حاصله أنه يجوز أن يكون للشيء جنس أو ما يشبه الجنس أشهر منه و يرى الخاصة اسم الأمر العام لما هو نوع له أو يشبه النوع أليق به - فينقلون الاسم إليه كما في الإمكان العام. و نقل الاسم العامي إلى الخاصي فكذا المضاف يقع على البسيط كالأبوة و على المجموع المركب من البسيط و غيره كالأب فهو يعمها و الخاصة نقلوا اسم المضاف إلى الخاص الذي هو البسيط و هذا خطأ كما أشار إليه بعض العلماء إذ لا عموم و لا خصوص هاهنا و ليس للمضاف معنى يجمعهما و ليس نسبة الإمكان العامي إلى الخاصي كنسبة المضاف المركب إلى المضاف البسيط و لا يصح أن يكون للعام زيادة معنى لا يوجد في الخاص.

أقول و الأولى أن يعتذر من جهة الرسم الأول أن المضاف الذي يؤخذ في الرسم أو يتضمنه الرسم هو المضاف بالمعنى الثاني أعني ما يصدق عليه مفهوم المضاف كلفظ القياس و لفظ المعقول لا المضاف الحقيقي البسيط و لا المركب منه و من الموضوع له و لا فساد في كون المعرف للشيء مشتملا على فرد منه إذ التعريف إنما هو للمفهوم لا الفرد فلا يلزم توقف الشيء على نفسه.

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٩٢

و عن الثاني و هو قولهم أن المضاف هو الذي وجوده أنه مضاف بأن التعريف للتنبيه فإن معرفة المضاف بسيطاً كان أو مركباً فطرية و قد يحتاج إلى تذكير و تنبيه في الفرق بين البسيط و المركب فينسب به بأن للمركب جزء من مقولة أخرى كالأب فإنه جوهر في نفسه لحقته الأبوة و كالمساواة فإنه كم لحقه الاتفاق و كالمشابهة فإنه كيف لحقته الموافقة مع مثله و ليس الكم الموافق و لا كيف الموافق بسيطاً - بل مركباً من حيث هو كذا.

و أما الفرق بين الإضافة و النسبة فبأنه ليس كل نسبة إضافة بل إذا أخذت مكررة - و معنى هذا أن يكون النظر لا في نفس النسبة فقط بل بزيادة أن هذه النسبة يلزمها نسبة أخرى فإن السقف له نسبة إلى الحائط بأنه يستقر عليه و للحائط أيضاً نسبة إليه بأنه مستقر عليه و لهذا قالوا إن النسبة لطرف واحد و الإضافة تكون للطرفين.

فإذا علمت رسم المضاف فنقول إن المضافين قد يكون اسم كل منهما دالاً بالتضمن على ما له من الإضافة كلفظي الأب و الابن و قد يكون أحد المضافين اسمه كذلك دون الآخر و هو على قسمين لأنه إما اسم المضاف أو اسم المضاف إليه.

فالأول كالجناح فإنه مضاف إلى ذي الجناح و لفظة الجناح دالة بالتضمن على الإضافة إلى ذي الجناح فاما ذو الجناح فإنه يدل على ما له من الإضافة لفظة ذو.

و الثاني كالعالم فإنه المضاف إليه للعلم و لفظة العالم دالة بالتضمن على ذلك.

و أما العلم و هو المضاف فإنما يدل على ما له من الإضافة حرف يقترب به و هو كاللام في قولك العلم علم للعالم

فصل (٣) في خواص طرفي الإضافة

فمنها التكافؤ في تلازم الوجود خارجاً و ذهناً بالقوة أو بالفعل و في العدم أيضاً كذلك و هذا مما يشكل في باب تقدم بعض أجزاء الزمان على بعض و تأخر الآخر

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٩٣

عنه فهما متضايقان مع أنهما ليسا متكافئين معين و أيضاً إنا نعلم أن القيامة ستكون - و العلم و المعلوم متضايقان فبينهما

إضافة بالفعل مع أن القيامة معدومة و العلم بها موجود.

و أجاب الشيخ عن الأول بأن المتقدم و المتأخر يعتبران من وجهين - أحدهما بحسب الذهن مطلقا و هو أن يحضر الذهن زمانين فيجد أحدهما متقدما و الآخر متأخرا فهما قد حصلا جميعا في الذهن.

و الثاني بحسب الوجود مستندا إلى الذهن و هو أن الزمان المتقدم إذا كان موجودا فموجود من الآخر أنه ليس بموجود هو و يمكن أن يوجد إمكانا يؤدي إلى وجوده و هذا كونه متأخرا و هذا الوصف للزمان الثاني موجود في الذهن عند وجود الزمان المتقدم و إذا وجد المتأخر فإنه موجود في الذهن حينئذ أن الزمان الثاني [الأول ظ] ليس موجودا و نسبته إلى الذهن نسبة شيء كان موجودا ففقد و هذا أيضا موجود مع الزمان المتأخر فأما نسبة المتأخر على وجه آخر غير ما ذكرنا فلا وجود له في الأمور لكن في الذهن.

أقول ما ذكره غير واف بحل الإشكال فإن الإضافات بين أجزاء الزمان و إن لم يوجد في العقل ما لم يعتبرها لكن تلك الأجزاء بحيث إذا اعتبرها العقل منقسمة بالأيام و الشهور و السنين فيجد بينها نسبة و يحكم بتقدم بعضها على بعض في الذهن - لكن بحسب الخارج فإضافة التقدم و التأخر بين أجزائه كإضافة الفوقية و التحتية بين أجزاء الفلك فإن الأجزاء و إن كانت بالقوة و كذا الإضافات و إن كانت بالقوة - لكنها بحيث إذا فرض فعليتها كانت الإضافة بينها على الوجه الذي يكون في سائر المضافات و تحقق الإضافة يوجب تحقق المعية بين وجودي المتضايفين في ظرف الاتصاف لا في الذهن فقط.

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٩٤

و الذي ينحل به الشبهة ما حققناه في موضع آخر فليرجع من أراد.

ثم إنه يرد على ما ذكره شيء آخر و هو أن قوله في الاعتبار الثاني أن الزمان المتقدم إذا كان موجودا فموجود من الآخر أنه ليس هو بموجود فيه بحث لأنه يوهم أن اللاوجود وجود و ذلك ظاهر الاستحالة فإن اللاوجود لو كان وجودا لكان الشيء نقيضا لنفسه و هو محال فإذا كان جزء من الزمان موجودا و لم يكن الجزء الآخر موجودا فاللاوجود للجزء الآخر ليس أمرا وجوديا حتى يقع بينه و بين الجزء الحاضر إضافة وجودية.

اللهم إلا أن يراد به مفهوم اللاوجود المقيد ذلك الوجود بأنه في الزمان الأول - لأن وجود كل جزء من الزمان يستلزم لا وجود الجزء الآخر كما يقتضيه وصف التقدم و التأخر.

لكن يرد الكلام بأن الموصوف باللاوجود بهذا المعنى يجب أن يكون موجودا - و أيضا بتقدير أن يكون المراد نفس لا وجود الجزء المستقبل لكن ليس الجزء الحاضر متقدما على لا وجود الجزء المستقبل بل على وجود المستقبل و وجود المستقبل غير حاضر و إلا لم يكن مستقبلا فما هو المضاف غير موجود و لا حاضر و ما هو الحاضر غير مضاف فقوي الإشكال و الوجه ما أومأنا إليه.

و أما الجواب عن الثاني فهو أن المعلوم بالحقيقة هو الصورة الحاضرة عند العقل و الإضافة بالحقيقة بين العلم و ماهية المعلوم و المعلوم من القيمة أنها ستكون لا عين وجود القيمة.

أقول و يرد عليه سكان أحدهما أن العلم من الموجودات الخارجية و لهذا عد من الكيفيات النفسانية و قد حكمتكم بأن أحد المضافين إذا كان موجودا في الخارج - و جب أن يكون الآخر أيضا موجودا فيه بما هو مضاف و ليس ماهية المعلوم

بما هي ماهية معلومة من الموجودات العينية.
و الثاني أن العلم في الحقيقة نفس وجود ماهية المعلوم عند العاقل و ليس بين

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٩٥

الوجود و الماهية تغاير حتى يقع بينهما إضافة العلم و المعلوم.
و الجواب عن الأول أن العلم و إن كان من حيث كونه عرضاً قائماً بالذهن من الموجودات الخارجية لكن من حيث كونه حكاية عن ماهية شيء له وجود في الخارج من الموجودات الذهنية فالعلم و ماهية المعلوم كلاهما ذهنيان.
و عن الثاني أن الإضافة بين العلم و المعلوم به بالذات بعينها كالإضافة بين الوجود و الماهية الموجودة به بالذات أمر اعتباري حاصلة بين أمرين متغايرين بالاعتبار متحدين بالذات فكما أن الموجود في الخارج أمر واحد إذا حلله العقل إلى ماهية و وجود - عرضت لهما إضافة الوجود و ذي الوجود فكذا الموجود في الذهن صورة واحدة هي موجود ذهني إذا حلله العقل إلى ماهية و وجود ذهني عرضت لهما إضافة العلم و المعلوم - إذ العلم نفس وجود الشيء مجرداً عن المادة و لواحقها و كذا الكلام في الحس و المحسوس أي الصورة الموجودة في الحس و هي عندنا من الكيفيات النفسانية المحاكية للكيفيات التي تسمى بالمحسوسات.

و قد عدوا من أحكام المضاف أن المتضايفين قد لا يقع لهما تكافؤ في الوجود من جهة أخرى فقد يكونان بحيث يصح وجود كل منهما مع عدم الآخر [و يصح وجود الآخر مع عدم الأول ظ] كما في العلم و الحس أعني الإدراكين لا القوتين المتشاركتين لهما في الاسم فإن ذات العلم و الحس لا يصح وجودهما مع عدم ذات المعلوم و المحسوس - و لكن ذات المعلوم و ذات المحسوس يصح وجود كل منهما مع عدم العلم و الحس - و قد يكونان بحيث يجوز وجود كل منهما بدون وجود الآخر كالمالك و المملوك - فإنه يجوز وجود ذات المالك مع عدم المملوك و وجود ذات المملوك مع عدم المالك - و منه ما يمتنع وجود ذات أحدهما عند عدم ذات الآخر كالمعلول الذي لا يكون أعم من علته كحركة اليد و حركة المفتاح المخصوصتين هذا ما ذكره الشيخ و غيره.
و أقول هاهنا موضع بحث و تحقيق فإنك إذا نظرت حق النظر لوجدت أن الذات التي حكموا عليها بأنها معروض المضاف فهي في أكثر الأمر ليست كذلك.

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٩٦

فالشيوخ ذكر في الحكم بعدم وجوب التكافؤ في الوجود بين الذاتين الموصفتين بالإضافة لا من جهة إضافيتهما مثالين أحدهما ذات العلم و المعلوم و ثانيهما ذاتا الحس و المحسوس.
فقال ذات العلم في جوهره قد لزمه دائماً أن يكون مضافاً إلى المعلوم موجوداً معه و ذات المعلوم في جوهره لا يلزمه ذلك فإنه قد يوجد غير مضاف إليه العلم و كذلك حال هذا الحس فإن ذاته لا ينفك عن لزوم الإضافة إياه و ذات المحسوس تنفك - و لا يجب أن لا يكون موجوداً حين لا يكون الحس موجوداً إذ يجوز أن لا يكون حيوان حساس موجوداً و يكون العناصر المحسوسة موجودة هذا حاصل كلامه.
و لأحد أن يقول الذات التي تعلق العلم بها بالحقيقة فهي دائماً معلومة لا يمكن غير هذا و التي لم تعلق بها العلم فهي

غير معلومة بهذا العلم أبداً لا في هذا الوقت ولا في سائر الأوقات فإن الوجود الصوري العلمي دائماً معلومة والوجود المادي المحجوب عن ما يدركه من حيث كونه مغشواً بالغواشي أبداً مجهول.

وكذا الكلام في ذات الحس الذي بمعنى الصورة لا بمعنى القوة وكذا ذات المحسوس الذي بمعنى الصورة لا بمعنى المادة لا ينفك إحداهما عن الآخر كما لا ينفك العارضان البسيطان أحدهما عن الآخر.

فكما أن مفهوم الحسية والمحسوسية يتكافئان في الوجود العقلي ويعقلان معاً - فكذا الذاتان المعروضتان لذيتك الإضافيتين متكافئتين في الوجود الحسي.

وكذا الكلام في كل ما هو معروض الإضافة أولاً وبالذات وأما الذات التي هي موصوفة بالمحسوسية والمعلومية ولو بالعرض فهي أيضاً عند البحث والتفتيش يظهر أنها مقارنة في الوجود لوجود ذات الحس وذات العلم فإن الكيفية السمعية القائمة بالهواء المقروء المتموج مثلاً مسموعة بالعرض وذلك عند قرعه للسمع وهي مقارنة في الوجود للصورة المسموعة بالذات وغير تلك الصورة الإدراكية وغير التي توجد في الخارج عند قرع السمع غير مدركة لا بالذات ولا بالعرض فلا إضافة إليها

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٩٧

في وقت من الأوقات أصلاً لا بالذات ولا بالعرض.

وكذا الكيفية اللمسية كالحرارة النارية الحاضرة عند آلة اللمس صح أن يقال إنها ملموسة بالعرض لا بالذات لأن الملموسة بالذات هي كيفية نفسانية - محاكية للحرارة الخارجية كما مرت الإشارة إليه وأما التي هي خارجة عن التصور - وعن الحضور الوضعي عند آلة اللمس فلا إضافة إليها لا بالذات ولا بالعرض فثبت أن التكافؤ في الوجود والعدم كما لزم في المضافين البسيطين فكذا في الذاتين اللتين هما معروضاهما من حيث هما هما وإن قطع النظر عن وصف الإضافة.

فإن قلت الحس البصري لا يدرك به إلا الأمر الخارجي بعينه عند من أبطل الانطباع لاستحالة انطباع العظيم في الصغير وأبطل خروج الشعاع أيضاً فيكون الإبصار عنده مجرد إضافة إدراكية إلى الموجود الخارجي بعينه.

أقول أما أولاً فقد كان كلامنا في إضافة الحس الذي بمعنى الصورة الإدراكية - وهي عند هذا القائل عين الصورة الخارجية فلا انفكاك بينهما وأما الإضافة الوضعية التي بين جوهر الحاس وذات الأمر الخارجي الذي قيل وقع إليه إضافة الإبصار فطرفها بالحقيقة كطرفا سائر الإضافات الوضعية التي عند البحث والتحقيق لا يكونان إلا معاً.

وأما ثانياً فإن المبصر بالذات صورة مقدارية حاضرة عند النفس مجردة عن المواد وهي الحس والمحسوس أي البصر والمبصر وهما معلومان إذ لا تغاير بينهما إلا بحسب الاعتبار.

ومما عد أيضاً من خواص المتضايفين وجوب انعكاس كل منهما على الآخر ومعنى الانعكاس أن يحكم بإضافة كل منهما إلى صاحبه من حيث كان مضافاً إليه فكما يقال الأب أب للابن يقال الابن ابن للأب وهذا الانعكاس إنما يجب إذا أضيف كل منهما من حيث هو مضاف إلى الآخر.

وأما إذا أضيف لا من حيث هو مضاف فلم يجب هذا الانعكاس كما يقال الأب

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٩٨

أب للصبي أو للإنسان أو للأسود لم يجب الانعكاس.

فلا يقال الصبي صبي للأب أو الإنسان إنسان للأب وقد يصعب رعاية قاعدة الانعكاس في المضاف والطريق فيه أن يجمع أوصاف الشيء فإن تلك الأوصاف إذا وضعته ورفعت غيره بقيت الإضافة أو رفعته ووضعت غيره ارتفعت الإضافة فهو الذي إليه الإضافة الحقيقية الواجبة الانعكاس فإنك إذا رفعت من الابن أنه حيوان أو إنسان أو ناطق أو كاتب أو غير ذلك واستبقيت كونه ابنا بقيت إضافة الأب إليه وإن رفعت كونه ابنا واستبقيت هذه الأوصاف كلها لم يبق الإضافة.

فعلت بهذا أن التعادل الحقيقي في الإضافة هو بين الأب والابن فهما اللذان ينعكس أحدهما على الآخر وإذا اختل التعادل لا يجب الانعكاس فإذا قيل السكان سكان للسفينة والرأس رأس للحيوان لا يصح أن ينعكس فيقال السفينة سفينة للسكان - والحيوان حيوان للرأس وإنما يجب التعادل إذا قيل الرأس رأس لذي الرأس والسكان سكان لذي السكان.

وقالوا إن هذا الانعكاس منه ما لا يحتاج إلى حرف النسبة وذلك إذا كان للمضاف بما هو مضاف لفظ موضوع كالعظم والصغر ومنه ما يحتاج إلى ذلك وإما أن يتساوى حرف النسبة من الجانبين كقولنا العبد عبد للمولى والمولى مولى للعبد وإما أن لا يتساوى كقولنا العالم عالم بالعلم والعلم علم للعالم

فصل (٤) في تحصيل المعنى الذي هو نفس مقولة المضاف الذي هو أحد الأجناس العشرة العالية

فنقول إن الرسم المذكور الذي ماهيته مقولة بالقياس إلى غيره قد يعنى به نفس هذا المفهوم أي نفس أنها مقولة بالقياس إلى غيرها وقد يعنى به ماهية أخرى يصدق عليها بالذات أن ماهيته مقولة بالقياس إلى غيرها وقد يعنى به ما له ماهية أخرى غير معنى المضاف الذي هو المقولة وغير المضاف الذي هو من المقولة وذلك كالآب

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ١٩٩

فإنه وإن كان معقولا بالقياس إلى الابن إلا أن له في نفسه وراء هذه المعقولة و وراء أبوته - ماهية غير معقولة بالقياس إلى الابن وهي كونه إنسانا وفرسا أو شيئا آخر.

و أما الأبوة فليس لها ماهية إلا هذه الماهية المعقولة بالقياس فها هنا ثلاثة أمور - أحدها ما يحمل عليه الرسم المذكور حملا ذاتيا أوليا لا صدقا متعارفا كما في القضايا المتعارفة وهو المقولة التي هي إحدى المقولات العشر.

و ثانيها ما هو نوع من أنواعه سواء كان في نفسه جنسا أو نوعا سافلا وهو الذي يحمل عليه المقولة حملا بالذات كما في صدق الذاتيات على أفرادها الذاتية.

و ثالثها ماهية أخرى تحت الجوهر أو الكم أو الكيف أو غيرها يصدق عليها مقولة المضاف أو نوعه حملا بالعرض كحمل الأبيض على الإنسان فهكذا ينبغي أن يحقق الفرق وفي أكثر الكتب لم يتعرضوا لبيان الفرق بين نفس المقولة وما هو نوع منها بل اقتصروا على بيان الفرق بين العارض الذي هو الإضافة ومعرضها.

ولذلك قال الشيخ ثم المضاف الذي يجعلونه مقولة فهو أيضا شيء ذو إضافة لأنه شيء معقول الماهية بالقياس إلى غيره وإذا كان كذلك فقد شارك هذا المضاف الذي هو المقولة المضاف الذي ليس هو المقولة فلا يكون بينهما فرق.

أقول الفرق ما أشرنا إليه و هو أن الأول هو نفس ما يعبر عنه بأنه معقول الماهية بالقياس كما أن الجوهر الذي هو المقولة هو نفس ما يعبر عنه بأنه الماهية التي إذا وجدت كانت لا في موضوع فالمضاف الذي هو المقولة هو نفس مفهوم لفظ المضاف.

و أما الشيئية فهو أمر لا ينفك عنه المضاف الذي هو المقولة و لا يمكن أن يسلب عنه لكن الشيئية التي اعتبرت في مفهوم المضاف نفسه ليست إلا شيئية عامة لا يتحصل إلا بكونها إضافة و مضافا لا كالأبيض إذا أريد به شيء غير البياض وصف بالبياض.

فإننا لو جعلنا المشتق اسمه من الأعراض و أردنا بالشيئية الشيئية المفهومة في المشتق من حرف اللام أو ذي أو الهيئة الاشتقاقية لصارت المقولات غير متناهية و لهذا لم يجعل المضاف المطلق الشامل للمركب أيضا مقولة بل المضاف الذي لا ماهية له سوى كونه مضافا.

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٠٠

فلو قال أحد إن الإضافة أيضا شيء معقولة ماهيته بالقياس إلى الغير فوجب أن لا تجعل مقولة. قلنا إن الشيئية المحمولة على المضاف الحقيقي أعني المقولة أو نوعا منها لا تخصص لها إلا بكونها مضافا. و أما الشيئية التي تحمل على المعنى الآخر فإنه ليس تخصصها بكونها مضافا بل بأمر آخر و هو كونه إنسانا أو دارا أو شيئا آخر ثم يلحقه بعد ذلك التخصيص بالإضافة - فالأب في غير المقولة جوهر يلحقه الأبوة و الأب الذي هو من المقولة شيء هو بعينه الأبوة و العرضي بهذا المعنى عين العرض كما أن الناطق أيضا شيء هو نفس الصورة الجوهرية

فصل (٥) في أن الإضافة هل تكون موجودة في الخارج أم لا

و اعلم أن كثيرا من الأشياء ما هي موجودة لا بوجود مستقل كمفهوم العرض و ماهية الجنس و الفصل في البسيط فإن أمثال هذه الأشياء لا يوجد بوجودات مستقلة و من هذا القبيل الإضافات و النسب فإن وجود الإضافة ليس بخارج عن وجود الجوهر و الكم و الكيف و غيرها بل وجودها وجود أحد هذه الأشياء بحيث يعقل منهما معنى غير ماهياتها معقولا ذلك المعنى بالقياس إلى غيره فالسقف مثلا له وجود وضعي - إذا عقل معه الإضافة إلى الحائط و كذا السماء لها وجود واحد وضعي يعقل منه ماهية السماء و هي جوهر و يعقل معها معنى آخر خارج عن ماهيتها و هو معنى الفوقية - و معنى كون الشيء موجودا أن حده و معناه يصدق على شيء موجود في الخارج

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٠١

صدقا خارجيا كما هو في القضايا الخارجية كقولنا الإنسان كاتب أو أبيض فالمضاف بهذا المعنى موجود لصدق قولنا السماء فوق الأرض و زيد أب و هذا بخلاف الأمور الذهنية كقولنا الحيوان جنس و الإنسان نوع فإن الجنسية و النوعية و ما أشبههما ليست من الأحوال الخارجية التي تثبت للأشياء في الأعيان بل في الأذهان. و بهذا يعلم فساد رأي من زعم من الناس أن الإضافة غير موجودة في الأعيان بل من الاعتبارات الذهنية كالكلية و الجزئية.

و احتج عليه [الإضافة غير موجودة] بأمور

الأول أن الإضافة لو وجدت في الخارج لزم التسلسل

لأنها تكون لا محالة موجودة حينئذ في محل فكونها في المحل شيء وكونها في نفسها شيء آخر فإن الأبوة مفهومها غير معنى كونها في محلها فيكون إضافتها إلى المحل إضافة أخرى والكلام فيها كالكلام في الأول و يلزم منه التسلسل فأجاب الشيخ عنه بأن قال يجب أن ترجع في حل هذه الشبهة إلى حد المضاف المطلق.

فنقول المضاف هو الذي له ماهية معقولة بالقياس إلى غيره فكل شيء في الأعيان - يكون بحيث ماهيته إنما يعقل بالقياس إلى غيره فذلك الشيء من المضاف لكن في الأعيان أشياء كثيرة بهذه الصفة فالمضاف في الأعيان موجود.

ثم إن كان في المضاف ماهية أخرى فينبغي أن يجرى ما له من المعنى المعقول بالقياس إلى غيره فذلك المعنى هو بالحقيقة المعنى المعقول بالقياس إلى غيره و غيره إنما هو معقول بالقياس إلى غيره بسبب هذا المعنى وهذا المعنى ليس معقولاً بالقياس إلى غيره بسبب شيء غير نفسه بل هو مضاف لذاته فليس هناك ذات و شيء هو الإضافة

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٠٢

بل هناك مضاف بذاته لا بإضافة أخرى فينتهي من هذا الطريق الإضافات و أما كون هذا المضاف بذاته في هذا الموضوع فله وجود آخر مثلاً وجود الأبوة في الأب و ذلك الوجود أيضاً مضاف فليكن هذا عارضاً من المضاف لزم المضاف و كل واحد منهما مضاف لذاته إلى ما هو مضاف إليه بلا إضافة أخرى فالكون محمولاً مضاف لذاته و الكون أبوة مضاف لذاته.

هذا ما قاله في إلهيات الشفاء و هو كلام واضح رفع الشبهة لوجهين بالمعارضة و الحل حيث أقام البرهان أولاً على أن المضاف من الهيئات الموجودة في الأعيان ثم دفع التسلسل من الوجه الذي أمكن إirاده من لزوم التكرير كما يورد في باب الوجود و الوحدة و نظائرها فدفع هاهنا كما دفع هناك من أنها تنتهي إلى ما هو مضاف بذاته - لا بإضافة أخرى عارضة.

و أما الإضافات المختلفة المعاني فلا يلزم أن يكون لكل إضافة إضافة مخالفة لها بالماهية لازمة إياها حتى يلزم التسلسل و لا يندفع فإن إضافة الأبوة و إن لزمها في الوجود إضافة الحالية و العروض لكن لا يجب أن يلزم إضافة أخرى مخالفة لها.

و كذا ثالثة و رابعة و هكذا إلى لا نهاية اللهم إلا بحسب اعتبارات عقلية متماثلة - أو متخالفة ينقطع بانقطاع اعتبارات العقل.

الحجة الثانية

ما مر من كون إضافة التقدم و التأخر لو كانت موجودة لكان الماضي و المستقبل من الزمان موجودين معاً.

و الجواب ما أشرنا إليه في مباحث التقابل و موضع آخر أن معية أجزاء الزمان لا يمكن أن يكون آنية بأن يكون السابق و اللاحق موجودين في آن واحد إنما ذلك شأن معية الآنات و الآنيات بل معيتها اتصالها في الوجود الوجداني التدريجي - الذي معيتها فيه عين التقدم و التأخر فيه كما أن وحدة العدد عين كثرته لشيء من الأشياء

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٠٣

فصل (٦) في نحو وجود المضاف في الخارج

واعلم أن في خصوصية وجود المضاف في الخارج و تعيينها إشكالا من وجوه -

منها أن الإضافة لو كانت موجودة لكانت مشاركة لسائر الموجودات في الوجود

و متميزة عنها بخصوصية و ما لم يقيد الوجود بتلك الخصوصية لم يوجد الإضافة في الأعيان فيكون ذلك القيد [التقيد] سابقا على وجود الإضافة لكن التقيد هو نفس الإضافة فإذا لم يوجد الإضافة إلا بوجود إضافة قبلها و هكذا الكلام في وجود الإضافة السابقة فيكون تحقق الإضافة الواحدة مشروطا بإضافات غير متناهية من أمثالها.

و منها أن الوجود من حيث هو وجود إما أن يكون مضافا أو لا يكون مضافا

فإن كان مضافا فكل وجود مضاف و ليس كذلك و إن لم يكن مضافا فالإضافة لو كانت موجودة فهي لا تكون مضافة من حيث إنها تكون موجودة فالموجود من حيث هو موجود غير مضاف و المضاف من حيث هو مضاف غير موجود و هو المطلوب.

و منها أنه لو كانت الإضافة أمرا وجوديا لزم أن يكون الباري جل مجده محلا للحوادث

لأن له مع كل حادث إضافة بأنه موجود معه و تلك المعية ما كانت حاصلة قبل ذلك و يزول بعد زوال ذلك الحادث فيجب أن يكون الباري محلا للحوادث فيكون جسما أو جسمانيا تعالى عنه علوا كبيرا.

و تحقيق القول في وجود المضاف

بحيث يدفع هذه الشكوك و أشباهها - هو أن وجود الإضافة ليس وجودا مباينا لوجود سائر الأشياء بل كون الشيء سواء كان في نفسه جوهرًا أو عرضا بحيث إذا عقل عقل معه شيء آخر هو نحو وجود الإضافة

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٠٤

فالعلة كالعقل مثلا لها ذات موجودة بوجود يخصها من حيث هي جوهر عقلي و كون ذلك الوجود بحيث له تأثير في وجود الغير هو وجود العلة بما هي علة و العلة نوع من المضاف فهذا الوجود منسوب إلى الجوهر بالذات و إلى المضاف بالعرض.

و إنما قلنا بالعرض لأن مفهوم العلية خارج عن ذاتيات هذا الوجود إذا قطع النظر إليها عما سواها و كذا وجود المضاف من حيث هو مضاف مغاير بالاعتبار لوجود الجوهر بما هو جوهر لكن الفرق بين ماهية الجوهر الذي هو العلة و بين عليته و إضافته بالماهية و الحد فإن حد الجوهر غير حد المضاف و الفرق بين وجوديهما بالاعتبار فالوجود الجوهرى إذا أخذ في نفسه كان جوهرًا و إذا قيس إلى غيره كان مضافا فكون هذا الوجود بحيث إذا عقل على الوجه الذي يكون في الخارج يلزم من تعقله تعقل شيء آخر هو وجود المضاف.

و بالجملة أن المضاف بما هو مضاف بسيط ليس له وجود في الخارج مستقل مفرد بل وجوده أن يكون لاحقا بأشياء كونها بحيث يكون لها مقايضة إلى غيرها - فوجود السماء في ذاتها وجود الجواهر و وجودها بحيث إذا قيس إلى الأرض عقلت الفوقية وجود الإضافات.

و كذا الكم له وجود في نفسه من حيث هو كم و هو كون الشيء بحيث يمكن لذاته أن يصير مساويا لشيء أو أعظم أو أصغر منه و أما وجوده بحيث يكون بالفعل مساويا مثلا هو وجود المساوي فوجود المساوي غير وجود الكم لأن

المساوي لم يبق مساويا إذا قيس إلى ما هو أعظم منه أو أصغر.
و أما النوع من الكم فهو أبداً بحال واحد في نفسه لا يتغير فوجود واحد يصلح لأن يصير وجوداً لإضافات كثيرة كالواحد مثلاً له وجود في نفسه هو عين وحدته - وذلك الوجود يصدق عليه أنه نصف الاثنين و ثلث الثلاثة و ربع الأربعة وهكذا إلى غير النهاية من غير استحالة ولا لزوم تركيب في الواحد بما هو واحد فتحصيل المضاف و تنويعه يتصور من وجهين

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٠٥

أحدهما أن يعتبر معه معروضة كمجموع الجسم و الأبيض و هو ليس من المقولات كالكم المساوي أو كيف الموافق.
و ثانيهما أن يعتبر المضاف مخصصاً بنحو تخصيص ينشأ من الملحق به و يوجدان معا في العقل كعارض واحد و هذا هو تنويع الإضافة و تحصيلها فإن كون المساوي مضافاً ليس ككون الكم مساوياً أو مضافاً فالمساواة موافقة في الكم [اتفاق الكم] و هي غير الكم الموافق و كذا المشابهة موافقة في كيف و هي غير كيف الموافق.
و بالجملة المضاف الذي هو المقولة و الجنس الذي هو للمضافات البسيطة [المضاف البسيط] و فصل نوعه الذي هو بالحقيقة نوع لها لا يكون جعل أحدهما غير جعل الآخر بل يكون طبيعة الجنسية و الفصلية فيه أي في ذلك النوع أمراً واحداً.

فإن قيل إن المساواة و المشابهة اتفقتا في موافقة ما و اختلفتا في التخصيص بالكم أو بالكيف فيكون المساواة و المشابهة إما من نوع واحد و قد قلتم أنهما نوعان متباينان أو هما متميزان بالكلم و كيف أو بإضافتين أخريين فإن كانت الكمية و الكيفية نفس الفصل فالمفروض مضافاً بسيطاً يكون مركباً هذا خلف و أيضاً يلزم كون نوع واحد تحت مقولتين أو تحصيل مقولة بنوع من مقولة أخرى و الكل محال أو يكون فصل الإضافة التي هي الموافقة إضافة أخرى إلى الكمية أو إلى الكيفية لا نفس الكمية و الكيفية فيكون فصل الإضافة إضافة و هو أيضاً ممتنع مع أنه يرجع الكلام إلى أن الإضافة الثانية بما ذا يمتاز عن الإضافة الأولى فيعود المحذورات جذعاً.

أقول الاتفاق معنى جنسي لا يتحصل بمعنى مغاير له بل بمنى نسبته إليه نسبة التعيين إلى الإبهام فإن الاتفاق إذا تحصل بأنه في الكم حتى صار مساواة لم يتحصل بنفس الكم حتى يلزم كون مقولة متحصلاً بمقولة أخرى و لا أيضاً بإضافة

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٠٦

أخرى إلى الكم حتى يلزم تحصل إضافة بإضافة أخرى بل تحصل و تنوع بأنه في الكم لا بالكم و لا بإضافة إليه.
و هذا كسائر فصول الأجناس فإن فصل الحيوان و هو الجسم النامي الدراك - هو عبارة عن تعيين الدراك بأنه ناطق لا أن الناطق ينضم إلى الدراك فيصير مجموعاً من المدرك و الناطق بل المدرك الذي هو الناطق و كذا الكلام في نسبة المدرك إلى النامي و النامي إلى الجسم و الجسم إلى الجوهر و الغلط قد ينشأ من الاشتباه بين الجنس و المادة.
و إذا تقرر هذه المعاني فلنرجع إلى حل الشكوك.

أما الأول فسلمنا أن وجود الإضافة مشارك لسائر الوجودات في الوجود و سلمنا أنه يجب أن يمتاز عن غيرها لكن لا نسلم أن ذلك الامتياز لا بد أن يكون بقيد زائد فإن كثيراً من الوجودات يمتاز عن غيرها بنفس وجوداتها - إذ الاشتراك

في الوجود المطلق اشتراك في أمر انتزاعي عقلي إذ ليس لحقائق الوجودات بما هي وجودات كلي طبيعي يكون نوعا لأفراده حتى يحتاج في تمايزها إلى قيود زائدة.

ثم القيود قد يكون نسبتها إلى ما قيد بها كحال فصول الجنس فليس تقييد الجنس بفصله كتقييد الشيء بأمر زائد عليه جعلاً ووجوداً حتى يقع بينهما إضافة هي نفس التقييد أو إضافة أخرى بل ربما كان أعم وأخص بحسب المعنى والمفهوم موجوداً بوجود واحد بسيط في الخارج.

و أما الثاني فنقول إن الموجود في نفسه إما ممكن أو واجب أو جوهر أو عرض و كونه بحال و نحو من الوجود إذا عقل يلزم من تعقله تعقل شيء آخر هو من المضاف فكل وجود من حيث وجود لم يلزم أن يكون مضافاً بل من حيث كونه على نحو آخر مخصوص فإن الحيوان في نفسه إذا قطع النظر عن غيره له وجود و كونه بحيث يوجد من فضله مادته حيوان آخر وجود آخر.

فالأول نوع من مقولة الجوهر و هذا نوع من مقولة المضاف.

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٠٧

و أما الثالث فنقول ليس للإضافة وجود متقرر كسائر الأعراض حتى يكون حدوثها لشيء و زوالها عنه يوجب انفعالا و تغيرا في ذات الموصوف بها أو في صفاته الحقيقية فإن تجددتها و زوالها قد يكون بسبب تجدد أحد الطرفين بخصوصه مع ثبات الطرف الآخر فإن صيرورة أحد في المجلس ثاني الاثنين بعد ما لم يكن كذلك و ثالث الثلاثة و رابع الأربعة و هكذا لا يوجب تغيرا في ذاته و لا في صفاته المتضررة فكذلك تغير الإضافات لا يوجب في واجب الوجود تغيرا لا في ذاته و لا في صفاته الكمالية و فهم هذا المعنى بعد الإحاطة بما قدمنا غير صعب

فصل (٧) في أن تحصل كل من المتضايفين كتحصل الآخر إن كان جنسا فجنس و إن نوعا فنوع و إن صنفا فصنف و إن شخصا فشخص

فالأبوة إذا أخذت مطلقة فبإزائه البنوة المطلقة و إذا أخذت أبوة نوعية فبإزائه بنوة كذلك و إذا حصلت الأبوة حتى صارت شخصية صار الجانب الآخر بنوة شخصية - و لكن يجب أن يعلم أن ذلك إنما يطرد إذا كان التحصيل تحصيلاً للإضافة أما إذا كان تحصيلاً لموضوع الإضافة لم يلزم أن يتحصل المضاف المقابل له فإن من الموضوعات الشخصية ما يضيف الإضافات كما يقال ابن هذا الرجل فإن ابن الشخص يصح أن يحمل على جماعة لا يجب انحصارهم في عدد معين بحيث لا يصح الزيادة عليه بل أبوة زيد لعمر و يتعين بتعيينهما جميعاً و جانب الأبوة و إن كان قد يتوهم أنه يخالف ما قلناه - لكن هو مثله و إن كان لا يصح أن يقال لزيد أبوان أو أمان لأن ذلك بسبب خارجي - لا أن الإضافة من طرف واحد يتشخص دون الطرف الآخر بل في بعض يحتاج الإضافة في التعيين الشخصي إلى اعتبار أكثر من تعيين اللذين بينهما الإضافة و لا يكفي فيهما ما يكفي في تعيين الأبوة التي هي لعمر و بالنسبة إلى زيد بتعيينهما كجواز زيد لعمر و

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٠٨

فإنه لا يتشخص بتعيينهما بل يحتاج إلى تعيين داريهما مع تعيينهما فمن المضاف ما هو جنس عال بعد المقولة كالموافق

و منه ما هو جنس متوسط دونه كالمساوي و أدنى منه كالمساوي في السطح و بعده المساوي في الشكل كالمثلثين و بعده ما في المثلثين القائم الزاوية و أخص منه إذا كان القائم الزاوية زاويتيها الباقيتان متساويتان فهذه تحصيلات فصلية.

و أما التحصيل الصنفي فهو أن يتحصل الإضافة لموضوع ثم يقتزن بذلك الموضوع عارض غريب لو لم يكن لم يبعد أن يبقى تلك الطبيعة من الإضافة كأبوة الرجل العادل و أبوة الرجل الجائر

فصل (٨) في تقسيم المضاف من وجوه

منها أن من المضاف ما هو مختلف في الجانبين

كالأب و الابن و كالضعف و النصف و كالجذر و المجذور و منه ما هو متفق فيهما كالمساوي و المساوي و الأخ و الأخ و الجار و الجار.

ثم المختلف قد يكون اختلافه محدودا كالنصف و الضعف و منه ما لا يكون محدودا و غير المحدود منه ما يكون مبنيا على محدود كالكثير الأضعاف و القليل الأضعاف و الكل و الجزء منه و منه ما ليس محدودا و لا مبنيا على المحدود مثل الزائد و الناقص.

و منها أن المضافين إما شيئان غير محتاجين في عروض الإضافة إلى اتصافهما بصفة أخرى

حقيقية غير وجود الموضوع مثل المتيامن و المتياسر و المتقدم و المتأخر.

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٠٩

و إما أن يكون في كل منهما صفة حقيقية غير ذات الموضوع لأجلها صار مضافا كالعاشق و المعشوق فإن في العاشق هيئة إدراكية هي إضافة العشق و في المعشوق هيئة مدركة لأجلها صار معشوقا لعاشقه و إما أن يكون في أحدهما مثل العالم و المعلوم - فإن العالم يحصل في ذاته كيفية هي العلم صار بها مضافا و المعلوم لم يحصل في ذاته شيء آخر به صار معلوما.

هذا ما يستفاد من كلام الشيخ و غيره و لي فيه نظر كما قدمنا بيانه.

و منها ما قال الشيخ في الشفاء يكاد يكون المضافات منحصرة في أقسام المعادلة - و التي بالزيادة و التي بالفعل و الانفعال و مصدرها من القوة و التي بالمحاكاة.

فأما التي بالزيادة فإما من الكم و هو ظاهر و أما من القوة فكالغالب و القاهر و المانع.

و أما التي بالفعل و الانفعال فكالأب و الابن و القاطع و المنقطع و التي بالمحاكاة كالعلم و المعلوم و الحس و المحسوس فإن العلم يحاكي هيئة المعلوم و الحس يحاكي هيئة المحسوس و وجه الضبط لا يخلو تحصيله عن صعوبة.

و منها أن المضاف عارض لجميع المقولات

ففي الجوهر كالأب و الابن و العالم و المعلوم و في الكم أما المتصل فكالعظيم و الصغير و أما المنفصل فكالكثير و القليل و في كيف كالأحر و الأبرد و في المضاف كالأقرب و الأبعد و في الأين كالعالي و السافل و في المتى كالأقدم و الأحدث و في النصفة كالأشد انتصابا و انحناء و في الملك كالأكسى و الأعرى و في الفعل كالأقطع و الأصرم و في الانفعال كالأشد تسخنا و تقطعا و الأضعف

فصل (٩) في أن المضاف هل يقبل التضاد والأشد والأضعف أم لا

واعلم أن المضاف بما هو مضاف طبيعة غير مستقلة الوجود بنفسها كما تبين

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢١٠

فهي تابعة في جميع الأحكام الوجودية لوجود موضوعاتها والتضاد والتقدم والتأخر والقوة والفعل وأشباهها من أحوال الوجود يعرض للموضوعات الإضافية بالذات ولإضافاتها بالعرض ومن هذا القبيل التضاد فإذا اعتبر بين الحار والبارد تضاد حقيقي كان بين إضافتهما أي الأحر والأبرد تضاد بالتبع وأما عروض التضاد لشيء من المضافين مع قطع النظر عن موضوعيهما فذلك غير صحيح.

واعلم أنه قد ذكر الشيخ في باب الكم عند بيانه أن العظيم لا يضاد الصغير - ما يشعر بأن التضاد لا يعرض للإضافات و يبين ذلك بوجهين - أحدهما أن تقابل التضاد ليس بعينه تقابل التضايف بل المتضادان يعرضهما إضافة التضاد وذلك لأننا قد نجد طبائع الأضداد لا يتضايف ونجد كثيرا من المتضايفين لا تضاد بينهما كالعلم والمعلوم والجوار والجار. ثم نعلم أن التضاد من حيث هو تضاد من باب التضايف فيجب أن يكون في المتضادين شيء لا تضايف فيه فلما كان التضاد من حيث هو تضاد متضايفا بقي أن يكون الشيء الذي في المتضادين و ليس بمتضايف هو موضوعات التضاد فثبت أن المضادة لا يوجد إلا في موضوعات غير متضايفة.

و الثاني أن الإضافات طبائع غير مستقلة بأنفسها فيمتنع أن يعرض لها التضاد - لأن أقل درجات العروض أن يكون مستقلا بتلك المعروضة.

ثم إنه قال في باب الإضافة أن المضاف يعرض له ما يعرض لمقولته ولما كانت الضعفية تعرض للكم و كان لا مضادة للكم لم يعرض للضعفية مضادة ولما كانت الفضيلة عارضة للكيف و هي تضاد الرذيلة جاز أن يعرض لهذه الإضافة تضاد و كذلك الحار لما كان ضدا للبارد كان الأحر ضدا للأبرد و لا تناقض بين كلاميه كما توهمه بعض المتأخرين لما أشرنا إليه.

فيحمل كلامه على أن نفي التضاد عنها باعتبار ذاتها استقلالا وإثباته لها من

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢١١

جهة اتباعها لبعض موضوعاتها فالشيخ أطلق القول في باب الكم أن الإضافات لا تتضاد و عنى بذلك أنها لا تتضاد استقلالا لأنها لا تضاد تبعا في مواضع أخرى غير أنواع الكم و أفراده.

فإذا تبين هذا فنقول و هكذا القياس في قبول المضاف الأشد والأضعف والأزيد والأنقص فكل مقولة يقبل شيئا من هذه المعاني يقبله المضاف بتبعية موضوعة فهذه أحكام و أحوال كلية للمضاف و لا بأس بذكر أحكام لبعض أقسامها

فصل (١٠) في الكلي والجزئي والذاتي والعرضي

[المانى الثلاثة للكلي]

مفهوم الكلي وصف إضافي عارض للماهيات و هو اشتراكه بين كثيرين و ما من ماهية غير الوجود إلا و يمكن أن يعرضه هذا الوصف و إنما يخرج هذا الوصف لها من القوة إلى الفعل عند حدوث أفرادها و هذه الكلية الإضافية غير

كون الشيء بحيث يحتمل صدقه على كثيرين أو اشتراكه بينها و ذلك أن الكلي قد يراد به مجرد هذا الوصف و قد يراد به معروضه و قد يراد به مجموع الأمرين و مرادنا هذا نفس هذا الوصف الإضافي و كذلك الجنسية وصف إضافي عارض لبعض الماهيات فالجنس أيضا قد يراد به معروض هذا الوصف و هو الحيوان و قد يراد به نفس هذا الوصف و قد يراد به مجموع العارض و المعروض.

فالأول يسمى جنسا طبيعيا و الثاني منطقيا و الثالث عقليا و الأول أي المفهوم الكلي مضاف بسيط و الثاني مقولة و الثالث مضاف مركب و هذا الكلام في النوع و الفصل و الخاصة و العرض و هذه الإضافات كلها ذهنيات.

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢١٢

إذا عرفت ذلك فنقول الكلي الذي هو المعنى الإضافي جنس لخمس أنواع - الجنس و النوع و الفصل و الخاصة و العرض و يراد بهذه الأمور مفهوماتها لا معروضاتها لا المركب منها و من معروضاتها بل نفس هذه الأوصاف الإضافية و لأجل ذلك كان المقسم لها معروضا للجنسية بالقياس إليها و صار كالجنس الطبيعي و كل من الخمسة نوعا لها و إن لم يكن بالقياس إلى أفراد طبيعة موضوعة كذلك بل كان جنسا أو فصلا أو غيرهما فالنوع بهذا المعنى غير مندرج تحت الجنس بهذا المعنى بل هما متباينان تباين أخصين تحت أعم واحد.

و إذا قيل إن النوع مندرج تحت الجنس و إن الفصل و الجنس داخلان في ماهية - ما عني به أن وصف النوعية تحت وصف الجنسية و لا أن مفهوم الفصل و الجنس داخل في ماهية النوع أو في وصف النوعية بل عنوا بذلك أن موضوع النوعية أي النوع الطبيعي - مندرج تحت معروض الجنسية أو يدخل في ماهيته إذا كانت مركبة طبيعة جنسية أي ماهية موصوفة بأنه جنس.

و كذا الكلام في الفصل و دخوله في النوع و أما الأوصاف الخمسة فكلها أنواع حقيقية متباينة تحت جنس واحد هو الكلي بما هو كلي و حمل الجنس عليه حمل عارض إضافي على معروضه و لكن حمل الكلية على الجنسية حمل مقوم جنسي على متقوم به.

فهذه اعتبارات لطيفة دقيقة لا بد من تفتن لها لأن الجهل بها و الإغفال عنها يوجب الغلط كثيرا فإن الكلي مثلا قد يراد به نفس الطبيعة التي من شأنها أن يعقل عنها صورة تعرض لها الكلية و قد يعني به الطبيعة التي تعرض لها الكلية و قد يعني به كون الطبيعة مشتركة بالفعل بين كثيرين و قد يراد كون الطبيعة بحيث يصدق عليها أنها لو قارنت نفسها لا هذه المادة و الأعراض بل تلك المادة و الأعراض لكان ذلك الشخص الآخر و هذه المعاني كلها غير الكلي بالمعنى المنطقي.

و القوم اتفقوا على وجود المعنى الأول و الثاني و الرابع منها في الأعيان

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢١٣

و اختلفوا في وجود المعنى الثالث

و هو الصور المفارقة الأفلاطونية و قد سبق منا أن الكلي الطبيعي غير موجود بالذات بل الموجود بالذات هو الوجود الخاص - و قد أحكمنا أيضا البنيان الأفلاطوني و شيدنا قواعد ذلك بعد الاندراست.

و من جملة أقسام المضاف الكل و الجزء و إضافتهما غير إضافة الكلّي و الجزئي - و الفرق بينهما و بين هذين من وجوه - أحدها أن الكل من حيث هو كل موجود في الخارج و أما الكلّي من حيث هو كلي فلا وجود له إلا في الذهن. و الثاني أن الكل يعد بأجزائه و الكلّي لا يعد بجزئياته.

الثالث أن الكلّي قد يكون مقوما للجزئي و الكل يكون مقوما بالجزء.

الرابع أن طبيعة الكل لا يصير هو الجزء و أما طبيعة الكلّي فإنها تصير بعينها جزئية مثل الإنسان فإنه صار عين هذا الإنسان.

و الخامس أن الكل لا يكون كلا بكل جزء منه وحده و الكلّي كلي بكل جزئي وحده لأنه محمول عليه.

السادس أن أجزاء الكل محصورة غير متناهية و جزئيات الكلّي غير متناهية.

و من جملة أقسام الإضافات و التام و الناقص و المكتفي و فوق التمام فالتام هو الذي يحصل له جميع ما ينبغي أن يكون حاصلًا له و هو الكامل أيضا و هو المقول على أشياء كثيرة.

فتارة يقال للعدد إنه تام إذا كان جميع ما ينبغي أن يوجد لشيء من العدد - يكون قد حصل له و الجمهور لا يطلقون على عدد هو أقل من الثلاثة أنه تام و كون الثلاثة تامة لأن لها مبدءا و وسطا و نهاية و العلة في ذلك أنه لا شيء من الأعداد يمكن أن يكون تاما في عدديته إذ يوجد في عدد أزيد منه ما ليس فيه بل إنما يكون تاما في العشرية أو في الخمسية. و أما من حيث هو مبدءا و منتهى يكون ناقصا من جهة أنه ليس بينهما ما من شأنه

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢١٤

أن يكون بينهما و هو الوسطة و قس على ذلك سائر الأقسام و هو أن يوجد المبدءا و الوسطة فقط أو العكس و لا واسطة ثم من المحال أن يكون مبدئان في الأعداد - ليس أحدهما واسطة بوجه إلا لعددین و كذا القول في المنتهى. و أما الوسائط فقد يجوز أن يكون كثيرا لأن جملتها في أنها واسطة كشيء واحد ثم لا يكون للكثير حد توقف عليه فإذا حصول البداية و النهاية و التوسط غاية التمام و أقل عدد يوجد فيه ذلك هو الثلاثة.

فهذه حكاية ما ذكره الشيخ في الشفاء و تارة يقال تامة للمقادير كما يقال - فلان تام القامة إذا كانت محدودة بما يليق بأمثاله إذ المقادير لا تعرف إلا بالتحديد الذي يلزمه التقدير و تارة يقال للكيفيات و القوى إنها تامة مثل أن يقال هذا تام القوة و تام الحس و تام العلم و تارة يقال تمام في اصطلاح الحكماء و يريدون به أن يكون جميع كمالات الشيء حاصلة له بالفعل و ربما يشترطون في ذلك أن يكون وجوده و كمالات وجوده له من نفسه لا من غيره.

و إذا كان مع ذلك مبدءا لكمالات غيره فهو فوق التمام لأن فيه الوجود الذي ينبغي له بكماله و قد فضل عنه وجود غيره أيضا و ليس في الموجودات شيء بهذه الصفة إلا واجب الوجود.

و أما العقول فهي تامة بالتفسير الأول و غير تامة بالتفسير الثاني فإن الممكنات الفاقرات الهويات معدومة في حدود ذواتها و أما الذي دون التمام فهو قسمان - أحدهما المكتفي و هو الذي أعطى ما به يتمكن من تحصيل كمالاته مثل النفوس التي للسماويات فإنها أبدا في اكتساب كمالاتها من غير حاجة لها إلى مكمل خارجي - كالمعلم البشرية فينا بل مكملها و معلمها و مخرجها من القوة إلى الفعل جوهر عقلي فياض غير مباين الوجود لوجوداتها و كذلك حال نفوس الأنبياء ع - لأنهم أيضا مكتفون حيث أعطاهم الله ما به تمكنوا من تحصيل كمالاتهم و قرباتهم من الله

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢١٥

كما ستعرف جميع ذلك في مواضعه و الآخر الناقص و هو الذي يحتاج إلى أمر خارج - يمدّه بالكمال مثل الأشياء التي تكون في الكون و الفساد.

و الفرق بين التام و بين الكل و الجميع بالاعتبار فإنها متقاربة المعاني و ذلك بأن التام ليس من شرطه أن يحيط بكثرة بالفعل و لا بالقوة مثل كون الباري تاما و الكل و الجميع من شرطهما ذلك.

و أما التمام و الكل فيما فيه كثرة فهما متحدان في الموضوع و الفرق بأنه بالقياس إلى الكثرة الموجودة المحصورة فيه كل و بالقياس إلى ما يبقى شيء خارجا عنه تام.

فإن قلت فما معنى قول بعض أساطين الحكمة و التحقيق أن الباري كل الأشياء و قد تقرر أن كون الشيء كلا لا بد فيه من حضور كثرة في ذاته.

قلت ذلك معنى غامض حق يلزم من بساطته و أحديته أن يكون بحيث لم يكن حقيقة من الحقائق خارجا من ذاته بذاته و مع كونه كل الأشياء لا يوجد فيه شيء من الأشياء حتى يكون هناك كثرة لا بالفعل و لا بالقوة

المقالة الثانية في بقية المقولات و فيه فصول

فصل (١) في حقيقة الأين

عرف الأين بأنه هو كون الشيء حاصلًا في مكانه و ينبغي أن لا يكون نفس نسبة الشيء إلى مكانه و إلا لكان نوعا من مقولة المضاف بل أمرا و هيئة يعرض له الإضافة إلى مكانه.

و ربما قيل كما أن السواد له ماهية و إضافة المحل عرض لمهيته فكذا الأين له ماهية و كونه في المكان إضافة عارضة لها و هو ليس بشيء فإن كون الشيء

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢١٦

في المكان ليس ككون السواد في المحل فإن وجود السواد بعينه هو وجوده في المحل لا أمر زائد على وجوده و إن لم يكن عين مهيته لكن زيادة الوجود على الماهية إنما هي بحسب التصور لا بحسب الواقع و هذا بخلاف كون الشيء في المكان فإنه لا بد أن يكون هذا الكون في المكان أمرا زائدا على وجوده في نفسه و إلا لم يكن صفة زائدة على هذا الجوهر الجسماني و لكان قد بطل وجوده في نفسه عند مفارقة مكانه - و حصل له وجود آخر و لصار المعدوم بعينه معادا فليس كون الشيء في المكان كونه في الأعيان فإن كونه في الأعيان نفس وجوده و لو كان كونه في المكان وجودا له لكان كونه في الزمان أيضا وجودا له فكان لشيء واحد وجودات كثيرة.

أقول و يمكن أن يقال إن الشيء الجسماني كونه في المكان المطلق أو في الزمان مطلقا و إن كان هو بعينه نحو وجوده الخاص به لا أمرا زائدا عليه إلا أن كونه في مكان معين أو زمان معين أمر زائد على وجوده في نفسه فذلك الأمر الزائد نسبيته الأين أو المتى و كل منهما غير نفس الإضافة لأن المراد منه مبدء إضافة المكان أو الزمان.

و قد استدلل صاحب المباحث على أن الكون في المكان ليس هو بعينه الكون في الأعيان الذي هو الوجود بوجه آخر و هو أن الوجود وصف مشترك في الموجودات كلها فلو كان حقيقة الوجود في الأعيان هو الكون في المكان لكانت

الموجودات كلها كائنة في المكان و حيث لم يكن كذلك علمنا أن كون الشيء في المكان مفهوم مغاير لوجود الشيء في نفسه.

أقول هو متقوض بكل من الموجودات المخصوصة لجريان ما ذكره فيه فيلزم عليه مما ذكره أن يكون كون الجسم ماديا و كون العقل مفارقا و كون الحيوان

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢١٧

حساسا بأمور زائدة على نفس وجودها و ليس كذلك.

و دفع ما ذكره بأن الوجود المطلق الكلبي كما مر مرارا أمر مشكك عرضي لأفراده و ليس لحقيقة الوجود طبيعة كلية نوعية أو جنسية مشتركة بين جميع أفراد الوجود

فصل (٢) في تقسيم الأين

و هو من طريقتين أحدهما إن من الأين ما هو أول حقيقي و منه ما هو ثان غير حقيقي.

فالأول كون الشيء في مكانه الخاص به الذي لا يسعه فيه غيره معه ككون الماء في الكوز.

و الثاني كما يقال فلان في البيت فإن البيت يسعه و غيره فليس جميع البيت مشغولا به وحده و أبعد منه كونه في الدار و بعده البلد ثم العراق مثلا ثم الإقليم ثم المعمورة ثم عالم العناصر ثم العالم الجسماني باعتبار أن يحويه المحدد للجهات و هذا هو الغاية فإن كون الشيء في العالم مطلقا ليس بأين أصلا.

الطريق الثاني إن الأين منه جنسي و هو الكون في المكان و منه نوعي و هو الكون في الهواء أو الماء أو فوق أو تحت و منه شخصي ككون هذا الشخص في هذا الوقت في مكانه الحقيقي و قد يقال إنه لا بد لكل أين شخص حقيقي من صفة قائمة بالتممكن هي علة ذلك الأين.

و اعترض عليه صاحب المباحث بأن هذا باطل لأن تلك الصفة إما أن يكون ممكن الحصول في المتمكن عند ما لا يكون في مكانه الحقيقي المعين أو لا يكون - فإن أمكن لم تكن تلك الصفة علة لذلك الكون في المكان المعين و إلا لزم تخلف المعلول عن علته و إن لم يكن فحينئذ يتوقف حصولها في المتمكن على حصوله

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢١٨

في ذلك المكان المعين فلو توقف الحصول في ذلك المكان على حصول تلك الصفة فيه لزم الدور و هو محال.

أقول فيه نظر من وجهين أحدهما إن تلك الصفة يمكن أن يكون جزء من العلة أو معدا أو شرطاً فلا يلزم مقارنتها للمعلول على وجه الضرورة.

و ثانيهما إن حصول تلك الصفة و إن لم يتحقق إلا عند كون المتمكن في مكانه لكن ذلك بحسب الظرفية المقارنة لا بحسب السببية و التقدم و الفرق بين المعنيين كالفرق بين القضية المشروطة ما دام الوصف و المشروطة بشرط الوصف - و الثانية أخص من الأولى و الأعم لا يستلزم الأخص فإن كل كاتب يحتاج إلى حركة الأصابع في وقت الكتابة و تلك الحركة ضرورية على ذلك الوقت بأسبابها المؤدية إليها في ذلك الزمان و ليس أن الكتابة أوجبت تلك الحركة بل العكس أولى فإن وجود تلك الحركة يقتضي وجود الكتابة في الخارج

فصل (٣) في تنمة أحوال الأين فمنها أنه يعرض له التضاد

فإن الكون في المكان الذي عند المحيط هو مقابل للكون الذي عند المركز و هما أمران وجوديان بينهما غاية التضال و لا يجتمعان في موضوع واحد في آن واحد و صح تعاقبهما عليه فهما متضادان.

و منها أنه يقبل الأشد و الأضعف

لكن قبوله لهما ليس بحسب جنس الأين - فإن كون الشيء في مكانه لا يكون أشد من كون شيء آخر في مكانه لأن مفهوم الحصول في المكان لا يقبل الشدة و الضعف بل إنما يقبل الجسمان الأشد و الأضعف بحسب طبيعة نوعية لمكانها كالقوى أو تحت أو فيهما [غيرهما] كالجسمين إذا كانا في القوى و أحدهما أعلى من الآخر أي كان أقرب إلى الحد الذي هو المحيط فهو أشد فوقية من الآخر.

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢١٩

فقد ثبت من هذا أن الأشد و الأنقص لم يتطرق إلى نفس الأين بما هو أين - بل إلى نوع منه و هو القوى أو تحت و لكن ليس كما زعمه صاحب المباحث أن ذلك الأشد و الأضعف إنما هو في إضافة عارضة للأين و هو القوى و التحتية لما مر من أن الإضافة ليست قابلة للأشد و الأضعف لذاتها

فصل (٤) في حقيقة متى و أنواعه

من جملة ما عد من المقولات متى

و هو كون الشيء في زمان واحد أو في حد منه فإن كثيرا من الأشياء يقع في أطراف الأزمنة و لا يقع في الأزمنة مع أنه يستل عنها بمتى كالوصلات و المماسات و سائر الأشياء الواقعة لوقوعها في أمر له تعلق ما بالزمان و حال هذا الكون بعينه حال ما قبله و أمر متى العام و الخاص باعتبار كون الشيء في زمان مطلق أو زمان خاص أو [زمان] شخص.

فمنه ما هو متى حقيقي

و هو كون الشيء له زمان مطابق له لا يفضل عنه -

و منه ما هو ثان غير حقيقي

و هو كون هذه الحركة الواقعة في ساعة مثلا في أول اليوم أو في الشهر أو في السنة أو في القرن أو في زمان الإسلام أو في الزمان مطلقا على قياس ما مر في الأين و الفرق بين البابين أن الزمان الحقيقي الواحد يشترك فيه الكثيرون.

و أما المكان الحقيقي الواحد فلا يشترك فيه كثيرون هكذا قيل و ليس بسديد فإن عدم الشركة في المكان الحقيقي إنما يصح القول به مع وحدة الزمان حقيقة فكذا مع وحدة المكان حقيقة لا يمكن الشركة في الزمان الحقيقي فكما

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٢٠

أن لكل متمكن أينما يخصه فكذا لكل حادث متى يخصه و لا تكون مشتركة بينه و بين غيره و لذا قيل لكل من الزمان و المكان أسوة بالآخر.

ثم قالوا إن الأمور التي لها متى بالذات هي الحركات و المتحركات لا متى لها من حيث جوهرها بل من حيث حركاتها و

جواهرها في الزمان بالعرض.

أقول إن وجود الطبيعة الجوهرية متجددة سيالة فذلك كون تدريجي يطابق الزمان و كذا بعض الكميات و الكيفيات و الأوضاع و الأيون التدريجية الوجود لها أكون تدريجية و الحركة عبارة عن تدرج واقع في الكون لا الكون التدريجي فهي معنى نسبي إضافي و قد مر أن المعنى الإضافي لا يوصف بالزيادة و النقصان و الأشد و الانقاص إلا بالعرض فالمتى إنما يلحق أولا و بالذات لتلك الأكون و الوجودات - و ثانيا لمهياتها و أما الحركة فلا تدرج لها بل هي عين التدرج فلا متى لها بالذات بل بالعرض.

و اعلم أن من اقتصر في تعريف الزمان أنه مقدار الحركة من جهة التقدم و التأخر فيلزمه من جهة الاقتصار على هذا التعريف أن يكون مقدار كل حركة في العالم العنصري أيضا زمنا بنفسه فيحتاج إلى التقييد بأمر آخر و هو أن يوجد في الحد مقدار حركة الفلك أو حركة لا تنقطع أو أظهر الحركات أو أسرعها أو أشدها

فصل (٥) في الوضع

و هو كون الجسم بحيث يكون لأجزائه بعضها إلى بعض نسبة في الجهات المختلفة

كالقيام و القعود و ليس هو النسبة و ذلك لأن النسبة و إن كانت واقعة بين أجزائه لكنها من باب الإضافة كالجوار و نحوه بل كون الجسم بحيث يكون لأجزائه هذه النسب

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٢١

هو الوضع كما مر.

و قد مرت الإشارة أيضا إلى أن هذا الوضع ليس الوضع الذي يوجد في النقطة و هو كون الشيء مشارا إليه بالحس و ليس الوضع المذكور في الكم - فإن هذا الوضع يعتبر فيه نسب الأجزاء إلى الحاوي و المحوي و الجهات الخارجية و الوضع المذكور في تقسيم الكم لا يعتبر فيه ذلك و لكن الذي ذكروا فيه من كون الشيء بحيث يشار إليه أنه أين هو مما يتصل به اتصالا ثابتا لا يخلو عن خلط - فإن هذا الأين لو كان أينا حقيقيا لم يبق فرق بين الوضع بهذا المعنى و الذي هو نفس المقولة فإن الأجزاء ليس لها أين بالفعل و ليست أيونها مما ينضاف بعضها إلى بعض - على وجه يقال لبعض منها أنها أين هي من الآخر.

و لو فرق بينهما بأن أحدهما للمقدار و الآخر للجسم الطبيعي فنقول إن الجسم الطبيعي إنما يلحق الوضع إليه بتوسط المقدار التعليمي و لو لا عروض المقدار لم يصح له فرض التجزي و القسمة المقدارية كما بين في باب الكم فيلحق الوضع الجسم كيفما كان بتوسط المقدار.

و الحق عندنا أنه لا بد من تحصيل الفرق بين الوضع الذي من خواص الجسم و الوضع الذي يوجد في الكم و أطرافه لأن مجرد كون الشيء كما أو مقدارا متصلا لا يكفي لقبوله الإشارة الحسية بأنه هاهنا أو هناك أو في الفوق أو في التحت أو جهة من جهات إنما ذلك شأن الكم الاتصالي مع اقترائه بالمادة القابلة للانفعالات - و الحركات و الاختلافات فمجرد المقدار لا يقبل الإشارة الحسية بل الخيالية لكن القوم قد تسامحوا و أطلقوا الحس و أرادوا ما يقابل العقل فالنقطة و الخط و السطح و الثخن كلها ليس شيء منها في ذاته واقعة في جهة من الجهات و لا للحس إليها إشارة

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٢٢

إلا مع المادة بأن كان وجوده في المادة مصححا لقبوله للإشارة والجهة والانقسام وغير ذلك فإن المقدار إذا فرض مجردا عن المادة كما في الخيال كان ذا نهاية مقدارية وذا أجزاء لها هيئة اتصال بمعنى غير ما ذكره من كونها على وجه يقال لكل منها أين هو من صاحبه ويتصور له أيضا شكل من غير أن يكون للشكل أين. وله أيضا سطوح وخطوط لها أوضاع بمعنى آخر وللخط نقطة لها وضع خاص لا بمعنى الإشارة الحسية. وبالجمله فكما للعقل إشارة وللحس إشارة غيرها فكذا للقوة الخيالية إشارة إلى المقادير وأطرافها غير تينك الإشارتين وللعقل وضع يختص بالعقليات والكليات وللخيال وضع يوجد للأشباح الإدراكية وللحس وضع يختص بالماديات سواء كان للنقطة أو للمقدار المنقسم في بعض الجهات لا كلها أو في الجسم المنقسم في جميع الجهات - والوضع الذي هو من المقولة هو هذا المعنى الأخير وكذا الوضع الذي جزء المقولة - لا يوجد إلا في عوارض المادة. فإن النقطة ما لم تقع في هذا العالم لم يكن قابلا للإشارة الحسية والخط والسطح ما لم يقعا في المادة القابلة لم يكن أجزاءهما بحيث يصح أن يقال يعرض لبعض منها بالقياس إلى بعض أين هو من الآخر.

ثم الوضع قد يكون بالطبع وقد يكون لا بالطبع

وقد يكون بالفعل وقد يكون بالقوة - والذي بالطبع وبالفعل كوضع الأرض من الفلك فإن حيزيهما متميزان بالفعل واما الذي بالفعل وليس بالطبع كحال ساكن البيت من البيت فإن الوضع حاصل لهما بالفعل لكن اختلاف حيزيهما ليس اختلافا طبيعيا واما الذي بالقوة كما يتوهم قرب دائرة الرحى إلى قطبها ونسبته إلى دائرة القطب ليست بالفعل إذ لا دائرة بالفعل فلا وضع إلا بالتوهم أو بالقوة والوضع مما يقع فيه التضاد والشدّة والضعف. أما التضاد فكون الإنسان رأسه إلى السماء ورجله إلى الأرض مضادا لوضعه إذا صار معكوسا والوضعان معنيان وجوديان متعاقبان على موضوع واحد من غير أن

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٢٣

يجتمعا فيه وبينهما غاية الخلاف وكذا الحال في الاستلقاء والانبطاح.

وأما الشدة فكالأشد انتصابا أو الأكثر انحناء.

فإن قلت أليس قد مر في مباحث الكيف المختص بالكم أنه لا يقبل التضاد ولا الشدة وحكمتكم بأن استدارة الخط أو تحديب السطح لا يشتد ولا يضعف فهنا كيف يحكمون بأن الاستقامة والانحناء يقبلان التفاوت مع أن هذه الصفات لا يعرض أولا إلا للمقادير.

أقول نسبة هذه الاستقامة والانحناء وأمثالها إلى المذكور هناك كنسبة هذا الوضع الذي هو المقولة إلى تلك الأوضاع فالمستدير مثلا إذا كان مجردا عن المادة - لا يمكن أن يصير أشد استداره مع بقاء الموضوع إذ لا مادة هناك حتى يقبل التبدل - بخلاف ما إذا وقع شيء من الاستدارة والانحناء أو غيرهما في مادة مخصوصة لأنه يصير حينئذ واقعا تحت مقولة الوضع ويقبل التضاد والشدّة والضعف وغير ذلك فالانحناء الطبيعي يقبل الأشد دون التعليمي وهذا من مقولة الوضع دون ذلك.

فاعلم هذا فإنه شيء يغفل عنه الأكثرون

فصل (٦) في الجدة

و مما عد في المقولات الجدة و الملك و هو هيئة تحصل بسبب كون جسم في محيط بأكمله أو بعضه بحيث ينتقل المحيط بانتقال المحاط مثل التسليح و التقمص و التعمم و التختم و التنعل - و ينقسم إلى طبيعي كحال الحيوان بالنسبة إلى إهابه و غير طبيعي كالتسليح و التقمص - و قد يعبر عن الملك بمقولة له فمنه طبيعي ككون القوى للنفس و منه اعتبار خارجي ككون الفرس لزيد ففي الحقيقة الملك يخالف هذا الاصطلاح فإن هذا من مقولة المضاف لا غير

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٢٤

فصل (٧) في مقولتي أن يفعل و أن يفعل

أما الأول فهو كون الجوهر بحيث يحصل منه أثر في غيره غير قار الذات ما دام السلوك في هذا التأثير التجدي كالتسخين ما دام يسخن و التبريد ما دام يبرد.

و أما الثاني فهو كون الجوهر بحيث يتأثر عن غيره تأثيراً غير قار الذات ما دام كونه كذلك مثل التسخين و التسود. فإذا فرغ الفاعل من فعله أو المنفعل من انفعاله و بالجملة عن النسبة التي بينهما من تجدد التأثير و التأثر لا يقال إن هذا محرك و ذاك متحرك و ينتهي التسخين إلى السخونة القارة - و التسود إلى السواد القار فالتعبير عنهما بأن يفعل دون الفعل و بأن يفعل دون الانفعال لأجل أن الفعل و الانفعال قد يقالان للإيجاد بلا حركة و للقبول بلا تجدد ككون الباري فاعلاً للعالم و كون العالم منفعلاً عنه و ليس في ذلك حركة لا في جانب الفاعل و لا في جانب القابل بل وجود يستتبع وجوداً و يعرض لهما إضافة فقط فالفاعل و المنفعل بذلك المعنى إضافتان فقط بخلاف هذين المعنيين الواقعيين تحت الزمان. و أما الحالة التي تقع للفاعل المتجدد عند انقطاع تحريكه و للمنفعل عند انقطاع تحريكه كالقطع في نهاية الحركة و احتراق الثوب بعد استقراره فهل تكونان من هذين البابين أم لا.

فنقول هما من حيث تخصيصهما بأنهما في نهاية الحركتين يصح عدتهما من هاتين المقولتين و كذا الحال في جميع ما يقع في حدود الحركة و أطرافها الدفعية - و إذا لم يعتبر تخصيصهما كذلك فليسا من المقولتين و قد يعرض في هاتين المقولتين

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٢٥

التضاد و الاشتداد.

و أما التضاد فالتبويض ضد التسويد و التسخين ضد التبريد كما أن البياض ضد السواد و السخونة ضد البرودة. و أما الاشتداد فإن من الاسوداد الذي هو في السلوك إلى غاية ما هو أقرب إلى الاسوداد الذي هو في الغاية من اسوداد آخر و كذلك قد يكون بعض التسويد - أسرع وصولاً إلى الغاية من بعض آخر منهما [منه] و هذا الاشتداد و التناقص غير الشدة و النقص اللذين في الكيف كالسواد فإنهما ليسا بالقياس إلى السواد نفسه بل بالقياس إلى الاسوداد الذي هو عبارة عن الحركة إلى السواد فإن السلوك إلى السواد غير السواد هذا ما قيل.

و اعلم أن وجود كل منهما في الخارج ليس عبارة عن نفس السلوك إلى مرتبة - فإنه بعينه معنى الحركة و لا أيضاً وجود كل منهما وجود المقولة التي يقع بها التحريك و التحرك كالكيف مثل السواد و الكم مثل مقدار الجسم النامي أو الوضع

كالجلوس و الانتصاب و لا غير ذلك بل وجودهما عبارة عن وجود شيء من هذه المقولات ما دام يؤثر أو يتأثر فوجود السواد أو السخونة مثلا من حيث إنه سواد من باب مقولة الكيف و وجود كل منهما من حيث كونه تدريجيا يحصل منه تدريجي آخر أو يحصل من تدريجي آخر هو من مقولة أن يفعل أو أن يفعل. و أما نفس سلوكه التدريجي أي خروجه من القوة إلى الفعل سواء كان في جانب الفاعل أو في جانب المنفعل فهو عين الحركة لا غير فقد ثبت نحو وجودهما في الخارج و عرضيتهما

فصل (٨) في دفع ما أورد على موجوديتهما

و قال صاحب المباحث في هذا المقام عندي أن تأثير الشيء في الشيء يستحيل أن

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٢٦

يكون وصفا ثبوتيا زائدا على ذات المؤثر و ذات الأثر و كذا تأثر الشيء عن الشيء و هو قابليته - يستحيل أن يكون وصفا ثبوتيا زائدا على ذات القابل و ذات المقبول.

أما التأثير فلو كان أمرا ثبوتيا لكان من جملة الأمور التي لا بد لوجودها من مؤثر أيضا فيكون تأثير ذلك المؤثر في ذلك التأثير زائدا عليه فننقل الكلام إليه و يفضي إلى التسلسل و هو محال و بتقدير أن لا يكون محالا فالإلزام حاصل و ذلك لأنه إذا كان بين كل مؤثر و أثر واسطة هي التأثير حتى فرضت أمور غير متناهية مترتبة فلا يخلو إما أن يكون تلك الأمور متلاقية أو لا يكون شيء منها متلاقية.

فإن تلاقى بمعنى أن يفرض مؤثر و متأثر لا يتخللهما ثالث فحينئذ وجد مؤثر - لا يكون تأثيره زائدا على ذاته و ذات أثره فحينئذ لا يكون تأثير الأول في الثاني زائدا عليهما و لا تأثير الثاني في الثالث و الثالث في الرابع و هكذا أمور زائدة على ذواتها و ذوات آثارها.

و إن لم يتلاقى بمعنى أن لا يوجد هناك أمران لا يتخللهما ثالث فهذا نفي للمؤثرية إذ لم يوجد هناك ما يكون ذاته مؤثرا في ذات آخر و أما القابلية فلو كانت ثبوتية يجري الكلام بعينه فيه و يعود التسلسل و المحذور بعينهما.

قال فهذا برهان قاطع على أن المؤثرية و المتأثرية لا يجوز أن يكونا وصفين ثبوتيين و ستعرف في باب العلل أن المؤثرية لو كانت وصفا ثبوتيا يلزم نفي الواجب الوجود تعالى شأنه انتهى ما ذكره تلخيصا.

أقول هذا الكلام بطوله قد نشأ من سوء فهم بعض أصول الحكمة كمسألة الوجود و زيادته على الماهية و أن لكل ماهية نحو خاصا من الوجود و الماهيات كما أنها متخالفة بالمعنى و المفهوم كذلك متخالفة بالوجود لكن وجود بعضها قد يتحد

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٢٧

بوجود الآخر ضربا من الاتحاد و موجودية كل ماهية أو معنى في الخارج عبارة عن صدق حده على شيء في الخارج كما ذكره الشيخ في إثبات نحو وجود المضاف في الخارج بأنه في الأعيان أشياء كثيرة بهذه الصفة أي كونه بحيث إذا عقل عقل معه شيء آخر.

إذا تقرر ذلك فنقول كما أن كثيرا من الموجودات يصدق عليها حد الجوهر - أو الكم أو الكيف و غيرهما و كذا حدود

أنواعها كحد الفلك أو الحيوان أو السواد أو السطح أو غير ذلك فيجزم بوجود هذه المقولات وأجناسها وأنواعها فكذا يوجد في الخارج أمور كثيرة يحمل على بعضها بحسب الخارج حد واحد من هاتين المقولتين وعلى بعض حد الأخرى فيكون كل منهما من الموجودات الخارجية - دون الموهومات التي لا وجود لها في العين ودون المعاني المنطقية كالكلية والجزئية - ومفهوم النوع والجنس والفصل وغيرها من المعقولات الثانية التي شرط عروضها كون الموضوع متعينا في الذهن ودون السلوب والمعاني السلبية.

وذلك لأنه لا معنى لوجود شيء في الخارج إلا كونه بحيث يصدق معناه على شيء صدقا خارجيا كما في محمولات القضايا الخارجية.

و أما الكلام في أن وجودهما هل هو زائد على وجود ذات المؤثر وذات المتأثر - ليكونا من الأعراض أو لا فيكونا من الجواهر فذلك مطلب آخر.

ولك أن تقول في بيان عرضيتهما بأن لكل من المؤثر والمتأثر على الوجه المذكور ماهية أخرى ولها حد آخر غير كونه فاعلا أو منفعلا فإن السواد يمكن وجود نوعه في سواد لا يشتد أي لا يتحرك في سواديته فيكون اسوداده بأمر زائد على سواديته وكذا للتسخين وجود غير تدريجي يتحقق نوع السخونة فيه فكون السخونة مؤثرة في شيء على التدريج أمر زائد على وجود السخونة.

و أما قوله لو كان التأثير أمرا ثبوتيا لكان من جملة الأمور التي لا بد لوجودها من مؤثر.

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٢٨

فنقول إن بعض الصفات وإن احتاجت إلى مؤثر لكن لا يحتاج إلى مؤثر جديد غير جاعل موصوفاتها فإن جعل كما لا يتخلل بين الذات والذاتيات فلا يتخلل أيضا بين وجود الملزوم ووجود لازمة فإن الجاعل كما لا يجعل النار جوهرًا بعد جعلها موجودة فكذا لا يجعلها حارة بعد جعلها موجودة بل جعل وجودها بعينه جعل حرارتها على وجه التبعية مع أن وجود الحرارة غير وجود النارية لأن النار جوهر و الحرارة عرض فكذا الحال فيما نحن فيه.

فنقول التأثير التجديدي وإن كان أمرا موجودا في الخارج لكن من لوازم هوية بعض أفراد المقولات فالحرارة المسخنة مثلا قد لا يكون كونها مسخنة أمرا زائدا على وجود ذاتها الشخصية وإن كان زائدا على ماهيتها ثم على تقدير زيادتها على ذاتها الشخصية قد لا يكون مفتقرا إلى جاعل آخر غير جاعل الذات بل ولا إلى جعل آخر غير جعل الذات لكونه من لوازم تلك الهوية الوجودية ولازم الهوية كلازم الماهية غير مفتقر إلى جعل مستأنف غير جعل تلك الهوية فثبت أن كون التأثير التجديدي - موجودا زائدا على ذات المؤثر ليس مما يحتاج إلى تأثير آخر ولا إلى مؤثر آخر.

وكذا قوله فيكون تأثير المؤثر في ذلك التأثير زائدا عليه غير مسلم إذ لا يلزم من كون التأثير التجديدي الذي هو من مقولة أن يفعل أمرا زائدا على ذات المؤثر أن يكون التأثير الإبداعي أمرا زائدا على ذات الفاعل في الخارج بل هو بعينه إضافة الفاعلية والإبداع ووجود الإضافات قد علمت أنها غير مستقلة في الخارج

الفن الرابع في البحث عن أحكام الجواهر وأقسامها الأولية

فإنها من عوارض الموجود بما هو موجود فحري بها أن يذكر في العلم الكلي الباحث عن عوارض الموجود من غير نظر إلى خصوصيات الأشياء وفيها مقدمة ومطالب

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٢٩

أما المقدمة ففي بيان ماهية الجوهر و العرض و أحوالهما الكلية و فيها فصول

فصل (١) في تحقيق ماهيتهما

اعلم أن مفهومات الأشياء بعضها موجودة بالذات و بعضها موجودة بالعرض.

فمثال الأول قولنا الإنسان حيوان فإن الوجود المنسوب إلى الإنسان بعينه منسوب إلى الحيوان الذي يحمل عليه بالحقيقة.

و مثال الثاني زيد أعمى و زيد أبيض فإن الوجود المنسوب إلى زيد بعينه - ليس منسوباً إلى العمى و البياض بالحقيقة بل بضرب من المجاز بواسطة نحو علاقة للمحمول بالموضوع سواء كان عدماً أو وجودياً و تلك العلاقة أن يكون مبدأ المحمول منتزعا عنه أو قائما به فالوجود في القسم الثاني هو الموضوع و لكن نسب وجوده إلى المحمول بالعرض و هذا النحو من الوجودية غير محدود فلنعرض عنه و نشغل بالموجود بالذات.

فنقول قد علمت أن كل موجود إما أن يصح أن يقال إن إنيته ماهيته بمعنى أن لا ماهية له إلا الوجود الصرف الذي لا أتم منه أو لا يصح فالأول قد سلف بعض أحكامه بحسب المفهوم و سيأتي البحث عن بيان وجوده و أوصافه الكمالية و أحكامه الوجودية - و كلامنا الآن فيما وجوده غير ماهيته بالمعنى الذي سلف منا ذكره أي ليس وجوده بذاته بل بغيره فأقدم أقسام هذه الموجودات هو الجوهر و ذلك لأن هذا الموجود - لا يخلو إما أن يكون في محل أو لا يكون و المراد من كون الشيء في المحل أن يكون وجوده في شيء آخر لا كجزء منه مجامعا معه لا يجوز مفارقه عنه.

و قد أشكل على القوم هاهنا تفسير كون الشيء في محل و استصعبوه لما في لفظة في من الاشتراك و التشابه بين معاني كثيرة كما نقول في الزمان و في المكان و في الذهن و في الخارج و في الغاية و في الكل و في الأجزاء و في العام و في الخصب و في

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٣٠

الراحة و في اللفظ فلا اشتراك لها في معنى واحد يجمع الكل و ليست نفس الإضافة مما يصلح أن يكون مراده بلفظة في و إلا لصدقت على معنى مع و من و على و غيرها من المعاني الحرفية و لصدقت على الأبوة و البنوة و غيرهما. و تخصيص الإضافة بعدم الاستقلال بالمفهومية و غيره و إن أخرج المعاني الاسمية - إلا أن الخصوصية الواحدة منها لا تبلغ في النزول و تقليل الشركاء إلى حيث يشمل المعاني المستعملة فيها لفظة في و يخرج الأغيار و كما أن كلا من معنيي متى و الآن - مما يستعمل فيهما لفظة في و لا يشملهما معنى واحد يخصهما بل لكل منها خصوصية يدخلها فيما وضع له اللفظ.

فكذا القياس إذا انضمت معهما أمور أخرى يكون على هذا المنوال.

نعم يمكن أن يقال إن استعمال في في كثير من هذه المواضع على المجاز التشبيهي ككون الكل في الأجزاء لكونه عين الجميع و ككون الجزء في الكل - فلو كان الكل في الجزء بالمعنى الذي يكون الجزء في الكل يلزم اشتغال الشيء على نفسه و هو أمر مستحيل بداهة.

فإن قلت لفظة في موضوعة لمعنى الاشتمال والإحاطة وهو يجمع الكل فيكون اشتراكه معنويا. قلت الكلام يعود فيما ذكرت جذعا لأنه بعينه معنى الظرفية وهو مختلف فإن ظرفية الزمان للحركة ليست كظرفية المكان للجسم وكذا كون الشيء في الحركة غير كون الحركة في الشيء والغرض أن كون الشيء في المحل ليس له معنى محصل شامل للمواضع التي يستعمل فيها وليس الغرض النظر في معنى اللفظ بما هو معنى اللفظ ليكون خارجا عن هذا الفن وإن كان المذكور أيضا فضلا على ما يقصده السالك المستقيم الطريق. فإذا كان في المحل اشتراكه لفظيا فكل ما ذكره من القيود لا يكون فاصلا معنويا وقيدا احترازيا إذ اللفظ المشترك لا يحتاج إلى أمر مميز معنوي إذ ليس

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٣١

فيه معنى واحد جنسي أو عرض عام بل معاني متعددة ينصرف إلى كل منها بقرينة خارجة لفظية أو معنوية فإن طريق إزالة الشبهة باشتراك الاسم إما بالحد أو بالرسم - أو بنفي المعاني الداخلة تحت الاسم المشترك حتى يدل على ما يبقى لا من ذاته بل بسلب ما ليس هو مقصودا وإذا كان الحال كذلك فالمذكور في تعريف الحلول - وهو وجود الشيء في شيء لا كجزء منه شائعا فيه بالكلية مع امتناع المفارقة عنه يكون كقرائن للفظ في المستعملة في هذا الموضع بالنسبة إلى مواضع الاستعمال - لكونه يقوم مقام الرسم في القيود المترتبة والخواص المميزة مع مساهلة ما بأنه لو فرض هاهنا أن المنسوب إلى شيء ففي كان له معنى مشترك بين ذي المحل وغيره - كان المذكور في التعريف قيودا مميزة لذي المحل من حيث هو ذو المحل عن المشاركات في أمر معنوي فكان يمتاز إما بالشيوع والمجامعة بالكلية فعن كون الخاص في العام و كون الشيء في الزمان والمكان.

و أما بامتناع المفارقة والانتقال فعن الكون في المكان أيضا وفي الخصب وغيره وقد عرف معنى في الشيء هاهنا أي الحلول بتعريفات كثيرة ليس شيء منها خاليا عن الفساد والخلل.

إما طردا أو عكسا أو كليهما كقولهم الاختصاص الناعت و كقولهم اختصاص شيء بشيء بحيث يكون أحدهما نعتا والآخر منوعتا به فانتقض عكسه بالسواد والبياض وغيرهما إن كان المراد بالنعت الحمل بالمواطاة و طرده بالمكان والكوكب بل الجسم مطلقا إن كان المراد به الحمل بالاشتقاق.

و ربما تكلف بعضهم بأن المراد غير الاشتقاق الجعلي و كقولهم إن الحلول كون الشيء ساريا في شيء بحيث يكون الإشارة إلى أحدهما إشارة إلى الآخر.

ثم زادوا قيودا آخر عليه حين ما ورد النقض فيه بأحوال المجردات عن المادة - بقولهم تحقيقا أو تقديرا فبقي النقض بالنقطة والأبوة وغيرها مما لا سراية فيه - فالتجئوا بنفي وجود هذه الأشياء عن الخارج و لم ينتبهوا لأن لا اختصاص لهذا الإيراد

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٣٢

بالأطراف والحدود الخارجية بل النقض وارد بالخياليات والوهميات منها.

وقد ذكرنا في شرح الهداية الأثيرية شطرا من النقوض والأبحاث الواردة على التعاريف المذكورة للحلول.

وأما الذي ألهمنا الله تعالى من خزائن علمه في تعريف الحلول هو أن يقال - معناه كون الشيء بحيث وجوده في نفسه وجوده لشيء آخر على وجه الاتصاف لأن لا يرد النقص بالجواهر الصادرة عن الواجب تعالى والمبادي العالية حسب ما هو التحقيق - من أن وجود المعلول في نفسه هو وجوده لموجده.

وهذا التعريف سالم عن النقوض والإيرادات طردا وعكسا لصدقه على الأعراض والصور الحالة كلها وكذبه عن سائر الحصولات النسبية التي ليست على وجه الحلول - ككون الجزء في الكل والجزئي في الكلي وكون الشيء في الزمان وفي المكان - وفي الراحة وفي الخصب وكحصول الفصل للجنس فإن وجوده عين وجود الجنس لاله وكذا حصول الوجود للماهية لأنه نفس وجودها لا وجود شيء لها كما علمت سابقا وبالجمل لا خلل في هذا التعريف كما يظهر بالتفتيش والتأمل.

وإذا علمت معنى الحلول هكذا علمت أن الحال مفتقر لا محالة إلى محله - إما في وجود ذاته الشخصية وقوام ماهيته النوعية لذاتها جميعا أو في وجود ذاته الشخصية دون حقيقته النوعية حتى يمكن أن يكون لحقيقته نحو من الوجود مستقلا بذاته من غير محل فالأول يسمى عرضا عند الكل والثاني يسمى عند المحصلين من المشائين صورة. فحينئذ نقول لا يجوز أن يكون للمحل افتقار في وجوده إلى الوجود الشخصي للحال سواء كان عرضا أو صورة وإلا لدار الافتقار من الجانبين بجهة واحدة وهو دور مستحيل.

فالمحل إما أن يكون مستغنيا عن الحال حقيقة وتشخصا ماهية وجودا فيسمى باسم الموضوع عند الكل أو يكون مفتقرا في وجوده الشخصي إلى الوجود المطلق العامي

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٣٣

للحال بأي تشخص يكون فيسمى عند هؤلاء بالهيولى فالعرض والصورة يشتركان في أمر يعمهما وهو مفهوم الحال وكذا الموضوع والهيولى يشتركان في أمر يعمهما وهو مفهوم المحل ومحل الشيء سواء كان ذلك الشيء صورة أو عرضا أو عرضا في صورة أو عرضا في عرض إن جاز ذلك لا بد وأن ينتهي آخر الأمر إلى محل لا محل له فيكون مقوما للجميع فكل عرض مفتقر في وجوده إلى الجوهر دون العكس فثبت أن الجوهر أقدم بالطبع من العرض.

وأما عند أتباع الرواقيين فكل حال عرض ولا شيء من الجوهر بحال لكن بعض الأعراض عندهم مقوم للجوهر متقدم عليه لأنهم جوزوا تركيب الجوهر من محل جوهر وحال عرض فليس الجوهر مطلقا متقدما بالطبع على العرض وسيأتي تحقيق هذا المقام من ذي قبل إن شاء الله.

ثم إنهم يفرقون بين الصورة والعرض فرقا اعتباريا لا حقيقيا وكذا بين الموضوع والهيولى وهو أن كل معنى نوعي سواء كان طبيعيا أو صناعيا إذا كان له تألف ما من حال ومحل مطلقين كالسرير مثلا يكون المحل عندهم يسمى مادة كالخشب - والحال يسمى صورة كالهئية المخصوصة باعتبار كونهما جزءين لأمر واحد نوعي مطلقا - وليس من شرط الجزء الصوري عندهم أن يكون محصلا لمحله حتى يكون جوهر - لكون مقوم الجوهر أولى بالجوهريته منه ولا من شرط الجزء المادي أن يكون مفتقرا إلى الحال في نحو وجوده النوعي بل المسمى صورة عندهم هو بعينه نفس العرض مع اشتراط كونه جزأ للمركب وكذا المسمى مادة عندهم نفس الموضوع - مع اعتبار كونه جزء للمركب منه ومن ما يحله فعلى هذا جميع الأعراض المخصصة والمصنفة يصلح عندهم أن يكون صورا ومحالها هيولياتها.

فإذا تقرر تغاير المذهبيين و تخالف الاصطلاحين في هذه المعاني والأسامي - مع ما سلف من ضوابط الميزان أن رفع العام أو لازمه المساوي أخص من رفع الخاص أو لازمه المساوي و قلنا إن معنى الجوهر أو لازمه المساوي له ما لا يكون في موضوع.

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٣٤

فنقول اللاكون في الموضوع أعم من اللاكون في المحل لما عرفت أن الموضوع أخص من المحل عند المشائين فنقيضاهما يكونان بالعكس فيكون الجوهر أعم مما يكون في محل و مما لا يكون فيه إذ كلاهما يندرجان تحت معنى الوجود لا في موضوع.

و كذا العرض و هو ما يكون في موضوع يشمل الحال و المحل عند من جوز قيام العرض بالعرض فيكون أعم من كل منهما بوجه لأن الحال قد يكون عرضا و قد يكون صورة و المحل قد يكون جوهرًا و قد يكون عرضا على هذا التقدير. و إذا ثبت ما ذكرناه فيكون الأقسام الأولية للجوهر على مذهب أولئك القوم خمسة لأنه إما أن يكون في محل أو لا يكون فيه و الكائن في المحل هو الصورة المادية و غير الكائن فيه إما أن يكون محلا لشيء يتقوم به أو لا يكون و الأول هو الهيولى - و الثاني لا يخلو إما أن يكون مركبا من الهيولى و الصورة و هو الجسم أو لا يكون - و حينئذ لا يخلو إما أن يكون ذا علاقة انفعالية بالجسم بوجه من الوجوه و هو النفس أو لا يكون و هو العقل.

و الأجود في هذا التقسيم أن يقال الجوهر إن كان قابلا للابعد الثلاثة فهو الجسم و إلا فإن كان جزء منه هو به بالفعل سواء كان في جنسه أو في نوعه فصورة إما امتدادية أو طبيعية أو جزء هو به بالقوة فمادة و إن لم يكن جزء منه فإن كان متصرفا فيه بالمباشرة فنفس و إلا فعقل و ذلك لما سيظهر من تضعيف ما حققناه من كون الجوهر النفساني الإنساني مادة للصورة الإدراكية التي يتحصل بها جوهرًا آخر كماليا بالفعل من الأنواع المحصلة التي يكون لها نحو آخر من الوجود غير

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٣٥

الوجود الطبيعي الذي لهذه الأنواع المحصلة الطبيعية.

و تحقيق ذلك المرام من فضل الله علينا و جوده

فصل (٢) في تعريف العرض

هذا المقصد و إن خرج من التقسيم الذي وقع لذي المحل مطلقا إلا أنا نورد هاهنا ما ذكر في تعريف العرض اقتداء بالآقدمين.

فنقول العرض هو الموجود في شيء غير متقوم به

لا كجزء منه و لا يصح قوامه دون ما هو فيه فهذه قيود أربعة فقولنا في شيء لاستحالة وجود عرض واحد في شيئين أو ما زاد عليهما.

أما العدد و معنى الكل و البنية و غيرها

فالموضوع في كل منها من حيث كونه موضوعا له أمر واحد لعدم اشتراط كون المحل للعرض واحدا حقيقيا بل يكفي

جهة وحدة بها يكون الموضوع واحدا كالعشرية فإن موضوعها مجموع الوحدات التي فيها لا كل واحد وإلا لكانت العشرة عشرات و مجموع الوحدات أمر واحد.

فإن قلت ننقل الكلام في كيفية عروض تلك الوحدة لها.

قلنا لا يلزم أن يكون جهة الوحدة نسبتها إلى الموضوع نسبة العرض الخارج بل ربما تكون مقومة لقوام ما اعتبرت هي معه كحال الوجود بالنسبة إلى الماهية و خصوصا على ما ذهبنا إليه كما مر ذكره سابقا من أن لكل شيء وحدة هي بعينها نحو وجوده الخاص الذي به يتحقق ذلك الشيء و قد سبق أيضا أن الوجود ليس عرضا لما هو موجود به بل الوجود لكل شيء صورة ذاته المحصلة به حقيقته الموجودة و بذلك كان يخرج الجواب عن الشبهة التي أعيت أذهان الفضلاء عن حلها كما علمت.

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٣٦

و أما الإضافات و خصوصا المتشابهة الطرفين

كالتجاور و المقاربة و المعية و الأخوة و غيرها فسيجيء أن كلا من الطرفين سواء كانا متخالفين كالعلية و المعلولية أو القبلية و البعدية أو متماثلين كالتماثل و التجانس مختص بأمر لا يوجد في صاحبه.

و ربما يتوهم أن قولنا في شيء لإخراج وجود الكل في الأجزاء و هو فاسد - لأن وجود الكل في الأجزاء قول مجازي و إنما هو موجود بحسب نفسه في نفسه لا في الأجزاء إذ لو كانت لوجوده نسبة إلى الأجزاء فإما أن يكون وجوده في كل جزء جزء فيكون كل منهما كلا فيكون حينئذ كالات لا كل واحد و المفروض خلافه هذا محال.

و إما أن يكون في مجموع الأجزاء و هو أيضا محال لأنه نفس المجموع لا أنه موجود في المجموع و إلا لكان الشيء موجودا في نفسه و هو محال إذ لا مغايرة بين الشيء و نفسه فلكل كل صورة تامة في أجزائه هي نفس وجود أجزائه جميعا - لا أنه شيء آخر موجود في أجزائه كما ظن و لا أنه موجود في واحد واحد كما توهم.

و من هاهنا ينكشف ما حققناه من أن الصورة النوعية للمركب الخارجي هي عين وجود ذلك المركب و أن التركيب اتحادي فيما له مادة و صورة في الخارج و أن العشرة مثلا صورتها عين جميع الوحدات التي هي مادتها.

فعليك بالتثبت في هذه الأمور من دون تلثم و تزلزل و أما قولنا غير متقوم به فاحتراز عن وجود ما يحل في المادة و تقومها موجودة بالفعل نوعا من الأنواع - فلا جرم لا يكون عرضا بل صورة جوهرية.

اعلم أن صفات الأمور يكون على أقسام

لأن الموصوف إما أن يكون قد استقرت له ذات متقررة بالفعل أم لا يكون.

فعلى الأول إما أن يكون الصفة التي تلحقها خارجة عنه لحوق عارض لازم أو مفارق أو ليست تلحقه من خارج بل هو جزء من قوامه.

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٣٧

و على الثاني إما أن يكون الصفة تلحقه ليتقرر بها ذاته سواء كانت جزءا من معنى ذاته أو ليست جزءا من معنى ذاته أو لا يكون الصفة مما يتقرر ذاته - بل لحوقها يكون لحوق أمر يلحق الشيء بعد تمام تقريره و وجوده بحسب التبعية - لما

يقرره بالذات لحوقا لازما أو مفارقا فالمثال للأول وجود البياض للجسم أو الضحك للإنسان و للثاني وجود النفس للحيوان و للثالث وجود الصورة الطبيعية للجسم المطلق بما هو طبيعة امتدادية على الإطلاق و للرابع وجود الصورة للهيولى و للخامس وجود البياض أو التحيز للهيولى.

و أما وجود الفصل للنوع أو للجنس من حيث كون الفصل مأخوذا فصلا- و الجنس جنسا فهو قول مجازي كما مر لأن هذه الأمور إذا أخذت على الوجه المذكور- يكون وجود الجميع واحدا و مقتضى النسبة سواء كانت بفي أو اللام هو الغيرية فذلك مما قد خرج بالقيد الأول و أما أخذ كل من الجنس و الفصل أمرا محصلا بحسب المفهوم و المعنى فيكون نسبة الفصل إلى حد النوع بالدخول في تقرير ماهيته و تحصيل معناه- و إلى الجنس بالدخول في تقوم وجوده و فعلية ذاته كما مر في مبحث الماهية فيكون خارجا عن مفهوم العرض بالقيد الثاني.

و منهم من فسر العرض بما يتقوم بشيء متقوم بنفسه

و هو بظاهره فاسد عند من جوز قيام العرض بعرض و إلا لزم كون العرض الذي هو المحل جوهرًا و لكن ذلك لم يثبت عندنا.

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٣٨

و أما الأمثلة التي ذكروها في إثبات قيام عرض بعرض آخر كالسرعة للحركة و الاستقامة للخط و الشكل للسطح و النقطة للخط و الخط للسطح فمحل تأمل لأن جميع هذه الأوصاف نسبتها إلى الموصوفات بها من الأعراض أشبه بنسبة الفصول إلى الأجناس إلى الأجناس في الماهيات البسيطة من نسبة الأعراض إلى الموضوعات. و العجب أن الشيخ الرئيس ممن جوز قيام العرض بعرض آخر و قال ليس بمستنكر. و احتج عليه بالأمثلة المذكورة مع أنه قد صرح بأن الاستقامة و الاستدارة من فصول الخط و السطح و هو أيضا قد قرر أن مناط الفرق بين الحال عرضا في شيء أو مقوما هو جواز تحصيل ذلك المحل بحسب نوعيته بدون ذلك الأمر الحال و مقابلة عدم جواز تحصيله كذلك فإن كان الأول فالحال عرض و المحل موضوع و عرض- و إن كان الثاني فهما صورة و مادة أو فصل و جنس.

فعلى هذا لا شك أن الحركة لا يمكن وجودها إلا مع حد من السرعة و البطء- و لا شك أن الحركة السريعة مثلا ليس لها من حيث كونها حركة وجود تام في حد حقيقتها و نوعيتها بحيث إذا لوحظت معراة عن مراتب السرعة و البطء- يكون قد تمت حقيقتها ثم قد لحقتها مرتبتها من السرعة بعد تمام حقيقتها بل إنما يتم بشيء من حدود السرعة و البطء فيكون هي من الفصول المقومة للموصوف لا من الأعراض المتقومة به.

و احتج الشيخ أيضا بقوله هذه الأعراض تنسب إلى الوحدة و الكثرة و هذه كما سنبين لك كلها أعراض.

و أقول إنك قد علمت في مباحث الوحدة و الكثرة ضعف ما ذكره هو و غيره في عرضية الوحدة و دريت أن وجود كل شيء هو وحدته و تشخصه و الوجود في الموجود ليس عرضا فيه لتقومه بالوجود بل وحدة العرض كوجوده عرض بعين عرضية ذلك العرض و كذا وحده الجوهر جوهر كوجوده و ليست الكثرة إلا الوحدات

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٣٩

و حكمها في الجوهرية و العرضية حكم الوحدات.

و ربما فسر بعضهم المتقوم بنفسه بأن معناه المتقوم لا بما يحل فيه.

و قد ذهل أن المعنى المجازي للألفاظ مهجور في التعريفات الحقيقية.

و أما قولنا لا كجزء فاحتراز عن وجود الجزء في الكل و وجود طبيعة الجنس في طبيعة النوع الواحد من حيث هما طبيعتان و من وجود عمومية النوع في عمومية الجنس من حيث هما عامان و من وجود كل من المادة و الصورة في المركب - فإن كل واحد من هذه الأمور موجود في شيء هو جزء منه و وجود العرض في الموضوع ليس كذلك.

و أما قولنا لا يمكن قوامه دون ما هو فيه فالمراد به استحالة وجود ذلك الشيء من حيث طبيعته إلا في محل و من حيث شخصيته إلا في ذلك المحل المعين و بهذا يقع الامتياز بين وجود العرض في موضوعه و بين وجود الجسم في الزمان و وجوده في المكان و وجود الشيء في الغاية و الغرض ككون النفس في السعادة و كون المادة في الصورة و ذلك لجواز مفارقة هذه الأشياء عن ما ينسب إليها بفي بحسب الطبيعة فلو كان في شيء منها امتناع مفارقة فهو لأمر خارج عن ذاته و عن نحو وجوده الخاص كلزوم الكواكب في فلكه و لزوم المحوي من الفلك في حاوية فهو لا يقتضي العرضية.

ثم عدم مفارقة الجسم عن حيز مطلق و زمان مطلق و عدم مفارقة الإنسان - لا عن غاية مطلقة و عرض مطلق لا يوجب كون المنسوب إليه موضوعا و ذلك لأن معنى عدم القوام دون ما هو فيه كما مر هو أن الشيء بطبيعته يقتضي محلا و بشخصيته يقتضي محلا شخصيا و الأمور الكلية لا وجود لها من حيث كليتها في الخارج و ما لا وجود له يستحيل أن يوجد فيه شيء آخر في الخارج و كلامنا في أن العرض في الموضوع

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٤٠

بحسب الوجود الخارجي لا بحسب الوجود الذهني على أن في الحكم بأن كل جسم يستدعي مكانا عاما أو خاصا مناقشة لاستحالة كون المحدد ذا مكان و تبديل لفظ المكان بالحيز لا يفيد لعدم صدق الموجود في موضوع على الموجود في الحيز - إذا أريد منه غير المكان كالوضع و المحاذاة و كذا في كون كل جسم في زمان - على طريق اللزوم المستوعب للأزمنة و الآتات جميعا كما هو شأن العرض بالقياس إلى الموضوع محل نظر و ذلك لأن الجسم عند حصوله في الآن لا يكون في زمان.

فإن قلت لو صح وجود الجسم في أن فهو عند كونه فيه إما متصف بالحركة أو بالسكون إذ لا يمكن خلوه عنهما جميعا و الاتصاف بكل منهما يقتضي مقارنة الزمان لأن كلا منهما زماني فيلزم كون الجسم مقارنا للزمان عند كونه مفارقا عنه و هو محال.

قلت يمكن الجواب عنه بوجهين - الأول أن نختار الشق الأول و نقول إن الجسم المتحرك كالفلك مثلا يتصف في كل آن من الآتات المفروضة في زمان حركته بأنه متحرك أي متصف بالحركة و هذا بحسب المفهوم أعم من أن يكون حركته واقعة في نفس ذلك الآن أو في الزمان الذي هو حد من حدوده فإن قولنا هذا الجسم متحرك في الآن أو متصف بالحركة في الآن يحتمل وجهين - أحدهما أن قولنا في الآن يكون قيذا و ظرفا للاتصاف بالحركة.

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٤١

و ثانيهما أن يكون قيداً و ظرفاً لنفس الحركة لا للاتصاف بها.
 فالأول لا يستدعي أن يكون وجود الحركة في الآن و لا السكون و إن كان معناه سلب الحركة عما من شأنه أن يكون متحركاً و ذلك لأن نفي الحركة في الآن إذا كان قيداً للنفي أي الحركة لا يستلزم أن يكون النفي و الرفع فيه حتى يلزم منه كون السكون في الآن لأن رفع المقيد إما برفع ذاته المقيدة أو برفع قيده فيكون رفعه أعم من رفع كل منهما و العام لا يوجب الخاص فيجوز أن يتحصل رفع الحركة في الآن بوجود الحركة لا في الآن بل في الزمان الذي هو طرفه لصدق رفع الحركة في الآن عليه.
 و الثاني أن التردد غير حاصر لجواز أن لا يكون الجسم متحركاً في الآن و لا ساكناً في الآن لأن ارتفاع النقيضين أو ما يساووقهما و إن استحال عن نفس الأمر لكن لا استحالة في ارتفاعهما عن مرتبة من مراتب نفس الأمر و حيثية من حيثيات الواقع و حد من حدود الأمر الواقعي فكما أن زيدا الموجود مثلاً في الأرض لا يكون في السماء متحركاً و لا ساكناً مع ذلك فهو إما متحرك أو ساكن في الواقع إذ الواقع أوسع و أشمل مما ذكر.
 فإن قلت إن الأجرام الكوكبية إبداعية الوجود عند القوم فيمتنع عليها المفارقة عن أمكنتها الخاصة فيكون أعراضاً لصدق قولنا الموجود في موضوع لا يمكن مفارقتها عنه.
 قلت قد علمت أن استحالة المفارقة عن الموضوع في العرض لأجل أن تشخصه بنفس الموضوع بخلاف تلك الأجرام فإن تشخص كل منها بذاته و بأمور

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٤٢

متقرر في ذاته لا بحصوله في مكانه و ذلك لأن نوعها مقصور على شخصها في الوجود الطبيعي فالمشخص لها من طبيعة نوعها و حصولها لتلك الأحياء تابع لتشخصها و نحو وجودها.
 فإن قلت ما ذكرت غير جار في مواد الأجرام الفلكية فإنها موجودة في صورها و صورها متحصلة القوام و ليست المواد جزءاً منها و لا يصح قوامها دون ما هي فيه أعني الصور.
 قلت قد تفصى بعض الفضلاء عن هذا الإشكال بقوله لا نسلم أن المادة يصح أن يقال إنها في الصور لأننا ذكرنا أن معنى في هو أن يكون ناعماً للمحل و المادة لا تنعت الصورة بل الأمر بالعكس انتهى قوله.
 و هو في غاية السقوط فإن المراد من قوله لا يصح أن يقال إن كان مانعاً لفظياً فهو غير مجد في تحقيق الحقائق و إن كان مانعاً معنوياً فهو غير ثابت مما ذكره لما سبق أن مجرد الناعتية لا يصلح أن يكون رسماً للحالية سواء كان المراد بالنعته ما يحمل على الشيء مواطاة و يقال له حمل على أو اشتقاقاً و يقال له وجود في.
 ثم إن أريد بالناعت التابع للشيء في الوجود فيكون الهيولى حرياً بهذا المعنى لأنها في الوجود تابعة للصورة كما سيجيء فلا وجه لما ذكره من التعكيس - بل الحق في الجواب أن يقال إن الهيولى أمر مبهم الوجود بالقوة إنما يتحصل وجودها بالفعل بالصورة بمعنى أن الصورة بنفسها نحو وجود الهيولى بخلاف العرض لأن له وجوداً تابعاً لوجود موضوعه لا أن وجودها بنفس الموضوع.
 و بالجملة معنى العرض هو الموجود في شيء متقوم بنفسه و معنى الهيولى هو الموجود بشيء متقوم بنفسه.

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٤٣

و بعبارة أخرى وجود العرض في نفسه هو وجوده للموضوع و وجود الهيولى في نفسها هو وجود صورتها الموضوعية و بين المعنيين فرقان واضح.

و اعلم أن بين العرض و الهيولى مشاركة في خسة الوجود و ضعف الحقيقة

و لكل منهما فضيلة على الآخر و دناءة بوجه آخر أما فضيلة العرض فلكونه متميز الوجود عن وجود الموضوع و أما دناءة ته فلكونه خارجا عن قوام ذات الموضوع - ساقطا عن الحصول في تلك المرتبة.

و أما فضيلة الهيولى فلكونها داخلية في قوام الموضوع و أما دناءة لها فلكونها مبهمة الذات غير متميزة الوجود

فصل (٣) في رسم الجوهر و هو الموجود لا في موضوع

قد مر تحقيق معناه في مباحث الوجود بوجه لا انتفاض لطرده بالواجب تعالى - و لا لعكسه بالصور المعقولة للذهن عند من ذهب إلى أنها قائمة بالذهن على وجه الحلول.

و أما على ما ذهبنا إليه من أن الصور الجوهرية الخيالية غير مرتسمة في الخيال و لا العقلية مرتسمة في العقل بل العاقل يتحد بالمعقول و النفس الخيالية و الحسية يتحد بصورها الخيالية و الحسية فلا إشكال.

و اعلم أن لنا منهجا آخر في دفع الإشكال بالصور الجوهرية الثابتة في الذهن و هو أن عنوانات الأشياء التي تحصل بأنفسها في الذهن لا يلزم أن يكون كل منها فردا لنفسه فالذي في الذهن من الجوهر هو مفهوم قولنا الموجود لا في الموضوع و كذا الحاصل فيه من الحيوان هو مفهوم قولنا جوهر قابل للأبعاد نام حساس و لا يلزم أن يكون مفهوم الجوهر فردا لنفسه و لا أيضا معنى الحيوان فردا

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٤٤

لنفسه حتى يكون ذلك المعنى مما يصدق عليه جسم ينمو و يحس و يتحرك بل الذي يلزم من وجود معاني الأشياء في الذهن أن يكون كل من تلك المعاني متضمنا لما يدخل في معناه و يحمل هي عليه حملا ذاتيا أوليا و لا يلزم أن يكون هي صادقة عليه محمولة له حملا عرضيا متعارفا.

فإذا تقرر هذا فنقول لا منافاة بين كون الشيء مفهوم الجوهر و فردا للعرض - كما لا منافاة بين كون معنى ذهني مفهوما للجزئي و فردا للكل.

و اعلم أيضا أنه قد سبقت الإشارة إلى أنه إذا أطلق لفظ مشتق كالموجود و الواحد و الكاتب مثلا من غير تقييد بشيء أصلا فحينئذ يتصور معناه على وجهين - أحدهما أن يكون هناك شيء ذلك الشيء يكون موجودا أو واحدا أو غيرهما - حتى ينحل معنى المشتق إلى معروض و عارض و نسبة بينهما فأريد بالواحد مثلا إنسان موصوف بأنه واحد ففيه معنى الإنسانية و معنى آخر يغايره هو معنى الواحد - و نسبة بينهما بالمعروضية لأحدهما و العارضية للآخر.

و ثانيهما الأمر البسيط الذي لا يقبل التحليل بعارض و لا معروض و لا نسبة إلا بمجرد الاعتبار و الفرض من غير سبب يقتضي ذلك كنفس مفهوم الواحد من حيث هو واحد لست أقول أن بداهة العقل يحكم بوجود كل من هذين المعنيين في الخارج كلا فإن الحكم بوجود كل منهما لا يتأتى إلا بحجة و برهان بل الغرض أن مفهوم اللفظ عند الإطلاق لا يأبى

عن إرادة شيء من هذين المعنيين عنه و هكذا الحال في لفظ الوجود فإنه يحتمل المعنيين اللذين أشرنا إليهما أعني البسيط و المركب لكن المراد هاهنا هو المعنى المركب بقرينة أن الكلام في تعريف الأمر الذي من الأجناس العالية و المفهومات و الوجود بالمعنى البسيط ليس كذلك.

و قد علمت فيما سبق أن ما يعرضه الكلية و العموم فهو غير حقيقة الوجود البحت حتى مفهوم الوجود و الشيئية فإنهما مع بساطتهما مما يخرج عن حقيقة الوجود لتعاليتها عن أن يكون لها صورة ذهنية مطابقة لكنها.

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٤٥

و الذي في الذهن يكون وجهها من وجوها لا كنها لها و هو حكاية الوجود لا عينه فيكون مفهوم الوجود أو الموجود يعرضه العموم و الكلية كسائر الأمور الذهنية.

فقولنا الجوهر موجود لا في موضوع أنه ماهية كلية حق وجودها أن لا يكون في موضوع فإن وجود كل شيء الخاص به هو ما يكون مبدأ لآثاره المخصوصة و منشأ لأحكامه المعينة المتميزة بها عن غيره فالوجود الذي نسب إليه هو ما لا يكون في موضوع فإذا حضرت ماهيته في النشأة الذهنية وجدت فيها بنحو آخر من الوجود فلم يكن هذا مما يتبدل به ماهيتها و حال جوهريتها لجواز أن يكون لماهية واحدة أنحاء متعددة من الوجود بحسب عوالم متعددة و نشآت مختلفة.

كيف و قد ترى معنى واحدا في هذا العالم تارة موجودا بوجود استقلالي تجردي - و أخرى موجودا بوجود مادي كالعلم و القدرة المشتركين بين الملك و الحيوان - و كذا يوجد معنى واحد تارة بوجود إبداعي محفوظ عن الخلل و أخرى بوجود كائن فاسد كالجسمية المشتركة بين الفلكيات و العنصریات و جسمية الفلك في القوة و الشدة كما قال تعالى - وَجَعَلْنَا السَّمَاءَ سَقْفًا مَحْفُوظًا و قال وَبَنَيْنَا فَوْقَكُمْ سَبْعًا شِدَادًا و قال في حق الأرض و ما يتركب منها كُلٌّ مِّنْ عَلَيْهَا فَإِنَّ إِيَّكَ مَيِّتٌ وَ إِنَّهُمْ مَيِّتُونَ.

و أما الفناء و الموت العام للجميع فهو ضرب آخر من العدم غير الفساد و هو المشار إليه في قوله تعالى وَنُفِخَ فِي الصُّورِ فَصَعِقَ مَنْ فِي السَّمَاوَاتِ وَمَنْ فِي الْأَرْضِ.

فالمعاني الجوهرية و إن كانت في موضوع الذهن كما يراه القوم لكن يصدق عليها أنها مستغنية الوجود الخارجي عن الموضوع فيكون جوهرها بهذا المعنى.

و أما الباري جل ذكره فهو مقدس عن صدق هذا المعنى في حقه لكونه

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٤٦

قيوما بذاته لا بنحو خاص من الوجود.

هذا إذا كانت الجوهرية حال الماهية.

و أما إذا كان المراد به الوجود الجوهرى فامتيازه عن الواجب بالإمكان و الوجوب و النقص و الكمال و المراد بالنقص أنه وجود محدود بحد لا يتجاوزه و به يغاير الكم و كيف و غيرهما من المقولات و أشياء أخرى و الواجب جل ذكره لا يحد بحد و لا ينتهي إلى غاية بل غاية الأشياء محيط بالكل.

وَهُوَ الْأَوَّلُ وَالْآخِرُ وَالظَّاهِرُ وَالْبَاطِنُ وَهُوَ بِكُلِّ شَيْءٍ مُحِيطٌ.

وَأما امتيازُه عن وجودات الأعراض حتى عن وجود المعاني الجوهرية في الذهن كما هو رأيهم من أن تشخصاتها بنحو الحلول فيه فبالاستغناء عن الموضوع له و عدم الاستغناء لها فأتقن ما علمناكه فإنك لم تجد في الكتب المتداولة على هذا الوضوح و الإنارة

فصل (٤) في أن حمل معنى الجوهر على ما تحته حمل الجنس أم لا

اعلم أن أكثر الحكماء على أن حمل معنى الجوهر على ما تحته حمل المقوم المقول في جواب ما هو بحسب الشركة و الأقلون على أن حمله كحمل اللوازم الخارجة و ربما تمسكوا على هذا بحجج ضعيفة - أولها أن الوجود داخل في معناه و هو خارج عن الماهيات و سلب الموضوع أيضا خارج عنها لاستحالة تقوم حقيقة من الحقائق من الأعدام و السلوب و المركب من الخارج خارج فالجوهر مفهومه خارج عن كل ماهية حقيقية. و ثانيها أنه لو كان جنسا لكان الواجب لاشتراك الجوهرية بينه و بين غيره مركبا من جنس و فصل. و ثالثها أنه لو كان جنسا لكان العقول و النفوس لاشتراكها مع الأجسام في

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٤٧

الجوهرية غير بسيط الحقيقة فيكون الصادر الأول عن الواحد الحقيقي كثيرا و به ينهدم قاعدتهم في امتناع صدور الكثرة عن الذات الأحدية.

و رابعها أنه يتفاوت صدقه على المبدع و الكائن و المجرد و المادي و البسيط و المركب بالتقدم و التأخر و كذا بالأولية و عدمها فإن جوهر العالم الأعلى أولى بالجوهرية من السفليات و الجوهر الصوري أولى بالجوهرية من الجوهر الهولي.

و خامسها أن كليات الأجسام مساوية لجزئياتها في المعنى و الماهية فلو كانت الجوهرية مقوما لها لكانت مساوية لها فيها و هو ضروري البطلان.

و أما بيان الخلل في هذه الوجوه ففي الأول بما مر مرارا من الفرق بين الموجود بما هو موجود مجردا عن الموضوع و بين ما من شأنه أن يكون موجودا بلا موضوع - و أن أحدهما عارض للماهيات كلها و الآخر يصلح لأن يكون مقوما لبعضها.

و في الثاني أيضا يعرف الخلل بما ذكرنا في الأول.

و في الثالث ينحل العقدة فيه بوجوه - الأول أن المعلول الأول بسيط الذات في الخارج فيصح صدوره الخارجي عن الذات الأحدية الثاني أنه عند التحليل و من حيث اعتبار التركيب العقلي يحكم العقل بتقدم الفصل على الجنس و لا استحالة في أن يكون تأثير المؤثر في الفصل أقدم من تأثيره في الجنس تقدما عقليا.

و في الرابع بما حققه المحققون من محصلي الحكماء أن التقدم و التأخر في شيء إما أن يكون في نفس المفهوم من ذلك الشيء أو في مفهوم آخر.

فالأول كتقدم الجوهر على العرض في معنى الوجود لكون وجود الجوهر علة و متقدما و وجود العرض القائم به معلولا و متأخرا فمعنى الجوهر ليس من حيث كونه معناه علة لمعنى العرض بل وجود أحدهما سبب لوجود الآخر فيكون

الجوهر بوجوده سببا للعرض بوجوده.

و الثاني كتقدم بعض أنواع الجوهر على بعض آخر أو بعض أفراد نوع

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٤٨

واحد منه على بعض آخر فإن تقدم الأب على الابن ليس في معنى الإنسانية حتى يكون حد الإنسانية للابن أي حمله عليه متوقفا على ثبوته و حمله على الأب بأن يكون جاعل جعل الإنسانية للابن قبل أن جعل الإنسانية الابن. كيف و قد ثبت أن لا تأثير للجعل في نفس الماهيات فكيف يكون ماهية بعضها سببا لماهية آخر متقدمة عليها بل الحق أن صدق الإنسان عليهما بالسوية بل صدق جميع الماهيات على ذوات الماهيات بالسوية كما مر تحقيقه. و أما وجودها الزماني أو غير الزماني ففي بعضها قبل و في بعضها بعد فالوجود في الأب قبل الوجود في الابن قبلا بالزمان و كذا الحال في التقدم الذاتي بين العقل و الجسم و في نسبة الهيولى و الصورة إلى ما يتركب منه فإن الجزء الخارجي للجوهر كالهوى ليس سببا لكون المركب كالجسم جوهرًا لكون الجسم لذاته جوهرًا من غير سبب و لا اشتراط للهوى و الصورة في حمل الجوهرية على الجسم - و لا جوهرية شيء منهما في أنهما جوهرية سببا لجوهرية جوهر ما سواء كان جسما أو غيره.

لست أقول في كونه جوهرًا موجودًا إذ فرق بين كون الهيولى و الصورة - أخلق بالموجود من حيث هو موجود من الجسم و بين كونهما أخلق بالموجود لا في موضوع بالمعنى الذي علمت مرارا من الجسم و هذا كالعدد في كونه كمية منفصلة - لا تقدم للجزء منها على الكل و إنما تقدم الجزء كالخمس على الكل كالعشرة في الوجود و هو خارج عن معنى الكمية المنفصلة.

هذا ما ذكره الحكماء في مثل هذا المقام و قد مر تحقيق التشكيك فيما سبق منا فتذكره و سنزيدك بيانا في الفصل التالي لهذا الفصل لإثبات الجواهر الأولى و الثانية و ما بعدها. و أما الخامس فكلييات الجواهر جواهر بالحمل الأولى لا الشائع الصناعي - و سنعيد القول في بيانه بزيادة توضيح.

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٤٩

بحث و كشف

و ربما يوجد في كلامهم الاستدلال على كون كلييات الجواهر جواهر بوجوه ثلاثة سموها براهين. الأول أن معنى الجوهر الذي جنسوه كون الشيء بحال متى وجد في الخارج كان مستغنيا عن الموضوع كما سبق و لا شك أن الصور الكلية الذهنية بالصفة المذكورة فيكون جواهر. و الثاني أن الكليات تحمل على الجزئيات التي لا شك في جوهريتها بهو هو و لا شيء من الأعراض مقولة عليها كذلك فلا شيء من كلييات الجواهر بأعراض و كل ما لم يكن بعرض كان جوهرًا فكلييات الجواهر تكون جواهر و هو المطلوب.

و الثالث أن جوهرية الشخص إن كان لهويته الشخصية و جب أن لا يكون ما عداه من الأشخاص جوهرًا و إن لم يكن لشخصيته بل لماهيته و جب أن يكون الماهية جوهرًا فيكون الماهية الكلية جوهرًا و هذه الوجوه الثلاثة كلها سخيصة

عندنا- و هي أشبه بالمغالط منها بالبراهين.

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٥٠

أما بيان الغلط في الوجه الأول فلأننا لا نسلم أن ماهية الجوهر المعقولة في الذهن مما يصح و يمكن له الخروج عن الموضوع الذي هو الذهن و الاستغناء عن ما يقوم به- كيف و الكلي من الجوهر موجود في الموضوع الخارجي الذي هو الذهن و هو محل مستغن عن الحال فيكون عرضا لكونه علما يعلم به معلومه.

نعم معلومه جوهر و هي الماهية المطلقة لا بشرط كونها معقولة أو محسوسة فهأنا مغالطات و اشتباهات. أحدها الخلط بين الاعتبارين المذكورين في مبحث الماهية و هما أخذ الماهية كلية و معقولة تارة و أخذها مطلقة و لو عن هذا الإطلاق تارة أخرى و هو المراد بالكلي الطبيعي الذي وقع الاختلاف في أنه موجود بعين وجود الأشخاص أم لا بل إنما وجوده بمعنى وجود أشخاصه فنشأ الغلط من اشتراك لفظ الكلي بين المعنيين. و ثانيها الخلط بين كون الشيء نفس ماهية الجوهر أو كونه ذا ماهية

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٥١

جوهريّة.

و الحق في كليات الجواهر الذهنية هو المعنى الأول دون الثاني فإن مفهوم العقل الأول ليس ذا العقل الأول و مفهوم القائم بنفسه ليس قائما بنفسه و هذا بعينه هو الغلط في سوء اعتبار الحمل و الخلط بين معنيي الحمل الأولي و الصناعي.

و ثالثها الاشتباه بين العلم و المعلوم و هما ليسا بواحد في جميع المواضع و في جميع الأحكام فإن العلم بالمتنوع ليس ممتنعا و العلم بالمعدوم ليس معدوما.

و رابعها الاشتباه بين الموجود الذهني و الموجود في الذهن و ليس كل ما يوجد في الذهن يكون وجوده ذهنيًا فإن القدرة و الشجاعة الموجودتين في القادر و الشجاع من صفات نفسيهما و النفس ذهن و صفة الذهن موجودة فيه فهي ليست ذهنية بالمعنى المقابل للموجود المتأصل و إن كانت موجودة في الذهن فقدره القادر و شجاعة الشجاع موجودتان بوجود أصيل في الذهن فكذلك الكلي المعقول من الجوهر موجود خارجي من عوارض النفس و هو بعينه جوهر ذهني أي عنوان مأخوذ من الجوهر موجود في النفس من غير أن يصدق عليه معنى الجوهر صدق الطبيعة الكلية على فردها.

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٥٢

فالذي يستصح به مذهب جمهور القوم من الحكماء أن كليات الجواهر أي معقولاتها التي في الذهن ليست بجواهر بالحمل الشائع.

اللهم إلا أن يراد بها المعقولات القائمة بذواتها كما هو مذهب أفلاطون و الأفلاطونيين.

و أما بيان سخافة الوجه الثاني فلأننا لا نسلم أن الكليات بما هي كليات- محمولة على الجزئيات بل هي بهذه الحيثية

مباين الوجود لوجود الجزئيات.

لأن وجودها وجود عقلي و الجزئيات قد يكون وجودها وجودا ماديا فلا يكون هي محمولة عليها بأنها هي إذ الحمل هو الاتحاد بين الطرفين في الوجود.

فإن قيل ألم يكن الكلي محمولا على معنى الإنسان مثلا و الإنسان محمول على زيد و عمرو فيكون الإنسان الكلي محمولا على أشخاصه فإذا كان زيد جوهرًا في ذاته كان الإنسان الكلي أيضا جوهرًا فالكلي من الجوهر جوهر. قلنا في هذا الكلام مغالطة فإن الإنسان المذكور في الحكمين أعني قولنا زيد إنسان و الإنسان معقول ليس أمرا واحدا بالمعنى و الحثية فلم يتكرر الأوسط و لو كان مثل هذا الاستدلال صحيحا لكان الجزئي كليا و النوع جنسا فإن الإنسان يحمل على زيد بهو هو و الكلي يحمل على الإنسان بهو هو - فيكون زيد كليا و هو ممتنع و كذا مفهوم الجنس يحمل على الحيوان المحمول على الإنسان فيكون الإنسان جنسا و هو محال. و أن مثل هذه الأقيسة معدود في باب المغالطات في كتب المنطق و منشؤها الخلط بين الأحكام الذهنية و الخارجية من جهة أخذ الوسط في الصغرى من وجه و في الكبرى من وجه آخر فلم يتكرر فيهما بمعنى واحد ذاتا و اعتبارا.

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٥٣

و بالجملة فقوله الكليات يحمل على الجزئيات الجوهرية إن أراد من الكلي مفهوم الكلي و هو الكلي المنطقي و معروضه بما هو معروضه أو مجموع المعروض و العارض على وجه التقييد فغير صحيح و إن أراد منه نفس الماهية التي من شأنها أن تكون معروضة للكليات أي الماهية من حيث هي هي بلا اعتبار قيد آخر - و هي التي يقال لها الكلي الطبيعي فليس المبحوث عنه هاهنا هو الكلي بهذا المعنى - لأن البحث في أن الصورة المعقولة من الجوهر بما هي صورة معقولة هل هي جوهر أم عرض.

و أما سخافة الوجه الثالث فلأن الوسط و هي الماهية لم يتكرر في الجانبين بمعنى واحد فإن جوهرية الشخص كزيد مثلا مسلمة أنها لماهيته الإنسانية لكن لا نسلم أن الماهية المعقولة منه جوهر بل اللازم منه أن الماهية المطلقة أعم من أن تكون محسوسة أو معقولة ماهية جوهر أي ماهية أمر وجوده لا في موضوع فاللازم منه أن يكون بعض أفرادها أعني المحسوسات الخارجية جواهر إذ المهمة في قوة الجزئية فيكفي لصدقها تحقق المحمول في بعض الأفراد. فثبت في هذا المقام و لا تكن من الخالطين و لنرجع إلى ما كنا فيه من تحقيق كون الجوهر جنسا لما تحته من الأفراد الخارجية أم عرضا لازما

ظنون وإزاحات

إن لصاحب المباحث المشرقية وجوها من الحجج اعتمد عليها في نفي كون معنى الجوهر مقوماً للأنواع المتدرجة تحته. فلنورد كلا منها على الوجه الذي قرره ثم نذكر بيان الواقع فيه.

فالوجه الأول

أن الجوهر لو كان جنسا للأنواع الداخلة فيه لوجب أن يمتاز بعضها عن بعض بفصول. و تلك الفصول إما أن تكون في ماهياتها جواهر أو لا يكون فإن لم تكن كانت أعراضا و ذلك محال لأن العرض قوامه بالجوهر و ما يتقوم بالشيء لا يكون مقوماً له فتعين أن يكون جوهرًا.

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٥٤

فقول الجوهر عليها إما أن يكون قول الجنس أو قول اللوازم.
فإن كان الأول يحتاج الفصل إلى فصل آخر ويتسلسل.
وإن كان الثاني فهو المطلوب و قول هذا مختل بوجوه - و أما أولا فلأننا نختار أن فصل الجوهر ليس بجوهر في ذاته و لا يلزم من هذا أن يكون عرضا إذ المعتبر في تقسيم الممكن إلى الجوهر و العرض هو الأمر المتأصل في الوجود المتميز الذات عن غيره و مفهوم الفصل البسيط و كذا الجنس القاصي ليس كذلك إذ ليس ذا ماهية تامة الذات.
و أما ثانيا فنختار أن فصل الجوهر جوهر و لا يلزم منه أن يكون الجوهر داخلا في حد نفسه حتى يحتاج إلى فصل آخر و لا أن يكون عرضا لازما من العوارض الخارجية حتى يكون هو في مرتبة وجوده الخاص عرضا غير جوهر.
بل نقول فصل الجوهر جوهر في نفس الأمر و إن لم يكن جوهرًا في مرتبة ذاته من حيث هي و لا يلزم من ذلك أن يكون هو في تلك المرتبة عرضا لما عرفت من جواز خلو بعض مراتب الشيء من ثبوت المتقابلين كما أن زيدا ليس من حيث إنسانيته موجودا و لا يلزم منه أن يكون من تلك الحثيثة معدوما - و إلا كان ممتنع الوجود و كذلك ليس زيد من حيث ماهيته متشخصا و لا يلزم منه أن يكون كليًا في ذاته.
و بالجملة ما يقال إن الفصل من عوارض الجنس أو الجنس من عوارض الفصل - أو الوجود من عوارض الماهيات فليس المراد بالعروض في هذه المواضع و أمثالها

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٥٥

هو العروض بحسب الوجود بمعنى أن يكون للعارض وجود غير وجود المعروف - بل هذا النحو من العروض إنما يتحقق في ظرف التحليل بين معنيين موجودين بوجود واحد.
فإذا تقرر هذا فنقول فصل الجوهر جوهر في الواقع و لكن لا يدخل معنى الجوهر في حده و لا يلزم من ذلك أن يحتاج إلى مميز آخر لأجل اشتراكه مع النوع الذي هو فيه و مع الأنواع الأخر في معنى الجوهرية لا مكان أن يمتاز بنفسه و ذاته عن النوع الذي يقومه و يميزه بالجزئية و الكلية و بالبساطة و التركيب و عن الأنواع التي يميز عنها بالمخالفة التامة و المبينة الكلية ذاتا و وجودا.
و أما ثالثا فبان التحقيق عندنا كما لوحنا إليه أن حقائق الفصول البسيطة - هي الوجودات الخاصة للمعيات و الوجود بنفسه متميز و بحسب مراتبه في الشدة و الضعف و الكمال و النقص يتحصل الماهيات و يمتاز بعضها عن بعض كما علمت و سينكشف لك هذا المقصد أي كون الفصول البسيطة الاشتقاقية هي عين الوجودات من ذي قبل عند كلامنا في مباحث الصور النوعية إن شاء الله تعالى.
و أما رابعا فلانتقاض ما ذكره في كل جنس إذ لو صح ما ذكره يلزم أن لا يكون شيء من الأشياء جنسا لما تحته كالحيوان مثلا فإن فصله الذي يتحصل منه نوع حيواني إن كان حد ذاته حيوانا فيجب أن يمتاز من سائر الأنواع الحيوانية بفصل آخر و إن لم يكن حيوانا فيلزم أن يتقوم ماهية الحيوان من غير الحيوان - فيكون اللاحيوان صادقا على الحيوان لصدق حمل الفصل على النوع الذي يتقوم منه.

و الحل في الجميع أن جنسية الجنس لا يقتضي أن يكون جنسا لجميع ما يندرج تحته سواء كان نوعا محصلا أو فصلا محصلا بل الأجناس كلها عرضيات بالقياس إلى الفصول البسيطة القاصية لكن يجب أن يعلم أن عارضية الجنس للفصل ليس بحسب الوجود كما ينساق إليه بعض الأفهام القاصرة و منه ينشأ أمثال هذه الأغاليط بل على

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٥٦

نحو عروض الماهية النوعية للتشخص و العجب عن مثله كيف غفل عن كون الجوهر - الذي هو الجنس عرضيا للفصول الجوهرية مع أنه مصرح به في عدة مواضع من الشفاء و النجاة و غيره. و أما خامسا فإن الذي ذكره في إبطال الشق الثاني و هو قوله لأن العرض قوامه بالجوهر و ما يتقوم بالشيء لا يكون مقوما له فيه نوع من الالتباس إذ لو فرض كون جوهر مركبا من جوهر و عرض يقوم بذلك الجوهر لم يلزم فيه كون المقوم للشيء ما يتقوم به فإن الجوهر المتقوم بذلك العرض و هو المركب غير الجوهر المقوم له و هو البسيط كما لا يخفى و هذا الاحتمال و إن لم يكن صحيحا عندنا لكن الغرض التنبيه على فساد احتجاجه.

و الوجه الثاني

من الوجوه التي اعتقدها و اعتمد عليها أن النفس الإنسانية جوهر مجرد قائم بنفسه و يستدل على أن علمها بنفسها لا يمكن أن يكون مكتسبا و الحكماء اتفقوا على ذلك و إذا كان كذلك فلو كان الجوهر ذاتيا لها كان من الواجب أن يكون العلم بجوهريتها حاصلًا دائما و يكون علما أوليا. أقول و الحق في الجواب عن هذا الإيراد أن يقع الاستمداد فيه من بعض الأصول منا التي سلفت في مبحث الماهية و غيره من كيفية اندراج النفس و سائر البسائط الوجودية تحت مقولة الجوهر باعتبار و عدم اندراجها باعتبار آخر و من أن

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٥٧

قول الموجود لا في موضوع على الماهيات الجوهرية بمعنى و بمعنى آخر على الوجودات المستغنية عن الموضوع و هو بأحد المعنيين يصلح لأن يكون جنسا لطائفة من المعاني الخارجة عنها طبيعة الوجود. و بمعنى آخر ليس إلا عرضيا منتزعا عن الوجودات صادقا عليها و على تلك الماهيات و من أن المعلوم بالعلم الحضور هو وجود المعلوم و هويته دون مفهومه و ماهيته الكلية و من أن النفس و سائر البسائط الصورية وجودات متفاوتة الحصول.

فحينئذ نقول إن النفس الإنسانية بل كل صورة نوعية حيوانية و غير حيوانية - أمور بسيطة و وجودات مختصة لا يمكن العلم بخصوصياتها إلا بحضور هوياتها في أنفسها عند من له صلاحية العلم كما ذكره المعترض و سلمه فيجوز حضورها و شهودها له مع غفلته عن كل معنى كلي فضلا عن الأمور النسبية و السلبية.

و يمكن الجواب عنه بوجه آخر أنسب للطريقة المشهورة و هو أن معنى الجوهر المشهور عنوان لحقيقة واحدة جنسية مشتركة في الجواهر عبر عنها العقل بالموجود لا في موضوع و مفهوم الموجود عرض عام للكل و مفهوم قولنا لا في موضوع سلب مضاف و المركب من العرض العام و سلب شيء لا يكون جنسا للحقائق الخارجية - بل الجنس هو

الطبيعة البسيطة المشتركة بين الجواهر و لا يمكن التعبير عنها إلا بأمور عرضية خارجة عنها فيكون المجموع رسما لها إلا أنها لما كانت عنوانا لها و مرآة لملاحظتها أقيمت مقام الحد.

فإذا تقرر هذا فنقول إن النفس على تقدير كونها مندرجة تحت مقولة الجواهر - اندراج النوع تحت الجنس المقوم له لكن المقوم لها ليس الرسم المذكور بل ذلك الأمر البسيط فحينئذ لا يلزم عند تصور النفس ذاتها بذاتها حضور مفهوم الجواهر أعني رسمه المذكور فلا يستحيل وقوع الشك في ثبوت هذا العنوان لهما - و لا يلزم العلم بثبوت السلب عن الموضوع لها نعم كل من رجع إلى ذاته يجد ذاته

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٥٨

حاضرة عنده مع جواز سلب كل أمر عنه فإذا ظهر له أن هذه الحالة يسمى في عرف الحكماء بالجهرية و أن الموصوف بها إذا كان في حد ذاته مع قطع النظر عن غيره موصوفا بها كان جوهرها و كان الجوهر ذاتيا له فعند ذلك لا يشك في كون ذاته جوهرها و من توقف في كون نفسه جوهرها أو عرضا فذلك إما لعدم اطلاعه على معنى الجوهر أو لعدم تهذيبه و تلخيصه لهذه المعاني الثابتة عنده أو لاستغراقه فيما يشغل سره و يحجب عنه عن درك الحق و مثل هذه الحجب و الغفلات واقع لأكثر الخلق لاشتغالهم بما يلهيهم عن تذكر ذواتهم و مقوم ذواتهم و ما ينسيهم أنفسهم و يحول بين المرء و قلبه كما أشار إليه تعالى في كثير من آيات الكتاب المبين.

و مما يجب أن يعلم أيضا أن النفس الإنسانية في أول تكونها ليست مفارقة القوام عن البدن بالفعل بل لها استعداد القوام بنفسه و الاستغناء عن المحل و المفارقة عن المواد عند استكمالها بإدراك العقلية و تصفيتها عن الكدورات و ليست هذه الحالة لكل أحد بل الذي يدعى أن لكل إنسان أن يلاحظ نفسه كأنها فارقت الأجسام و الأوضاع و الأمكنة و الحركات و الأزمنة في معرض المنع بل الظاهر أن أكثر الناس لا يمكنهم هذه الملاحظة و لا يتيسر لهم تجريد النظر إلى ذاتهم و تلخيصها عن الزوائد لانغمارها في ظلمة بحر الهوى و غسق ليل الطبيعة

و الوجه الثالث

من الوجوه المعتمد عليها عنده أن لكل ماهية جوهرية يتصور أمور ثلاثة استغناؤها عن الموضوع و كون الماهية علة للاستغناء عنه بشرط الوجود - و الماهية التي عرضت لها هذه العلية.

فإن أريد بالجواهر المعنى الأول فلكونه معنى سلبيا لا يصلح للجنسية و إن فسر بالثاني لم يكن ذلك أيضا معنى جنسيا لأن العلية حكم من أحكام الماهية يلحقها بعد تمام تحققها فإن الشيء ما لم يتحقق ماهيته استحال أن يصير علة بالفعل لشيء من الأشياء على أن عليه العلة ليست أمرا ثبوتيا فضلا عن أن يكون معنى جنسيا - و إن فسر بالثالث فنقول من الجائز أن يكون معروض هذه العلية في كل جوهر هو

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٥٩

خصوص كونه ذلك الجوهر ففي الجسم خصوص كونه جسما و في العقل خصوص كونه عقلا لجواز اشتراك الماهيات المختلفة في لازم واحد و إذا كان ذلك محتملا لم يكن هناك أمر مشترك فكيف يجعل الجوهرية جنسا مع أن أدنى مراتبه أن يكون وصفا مشتركا فيه و فيه بحث.

أما أولاً فلأن ما ذكره يجري مثله في كل معنى يدعى فيه الجنسية - فالحيوان لا شبهة لأحد في أنه جنس طبيعي لأنواع الحيوانات و ما ذكره في معناه ليس إلا الإدراك و التحريك الإرادي مع الجسم النامي و هو أيضاً مما يدعى فيه الجنسية - و معناه مؤلف من الجسمية و نوع من الحركة كالتغذية و التنمية و التوليد و الجسم أيضاً قيل إنه جنس للأجسام يوجد في حده الجوهر القابل و شيء من هذه المعاني غير صالح لأن يكون جنساً أو ذاتياً لأنواع الجسمية و الحيوانية لأن كلا منها إما معنى نسبي أو سلبي و مع ذلك الأمر غير مشتبة على ذي الحدس الصحيح و القلب السليم لأن المراد مبادي هذه الأمور و كذا حال الفصول كلها لأنها أمور بسيطة عبر عنها بلوازمها و آثارها.

فما من فصل إلا و قد ذكر في التعبير عنه صفة نسبية أو استعدادية كالحساس و الناطق فإنهما فصلان مقومان للحيوان و الإنسان و قد فسر الأول بالإدراك مطلقاً و الإدراك الجزئي و الثاني بإدراك الكليات و الإدراك أمر سلبي عند بعضهم و إضافة عند بعض آخر و هما خارجان من الحقائق المتأصلة الخارجية فكيف يكون كل منهما مقوماً لحقيقة موجودة و الحل في الجميع أن المقصود من هذه المعاني مبادئها الخارجية و موصوفاتها العينية التي لا يمكن التعبير عنها إلا بهذه اللوازم.

و لست أقول المبادي و الموصوفات من حيث كونها مبادي أو موصوفات - حتى يعود الكلام بأن مقوماتها أمور نسبية إضافية و لا يمكن دخول الإضافة تحت مقولة الجوهر بل المراد نفس ذاتها المشار إليها بهذه النعوت و الأوصاف الانتزاعية المنتزعة عن حاق حقيقتها و لأجل ذلك صيرت عنواناً لذواتها و أقيمت مقام الحدود لها.

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٦٠

و أما ثانياً فلأن الشقوق التي ذكرها غير حاصرة لجواز أن يكون المعنى الذي وقع جنساً هو كون الذات بحيث إذا وجدت يكون وجودها الخارجي مفارقاً عن الموضوع كما علمت و هذا المعنى ثابت لها سواء كانت في الخارج أو في الذهن - و سواء كانت محققة الوجود أو مقدرة.

و أما ثالثاً فلأن ما ذكره من تجويز اشتراك الأمور المخالفة في أمر واحد - لازم غير صحيح من كل وجه إذ قد أقيم البرهان على استحالة كون المتخالفات مشتركة من حيث تخالفها في أمر واحد و كذا يستحيل اشتراك المتخالفات في أمر لازم - لكل واحد من حيث حقيقة ذاته مع قطع النظر عن غيره إلا لمقوم جامع إذ كما يستحيل استناد معلول واحد شخصي إلى علتين مستقلتين و كذا استناد معلول نوعي إلى طبيعتين مختلفتين إلا من جهة اشتراكهما في أمر ذاتي كما علم في موضعه - كذلك يمتنع أن يكون لأشياء متخالفة لازم ذاتي هو مقتضى كل منهما بنفس ذاته إلا لجامع ذاتي و هاهنا كذلك فإن جميع الماهيات الجوهرية تشترك في أمر واحد حاصل لها على وجه اللزوم مع قطع النظر عن الأمور الخارجة و هو كونها عند وجودها الخارجي مستغنية عن الموضوع.

فهذا المعنى إما مقوم مشترك لها أو لازم لأمر مقوم لها مشترك بينها فيكون

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٦١

جنساً لإحالة العقل السليم أن يعرض أمر واحد لأمور كثيرة مختلفة لذواتها بلا جهة واحدة في ذاتها جامعة لمعانيها بحسب أنفسها.

و أما رابعا فغاية الأمر فيما ذكره احتمال أن لا يكون مفهوم الجوهر جنسا لما تحته مع اشتراكه بينها كما دل عليه قوله و إذا كان ذلك محتملا لم يكن هناك أمر مشترك و أين هذا من الدليل المعتمد عليه على أن قول الجوهر على ما تحته قول عرضي خارج.

و أما خامسا فلا يخفى أن كلامه في هذا الموضع مشتمل على التناقض إذ قد سلم أن معنى الجوهر بحسب التفسير الثالث الذي ذكره مشترك بين الماهيات المختلفة بمعنى واحد لكن جواز أن يكون عروضه لكل ماهية بحسب خصوص تلك الماهية لا لأمر ذاتي مشترك بينها ثم قال و إذا كان ذلك محتملا لم يكن هناك أمر مشترك - فكيف يجعل الجوهرية جنسا مع أن أدنى مراتبه أن يكون وصفا مشتركا فيه.

الوجه الرابع

أن الماهية التي يقال عليها إنها جوهر إما بسيطة و إما مركبة أما البسيط فغير داخل تحت جنس و إلا لاحتاج إلى ما يميزه عن النوع الآخر فيكون مركبا و قد فرض بسيطا هذا خلف.

فالجوهر البسيط داخل تحت الجوهر و ليس داخلا تحت الجنس فلا يكون الجوهر جنسا و أما المركب ففيه أجزاء بسيطة و كل واحد منها إما غني عن الموضوع أو ليس غنيا عنه فإن لم يكن كان مقومات الجوهر أعراضا و المتقوم من العرض لا يكون جوهرًا فالمركب ليس جوهرًا و قد فرض جوهرًا هذا خلف.

و إن كان تلك الأجزاء جوهرًا و ليس لها جنس لبساطتها فلا يكون الجوهر جنسا لما تحته أصلا و هو المطلوب. و فيه بحث من وجوه - الأول انتقاض ما ذكره بكل جنس بسيط بل بكل جنس سواء كان بسيطا أو مركبا و ذلك لجريان صورة الدليل فيه مع تخلف المدعى إذ لأحد أن يقول مثل

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٦٢

ما قاله في الحيوان من أنه ليس جنسا للحيوانات و إلا لكانت الماهية المقول عليها الحيوان - إما أمرا بسيطا أو مركبا فإن كان بسيطا فلم يكن الحيوان جنسا له مع كونه مقولا عليه و إن كان مركبا فأجزاؤه إما حيوانات أو ليست بحيوانات و يتم الدليل شبه ما ذكره فيلزم أن لا يكون للأشياء جنس في الوجود و اللازم باطل كما لا يخفى - فالملزوم كذلك فعلم أن ما ذكره مغالطة باطلة.

الثاني و هو الحل أن يقال إن البسيط الذي تركب منه و من غيره النوع - المندرج تحت جنس إن لم يكن مندرجا تحته فذلك يتصور من وجهين أحدهما أنه لم يصدق عليه معنى ذلك الجنس و الثاني أنه يصدق و لكن ليس ذاتيا له فلا يكون مندرجا تحته اندراج النوع تحت الجنس.

و الشق الأول أيضا يحتمل وجهين أحدهما أنه لم يصدق عليه معنى الجنس - لكونه عين معنى الجنس و الشيء لا يكون فردا لنفسه.

و ثانيهما أن لا يكون كذلك فهنا ثلاثة وجوه في عدم اندراج الشيء تحت الجنس.

و الذي يمنع أن يكون المركب من غير المندرج تحت الجنس و من أمر آخر نوعا من أنواع ذلك الجنس هو أحد هذه الوجوه الثلاثة لا غير فالإنسان مثلا ماهية واقعة تحت جنس الحيوان و هو مركب من جزئين هما الحيوان و الناطق و ليس شيئا منهما مندرجا تحت الحيوان اندراج الشيء تحت الذاتي الأعم له أما الحيوان المطلق المأخوذ جنسا فهو غير

مندرج تحت نفسه إذ لا تغاير هناك أصلاً.

و أما الحيوان المأخوذ مجرداً عن القيود الفصلية فهو إما غير موجود في الخارج فلا يكون مقوماً لنوع موجود فيه.
و أما مادة للمركب منه و من الفصل فلا يكون جنساً محمولاً على ذلك النوع المركب على ما عرفت من تفاوت الاصطلاحين في التجريد.

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٦٣

و أما الناطق مطلقاً فالحيوان عرضي له.

و أما المأخوذ مجرداً فالحيوان غير مقول عليه إما لعدم وجوده على أحد الاصطلاحين و إما لكونه صورة لا فصلاً و الحيوان مادة لا محمولاً.

فإن قلت الحيوان المأخوذ مجرداً مندرج تحت الحيوان المأخوذ مطلقاً اندراج النوع تحت الجنس لأنه الجنس بعينه مع قيد التجرد فيكون نوعاً منه.

قلت الجنس المأخوذ على هذا الوجه و إن كان نوعاً لكنه نوع اعتباري عقلي لا تحصل له في الخارج من هذه الحيثية إذ لو كان متحصلاً فيه لكان مركباً من الجنس و الفصل و قد فرض بسيطاً هذا خلف على أن مثل هذا الاندراج لو كفى في كون الشيء واقعا تحت معنى جنسي في الخارج فليكيف في محل النزاع أعني الجوهر البسيط أو أحد جزئي النوع الجوهرية و هو معنى الجوهر المأخوذ مجرداً عن شرط و قيد فجاز أن يكون البسيط جوهرًا موجوداً

فصل (٥) في كون بعض الجواهر أول و أولى من بعض

عادة الحكماء أن يقسموا الجواهر إلى جواهر أولى كالأشخاص و إلى جواهر ثانية كالأنواع و إلى الثوالت كالأجناس و حكموا بأن الأشخاص لأوليئها أولى بالجوهريّة من الأنواع و كذا الأنواع أولى بالجوهريّة من الأجناس - و قالوا ليس المراد أنها كذلك باعتبار نفس المعنى الذي به يكون الجوهر جنساً - فإن من قواعدهم أن الذاتي لا يكون متفاوتاً بوجه من وجوه التشكيك و قد سبق تحقيق الأمر فيه سابقاً بل باعتبار ما يستدعيه مفهوم الجوهر من الوجود المعتبر في تعريفه أو الاستغناء عن الموضوع عند الوجود بالفعل أو باعتبار الشرف و الفضيلة - فالأشخاص بحسب هذه المعاني أولى بالجوهريّة من الأنواع و أحق بكونها موجوداً مستغنياً عن الموضوع لأنها أشد استغناء عنه و أسبق وجوداً من الأنواع الكلية و أقدم

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٦٤

تسمية بالجواهر منها أما من جهة الاستغناء و الحاجة فلأن الكلي محتاج إلى الشخص - إذ لو لا الشخص لما كان للكلي وجود بخلاف العكس إذ لو احتاج الشخص إلى الكلي في الوجود لاحتاج الشخص إلى شخص آخر يكون معه ليكون الكلي مقولاً عليهما و ليس كذلك كما بين سابقاً و أما من جهة الوجود لا في موضوع فالأشخاص قد حصل لها ذلك الوجود و الكليات لم يحصل لها ذلك بعد لأن الكلية من الأمور النسبية فيحتاج الكليات إلى ما يضاف هي إليه بالكلية و أما من حيث الفضيلة - فالقصد من الطبيعة في الإيجاد و التكوين متوجه إلى صيرورة النوع شخصاً ليتمكن أن يحصل في الأعيان.

و اعلم أنهم إذا قالوا إن الجواهر المحسوسة أولى بالجوهريّة من المعقولة لم يعنوا بالمعقولة إلا ذهنيات الأمور المحسوسة و ماهياتها الكلية لا الذوات العقلية و المفارقات الشخصية فإنها أولى بالجوهريّة و الوجود من الكل لأنها أسبق السوابق الجوهريّة و أقواها في الوجود لكونها أسبابا فعالة لوجود غيرها من الشخصيات - و النوعيات و قياس الأنواع إلى الأجناس في الأوليّة و الأولوية كقياس الأشخاص إلى الأنواع فإن الطبيعة النوعية أقرب إلى التحصيل و أكمل في الوجود و أتم في جواب السائل عن ماهية الشيء من الطبيعة الجنسية و أما الفصول المنطقية أعني المشتقات فهي جواهر لكونها محمولة على الجوهر حمل على و أما البسيطة فهي أيضا جواهر لأنها مقومات للأنواع الجوهريّة و المقوم للجوهر جوهر هذا ما ذكره القوم.

و فيه ما لا يخفى من المساهلة تعرف بتذكر ما أسلفناه في كيفية حال الفصول البسيطة في باب الجوهريّة و أيضا لو كان حمل الشيء على الجوهر مقتضيا لجوهريّة ذلك الشيء لكان الأبيض جوهرًا مع أنه عرض.

أبحاث و أجوبة -

إن لشيخ أتباع الإشراقيين وجوها من الاعتراض على الحكماء أصحاب المعلم الأول.

أحدها أنه أستم قلتم إن الجوهر جنس و الجنس لا يقع على ما تحته بالتشكيك

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٦٥

فإن قلتم ليست الأولوية في الجوهريّة بل في معنى آخر فبطل قولكم - إن الجواهر الشخصية أولى بالجوهريّة من الأنواع و الأنواع من الأجناس بل كان يجب أن يقولوا بعضها أولى بالوجود من بعض أو أولى بالاستغناء عن الموضوع من بعض لا بالجوهريّة.

و ثانيها أنه لا يصح أيضا أن يقال إن الأشخاص أولى بالوجود العيني من النوع و الجنس

لأنهما كليان و الكلّي لا وجود له من حيث كونه كليًا فلا وجود لها من حيث الجنسية و النوعية ليكون حمل الموجود العيني عليهما بالتفاوت.

اللهم إلا أن يراد بالكلّي الطبيعة من حيث هي فحسب سواء كانت في الأعيان أو في الذهن و حينئذ لا يكون الشخص أولى بالجوهريّة من النوع أيضا فإن الشخص زاد على الطبيعة النوعية بأعراض زائدة و جوهريّة زيد إنما هي باعتبار إنسانيته - لا باعتبار سواده و بياضه فلا معنى أصلا لهذه الأولوية في الجوهريّة.

و ثالثها أن من قال إن الجوهريّة يقع بالتشكيك له أن يقول

إن البسيط أولى بالجوهريّة من المركب كالجسم مثلا فإنه مركب من جوهرين هما الهولي و الصورة و المجموع هويته تحصل من الأجزاء فلو لا جوهريّة أجزائه ما كان المجموع جوهرًا فكما أنه لحقت الجسميّة بالإنسان بتوسط الحيوان فكذلك لحقت الجوهريّة بالمجموع الذي هو الجسم بتوسط جزئية و كما أنه لو لا جسميّة الحيوان ما كان الإنسان جسمًا فكذلك لو لا جوهريّة الجزئين ما كان مجموعهما جوهرًا.

ثم إذا كانت الجسميّة لاحقة بالإنسان بتوسط الحيوان و الجوهريّة أيضا لحقت بالحيوان بواسطة الجسميّة و النفسية فيكون الجوهريّة بالجسم أولى منه بالمجموع.

و رابعها أن الوجود عند من لا صورة له في الأعيان لا يصلح للعلية و المعلولية

فالعلل و المعلولات الجوهرية لا يتقدم بعضها عن بعض بالوجود لأنه وصف اعتباري عنده لا وقوع له في الأعيان فلا يبقى التقدم في الجواهر العلية و المعلولية إلا بالذات و الحقيقة.

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٦٦

و خامسها أن الجسم المركب من الهولي و الصورة

لما بين أن جعل كل منهما منه غير جعل الأخرى فهما موجودان و مجموعهما جسم فالجسم لا جوهرية له في نفسه فإنه ليس إلا الجوهرين و معنى الاجتماع بينهما و الجمعية بينهما أمر اعتباري و عرض من الأعراض فلا يحصل به جوهرية ثالثة غير ما لجزئية إذ المجموع ما زاد على الجزئين إلا بالاجتماع و هو عرض فالجوهرية ليست على سبيل الاستقلال للمجموع و الشيء الواحد لا يجوز أن يكون جوهرًا و عرضًا. هذه خلاصة أبحاثه على الحكماء و أنا أريد أن أجيب عنها جميعًا بعون الله و حسن توفيقه.

أما عن البحث الأول

فلأن كون بعض الجواهر أولى من بعض في الجوهرية ليس مناقضًا للحكم بأن الجوهر لا يقع على أفراده بالتشكيك فإن معنى ما حكموه كما أشرنا إليه سابقًا أن نفس الجوهرية لا يكون ما به التفاوت لا أنها لا يكون فيه التفاوت و هذا بعينه نظير ما ذكره الشيخ في فصل خواص الكم من قاطيغورياس الشفاء بعد ما ذكر أن ليس في طبيعة الكم ازدياد و لا تنقص.

لست أعني بهذا أن كمية لا تكون أزيد و أنقص من كمية و لكن أعني أن كميته لا تكون أزيد في أنها كمية من أخرى مشاركة لها فلا خط أشد خطية أي في أنه ذو بعد واحد من خط آخر و إن كان من حيث المعنى الإضافي أزيد منه أعني الطول الإضافي فلا يجوز أن يكون كمية أشد و أزيد في طبيعتها من كمية أخرى أنقص أو أكثر منها و بالغ في بيانه بإيراد الأمثلة الموضحة فكذلك مقصودهم من كون بعض الجواهر أولى في الجوهرية من بعض ليس أنه كذلك بالمعنى الجنسي و بحسبه حتى يكون ما فيه التفاوت عين ما به التفاوت بل مجرد كون بعض الأفراد أولى في الجوهرية و إن لم يكن كذلك بحسب نفس كونه جوهرًا.

و هذا هو محل الخلاف بين الفريقين كما أسلفناه فأما إذا قلنا مثلاً أن زيدا الأب أقدم في الإنسانية من عمرو الابن فهذا لا ينافي ما قد كنا أثبتنا من قولنا أن

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٦٧

لا تفاوت في نفس الماهية أو الذاتي.

نعم لو قلنا إن زيدا من حيث كونه إنساناً أقدم من عمرو كان في الكلام تناقض فالحاصل أن بعض الجواهر أقدم و أولى من بعض في الجوهرية من حيث سبق وجود جوهريته لا من حيث سبق جوهريته بما هي هي و هذا الفرق مما تقع الغفلة عنه كثيراً فينشأ منه الاشتباه بين ما هو محل الخلاف بينهم و غيره

و أما الجواب عن البحث الثاني

فلأن الكلي و إن لم يكون موجوداً في الخارج إلا أنه موجود في ذهن بوجود عقلي متشخص بصفات النفس بل

موجود بنحو آخر من الوجود غير الذي به يكون موجودة أفراد الماهية التي عرضت لها هذه الكلية في الخارج فإن ماهية الإنسان مثلا لها نحو وجود في الخارج بعين وجود أفرادها الخارجية يترتب عليه آثار مخصوصة بها فإذا وجدت في النفس و عرضت لها الكلية

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٦٨

كان وجودها حينئذ وجودا يترتب عليه آثار مخصوصة بنوع من الكيف النفساني و هو العلم فيكون في الذهن من باب الكيف لكونه مصداقا له و فردا منه و ليس من باب الجوهر و إن كان هو بعينه نفس معنى الإنسانية إذ ليس مصداقا و لا فردا منه كما مر تحقيقه مرارا و لا شبهة في أن الجوهر الخارجي أولى بالجهرية لكونه مما يصدق عليه الجوهرية بالذات من الجوهر الذهني لأنها غير صادقة عليه حملا متعارفا- بل هو مجرد مفهومها المعبر فيه. و هذا وجه آخر لطيف في توجيه كلامهم من أن الأشخاص الجوهرية أولى بالجهرية من الأنواع والأجناس.

و أما الجواب عن البحث الثالث

فإن نقول حسب ما لوحنا إليه سابقا أن الجوهر المفسر بقولنا الموجود لا في موضوع يعتبر بوجهين أحدهما حال الماهية و الآخر حال الوجود المستغني عن الموضوع لأن الوجود عند هؤلاء القوم موجود بحسب نفسه كما مر ذكره فالتقدم و التأخر إذا وصف بهما الماهيات يكون ملاك التقدم و التأخر غيرها كالوجود في التقدم العلي و التأخر المعلولي- و كذا الزمان في التقدم و التأخر الزمانيين و المكان و غيره في الرتبين و الشرف و الخسة و أما إذا وصف بهما الوجود فربما يكون الملاك أيضا نفسه.

إذا تقرر هذا فنقول لا شك في أن وجود الجوهر المركب بما هو مركب- غير وجود البسائط فجوهريته بالعدد غير جوهرية جزئية و يتوقف عليهما و أما أن جوهرية المركب كالجسم مثلا في أنها جوهرية غير جوهرية الجزئين في كونهما جوهرين و بحسبهما متوقفة عليهما فالحكماء المشاءون و أتباعهم يتحاشون عن ذلك فمن الذي قال إن جوهرية الجسم في كونها معنى الجوهر غير جوهرية الهيولى و الصورة بل الذي قالوا به ليس إلا أن جوهرية المركب غير جوهرية الجزئين بالوجود و العدد و هذا أمر واضح في النوع الواحد الطبيعي.

و أما فيما ليست له وحدة طبيعية كالحجر الموضوع بجانب الإنسان فليس

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٦٩

هناك سوى الجوهرين جوهر ثالث كما ذكره.

و بالجملة الجوهرية لا ينقل من العلة إلى المعلول لأنها مفهوم واحد لا تفاضل فيه و لا تعدد من حيث المعنى و المفهوم.

و أما الوجود فالحق فيه كما سبق أنه بنفس حقيقته و ذاته يكون متقدما و متأخرا و جاعلا و مجعولا و تعدده و تكثره ليس من نحو تكثر مفهوم واحد كلي نوعي أو جنسي لأن تعدد المعاني و الماهيات إنما يكون بالوجود و تعدد الوجود بنفسه كما تعرفه الراسخون في العلم و حرمت هذه المعرفة على غيرهم و ما يقع منه في الذهن و يعرضه العموم و الكلية ليس حقيقة الوجود بل وجهها من وجوها و حكاية عنها و هو المفهوم العام المصدري.

والحاصل أن جوهرية العلة و الجزء لجوهرية المعلول و المركب في أنها جوهرية و هي أقدم و أفضل في أنها موجود من جوهرية المعلول و المركب و ملاك التقدم و الفضيلة في الوجود نفس الوجود كما مر فالجسمية أقدم بالوجود من الحيوانية لا في الجوهرية و كذا الحيوان أولى و أقدم وجودا من الإنسانية لا بالجسمية و الجوهرية فكما أنه لحقت الجسمية بالإنسان بتوسط الحيوان في كونها موجودة لا في كونها جسمية فكذلك لحقت الجوهرية بالحيوان بتوسط الجسمية في كونها موجودة لا في كون الجوهرية جوهرية و كذا لو لا جوهرية الجزءين موجودة ما كان مجموعهما جوهرًا موجودًا لا أنه لو لا جوهرية الجزءين جوهرية - ما كان مجموعهما جوهرًا لأن الجوهرية للمجموع كالجوهرية للجزئين من غير تفاوت و ليست إحداها مستفادة من الأخرى فلا وجه للتفريع الذي ذكره من قوله - فيكون الجوهرية بالجسم أولى منه بالمجموع.

و أما الجواب عن البحث الرابع

فنقول إن من قال بنفي العلية و المعلولية - و التقدم و التأخر في الماهيات الجوهرية بل في الماهيات مطلقا هم الحكماء المشاءون - و من مذهبهم أن للوجود صورة في الأعيان بل الصورة العينية لكل شيء ليست إلا

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٧٠

نحو وجوده.

و أما من ذهب إلى أن الوجود لا حقيقة له و لا صورة منه في الخارج فلا محالة يلزمه القول بأن العلية و المعلولية و التقدم و التأخر الذاتيين لا يكون إلا من جهة الماهيات و بحسبها فإذا كانت العلة و المعلول جوهرين كالعقل و النفس أو كالمادة و الصورة و ما يتركب منهما فلا بد على مذهبه أن يكون الماهية الجوهرية في كونها ماهية جوهرية علة لماهية جوهرية أخرى كذلك لأن هذا من ضروريات كون الوجود أمر اعتباريا فإن الأمر الاعتباري لا يكون فاعلا مؤثرا و لا مجعولا منفعلا فما ذكره هذا المعترض غير وارد على شيء من المذهبيين بل ذلك وارد على من جمع في مذهبه من كل واحد من المذهبيين شيئا فرأى رأي المشائين في نفي التفاوت بين الذاتيات و الماهيات بالتقدم و التأخر و الأولوية و عدمها و رأى رأي الرواقيين في أن الوجود أمر ذهني لا تأثير لها و لا تأثر و إنما الجاعلية و المجعولية بحسب الماهيات لا غير فيلزم عليه التناقض و قد مر في أوائل هذا السفر ورود هذا الإلزام على جمع من الأعلام و قد خرقوا الإجماع المركب الواقع من الحكماء العظام و صادموا البرهان المتبع للعقول في الأحكام.

و أما الجواب عن البحث الخامس

فإننا نقول إن جوهرية الجسم و إن لم تكن غير جوهرية مجموع الجزءين و لا زائدة عليهما إلا أن جوهريته غير جوهرية كل واحد من الجزءين بالعدد بناء على ما ذهب إليه تبعا لأكثر القوم من أن جعل المادة غير جعل الصورة فأما إذا كان جعلاهما واحدا لم يكن لأحد أن يقول - جوهرية الجسم غير جوهرية كل منهما بالعدد كما في النوع البسيط بالنسبة إلى جنسه و فصله فالجسم جوهر موجود لا محالة و ليس وجوده الجوهرية على ما اختاره عين وجود أحد جزئيه و لا جوهرية الجزء و الكل واحدا بالعدد بل بحسب المفهوم من المعنى الجنسي فمجرد أنه لم يكن معنى الجوهرية التي في الكل غير معنى الجوهرية التي في الجزءين لم يلزم أن لا يكون الكل في نفسه جوهرًا ثالثا بل للكل جوهرية

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٧١

أخرى غير الجوهريتين اللتين للجزئين بالعدد لا في كونها جوهرية ولا في كون الكل جوهرًا فجوهرية الكل جوهرية
ثالثة غير جوهرية الهيولى و جوهرية الصورة- إلا أنها ليست غير جوهرية المجموع بما هو مجموع وليست غير
جوهرية كل واحد من الجزئين في معنى الجوهرية و بحسبها بالعدد

فصل (٦) في ذكر خواص الجوهر

منها أنه لا ضد له.

و هذا إن عني بالمتضادين ما يتعاقبان على موضوع واحد و بينهما غاية الخلاف.
و أما إن عني بالموضوع ما هو أعم من موضوع الأعراض و مادة الجواهر- أي المحل مطلقا كان للجوهر ضد كالصورة
النارية فإنها تضاد الصورة المائية و نقل بعضهم عن الشيخ الرئيس أن هذا النزاع لفظي و هو ليس كذلك كما سنشير إليه
و يشارك الجوهر في هذه الخاصية بعض أنواع الكم إذ لا ضد للعدد كالثلاثة و الأربعة- لعدم التعاقب لهما على موضوع واحد و أيضا ما من عدد إلا فوقه عدد آخر فلا يكون بين عددين غاية التباعد.
اللهم إلا عند من لا يشترط غاية التباعد في التضاد.

و قد علمت تخالف الاصطلاحين فيه بين المنطقيين و الإلهيين قالوا و من توابع هذه الخاصية خاصة أخرى للجوهر و
هو نفي الاشتداد و التضعف عنه إذ الاشتداد و التضعف إنما يكونان فيما يقبل التضاد لأن معانها الحركة نحو الكمال أو
النقص- و أجزاء الحركة غير مجتمعة في محل واحد و لأن بقاء الموضوع شرط في تمام الحركة و المسافة فهو إن كان
الفرد الضعيف فيبطل بالاشتداد و إن كان الفرد الشديد فيبطل بالتضعف فلا يكون موضوع باقيا فلا حركة في الجوهر و
ستعلم ضعف هذا القول عند كلامنا في إثبات حدوث العالم بوقوع الاستحالة في الطبائع و صور الجوهرية.

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٧٢

و لقائل أن يقول أيضا إن عد هذا الحال خاصة للجوهر غير مستقيم فإن الكم لا يقبلهما عندهم لأن المحققين لا يفرقون
بين الاشتداد و التضعف و بين الازدياد و التنقص في المعنى فإن الحركة في الكمال معنى واحد سواء كانت في الكيف
و سمي بالاشتداد أو في الكم و سمي بالازدياد و كذا الحركة في التنقص معنى واحد سواء سمي بالتضعف أو بالتنقص
و لأن الكمية الواحدة المعينة أيضا يبطل بالازدياد و الانتقاص إذا كانت متصلة و إذا كانت منفصلة فليس ما هو الزائد
عين ما هو الناقص- فلا حركة للكم في كميته فكذا لا حركة للكيف في كفيته لأن الاشتداد ليس بأن كيفية ما تبقى
بعينها و يضم إليها مثلها فإن الشديد من الكيفية عرض بسيط كالضعيف منها ليس أنه يتألف من أمثال الضعيف كما مر
نعم المادة يتحرك في المقادير- كما يتحرك الموضوع في الكيفيات.

لكنك تعلم أن مقصودهم ليس أن الجوهر لا يتحرك بل أن لا حركة فيه- فلا يكون وزانه أن لا حركة للكم و لا للكيف
بل الوزن إنما يتحقق لو ثبت أن لا حركة في الكم أو لا اشتداد و لم يثبت مما ذكر فلا يبطل الخاصة المذكورة بما أورده
و كثيرا ما يقع الاشتباه بين هذين المعنيين لمن نظر في كلامهم حتى إن صاحب حكمة الإشراق غير العبارة في
المطارحات عند عده خواص الجوهر فقال و من أحوال الجوهر الغير العامة و من خواص الجوهر أنه لا يشتد و لا
يضعف و هذا لاستحالة التضاد فيه فإن الاشتداد و التضعف إنما يكونان بين الضدين و هذا ليس خاصة الجوهر فإن الكم

أيضا لا يقبلهما على ما سيأتي فيه الكلام انتهى قوله.

و ليس فيما ذكره في مستأنف كلامه إلا نفي الحركة من الكم لا نفيها فيه و أين هذا من ذاك كيف و المتحرك بالذات في كل حركة ليس إلا الجواهر المادية - بل الذي عد من الخواص لمقولة الجوهر نفي كونه حاصلا بالتدرج متحركا و هذا ما راموه بقولهم لا اشتداد و لا حركة لها بدلا عن قولهم لا اشتداد و لا حركة فيها و لهذا قالوا إن جوهر لا يكون أشد في الجوهرية من جوهر آخر و إن كان أولى منه

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٧٣

في الوجود لأن الأولوية تتعلق بوجود الشيء و الأشدية تتعلق بماهيته

بحث و تحقيق

و لأصحاب المكاشفة المؤيدين بقوة البرهان و نور العرفان هاهنا نظر حكمي - و هو أن الاشتداد كما يقع في كيف يقع في الجوهر و أن الموضوع للحركة الجوهرية في الطبائع المادية وحدته الشخصية محفوظة بوحدة عقلية نورية فاعلية للفاعل العقلي الحافظ للشخص الطبيعي في مراتب الاستعمالات الذاتية و الأطوار الوجودية و بوحدة إبهامية قابلية للمادة المنحفضة وحدتها في مراتب الانفعالات و الانقلابات فإذا نصح وقوع الحركة في الجوهر إما في مراتب التمامية و الكمال أو في مراتب الانتقاص لكن الأولى بحسب مقتضى الطبيعة من جهة العناية الربانية - و الثانية بحسب قسر القاسر أو قصور القابل فالأول كما في استكمالات الجوهر الإنساني من لدن كونه جنينا بل منسيا إلى غاية كونه عقلا بالفعل و ما فوقه فإن العقل الصافي و الذهن السليم يحكم بأن التفاوت في هذه المراتب الإنسانية ليس بأمور عرضية زائدة من أحوال المزاج و غيره من المقدار و الوضع و ما يجري مجراها - حتى إنه لا فرق بين الطفل الناقص و الشيخ الكامل إلا بالأعراض فإن بطلان هذا قريب من البديهيات.

و أما الثاني فكانقلاب العناصر بعضها إلى بعض فإن الماء إذا صار هواء عند ورود الحرارة الشديدة عليه المضغفة للمائية قليلا قليلا بالتدرج حتى يقرب طبيعته طبيعة الهواء فيصير هواء فليس ذلك بأن الماء مع كونه ماء صار هواء - أو نفذ الماء في آن و حدث الهواء في آن آخر مجاور له فيلزم تتالي الأئين و هو محال - أو غير مجاور له فيلزم تعري الماء عن الصور بينهما و هو أيضا محال بل الحق أن الجوهر المائي تنقصت جوهريته المائية على التدرج حتى صار هواء و ذلك لأن

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٧٤

الموضوع لهذه الحركة الجوهرية هو الهولي و لكن لا بنفسها لعدم قوامها إلا بصورة ما بل هي مع صورة ما لا على التعيين موضوع لهذه الحركة وإنما يقع حركتها في خصوصيات الصور الجوهرية و هذه كالحركة الكمية فإن الهولي مادة الكم المقداري لا يمكن خلوه عن مقدار ما فهي مع مقدار ما باقية موضوعة للحركة في خصوصيات المقدار فلا تبطل وحدتها المعتمدة في بقائها و انحفاظها بتعاقب الصور عليها كما لا تبطل بتوارد المقادير عليها.

و قد علمت أن المقدار التعليمي ليس مما يمكن تجرد المادة عنها لا في الوجود و لا في الوهم أيضا فإذا الموضوع للحركة الجوهرية باق بعينه بحاله التي اعتبرت في قوام وجوده و مع توارده خصوصيات الجوهر الصوري عليه فلا

محذور في ذلك كما زعمه الشيخ الرئيس و متابعه.

و أيضا فلو لم يكن حد مشترك بين الماء و الهواء حتى يكون أسخن الأفراد المائية و أبرد الأفراد الهوائية يلزم المحذور المذكور أنفا من خلو الهيولى من كافة الصور في أن فهو مستحيل اتفاقا و برهانا و هذا مما لا مخلص لهم عنه إلا بتجوير الحركة في الصور الجوهرية أي الاشتداد و التضعف.

تنبيه

و مما ينبه على هذا المطلب و يؤكد أنه المنى في الرحم يزداد كمالات حتى يصدر عنه فعل النبات ثم يتكامل حتى يصدر عنه أفعال الحيوان ثم آثار الإنسانية - فلو كان حدوث هذه الكمالات فيه دفعا بلا تدرج في الاشتداد و الاستكمال على سبيل فساد دفعي و كون أني يلزم تعاقب الفواعل المتباينة الذوات على مادة مشتركة - و ذلك غير صحيح في الأفاعيل الطبيعية فإن تفويض أحد الفاعلين مادة فعله إلى الآخر - إنما يصح في الصناعات الاختيارية الواقعة بالقصد و الروية دون الطبيعية فإن مادة كل فعل طبيعي متقوم بفعله.

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٧٥

و أيضا لا شك أن للطبيعة القائمة بمادة النطفة اقتضاء في الاستكمال و توجهها غريزيا نحو تحصيل الكمال و ليس توجهها و اقتضاؤها مبطلا لنفسه و مفسدا لصورته - فمن أين حصلت علة الفساد و سبب البطلان للصورة الأولى حتى يحدث الثانية و الطبيعة لا يقتضي إلا حفظ صورتها و التوجه إلى غايتها و كمالها بإمداد من القوى العالية.

فكما أن الصورة الطبيعية كمال للمادة الجسمية فكذا الصورة النباتية كمال - و سبب غائي للصورة الطبيعية و كذلك الحيوانية غاية كمالية للنفس النباتية و هلم جرا إلى درجة العقل المستفاد و ما بعده و في جميع هذه الدرجات و المقامات وحدة - موضوع الحركة محفوظة بواحد بالعموم من الصورة و هو نوع ما من الصور المتعاقبة على الاتصال يستحفظه وحدته الاتصالية بواحد بالعدد من الجوهر الفعال المفيض للكمال بعد الكمال حسب تزايد الاستكمال بتوارد الأحوال و الاتصال أيضا ضرب من الوحدة الشخصية و إن كان على سبيل التدرج و عدم الاستقرار و هذا و إن كان فيه حيد عن المشهور لكنك تعلم أن العاقل لا يحيد عن المشهور و لا يجاوز ما عليه الجمهور ما وجد عنه محيصا.

ثم من نظر في أطوار الإنسان و عجائب نشأته و عوالمه و رآه كيف تعرج تارة إلى سماء العقل رقيا و ينزل إلى أرض الطبيعة هوبا لم يبق له شك في أن له اشتدادا و تضعفا بحسب جوهر ذاته و إنني لا أبالي بمخالفة الجمهور و مجاوزة المشهور بل المسافر يفرح بها و يفتخر فإن الجمهور مستقرون ساكنون في البلد الذي هو مسقط رؤوسهم و أرض ولادتهم و أول منزل وجودهم و إنما يسافر منه و يهاجر الآحاد منهم دون الأعداد.

و أما الذي يكسر سورة استنكارك و استبعادك حيث تقول إنه يلزم الانقلاب في الماهيات و الذاتيات فهو أنك إن تحققت و أدعنت ما أسلفناه في أن الوجود هو الأصل في الوجودية و الوقوع و الماهيات تابعة لأنحاء الوجودات و علمت أن أفراد الوجود بعضها أشد و بعضها أضعف كما أن بعضها أقدم من بعض بالذات لعلمت أن

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٧٦

الاشتداد سواء كان في الهيئة الكيفية أو في الصورة الجوهرية حركة في وجود الشيء لا في ماهيته.

والمشاءون قائلون بأن مراتب الأشد والأضعف أنواع مختلفة لكنها عند الاشتداد ليست متميزة موجودة بالفعل وإلا لزم تركيب الحركة من أكوأانية غير متناهية وهو محال وانكشف لك أن انحفاظ الماهيات على ما هي هي في كل مرتبة من الوجود بحاله من غير انقلاب فيها فإن كل معنى من المعاني وكل ماهية من الماهيات بحسب ذاته ليس إلا نفسه وكذا كل نحو خاص من الوجود ليس إلا نفسه إلا أن لحقيقة الوجود أنحاء وأطوارا كثيرة في شئون ذاتها ودرجات نفسها لا يجعل جاعل وتأثير فاعل وهو شديد الغموض ليس هاهنا موضع كشفه ولنرجع إلى ما فارقناه.

فنقول ومن خواص الجوهر كونه مقصودا بالإشارة قيل إنها دلالة حسية أو عقلية إلى الشيء بحيث لا يشترك فيها غيره فالإشارة لو كانت إلى الأعراض فهي إن كانت حسية فمحسوسية الأعراض إنما هي بأمور تابعة للمواد والأجرام فالإشارة إليها تابعة للإشارة إلى محالها وإن كانت إشارة عقلية فهي لا تتناول الأعراض الشخصية - إلا من جهة العلم بأسبابها وعللها فلا يكون العلم بها إلا كليا فلا يكون إشارة إذ الإشارة إلى شيء لا يحتمل الشركة كما قلنا.

ومن هاهنا يعلم أن كليات الجوهر أيضا لا يمكن الإشارة إليها ككليات الأعراض فقد أخطأ من ظن أن هذه الخاصة شاملة لجميع الجواهر وكذا الجوهر الجزئي الجسماني غير قابل للإشارة العقلية لكونه غير معقول على ما هو المشهور عندهم - فلا يشار إليه بإشارة عقلية إلا بتبعية العلم بأسبابها وعللها.

ومنهم من زعم أن العرض قابل للإشارة العقلية لأنها تعقل من حيث طبيعته دون الإضافة إلى محل مخصوص فلم يبق فرق بين الجوهر والعرض في قبولها إذ الكلي من كل منهما مقصود بالإشارة العقلية والجزئي من كل منهما مقصود بالإشارة الحسية - إلا أن من عرف معنى كون الشيء مقصودا بالإشارة وأن مرجعها نحو من الوجود

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٧٧

الحضورى ولا يكفي فيها مطلق المعلوماتية على الوجه الكلي لم يشته عليه الأمر - فإن ماهية العرض مما يتقوم وجوده بالموضوع بخلاف الجوهر فإنه لا حاجة له إلى محل.

والذي يتوهم فيه الحاجة إلى المحل من الصور المادية ليس كما توهم فإن الحاجة لها إلى المادة ليست في تقويم وجودها بل في لوازم شخصيتها كما سيجيء - فماهية كل جوهر بحسب وجودها الذهني التي يعرضه العموم والاشتراك مما لا شبهة في قبولها للإشارة العقلية من حيث تعيينها العقلي الذهني وإن لم يقبلها من حيث إبهامها الخارجي بخلاف ماهية العرض فإنها تابعة لغيرها في الوجود مطلقا - فليست مقصودة إلا بالعرض كما يظهر بالوجدان.

وأما الجوهر المفارق البحث فهل يمكن أن يقع إليها إشارة عقلية مخصصة عينا وعقلا فالمشاءون ينكرونها إلا في علم المفارق بذاته وصفاته الذاتية والرواقيون أثبتوها.

والحق في ذلك مع الرواقيين كما سيأتي في مباحث علم الله ومن خواص الجوهر كونه موجودا لنفسه بالمعنى المقابل للوجود النسبي وهذه يختص بما لا محل له من الجواهر فإن الصور المادية وكذا كليات الجواهر على رأي المشائين وجودها لغيرها إذ ليس قوامها بذاتها أصلا وإنما قلنا على رأي المشائين لما مر من مذهب الأقدمين من وجود الكليات الطبيعية في عالم المفارقات قائمة بأنفسها.

ولقائل أن يقول أما الصور المادية فهي من حيث طبيعتها مستغنية عن المادة

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٧٨

و إنما الحاجة لها إلى المادة من حيث تشخصها و ليست المادة متقومة بها بخصوصها لبقاء المادة دونها فما هو أصل الجوهر و حقيقته فليس وجوده لغيره و ما هو لغيره فهو عرض و أما الكليات و الصور الذهنية فقد مر أنها ليست من مقولة الجوهر بل من مقولة الكيف و إن كانت حدودها و معانيها الجوهرية حاصلة في العقل و الجوهر محمول عليها لا بالحمل الشائع الصناعي فلم ينقدح لشيء من القليلين عموم هذه الخاصية للجوهر.

لكننا نجيب عن الأول بأن الجوهر الصوري و إن كان بحسب الماهية مستغنيا عن المادة إلا أنه لما كانت ماهية متحدة مع التشخص في نحو من الوجود اتحادا بالذات - صدق أن هذا النوع من الجوهر وجوده الشخصي لغيره.

و عن الثاني أيضا بمثل ما ذكرناه فإن ماهية الإنسان واقع تحت مقولة الجوهر بالذات فيكون جوهرًا لكن يصدق عليها أنها مما يوجد مفتقرا إلى موضوع عقلي قائما به فتكون عند وجودها الذهني موجودة لغيرها فهذه الخاصية ليست ثابتة لمقولة الجوهر في جميع أفرادها الشخصية التي يحمل عليها معنى الجوهرية أو يشمل في ذواتها عليه.

و من خاصية الجوهر أن الواحد العددي منه يقبل صفات متقابلة كالسواد و البياض للجسم و الرجاء و الخوف في النفس.

فإن قلت الظن الواحد قد يكون صادقا و قد يكون كاذبا و هو نوع من العلم القائم بالنفس و العلم الحسولي عرض فالكيف أيضا اشترك مع الجوهر في هذا الوصف.

قلت المراد تبدل تلك الصفات المتضادة في أنفسها لا بحسب نسبتها إلى أمر خارج و الصدق و الكذب من الأمور النسبية فالظن الصادق إذا كذب كان لتغير الأمر الخارج عنه فالصورة العقلية بحالها عند ما كذبت نسبتها إلى الواقع بعد الصدق

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٧٩

و هذا أيضا من الخواص الغير الشاملة فإن الجواهر المفارقة لا تغير فيها و العالم العقلي مصون عن التبدل و التجدد و لوحه محفوظ عن النسخ و المحو و الإثبات و إنما القابل لشيء منها هو ما دون ذلك العالم كالعالم النفساني السماوي فإن فيه كتاب المحو و الإثبات لتطرق النسخ و و التبديل في النفوس لقوله تعالى يَمْحُوا اللَّهُ مَا يَشَاءُ وَيُثَبِّتُ وَ عِنْدَهُ أُمُّ الْكِتَابِ.

و لا يتوهم أن الكلي من الجوهر الذي عندهم من الجواهر الثانية أو الثالثة مما يتغير لأجل كونه محمولا على الأبيض تارة و على الأسود أخرى لأن ذلك لمطابقتها للمختلفات لا لتغيره بالذات في صفة من الصفات فالكلي يشتمل على كل شخص و ليس بحق أن كل شخص منه أبيض و كل شخص منه أسود فلا يتغير الجواهر الثواني - و الثوالت من جهة ما هي ثوان و ثوالت أعني الأنواع و الأجناس كما لا يتغير المفارقات بالفعل و لا يتوهم أن هذه الخاصية توجد في الأعراض بواسطة أن تتخيل - أن اللون المطلق يجوز كونه سوادا و بياضا فتغير من السواد إلى البياض و ذلك لأن البياض إذا بطل فصله بطلت لونيته لأنهما مجعولان بجعل واحد فإذا زال لون زال بتمامه و حصل لون آخر و ليس يجوز انسلاخ فصله مع بقاء سنخ منه لأن ذلك غير ممكن التحقق في النوع البسيط و اللون المطلق العقلي نسبته إلى الجميع سواء.

و ما اشتهر من أن في الجنس استعدادا لوجود الفصول فذلك إنما يصح في جنس الأنواع المركبة لا بما هو جنس بل بما هو مأخوذ مادة.

و قد علمت الفرق بين الاعتبارين فيما سبق فلو أطلق في جنس البسائط أنه مما يقبل الفصول فمعناه أن الوهم يمكنه أن يجرد الطبيعة الجنسية كاللونية مثلا- فينسبه إلى أي الفصلين شاء كالباضية للبصر و المفرقية له على أن ما عد من خواص الجوهر هو القبول الخارجي لأمرين متقابلين يعرضان لقابل واحد و لو أن الكلي بما هو كلي يقبلهما لكان كل لون سوادا أو بياضا و لو كانت طبيعة اللون تقبل السواد كانت مسودة لا سوادا كذا لو قبلت البياض كانت مبيضة لا بياضا فلم يكن في الوجود سواد ما

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٨٠

و لا بياض ما و لو كانا لم يكونا معا بل على التعاقب في الوجود و كثيرا ما يقع الغلط من الاشتباه بين الوحدة العددية و الوحدة المعنوية

فصل (٧) في استحالة أن يكون موجود واحد جوهر و عرضا

هذا الحكم مما يعرف صدقه ضرورة بملاحظة مفهوم الجوهر و العرض لكون أحدهما بمنزلة سلب الآخر و الشيء و سلبه لا يصدقان على شيء بدهاة فإن مفهوم العرض الموجود في موضوع و مفهوم الجوهر الموجود لا في موضوع فلا نعني بالجوهر إلا ما لا يكون متعلق الوجود بالموضوع و لا بالعرض إلا ما يكون متعلق الوجود بموضوع ما أي موضوع كان فالشيء الواحد يستحيل أن يصدق عليه هذان المفهومان و قد جوز ذلك قوم من القدماء و الشيخ الرئيس استبعده و لهم وجوه تمسكوا بها.

أحدها أن فصول الجواهر جواهر مع أن الحكماء يقولون كثيرا من الفصول أنها كفيات و الكفيات أعراض فتلك الفصول تكون جواهر و أعراضا معا.

و قد أجاب الشيخ عنه بأن إطلاق الكيف على الفصول و على التي من مقولة الأعراض بالاشتراك اللفظي. و يمكن أن يقال في نفي كون فصول الجواهر أعراضا إن الفصل كما مر ليس موجودا متميزا عن الجنس إلا في العقل عند التحليل فلو كان عرضا للجنس لوجب أن يتميز وجوده عن وجود ما يتوهم كونه موضوعا له ضرورة أن وجود العرض مبين لوجود موضوعه في الواقع و الفصل متحد مع الجنس في الوجود لأنه يحمل عليه حمل هو هو. و أما عند التحليل العقلي و اعتبار كل منهما متميزا عن صاحبه فيكون نسبة الفصل إلى الجنس حينئذ نسبة الصورة إلى المادة لا نسبة العرض إلى موضوعه فيكون

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٨١

الفصل صورة عقلية و الجنس مادة عقلية يحتاج في تحصيل وجودها و تعيينها إلى تلك الصورة إذ المبهم لا وجود له بالاستقلال و كذا الحال في فصول المركبات و أجناسها- إلا أن لها في الخارج أيضا تعددا في الوجود بوجه فيكون مادة و صورة خارجيتين لا عرضا و موضوعا.

و ثانيها أن الصورة موجودة في حامل الصورة لا كجزء منه فكانت عرضا و كانت في الجوهر المركب منهما جزء منه و

جزء الجوهر جوهر فكان أمر واحد جوهرًا و عرضًا.

و الجواب أن الصورة ليس وجودها في حامل الصورة كوجود الشيء في الموضوع - ولا في المركب أيضًا كذلك على ما قرره ولا وجود لها في غير هذين فلا يكون عرضًا أصلاً لعدم حاجتها إلى شيء من الأشياء حاجة العرض إلى الموضوع فيكون جوهرًا في ذاتها مطلقًا.

و ثالثها أن الحرارة جزء من الحار و الحار جوهر فالحرارة جزء الجوهر و جزء الجوهر جوهر فالحرارة جوهر بالنسبة إلى الحار من حيث هو حار لكنها عرض بالنسبة إلى الجسم القابل لها فهي تكون جوهرًا و عرضًا بالنسبة إلى الأمرين. و الجواب أن الحرارة إن أريد بها الطبيعة النارية الغير المحسوسة فحالتها كما علمت من أن وجودها في الجسم الناري أعني مادة النار ليس كوجود شيء في الموضوع - بل كوجود شيء في المادة أعني الصورة و إن أريد بها الكيفية المحسوسة فهي ليست جزءً للحار لا في النار و لا في غيرها إلا بمجرد الفرض و الاعتبار. و رابعها إن العرض في المركب كجزء منه فلا يكون عرضًا فيه و كل

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٨٢

ما لا يكون عرضًا في الشيء كان جوهرًا فيه لكنه بالنسبة إلى القابل له عرض فالشيء الواحد يكون جوهرًا و عرضًا. و الجواب أن هذه شبهة نشأت من الخلط بين مفهومي الجوهر و الجوهرى و كذا بين مفهومي العرض و العرضى فإن الأخيرين أعني الجوهرى و العرضى أمران نسيان - و الأولان أمران حقيقيان فكما أن الجوهر دائماً في ذاته لا يتغير جوهريته بالقياس إلى شيء بل لأنه في نفسه غير مفتقر إلى موضوع أصلاً فكذا العرض في نفسه لا بالقياس إلى شيء. و أما العرضية أو الجوهرية بمعنى كون الشيء عرضياً أي خارجاً محمولاً أو جوهرياً أي ذاتياً فذلك مما يكون بناؤه على أحد هذين الاعتبارين - و إحدى هاتين النسبتين أعني الدخول في شيء و الخروج عنه فهما هنا احتمالات - فإن شيئاً واحداً يجوز أن يكون عرضاً في نفسه و عرضياً لشيء و يجوز أن يكون عرضاً في نفسه و جوهرياً لشيء و أن يكون جوهرًا في نفسه و جوهرياً لشيء أو جوهرًا في نفسه و عرضياً لآخر كالإنسان بالقياس إلى الضاحك و يحتمل أيضاً أن يكون شيء واحد عرضاً في نفسه و جوهرياً و عرضياً لشيئين آخرين كالبياض فإنه عرض في نفسه و عرضى بالقياس إلى الجسم القابل و جوهرى بالقياس إلى المركب منهما و أن يكون شيء واحد جوهرًا في نفسه و جوهرياً و عرضياً بالقياس إلى آخرين كالحيوان فإنه جوهر في نفسه و جوهرى للإنسان و عرضى للماشى. فقد انكشف أن مجرد كون الشيء في المركب جزء له لا يوجب كونه جوهرًا إلا إذا لم يكن ماهيته محتاجة إلى الموضوع فإن كانت ماهيته مفتقرة إلى الموضوع فهو عرض سواء كان جزءاً للمركب أم لا و ما وجد في كلام القوم أن جزء المركب الجوهرى جوهر فهو مشروط بأن يكون المركب ذا طبيعة واحدة

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٨٣

لأن جزء المركب الطبيعى إذا وجد في شيء فلا يكون وجوده فيه كوجود شيء في موضوع - بل كوجوده في مادة له و هذه المعاني مبسوطة في قاطيعورياس الشفاء بما لا مزيد عليه. فمن أراد فليرجع إلى ما هناك لكن ما ذكرناه يكفي للسالك الطالب لأن غرضه مجرد السلوك إلى مطلوبه و تحصيل ما لا

يتم الواجب من مطلوبه إلا به وإزالة الموانع ورفع العوائق والقواطع والمجاهدة مع الشياطين والمدافعة مع قطاع الطريق والمضلين لا الإحاطة بجميع الأقوال والمذاهب والأبحاث.

عقدة وحل -

ثم العجب من صاحب المباحث المسماة بالمشرقية أنه بعد ما نقل أكثر هذه المعاني مرارا كثيرة في كتبه وشروحه لكلام الحكماء رجع وقال إن لهم أن يحتجوا لمذهبهم أن كل ما حل في شيء فإنه يكون لذلك الحال اعتبار أنه في محل و اعتبار أنه في المجموع.

أما الاعتبار الثاني فلا شبهة في أنه لا يوجب العرضية لأنه جزء و من شرط العرض أن لا يكون جزء و أما اعتبار كونه في المحل فلا يخلو إما إن يعقل محل - يتقوم بما يحل فيه أو لا يعقل و الأول باطل لوجهين - أحدهما أن الحال محتاج في وجوده إلى المحل فلو احتاج إليه المحل لدار الاحتياج من كل منهما إلى الآخر و الدور باطل.

الثاني أن هيولى العناصر مشتركة بين صورها فلو كان لوجود شيء من الصور العنصرية مدخل في تقويم وجود الهيولى و تتميم ذاتها لزم ارتفاع الهيولى عند ارتفاع تلك الصورة فحينئذ لا يكون الهيولى مشتركة هذا خلف فيكون الحال

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٨٤

جوهرها و عرضها و هذه هي العقدة التي لفقها من قبل المجوزين لكون الواحد جوهرها و عرضها. و أما حلها فبتذكر ما سلف حتى تظهر وجوه الفساد فيما ذكره.

أما أولا فلأنه خلط بين الجوهر و الجوهرى أعني الذاتى و بين العرض و العرضى أعني الخارج عن الذات فاستدل على جوهرية كل ما حل في موضوع بأنه جزء للمجموع و جزء المجموع لا يكون عرضا.

و الحق أن جزء المجموع لا يكون عرضيا له لأنه لا يكون عرضا في نفسه - فلا يوجب كونه جزء الشيء كونه جوهرها في نفسه بل كونه جوهريا لغيره فلا منافاة بين كون الشيء عرضا في نفسه جوهريا لغيره.

و أما ثانيا فقد وقع الخلط و الاشتباه أيضا بين حال الشيء في نفسه و بين حاله منتسبا إلى غيره فاستدل من نفي أحدهما على إثبات مقابل الآخر و ذلك باطل - فإن عدم كون الشيء عرضيا لا يوجب كونه جوهرها إذ ليس مقابلا له إنما المقابل له الجوهرى بمعنى الذاتى فلا يثبت من نفي كون الشيء عرضيا إلا كونه ذاتيا و ليس كل ذاتى جوهرها في نفسه فإن اللونية مثلا ذاتية للسواد و ليست جوهرها.

و أما ثالثا فما ذكره من الدور ليس بمستحيل مطلقا لأن جهة الاحتياج بين الحال المقوم للمحل كالصورة و المحل المتقوم به كالهيولى مختلف كما ستقف عليه في مباحث التلازم بين المادة و صورة و ليس كل ما يطلق عليه لفظ الدور و لو بالاشتراك مستحيلا إنما المحال من الدور ما يكون جهة الافتقار في الطرفين واحدة - لأن البرهان إنما أقيم على هذا لا على غيره و إن أطلق لفظ الدور عليه لغة و عرفا.

و أما رابعا فلما سيجيء من إثبات أن المادة مفتقرة في تقويمها إلى نوع من الصور أي نوع كان و ليست مفتقرة أصلا إلى شيء من الأعراض نحوا من الافتقار.

و هذا هو مناط الفرق بين كون الحال صورة و بين كونه عرضا فالعرض

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٤، ص ٢٨٥

طبيعة ناعية لا يمكن قوامها إلا بالمحل.

و أما الصور الجوهرية فحاجتها إلى المحل ليست بطبيعتها بل بعوارض شخصيتها و لوازم وجودها الخارجي.

فليكن هذا آخر ما قصدنا ذكره من خواص الجوهرية و العرضية

THE MYSTERIES OF FASTING

BEING A TRANSLATION WITH NOTES

of
The Kitab Asrar al-Sawm
of
Al-Ghazzali's "Ihya' `Ulum al-Din"

By
NABIH AMIN FARIS
AMERICAN UNIVERSITY OF BEIRUT

Other books translated by the author:

- (1) The Book of Knowledge
- (2) The Foundations of the Articles of Faith
- (3) The Mysteries of Purity
- (4) The Mysteries of Almsgiving

Our other publications about Ghazzali:

1. Al-Ghazzali on Divine Predicates and their Properties
2. Some Moral and Religious Teachings of Ghazzali
3. Faith and Practice of Ghazzali
4. The Ethical Philosophy of Al-Ghazzali
5. The Confessions of Al-Ghazzali
6. Ghazzali's Mishkat al-Anwar
7. The Alchemy of Happiness
8. The Mysteries of Worship in Islam
9. The Mysteries of the Human Soul
10. Imam Ghazzali's Ihya Ulum-id-Din (4 vols.)
by Fazul-ul-Karim

SH. MUHAMMAD ASHRAF
PUBLISHERS, BOOKSELLERS & EXPORTERS
7, AIBAK ROAD, NEW ANARKALI, LAHORE-7 (PAKISTAN)

PREFACE

The practice of fasting as a spiritual discipline is both ancient and widespread. It antedates Islam, even among the Arabs, and from time immemorial has been observed in various ways by Jews, Christians, and eastern and pagan religions. The Prophet himself, according to several authentic traditions¹ was wont to observe, like his own tribe of Quraysh, the fast of 'Ashura' on the tenth day of Muharram. The custom was taken over from the Jewish "Asor fast of the Day of Atonement, which fell on the tenth of Tishri. "When the Prophet came to Medina he found the Jews fasting on the Day of 'Ashura. When they were asked about it they said: 'This is the Day on which God gave victory to Moses and the children of Israel over Pharaoh, so we keep it as a fast to honour it'. The Prophet replied: 'We are more worthy of Moses than you are', and commanded that it be kept a fast."² After the break with the Jews the fast or Ramadan was instituted, but the custom of fasting 'Ashura' became optional and supererogatory. It commemorates the day on which Noah left the ark.³

Though not one of the four pre-Islamic sacred

1. See Muslim, Sabib, Dar al-Tib'ah al-'Ammah, Cairo 1330, Vol. III, pp.146-50; al-Bukhari, Sabib, Sawm: 1, 69.
2. Muslim, Sabib, Vol.III, p.149.
3. Ibn-al-Athir, al-Kamil fi-l-Tarikh, Cairo 1303, Vol. I, p.25.

Copyright

Reprinted 1992

Printed at Ashraf Printing Press, 9-Aibak Road, Lahore-7, and Published by Sh. Shahzad Riaz for Sh. Muhammed Ashraf, 7-
Aibak Road, New Anarkali, Lahore-7, Pakistan.

months, namely dhu-'l-Qa'dah, dhu-'l-Hijjah, Muharram, and Rajab, during which fighting was unlawful, Ramadan was of special religious significance among the Quraysh. Those of them, who desired to do penance were accustomed to go to Mt. Hira' upon the beginning of Ramadan where they performed their tabannuth (religious devotion and penance). The exercises lasted the entire month, and at its conclusion the devotees made their way to the Kaaba, where they performed the circumambulation seven times and then returned home to resume normal life. The Prophet himself observed the same custom.⁴ And it was during one of those vigils of devotion and penance in Ramadan that the Prophet received his first divine revelation.⁵ The Qur'an specifically states this, and links the institution of Ramadan as the proper month of fasting for Muslims with the month "wherein the Qur'an was sent down to be a guidance to the people, and as a clear sign of Guidance and Salvation."⁶ The night on which the first revelation took place is known as the Laylat al-Qadr (the Night of Power), "which is better than a thousand months; in it the angels and the Spirits descend, by the leave of their Lord, upon every command. Peace it is, till the rising of dawn."⁷ It was also in Ramadan that the Prophet won his first major decisive victory at Badr, which was interpreted as the 4. Ibn-Hisham, Sirat Rasul Allah, ed. F. Wustenfeld, Leyden, 1858-1860, pp.151-52; tr. A. Guillaume, Oxford University Press, 1955, pp.105-6; al-Baladhuri, Ansab al-Ashraf, ed. M. Hamid Allah, Cairo 1959, p.105.

5. Ibn-Hisham, p.152.

6. Surab ii: 185. Quranic quotations in the Preface are after the translation of A.J. Arberry, Oxford 1964. Numbering of verses follow that of the Cairo edition of King Fuad, A.H. 1342.

7. Surab xcvi: 3-5.

divine sanction of the new faith,⁸ the miraculous Furqan⁹ which distinguished good from evil. For all these reasons, the institution of Ramadan as the proper month of fasting became quite natural. The battle of Badr took place in Ramadan, A.H.2 [February-March A.D.624], and, in all likelihood, the fast of Ramadan to be fully observed was that of A.H. 3 [February 15-March 16, A.D. 625].

The following pages are a translation of the Kitab Asrar al-Saum (On the Mysteries of Fasting) which is the fifth book of the first quarter of the Ibya' 'Ulum al-Din. The translation is based on three printed texts and one in manuscript form. The printed texts are: first that printed at Kafr al-Zaghari in A.H. 1352 from the older Cairo edition of A.H. 1289; second, that contained in the text of the Ithaf al-Sadab al-Muttaqin bi-Sharb Ibya' 'Ulum al-Din of al-Sayyid al-Murtada al-Zabidi (d.1791); third, that reproduced in the margin of the same Ithaf al-Sadab; and fourth, the text preserved in a four-volume manuscript in the Garrett Collection of Arabic Manuscripts in the Princeton University Library (No.1481). In the translation of Quranic verses, I have depended mainly on J.M. Rodwell's version.

It is my hope that by making still another Book of the Ibya available in English, non-Arabic-speaking scholars will be benefited, even from my mistakes.

Beirut,
February 15, 1967

Nabih Amin Paris

8. Surab iii: 123.

9. Surab viii: 41, 42.

also said, "Verily, the patient shall be repaid: their reward shall not be by measure."¹³ Fasting comprises one-half of fortitude and its reward transcends reckoning and calculation. To have an idea of its excellence you have only to remember the words of the Apostle when he said, "By Him who holds my life in His hand, the soul breath of the fasting man's mouth is more fragrant before God and better pleasing to Him than redolent musk." "The fasting man abjureth his food and drink and suppresseth his appetite for My sake," said the Lord, "and I shall reward him for it."¹⁴ The Apostle also said, "Verily Paradise hath, [among others], a gate which is called al-Raayyan and through which no one shall enter except those who have observed the fast."¹⁵ And again, "Two joys are prepared for him who observes the fast; the joy of breaking the fast and that of meeting his Lord."¹⁶ On another occasion he said, "Everything hath a gateway and the gateway of worship is fasting."¹⁷ And again he said, "The sleep of the fasting man is worship."¹⁸

Abu Hurayrah related that the Apostle once said, "When the month of Ramadan arriveth, the gates of Paradise are flung open while those of Hell are closed. At the sametime all the devils are put in chains [212]

13. Surab xxxix:13.

14. Al-Bukhari, Sawm: 2, 9.

15. Idid, Sawm: 4.

16. Muslim, Siyam: 162, 164, 165; al-Bukhari, Sawm: 9.

17. Unidentified

18. Unidentified

BOOK VI

On the Mysteries of Fasting

INTRODUCTION

Praise be to God who hath shown great favour unto His servants by delivering them from the wiles of Satan; who hath thwarted the hopes of the devil and frustrated his designs by making fasting a bulwark and a shield for His saints; who hath opened the gates of Paradise unto them and taught them that the way of Satan to their hearts lieth in secret lust; who hath made known unto them that only through subduing its secret lust could the soul at rest assert its superiority.

In accordance with the words of the Apostle that "fasting comprises half of fortitude"¹⁰ and "fortitude forms half of belief",¹¹ fasting equals one-fourth of belief. Furthermore, it is distinguished from the other pillars [of Islam] by its special and peculiar position in relation to God, since He said through the mouth of His Prophet "Every good deed will be rewarded from ten-to-seven hundred fold except fasting which is endured for My sake and which I shall reward."¹² God

10. Literally sabr, i.e., patience. Unidentified.

11. Unidentified.

12. Cf. al-Bukhari, Sawm: 2; Muslim, Siyam: 160, 162-164.

and a herald crieth out, 'O thou who seekest good come hither, and thou who desireth evil desist'.¹⁹

Commenting on the words of God, "Eat ye and drink with healthy relish, for what ye did aforetime in the days that have gone by,"²⁰ Waki²¹ said that "the days that have gone by," were the days of fasting, since during those days [men and women] have abstained from food and drink.²²

On another occasion the Apostle himself included the renunciation of the world and fasting [in the list of things which lift man to] the rank [of the angels]. Thus he said, "Verily God will make His angels vie with the ascetic young man saying, 'O young man who hast suppressed thy carnal lust for My sake and who hast consecrated the prime of thy life unto Me, thou art in My sight as one of My angels'."²³

And again the Apostle said that God would address His angels concerning fasting and say, "O My angels! Behold My servant: he hath suppressed his carnal lust, abjured his pleasures, and given up his food and drink—he hath done all that for My sak."²⁴

Concerning the words of God "No soul knoweth what joy is reserved for them in recompense of their

19. Ibn-Majah, Siyam: 1.
20. Surab Ixix:24.
21. Ibn-el-Jarrah, A.H.197 A.D. 812: ibn-Sa'd, Vol. VI, p.275.
22. Cf. al-Tabari, Jami' al-Bayan, Vol. XXX, p.39.
23. Cf. ibn-Majah, Masajid: 19.
24. Unidentified.

works"²⁵ it has been said that "their works" were fasting since God said, "Verily the patient shall be repaid: their reward shall not be by measure."²⁶ Thus will the reward of the fasting man be generous and even profuse and it will be beyond imagination or estimate. It is very meet that it be so, because fasting belongs to God and, by virtue of this relationship, it has been rendered noble, although all the acts of worship belong to God, just as the House (al-Bayt)²⁷ has been made noble by its special relationship to God, although the whole earth is His also. Fasting belongs to God in two respects: first, because it is a form of desisting and relinquishing, in its very nature concealed from human sight, whereas all the other acts of worship are apparent and exposed to it. It stands alone as the only act of worship which is not seen by anyone except God. It is an inward act of worship performed through sheer endurance and fortitude. Second, because it is a means of vanquishing the enemy of God, Satan who works through the appetites and strengthened by eating and drinking. For this reason the Apostle said, "Verily Satan affects the son of Adam by pervading his blood. Let him therefore make this difficult for Satan by means of hunger."²⁸ For the same reason he told 'A'ishah, "Persist in knocking the door of Paradise." When she asked, "With what shall I knock the door of Paradise?" he replied.

25. Surab xxxiii:17.
26. Surab xxxix:13.
27. Al-Bayt and al-Bayt al-'Atiq (the old house) denote the Ka'bah.
28. Cf. ibn-Majah, Siyam: 65; abu-Dawud, Sawm: 78.

"With hunger."²⁹ The excellence of hunger will be discussed under the section which deals with the evils of gluttony and the remedy therefrom [in the Book on the Two Appetites] in the Quarter on the Destructive Matters of Life.³⁰

Whereas fasting is primarily a method of subduing Satan, blocking his path, and placing obstacles in his way, it deserves a special place in relation to God, since subduing the enemy of God is an aid to Him, and His aid is not forthcoming unless men aid Him. Thus He said, "If ye aid God, He will help you, and will set your feet firm."³¹ The servant should take the initiative and commence his efforts and God will crown him with success by guiding him into His ways. For this reason God said, "And whoso maketh efforts for Us, in Our ways will We guide them,"³² God also said "Verily God changeth not what a people hath until they change it for themselves."³³ Change increases temptation and strengthens the appetites which are the grazing grounds of the devils and their pasturing land. As long as they are fertile the devil will continue to frequent them, and as long as he frequents them the Majesty of God will not be revealed to the servant and [His glory] will always remain concealed from him. The Apostle said, "Had it not been for the fact that the devils hover around the hearts of the children of

29. Unidentified.
30. See Vol. III, Bk. iii, sect. 1.
31. Surab xiv:8.
32. Surab xxix:69.
33. Surab xiii:12.

Adam, the latter would have readily lifted their hearts unto the Kingdom of Heaven."³⁴ In this respect fasting becomes the gateway to worship and a protection [against the fires of Hell].³⁵

Since its excellence has become so very important, it is necessary to describe its outward and inward conditions by enumerating its principles and regulations as well as its inward rules. We shall discuss this under three sections.

34. Unidentified.
35. Cf. ibn-Majah, Siyam: 1; al-Bukhari, Sawm: 2.

cumbent upon both towns alike. But if the distance were more than two days' journey, each town would have its own arrangement, and what would be incumbent upon the one would not extend to the other.

The second outward duty is intention (niyyah). Every night before the dawn of the following day³⁶, the person should specifically and deliberately entertain the intention of fasting. If he should entertain the intention to fast [213] the month of Ramadan but fail to renew his intention every night, his fast would not be valid. This is what we meant when we said every night. If he should entertain the intention during the daytime his fast would, not be valid. This is true of the fast of the month of Ramadan and of the obligatory fasts (saum al-fard), but the voluntary fasts (saum al-tatawuni) are excepted. This is what we meant. When we said that the intention of fasting should be entertained during the night before the day of fasting.

If he should entertain the intention to fast either the month of Ramadan or the obligatory fasts but fails to be specific, his fast would not be valid. The obligatory fast as well as the fast of the month of Ramadan are ordained by God and their observance should be the result of specific intention.

If during the doubtful night (Laylat al-Shak)³⁷ he should entertain the intention to fast the following day, if it would belong to Ramadan, then his fast would not be valid, unless his intention is supported by the word of a trustworthy witness. The possibility that the trust-

36. Ar. mubayyatab.
37. The thirtieth night in Sha'ban.

SECTION I
On the Outward Duties and Regulations [of Fasting] and the Duties Attending the Breaking of it.

THE OUTWARD DUTIES

The outward duties relative to fasting are six: the first duty is to watch the beginning of the month of Ramadan [and announce it] at the observation of the new moon (al-hilal). But if the clouds should make the observation of the new moon impossible then the length of Sha'ban should be extended to thirty days. By observation we mean actual sighting [of the new moon]. It is established by the word of one veracious and trustworthy witness, while that of the new moon of Shawwal is not established except by the word of two witnesses. This is merely a [means of] precaution for [the preservation of the purity of] worship. Anyone who hears a trustworthy witness assert that he had seen the new moon and believes him, fasting thereupon becomes incumbent upon him, even though the judge (al-qadi) should fail to announce the arrival of the new month. In the matter of worship, therefore, let each person do whatever he deems best.

Whenever the new moon is seen in one town but is not seen in another, and the distance between the two is less than two days' journey, fasting becomes in-worthy witness ('adl) might be mistaken or even lying should not affect the determination of the person who has planned to fast the following day. Similarly, any attendant circumstances such as doubt concerning the last night of Ramadan would not prevent the person from entertaining the intention to fast the following day. Nor would the intention to fast be affected if its entertainment depended upon mere conjecture, as in the case of a person imprisoned in a dark dungeon, who thinks that the month of Ramadan had arrived; whatever doubts he might have would not prevent him from entertaining the intention to fast. Again, if a person should be uncertain of the night of doubt, the verbal expression of his intention to fast [following day] would not avail because the seat of intention is the heart, wherein it is inconceivable to entertain doubt in conjunction with certainty. Thus, if in the middle of Ramadan one should say that he would fast the following day if that day were of Ramadan, no harm could be done because it is mere repetition of words, while in the seat of intention there would be no room for doubt or hesitation, rather it is positively certain that [the following day] is of Ramadan. He who formulates his intention during the night [and decides to fast the following day] and then eats while it is yet night will not invalidate his intention. If a woman in a state of menstruation should entertain the intention of fasting [on the he following day] and her period come to an end before dawn, her fast would be valid.

The third duty is that, as long as he remembers that he is fasting, the individual should abstain (imsak) from intentionally allowing any material substance, such as food, drink, snuff, and enema, to enter his body. All these render his fast invalid. It is not, however, invalidated by phlebotomy and cupping, nor by forcing the probe into the ear or the orifice of the penis unless the probe reaches the bladder. Whatever enters the body unintentionally, such as dust, flies, or the body intentionally, such as dust, flies, or water during the finishing of the mouth will not invalidate the fast. Water, which enters the body during the rinsing of the mouth, however, will invalidate the fast if the individual goes to excess in rinsing his mouth, because he would then be [deliberately] negligent. This is what we meant when we said intentionally. We said 'as long as he remembers that he is fasting' in order to exempt [from this ruling] the one who has forgotten that he was fasting and whose eating will not invalidate his fast. But if the person should intentionally eat either at the beginning or at the end of the day, and later finds that his eating has encroached upon the actual period of daylight it would be his duty to make amends (qada). But if he should, to the best of his ability, continue to believe [that he had not eaten outside the prescribed time], he would not have to make amends. Yet he should not eat either in the early morning or in early evening except after careful and thorough examination [of the time].

The fourth duty is abstinence (imsak) from sexual intercourse. The definition of sexual intercourse is the disappearance of the glands of the penis [in the vulva]. If the person, forgetting that he is fasting, should have sexual intercourse, he would not, because of it, break the fast. If, during the night, he should either have sexual intercourse or experience an erotic dream, and wake up in the morning in a state of impurity (jumub), his fast would not thereof be broken. If the dawn breaks while he is copulating with his wife, and he stops immediately, his fast remains intact; but if he continues [until he reaches the orgasm] his fast will be invalidated, and atonement (kaffarab) becomes incumbent upon him.

The fifth duty is abstinence from deliberate seminal emission (istimna'), either through sexual contact or through no sexual contact. For deliberate seminal emission breaks the fast. The person, however, will not break his fast if he kisses his wife or lies with her unless in so doing he emits the seminal fluid. Nevertheless, both are disapproved except where the man be advanced in age and in full control of his impulses, in which case there will be no harm in kissing, although abstinence therefore is better and more desirable. If he fears that as a result of kissing [and toying] he may emit the seminal fluid, and yet kisses with the result that the seminal fluid is emitted, he breaks his fast because he was [deliberately] negligent.

The sixth duty is abstinence from vomiting, because it renders the fast invalid. But, if one cannot help it, his fast remains intact and valid. And if a person swallows phlegm or mucus from his throat or chest, he will not invalidate his fast. This has been made permissible because of the prevalence of the affliction. But if he swallows either after it had gotten to his mouth, he will break his fast.

The Duties Attending the Breaking of the Fast

The duties attending (lawazim) the breaking of the fast are four, namely, making amends (qada') atonement (kaffarab), expiation (fiḍyah), and abstinence from food and drink for the rest of the day in imitation of those who are fasting.

Making amends (qada'), is obligatory upon every responsible Muslim who has neglected to observe the fast with or without any excuse. Thus the menstruating woman, as well as the apostate, is under obligation to make amends for [every] fasting [which she or he fails to observe]; while the believer, the minor, and the insane are under no such obligation. Making amends for days omitted in Ramadan need not be consecutively performed, but may be performed either at different intervals or all at once.

The atonement (kaffarab), is not obligatory except after sexual intercourse. Seminal emission, food and drink require no atonement. The atonement consists of freeing one slave. If this is not possible, the fasting of two consecutive months will suffice; however, if this also be beyond the man's power he should feed sixty poor men, [giving] each a bushel [of wheat, or barley or dates].

As to abstinence from food and drink for the rest of the day, it is obligatory upon anyone who broke the fast [without any excuse] or failed to carry out [all its requirements]. The menstruation woman is under no obligation to fast for the rest of the day if she has already become pure. Similarly the traveller, who at the end of two days' journey, arrives not in a state of fasting, is under no obligation to fast for the rest of the day. It is also obligatory to abstain from food and drink on doubtful days when only one trustworthy witness has declared that he has seen the new moon. Furthermore, when on travel, unless it is unbearable, it is better to fast than not to fast. No one should break his fast on the day when he embarks on a journey if he has already begun that day by fasting, nor on the day when he comes in from a journey, if he has already begun that day by fasting.

As to expiation (fiḍyah), it is obligatory upon pregnant and nursing women, if they should not fast for the sake of their children. Besides making amends for days thus omitted, they should give in expiation a bushel of wheat to the poor for each day they did not fast. The aged man who does not fast [because of his infirmity] should give a bushel [of wheat] for every day thus omitted.

The Practices Connected with the Fast

The practices connected with the fast are six. They are delaying the time of the suhur,³⁸ speeding the breaking of the fast by eating dates or drinking water before performing prayer, putting away the toothpick after sunset, generous giving during the month of Ramadan, especially because of its special excellences which were discussed in the Book on Almsgiving, special study of the Qur'an, and retreating (i'tikaf) into the mosque, especially during the last ten days of the month of Ramadan. It was the custom of the Apostle of God, upon the arrival of the last ten days of the month of Ramadan, to roll up his mattress, fasten his mantle around his waist [214], and, making his family do the same, continue in his worship [until the end of the ten-day period]³⁹ since during these ten days the Night of Power (Laylat al qadr) falls. More probably the Night of Power falls on an odd night; most likely among these is the [twenty] first, or the [twenty-] third, or the [twenty-] fifth, or the [twenty-] seventh. During this ten-day retreat, the continuous observance is preferred.

38. Suhur signifies the eating of the last meal which the fasting Muslim is allowed to have just before day break. The meal itself is called the Suhur.

If the person vows or states his intention to observe these days in retreat continuously, the continuity of his observance is broken if he leaves [the mosque] without [justifiable] necessity, such as leaving in order to call on some sick person, or to attend a funeral, or to visit a friend, or to renew his purification. But if he interrupts his retreat in order to answer a call of nature, the continuity of his observance will not be broken. The person may, during the period of retreat, perform his ablutions at his [own] home, but he may not attend to any other work on his way [from and back to the mosque]. The Apostle of God was wont not to leave the mosque, except for answering the call of nature, and on his way [from and back to the mosque], he did not inquire about the sick except as he passed by [without stopping]⁴⁰ The continuity of the observance of the retreat will be broken through sexual intercourse, but not through kissing. While in the mosque the person may use perfumes and contract marriage. [Continuity is not broken] through eating, sleeping, and washing of the hands in a basin because they are all [unavoidable and] necessary. Nor is it broken by the emergence of a part of the body

39. Al-Bukhari, Laylat al-Qadr: 5.

40. Abu-Dawud, I'tikaf: 4.

[from the mosque], for the Apostle of God was wont to put his head out to be massaged by 'A'ishaha' who was in an [adjacent] chamber.⁴¹ Whenever the person leaves his retreat in order to answer a call of nature, he should restate his intention upon returning to resume the retreat, unless he had stated his intention for the ten-day period in advance. Despite this, however, the renewal of the intention is better.

SECTION II
On the Mysteries of Fasting and its Inward Conditions

Now that fasting is of three [successive] grades, namely, the fasting of the general public (sawm al-'umum), the fasting of the elite among the select few (sawm Kbusus al-kbusus).

The fasting of the general public involves refraining from satisfying the appetite of the stomach and the appetite of the sex, as has already been discussed.

The fasting of the select few is to keep the ears, the eyes, the tongue, and hands, and the feet as well as the other senses free from sin.

The fasting of the elite among the select few is the fast of the heart from mean thoughts and worldly worries and its complete unconcern with anything but God. Such a fast is broken by thinking on anything other than God and the last day, as well as by concern over this world, except in so far as it promotes religion which belongs to the hereafter. Thus, those whose hearts are sanctified have said, "He who spends his day worrying over what he will have for breaking his fast sins." This is because he has little confidence in the bounty of God and little faith that the livelihood promised unto him will be received. In this rank stand the prophets, the saints and the favourites of God the most high. We shall not dwell very long on the verbal description of the kind of fasting but shall define it through its active operation. It is to seek God with all of one's strength and to turn away from all other things besides Him. In short, it is to embody the words of God when He said, "Say 'God, then leave them in their pastime of cavillings."⁴²

41. Al-Bukhari, I'tilaf: 19.

The fasting of the select few, which is the fasting of the virtuous men, is to keep the senses free from sin and is accomplished through six things: To refrain from looking at anything blameworthy and disapproved, or anything which occupies the person and diverts him from remembering God. The Apostle said, "The coveting glance is one of the poisoned arrows of the devil. He who for fear of God abstains therefrom will receive from Him a belief, the sweetness of which will fill his heart."⁴³

Jabir⁴⁴ related on the authority of Anas that the Apostle of God once said, "Five things break the fast: the telling of lies, backbiting, tale-bearing, perjury, and the casting of coveting and lustful eyes."⁴⁵

The second is to keep the tongue free from raving, lying, backbiting, tale-bearing, obscenity, abusive speech, wrangling, and hypocrisy, and to impose silence upon it. Furthermore, it should be employed in the remembrance and glorification of God and engaged in reading of the Qur'an. Of such is the fasting of the tongue. We have it on the authority of Bishr ibn-al-Harith that Sufyan [al-Thawri] once said, "Backbiting renders fasting of no effect." Quoting

42. Surab vi: 91.
43. Unidentified.
44. Perhaps Jabir ibn-'Abdullah al-Ansari.
45. Unidentified.

Mujahid, Layth⁴⁶ once said, "Two traits render fasting of no effect: backbiting and lying."

The Apostle of God said, "Verily, fasting is like unto a shield; therefore whenever one of you fasteth, let him not speak unseemly or act foolishly. If anyone disputeth with him or sweareth at him, let him say, 'I am fasting, verily I am fasting.'⁴⁷ In another tradition we read about women who lived during the lifetime of the Apostle. As they were fasting one day pangs of hunger and the darts of thirst proved too much for them to endure, and they almost collapsed. Consequently, they sent to the Apostle of God asking him permission to break their fast. In reply he sent them a cup saying, "Vomit into this cup what ye have eaten." [215] To the amazement of all present the one filled half the cup with pure blood and tender flesh and the other filled up the second half of the cup with the same thing. Thereupon the Apostle said, "These two women have fasted from that which God hath made lawful unto them and have broken their fast by doing that which He hath made unlawful unto them. They sat down and engaged in backbiting. The flesh and blood which they vomited is the flesh and blood of those people whom they have traduced."⁴⁸

The third to close the ears to every reprehensible thing because everything which is unlawful to utter is also unlawful to hear. For this reason, God regarded the listener and the 'sharks' of unlawful trade alike when He said, "Listeners to falsehood, 'sharks' of the 46. Ibn abi-Sulaym, died between A.H. 136 and 143/A.D. 754 and 760. Cf. ibn-Sa'd, Vol. VI, pp.243-44; ibn-Qutaybah, p.241; Shadbarat al-Dbabab, Vol. I, pp.207-212.

47. Al-Bukhari, Sawm: 2.
48. Unidentified.

unlawful trade."⁴⁹ And again, "Had not the masters and the 'divines' forbidden their uttering wickedness and devouring unlawful trade, bad indeed would have been their deeds."⁵⁰ Silence therefore, in the face of backbiting is unlawful. Said God, "Ye are, then, like unto them."⁵¹ The Apostle also said, "The backbiter and he who listens unto him are partners in sin."⁵²

The fourth is constraining the rest of the senses from sins, restraining the hand from reaching evil, and curbing the foot from pursuing wickedness, as well as avoiding questionable foods at the break of the fast. Otherwise, if the fast is going to be abstinence from lawful things, it will have no significance at all. Such a fasting man is like one who builds a cabin but destroys a capital.⁵³ For lawful food is harmful not because of its quality but because of its quantity and fasting is designed to induce moderation. Similarly, the person who, for fear of the bad effect of an excessive dose of medicine, resorts to taking a dose of poison, is indeed foolish. The unlawful is poison detrimental to religion while the lawful is like a medicine a little of which is beneficial but the excess of which is harmful. The purpose of fasting is to induce moderation therein. The Apostle of God said, "Many a man gets nothing out of his fast except hunger and thirst."⁵⁴ In explanation of this it has been said that [the Apostle] meant the person who breaks his fast on unlawful things. Others said that he meant the person who abstains from law-

49. Surab v: 46.

50. Surab v: 68.

51. Surab iv: 139.

52. Unidentified.

53. Lit. builds a castle and destroys a region.

54. Ibn-Majah, Siyam: 21.

ful food and breaks his fast on the flesh of men through backbiting which is unlawful. Still others said that the Apostle meant the person who does not keep his senses free from sin.

The fifth is that when breaking his fast, a person should not overeat of [even] the lawful food, thereby stuffing his belly full. For there is no vessel more abominable unto God than a belly stuffed with lawful food. How could any one expect to overcome the enemy of God and subdue his own appetite through fasting if, when he breaks his fast, he compensates himself for what he had missed during the day and even helps himself to more foods and drinks of diverse kinds. It has thus become the custom to store up all the food for the month of Ramadan, wherein more food and drink are devoured than in several months. Yet it is well known that the purpose of fasting is hunger and the suppression of lust so that the soul might be able to attain piety. If the stomach were not given any food from the early morning until the evening so that its appetite became aroused and its desire increased and then it were fed with delicacies and stuffed to satiety therewith, its pleasure would be enhanced and vitality doubled, consequently giving rise to passions otherwise dormant. The spirit as well as the secret of fasting is to weaken the flesh which is Satan's tool for turning men back to evil. [Such weakening of the flesh] is never achieved unless a person reduces his food to the amount of food which he would have eaten in the evening if he were not fasting. But if, on breaking his fast, he should eat an amount of food equivalent to what he would have eaten during both the day time and the evening, he would reap no benefit from his fast. As a matter of fact, among the proprieties of fasting is that the person should not sleep much during the daytime but rather stay up so that he might feel the pangs of hunger and the flames of thirst and become conscious of the weakness of the flesh, with the result that his heart would be cleansed and purified. He should maintain his flesh in such a state of weakness during the Night of Power so that he might find his night worship (tabajjud) easier to perform and his [night] portions (sing. wird) easier to read. It is hoped, then, that Satan will not hover around his heart and that he will be able to lift his eyes unto the kingdom of heaven. In this connexion, the Night of Power represents the night on which a glimpse of the invisible world is revealed to man. It is also the night which is alluded to by the words of God when He said, "Verily We have sent it down on the Night of Power."⁵⁵

He who buries his head deep into a nose-bag full of food, cannot hope to see the invisible world. Even if he keeps his stomach empty, he will not be able to remove the veil and see the invisible world unless he also empties his mind from everything except God. This is the whole matter, the basis of which is to cut down the amount of food one eats. This will be further discussed in the book on the various kinds of food.

The sixth is that, after breaking the fast, his heart should remain in state of suspense between fear and hope, since he does not know whether his fast will be accepted, and consequently he will be one of the favourites of God, or rejected, and he will be one of those who have incurred divine disfavour. He should remain in such a state of suspense after every act of worship.

It has been related that al-Hasan ibn-abi al-Hasan [Yasar] al-Basri once passed by a group of men who were rollicking and laughing and said unto them, "Verily God has made the month of Ramadan a race-course where men compete in His worship. Some have won their race and were crowned with success, while others lagged behind and lost. We are surprised and astonished at the man who wastes his time in indolence and laughter on the day when the earnest finish victorious and the idle meet with failure and disaster. By God, if the veil were to be removed, you will find the good man occupies with his good works and the evildoer with his evil deeds." In other words the joy of the man whose fast has been accepted will occupy him and keep him from indolence, while the agony and regrets of the man whose fast has been rejected will take all joy from his heart and make laughter impossible.

55. Surah xcvi: 1.

It was related on the authority of al-Ahnaf ibn-Qays that he was once told, [216] "Thou art an old and aged man, and fasting would make thee weak." To which he replied, "This fast is my preparation for a long journey. Verily to endure the yoke of God's service is easier than to endure the yoke of His torture." Such words depict the inward meaning of fasting.

If you then ask, "How can the jurists approve the fasting of a person who confines himself to restraining the appetite of his stomach and the urge of his sex instinct, but neglects these inward aspects of the fast; how, then, can they say that his fast is valid?" Then know that the jurists of the outward law support its formal requirements by means of proofs far weaker than those with which we established its inward conditions, especially those of backbiting and the like. At any rate, the jurists of the outward law are not expected to concern themselves with any obligations other than those which are within the reach of the ordinary common folk who are occupied with the affairs of this world. On the other hand, the learned men of the hereafter mean by validity acceptance and by acceptance the achievement of the intended purpose. By the purpose intended in fasting they understood the taking over of one of the qualities of God, namely, endurance (samadiyah) as well as following in the example of the angels by refraining, as much as possible, from carnal lust while man, by virtue of his ability to overcome lust through the light of reason, stands above the animals [which possess no such light]. On the other hand, because he is subject to carnal lust and is judged by his ability to fight [its temptations]. The more he indulges in lust the lower he descends and the closer he comes to the level of the animals. The more he suppresses his lust the higher he ascends and the closer he comes to the level of the angels. The angels stand in close proximity to God, and whoever follows in their footsteps and emulates their example draws like them nigh unto God. But this proximity (qurb) is not one of location but one of qualities and attributes.

If, among the men of insight and the physicians of the heart, this be the secret of fasting, what good-will there be in delaying a meal and combining two at sunset while indulging in the satisfaction of all the other physical desires and lusts throughout the day? And if there were good in such a behaviour what would the words of the Apostle when he said, "Many a man gets nothing out of his fast except hunger and thirst,"⁵⁶ mean? For this reason abu-al-Darda once said, "How good is the sleep of the wise men and how excellent is their eating; behold how they put to shame the wakefulness of the foolish and their fasting. Verily the weight of an atom of the worship of the faithful and

56. Ibn-Majah, Siyam:21.

pious is better than the weight of mountains of the worship of those who are misguided [and those in error]." Consequently, one of the learned men said, "Many a fasting man is not truly fasting, and many a man not abstaining from food and drink is truly fasting." The man who is truly fasting while not abstaining from food and drink is he who keeps himself free from sin; and the fasting man who is not truly fasting is he who, while he hungers and thirsts, allows himself every freedom in sin. But everyone who truly understands fasting and its secret knows that he who abstains from food, drink, and sexual intercourse but commits [all manner of] sins is like the person who, in performing the ablution runs his hand over one of his members thrice, thereby outwardly fulfilling the Law as far as the member is concerned, but neglecting the truly important thing which is the actual washing. Consequently, because of his ignorance, his prayer is rejected. On the other hand, he who breaks the fast through eating but observes it by keeping himself free from sin is like the person who, in performing the ablution, washes each of the members of his body once only. His prayers are, by the will of God, accepted because he has fulfilled the principal thing in the ablution, although he has failed to fulfil the details. But he who does both is like the person who, in performing the ablution, washes each member of his body thrice, thereby fulfilling both the principal purpose of ablution as well as its elaborate details, which constitutes perfection. The Apostle once said, "Verily fasting is a trust; let each, therefore, take good care of his trust."⁵⁷ Again when he recited, "Verily God enjoineth you to give back your trusts to their owners,"⁵⁸ he raised his hands and touching his ears

57. Unidentified.

58. Surah iv: 61.

and eyes said, "[The gift of] hearing and [the gift of] seeing are each a trust [from God]." Similarly [the gift of speech is a trust], for if it were not so the Apostle would not have said, "If anyone disputeth with another and sweareth at him let the latter say, 'I am fasting, verily I am fasting'."⁵⁹ Or in other-words, "I have been interested with this my tongue in order to keep and hold, not in order to give it free rein in retort and reply to thee."

It is clear, then, that every act of worship is possessed of an outward form and an inner [secret], an external husk and internal pith. The husks are of different grades and each grade has different layers. It is for you to choose whether to be content with the husk or join the company of the wise and the learned.

59. Cf al Bukhari, Sawm, 2.

SECTION III
On Voluntary Fasting and the Arrangement of Portions therein

Know that the desirability of fasting becomes more certain on special days of particular excellence. These days of excellence recur either annually, or monthly, or weekly.

Besides those of Ramadan, the annual days of excellence are the day of 'Arafah (Yawm 'Arafah),⁶⁰ the day of 'Ashura' (Yawm 'Ashura'),⁶¹ the first ten⁶² days of Dhu-al-Hijjah, and the first ten days of al-Muharram. Similarly, the sacred months⁶³ are, in their entirety, a fitting time for fasting, and of special excellence.

The Apostle of God was in the habit of frequently fasting during [the month of] Sha'ban to the extent where it would be thought that he was in Ramadan.⁶⁴ In another tradition [we read], "Besides the month of Ramadan, the most excellent month for fasting is the

60. The ninth day of Dhu-al-Hijjah when the pilgrim proceeds to Mount 'Arafa in order to observe the vigil of the feast of sacrifice (Id al-Adha).
61. The tenth day of al-Muharram.
62. Actually only the first nine days ending with the day of 'Arafah are included.
63. Dhu-al-Qa'dah, Dhu-al-Hijjah, al-Muharram, and Rajab.
64. Cf al-Bukhari, Sawm: 52.

month of God [217] al-Muharram.⁶⁵ This is because al-Muharram is the first month of the year; hence, to commence the year right is more pleasing to God and given greater hope that His blessing will continue through. The Apostle also said, "The fast of one single day during a sacred month is more excellent than the fast of thirty days during another; and the fast of one single day during Ramadan is more excellent than that of thirty days during another sacred month."⁶⁶ In another tradition we have, "He who fasts three days—Thursday, Friday, and Saturday—during a sacred month, will be credited by God with nine hundred years of worship for each day."⁶⁷ And again, "When the 'ides' of Sha'ban are gone, there should be no fasting until Ramadan is one."⁶⁸ It is therefore desirable that one should, if he were fasting during Sha'ban, break his fast a few days before the beginning of Ramadan. But if he should continue his fast through Sha'ban into Ramadan his action will be perfectly permissible since the Apostle of God himself has done that once, although, ordinarily, he allowed a period of no fasting to intervene.⁶⁹ Nor is it permissible for him to prepare for the arrival of Ramadan with a fast of two or three days from Sha'ban unless he observes the corresponding portions.

Some of the Companions disapproved of fasting the whole of the month of Rajab, lest it would become equal to the month of Ramadan in excellence and importance. The excellent months (al-asbbur al-

65. Al-Nasa'i, Qiyam al-Layl: 6.
66. Unidentified.
67. Unidentified.
68. Al-Tirmidhi, Sawm: 38.
69. Abu-Dawud, Sawm: 11.

fadilab) are Dhu-al-Hijjah, al-Muharram, Rajab, and Sha'ban, while the sacred months (al-asbbur al-burum) are Dhu-al-Qa'dah, Dhu-al-Hijjah, al-Muharram, and Rajab. Of these one, [i.e., Rajab], stands alone, and three follow successively one after the other. The most excellent of these is Dhu-al-Hijjah because in it fall the appointed days (al-ayyam al-ma'lumat) and the numbered days (al-ayyam al-ma'dudat). Dhu-al-Qa'dah is one of the sacred months as well as one of the months of pilgrimage. On the other hand Shawwal is one of the months of pilgrimage, but not one of the sacred months, while neither al-Muharram nor Rajab is a month of pilgrimage.

The Apostle, as we see it recorded in the following tradition, once said, "No good works are more excellent or more acceptable to God than those which are performed during the [first] ten days of Dhu-al-Hijjah. Verily the fast on one of these days is equal to the fast of one whole year, and the prayer during one of these nights is equivalent to the prayer during the Night of Power (laylat al-qadr)." He was then asked, "Not even holy war for the cause of God is better?" To which he replied, "Not even holy war for the cause of God is better except when the person's steed is killed and his own blood is shed."⁷⁰

The excellent days which recur every month are the first, the middle, and the last days of each month. In the middle of each month fall the days of the bright nights (al-ayyam al-bid). These are the thirteenth, the fourteenth, and the fifteenth days of each month.⁷¹

70. Al-Tirmidhi, Sawm: 52.
71. Cf. al-Bukhari, Sawm 60.

The excellent days which recur every week are Monday, Thursday, and Friday. These are the excellent days of the week on which it is desirable to fast and do good since, because of the special beneficence of these days, the reward of the acts performed thereon is multiplied double-fold.

As to life-long fasting (saum al-dabr) it is all-inclusive. Mystics (salikun) hold different views concerning it. Some of them, basing their opinion on several traditions,⁷³ have viewed it with disfavour. The truth of the matter is, that it is viewed with disfavour for two reasons: the one is that, by fasting the whole duration of his life, the person will have to abstain from eating even on the two feasts,⁷⁴ [namely the feast of Ramadan (al-Fitr) and the feast of Sacrifice (al-Adba) as well as on the days of orientation (ayyam al-tasbriq);⁷⁵ the other is that by so doing, he departs from the established practice of the Apostle and makes fasting a yoke for himself although God would like him to enjoy his liberties just as much as He would want him to fulfil his obligations. If, however, there are no such [dangers] and the person deems it good for himself to observe a life-long fast, let him by all means do so since several of the Companions and the followers have done the same. The Apostle, according to a tradition related by Abu-Musa al-Ash'ari,⁷⁶ said, 73. Cf. al-Tirmidhi, Sawm: 56; al-Bukhari, Sawm: 56.

74. See al-Tirmidhi, Sawm: 58.
75. Ibid., Sawm: 59.
76. One of the two umpires at the alleged arbitration after Siffin. He died A.H. 52/A.D. 672, Ibn-Quaybah, pp.135-36; ibn-Sa'd, Vol. IV, pp.78-86, Vol. VI, p.9.

"He who observes a life-long fast has no place in Hell, and will live to the ripe age of ninety."⁷⁷

There is, however, besides the lifelong fast, and beneath it in merit, another state, namely, fasting on alternate days (saum nisf al-dabr). It is harder to observe and more effective in mortifying the flesh. Several traditions in praise of its excellence have been related, especially relative to the state of the fasting servant who fasts one day and enjoys the blessings of God on the other. The Apostle said, "The keys to the coffers of the world and the treasures of the earth have been offered to me, but I declined to accept them saying, 'I had better hunger one day and be full another. When I am full, my praise shall I offer unto God and when I hunger, unto Him shall I offer my supplications'.⁷⁸ And again, "The most excellent fasting is that of my brother David; he was wont to fast one day and omit the other."⁷⁹

Of the same nature is the Apostle's argument with 'Abdullah ibn-'Amr⁸⁰ on the subject of fasting. 'Abdullah, replying to one of the suggestions of the Apostle, said, "I can stand a more [strenuous] fast than that." Thereupon the Apostle retorted, "Fast on alternate days." But again 'Abdullah said, "I want something more excellent." To which the Apostle replied, "There is nothing which is more excellent than that."⁸¹ It has

77. Al-Tayalisi: 513, 514.
78. Cf. al-Tirmidhi, Zuhd: 35.
79. Cf. al-Bukhari, Sawm: 56, 58, 59.
80. Ibn-al-'As. A.H. 65/A.D. 684-85: ibn-Sa'd, Vol.IV, pt.2, pp. 8-13, Vol.VII, pt. 2, pp 189-90.
81. Al-Bukhari, Sawm: 56, 58, 59; cf. ibn-Sa'd Vol. IV> pt.2. p.9.

also been related that the Apostle of God never fasted a whole month except in Ramadan.⁸²

He, who is unable to fast on alternate days (nisf al-dabr) throughout his entire life may try to fast every third day (Thulth al-dabr); i.e., he may fast on one day and break the fast on the following two, and fasts for three days at the beginning of the month, three at the middle, and three at the end of the month, he will have fasted one-third of his entire life and his fasting days will coincide with the excellent seasons. If he fasts on Monday, Thursday and Friday [of every week] he will approximate the one-third.

If the excellent seasons have been determined, the real meaning of fasting will have to be understood before attaining perfection. The main purpose of fasting is to purify the heart and to concentrate all its attention upon God. Those versed in the science of the subtleties of the inner [self] examine its different conditions; for possibly it may require continued fasting, or uninterrupted fasting, or a mixture of both.

If, however, the individual comprehends the real meaning of fasting and, through the observation of his own heart, ascertains its place and value in the journey on the road to the hereafter, he will not fail to find out where the welfare of his heart lies. This does not necessitate a continuous routine. For this reason, it has been related that the Apostle was wont to fast until everyone thought that he never ate, and he used to eat until everyone thought that he never fasted. Similarly, he was wont to sleep until everybody thought that he never woke up and used to stay up until everybody thought that he never went to bed.⁸³ In all this, he was

82. Al-Bukhari, Sawm: 53.

83. Cf. Al-Bukhari, Sawm: 53.

guided by the light of prophecy which revealed to him the proper conduct for every occasion and season.

Some of the learned men have viewed with disfavour the practice of allowing more than four days to intervene between each fast. This is just about equal to the period of feasting after Ramadan [or the feast of Sacrifice] and to the days of orientation (ayyam al-tasbriq). They pointed out that such a practice would harden the heart, give rise to bad habits, and increase the possibilities of passion and lust. In my opinion this is true of most people, especially those who eat twice every day and night.

This is what we have planned to discuss concerning the routine of voluntary fasting.

INDEX OF PROPER NAMES AND SPECIAL TERMS

'Abdullah ibn 'Amr, 37	Junub, 17
'adi, 16
'A'ishah, 11, 22	kaffarah , 18, 19
'Arafah, 33 n. 60
ashhur al-fadilah, 34, 35	lawazim , 18
ashhur al-huurum, al- 35	laylat al-qadr , 21, 35
'Ashura', 33	laylat al-shakk , 15
ayyam al-bid, al- 35	Layth ibn-abi-Sulaym, 25
ayyam al-ma'dudat, al-, 35
ayyam al-ma'lumat, al-, 35	mubayyatah , 15 n. 36
ayyam al-tashriq, 36, 39	Mujahid, 25
Basri, al-Hasan ibn-Yasar al-, 28	niyyah , 15
Bayt, al-11
	qada' , 17, 19
Darda', abu-al-, 30	qadi , al-, 14
	Qays, al-Ahnaf ibn-, 29
fidyah , 18, 20	qurb , 30
Harith, Bishr ibn-al-, 24	Rayyan, al-, 9
hilal , al-, 14	suhur , 20 n. 38
Hurayrah, abu-, 9	Salikun , 36
	samadiyah , 30
'Id al-Adha, 36	sawm al-dahr , 36
imsak , 16, 17	sawm al-fard , 15
istimna' , 18	sawm Khusus al-khusus , 23
i'tikaf , 20	sawm al-umum , 23
	sawm nisf al-dahr , 37, 38
Jabir ibn-'Abdullah, 24	sawm al-tatawwu' , 15

BIBLIOGRAPHY

- Athir, ibn-al-, al-Kamil fi'l-Tarikh (Cairo, 1303).
- Baladhuri, al-, Ansar al-Ashraf, ed. M.Hamid Allah (Cairo, 1959)
- Bukhari, al-, Sabib (Bulaq, 1296).
- Dawud, abu-, Sunan (Cairo, 1280).
- Hisham, ibn-, Sirat Rasul Allah, ed. F. Wustenfeld (Leyden, 1858-1860).
- 'Imad al-Hanbali, ibn-al-, Sbadarat al-Dbabab fi Akbbar man Dbabab (Cairo, 1350).
- Majah, ibn-, Sunan (Cairo, 1349).
- Muslim, Sabib, Delhi 1319; Dar al-Tiba'ah al 'Ammah (Cairo, 1330).
- Nasa'i, al-, Mujtaba (Delhi, 1315)
- Qutaybah, ibn-, Kitab al-Ma'arif, ed. F. Wustenfeld (Gottingen, 1850).
- Sa'd, ibn-, Kitab al-Tabaqat al-Kubra, ed. E.Sachau and others (Leyden, 1905-21).
- Tayalisi, al-, Musnad (Hyderabad, 1321).
- Tirmidhi, al-, Sunan (Cairo, 1290).

sawm thulih al-dahr, 38
Sufyan al-Thawri, 24
Suhur, 20

tahajjud, 28

Waki' ibn-al-Jarrah, 10
wird, 28

Yawm 'Arafah, 33
Yawm 'Ashura', 33

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٢

الجزء الثاني

[تتمة السفر الأول]

[تتمة المسلك الأول]

بسم الله الرحمن الرحيم

المرحلة الرابعة في الماهية و لواحقها و فيه فصول

فصل (١) في الماهية

إن الأمور التي تليها لكل منها ماهية و إنية و الماهية ما به يجب

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٣

عن السؤال بما هو كما أن الكمية ما به يجب عن السؤال بكم هو فلا يكون إلا مفهوماً كلياً و لا يصدق على ما لا يمكن معرفته إلا بالمشاهدة و قد يفسر بما به الشيء هو هو فيعم الجميع و التفسير لفظي فلا دور و الماهية بما هي ماهية أي

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٤

باعتبار نفسها لا واحدة و لا كثيرة و لا كلية و لا جزئية و الماهية الإنسانية مثلاً لما وجدت شخصية و عقلت كلية علم أنه ليس من شرطها في نفسها أن تكون كلية أو شخصية - و ليس أن الإنسانية إذا لم تخل من وحدة أو كثرة أو عموم أو خصوص يكون من حيث إنها إنسانية إما واحدة أو كثيرة أو عامة أو خاصة و هكذا الحكم في سائر المتقابلات التي ليس شيء منها ذاتها أو ذاتها و سلب الاتصاف من حيثية لا تنافي الاتصاف من حيثية أخرى و ليس نقيض اقتضاء الشيء إلا لا اقتضائه لا اقتضاء مقابله - يلزم من عدم اقتضاء أحد المتقابلين لزوم المقابل الآخر و ليس إذا لم يكن للممكن في مرتبة ماهية وجود كان له فيها العدم لكونه نقيض الوجود لأن خلو الشيء عن النقيضين في بعض مراتب الواقع غير مستحيل بل إنما المستحيل خلوه في الواقع لأن الواقع أوسع من تلك المرتبة ألا ترى أن الأشياء التي ليست بينها علاقة ذاتية ليس وجود بعضها و لا عدمها في مرتبة وجود الآخر أو عدمه على أن نقيض

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٥

وجود الشيء في مرتبة من المراتب دفع وجوده فيها بأن تكون المرتبة ظرفاً للمنفى لا للنفي أعني رفع المقيد لا الرفع المقيد و لهذا قالوا لو سئل بطرفي النقيض كان الجواب الصحيح سلب كل شيء بتقديم السلب على الحيثية فلو سئل أن الإنسان من حيث هو موجود أو معدوم يجب بأنه ليس من حيث هو موجوداً و لا معدوماً و لا غيرهما من العوارض بمعنى أن شيئاً منها ليست نفسه

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٦

ولا داخلا فيه وإن لم يكن خاليا عن شيء منها أو نقيضها في نفس الأمر ولا يراد من تقديم السلب على الحيثية أن ذلك العارض ليس من مقتضيات الماهية حتى يصح الجواب بالإيجاب في لوازم الماهية كما فهمه بعض لظهور فسادها ولا الغرض من تقديمه عليها أن لا يكون الجواب بالإيجاب العدولي لأن مناط الفرق بين العدول والتحصيل في السلب تقديم الرابطة عليه وتأخيرها عنه لا غير فلو سئلنا بموجبتين هما في قوة النقيضين أو بموجبة و معدولة كقولنا الإنسان إما واحد أو كثير وإما ألف وإلا ألف لم يلزمنا أن نجيب البتة وإن أجبنا أجبنا بلا هذا ولا ذاك بخلاف ما إذا سئلنا بطرفي النقيضين لأن معنى السؤال بالموجبتين

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٧

بحسب العرف أنه إذا لم يتصف بهذا اتصف بذاك والاتصاف لا يستلزم الاتحاد- وليس أن الإنسانية الكلية إنسانية واحدة بالعدد موجودة في كثيرين كما

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٨

أسلفنا ذكره فإن الواحد العددي لا يتصور أن يكون في أمكنة كثيرة ولو كانت إنسانية أفراد الناس أمرا واحدا بالعدد لزم كونه عالما جاهلا أبيض أسود- متحركا ساكنا إلى غير ذلك من المتقابلات وليس نسبة المعنى الطبيعي إلى جزئياته نسبة أب واحد إلى أولاد كثيرين كلهم ينسبون إليه بل كنسبة آباء إلى أبناء نعم المعنى الذي يعرض له أنه كلي في الذهن يوجد في كل واحد وليس كل واحد إنسانا بمجرد نسبته إلى إنسانية تفرض منحازة عن الكل بل لكل واحد منها إنسانية أخرى هي بالعدد غير ما للآخر وأما المعنى المشترك فهو في الذهن لا غير

فصل (٢) في الكلي والجزئي

الكلي على الاصطلاح الذي معناه بحسب ذلك أنه يحتمل الشركة أو لا يمنع الشركة يمتنع وقوعه في الأعيان فإنه لو وقع في الأعيان حصلت له هوية متشخصة غير مثالية فلا يصح فيها الشركة. فإن استشكل أحد بأن الطبيعة الموجودة في الذهن لها أيضا هوية موجودة متخصصة بأمور كقيامها بالنفس وتجردها عن المقدار والوضع وكونها غير مشار إليه بل كل واحدة من الصور العقلية صورة جزئية في نفس جزئية فامتنع اشتراكها- أو لا ترى أن الصورة الموجودة في ذهن زيد يمتنع أن يكون بعينها موجودة في أذهان متعددة فإن كانت الصورة العقلية كليتها باعتبار المطابقة فالجزئيات أيضا

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٩

يطابق بعضها بعضا فيلزم أن يكون الجزئيات كلية.

قيل إن الكلية هي مطابقة الصورة العقلية لأمور كثيرة لا من حيث كونها ذات هوية قائمة بالذهن بل من حيث كونها ذاتا مثالية إدراكية غير متأصلة في الوجود فهي وجودها كوجود الإللال المقتضية للارتباط بغيرها من الأمور- سواء كانت

ذهنية أو خارجية و سواء تقدمت هي عليها أو تأخرت فمن الكلي ما يتقدم على الجزئيات الواقعة في الأعيان كتصورات المبادي لمعلولاتها فيسمى ما قبل الكثرة.

و منها ما يستفاد من الخارج كعلومنا الكلية المنتزعة من الجزئيات الخارجية - فيسمى ما بعد الكثرة و مما يحقق معنى المطابقة أنك إذا رأيت شخصا إنسانيا حصل في ذهنك صورة الإنسان المبراة عن العوارض ثم إذا أبصرت شخصا آخر منه لا يقع فيه صورة أخرى و لا يحتاج إلى صورة أخرى إلا إذا غابت الأولى عن ذهنك كقابل رشم من طوابع جسمانية متماثلة يقبل رश्ما من الأول و لا يختلف بورود أشباهه عليه و إذا قيل في الكتب إن الكلي واقع في الأعيان أو يشار إليه - فإنما يعنون به الطبيعة التي يعرض لها إذا وجدت في الذهن أن تكون كلية و الأشياء المشتركة في معنى كلي يفترق بأحد أمور أربعة كما أشرنا إليه لأن الاشتراك إن كان في عرضي لا غير فالافتراق بنفس الماهية كالسواد و السطح و إن لم يكن الاشتراك في عرضي خارج فقط فقد يفترقان بفصل إن كانت الشركة في

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ١٠

معنى جنسي أو بعرضي غير لازم إن كانت الشركة في أمر نوعي إذا اللازم للنوع لازم للفرد فيتفق في الجميع و إن كان يجوز أن يكون المميز لها لازم الشخص - لا لازم النوع أو بتمامية و نقص في نفس الطبيعة المشتركة لما عرفت من وهن قاعدة المتأخرين في وجوب اختلاف حقيقة التام و الناقص مما سبق.

و الحق أن تشخص الشيء بمعنى كونه ممتنع الشركة فيه بحسب نفس تصويره - إنما يكون بأمر زائد على الماهية مانع بحسب ذاته من تصور الاشتراك فيه فالمشخص للشيء بمعنى ما به يصير ممتنع الاشتراك فيه لا يكون بالحقيقة إلا نفس وجود ذلك الشيء كما ذهب إليه المعلم الثاني فإن كل وجود متشخص بنفس ذاته و إذا قطع النظر عن نحو الوجود الخاص للشيء فالعقل لا يابى عن تجويز الاشتراك فيه - و إن ضم إليه ألف مخصص فإن الامتياز في الواقع غير التشخص إذ الأول للشيء بالقياس إلى المشاركات في أمر عام و الثاني باعتباره في نفسه حتى إنه لو لم يكن له مشارك لا يحتاج إلى مميز زائد مع أن له تشخصا في نفسه و لا يبعد أن يكون التميز يوجب للشيء استعداد التشخص فإن النوع المادي المنتشر ما لم يكن المادة متخصصة الاستعداد لواحد منه لا يفيض وجوده عن المبدأ الأعلى.

فما نقل عن الحكماء أن تشخص الشيء بنحو العلم الإحساسي أو المشاهدة الحضورية يمكن إرجاعه إلى ما قلناه فإن كل وجود خاص لا يمكن معرفته بذاته إلا بنحو المشاهدة.

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ١١

و كذا ما ذهب إليه شيخ الإشراق في المطارحات من أن المانع للشركة كون الشيء هوية عينية لما مر من أن الشركة في الحقيقة لا معنى لها إلا المطابقة و لا كل مطابقة بل مطابقة أمر لا يكون له هوية عينية متأصلة فإن الهوية العينية في الحقيقة - ليست إلا الوجود الخاص للشيء لكن هذا الشيخ العظيم القدر قد أكد القول - في أن الوجود أمر ذهني لا هوية له في الأعيان و العجب أن التشخص عنده إذا كان بنفس الشيء الذي هو غير الوجود و غير الوجود أما نفس الماهية المشتركة أو هي مع مادة و عوارض أخرى من كم أو وضع أو زمان و هو معترف بأن كل واحد من هذه الأشياء نفس تصورهما لا يمنع الشركة و أن مجموع الكليات كلي فهذه

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ١٢

الهوية العينية إذا كانت أمرا خارجا عن الوجود الخاص الذي خصوصيته بنفس ذاته كما مر فأى شيء فيه موجب لمنع الشركة و كذا ما اختاره بعض المدققين من أن تشخص كل شخص بجزء تحليلي له يمكن حمله على الوجود فإن الوجود لا يمتاز عن الماهية في الأعيان و ما قيل من أن تشخص الشيء بالفاعل فهو أيضا صحيح فإن الفاعل مفيد الوجود و الوجود عين التشخص - فمفيد الوجود هو مفيد التشخص و قد علمت أيضا أن كل وجود يتقوم بفاعله فكل تشخص يتقوم بفاعل ذلك التشخص لكن كلامنا في السببية القريبة لتشخص الشيء المتشخص.

و كذا ما هو مختار لبعض و هو أن تشخص الشيء بارتباطه إلى الوجود الحقيقي الذي هو مبدأ جميع الأشياء لأنك قد علمت أن الماهيات إنما ترتبط بالفاعل الحق لأجل وجوداتها لا لأجل مفهوماتها في نفسها فبالوجود يرتبط كل شيء إلى علته و هكذا إلى ما هو علة الجميع فالوجودات في الحقيقة ظلال و إشارات له تعالى.

و أما ما قال بعض أهل العلم من أن الشخص نفس تصويره يمنع الشركة و ليس ذلك بسبب مقوماته فإن المقومات لذاتها لا تمنع الشركة و لا بسبب لازم فإنه متفق فلا يمنع الشركة و لا بسبب عارض مفارق فإنه أيضا لا يمنع الشركة فتعين أن يكون بسبب المادة.

فيجب حمله على التميز الذي هو شرط للتشخص فإن الهولي حالها في التشخص و منع الشركة بحسب التصور حال غيرها بل النوع المتكرر الأفراد ما لم يتخصص المادة الحاملة لأفراده بوضع خاص و زمان خاص لا يوجد فرد منه دون غيره

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ١٣

فعلم أن المادة أيضا غير كافية لتمييزه فإن كثيرا من الصور و الهيئات مما يقع شخصان منه في مادة واحدة في زمانين و امتياز [و امتاز] أحدهما عن الآخر لا بالمادة بل بالزمان.

و هكذا القول في حمل ما ذهب إليه بهمنيار من أن التشخص بسبب أحوال المادة من الوضع و الحيز مع اتحاد الزمان فإن المقصود منه المميز المفارق بين الشيئين لا ما يجعل الطبيعة شخصية و لهذا حكم حيث رأى الوضع مع الزمان متبدلا مع بقاء الشخص بأن المشخص هو وضع ما من الأوضاع الواردة على الشخص في زمان وجوده و لولا أن مراده من المشخص علامة الشخص و لازم وجوده كيف يصح منه هذا الحكم فإن الشخص المادي كزيد مانع من فرض الشركة فيه بدون اعتبار وضعه.

و كذا المراد من قولهم يجوز أن يمتاز كل واحد من الشيئين بصاحبه فإن توقف امتياز الطائر على الولود و امتياز الولود على الطائر ليس بدور إذ الممتنع توقف ذات كل منهما على ذات الآخر أو توقف امتياز كل منهما على امتياز الآخر و أما توقف امتياز كل منهما على نفس الآخر فلا يلزم منه محذور كما سيجيء في حال المتضايقين.

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ١٤

بحث و تعقيب:

قد أورد على قولهم إن الشئيين من نوع واحد يمتاز أحدهما عن الآخر إن اتحد المحل بالزمان بأن الزمان نفسه إذا كان مقدارا لحركة الفلك فمحله جسم واحد فيما ذا يمتاز مع وحدة المحل جزء منه من جزء آخر.

و الجواب أن التميز بين أجزاء الزمان بنفس ذاتها فإن المسمى بالزمان حقيقة متجددة متصرمة وليست له ماهية غير اتصال الانقضاء و التجدد فالسؤال بأنه لم يختص يوم كذا بالتقدم على يوم كذا و بم امتاز أحدهما عن الآخر مع تشابههما و تساويهما في الحقيقة يرجع إلى مثل أن يقال لم صار الفلك فلكا فإن يوم كذا لا هوية له سوى كونه متقدما على يوم كذا و متميزا عنه كما أن تقدم الاثنين على الثلاثة طبعاً و امتيازها عنها ليس إلا بنفس كونه اثنين و يتضح ذلك اتصاحا شديداً - بأن امتياز ذراع من الخط عن نصفه ليس بشيء خارج عن نفس هويته لأنها مع قطع النظر عن الأمور الخارجة من المحل و الزمان يمتاز عنه فقد علم أن التميز عن المشاركات النوعية قد يحصل بنفس الحقيقة و ما وجد في كلام الشيخ من أنه ليس شيء من المقولات يتشخص بذاته إلا الوضع فمراده الامتياز عن الغير مطلقاً مع وحدة الزمان فإنه لا يحصل الامتياز مع وحدة الزمان إلا بالوضع كما أنه لا يحصل الامتياز مع وحدة الوضع إلا بالزمان و أما امتياز كل وضع عن وضع كالقعود عن القيام

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ١٥

فحاله كحال امتياز زمان عن زمان و مقدار عن مقدار من أنه مما يحصل بنفس حقائقها - و التشخص بالمعنى المذكور قد يكون بنفس الذات كما في واجب الوجود و قد يكون بلوازم الذات كالشمس فإن الوضع هناك من لوازمها و قد يكون بعارض لاحق في أول الوجود و قد بين أنه من باب الوضع و الزمان لا غير و أما تشخص النفس بالعلاقة التي بينها و بين البدن و تشخص القوى البدنية فبالبدن الذي هي فيه

فصل (٣) في أنحاء التعيين

قد مضى أن تعين الشيء غير تشخصه إذ الأول أمر نسبي دون الثاني لأنه نحو وجود الشيء و هويته لا غير فالتعيين ما به امتياز الشيء عن غيره بحيث لا يشاركه فيه - و هو قد يكون عين الذات كتعيين الواجب الوجود الممتاز بذاته عن غيره و كتعينات الماهيات الإمكانية و المفهومات العقلية في الذهن فإنها أيضاً عين ذواتها و قد يكون أمراً زائداً على ذاته حاصلًا له دون غيره كامتياز الكاتب من الأمي بالكتابة - و قد يكون لعدم حصول ذلك الأمر له كامتياز الأمي من الكاتب بعدم الكتابة و الأول لا يخلو من أن يعتبر حصول هذا الأمر له مع قطع النظر عن عدم حصول غير ذلك الأمر له كاعتبارنا حصول الكتابة لزيد مع قطع النظر عن عدم حصول الخياطة له أو يعتبر حصوله مع عدم حصول غيره له فالتعيين الزائد قد يكون وجودياً - و قد يكون عدمياً و قد يكون مركباً منهما و النوع الواحد قد يجمع لجميع أنواع التعيين فالإنسان مثلاً ممتاز بذاته عن الفرس و بحصول صفة وجودية في فرد من أفراد - يمتاز عن المتصف بصفة أخرى وجودية كزيد الرحيم الممتاز عن عمرو القهار و عن المتصف بصفة عدمية كالعليم عن الجهول و يمتاز الكاتب الغير الخياط عن الخياط الغير الكاتب بصفة وجودية مع عدم صفة أخرى و بالعكس و التعينات الزائدة كلها من لوازم

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ١٦

الوجودات حتى إن الأعدام المتميزة بعضها عن بعض تمايزها أيضاً باعتبار وجوداتها في أذهان المعبرين لها أو باعتبار

وجودات ملكاتها لا أن لها ذوات متميزة بذواتها أو بصفاتهما و الحق أن التميز بالصفات الزائدة يرجع في الحقيقة إلى تميز تلك الصفات و تميزها يكون بنفسها لا بصفة أخرى و إلا لزم التسلسل المستحيل - فالتمييز بالذات منحصر فيما يكون بحسب نفس الذوات لا بأمر زائد على التمييز إلا بالعرض

فصل (٤) في الفرق بين الجنس و المادة و بين النوع و الموضوع

إن الماهية قد تؤخذ بشرط لا شيء بأن يتصور معناها بشرط أن يكون

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ١٧

ذلك المعنى وحده بحيث يكون كل ما يقارنه زائدا عليه فيكون جزءا لذلك المجموع مادة له متقدما عليه في الوجودين فيمتنع حمله على المجموع لانتفاء شرط الحمل و هو الاتحاد في الوجود و قد يؤخذ لا بشرط شيء بأن يتصور معناها مع تجويز كونه وحده و كونه لا وحده بأن يقتصر مع شيء آخر فيحمل على المجموع و على نفسه وحده و الماهية المأخوذة كذلك قد تكون غير متحصلة بنفسها في الواقع - بل يكون أمرا محتملا للمقولية على أشياء مختلفة الماهيات و إنما يتحصل

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ١٨

بما ينضاف إليه فيتخصص به و تصير بعينها أحد تلك الأشياء فيكون جنسا و المنضاف إليه الذي قومه و جعله أحد تلك الأشياء فصلا و قد تكون متحصلة في ذاتها غير متحصلة باعتبار انضياف أمور إليها يجعلها كل واحد منها إحدى الحقائق المتأصلة كالأنواع الداخلة تحت جنس فهي في نفسها نوع بل شخص واحد من نوع كهيولى عالم العناصر و من هذا نشأ اختلافهم في كون وحدتها نوعية أو شخصية و لا معنى للتنازع لأنها في حد ذاتها نوع منحصر في شخص و إذا أخذت لا بشرط شيء حصل لها إبهام جنسي بالقياس إلى الصور المتنوعة المنضافة إليها - فالحيوان مثلا إذا أخذ بشرط أن لا يكون معه شيء و إن اقترن به ناطق مثلا صار المجموع شيئا مركبا من الحيوان و الناطق و لا يقال له حيوان كان مادة و إذا أخذ بشرط أن يكون مع الناطق متخصصا و متحصلا به كان نوعا و إذا أخذ لا بشرط أن يكون معه شيء و أن لا يكون كان جنسا فالحيوان الأول جزء الإنسان متقدم عليه في الوجود و الثاني نفسه و الثالث جنسه و جنس الأول أيضا فيكون محمولا و لا يكون جزءا و إنما يقال للجنس أو الفصل جزء من النوع لأن كلا منهما يقع جزءا من حده ضرورة أنه لا بد للعقل من ملاحظتهما - في تحصيل صورة مطابقة للنوع الداخل تحت الجنس فبهذا الاعتبار يكون مقدما على النوع في العقل بالطبع و أما بحسب الخارج فيكون متأخرا عنه لأنه ما لم يوجد الإنسان مثلا في الخارج لم يعقل له شيء يعمه و غيره و شيء يخصه و يحصله و يصيره هو هو بالفعل هذا خلاصة كلام الشيخ في الشفاء و فيه أبحاث

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ١٩

الأول أن مورد القسمة هو الماهية المطلقة و هي ليست إلا المأخوذة لا بشرط شيء فيلزم من تقسيمها إلى المأخوذة لا بشرط شيء و إلى غيرها تقسيم الشيء إلى نفسه و إلى غيره.

و الجواب أن المقسم وإن كانت الماهية المطلقة إلا أن العقل ينظر إليها لا من حيث كونها مطلقة و يقسمها إلى نفسها معتبرة بهذا الاعتبار و إليها معتبرة بالنحوين الآخرين فالمقسم طبيعة الحيوان مثلا و القسم مفهوم الحيوان المعتبر على وجه الإطلاق و لا شك أن الأول أعم من الثاني.

الثاني أن المفهوم من المأخوذ بشرط أن يكون وحده هو أن لا يقارنه شيء أصلا زائدا كان أو غير زائد و حينئذ يكون القول بكونه جزءا متضمنا لما هو زائد عليه تناقضا لأن المراد هو أن لا يدخل فيه غيره على ما صرح به الشيخ حيث قال إذا أخذنا الجسم جوهرًا ذا طول و عرض و عمق من جهة ما له هذا و يشترط أنه ليس داخلا فيه معنى غير هذا بل بحيث لو انضم إليه معنى غير هذا مثل حس أو تغذ أو غير ذلك كان معنى خارجا عنه فـالجسم مادة.

و الجواب أن المراد من المأخوذ وحده كونه كذلك بحسب الذات و الماهية - أي لا يحتاج في تتميم ذاته إلى شيء آخر حتى لو انضم إليه شيء صار ماهية أخرى غير الأولى فهي في حد نفسها كاملة تامة بخلاف المأخوذ لا بشرط فإنه ماهية ناقصة يحتاج إلى تمام و لا ينافي ذلك كونه جزءا له و لما يزيد عليه لأن المجموع ماهية أخرى.

الثالث أنه جعل غير المبهم من أقسام المأخوذ بلا شرط شيء و صرح أخيرا

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٢٠

بأنه مأخوذ بشرط شيء.

و الجواب أن مبناه على أن الأول أعم من الثاني فلا منافاة.

الرابع أن النوع هو مجموع الجنس و الفصل و جعله عبارة عن المتحصل بما انضاف إليه و المأخوذ بشرط شيء تسامح فـالجسم مثلا ليس نفسه تصوير بإضافة النفس و الحساسية و المتحركة نوعا بل الجسم مع مجموع هذه الأمور نوع حيواني.

و الجواب أنه مبني على أن الجنس و الفصل و النوع واحد بالذات و حقيقة الكلام أن المأخوذ لا بشرط شيء إذا اعتبر بحسب التباين بينه و بين ما يقارنه من جهة و الاتحاد من جهة كان ذاتيا محمولا و إذا اعتبر بحسب محض الاتحاد كان نوعا و هو المراد بالمأخوذ بشرط شيء.

الخامس أن المادة إذا كانت من الأجزاء الخارجية فمن أين يلزم تقدمها في الوجود العقلي - و الجواب أن ذلك من جهة أن تصور النوع كالإنسان مثلا يتوقف على تصور جنسه و فصله و معروض الجنسية و الجزئية شيء واحد هو ماهية الحيوان و التباين إنما هو

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٢١

بحسب اعتباره في الأول لا بشرط شيء و في الثاني بشرط لا شيء.

السادس أن ما هو الحيوان في الخارج فهو بعينه الجسم فكيف يكون الجسم بشرط لا موجودا فيه مقدما عليه.

و الجواب أن الجسم الذي هو مادة النفس موجود آخر غير الجسم المحمول على ما حصل من انضمام النفس إليها أعني المجموع فهنا جسمان موجودان أحدهما جزء للآخر و هكذا في كل نوع مركب تركيبا طبيعيا.

السابع أنه كما أن الجنس يحتمل أن يكون أحد الأنواع فكذلك النوع يحتمل أن يكون أحد الأشخاص فكيف جعل الأول

مبهما غير متحصل و الثاني متحصلا غير مبهم.

و الجواب أن العبرة بحال الماهيات و الحقائق الكلية من حيث كونها معقولة فالإبهام و عدمه بالقياس إلى الإشارة العقلية فالجنس مبهم لأنه ماهية ناقصة يحتاج إلى متمم بخلاف النوع فإنه ماهية كاملة لم يبق له تحصيل منتظر - لا باعتبار الوجود الخارجي و قبولها الإشارة الحسية و ذلك إنما يحصل بالأعراض الخاصة إما إضافات فقط كشخصيات الأمور البسيطة من الصور و الأعراض فإن تشخصها بحصولها في محالها أو أحوال زائدة على الإضافات فمع التحفظ على هذا الفرق - لا ريب لأحد في عروض الإبهام و التحصيل للنوع بالقياس إلى العوارض التي هي لوازم - و علامات للتشخص فيجري فيها بل في كل كلي سواء كان ذاتيا أو عرضيا - الاعتبار الثلاثة المذكورة فماهية الفصل إذا أخذت بشرط لا شيء فهي جزء

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٢٢

و صورة و إذا أخذت لا بشرط شيء فهي محمول و فصل و إذا أخذت مع ما يتقوم بها فهي عين النوع و ماهية العرض أيضا عرض و عرضي و مجموع حاصل منهما جميعا - بالاعتبارات الثلاثة و الفرق بين المجموعين أن الأول ماهية طبيعية لها وحدة ذاتية - بخلاف الثاني فإنه ماهية اعتبارية و الأولى أن يسمى ماهية النوع المأخوذة بالاعتبار الأول موضوعا بدل المادة و كذا ماهية الجنس المأخوذة كذلك بالقياس إلى العوارض دون الفصول لأن المحل المتقوم بما يحل فيه مادة له و المستغني عما يحل فيه موضوع له فشيء واحد يجوز أن يكون مادة و موضوعا بالقياس إلى شيئين.

نكتة -

و لما علمت أن الطبيعة الجنسية ماهية مبهمة ناقصة تحتاج في حد حقيقتها إلى فصل فلا يتصور أن يحتاج إلى الفصل في بعض المواضع و يستغني عنه في بعضها فلو تحصل دون فصل فتكون مستغنية بحسب الماهية و قد فرض الافتقار إليه بنفس الماهية فالحقائق البسيطة يستحيل أن يزول فصلها عن طبيعة جنسها إلى بدل لأنه إذا زال الافتقار إلى الفصل فبقيت [فيبقى] الطبيعة محصلة دونه فما كانت طبيعة جنسية فعلم أن الافتقار إلى الفصل ليس لمجرد التمييز لأنه يحصل بالعوارض أيضا بل لكون الماهية في حد ذاتها ناقصة يحتاج إلى تمام فلا يجوز التقوم بالفصل في موضع و بعدمه

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٢٣

في موضع آخر إلا بحسب الاعتبار العقلي فإن المأخوذ بشرط لا من الماهية الجنسية نوع عقلي و مما يجب أن يعلم أنه فرق ما بين الجنس في المركبات الخارجية و بينه في البسائط فإن الجنس في المركبات الخارجية يمكن أن يجرد عن جنسيته و يؤخذ بحيث يصير نوعا حقيقيا لا بفصل من الفصول بل بنفس طبيعته و ذلك لأن جنسية الجسم مثلا ليست باعتبار أنه مجرد جوهر متكمم غير داخل فيه شيء آخر كالإنسانية و الفرسية و غير ذلك إذ هو بهذا المعنى متفق الحقيقة في الأجسام غير مختلف بشيء داخل بل بأمور تنضاف إليه من خارج و هو بهذا المعنى لا يصدق على الإنسان و الفرس و غيرهما من النظائر لأنها مركبة منه و من شيء آخر بل تكون مادة لها - فيكون الجسم نوعا محصلا في الواقع لأن حقيقته قد تمت و تحصلت بحسب الواقع - و إلا لما أمكن أن ينتقل الجسم من الجمادية إلى الحيوانية و النباتية بل إنما يكون جنسا بمعنى أنه جوهر ذو طول و عرض و عمق بلا شرط أن لا يكون غير هذا أو يكون - و إذا أخذ هكذا

فكونه ذا حس أو تغذ لا يلزم أن يكون خارجا عنه لاحقا به إذ يصدق على الحساس و المتغذي و غيرهما من الحقائق المختلفة الجسمانية و أنها جوهر ذو أقطار ثلاثة - وإن لم يصدق عليها أنها جوهر ذو أقطار ثلاثة فقط و أما الجنس في البسائط كاللونية فلا يمكن أن يقرر لها ذات إلا أن ينوع بالفصول و لا يوجد في الخارج لونية و شيء آخر غير اللونية يحصل منهما البياض كما يوجد في الخارج جسيمة و صورة أخرى غير الجسمية يكون الإنسان حاصلًا منهما و ما نقل عنهم أن الجنس و الفصل مطلقا جعلهما واحد و جعل الجسم

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٢٤

بعينه جعل الحيوان لو كان صحيحا يكون المراد منه أن الجنس باعتبار جنسيته و إبهامه ليس جعله غير جعل أحد من الفصول و أما باعتبار طبيعته من حيث هي فوجوده غير وجود الفصل. و ما قيل من أن الحيوان إذا مات لم يبق جسميته بعينه بعد الموت بل حدث جسمية أخرى غير صحيح كيف و لا بد من مادة باقية يتوارد عليها الصور و الأعراض سواء كان جسما بسيطا أو هيولي و تلك المادة هي الجنس القاصي للمركبات - بل جسمية الحيوان من حيث جسميتها باقية بعد موته كما كانت و إن زالت عنها حيثية كونها بدنا أو جسما حيوانيا و أما أن هويتها قد بطلت و حصلت لها هوية أخرى - فهو قريب من مجازفات أصحاب الطفرة و التفكيك و استحاله بقاء الأعراض.

فائدة -

ربما يقرع سمعك في الكتب ما قد يحكم على الطبائع العامة أنه إن وجب تخصصها بأحد الجزئيات فلا يوجد غيرها و إن أمكن فلحوقها به لعله.

فاعلم أن ذلك إنما يستصح إذا كانت الطبيعة مما لها صورة في الأعيان أما مثل اللونية للبياض و السواد فلا يقال إن اقتضت التخصص بالبياض لكان كل لون بياضا - و إن لم يقتض فكون اللون بياضا يكون لعله لأن اللونية بما هي لونية ليست لها صورة في الأعيان متميزة عن مفرقية البصر حتى يشار إليها بكونها كذا أو كذا بل إذا كانت طبيعة كالجسمية أو الهيولى مما لها تحقق في الأعيان فتخصصها بالنارية أو الفلكية أو بعض الهيئات كالحركة و التحيز و الاستدارة و غيرها لو كان للجسمية لما صح وجود جسم غير متخصص بتلك الصورة أو الهيئة و إلا فلا بد هناك من علة زائدة على الجسمية - فلا مانع من بقاء مادة يتوارد الصور و الأعراض عليها

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٢٥

فصل (٥) في معرفة الفصل و في الفرق بين الفصل و ما ليس بفصل و في كيفية اتحاده مع الجنس

إن ما يذكر في التعاريف بإزاء الفصول فبالحقيقة هي ليست بفصول بل هي لوازم و علامات للفصول الحقيقية فالحساس و المتحرك ليس شيء منهما بحسب المفهوم فصلا للحيوان بل فصله كونه ذا نفس دراية متحركة و ليست الإدراكية و المتحركة عين هوية النفس الحيوانية بل من جملة لوازمه و شعبه لكن الإنسان ربما يضطر لعدم الاطلاع على الفصول الحقيقية أو لعدم وضع الأسامي لها إلى الانحراف عنها إلى اللوازم و العلامات فالمراد من الحساس ليس نفس هذا المفهوم المتقوم بالانفعال الشعوري أو الإضافة الإدراكية و إلا لزم تقوم الشيء من المقولات المتباينة و قد تحقق

عندهم أن الشيء الواحداني لا يندرج تحت مقولتين إلا بالعرض بل الفصل الحقيقة هو الذي له مبدأ هذه الأمور وهكذا في نظائره فكل معنى إذا اعتبر معه معنى آخر فإن كان مما يغيّره بحسب التحصل والوجود فذلك المعنى ليس فصلا له - بل عرضا خارجا عنه وإن كانت المغايرة بينهما باعتبار الإبهام والتحصل كان فصلا - قال الشيخ في إلهيات الشفاء العقل قد يعقل معنى يجوز أن يكون ذلك المعنى

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٢٦

نفسه أشياء كثيرة كل واحدة منها ذلك المعنى في الوجود فيضم إليه معنى آخر يعين وجوده بأن يكون ذلك المعنى مضمنا فيه وإنما يكون آخر من حيث التعيين والإبهام لا في الوجود انتهى.

بحث و تحصيل:

قد ذهب بعض الناس إلى نفي الأجزاء العقلية في البسائط - وأرجعها إلى اللوازم بأن يكون اللازم المشترك هو الجنس - واللازم المختص هو الفصل و حيث يلزم عليه كون البسائط المتباينة الذوات - مشتركة في أمر عرضي بلا جهة جامعة فيها مصححة لعروضه و كان متحاشيا عن تجويز انتزاع أمر واحد من نفس حقائق متخالفة ارتكب القول بأن الجنس و الفصل في الماهية البسيطة كلاهما مأخوذان من اللوازم الخاصة لها في الواقع لكن الأمر المسمى بالجنس مأخوذ من اللازم المشكوك الاختصاص و المسمى بالفصل من اللازم المتيقن الاختصاص.

و فيه من التكلف ما لا يخفى على أحد و بناء ما أوقعه في ذلك هو ما ربما يتوهم - أن السواد مثلا إذا فصلناه إلى اللون و قابض البصر فإن طابق كل منهما نفس السواد - فلا فرق بينهما ثم إذا طابقت اللونية نفس السواد فهي تطابق بعينها نفس البياض أيضا فيلزم كون السواد و البياض شيئا واحدا و إن طابقتها أحدهما و طابق الآخر شيئا آخر فيكون السواد أحدهما فقط و إن طابق كل منهما شيئا من السواد غير ما

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٢٧

طابقه الآخر فيتربك في الخارج و قد فرض بسيطا فيه هذا خلف فعلم أنه الأجناس و الفصول في البسائط أمور اعتبارية فالسواد مثلا وجوده في النفس كما هو في العين - فلا ذاتي له بوجه من الوجوه.

و وجه اندفاعه ما لوح إليه من أن المعاني التي كل منها ماهية كاملة متحصلة - إذا أخذت من نفس ماهية لوجب كون المأخوذ منها تلك المعاني من الحقائق المركبة - و كل متحصل يتحد مع متحصل آخر يكون متحدا مع متحصل ثالث يتحد الأول مع الثالث أيضا و أما إذا كانت المعاني المأخوذة عنها بعضها ناقصا في ذاته أو باعتبار أخذه مبهما و بعضها بخلاف ذلك و يكون اقتران بعضها إلى بعض كاقتران قوة إلى ضعف أو كمال إلى نقص إلى غير ذلك من العبارات فلا يستدعي كون المنتزعة منها حقيقة مركبة و كذا الماهية المبهمة إذا اتحدت مع كل واحد من الأشياء و تحصلت بها لا يوجب اتحاد تلك الأشياء بعضها مع بعض كالحيوان المتحد مع الإنسان و الفرس مع تباينهما.

توضيح الكلام أن الحثيات و المعاني المنتزعة عن الحقائق منها ما ينتزع من حقيقة بحسب حالها في الواقع و منها ما ينتزع منها باعتبار ملاحظة العقل بأن يتصور العقل المعنى الذي هو مخلوط في نفس الأمر بالأمور المحصلة و متحد معها غير مخلوط و لا متحدا بل أمرا مبهما و يضم إليه المعاني المخصوصة و هذا الانضمام ليس كانضمام شيء محصل

بشيء محصل حتى يكونا شيئين متميزين في نفس الأمر وقد حصل بانضمامهما شيء ثالث كاتحاد المادة بالصورة بل كانضمام شيء إلى شيء لا تميز بينهما إلا بحسب التعيين والإبهام فالأول يقتضي التركيب في الواقع والثاني يقتضيه في اعتبار العقل - وإن كان ذلك الاعتبار اعتبارا صادقا بحسب مرتبة من الواقع. فإن قلت إذا أخذ كل واحد من معنيي الجنس والفصل من نفس ماهية بسيطة - ثم اعتبر باعتبار يكونان بها مادة و صورة فكان كل منهما متحصلا فيكون

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٢٨

الانضمام بينهما انضمام متحصل بمتحصل فيلزم من ذلك أن يكون المأخوذ منه مركبا خارجيا بناء على أن الأمور المتباينة لا يطابق ذاتا أحدية. قلت أخذ الجنس والفصل عن البسيط على وجه يكون كل منهما أمرا متحصلا - حتى يكون الجنس مادة عقلية والفصل صورة عقلية وبالجملة صيرورة البسيط بحيث يكون مركبا من مادة و صورة إنما هو بمجرد وضع العقل لا غير إذ لا تركيب هناك بهذا الوجه أصلا بل ذلك أمر يفرضه العقل بمجرد اعتبار غير مطابق للواقع. فإن قلت الحد عين المحدود فكيف يتصور أن يكون المحدود نوعا بسيطا - لا تركيب فيه أصلا إلا بمجرد فرض العقل و الحد مركبا من معان متعددة كل منها غير الآخر. قلت مقام الحد مقام تفصيل المعاني المأخوذة من نفس ذات و ملاحظتها

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٢٩

فردا فردا و مقام المحدود إجمال تلك المعاني فالتركيب في الحد لا يوجب التركيب في المحدود وإن كان الحد و المحدود شيئا واحدا بالذات لما علمت من كيفية أخذ المعاني من ذات بسيطة

فصل (٦) في كيفية تقوم الجنس بالفصل

هذا التقويم ليس بحسب الخارج لاتحادهما في الوجود والمتحدان في ظرف لا يمكن تقوم أحدهما بالآخر وجودا بل بحسب تحليل العقل الماهية النوعية إلى

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٣٠

جزئين عقليين و حكمه بعلية أحدهما للآخر ضرورة احتياج أجزاء ماهية واحدة بعضها إلى بعض و المحتاج إليه و العلة لا يكون إلا الجزء الفصلي - لاستحالة أن يكون الجزء الجنسي علة لوجود الجزء الفصلي و إلا لكانت الفصول المتقابلة لازمة له فيكون الشيء الواحد مختلفا متقابلا هذا ممتنع فبقي أن يكون الجزء الفصلي علة لوجود الجزء الجنسي و يكون مقسما للطبيعة الجنسية المطلقة - و علة للقدر الذي هو حصة النوع و جزء للمجموع الحاصل منه و مما يتميز به عن غيره.

وهم وتنبيه

: ربما يتوهم أحد أن الناطق مثلا إن كان علة للحيوان المطلق لم يكن مقسما له وإن كان علة للحيوان المخصوص فلا بد

وأن يفرض تخصصه أولاً حتى يكون الناطق علة له لكن ذلك الحيوان متى تخصص فقد دخل في الوجود واستغنى عن العلة بوجوده و الحل في ذلك أن الفصل لكونه علة لطبيعة الجنس متقدم عليها فسببية السبب ليس لأن المعلول اقتضاه لكونه ما وجد بعد في مرتبة السبب بل

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٣١

لا يجاب السبب وجوده فكذلك هاهنا ليس أن الحيوان بحيوانيته اقتضى أن يكون له فصل وإنما من قبله الحاجة المحضة من دون اقتضاء أمر معين لكن الناطقية اقتضى بحسب ذاتها أن يلزمها الحيوانية المعينة المطلقة فالحاجة المطلقة إنما جاءت من قبل الحيوان و تعين المحتاج إليه إنما جاء من قبل الفصل و تعدد العلل لمعلول واحد جنسي غير مستنكر لضعف الوحدة في الطبيعة الجنسية.

و العجب من صاحب المباحث المشرقية مع تفتنه بهذا الأصل حيث ذهل عنه حين أقام حجة على إثبات الهيولى و قد أهمل في إعماله و أعجب من ذلك أنه قال بعد ذكر تلك الحجة و قد أوردتها على كثير من الأذكيا فما قدحوا في شيء من مقدماته و خلاصة حجته المذكورة في إثبات الهيولى لجسمية الفلك أن جسمية الفلك يلزمها مقدار معين و شكل معين لعدم قبولها الكون و الفساد و سبب اللزوم إما نفس الجسمية أو أمر حال فيها أو مباين لها لكن الأول باطل و إلا لزم اشتراك الأجسام معها في المقدار و الشكل المعين و كذا الثاني لأن الكلام في لزومه أت بعينه - و الثالث أيضا لتساوي نسبة المباين إلى جميع الأجسام فبقي أن يكون لزوم التشكل و التقدر لجسمية الفلك بواسطة محل تلك الجسمية و هو المطلوب انتهى.

و لا يخفى أن الصورة المنوعة للفلك التي هي مبدأ فصله المقوم لجنسه الذي هو الجسم المطلق متقدم في مرتبة الوجود على الجسمية فيكون علة للزوم المقدار و الشكل المختصين بالفلك و لا يلزم شيء من المفاسد التي ذكرها هناك فتفطن

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٣٢

فصل (٧) في تحقيق اقتران الصورة بالمادة

اعلم أن الصورة قد يقال على الماهية النوعية و على كل ماهية لشيء كيف كان و على الحقيقة التي يقوم المحل [المادة] بها و على الحقيقة التي يقوم المحل باعتبار حصول النوع الطبيعي منه و على كمال للشيء مفارقا عنه - و لو نظرت حق النظر في موارد استعمالها جميعا لوجدتها متفقة بالذات في معنى واحد هو ما به يكون الشيء هو هو بالفعل و لأجل ذلك استتم قولهم صورة الشيء هي ماهيته التي بها هو ما هو مع تعقيبه بقولهم و مادته هي حامل صورته و ليس متناقضا

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٣٣

و توضيح هذه الدعوى بتقديم مقدمة هي أن المادة في كل شيء أمر مبهم - لا تحصل له أصلا إلا باعتبار كونه قوة شيء ما و الصورة أمر محصل بالفعل به يصير الشيء شيئا مثلا مادة السرير هي قطع الخشب لكن لا من حيث لها حقيقة

خشبية و صورة محصلة فإنها من تلك الحثية حقيقة من الحقائق و ليست مادة لشيء أصلا بل ماديتها إنما هي من حيث كونها تصلح لأن يكون سريرا أو بابا أو كرسي أو غير ذلك و تعصيا و امتناعها عن قبول أشياء أخر ليس لجهة قوتها و استعدادها بل لأجل فعليتها و اقترانها بصورة مخصوصة يمنعها عن التلبس بتلك الأشياء لأجل التنافي الواقع بين طبيعتها و طبائع تلك الأشياء فالحقيقة الخشبية مثلا لها جهة نقص و جهة كمال فمن جهة نقصها يستدعي كمالا آخر و من جهة كونها كمالا يمنع عن قبول كمال آخر و من هاتين الجهتين ينتظم كون السرير ذا مادة و صورة و كذا [لذا] نقول حقيقة الخشب صورتها الخشبية و مادتها هي العناصر لا من حيث كونها أرضا أو ماء أو غيرهما بل من حيث كونها مستعدة بالامتزاج لأن يصير جمادا أو نباتا أو حيوانا إلى غير ذلك من الأشياء المخصوصة دون غيرها لأجل العلة التي ذكرناها و هكذا إلى أن ينتهي إلى مادة لا مادة لها أصلا إذ لا تحصل لها و لا فعلية إلا كونها جوهر مستعدا لأن يصير كل شيء بلا تخصص - في ذاتها بواحد دون واحد لعدم كونها إلا قابلا محضا و قوة صرفة و إلا يلزم الدور أو التسلسل فهي مادة المواد و هيولى الهيوليات و كونها جوهر لا يوجب تحصلها إلا تحصل الإبهام و كونها مستعدة لا يقتضي فعليتها إلا فعلية القوة و إنما الفرق بينها و بين العدم أن العدم بما هو عدم لا تحصل له أصلا حتى تحصل الإبهام

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٣٤

و لا فعلية حتى فعلية القوة لشيء بخلاف الهيولى الأولى إذ لها من جملة الأشياء - هذا النحو من التحصل و الفعلية لا غير دون غيرها إلا من جهتها فهي أخس الأشياء حقيقة و أضعفها وجودا لوقوعها على حاشية الوجود و نزولها في صف نعال محفل الإفاضة و الوجود.

فبعد تمهيد هذه المقدمة يتفطن اللبيب منها بأن كل حقيقة تركيبية - فإنها إنما تكون تلك الحقيقة بحسب ما هو منها بمنزلة الصورة لا ما هو منها بمنزلة المادة فإن المادة من حيث إنها مادة مستهلكة في الصورة استهلاك الجنس في الفصل إذ نسبتها إليها نسبة النقص إلى التمام و الضعف إلى القوة و تقوم الحقيقة ليس إلا بالصورة و إنما الحاجة إليها لأجل قبول آثارها و لوازمها و انفعالاتها الغير المنفكة عنها من الكم و الكيف و الأين و غيرها حتى لو أمكن وجود تلك الصورة مجردة عن المادة لكانت هي تلك الحقيقة بعينها لما علمت أن المادة لا حقيقة لها أصلا إلا قوة حقيقة [الحقيقة] و قوة الحقيقة من حيث إنها قوة الحقيقة ليست حقيقة فالعالم عالم بالصورة العالمية لا بمادتها و السرير سرير بهيئته المخصوصة لا بخشبيته و الإنسان إنسان بنفسه المدبرة لا ببدنه و الموجود موجود بوجوده لا بماهيته فصورة العالم لو كانت مجردة لكانت عالما و الهيئة السريرة لو تحققت بلا خشب لكانت سريرا و كذا نفس الإنسان حين انقطاعها عن علاقة البدن إنسان و الوجود المجرد عن الماهية موجود كالواجب تعالى و أشير إلى ذلك بما قالوا - الإنسان إذا أحاط بكيفية وجود الأشياء على ما هي عليه يصير عالما معقولا مضاهيا للعالم الموجود و قيل في الأشعار الحكيمية.

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٣٥

ده بود آن نه دل كه اندر وی گاو و خر باشد و ضیاع و عقار

و من هذا السبيل تحقق وجه لما صار إليه قدماء المنطقيين من تجويز التحديد بالفصل الأخير وحده مع أن الحد عندهم

ليس لمجرد التنزيل لاكتناه حقيقة الشيء و ماهيته.

حكمة عرشية:

قد انكشف لك مما ذكرناه في هذا الفصل و من إشارات سابقة في بعض الفصول الماضية أن ما يقوم و يوجد به الشيء من ذوات الماهيات سواء كانت بسيطة أو مركبة ليس إلا مبدأ الفصل الأخير لها- و سائر الفصول و الصور التي هي متحدة معها بمنزلة القوى و الشرائط و الآلات و الأسباب المعدة لوجود الماهية التي هي عين الفصل الأخير بدون دخولها في

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٣٦

تقرر ذاته و قوام حقيقته و إن كان كل منها مقوما لحقيقة أخرى غير هذه الحقيقة- مثلا القوى و الصور الموجودة في بدن الإنسان بعضها مما يقوم المادة الأولى لأجل كونها جسما فقط كالصورة الامتدادية و بعضها يقومها لأجل كونها جسما نباتيا كقوى التغذية و التنمية و التوليد و بعضها لأجل كونها حيوانا كمبدأ الحس و الحركة الإرادية- و بعضها لأجل كونها إنسانا كمبدأ النطق و كل من الصور السابقة معدة لوجود الصورة اللاحقة ثم بعد وجود اللاحقة ينبعث عنها و يقوم بها في الوجود فما كانت من الأسباب و الشرائط و المعدات أولا صارت أمثالها من القوى و التوابع و الفروع أخيرا و تكون الصورة الأخيرة مبدءا للجميع و رئيسها و هي الخوادم و الشعب و سينكشف من تلك الأصول و مما سيأتي أن حقيقة الفصول و ذواتها ليست إلا الوجودات الخاصة للماهيات التي هي أشخاص حقيقية فالوجود في الخارج هو الوجود لكن يحصل في العقل بوسيلة الحس أو المشاهدة الحسورية من نفس ذاته مفهومات كلية عامة أو خاصة و من عوارضه أيضا كذلك و يحكم عليها بهذه الأحكام بحسب الخارج- فما يحصل في العقل من نفس ذاته يسمى بالذاتيات و ما يحصل فيه لا من ذاته بل لأجل جهة أخرى يسمى بالعرضيات فالذاتي موجود بالذات أي متحد مع ما هو الموجود اتحادا ذاتيا و العرضي موجود بالعرض أي متحد معه اتحادا عرضيا و ليس هذا نفيا للكلبي الطبيعي كما يظن بل الوجود منسوب إليه بالذات إذا كان

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٣٧

ذاتيا بمعنى أن ما هو الموجود الحقيقي متحد معه في الخارج لا أن ذلك شيء و هو شيء آخر متميز عنه في الواقع

فصل (٨) في كيفية أخذ الجنس من المادة و الفصل من الصورة

الجنس مأخوذ في المركبات الخارجية من المادة و الفصل من الصورة- و ربما يتشكك فيقال الجسم بحسب التفصيل يشتمل على مادة و صورة كما سيجيء- و كلاهما جوهر عند أصحاب المعلم الأول و أتباعه و المفهوم من ماهية النوعية جوهر ممتد في الجهات فليس أخذ مفهوم الجوهر عن المادة أولى من أخذه من الصورة لأن نسبته إليهما على السواء لأن كلا منهما نوع من الجوهر- فنقول في تحقيق ذلك إن لكل واحدة من الهيولى و الصورة ماهية بسيطة نوعية- تتركب في العقل من جنس مشترك بينهما و فصل يحصله ماهية نوعية و يقومه وجودا و ذلك هو مفهوم الجوهر و الفصلان هما الاستعداد لأحدهما و امتداد للآخرى- فكما أن الهيولى هي الهيولى بالاستعداد كذلك الصورة هي تلك الصورة

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٣٨

لأجل كونها ممتدة لكن كون الهيولى مستعدة ليس يجعلها شيئا من الأشياء المتحصلة بل إنما لها استعداد الأشياء المتحصلة و قوتها فإذا نظرت إليها لم يبق منها عندك من التحصيل إلا كونها جوهرًا الذي لا يوجب إلا نحواً ضعيفاً من التحصيل - غاية الضعف بخلاف الصورة فإن الجوهر متحد مع مفهوم الممتد و منغمر فيه كما علمت من فناء الجنس في الفصل فالهيولى في الجسم ليس إلا جوهرًا محضاً له في الوجود قابلية التلبس بأية صورة و صفة كانت كما أن الجنس ليس له إلا مفهوم الجوهر الممكن له في نفس ذاته الاتحاد بقيوده المتنوعة و المشخصة و الإمكان الاستعدادي في المادة بإزاء الإمكان الذاتي في الجنس و كذلك الصورة فيه هي الجسمية و الاتصال كما أن الفصل له هو مفهوم قولنا الممتد و هو أمر بسيط لا يدخل فيه شيء لا عاماً و لا خاصاً على ما عليه المحققون حيث ذكروا أن ذكر الشيء في تفسير المشتقات بيان لما رجع إليه الضمير الذي يبرز فيه لا غير و يؤكد ذلك قول الشيخ في الشفاء و هو أن الفصل الذي يقال بالتواطؤ معناه شيء بصفة كذا جوهرًا أو كيفاً مثاله أن الناطق هو شيء له نطق فليس في كونه شيئاً له نطق هو أنه جوهر أو عرض إلا أنه يعرف من خارج أنه لا يمكن أن يكون هذا الشيء إلا جوهرًا أو جسمًا انتهى.

فقد ظهر وجه كون الجنس في ماهية الجسم مأخوذاً من الهيولى و الفصل من الصورة و هكذا الحكم في نظائره من الحقائق التركيبية بإجزاء ما ذكرناه فيه

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٣٩

و لنا في هذا المقام زيادة تحقيق و توضيح للكلام فاستمع لما يتلى عليك من الأسرار ملتزماً صونه عن الأغيار الأشرار و هو أن الحكماء قد أطبقوا على أن الجنس بالقياس إلى فصله عرض لازم كما أن الفصل بالقياس إليه خاصة ثم ذكروا أن الجنس في المركبات الخارجية متحد مع المادة و الفصل مع الصورة فيلزم من هذين الحكمين عدم كون فصول الجواهر جواهر

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٤٠

بمعنى كونها مندرجة تحت معنى الجواهر اندراج الأنواع تحت جنسها بل كاندراج الملزومات تحت لازمها الذي لا يدخل في ماهيتها و يلزم من هذا عدم كون الصور الجسمية و غيرها جوهرًا بالمعنى المذكور فيه و إن صدق عليها معناه صدقاً عرضياً - و لا يلزم من عدم كونها تحت مقولة الجوهر بالذات اندراجها تحت إحدى المقولات التسع العرضية حتى يلزم تقوم نوع جوهري من العرض فإن الماهيات

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٤١

البسيطة خارجاً و عقلاً ليست واقعة في ذاتها تحت شيء من الأجناس و لا يقدر ذلك في حصر المقولات في العشر على ما أوضحه الشيخ في قاطيغورياس الشفاء فإن المراد من انحصار الأشياء فيها أن كل ما له من الأشياء حد نوعي فهو منحصر في هذه المقولات بالذات و لا يجب أن يكون لكل شيء حد و إلا يلزم الدور أو التسلسل بل من الأشياء ما

يتصور بنفسها لا بحدّها كالوجود و كثير من الوجدانيات فإن قلت إن الإنسان مركب من البدن الذي هو مادته و نفسه التي هي صورته و قد برهن على جوهرية النفس و تجردها و بقائها بعد بوار البدن ببراهين قطعية كما ستقف عليها إن شاء الله تعالى و ما ذكرت في أمر الصور من عدم جوهريتها فهو بعينه جار في النفس الناطقة لأنها صورة أيضا و مبدءا للفصل في حد الإنسان.

قلت إن للنفس الإنسانية اعتبارين اعتبار كونها صورة و نفسا و اعتبار كونها ذاتا في نفسها و مناط الاعتبار الأول كون الشيء موجودا لغيره و مناط الاعتبار الثاني كونه موجودا في نفسه أعم من أن يكون موجودا لنفسه أو لغيره- و لما كانت الصورة الحالة وجودها في نفسها بعينه وجودها للمادة فالاعتباران فيها متحد بخلاف الصورة المجردة فإن وجودها في نفسها لما كان هو وجودها لنفسها

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٢٢

بناء على تجردها في ذاتها عن المادة فيختلف هناك الاعتباران و يتغير بحسبهما الوجودان و لهذا زوال الصورة الحالة عن المادة يوجب فسادها في نفسها بخلاف الصورة المجردة فإن وجودها للمادة و إن استلزم وجودها في نفسها لكن زوالها عن المادة لا يوجب فسادها في نفسها و ذلك لتغير الوجودين.

إذا تقرر هذا فنقول كون الشيء واقعا تحت مقولة بحسب اعتبار وجوده في نفسه لا يوجب كونه واقعا باعتبار آخر تحت تلك المقولة بل و لا تحت مقولة من المقولات فالنفس الإنسانية و إن كانت بحسب ذاتها جوهرًا و بحسب نفسيته مضافًا- لكن بحسب كونها جزءًا للجسم باعتبار و صورة مقومة لوجوده باعتبار آخر لا يجب أن يكون جوهرًا كما في سائر صور المادية على ما علمت فكون النفس جوهرًا مجردًا و إن كان حقا لكن كونها مقومة لوجود الجسم صادقا عليها و على الجسم بالمعنى الذي هو باعتباره مادة الجسم بالمعنى الذي هو باعتباره جنس ليس باعتبار كونها ذاتا جوهرية منفردة فإن كونها حقيقة أحديه شيء و كونها حالا من أحوال البدن شيء آخر نظير ذلك ما يقال في دفع ما يرد على قاعدة الحكماء أن كل حادث يسبقه استعداد مادة من الانتقاض بالنفوس المجردة الحادثة كما هو رأي المعلم الأول و هو أن البدن الإنساني لما استدعى باستعداده الخاص صورة مدبرة له متصرفه فيه أي أمرا موصوفا بهذه الصفة من حيث هو كذلك فوجب على مقتضى جود الواهب الفياض وجود شيء يكون مصدرا للتدابير الإنسية و الأفاعيل البشرية و هذا لا يمكن إلا أن يكون ذاتا مجردة في ذاتها فلا محالة قد فاض عليه

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٢٣

حقيقة النفس لا من حيث إن البدن استدعاها بل من حيث عدم انفكاكها عما استدعاه البدن فالبدن استدعى بمزاجه الخاص أمرا ماديا لكن جود المبدء الفياض اقتضى ذاتا قدسية و كما أن الشيء الواحد يكون جوهرًا و عرضا باعتبارين- كما مر فكذلك قد يكون أمر واحد مجردا و ماديا باعتبارين فالنفس الإنسانية مجردة ذاتا مادية فعلا فهي من حيث الفعل من التدبير و التحريك مسبوقه باستعداد البدن مقترنة به و أما من حيث الذات و الحقيقة فمنشأ وجودها جود المبدء الواهب لا غير فلا يسبقها من تلك الحيثية استعداد البدن و لا يلزمها الاقتران في وجودها به و لا يلحقها شيء من مثالب الماديات إلا بالعرض فهذا ما ذكرته في دفع ذلك الإيراد على تلك القاعدة فانظر إليه بنظر الاعتبار إذ مع وضوحه

لا يخلو عن غموض و يمكن تأويل ما نقل عن أفلاطون الإلهي في باب قدم النفس إليه بوجه لطيف.

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٢٤

طريقة أخرى ثم إنك لو تأملت في أصولنا السابقة و تذكرت ما بينه الشيخ المتأله السهروردي في كتابيه من كون النفس ذات حقيقة بسيطة نورية و ذلك في حكمة الإشراف و إنية صرفة و ذلك في التلوينات و المال واحد- إذ الظهور عين الفعلية و الوجود و قد بين بالأصول الإشرافية كون النور حقيقة بسيطة لا جنس لها و لا فصل و ليس الاختلاف بين أفرادها بأمر ذاتي بل إنما هو بمجرد الكمال و النقص في أصل الحقيقة النورية الوجودية لعلمت أن الذوات المجردة النورية غير واقعة تحت مقولة الجوهر و إن كانت وجوداتها لا في موضوع- فعليك يا حبيبي بهذه القاعدة فإن لها عمقا عظيما ذهل عنه جمهور القوم و بمراجعة كتبه و قواعده في دفع شكوك تستعرض لك فيها

نكتة مشرقية:

لعلك قد تفتنت مما تلوناه عليك سابقا و لاحقا بأن العالم كله وجود و الوجود كله نور و النور العارض نور على نور فانظر إلى البدن الإنساني كيف يكون من حيث اشتماله على الصور و القوى

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٢٥

التي هي مبادي الأفاعيل معسكر الجنود النفس النورية الأسفهدية في عالم الأضداد و محلا لأنوارها و آثارها و تلك القوى و الآلات مع أمير جيشها جميعا- وجودات صرفة و أنوار محضة كسرج متفاوتة في النور مترتبة بحسب النضد و الترتيب- بعضها فوق بعض مشتعلة من نور واحد بل مقهورة تحت استقلاله كما يشاهد من عدم استقلال الأنوار الضعيفة في مشهد النور القوى في التأثير و الإنارة فهكذا حكم عالم الوجود جميعا في كونها أشعة و أنوارا و أضواء للذات الأحدية الواجبية- إذ الوجود كله من شروق نوره و لمعان ظهوره كما هو مشاهد من الشمس المحسوس الذي هو المثل الأعلى له في السماوات و الأرض إلا أن بين الأشعتين فرقا و هو أن أشعة شمس العقل أحياء عاقلة ناطقة فعالة و أشعة شمس الحس أعراض و أنوار لغيرها لا لذاتها غير أحياء عاقلة فاعلة و سيأتيك تفصيل هذه الأحكام في مواضعها إن شاء الله تعالى.

ذكر إجمالي:

كلما كانت الصورة أشد فعلية و شرفا و نورية كانت المادة القابلة لها أشد انفعالا و خسة و ظلمة.

ذكر تفصيلي:

الهولى الأولى كما سيتضح منبع الخسة و مركز دائرة الشر و الوحشة تلك عجوزة شوهاء لم يصادفها نفس نورية إلا بعد تحليلها بحلل الصور الجسمية و النوعية و تنورها بنور القوى و الكيفيات و خروجها

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٢٦

عن صرافة قوتها و سذاجة وحشتها و ظلمتها و حيث تحقق أن مبدأ تلك الصور- و القوى و الكيفيات بعد تعلق النفس هي النفس بتأييد المبدأ الأعلى فإذا انقطع تعلق النفس عنها و أنبت فيضان ما يفيض عليها من القوى و الكيفيات التي

كانت البستها و حللها صارت كأنها راجعة إلى صرافة هيوليتها المعراة عن كل حلية و صفة في نفسها فأصبحت معرضا للانمحاق و التلاشي موحشة للطبع مستكرهة عليه - كما يشاهد من استيحاش الإنسان عن رؤية أجساد الأموات الإنسانية و انقباضه عن الانفراد بميت سيما في الليل المظلم

فصل (٩) في تحقيق الصور و المثل الأفلاطونية

قد نسب إلى أفلاطون الإلهي أنه قال في كثير من أقاويله موافقا لأستاده سقراط إن للموجودات صور مجردة في عالم الإله و ربما يسميها المثل الإلهية و أنها لا تدثر و لا تفسد و لكنها باقية و أن الذي يدثر و يفسد إنما هي الموجودات التي هي كائنة.

قال الشيخ في إلهيات الشفاء ظن قوم أن القسمة توجب وجود شيئين في كل شيء كإنسانين في معنى الإنسانية إنسان فاسد محسوس و إنسان معقول

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٢٧

مفارق أبدي لا يتغير و جعلوا لكل واحد منهما وجودا فسموا الوجود المفارق وجودا مثاليا و جعلوا لكل واحد من الأمور الطبيعية صورة مفارقة و إياها يتلقى العقل إذ كان المعقول شيئا لا يفسد و كل محسوس من هذه فهو فاسد - و جعلها العلوم و البراهين تنحو نحو هذه و إياها تتناول و كان المعروف بأفلاطون و معلمه سقراط يفرطان في هذا الرأي و يقولان إن للإنسانية معنى واحدا موجودا يشترك فيها الأشخاص و يبقى مع بطلانها و ليس هو المعنى المحسوس المتكرر الفاسد فهو إذن المعنى المعقول المفارق انتهى و نحن بعون الله و توفيقه نذكر أولا وجوه ما قيل في تأويل كلامه و ما يقدح به في كل من وجوه التأويل ثم ما هو الحق عندي في تحقيق الصور المفارقة و المثل.

فنقول قد أول الشيخ الرئيس كلامه بوجود الماهية المجردة عن اللواحق لكل شيء القابلة للمتقابلات و لا شك أن أفلاطون الذي أحد تلاميذه المعلم الأول مع جلالة شأنه أجل من أن ينسب إليه عدم التفرقة بين التجريد بحسب اعتبار العقل و بين التجريد بحسب الوجود أو بين اعتبار الماهية لا بشرط

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٢٨

اقتران شيء معها و بين اعتبارها بشرط عدم الاقتران أو الخلط بين الواحد بالمعنى و الواحد بالعدد و الوجود حتى يلزم من كون الإنسانية واحدا بالمعنى - كونها واحدا بالعدد و الوجود و هو بعينه يوجد في كثيرين و الجهل بأن الإنسان إذا لم يكن في حد ذاته شيئا من العوارض كالوحدة و الكثرة لزم أن يكون القول - بأن الإنسان من حيث هو إنسان واحد أو أبدي أو غير ذلك مما هو معاين لحده قولاً مناقضاً أو الظن بأن قولنا الإنسان يوجد دائما معناه أن إنسانية واحدة بعينها باقية كيف و التفرقة بين هذه الأمور و التمييز بين معانيها مما لا يخفى على المتوسطين من أولي ارتياض النفس بالعلوم العقلية فضلا عن أولئك العظماء.

و قال المعلم الثاني في كتاب الجمع بين رأيي أفلاطون و أرسطو إنه إشارة إلى أن للموجودات صوراً في علم الله تعالى باقية لا تتبدل و لا تتغير و بين ذلك بعض المتأخرين حيث قال إن في عالم الحس شيئا محسوسا مثل الإنسان مع مادته و عوارضه المخصوصة و هذا هو الإنسان الطبيعي و لا شك في أن يتحقق شيء هو الإنسان منظورا إلى ذاته من حيث

هو هو غير مأخوذ معه ما خالطه من الوحدة

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٢٩

والكثرة وغيرهما من الأعراض الزائدة على الإنسانية وهو المعنى الذي يحمل على كثيرين من زيد وعمرو والإنسان المجرد عن العوارض الخارجية المتشخصة بالتشخصات العقلية فحين يحمل العقل الإنسان على زيد وعمرو التفت لا محالة إلى معنى مجرد من العوارض الغريبة حتى إنه مجرد عن التجرد والإطلاق - فهذا المعنى له وجود لا محالة فإما أن يكون ذلك الوجود في الخارج أو في العقل - وعلى الأول لزم أن يكون الشخص عارضا خارجيا مؤخرا عن الماهية في الوجود - فتعين الثاني وهو كونه موجودا في العقل متشخصا بشخص عقلي بحيث يمكن أن يلتفت إليه بدون الالتفات إلى تشخصه وهذا المعنى جوهر لحمله على الجواهر حملا اتحاديا فيثبت بذلك وجود جواهر عقلية في العقول يكون تلك الجواهر ماهيات الموجودات الخارجية وهذا هو بعينه مذهب أفلاطون فإن قيل المشهور أن أفلاطون أثبت الجواهر العقلية في الأعيان بحيث هي ماهيات كليات للأفراد الخارجية.

قلت لعل مراده بالأعيان العقول فإنها أعيان العالم الحسي والعالم

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٥٠

الحسي إنما هو ظل لها عنده انتهى كلامه وهذا التأويل مستبعد جدا إذ المنقول عن أفلاطون والأقدمين وتشنيعات اللاحقين من أتباع أرسطو على مذهبهم يدل على أن تلك الصور موجودة في الخارج قائمة بذواتها لا في موضوع و محل وقد نقل عنه أنه قال إني رأيت عند التجرد أفلاكا نورية وعن هرمس أنه كان يقول إن ذاتا روحانية أقت إلى المعارف فقلت من أنت قال أنا طباعك التام ولو لم يكن لكلماتهم دلالة صريحة على أن لكل نوع موجودا مجردا شخصيا في العالم الإبداع - لما شنعوا عليهم بما نقله الفارابي من أنه يجب من أقوالهم أن يكون في العقول خطوط و سطوح و أفلاك ثم توجد حركات تلك الأفلاك والأدوار وأن يوجد هناك علوم مثل علم النجوم وعلم اللحون و أصوات مؤتلفة وطب و هندسة و مقادير مستقيمة و آخر معوجة و أشياء باردة و أشياء حارة و بالجملة كيفية فاعلة و منفعة - و كليات و جزويات و مواد و صور في شاعات أخر و قال شيخنا وسيدنا و من إليه سندنا في العلوم أدام الله علوه و مجده في بعض كتبه العقلية أن القضاء على ضربين مختلفين علمي وعيني و كما يصح أن يعنى به ظهور في العلم و تمثيل في العالم العقلي فكذلك يصح أن يعنى به وجود في الأعيان و علمناك أنه يمتنع اللانهاية بالفعل في القدر لأن القضاء قرب القضاء و القدر وراء ما لا يتناهى و لا يضيق عن الإحاطة بجملة ما لا نهاية له مجملة و مفصلة و هو واسع عليم و أن ما يوجد في وعاء الدهر و يتم وجوده التدريجي بالفعل في أفق التغير و يبقى تحققه بتمامه في وعاء الدهر بقاء دهريا لا زمانيا فإنه يجب أن يكون متناهي الكمية سواء كان في الآزال أو في الآباد و أن الماديات

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٥١

ليست في القضاء أعني بحسب الوجود العيني في وعاء الدهر الوجودي عند رب القضاء و القدر متأخرة عن حصول موادها بل هي و موادها بحسب ذلك في درجة واحدة - فلو سمعنا نقول إن الماديات إنما هي مادية في القدر و في أفق

الزمان لا في القضاء الوجودي في وعاء الدهر و في الحصول الحضوري عند العليم الحق فافقه أنا نعني بذلك سلب سبق المادة في ذلك النحو من الوجود لا مفارقة المادة و الانسلاخ عنها هناك حتى يصير المادي مجردا باعتبار آخر و أحق ما يسمى به الموجودات الزمانية بحسب وقوعها في القضاء العيني أي تحققها في وعاء الدهر المثل العينية أو القضائية و الصور الوجودية أو الدهرية و بحسب وقوعها في القدر أي حصولها في أفق الزمان الأعيان الكونية أو الكائنات القدرية فهذا سر مرموز الحكماء من أهل التحصيل و إني لست أظن بإمام اليونانيين غير هذا السر إلا أن أتباع المعلم المشائية أساءوا به الظن و استناموا إلى ما سولته لهم أو هامهم و قصرُوا في الفحص [و وفروا] و وقروا [و وفروا] على وقيعتهم في المثل الأفلاطونية و عد مساويها- فلم يكن اعتمادهم إلا لانطفاء نور الحكمة و تفاشي ديجور الظلمة انتهت عبارته. و حاصلها أن جميع الماديات و الزمانيات و إن كانت في أنفسها و بقياس بعضها إلى بعض مفتقرة إلى الأمكنة و الأزمنة و الأوضاع الموجبة لحجاب بعضها عن بعض لكنها بالقياس إلى إحاطة علم الله تعالى إليها علما إشراقيا شهوديا و انكشافا تاما و جوديا في درجة واحدة من الشهود و الوجود لا سبق لبعضها على بعض من هذه الحيشية فلا تجدد و لا زوال و لا حدوث لها في حضورها لدى الحق الأول- فلا افتقار لها في هذا الشهود إلى استعدادات الهيولانية و أوضاع جسمانية- فحكمها من هذه الجهة حكم المجردات عن الأمكنة و الأزمنة فالأقدمون من الحكماء ما راموا بالمثل المفارقة إلا هذا المعنى دون غيره لثلا يرد عليهم المحذورات

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٥٢

الشيعة المشهورة و لك أن تقول بعد تسليم إن الأشخاص الكائنة التي وجودها ليس إلا وجودا ماديا صح كونها مجردة باعتبار آخر لكن لا ريب في أنها متعددة في وجوداتها و المنقول عن أفلاطونيين من أن لكل نوع جسماني فردا مجردا أبديا دال على وحدتها كما يدل على تجردها كيف و التجرد أيضا مستلزم للوحدة كما برهن عليه فحمل كلامهم على ذلك المعنى في غاية البعد.

و أول بعضهم المثل الأفلاطونية إلى الموجودات المعلقة التي هي في عالم المثل و هو أيضا غير صحيح لما سبق أما أولا فلأن هؤلاء العظماء القائلين بالمثل و الأشباح المعلقة قائلون أيضا بالمثل الأفلاطونية. و أما ثانيا فلأن تلك المثل نورية عظيمة ثابتة في عالم الأنوار العقلية- و هذه الأشباح المعلقة ذوات أوضاع جسمانية منها ظلمانية يتعذب بها الأشقياء- و هي صور سود زرق مكروهة يتألم النفوس بمشاهدتها و منها مستنيرة يتنعم بها السعداء و هي صور حسنة بهية بيض مرد كأمثال اللؤلؤ المكنون.

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٥٣

و ذهب الشيخ المتأله المتعصب لأفلاطون و معلميه و حكماء الفرس موافقا لهم- إلى أنه يجب أن يكون لكل نوع من الأنواع البسيطة الفلكية و العنصرية و مركباتها النباتية و الحيوانية عقل واحد مجرد عن المادة معتن في حق ذلك النوع- و هو صاحب ذلك النوع و ربه

و قد استدل على إثباتها بوجوه.

الأول ما ذكره في المطارحات

و هو أن القوى النباتية من الغذائية و النامية و المولدة أعراض أما على رأي الأوائل فلحلولها في محل كيف كان و أما على رأي المتأخرين فلحلولها في محل يستغني عنها لأن صور العناصر كافية في تقويم وجود الهيولى و إلا لما صح وجود العناصر و الممتزجات العنصرية - و إذا كانت الصور كافية في تقويم الهيولى لزم أن يكون القوى الثلاثة المذكورة أعراضا و إذا كانت هذه القوى أعراضا فالحامل لها إما الروح البخاري أو الأعضاء - فإن كان هو الروح الذي هو دائم التحلل و التبدل فيتبدل القوى الحالة بتبدل محالها و إن كان الأعضاء و ما من عضو منها إلا و للحرارة سواء كانت غريزية أو

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٥٤

غريبة عنها عليها سلطنة فالأجسام النباتية لاشتمالها على رطوبة و حرارة - شأنها تحليل الرطوبة فيتبدل أجزاؤها و يتحلل دائما فإذا بطل جزء من المحل بطل ما فيه من القوة و يتبدل الباقي بورود الوارد من الغذاء فالحافظ للمزاج بالبدل و المستبقي زمانا يمتنع أن يكون هو القوة و الأجزاء الباطلة لامتناع تأثير المعدوم و كذا الحافظ و المستبقي له لا يجوز أن يكون القوة و الأجزاء التي ستحدث بعد ذلك لأن وجودها بسبب المزاج فهي فرع عليه و الفرع لا يحفظ الأصل و لأن القوة النامية تحدث بسبب إيراد الوارد من الغذاء في المورد عليه خلا [خلالا] تستلزم تحريك الوارد و تحريك المورد عليه إلى جهات مختلفة و يسد بالغذاء ما يحلل منه و يلصقه بالأجزاء المختلفة الماهيات و الجهات - فهذه الأفاعيل المختلفة مع ما فيها من التركيب العجيب و النظام المتقن الغريب و الهيئات الحسنة و التخاطيط المستحسنة لا يمكن صدورها عن طبيعة قوة لا إدراك لها و لا ثبات في النبات و الحيوان و ما ظن أن للنبات نفسا مجردة مدبرة فليس بحق و إلا لكانت ضائعة معطلة ممنوعة عن الكمال أبدا و ذلك محال ثم القوة المسماة عندهم بالمصورة قوة بسيطة فكيف صدر عنها تصوير الأعضاء مع المنافع الكثيرة - في حفظ الأشخاص و الأنواع و غير ذلك مما هو مذكور في كتب التشريح

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٥٥

و العاقل الفطن إذا تأمل ذلك و ما انضم إليه من الحكم و عجائب الصنع التي في كتاب الحيوان و النبات علم أن هذه الأفاعيل العجيبة و الأعمال الغريبة لا يمكن صدورها عن قوة لا تصرف لها و لا إدراك بل لا بد و أن تكون صادرة عن قوة مجردة عن المادة مدركة لذاتها و لغيرها و يسمى تلك القوة المدبرة للأجسام النباتية عقلا و هو من الطبقة العرضية التي هي أرباب الأصنام و الطلسمات.

فإن قلت يجوز أن يكون تلك القوة الفاعلة لأبداننا و المدبرة لها هي نفوسنا الناطقة.

قلنا نحن نعلم بالضرورة غفلتنا عن هذه التدابير العجيبة و نجدها لا خبر عندنا بأنها متى صارت الأغذية في الأعضاء المختلفة المتباعدة و لا شعور لنا حين كمال عقلنا بأوان تميزها بالأخلاق و ذهابها إلى الأعضاء المختلفة و الأوضاع و الجهات و صيرورتها مشكلة بالأشكال المختلفة و التخاطيط العجيبة فضلا عن بدو فطرتنا و زمان جهلنا و نقصنا فالفاعل لهذه الأفعال غير نفوسنا و ليست

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٥٦

مركبة لتفعل بجزء و تدرك بجزء آخر

الوجه الثاني أنك إذا تأملت الأنواع الواقعة في عالمنا هذا وجدت أنها غير واقعة بمجرد الاتفاقات

و إلا لما كانت أنواعها محفوظة عندنا و أمكن حينئذ أن يحصل من الإنسان غير الإنسان و من الفرس غير الفرس و من النخل غير النخل و من البر غير البر و ليس كذلك بل هي مستمرة الثبات على نمط واحد - من غير تبدل و تغيير فالأمور الثابتة على نهج واحد لا يبتني على الاتفاقات الصرفة ثم الألوان الكثيرة العجيبة في ريش الطواويس ليس كما يقول المشاءون من أن سببها أمزجة تلك الريشة مع أنهم لا برهان لهم على ذلك و لا يمكنهم تعيين

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٥٧

تلك الأسباب للألوان فكيف يحكمون بمثل هذه الأحكام المختلفة من غير مراعاة قانون مضبوط في ذلك النوع فالحق عند ذلك ما قاله القدماء إنه يجب أن يكون لكل نوع من الأنواع الجسمية جوهر مجرد نوري قائم بنفسه هو مدبر له و معتن به و حافظ له و هو كلي ذلك النوع و لا يعنون بالكلي ما نفس تصور معناه لا يمنع وقوع الشركة فيه و كيف يمكن لهم أن يريدوا به ذلك المعنى مع اعترافهم بأنه قائم بنفسه و هو يعقل ذاته و غيره و له ذات متخصصة لا يشاركها فيه غيره و لا يعتقدون بأن رب النوع الإنساني أو الفرسى أو غيرهما من الأنواع إنما أوجد لأجل ما تحته من النوع - بحيث يكون ذلك النوع قابلاً و مثلاً لذلك العقل المجرد فإنهم أشد مبالغة في أن العالي لا يحصل لأجل السافل الذي تحته بالمرتبة و لو كان مذهبهم هذا للزم أن يكون للمثال مثال آخر و هكذا إلى غير النهاية و ذلك محال بل الذي يعنون به أن رب النوع لتجرده نسبته إلى جميع أشخاص النوع على السواء في اعتنائها بها و دوام فيضه عليها و كانه بالحقيقة هو الكل و الأصل و هي الفروع

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٥٨

الوجه الثالث استدلالهم عليها من جهة قاعدة إمكان الأشرف و الأخس

فإن الممكن الأخس إذا وجد فيجب أن يكون الممكن الأشرف قد وجد قبله - و برهانه مذكور في كتبه و لما كان عجائب الترتيبات و لطائف النسب واقعة في العالم الجسماني من الأفلاك و الكواكب و العناصر و مركباتها و كذلك في عالم النفوس من العجائب الروحانية و الغرائب الجسمانية من أحوال قواها و كيفية تعلقها بالأبدان و لا شك أن عجائب الترتيب و لطائف النسب و النظام الواقع في العالم العقلي النوري أشرف و أفضل من الواقع في هذين العالمين الآخرين في الوجود فيجب مثلها في ذلك العالم كيف و غرائب الترتيب و عجائب النسب في العالم الجسماني أظلال و رسوم لما في العالم العقلي فهي الحقائق و الأصول و الأنواع الجسمانية فروع لها حاصلة منها ثم القائلون بالمثل الأفلاطونية لا يقولون للحيوانية مثال و لكون الشيء ذا رجلين مثال آخر و لكونه ذا جناحين مثال آخر

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٥٩

و كذا لا يقولون لرائحة المسك مثال و للمسك مثال آخر و لا لحلاوة السكر مثال و للسكر مثال آخر بل يقولون إن كل ما

يستقل من الأنواع الجسمانية له أمر يناسبه في عالم القدس حتى يكون كل نور مجرد من أرباب الأصنام في عالم النور المحض له هيئات نورانية [روحانية] من الأشعة العقلية - و هيئة اللذة و المحبة و العز و الذل و القهر و غير ذلك من المعاني و الهيئات فإذا وقع ظله في العالم الجسماني يكون صنمه المسك مع ريحه الطيبة و السكر مع الطعم الحلو أو الصورة الإنسانية أو الفرسية أو غيرهما من الصور النوعية على اختلاف أعضائها و تباين تخاطيبتها و أوضاعها على التناسب الموجود في الأنوار المجردة هذه أقوال هذا الشيخ المتأله في هذا الباب

و لا شك أنها في غاية الجودة و اللطافة لكن فيها أشياء

منها عدم بلوغها حد الإجداء

حيث لم يعلم من تلك الأقوال أن هذه الأنوار العقلية أهي من حقيقة أصنامها الحسية حتى إن فردا واحدا من جملة أفراد

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٦٠

كل نوع جسماني يكون مجردا و الباقي ماديا أم ليس كذلك بل يكون كل من تلك الأنوار المجردة مثالا لنوع مادي لا مثلا لأفراده و المروي عن أفلاطون و تشنيعات المشاءين عليه يدل دلالة صريحة على أن تلك الأرباب العقلية من نوع أصنامهم المادية و يؤيد ذلك تسمية حكماء الفرس رب كل نوع باسم ذلك النوع - حتى إن النبتة التي يسمونها هوم التي تدخل في أوضاع نواميسهم يقدسون لصاحب نوعها و يسمونها هوم إيزد و كذا لجميع الأنواع فإنهم يقولون لصاحب صنم الماء من الملكوت خرداد و ما للأشجار سموه مرداد و ما للنار سموه أردي بهشت - و صاحب الإشراق حمل كلام المتقدمين في تلك الأرباب و تسميتهم كل رب باسم صنمه على مجرد المناسبة و العلية لا على المماثلة النوعية كما يدل عليه قوله في المطارحات و إذا سمعت أنباذقلس و أغاثا ذيمون و غيرهما يشيرون إلى أصحاب الأنواع فافهم غرضهم و لا تظن أنهم يقولون إن صاحب النوع جسم أو جسماني أو له رأس و رجلان و إذا وجدت هرمس يقول إن ذاتا روحانية أقت إلي المعارف فقلت لها من أنت فقال أنا طباعك التام فلا تحمله على أنه مثلنا انتهى.

و منها أن الرجلين و الجناحين و غير ذلك من الأعضاء إذا كانت من أجزاء ذات الحيوان

كيف يكون ذات بسيطة نورية مثالا له سواء أخذت وحدها أو مع هيئاتها النورية و المماثلة بين المثال و الممثل له و إن لم يشترط من جميع الوجوه لكن يلزم أن يقع الجوهر من كل منهما بإزاء الجوهر من الآخر - و العرضي بإزاء العرضي.

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٦١

و منها أن تلك الأرباب عنده من حقيقة النور و الظهور

و أصنامها إما برازخ أو هيئات ظلمانية و أي مناسبة بين الأنوار و هيئاتها النورية و بين البرازخ و هيئاتها الظلمانية كيف و جميع الأنوار المجردة العقلية و النفسية و المحسوسة الكوكبية و العنصرية عندهم حقيقة واحدة بسيطة لا اختلاف بينها إلا بالشدة و الضعف أو بأمور الخارجة و الأنوار العقلية العرضية التي هي أصحاب الأصنام آثارها ماهيات متخالفة الذوات كما هو رأيهم في أن أثر الجاعل الماهية دون الوجود لأنه من الاعتبارات الذهنية و لا شك أن اختلاف الآثار - إما لاختلاف في القابل أو لاختلاف في الفاعل و إذا كان الأثر لا قابل له فهو لاختلاف الفاعل لا محالة و إذا كان آثار العقول

مختلفة و ليس الاختلاف بين الآثار بمجرد اختلاف القابل إذ القوابل و استعداداتها من جملة معلولاتها المختلفة مع أنه لا قابل للقوابل و لا لاختلاف تلك الفعالة إذ لا اختلاف بينها إلا بالكمال و النقص فيجب أن يكون اختلاف آثارها أيضا على هذا المنوال و هذا أيضا مما يوقع الطمأنينة في أن آثار العقول و المبادي الرفيعة التي هي إنيات وجودية نورية يجب أن يكون وجودات الماهيات دون معانيها الكلية و أن اختلاف الماهيات المنتزعة عن أنحاء

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٦٢

الوجودات إنما هو لأجل اختلاف مراتب الوجودات شدة و ضعفا و تقدما و تأخيرا- و تركيبا و وحدانا فللوجودات باعتبار مراتبها و نسبها الواقعة بينها لوازم متخالفة أما تنظر إلى العدد و مراتبه المتخالفة الخواص و الآثار مع أنها حصلت من الأحاد و الواحد متشابه فيها فإن للمراتب و النسب خواص عجيبة و آثار غريبة يعلمه أصحاب العلوم العددية و الصنائع النجومية

تنبيه:

فالحري أن يحمل كلام الأوائل على أن لكل نوع من الأنواع الجسمانية فردا كاملا تاما في عالم الإبداع هو الأصل و المبدأ و سائر أفراد النوع فروع و معاليل و آثار له و ذلك لتمامه و كماله لا يفتقر إلى مادة و لا إلى محل متعلق به بخلاف هذه فإنها لضعفها و نقصها مفتقرة إلى مادة في ذاتها أو في فعلها و قد علمت جواز اختلاف أفراد نوع واحد كمالا و نقصا- و قول بعضهم إن الحقيقة الواحدة كيف يقوم بعضها بنفسه و بعضها بغيره و لو استغنى بعضها عن المحل لاستغنى الجميع ليس بصحيح مطلقا بل في المتواطئة فإن استغناء بعض الوجودات عن المحل إنما هو بكماله و كماله بجوهريته و قوته و غاية نقصه بعرضيته و ضعفه و إضافته إلى محل فلا يلزم من حلول شيء حلول يشاركه في الحقيقة المشتركة بعد التفاوت بينهما بالكمال و النقص و الشدة و الضعف و علمت أيضا أن كلا من الأنواع الجسمانية يتنوع و يتحقق و يتقوم بمحض الصورة النوعية التي هي متحدة مع الفصل الأخير و المادة في الجميع أمر مبهم وجودها قوة شيء آخر كما أن الجنس المأخوذ منها ماهية ناقصة متحدة

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٦٣

مع الفصل و باقي الصور و القوى و الكيفيات و مبادي الفصول في المركب بمنزلة الشرائط و الآلات و الفروع لذات واحدة هي بعينها صنم لصاحب نوعه كما أنها أصنام لأصحاب أنواعها نسبتها إليه نسبة الفروع إلى أصل واحد و كذا الهيئات و النسب و الأشكال التي فيها أطلال لهيئات عقلية و نسب معنوية في أربابها النورية- و نسبة صاحب النوع الإنساني المسمى بروح القدس و هو عقله الفياض عليه إلى أصحاب سائر الأنواع الحيوانية و النباتية كنسبة الأصنام إلى الأصنام فهذه الصور النوعية المادية كالإنسانية و الفرسية و الثورية و غيرها من الأنواع و إن كانت مفتقرة في عالمنا هذا إلى أن تقوم بمادة حسية فهي غير مفتقرة في العالم العلوي إلى قيامها بذلك بل هي في ذلك العالم العقلي مجردة عن المادة قائمة بذاتها مستغنية عما تحل فيه كما أن الصور الذهنية و هي المأخوذة من الأمور الخارجة أعراض قائمة في الذهن لا تقوم بذاتها و إن كانت مأخوذة من الجواهر القائمة بذواتها فكذلك يكون حكم صور الأنواع الجسمانية الحاصلة في المادة من تلك المثل المجردة العقلية الأفلاطونية فإن للصور المجردة العقلية كمالية في حد ذاتها و تمامية

في ماهياتها به تستغني عن القيام في المحل و أما الصور الجسمانية التي هي أصنامها فإن لها نقصا يحوج إلى القيام بالمحل لكونها كمالاتا لغيرها- فلا يمكن أن يقوم بذاتها كالجواهر الصورية الموجودة في الذهن المأخوذة من الأمور العينية المادية فإنها وإن كانت مجردة عن المادة في العقل فهي غير مجردة عن المادة في الخارج فكذلك يكون حكم الصور العقلية التي هي أرباب الأنواع- فإنها وإن كانت مجردة في عالم العقل فأصنامها و أطلالها الجسمانية أعني الصور النوعية غير مجردة عن المادة و لا يتوهم من إطلاقهم المثل على الصور العقلية القائمة بذواتها في عالم

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٦٤

الإله أن هؤلاء العظماء من الفلاسفة يرون أن أصحاب الأنواع إنما وجدت من المبدع الحق- لتكون مثلاً و قوالب لما تحتها لأن ما يتخذ له المثال و القالب يجب أن يكون أشرف و أعلى لأنه الغاية و لا يصح في العقول هذا فإنهم أشد مبالغة من المشاءين في أن العالي لا يكون لأجل السافل بل عندهم أن صور الأنواع الجسمانية أصنام و أطلال لتلك الأرباب النورية العقلية و لا نسبة بينها في الشرف و الكمال ثم كيف يحتاج الواجب تعالى في إيجاد الأشياء إلى مثل ليكون دستورات لصنعه و برنامجات لخلقه- و لو احتاج لاحتاج في إيجاد المثل إلى مثل أخرى إلى غير النهاية. فإن قلت قد خالفت المعلم الأول حيث يرد على هذا المذهب.

قلت الحق أحق بالاتباع مع أن رده إما على ما يفهمه الجمهور من ظاهر كلام أفلاطون و الأقدمين فإن من عادتهم بناء الكلام على الرموز و التجوزات- خصوصا في هذا المبحث الذي يخرس فيه الفصحاء و تكل منه الأفهام فضلا و شرفا- و إما لشوب حبه للرئاسة اللازم عن معاشرة الخلق و خلطه الملوك و السلاطين و إلا فكتابه المعروف بأثولوجيا يشهد بأن مذهبه وافق مذهب أستاذه- في باب وجود المثل العقلية للأنواع و الصور المجردة النورية القائمة بذواتها في عالم الإبداع حيث قال في الميمر الرابع منه- إن من وراء هذا العالم سماء و أرضا و بحرا و حيوانا و نباتا و ناسا سماويين- و كل من في هذا العالم سماوي و ليس هناك شيء أرضي البتة و قال فيه أيضا إن الإنسان الحسي إنما هو صنم للإنسان العقلي و الإنسان العقلي روحاني و جميع أعضائه روحانية ليس موضع العين غير موضع اليد و لا مواضع الأعضاء كلها

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٦٥

مختلفة لكنها في موضع واحد.

و قال في الميمر الثامن منه أن الشيء الذي يفعل بها النار هاهنا إنما هي حياة نارية و هي النار الحقة فالنار إذن التي فوق هذه النار في العالم الأعلى هي أخرى أن تكون نارا فإن كانت نارا حقا فلا محالة أنها حياة و حياتها أرفع و أشرف من حياة هذه النار لأن هذه النار إنما هي صنم لتلك النار فقد بان و صح أن النار التي في العالم الأعلى هي حياة و أن تلك الحياة هي المفيضه القيمة بالحياة على هذه النار- و على هذه الصفة يكون الماء و الهواء هناك أقوى فإنهما هناك حيان كما هما في هذا العالم إلا أنهما في ذلك العالم أكثر حياة لأن تلك هي التي تفيض على هذين اللذين هاهنا الحياة.

و قال فيه أيضا أن هذا العالم الحسي كله إنما هو مثال و صنم لذلك العالم- فإن كان هذا العالم حيا فبالحري أن يكون ذلك العالم الأول حيا و إن كان هذا العالم تاما كاملا فبالحري أن يكون ذلك العالم أتم تماما و أكمل كمالا لأنه هو المفيض على هذا العالم الحياة و القوة و الكمال و الدوام فإن كان العالم الأعلى تاما في غاية التمام فلا محالة أن هناك

الأشياء كلها التي هاهنا إلا أنها فيه نوع أعلى وأشرف كما قلنا مرارا فثم سماء ذات حياة وفيها كواكب مثل هذه الكواكب التي في هذه السماء غير أنها أنور وأكمل وليس بينها افتراق كما يرى هاهنا وذلك أنها ليست جسمانية و هناك أرض ليست ذات سباح لكنها كلها عامرة وفيها الحيوان كلها والطبيعة الأرضية التي هاهنا وفيها نبات مغروس في الحياة وفيها بحار وأنهار جارية جريا حيوانيا وفيها الحيوان المائية كلها

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٦٦

و هناك هواء وفيه حيوان هوائية حية شبيهة بذلك الهواء والأشياء التي هناك كلها حية وكيف لا تكون حية وهي في عالم الحياة المحض لا يشوبها الموت البتة - و طبائع الحيوان التي هناك مثل طبائع هذه الحيوانات إلا أن الطبيعة هناك أعلى وأشرف من هذه الطبيعة لأنها عقلية ليست حيوانية.

فمن أنكر قولنا وقال من أين يكون في العالم الأعلى حيوان و سماء و سائر الأشياء التي ذكرناها قلنا إن العالم الأعلى هو الحي التام الذي فيه جميع الأشياء - لأنه أبدع من المبدع الأول التام ففيه كل نفس و كل عقل و ليس هناك فقر و لا حاجة البتة لأن الأشياء التي هناك كلها مملوءة غنى و حياة كأنها حياة تغلي و تفور و جري حياة تلك الأشياء إنما تنبع من عين واحدة لا كأنها حرارة واحدة فقط أو ريح واحدة فقط بل كلها كيفية واحدة فيها كل كيفية يوجد فيها كل طعام و نقول إنك تجد في تلك الكيفية الواحدة طعام الحلاوة و الشراب و سائر الأشياء ذوات الطعوم و قواها و سائر الأشياء الطبية الروائح و جميع الألوان الواقعة تحت البصر و جميع الأشياء الواقعة تحت اللمس و جميع الأشياء الواقعة تحت السمع أي اللحون كلها و أصناف الإيقاع و جميع الأشياء الواقعة تحت الحس و هذه كلها موجودة في كيفية واحدة مبسطة على ما وصفناه لأن تلك الكيفية حيوانية عقلية تسع جميع الكيفيات التي وصفناه و لا يضيق عن شيء منها من غير أن يختلط بعضها ببعض - و يفسد بعضها ببعض بل كلها فيها محفوظة كأن كلا منها قائم على حدة و قال في الميمر العاشر من كتابه إن كل صورة طبيعية في هذا العالم - هي في ذلك العالم إلا أنها هناك بنوع أفضل و أعلى و ذلك أنها هاهنا متعلقة بالهيولى

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٦٧

و هي هناك بلا هيولى و كل صورة طبيعية فهي صنم للصورة التي هناك الشبيهة بها فهناك سماء و أرض و حيوان و هواء و ماء و نار فإن كان هناك هذه الصور فلا محالة أن هناك نباتا أيضا.

فإن قال قائل إن كان في العالم الأعلى نبات فكيف هي هناك و إن كان ثم نار و أرض فكيف هما هناك فإنه لا يخلو من أن يكونا هناك إما حيين و إما ميتين فإن كانا ميتين مثل ما هاهنا فما الحاجة إليها هناك فإن كانا حيين فكيف يحييان هناك. قلنا أما النبات فنقدر أن نقول إنه هناك حي أيضا و ذلك أن في النبات كلمة فاعلة محمولة على حياة و إن كانت كلمة النبات الهولاني حية فهو إذن لا محالة نفس ما أيضا و أخرى أن تكون هذه الكلمة في النبات الذي في العالم الأعلى و هو النبات الأول إلا أنها فيه بنوع أعلى و أشرف لأن هذه الكلمة التي هي في هذا النبات إنما هي من تلك الكلمة إلا أن تلك الكلمة واحدة كلية و جميع الكلمات النباتية التي هاهنا متعلقات فاما كلمات النبات التي

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٦٨

هاهنا فكثيرة إلا أنها جزئية فجميع نبات هذا العالم جزئي وهو من ذلك النبات الكلي وكلما طلب الطالب من النبات وجده في ذلك النبات الكلي.

فإن كان هذا هكذا قلنا إنه إن كان هذا النبات حيا فبالحري أن يكون ذلك النبات حيا أيضا لأن ذلك النبات هو النبات الأول الحق فأما هذا النبات فإنه نبات ثان وثالث لأنه صنم لذلك النبات وإنما يحيي هذا النبات بما يفيض عليه ذلك النبات من حياته وأما الأرض التي هناك إن كانت حية أو ميتة فإننا سنعلم ذلك إن نحن علمنا ما هذه الأرض لأنه صنم لتلك فنقول إن لهذه الأرض حياة ما وكلمة فاعلة فإن كانت هذه الأرض الحسية التي هي صنم حية فالحري أن تكون تلك الأرض العقلية حية وأن تكون هي الأرض الأولى وأن تكون هذه الأرض أرضا ثانية لتلك الأرض شبيهة بها والأشياء التي في العالم الأعلى كلها ضياء لأنها في الضوء الأعلى ولذلك كان كل واحد منها يرى الأشياء كلها في ذات صاحبه فصار لذلك كلها في كلها والكل في الواحد منها والواحد منها هو الكل والنور الذي يسبح عليها لا نهاية له فلذلك صار كل واحد واحد منها عظيما انتهت عباراته النورية وكلماته الشريفة بنقل عبد المسيح بن عبد الله الحمصي وإصلاح يعقوب بن إسحاق الكندي وفيها تصريحات واضحة بوجود المثل الأفلاطونية وأن للأشياء الكونية صورة نورية عقلية في عالم العقل وإياها يتلقى الإنسان حين إدراكه للمعقولات الكلية وإن كان إدراكه لها لأجل تعلقه بالبدن والكودورات والظلمات إدراكا ناقصا كإدراك البصر شيئا بعيدا في هواء مغبر مغيث ولذلك السبب يرى الإنسان الأمور العقلية التي هي إنيات محضة

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٦٩

متشخصة بذواتها وأنوار صرفة واضحة بأنفسها مبهمة كلية محتملة الصدق عنده على كثيرين كروية شبح يراه من بعيد فيجوز كونه إنسانا أو فرسا أو شجرا إلا أن هاهنا من جهة تعيين الوضع لذلك الشبح لم يجوز إلا كونه واحدا من المختلفات أيها كان وهناك يحتمل عنده كون المدرك العقلي كثيرة بالعدد صادقا عليها لعدم الوضع وبالجملة مناط الكلية والعموم ضعف الوجود وهنه وكون الشيء شبحي الوجود سواء كان بحسب ذاته وماهيته أو بحسب قلة تحصله عند المدرك بعد أن لا يكون ماديا محسوسا وذلك لكلال القوة المدركة وقصورها عن إدراك الأمور الوجودية النورية والمعقولات الشعشعانية بلا حجاب وامتراء غشاوة وعماء لأجل التعلق بعالم الهيولى والظلمات.

إجمال فيه إكمال:

قد ورد في كلام القدماء وشيعتهم الحكم بوجود عالم عقلي مثالي يحدو حذو العالم الحسي في جميع أنواعه الجوهرية والعرضية.

فمنهم من حملة على العالم المثالي الشبحي المقداري - ومنهم من قال إنه إشارة إلى الصور التي في علم الله القائمة بذاته تعالى - كما اشتهر عن المشاءين وأن قيام الصور بنفسها على ما نقل عن القدماء عبارة عن قيامها بذات باريها عز اسمه الذي هو أقرب إليها وأقوم في تحصلها عن نفسها - لأن نسبتها إلى ذاتها بالإمكان ونسبتها إلى قيومها بالوجوب. ومنهم من قال إنه إشارة إلى رب النوع وصاحب الطلسم فإن لكل نوع جرمي وطلسم برزخي عقلا يقومه ونورا يدبره وليس كليتها كما وقع في كلامهم - باعتبار صدقها على كثيرين فإنها غير صادقة على جزئيات الأجرام وأشخاص

البرازخ لكونها مفارقات نورية و عقولا قادسة و إنما كليتها باعتبار استواء نسبة فيضها إلى جميع أشخاص طلسمها النوعي.

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٧٠

و منهم من ذهب إلى أنه إشارة إلى هذه الصور الهيولانية في هذا العالم باعتبار حضورها و ظهورها عند المبدأ الأول و مثولها بين يديه و عدم خفائها و غيوبتها بذواتها عن علمه إذ هي بهذا الاعتبار كأنها مجردة من المواد و الأزمنة و الهياث الحسية و الغشاوات المادية لعدم كونها حجابا عن شهودها و وجودها لدى الباري - فهي بذواتها معقولة له تعالى كسائر الكليات و المجردات متمثلة بين يديه.

أقول و الأظهر أن أولئك الأكابر من الحكماء و الأعظم من الأولياء المتجردين عن غشاوات الطبيعة الواصلين إلى غايات الخليفة حكموا بأن الصور المعقولة من الأشياء مجردة قائمة بذواتها و إياها يتلقى العقلاء و العرفاء في معقولاتهم و معارفهم إذ لها وجود لا محالة فهي إما قائمة بذواتها أو حالة في

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٧١

محل إدراكي منا و الثاني باطل و إلا لما غاب عن محله الذي هو النفس و لا سيما إذا كانت من النفوس المشرفة الزكية و لا كيفية حلولها فيه.

فإن قيل إنها حين غيوبتها عن النفس ليست قائمة بها موجودة فيها بل يكون قيامها دائما بجوهر عقلي مفارق و هو خزانة المعقولات فيدركها حين اتصالها به و توجهها إليه و استحقاقها لفيضان تلك الصور منه عليها.

قلنا مع الإغماض عما مر من مفسد ارتسام صور الحقائق في النفس - يلزم انتقاش جوهر عقلي بصور الحقائق و الأنواع المتكثرة المتكافئة الوجود في مرتبة واحدة على سبيل الإبداع و ذلك باطل لأن انتقاش المبادي العقلية بصور ما تحتها لا يجوز أن يستفاد مما تحتها و إلا لزم انفعال العالي عن السافل و استكمال به و القدماء أشد مبالغة في استحالة هذا من المشاءين أتباع المعلم الأول فبقي أن يفيض عليها مما فوقها و ذلك يؤدي إلى صدور الكثير عن الواحد الحق المحض

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٧٢

أو حصول صور الأشياء في ذاته تعالى علوا كبيرا و جميع هذه الأمور مستقبح عند حكماء الإشراف.

و أيضا يجب على ذلك التقدير أن لا يغيب عن النفس حين إدراكها لذواتها - و التفطن لحقائقها محلها و كيفية حلولها فيه فإن العلم ليس إلا عدم الغيبة عن الذات المجردة و محل الأمور الغير الغائبة غير غائب اتفاقا بل ضرورة و كذا كيفية حلولها في محلها التي هي نحو وجودها فرضا فظهر وجود أمور كلية قائمة بذواتها - لا في محل منطبقة على جزئياتها المادية و كليتها إذا أخذت لا بشرط التجرد و اللاتجرد - و إذا جرد الجزئيات عن المواد و قيودها الشخصية و صفاتها الكونية الحسية و بالجملة اشتراكها كاشترائك الصور القائمة بالعقل و كليتها ككليتها بلا استلزام شيء من المفسد و ما ذكر في الكتب لامتناع وجود الكلي بما هو كلي في الخارج فجميع ذلك بعينه قائم في امتناع وجوده في العقل أيضا

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٧٣

عقدة وفك:

قد ذكر الشيخ في إلهيات الشفاء لإبطال وجود المثل و التعليميات هذا القول إنه إذا كان في التعليميات تعليمي مفارق للتعليمي المحسوس فإما أن لا يكون في المحسوس تعليمي البتة أو يكون فإن لم يكن في المحسوس تعليمي وجب أن لا يكون مربع ولا مدور محسوس وإذا لم يكن شيء من هذا محسوسا فكيف السبيل إلى إثبات وجودها بل إلى مبدأ تخيلها فإن مبدأ تخيلها كذلك من الوجود المحسوس حتى لو توهمنا واحدا لم يحس شيئا منها لحكمنا أنه لا يتخيل بل لا يعقل شيئا منها على أننا أثبتنا وجود كثير منها في المحسوس وإن كانت طبيعة التعليميات قد توجد أيضا في المحسوسات - فيكون لتلك الطبيعة بذاتها اعتبار فيكون ذاتها إما مطابقة بالحد والمعنى للمفارق - أو مباينة له فإن كانت مفارقة له فيكون التعليميات المعقولة أمورا غير التي نتخيلها أو نتعقلها ونحتاج في إثباتها إلى دليل مستأنف ثم نشغل بالنظر في حال مفارقتها ولا يكون ما عملوا عليه من الإخلاد إلى الاستغناء عن إثباتها والاشتغال بتقديم الشغل في بيان مفارقتها عملا يستنام إليه وإن كانت مطابقة مشاركة له في الحد فلا يخلو إما أن يكون هذه التي في المحسوسات إنما صارت فيها لطبيعتها وحدها فكيف يفارق ما له حدها وإما أن يكون ذلك أمرا يعرض لها بسبب من الأسباب - وتكون هي معروضة لذلك وحدودها غير مانعة عن لحوق ذلك إياها فيكون من شأن تلك المفارقات أن تصير مادية ومن شأن هذه المادية أن يفارق وهذا هو خلاف ما عقدوه وبنوا عليه أصل رأيهم وأيضا فإن هذه المادية التي مع العوارض إما أن تحتاج إلى مفارقات غيرها لطبائعها فيحتاج المفارقات أيضا إلى أخرى وإن كانت

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٧٤

هذه إنما يحتاج إلى المفارقات لما عرض لها حتى لو لا ذلك العارض لكانت لا تحتاج إلى المفارقات البتة ولما كان يجب أن يكون للمفارقات وجود فيكون العارض للشيء يوجب وجود أمر أقدم منه وغنى عنه ويجعل المفارقات محتاجة إليها حتى يجب لها وجود فإن لم يكن الأمر كذلك بل كان وجود المفارقات يوجب وجودها مع هذا العارض فلم يوجب العارض في غيرها ولا يوجب في أنفسها والطبيعة متفقة - وإن كانت غير محتاجة إلى المفارقات فلا يكون المفارقات عللا لها بوجه من الوجوه ولا مبادي أولى ويلزم أن يكون هذه المفارقات ناقصة فإن هذا المقارن يلحقه من القوى والأفاعيل ما لا يوجد للمفارق وكم الفرق بين شكل إنساني ساذج وبين شكل إنساني حي فاعل انتهى كلامه بالفاظه.

أقول وخلاصة حجته الأولى أن الحقيقة الواحدة التي هي ذات حد واحد وماهية واحدة لا يختلف أفرادها في التجرد والتجسم والغناء والحاجة إلى المادة والمعقولة والمحسوسة ولا شك أن كلامه إنما يكون تاما في المتواطئة من الماهيات - دون المشككة.

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٧٥

وأيضا يتوقف على أن الذات أو الذاتي بما هي ذات أو ذاتي لا يتفاوت في حقيقتها وماهياتها وقد مر حال ذلك كيف وهو أول المسألة في هذا المقام - وبناء البحوث عليه وكثير من قواعد المتقدمين مبنية على تجويز كون حقيقة واحدة

بنفس ذاتها كاملة غنية و ناقصة فقيرة لا بجعل جاعل يتخلل بين ذاتها و فقرها أو غناها بل الغني منها يكون غنيا لذاته و الفقير فقيرا لذاته فمن جعل ذات الفقير - جعلها بنفس ذلك الجعل فقيرا لا بجعل مستأنف فالفقير منها فقير بذاته محتاج بنفسه إلى جاعل لا لأجل كونه فقيرا و محتاجا أي من جهة حمل هذا المعنى عليه و نقاوة حجته الثانية أن أفراد حقيقة واحدة لا يكون بعضها سببا و بعضها مسببا لذاتها - و أن المعلول إذا كان لذاته معلولا لفرد آخر من نوعه يلزم أن يكون ذلك الآخر أيضا معلولا لفرد آخر و هكذا يعود الكلام إلى أن ينتهي إلى الدور أو التسلسل المستحيلين - و هذا أيضا يبتني على استحالة كون الطبيعة المتفككة متفاوتة في التقدم و التأخر - و الأولية و عدمها و الغنى و الافتقار.

و اعلم أن المنقول عن أفلاطون و حكماء الفرس و القدماء من اليونانيين القول بمفارقة النوعيات و تجرد الصور الجوهرية لحقائق الأجسام الطبيعية و أما التعليميات فإنها عندهم ماديات في وجودها البتة و إن فارقت المادة في الحد فليس يجوز عندهم وجود بعد قائم لا في مادة و برهانه على ما سيجيء أنه لو كان مجردا لكان إما

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٧٦

متناها أو غير متناه و الثاني باطل لما سيأتي من بيان استحالة عدم تناهي الكميات القارة و غير القارة لا لما في الشفاء من أن عدم تناهيه عند التجرد إما لأنه مجرد طبيعة فيلزم أن يكون كل بعد غير متناه و إن لحقه لتجرده عن المادة كانت المادة مفيدة الحصر و الصورة و كلا الوجهين محال لما علمت من عدم جريانه فيما يتفاوت كمالا و نقصانا و الكميات من هذا القبيل و الأول أيضا مستحيل لأن انحصار البعد حين تجرده في حد محدود و شكل مقدر لا يكون إلا لانفعال عرض له من خارج طبيعته و الانفعال كما ستعلم من عوارض المادة بالذات فيكون غير مفارق - و قد فرضناه مفارقا هذا خلف و الحجتان المذكورتان و إن أوردهما الشيخ على القائلين بمفارقة التعليميات لكنهما بعينهما جاريتان من قبله في إبطال الصور المفارقة - و اردتان بحسب أسلوبه على هذا المذهب و لذلك نقلناهما و أجبنا عنهما بما يوافق رأي القائلين بالمثل الأفلاطونية و الصور المفارقة

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٧٧

تلويح استناري:

لعلك إن كنت أهلا لتلقي الأسرار الإلهية و المعارف الحققة - لتيقنت و تحققت أن كل قوة و كمال و هيئة و جمال توجد في هذا العالم الأدنى فإنها بالحقيقة ظلال و تمثالات لما في العالم الأعلى إنما تنزلت و تكدرت و تجرمت بعد ما كانت نقية صافية مقدسة عن النقص و الشين مجردة عن الكدورة و الرين متعالية عن الآفة و القصور و الخلل و الفتور و الهلاك و الدثور بل جميع صور الكائنات و ذوات المبدعات آثار و أنوار للوجود الحقيقي و النور القيومي - و هو منبع الجمال المطلق و الجلال الأتم الأليق الذي صور المعاشيق و حسن الموجودات الروحانية و الجسمانية قطرة بالنسبة إلى بحر ذلك الجمال و ذرة بالقياس إلى شمس تلك العظمة و الجلال و لو لا أنواره و أضواؤه في صور الموجودات الظاهرية لم يكن الوصول إلى نور الأنوار الذي هو الوجود المطلق الإلهي فإن النفس عند افتنانها بالمحبوب المجازي الذي هو من وجه حقيقي تتوجه إلى المحبوب الحقيقي المطلق الذي هو الصمد لكل شيء و الملجأ لكل حي و تتولى جنبابه الكريم منبع الأنوار و معدن الآثار فيحصل لها الوصول إلى الحضرة الإلهية و يتنور باطنها بنوره - فتدرك الأمور

الكلية و الصور المفارقة العقلية لصيرورتها حينئذ عقلا مدركا للكليات - ألا ترى أن آثار أنواره التي ظهرت في عالم الملك و تنزلت عن مراتبها الروحانية العقلية و لاحت في صور الجزئيات و اتسمت بالحسن و اللطافة و الغنج و الدلال - مع أنها ضعفت بصحبة الظلمة الجسمية و تكثفت بالكثافة المادية بعد نقائها و صفائها و تجردها كيف تدهش العقول و تحير الأبواب و أصحابها و توقع في الفتن و المحن

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٧٨

طلابها فما ظنك في الجمال المطلق الذاتي و النور الساطع الإلهي الذي في غاية العظمة و نهاية الكبرياء و الكمال المدهش للعقول و القلوب من وراء سبعين ألف حجاب نوراني و ظلماني

كما روي عن رسوله ص: أن لله سبعين ألف حجاب من نور و ظلمة لو كشفها لأحرقت سبحات وجهه ما انتهى إليه بصره من خلقه

و تفتن مما

قَالَ ع: إِنْ هَذِهِ النَّارُ مِنْ نَارِ جَهَنَّمَ غَسَلَتْ بِسَبْعِينَ مَاءً ثُمَّ أُنْزِلَتْ

و قس النور عليها في استنارته و احتجابه إذ لولاه لما كان للعالم وجود و لا ذوق و لا شهود لاحتراقه و اضمحلاله من سطوعه فكما أن حرارة هذه النار الجسمانية التابعة لصورتها النوعية شرر من نار قهر الله المعنوية بعد تنزلها في مراتب كثيرة كتزلزلها في مرتبة النفس بصورة الغضب إذ ربما يؤثر شدة الغضب في إحراق الأخلاط مع رطوبتها - ما لا يؤثر النار في الحطب مع سورة اللهب و من هذا يعلم أن كل مسخن لا يجب أن يكون حارا فكذلك الأنوار المحسوسة من النيران و الكواكب أظلال و أشباح لأنوار لطف الله المعنوية و آثار لأضواء ملكوته و أشعة جماله بعد حبوطها في منازل أمره و خلقه.

إيقاظ عقلي:

لا يخفى على من تنور قلبه و استضاء عقله بعد التأمل فيما مر من القواعد و الأصول أن الغرض الأقصى في وجود العشق في جبلة النفوس و محبتها لشمائل الأبدان و محاسن الأجسام و استحسانها زينة المواد و الأجرام إنما هو تنبيه لها من نوم الغفلة و رقدة الجهالة و رثاسة لها من تخريج الأمور الجسمانية و الأصنام الهيولانية إلى المحاسن الروحانية و الفضائل العقلانية

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٧٩

و الأنوار الإلهية و دلالة على معرفة جواهرها و شرف عنصرها و محاسن عالمها و صلاح معادها و ذلك لأن جميع المحاسن و الفضائل و كل الزينة و المشتهيات المرغوب فيها اللواتي ترى على ظواهر الأجرام و جلود الأبدان إنما هي أصباغ و نقوش و رسوم صورتها أرباب أنواعها و ملائكة تدبيرها في المواد و الأسطقسات قد زينت بها كيما نظرت النفوس إليها حنت إليها و تشوقت نحوها و قصدت لطلبها بالنظر إليها و التأمل لها و استنبطت خالصها المجرد عن مغشوشها المحسوس و تعرفت لبها المصفى عن قشرها المكدر بانتزاعها الكلبيات من الجزئيات و تفتننها بالعقليات من الحسيات و رفضها الدنيا لأجل الآخرة كل ذلك كيما يتصور تلك الرسوم و المحاسن في ذاتها و اتصلت بها و تمثلت

لديها حتى إذا غابت تلك الأشخاص الجرمانية عن مشاهدة الحواس بقيت تلك الصور المعشوقة المحبوبة مشاهدة لها مصورة فيها لها صورة روحانية نقية صافية باقية معها معشوقاتها متصلة بها اتصالاً معنوياً لا يخاف فراقها ولا تغييرها فيستغني حينئذ بالعيان عن الخبر والبيان ويزهد عن ملاقات الألوان ويتخلص عن الرق والحدثان والدليل على صحة ما قلناه يعرفه من عشق يوماً لشخص من الأشخاص ثم تسلى عنه أو فقدته مدة ثم إنه وجدته من بعد ذلك - وقد تغير هو عما كان عهده عليه من الحسن والجمال وتلك الزينة والمحاسن - التي كان يراها على ظاهر جسمه و سطوح بدنه فإنه متى رجع عن ذلك فنظر إلى تلك الرسوم والصور التي هي باقية في نفسه منذ العهد القديم وجدها بحالها لم يتغير ولم يتبدل وراها برمتها فشاهدها في ذاتها حينئذ ما كانت تراها من قبل لم تدثر ولم يفسد بل باقية ببقاء علتها الجاعلة ودوام فاعلها القائم ورب صنمها الدائم - وحينئذ يجد من نفسها وفي جوهرها ما كانت تطلب قبل ذلك خارجاً عنها فعند ذلك

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٨٠

يرفضه و يعلم و يقر بأن تلك الصور الحسان و الشمائل و الفضائل التي كانت تراها على ذلك الشخص ليست محبوسة فيه ثابتة له محصورة عنده بل مرسومة في جوهرها متصورة في ذاتها باقية ثابتة على حالة واحدة لم تتغير وإنما ذلك الشخص كان دليلاً عليها كغيره من الأشخاص الصنمية التي تكون دلائل على الأنوار العقلية و مظاهر للمعاني النورية فإذا فكر العاقل اللبيب فيما وصفناه استيقظت نفسه من نوم غفلتها و استفلت بذاتها و فازت بجوهرها و استغنت عن غيرها و استراحت عند ذلك من تعبها و عنائها و مقاساتها محبة غيرها و تخلصت من الشقاوة التي تعرض لعاشقي الأجسام و محبي الأجرام من الأبدان الإنسانية و الدراهم و الدنانير و اليواقيت و الدرر - و الضياء و العقار و البساتين و الأشجار و الثمار و غيرها من الدائرات البائدات و قد قال الله تعالى وَالْبَاقِيَاتُ الصَّالِحَاتُ خَيْرٌ عِنْدَ رَبِّكَ ثَوَابًا وَ خَيْرٌ أَمَلًا فإذا انتبهت النفس من نوم الغفلة و استيقظت من رقدة الجهالة و فتحت عين بصيرتها و عاينت عالمها و عرفت مبدأها و معادها لتيقن أن المستلذات الجسمية و المحاسن المادية - كلها كعكوس الفضائل العقلية و خيالات الأنوار الروحانية ليست لها حقيقة متصلة و ذات مستقلة بل كسراب بقية يحسبه الظمان ماء حتى إذا جاءه لم يجده شيئاً و وجد الله عنده فوفاه.

تنوير رحمانى:

إن الباري جل ثناؤه بمقتضى رحمته و لطفه جعل الأمور الجسمانية المحسوسة كلها مثالات دالات على الأمور الروحانية العقلية و جعل طريق الحواس درجاً و مراقي يرتقى بها إلى معرفة الأمور العقلية التي هي الغرض الأقصى في وقوع النفس في دار المحسوسات و طلوعها عن أفق الماديات و كما أن المحسوسات فقراء الذوات إلى العقلية لكونها رشحات لأنوارها و أطلالا لأضوائها فكذلك معرفة الجسمانيات المحسوسة هي فقر النفس و شدة حاجتها و معرفة الأمور العقلية هي غناها و نعيمها و ذلك أن النفس

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٨١

في معرفة الأمور الجسمانية محتاجة إلى الجسد و آلاته ليدرك بتوسطها الجسمانيات - و أما إدراكها للأمور الروحانية

فيكفيها ذاتها و جوهرها بعد ما يأخذها من طرق الحواس بتوسط الجسد فإذا حصل لها ذلك و صارت عقلا و عاقلا بالفعل فقد استغنت عن الحواس و عن التعلق بالجسد فاجتهد يا حبيبي في طلب الغنى الأبدي بتوسط هذا الهيكل و آلاته ما دام يمكنك قبل فناء المدة و تصرم العمر و فساد الهيكل و بطلان وجوده و احذر كل الحذر أن تبقى نفسك فقيرة محتاجة إلى هيكل لتنعيم به و تكمل فتكون ممن يقول يا ليتنا نرد فنعمل صالحا غير الذي كنا نعمل أو تبقى في البرزخ إلى يوم يبعثون و من أين لهم أن يشعر و أيان يبعثون ما دامت هي ساهية لاهية غافلة مقبلة على الشهوات و الزينة الطبيعية و الغرور بالأماني في هذه الحياة الحسية المذمومة التي ذمها رب الأرباب في مواضع كثيرة من كتابه العزيز ثم ذم الذين لا يعرفون هذه الأمور المعقولة و أرباب الأصنام و أصحاب البرازخ العلوية و السفلية و لم يرتق نظرهم من الأمور المحسوسة و لم يعرفوا إلا إياها حسب فقال رَضُوا بِالْحَيَاةِ الدُّنْيَا وَاطْمَأْنُونُوا بِهَا وَ الَّذِينَ هُمْ عَنْ آيَاتِنَا غَافِلُونَ يعني عن أمور الآخرة و دار النعيم التي ترتقي إليها نفوس الأخيار بعد مفارقتها الأبدان كما ذكر في القرآن المجيد - إِلَيْهِ يَصْعَدُ الْكَلِمُ الطَّيِّبُ يعني روح المؤمن وَالْعَمَلُ الصَّالِحُ يَرْفَعُهُ يعني معارف العقلية ترغبه فيها و ترقيه إلى هناك

المرحلة الخامسة في الوحدة و الكثرة و لواحقهما

من الهووية و أقسامها و الغيرية و أصناف التقابل المعروفة.

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٨٢

فصل (١) في الواحد و الكثير

اعلم أن الوحدة رفيق الوجود

يدور معه حيثما دار إذ هما متساويان في الصدق على الأشياء فكل ما يقال عليه إنه موجود يقال عليه إنه واحد و يوافقه أيضا في القوة و الضعف فكل ما وجوده أقوى كانت وحدانيته أتم بل هما متوافقان في أكثر الأحكام و الأحوال و لذلك ربما ظن أن المفهوم من كل منهما واحد - و ليس كذلك بل هما واحد بحسب الذات لا بحسب المفهوم فبالحري أن نتكلم في الوحدة و أحوالها المختصة مثل الهووية و التجانس و التماثل و التوافق و التساوي و التشابه و نتكلم في مقابلتها من الكثرة و أحكامها من الغيرية و الخلاف - بل الكلام في الجانب المقابل للوحدة أكثر لتشابه الوحدة و تفنن الكثرة و تشعبها.

فنقول إن للوحدة كما أشرناه أسوة بالوجود في أكثر الأحكام.

فمنها أنه لا يمكن تعريفها كسائر الأمور المساوية للوجود في العموم إلا مع الدور أو تعريف الشيء بنفسه فقد قيل الواحد هو الذي لا ينقسم من الجهة التي يقال إنه واحد و هذا يشتمل على تعريف الشيء بنفسه و على الدور أيضا لأن الانقسام المأخوذ فيه معناه معنى الكثرة و يقال في تعريف الكثرة إنها المجتمعة من الوحدات و هذا أيضا تعريف للكثرة بالاجتماع الذي هو نفس مفهوم الكثرة و هو

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٨٣

مأخوذ صريحا و ضمنا في لفظ جمع الوحدات الذي لا يفهم معناه إلا بالكثرة - و تعريف لها بالوحدة التي لا تعرف إلا

بالكثرة فيشتمل على الفسادين المذكورين في مقابلتها وقس على ما ذكرناه سائر ما قيل في تعريفهما في الفساد بل الحق أن تصورهما أولي مستغن عن التعريف.

لكن هاهنا شيء يجب التنبيه عليه وهو أن الكثرة أعرف عند الخيال والوحدة عند العقل فكل منهما وإن كانت من الأشياء المرتسمة في الذهن بديا لكن الكثرة مرتسمة في الخيال أولا لأن ما يرسم في الخيال محسوس والمحسوس كثير والوحدة أمر عقلي لأن المعقولات أمور عامة أول ما يتصرف العقل فيها بالتقسيم - يتصور كلا منها واحدا ثم يقسمه إلى كذا وكذا وإلى ما لا يكون كذا فلنا أن نعرف الكثرة بالوحدة تعريفا عقليا بأن نأخذ الوحدة أولية التصور بذاتها وأن نعرف الوحدة بالكثرة تعريفا تنبيها ودلالة على أن المراد بهذه اللفظة الشيء المعقول عندنا عقلا أوليا وإشعارا عليه بسلب هذا منه ففي الأول تعريف لمعنى خيالي بمعنى عقلي وفي الثاني تنبيه على معنى عقلي بمعنى خيالي فلا يلزم دور على هذه الطريقة.

فنقول الواحد ما لا ينقسم من حيث إنه لا ينقسم

والتقييد بالحيثية ليندرج فيه الواحد الغير الحقيقي لانقسامه في بعض الوجوه فلا يصدق عليه أنه لا ينقسم - فلا يندرج في التعريف بدون التقييد وعند التقييد يندرج لأنه لا ينقسم من بعض

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٨٤

الحيثيات فالتقييد بالحيثية يفيد اندراج الغير الحقيقي في التعريف المذكور فالواحد إذن قد يكون عين الوحدة وهو الواحد بما هو واحد على قياس الموجود بما هو موجود وذلك أحق الأشياء بالوحدة وقد يكون غيرها. وهذا على ضربين حقيقي وغير حقيقي وهو ما يكون أشياء متعددة مشتركة في أمر واحد هو جهة وحدتها وهي إما مقومه لتلك الأشياء أو عارضة لها أو لا مقومة ولا عارضة لها بل إضافة محضة فيها كما يقال حال النفس عند البدن كحال الملك عند المدينة.

و الأول قد يكون جنسا لها وهو الواحد بالجنس كالإنسان والفرس المتحددين في الحيوان وقد يكون نوعا لها وهو الواحد بالنوع ويساوقه الاتحاد في الفصل أيضا كزيد وعمر المتحددين في الإنسانية والناطقية. والثاني قد يكون محمولا لها وهو الواحد بالمحمول كالقطن والثلج المتحددين في الأبيض المحمول عليهما وقد يكون موضوعا لها وهو الواحد بالموضوع كالكتاب والضاحك المتحددين في الإنسان المحمولين عليه. والثالث وهو الواحد بالإضافة ثم إن الاتحاد في الأوصاف العرضية والذاتية يتغير

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٨٥

أسماءه بتغير ما نسب إليه فالمشاركة في المحمول إذا كانت في النوع يسمى مماثلة وفي الجنس مجانسة وفي الكيف مشابهة وفي الكم مساواة وفي الوضع مطابقة وفي الإضافة مناسبة وظاهر أن جهة الوحدة في الواحد الغير الحقيقي هي الواحد الحقيقي وهو في هذا المقام ما يكون جهة الوحدة فيه ذاته بذاته وإن كان الأخرى به أن لا يطلق إلا على ما لا ينقسم أصلا كالواجب تعالى وذلك الواحد الحقيقي بالمعنى الأعم قد يكون واحدا جنسيا وقد يكون واحدا نوعيا وقد يكون واحدا عدديا أي شخصا وهو إما أن لا ينقسم بحسب الخارج أصلا أو ينقسم والثاني قد يكون واحدا

بالاتصال وهو الذي ينقسم بالقوة إلى أجزاء متحدة في تمام الحقيقة انقساماً لذاته كالمقدار أو لغيره كالجسم الواحد البسيط من الماء والهواء فإن قبوله الانقسام بواسطة المقدار القائم به وإن أعداد القسمة و تصحيحها من أجل المادة و قد يكون واحداً بالتركيب وهو الذي له كثرة بالفعل وهو الواحد بالاجتماع وذلك إما أن يكون حاصلًا فيه جميع ما يمكن حصوله فيه فهو واحد بالتمام وإن لم يكن فهو كثير و يسمونه الناس غير واحد و التمامية إما بحسب الوضع كالدرهم الواحد أو الصناعة كالبيت التام أو الطبيعة كالإنسان إذا كان تام الأعضاء و الخط المستقيم لقبوله الزيادة في استقامته أياً ما كان - فليس بواحد من جهة التمام بخلاف المستدير إذا أحاط بالمركز من كل جهة فإنه واحد بالتمام و أما الأول وهو الذي لا ينقسم بحسب الخارج أصلاً أي لا بالقوة كالمتمصل و لا بالفعل كالمجتمع فهو إما أن يكون ذا وضع وهو النقطة الواحدة أو غير ذي وضع وهو المفارق كالعقل و النفس الشخصيتين وإنما شرف كل موجود بغلبة الوحدة فيه - وإن لم يخل موجود ما عن وحده حتى أن العشرة في عشرينه واحدة فكل ما هو أبعد عن الكثرة فهو أشرف و أكمل و حيثما ارتقى العدد إلى أكثر نزلت نسبة الوحدة إليه إلى أقل فالأحق بالوحدة هو الواحد الحقيقي و أحق أقسامه بها ما لا ينقسم

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٨٦

أصلاً لا في الكم و لا في الحد و لا بالقوة و لا بالفعل و لا ينفصل وجوده عن ماهيته. ثم ما لا ينقسم في الكم أصلاً قوة و فعلاً و إن تصور انقسامه إلى أجزاء الحد ذهنيًا كالعقل و النفوس عند المشاءين و ما لا ينقسم منه إلى الجزئيات أحق بالوحدة - كالعقل مما ينقسم إليها كالنفس الإنسانية. ثم الواحد بالاتصال كالواحد من الخط و الماء و هو قابل القسمة إلى أجزاء متشاركة في الحد و من هذا القسم ما لا ينقسم بحسب الفك و القطع كالفلك فهو أحق باسم الوحدة مما ينقسم بحسبه كالمتمصلات العنصرية أجساماً أو مقادير و منه أيضاً ما لا ينقسم قسمة الكلّي إلى الجزئيات و إن انقسم إلى مادة و صورة كالفلكيات أحق بالوحدة مما ينقسم بوجهين كالعنصریات المركبة مطلقاً و مما هو بالعكس كالمقادير من وجه. ثم الواحد بالاجتماع و أحق أقسامه بالوحدة ما يكون اجتماعه طبيعياً كالإنسان الواحد المجتمع من نفس ذات قوي و بدن مركب من أمشاج و أعضاء و جلد و عظام و غيرها و وحدته ظل لوحدة النفس كما أن وجوده كذلك على ما مر في مباحث الماهية. ثم الواحد العددي أحق بالوحدة من الواحد النوعي لكون وحدته ذهنية و هو من الواحد الجنسي لشدة إبهامه و كونه ذهنية و كذا الأجناس بحسب مراتب بعدها - عن الواحد الشخصي تضعف نسبة الوحدة إليها فقد علم أن الواحد مقول على ما تحته بالتشكيك كما أن الوجود كذلك و أما الكثير فهو ما يقابل الواحد في جميع معانيه و اعلم أن الوحدة كالوجود غير مقومة لماهية شيء من الأشياء لست

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٨٧

أقول لإنهية لأن الوحدة عندنا غير زائدة على الوجود و ذلك أنه ليس إذا فهمت الإنسان و فهمت الواحد يجب أن يسنح لك أن الإنسان واحد فبين أن الواحدية ليست مقومة للإنسان بل من اللوازم فيكون الوحدة عارضة له لكن يجب عليك

أن تتأمل فيما أسلفناه من أن كيفية عروض الوجود للماهيات على أي وجه حتى يتبين لك أن كون الوحدة زائدة على الماهيات سبيله ما ذا فتفطن و لا تكن من الغافلين

تلويح:

و من جملة المضاهاة الواقعة بين الوحدة و الوجود إفادة الواحد بتكراره العدد مثالا لإيجاد الحق الخلق بظهوره في صور الأشياء و تفصيل العدد مراتب الواحد مثال لإظهار الموجودات وجود الحق و نعوته الجمالية و صفاته الكمالية و كون الواحد نصف الاثنين و ثلث الثلاثة و ربع الأربعة إلى غير ذلك مثال للنسب و الإضافات اللازمة للواجب بالقياس إلى الممكنات- و ظهور العدد بالمعدود مثال لظهور الموجودات الإمكانية بالماهيات و هي بعضها حسية و بعضها عقلية كما أن بعض المعدود في الحس و بعضها في العقل و من اللطائف أن العدد مع غاية تباينه عن الوحدة و كون كل مرتبة منه حقيقة برأسها موصوفة بخواص لا يوجد في غيرها إذا فتشت حاله لا يوجد فيه و لا في حقائق مراتبه

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٨٨

المختلفة غير الوحدة و أنك لا تزال تثبت في كل مرتبة من المراتب عين ما تنفيه في مرتبة أخرى مثلا تقول إن الواحد ليس من العدد باتفاق المحققين و أهل الحساب مع أنه عين العدد إذ هو الذي بتكرره يوجد الأعداد و يلزمه في كل مرتبة لوازم و خصوصيات و كذلك يصح لك أن تقول لكل مرتبة إنها مجموع الأحاد لا غير- و يصح لك أن تقول إنها ليست مجموع الأحاد فقط لأن مجموع الأحاد جنس كل مرتبة من المراتب لأن كل مرتبة حقيقة برأسها موصوفة بخواص لا يوجد في غيرها- فلا بد لها من أمر آخر غير جميع الأحاد فلا تزال تثبت عين ما تنفي و تنفي عين ما تثبت و هذا الأمر العجيب بعينه حال العرفاء في باب ما يقولون إن الحق المنزه عن نقائص الإمكان بل عن كمالات الأكوان هو الخلق المشبه و إن كان قد تميز الخلق بإمكانه و نقصه عن الخالق بوجوبه و شرفه.

وهم و تنبيه:

لا تصغ إلى من يقول الوحدة من الاعتباريات و ثواني المعقولات- متشبها بما يعتمد عليه من أنه لو كانت الوحدة موجودة لكانت له وحدة أخرى و هكذا حتى يتسلسل إلى غير النهاية و ادفعه بتذكر ما سلف من أن حقيقة الوحدة في واحدته مستغنية عن وحدة أخرى يعرضها اللهم إلا بمحض اعتبار العقل في مرتبة متأخرة عنها إذ للعقل أن يعتبر للوحدة وحدة و لوحدة الوحدة وحدة أخرى و هكذا و خطرات العقل لا ينتهي إلى حد لا أنه يذهب إلى لا نهاية و بينهما فرق و الأول غير مستحيل دون الثاني و خلاصة القول إن لفظ الوحدة يطلق بالاشتراك الصناعي على معنيين أحدهما المعنى الانتزاعي المصدري أي كون الشيء واحدا و لا شبهة في أنه من الأمور العقلية التي لا تحقق لها خارجا و الآخر

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٨٩

ما به يكون الشيء واحدا بالذات و يمنع وقوع الكثرة فيها و هذا المعنى من لوازمه نفي الكثرة بخلاف المعنى الأول فإنه من لوازم نفي الكثرة و الوحدة بالمعنى الانتزاعي ظل للوحدة الحقيقية الأصلية ينتزع فيها من نفس ذاتها و في غيرها لأجل ارتباطه و تعلقه بها فقد علم أن الوحدة الحقيقية و الهوية الشخصية- و الوجود الحقيقي لا الانتزاعي كلها واحدة

بالذات متغايرة بحسب الاعتبار كما مر مرارا.

شك و تحقيق:

ليس لك أن تقول الوحدة مغايرة للهوية لأن الجسم المتصل إذا لم يطرأ عليه شيء من أسباب القسمة كان شخصا واحدا- فإذا ورد عليه التفريق حتى يكثر فهوية ذلك الجسم باقية و وحدته زائلة و الباقي غير الزائل فالهوية غير الوحدة لأننا نجيبك عنه بأن وحدة الاتصال الذي هو عين هوية الجوهر الاتصالي كلما زالت عن اتصال ذلك الجسم بطلت هوية ذلك الاتصال و وجد اتصالان آحران بل زوال الوحدة الاتصالية عين بطلان هوية المتصل بذاته. فإن رجعت و قلت هب أن تلك الصورة الاتصالية عدمت لكن الكلام في الجسمانية الباقية حالة الفصل و الوصل فيقبل الوحدة تارة و الكثرة أخرى و هي باقية الوجود في الحالين. قلنا الهيولى الجسمانية جوهر قابل ليس لها إلا هوية القبول و الاستعداد- فيطرأ عليها الوحدة الاتصالية و الكثرة المقابلة لها و هي بحسب ذاتها ليست متصفة بالوجود الاتصالي و الوحدة الاتصالية و لا بالمعنى المقابل لها حتى ينعدم بزوال أحدهما- كما في الجوهر الامتدادي و هي إنما تتصف بحسب ذاتها بوجود استعدادي و وحدة

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٩٠

قابلية لا يزولان عنها في جميع الأحوال بل هي في جميع المراتب و الأوضاع مستحفظة لوحدها التي هي هويتها اللازمة و كل واحدة من وحدة الجسم و كثرته يطرأ عليها لأن اتصافها بهما إنما هو بالعرض لا بالذات و ظني أن سليم الفطرة- لا يريب في أن الشيء لا يكون في ذاته محلا لوحده و كثرته فإن هوية شيء لا يقبل التعدد.

إنارة:

و لعلك تقول حسبما وجدت في كتب الفن كالشفاء و غيره- إن الوحدة مغايرة للوجود لأن الكثير من حيث هو كثير موجود و لا شيء من الكثير من حيث هو كثير بواحد ينتج فليس كل موجود

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٩١

بما هو موجود بواحد فإذا الوحدة مغايرة للوجود نعم يعرض لذلك الكثير وحدة و خصوصية لا أنه يعرض الكثرة لما عرضت له الوحدة فيقال لك إن أردت بالموصوف بالحيثية المذكورة في المقدمتين ما يراد منه في مباحث الماهية لأجل التميز بين الذاتي و العرضي فالصغرى ممنوعة لأن الكثير بهذا المعنى لا موجود و لا معدوم- و إن أردت أن الموصوف بالكثرة موجود في الواقع فالكبرى ممنوعة إذ كما أنه موجود فهو واحد أيضا إذ ما من شيء إلا و له وحدة لكن لقائل أن يقول بعد اختيار الشق الأخير إن الوحدة عرضت للكثرة لا لما يعرض له الكثرة فموضوعاهما متغايران مثلا العشرة عارضة للجسم و الوحدة عارضة للعشرة من حيث إنها عشرة- فهنا شيان الكثرة و موضوعها فالكثرة للموضوع و الوحدة لتلك الكثرة فوحدة الكثرة لا تناقض تلك الكثرة لعدم اتحاد الموضوع بخلاف وحدة موضوع الكثرة- فإنها تنافي كثرته مع اتحاد الزمان و لا ينافي وجوده فثبت المغايرة بين الوجود و الوحدة فيمكن أن يقال الوحدة كالوجود على أنحاء شتى و كل وحدة خاصة يقابلها كثرة خاصة و الوحدة المطلقة يقابلها الكثرة المطلقة كما أن الوجود الخاص الذهني أو الخارجي يقابله العدم الذي بإزائه و العدم المطلق بإزاء الوجود المطلق- و الدعوى أن وحدة ما لا ينفك عن

وجود ما بأي اعتبار أخذ فإذا ظهر ذلك فنقول ما ذكرتم لا يدل على مغايرة الوحدة المطلقة للوجود إذ الكثير المقابل له لا وجود له إذ كل موجود فله وحدة و لو بالاعتبار و تحقيق المقام أن موضوع الكثرة - كالرجال العشرة مثلا من حيث كونهم عشرة ليس لهم وجود غير وجودات الأحاد - إلا بمجرد اعتبار العقل كما هو التحقيق لأن كل موجود خارجي لا بد له من وحدة خارجية كيف و لو كان الحجر الموضوع بجانب الإنسان موجودا في الخارج لا ينضبط شيء من التقاسيم و لو لم يكن الوحدة الخارجية معتبرة لم ينحصر المقولات عندهم

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٩٢

في العشر إذ المركب من الجوهر و كيف لا جوهر و لا كيف فيكون مقولة أخرى - و كذا المركب من كيف و الأين ليس شيئا منهما فيكون مقولة أخرى و هكذا يرتقي عدد المقولات في التراكيب الثنائية و الثلاثية و الرباعية إلى العشارية إلى مبلغ كثير و كذا الكلام فيما يندرج تحت مقسم كلي من الأجناس و الأنواع فقد علم أن الكثير من حيث الكثرة لا وجود له إلا بالاعتبار كما أن للعقل أن يعتبرها موجودة فله أن يعتبرها شيئا واحدا لا يقال المراد مما ذكرناه مفاد القضية الوصفية و هو أن الكثير بشرط الكثرة موجود بنحو من الأنحاء و لا يمكن اتصافه بالوحدة المقابلة لها للمنافاة بينهما فالكثير لا يكون واحدا و محصل ذلك أن صفة الوحدة ينافي الكثرة و الوجود لا ينافيها.

قلنا إن أردتم بالكثرة المطلقة المقابلة للوحدة المطلقة منعنا الصغرى و إن أردتم الكثرة الخاصة فالنتيجة تكون حكما بالمنافاة بين الكثرة و الوحدة المقابلة لها لا بين الكثرة الخاصة و الوحدة بوجه آخر فلا يلزم منه إلا المغايرة بين نحو من الوجود و نحو من الوحدة و هذا ليس بضائر و كذا الحكم إذا قرر الكلام - بأن وصف الكثرة لا يأتى عن اتصافه بالوجود فتفطن و لا تزل قدمك بعد توكيدها

فصل (٢) في الهو و ما يقابلها

قد علمت أن بعض أقسام الوحدة هو ما يعرض الكثير من جهة اشتراكها في

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٩٣

معنى من المعاني فالهوهو عبارة عن الاتحاد بين شيئين في الوجود و هما

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٩٤

المتغايران بوجه من الوجوه المتحدان في الوجود الخارجي أو الذهني سواء كان الاتحاد بينهما في الوجود بالذات بمعنى كون واحد منهما موجودا بوجود ينسب ذلك الوجود إلى الآخر بالذات فيكون الحمل بالذات كقولنا زيد إنسان فإن الوجود المنسوب إلى زيد هو بعينه منسوب إلى الإنسان أو كان الاتحاد بينهما في الوجود بالعرض و هو ما لا يكون كذلك سواء كان أحدهما موجودا بوجود بالذات و الآخر موجودا بذلك الوجود بالعرض - كقولنا الإنسان كاتب فإن جهة الاتحاد بينهما وجود واحد منسوب إلى الموضوع بالذات و إلى المحمول بالعرض أو لا يكون و لا واحد منهما موجودا بالذات بل يكون كلاهما موجودا بوجود أمر غيرهما بالعرض كقولنا الكاتب متحرك فإن جهة الاتحاد بينهما هو الموجود المنسوب إلى غيرهما و هو الإنسان فثبت أن جهة الاتحاد في الهوهو قد يكون في الطرفين و قد يكون في

أحدهما و قد يكون خارجا عنهما.

تنبيه تحصيلي:

قد علمت أن الوحدة الاتصالية من أنحاء الوحدة الحقيقية فالواحد بالاتصال يجب أن يكون واحدا بالموضوع غير منقسمة إلى صور مختلفة بل إلى أجزاء متشابهة الحقيقة التي وجودها بالقوة على ما سيجيء - ولأن كلما كانت وحدته بالفعل كانت كثرته بالقوة فالقول بأن أجزاء المتصل الوحداني يمكن تخالفها بحسب الصور من سخائف الكلام.

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٩٥

لكن لقائل أن يقول فقد لزم بما وضعت من معنى الهو هو صحة الحمل - بين أبعاض المتصل الواحد المقداري و بينها و بين الكل فتقول هذا النصف من الذراع نصفه الآخر أو كله أو بعضه إذ مجرد الاتحاد في الوجود مصحح للحمل مواطاة - مع جهة كثرة اعتبارية وهمية أو فرضية.

ف قيل في دفعه تارة بأن المعتبر في الحمل اتحاد الشئيين المتغايرين بحسب المعنى و المفهوم المتحددين في الوجود و جزئية الجزء المعين المتصل من حيث التعيين الشخصي لا من حيث الماهية إذ هو من جهة الماهية الاتصالية ليس على تعيين شيء من الامتدادات ليصلح انتزاع جزء منه غير جزء فيدفع بأن كثيرا ما يتحقق الحمل - في الخصوصيات الشخصية كقولك زيد بن عمرو أو زيد هذا الكاتب و تارة بما ذكره بعض المحققين بأن الحمل مطلقا و إن كان هو الاتحاد في الوجود لكن التعارف الخاصي خصه بذلك مع عدم الاختلاف في الوضع كما خصه من بين مطلق الاتحاد بالاتحاد في الوجود و يقتضي اثنيية ما و وحدة ما إذ لو كانت الوحدة الصرفة لم يتحقق أو الكثرة الصرفة لم يصدق. و تصدى لإبطاله بعض الأماجد عز مجده - أولا بأن هذا تخصيص لا يناسب طور الحكمة - و ثانيا بأن الكلام ليس في إطلاق لفظ الحمل بحسب عرفهم حتى يجري فيه هذا الطور بل في أن كون المتصل المقداري عين جزئه بحسب الأعيان إنما لزم من الاتحاد

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٩٦

بينهما في الوجود و يستلزم من ذلك أن يقال فيهما هو هو إذ الهوية عين الوجود و الهوهوية هي الاتحاد في الوجود فظهر من هذا أن تخصيص تحصيل الحمل بالاتحاد في الوجود ليس بحسب اللفظ أو التعارف بل على كون سائر أنواع الوحدة غير صالحة لتصحيح الحمل بحسب الذات و الوجود بل بحسب جهة الوحدة ثم قال في فك العقدة إن معيار الحمل في الذاتيات أن ينسب وجود ذي ذاتي إليها بالذات لا من حيث إنها أبعاض الأمر الواحد الموجود و في العرضيات أن ينسب إليها وجود المعروض بالعرض - لا من حيث إنها أبعاضه و الأجزاء المقدارية و إن كانت موجوديتها عين وجود المتصل الواحد لكن ذلك ليس من حيث إنها أمور موجودة براء و سها اتفق إن كان وجودها عين وجود ذلك الواحد كما في الطبائع المحمولة بل من حيث إنها أبعاض الموجود الواحد - فلا تغاير هناك بحسب الوجود و لا حمل انتهى كلامه زيد إعظامه و إفخامه.

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٩٧

و فيه أن كون الشيء جزءا لشيء آخر يصدق فيه أنه مانع من تحقق الحمل بينهما ولكن ذلك ليس بسبب غلبة العينية بينهما المتجاوزة عن حريم القدر المعتبر منها في صحة الحمل بل من جهة زيادة غيرية المخلة بالوحدانية المأخوذة فيه فإن المعتبر في الحمل والهوية وحدة الوجود في الطرفين واثنية المفهوم فيهما ولو بحسب الاعتبار وهاهنا الأمر بالعكس من ذلك فإن الجزئية والكلية توجبان المباينة في الوجود لتقدم وجود الجزء على وجود الكل.

فالجواب المحصل أن المتصل الوحداني ما لم ينقسم بوجه من الوجوه سواء كان في الخارج قطعاً وكسراً أو في الذهن وهما وعقلاً أو بحسب اختلاف العرضين - لم يتحقق المغايرة فيه أصلاً فلا يمكن فيه حمل شيء آخر ولو بالاعتبار وإذا تحقق شيء من أنحاء القسمة التي معناها ومفادها إحداث الهويتين المتصلتين وإعدام الهوية التي كانت من قبل كما يرد عليك بيانه في موضعه عرضت الاثنية في الوجود فأين هناك هوية واحدة تنسب إلى شيئين التي هي معيار الحمل

فصل (٣) في أن اتحاد الاثنين ممتنع

بمعنى صيرورة الذاتين ذاتاً واحدة لأنهما بعد الاتحاد إن كانا موجودين كانا اثنين لا واحداً وإن كان أحدهما فقط موجوداً كان هذا زوالاً لأحدهما وبقاء للآخر - وإن لم يكن شيء منهما موجوداً لكان هذا زوالاً لهما وحدوثاً لأمر ثالث وعلى التقادير فلا اتحاد كما هو المفروض وسبب الاشتباه لمن جوز الاتحاد بين الشيئين - ما يرى من صيرورة الأجسام المتعددة المتشابهة أو المتخالفة بالاتصال أو الامتزاج جسماً واحداً كما إذا جمع المياه في إناء واحد أو مزج الخل والسكر فصار سكرنجين - وما يرى بحسب الكون والفساد من صيرورة الماء والهواء بالغليان هواء واحداً

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الأربعة، ج ٢، ص ٩٨

وبحسب الاستحالة من صيرورة الجسم المتكيف بكيفيتين ذا كيفية واحدة ولم يعلم أنه لم يلزم في شيء من هذه الصور اتحاد بين الشيئين بحسب الحقيقة بل بحسب العبارة والإطلاق العرفي من باب التجوز تنزيلاً لمادة الشيء منزلة ذلك الشيء في بعض الأحكام وما نسب إلى بعض الأقدمين من اتحاد النفس حين استكمالها بالعقل الفعال وكذا ما نقل عن الصوفية من اتصال العارف بالحق فيعني به حالة روحانية تليق بالمفارقات لا أن هناك اتصال جرمي أو امتزاج ولا بطلان إحدى الهويتين بل على الوجه الذي ستعرف في هذا الكتاب في موضع يليق بيانه

فصل (٤) في بعض أحكام الوحدة والكثرة

إن الوحدة ليست بعدد وإن تألف منها لأن العدد كم يقبل الانقسام - والوحدة لا يقبله ومن جعل الوحدة من العدد أراد بالعدد ما يدخل تحت العد فلا نزاع معه لأنه راجع إلى اللفظ بل هي مبدأ للعدد لأن العدد لا يمكن تقويمه إلا بالوحدة لا بما دون ذلك العدد من الأعداد فإن العشرة لو تقومت بغير الوحدات لزم الترجيح من غير مرجح فإن تقويمها بخمسة وخمسة ليس أولى من تقويمها بستة وأربعة ولا من تقويمها بسبعة وثلاثة والتقوم بالجميع غير ممكن وإلا لزم تكرار أجزاء الماهية - المستلزم لاستغناء الشيء عما هو ذاتي له لأن كلا منها كاف في تقويمها فيستغنى به عما عداه وإن أخذ تقويمها باعتبار القدر المشترك بين جميعها لا باعتبار الخصوصيات كان اعترافاً بما هو المقصود إذ القدر المشترك بينهما هو الوحدات.

ومن الشواهد أنه يمكن تصور كل عدد بكنهه مع الغفلة عما دونه من الأعداد

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ٩٩

فلا يكون شيء منها داخلا في حقيقته فالمقوم لكل مرتبة من العدد ليس إلا الوحدة المتكررة فإذا انضم إلى الوحدة مثلها حصلت الاثينية وهي نوع من العدد وإذا انضم إليها مثلاها حصلت الثلاثة وهكذا يحصل أنواع لا تنهاى بتزايد واحد واحد لا إلى نهاية إذ التزايد لا ينتهي إلى حد لا يزداد عليه فلا ينتهي الأنواع إلى نوع لا يكون فوقه نوع آخر وأما كون مراتب العدد متخالفة الحقائق كما هو عند الجمهور - فلاختلافها باللوازم والأوصاف من الصمم والمنطقية والتشارك والتباين والعادية والمعدودية والتحذير والمالية والتكعب وأشباحها واختلاف اللوازم يدل على اختلاف الملزومات وهذا مما يؤيد ما ذهبنا إليه في باب الوجود من أن الاختلاف بين حقائقها إنما نشأ من نفس وقوع كل حقيقة في مرتبة من المراتب - فكما أن مجرد كون العدد واقعا في مرتبة بعد الاثينية هو نفس حقيقة الثلاثة - إذ يلزمها خواص لا توجد في غيره من المراتب قبلها أو بعدها فكذلك مجرد كون الوجود واقعا في مرتبة من مراتب الأكوان يلزمه معان لا توجد في غير الوجود الواقع في تلك المرتبة فالوحدة لا بشرط في مثالنا بإزاء الوجود المطلق والوحدة المحضة المتقدمة على جميع المراتب العددية بإزاء الوجود الواجبي الذي هو مبدأ كل وجود بلا واسطة ومع واسطة أيضا والمحمولات الخاصة المنتزعة من نفس كل مرتبة من العدد بإزاء الماهيات المتحدة مع كل مرتبة من الوجود و كما أن الاختلاف بين الأعداد بنفس ما به الاتفاق فكذلك التفاوت بين الوجودات بنفس هوياتها المتوافقة في سنخ الموجودية وعلى ما قررناه يمكن القول بالتخالف النوعي بين الأعداد نظرا إلى التخالف الواقع بين المعاني المنتزعة عن نفس ذواتها بذواتها - وهي التي بإزاء الماهيات المتخالفة المنتزعة عن نفس الوجودات ويمكن القول بعدم تخالفها النوعي نظرا إلى أن التفاوت بين ذواتها ليس إلا بمجرد القلة والكثرة في

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ١٠٠

الوحدات ومجرد التفاوت بحسب قلة الأجزاء وكثرتها في شيء لا يوجب الاختلاف النوعي في أفراد ذلك الشيء وأما كون اختلاف اللوازم دليلا على اختلاف الملزومات - فالحق دلالة على القدر المشترك بين التخالف النوعي والتخالف بحسب القوة والضعف والكمال والنقص كما مر تحقيقه

فصل (٥) في التقابل

قد أشرنا إلى أن لكل واحد من الوحدة والكثرة أعراضا ذاتية ولواحق مخصوصة كما أن لكل منهما عوارض مشتركة بينها وبين مقابلها كالوحدة والاشتراك والحلول والإضافة إلى المحل بنحو كالقيام وإلى مقابلها بنحو آخر كالتقابل فكما أن من العوارض الذاتية للوحدة الههوية بالمعنى الأعم وهو مطلق الاتحاد والاشتراك - في معنى من المعاني فمقابلها يعرض لمقابلها كالغيرية ومنها التقابل المنقسم إلى أقسامه الأربعة أعني تقابل السلب والإيجاب والملكة والعدم والضدين والمتضايفين أما تحصيل معنى التقابل فهو أن مقابل الههوية على الإطلاق الغيرية فالغيرية منه غير في الجنس ومنه غير في النوع وهو بعينه الغير في الفصل ومنه غير بالعرض وهكذا على قياس الاتحاد في هذه المعاني لكن الغير بصفة غير الذات اختص باسم المخالف وكذا

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ١٠١

الغير في التشخص و العدد اختص باسم الآخر بحسب اصطلاح ما كما أن الهو هو يراد منه الاتحاد في الوجود و المماثلة أيضا من أقسام الغيرية بوجه و كذا المجانسة و المشاكلة و نظائرها لأنها بالحقيقة من عوارض الكثرة إذ لو لا الكثرة ما صحت شيء منها فعدهما من عوارض الكثرة أولى فإن جهة الاتحاد في الجميع ترجع إلى التماثل لأن المثلين هما المتشاركان في حقيقة واحدة من حيث هما كذلك فالإنسان و الفرس من حيث هما إنسان و فرس ليسا بمثلين لكنهما متجانسان باعتبار اشتراكهما في الحيوانية و الحيوانيتان الموجودتان فيهما مشتركان في حقيقة واحدة نوعية - فالتجانس يرجع إلى التماثل في جزء الحقيقة و هو الذي يكون جنسا حين أخذه لا بشرط شيء و قد علمت أن الطبيعة الجنسية إذا أخذت أعدادها مجردة عما اختلف بها من الفصول تكون نوعية فيكون أفرادها متماثلة و كذا الحال في الأصناف الأخر من الواحد الغير الحقيقي فالمشابهة ترجع إلى المماثلة في الكيف و المساواة ترجع إلى المماثلة في الكم و هكذا و جهة الوحدة في المماثلة ترجع إلى الوحدة الذهنية للمعنى الكلي المنتزع من الشخصيات عند تجريدتها عن الغواشي المادية - فيكون جهة الوحدة فيها ضعيفة بخلاف جهة الكثرة فإنها خارجية و التقابل أخص من الغيرية إذ التغير بين الأشياء المادية إذا كان بالجنس الأعلى لا يمنع مجرد تغايرها بالجنس الأعلى عن جواز اجتماعها في مادة واحدة و أما التغير الذي بحسب الأنواع المتفقة في جنس دون الأعلى فيستحيل معه الاجتماع في موضوع واحد

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ١٠٢

فالتقابل هو امتناع اجتماع شيئين متخالفين في موضوع واحد في زمان واحد من جهة واحدة فخرج بقيد التخالف التماثل و بقيد امتناع الاجتماع في محل التغير - الذي بين البياض و الحرارة مما يمكن اجتماعهما في محل واحد و دخل بقيد وحدة المحل مثل التقابل الذي بين السواد و البياض مما يمكن اجتماعهما في الوجود كسواد الحبشي - و بياض الرومي و بقيد وحدة الجهة مثل التقابل الذي بين الأبوة و البنوة مما يمكن اجتماعهما في محل واحد باعتبار جهتين قيل و بقيد وحدة الزمان تقابل المتضادين المتعاقبين على موضوع واحد المجتمعين فيه في الواقع و الدهر إذ الاجتماع في أفق الواقع و ظرف الدهر لا ينافي التعاقب الزماني كما أن عدم الاجتماع المكاني لا ينافي الاجتماع بحسب ظرف آخر كالزمان و نحو آخر فما قيل من أن التقييد بوحدة

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ١٠٣

الزمان مستدرك لأن الاجتماع لا يكون إلا في زمان واحد غير صحيح و كان القائل به لم يرتق فهمه كوهمه من سجن الزمان و هاوية الحدثن و إنما عدلنا عن التعريف المشهور في الكتب لمفهوم المتقابلين إلى تعريف مفهوم التقابل لأن صيغة اللذان في قولهم المتقابلان هما اللذان لا يجتمعان في شيء واحد في حالة واحدة من جهة واحدة يشعر بما لهما ذات و العدم و الملكة و الإيجاب و السلب لا ذات لهما و إن أمكن الاعتذار بأن معنى مثل هذه الألفاظ مأخوذ بحسب التصور الذهني و السلوب و الأعدام كلها بحسب المفهوم الذهني أمر فيكون معنى هذا التعريف أن المتقابلين هما المتصوران اللذان لا يصدقان على شيء واحد في حالة واحدة من جهة واحدة.

و أما وجه كون التقابل أربعة أقسام أن المتقابلين إما أن يكون أحدهما عدما للآخر أو لا و الأول إن اعتبر فيه نسبتها إلى قابل لما أضيف إليه العدم فعدم و ملكة و إن لم يعتبر فيه تلك النسبة فسلب و إيجاب و الثاني إن لم يعقل كل منهما إلا

بالقياس إلى الآخر فهما المتضايغان وإلا فهما متضادان.

وقد يقال في وجه الحصر لأنهما إما وجوديان أو لا وعلى الأول إما أن يكون تعقل كل منهما بالقياس إلى الآخر فهما متضايغان أو لا فهما متضادان وعلى الثاني يكون أحدهما وجوديا والآخر عديميا فإما أن يعتبر في العدمي محل قابل للوجودي - فهما العدم والملكة أو لا فهما السلب والإيجاب.

و يرد عليه الاعتراض أما أولا فبجواز كونهما عديمين كالعمى واللاعمرى - المتقابلين بالسلب والإيجاب وما يجاب به من أن اللاعمرى بعينه هو البصر فالتقابل بينهما بالعدم والملكة فهو فاسد لأن تعقل البصر لا يتوقف على انتفاعه و تعقل سلب انتفاء البصر متوقف عليه قطعاً فلا يتحدان مفهومهما وإن كانا متلازمين صدقا و الغلط

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ١٠٤

ناش من عدم الفرق بين ما بالذات و ما بالعرض.

و أما ثانياً فبأن عدم اللازم يقابل وجود الملزوم كوجود الحركة لجسم مع انتفاء سخونته اللازمة لها عنه و ليس داخلا في العدم والملكة و لا في السلب و الإيجاب إذ المعتبر فيهما أن يكون العدمي منهما عدما للوجودي.

و يمكن الجواب بالفرق بين ما بالذات و ما بالعرض فإن التقابل أولا و بالذات في المثال المذكور إنما هو بين السخونة و انتفائها لكن لما كان انتفاؤها مستلزما لانتفاء الحركة صار مقابلا لها بالعرض.

و اعلم أن مقولية التقابل على أقسامه بالتشكيك و أشدها في باب السلب و الإيجاب لأن منافي الشيء إما رفعه أو ما يستلزم رفعه لأن ما عداهما ممكن الاجتماع مع ذلك الشيء و لا شك أن منافاة رفع الشيء معه إنما هي لذاتيها و لذلك يحكم العقل بالمنافاة بينهما بلا توقف بمجرد ملاحظتهما مع قطع النظر عما عداهما تفصيلا و إجمالا و أما منافاة مستلزم رفع الشيء له فإنما هي لاشتماله على الرفع - فيكون منافاته لا لذاته بل على سبيل التبعية فالمنافاة الذاتية إنما هي بين الإيجاب و السلب و أما فيما سواهما فتكون تابعة لمنافاتهما فيكون التقابل بينهما أشد و أقوى هكذا قيل.

و فيه بحث إذ التنافي بالذات على الوجه الذي ذكر في معنى المنافي يلزم

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ١٠٥

أن لا يتحقق بين الشئيين أصلا فإن أحد الطرفين في السلب و الإيجاب و إن كان منافيا بالمعنى المذكور للطرف الآخر كالسلب للإيجاب لكن الطرف الآخر الذي هو الإيجاب لا يكون منافيا لمقابله بالذات بل المنافي بالذات له سلب السلب المستلزم للإيجاب و الأولى أن يراد من الرفع أو السلب المعنى المصدري على الوجه المطلق الذي يمكن أخذه بمعنى الفاعل أو المفعول

فصل (٦) في بيان أصناف التقابل و أحكام كل منها

فمن جملة التقابل ما يكون بحسب السلب و الإيجاب -

و هو قد يطلق على ما يعتبر في مفهومه القضية و هو التناقض في اصطلاح المنطقيين و يلزمه امتناع اجتماع المتقابلين صدقا و كذبا في نفس الأمر كزيد أبيض و ليس زيد بأبيض و قد يطلق على ما بين المفردات كما بين مفهوم و رفعه في نفسه كالبياض و اللابيض

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ١٠٦

أو بحسب الانتساب إلى شيء آخر بالحمل كزيد أبيض و زيد لا أبيض فإن كل مفهوم إذا اعتبر في نفسه و ضم إليه مفاد كلمة النفي حصل مفهوم آخر في غاية البعد عنه و لا يعتبر في شيء منهما صدق أو لا صدق على شيء و إذا حمل على شيء موافاة أو اشتقاقا كان إثباته له تحصيلًا و إثبات سلبه له إيجاب سلب المحمول - وإنما يتنافيان صدقًا لا كذبًا لجواز ارتفاعهما عند عدم الموضوع و لذا قال الشيخ في الشفاء أن المتقابلين بالإيجاب و السلب إن لم يحتمل الصدق فبسيط كالفرسية و اللافرسية و إلا فمركب كقولنا زيد فرس و زيد ليس بفرس فإن إطلاق هذين المعنيين على موضوع واحد في زمان واحد محال و قال أيضا معنى الإيجاب وجود أي معنى كان سواء كان باعتبار وجوده في نفسه أو وجوده لغيره و معنى السلب سلب أي معنى كان سواء كان لا وجودا في نفسه أو لا وجودا لغيره انتهى فقد علم مما ذكر أن التقابل أعم من التناقض المعرف باختلاف قضيتين إيجابا و سلبا كذا و كذا لتحققه في المفردات دون التناقض فقد سها من قال إن التناقض هو نفس التقابل الإيجابي و السلبي و كذا ما وقع في عبارة التجريد أن تقابل السلب

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ١٠٧

و الإيجاب راجع إلى القول و العقد ليس بصواب كيف و تقابل القضيتين ليس من حيث إنهما قضيتان و لا باعتبار موضوعهما بل باعتبار الإيجاب و السلب المضاف إلى شيء واحد فالتقابل بالحقيقة إنما يكون بين نفس النفي و الإثبات و في القضايا بالعرض - اللهم إلا أن يتكلف كما في بعض شروحه و يراد من الإيجاب و السلب إدراك الوقوع و اللاتوقوع و هما أمران عقليان و اردان على النسبة التي هي أيضا عقلية فإذا حصل في العقل كان كل منهما عقدا أي اعتقادا و إذا عبر عنهما بعبارة كان كل من العبارتين قولًا ثم بما حققناه من أن التقابل بالذات في القضايا إنما هو بين نفس النفي و الإثبات و بين القضايا بالعرض اندفع ما قيل إن بعضهم اعتبروا في مفهوم التقابل عدم الاجتماع في الموضوع بدل المحل و صرحوا بأن لا تضاد بين الصور الجوهرية إذ لا موضوع لها لأنه المحل المستغني عن الحال و محل الصور هي المادة المحتاجة إليها في تقوم و اعتبر الآخرون المحل مطلقا فثبتوا التضاد بين الصور النوعية العنصرية فعلم من اختلاف الفريقين في كون مورد الإيجاب و السلب موضوعا أو محلا أن المراد من عدم الاجتماع المأخوذ في التقابل عدم الاجتماع بحسب الحلول لا بحسب الصدق و معلوم أن من التقابل ما يجري في القضايا كالتناقض و التضاد فإن قولنا كل حيوان إنسان نقيض لقولنا بعض الحيوان ليس بإنسان

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ١٠٨

و ضد لقولنا لا شيء من الحيوان إنسان على ما قال الشيخ في الشفاء ليس الكلبي السالب يقابل الكلبي الموجب مقابلة بالتناقض بل هو مقابل من حيث هو سالب لمحموله مقابلة أخرى فلنسم هذه المقابلة تضادا إذا كان المتقابلان مما لا يجتمعان صدقًا أصلا و لكن قد يجتمعان كذبا كالأضداد في الأمور انتهى مع أن القضايا لا يتصور اعتبار ورودها على شيء بحسب الحلول فيه و كلام هذا القائل لا يخلو عن خلط إذ الاختلاف الذي نقله إنما وقع منهم في باب التضاد حيث اعتبر فيه تعاقب المتضادين إما على موضوع واحد أو محل واحد لا في مفهوم مطلق التقابل المعروف - بكون

الأمرين بحيث لا يجتمعان في شيء واحد سواء كان عدم الاجتماع بحسب الوجود والتحقق أو بحسب الحمل والصدق كيف ولو كان اختلاف المذكور بينهما في مطلق التقابل لزم منه نفي التقابل بين الفرس واللافرس بمثل البيان الذي ذكره لعدم كون الفرس ذا محل وذلك فاسد.

و من أحكام الإيجاب والسلب -

أن تقابلهما إنما يتحقق في الذهن أو اللفظ - مجازاً دون الخارج لأن التقابل نسبة والنسبة في التحقق فرع منتسبها - وأحد المنتسبين في هذا القسم من التقابل سلب والسلوب اعتبارات عقلية لها عبارات لفظية فالنسبة بينهما عقلية صرفة وأما عدم الملكة فله حظ ما من التحقق باعتبار أنه عدم أمر موجود له قابلية التلبس بمقابل هذا العدم - وهذا القدر من التحقق الاعتباري كاف في تحقق النسبة بحسب الخارج فإن لكل شيء مرتبة من الوجود ومرتبة النسبة هي كونها منتزعة من أمور متحققة في الخارج أي نحو كان من التحقق كالإنسانية والحيوانية من الذاتيات والمشى والكتابة من العرضيات.

و من أحكامهما عدم خلو الموضوع عنهما في الواقع

لا في كل مرتبة

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ١٠٩

من مراتب الواقع فإن الأشياء التي ليست بينها علاقة ذاتية يخلو كل منها في مرتبة وجود الآخر عن كونه موجوداً أو معدوماً وكذا العرضيات في مرتبة الماهيات من حيث هي كما علمت.

و من أحكام هذا التقابل أيضاً أن تحققه في القضايا مشروط بثمان وحدات مشهورة

مع زيادة وحدة هي وحدة الحمل في القضايا الطبيعية لأن بعض المفهومات - قد يكذب على نفسه بالحمل المتعارف فيصدق نقيضه عليه مع أنه قد يصدق على نفسه - كسائر المفهومات بالحمل الأولي الذاتي وفي المحصورات مشروط بالاختلاف في الكمية لكذب الكليتين مع تحقق الوحدات كقولنا كل حيوان إنسان ولا شيء من الحيوان إنسان فعلم أنهما ليستا متناقضتين وإن كانتا متضادتين كما مر والتضاد لا يمنع كذب الضدين معا وصدق جزئيتين كذلك كقولنا بعض الحيوان إنسان - وليس بعض الحيوان إنسان وفي الموجهات مشروط بالاختلاف على الوجه المقرر - وإلا لم يتحقق التناقض لصدق الممكنتين وكذب الضروريتين في مادة الإمكان مع تحقق باقي الشرائط ومن خاصية هذا التقابل استحالة الواسطة بين المتقابلين به وامتناع اجتماعهما صدقا وكذبا فلا يخلو شيء عن فرسية ولا فرسية وقد يخلو عن طرفي سائر أقسام التقابل ولا يصدق على المعدوم شيء من طرفي المتقابلين إلا السلب والإيجاب

و من جملة التقابل تقابل التضاييف

و المتضاييفان هما وجوديان يعقل كل منهما بالنسبة إلى الآخر كالأبوة والبنوة فإنهما لا يصدقان على شيء واحد

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ١١٠

من جهة واحدة وإحدهما لا تعقل إلا مع الأخرى

وهم وتنبيه:

ربما اشتبه عليك الأمر فتقول كيف يجعل التضايف قسما من التقابل و قسيما للتضاد و الحال أن التضايف أعم من أن يكون تقابلا أو تضادا أو تماثلا أو غير ذلك بل يكون جنسا لهما فيلزم كون الشيء قسما لقسمه و قسيما له أيضا.

و ربما يجاب عنه بأن مفهوم التضايف أعم من مفهومي التقابل و التضاد العارضين لأقسامهما و هذا لا ينافي كون معروض التقابل أعم منه و معروض التضاد مباينا له فمفهوم كل منهما مندرج تحت المضاف لكن من حيث الصدق على الأفراد - أحدهما أعم منه و الآخر مبائن له فلا منافاة.

و بوجه آخر مفهوم التضايف من حيث هو أعم من مفهوم التقابل و من حيث إنه معروض لحصة من التقابل أخص منه على قياس كون مفهوم الكلي من حيث هو هو - أعم من مفهوم الجنس و من حيث إنه معروض لمفهوم الجنس أخص منه.

و الحق في الجواب أن يفرق بين مفهوم الشيء و ما يصدق هو عليه فمفهوم التضايف

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ١١١

من أقسام مفهوم التقابل لكن مفهوم التقابل مما يصدق عليه التضايف و قد يكون مفهوم الشيء مما يصدق عليه أحد أنواعه كمفهوم الكلي الذي هو شيء من آحاد مفهوم الجنس و في الأمور الذهنية و العوارض العقلية كثيرا ما يكون مفهوم الشيء فردا له و فردا لفرد كذا كما يكون فردا لمقابله كمفهوم الجزئي الذي هو فرد من الكلي و مقابل له أيضا باعتبارين و من التقابل ما يكون بين المتضادين

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ١١٢

و المتضادان على اصطلاح المشاءين هما الوجوديان غير المتضايفين المتعاقبان

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ١١٣

على موضوع واحد لا يتصور اجتماعهما فيه و بينهما غاية الخلاف و قد مرت الإشارة إلى أن الطبائع الجنسية لا يتقابل فالتضاد إنما يعرض للأنواع الأخيرة كما يدل عليه الاستقراء و قد ظن بعضهم وقوع التضاد في الأجناس لزعمهم أن الخير و الشر متضادان - و كل واحد منهما جنس لأنواع كثيرة و هذا الظن باطل من وجهين - الأول أن التقابل بينهما ليس بالتضاد لكون أحدهما عدما للآخر إذ الخير وجود أو كمال وجود و الشر عدم الوجود أو عدم كمال الوجود.

و الثاني أنهما ليسا بجنسين لأن الخير و الشر إما أن يراد بهما ما هو بحسب الواقع و قد علمت أنهما يرجعان إلى الوجود و العدم و إما أن يراد بهما ما بالقياس إلى طبيعة الإنسان فكل ما يوافقه و يلائمه نسميه خيرا و كل ما يخالفه و ينافره نسميه شرا و الموافقة و المخالفة و سائر ما أشبههما نسب و اعتبارات خارجة عن أحوال الماهيات فلا يكون شيء منها جنسا لما اعتبر وصفا لها و أما إذا اعتبر نفس الملائمة و المنافرة مجردتين عن معروضيهما كانت كل واحدة منهما ماهية نوعية فالتضاد بينهما ليس تضادا بين الجنسين و من شرط التضاد أن يكون الأنواع الأخيرة - التي توصف به داخلية تحت جنس واحد قريب و كون الشجاعة تحت الفضيلة و التهور المضاد لها تحت الرذيلة لا يرد نقضا على هذه القاعدة لأن كل

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ١١٤

واحد منهما في نفسه كيفية نفسانية و كونه فضيلة أو رذيلة إنما هو صفة عارضة له لا أنها مقومة له فالفضيلة و الرذيلة ليستا من الأجناس للفضائل و الرذائل النفسانية ثم إن الشجاعة ليست ضدًا لشيء من التهور و الجبن لكونها واسطة بينهما - و أما الطرفان فلكونهما في غاية التباعد كانا متضادتين بل تضاد الشجاعة مع كل منهما تضاد بالعرض إذ الشجاعة ماهية لها عارض و هو كونها فضيلة و كل من التهور و الجبن ماهية لها عارض هو كونها رذيلة و التضاد بالحقيقة بين العارضين - و في المعروضين بالعرض و أما التضاد بين التهور و الجبن فنوع آخر من التضاد غير ما يكون باعتبار الفضيلة و الرذيلة و من أحكام التضاد على ما ذكرناه من اعتبار غاية التباعد أن ضد الواحد واحد لأن الضد على هذا الاعتبار هو الذي يلزم من وجوده عدم الضد الآخر فإذا كان الشيء وحدانياً وله أضداد فإما أن يكون مخالفتها - مع ذلك الشيء من جهة واحدة أو من جهات كثيرة فإن كانت مخالفتها معه من جهة واحدة فالمضاد لذلك الشيء بالحقيقة شيء واحد و ضد واحد و قد فرض أضداداً - و إن كانت المخالفة بينها و بينه من جهات عديدة فليس الشيء ذا حقيقة بسيطة بل هو كالإنسان الذي يضاد الحار من حيث هو بارد و يضاد البارد من حيث هو حار و يضاد كثيراً من الأشياء لاشتماله على أضدادها فالتضاد الحقيقي إنما هو بين الحرارة و البرودة و السواد و البياض و لكل واحد من الطرفين ضد واحد و أما الحار و البارد فالتضاد بينهما بالعرض فالشيئان إذا كان بينهما تضاد حقيقي يكون بين محليهما بما هما محلاهما تضاد بالعرض فمن الضدين ما بينهما وسائط و منهما ما لا وسائط بينهما - سواء كان الوسط حقيقياً كما بين الحار و البارد من الفاتر أو غير حقيقي مرجعه الخلو عن جنس الطرفين كاللاخفيف و اللاتقيل فإن الفاتر لا يخرج من جنس الحرارة و البرودة بخلاف اللاخفيف و اللاتقيل لخروجه عن جنس الخفة و الثقل كالفلك

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ١١٥

و قد يكون أحد الضدين على التعيين لازماً لموضوع كالبياض للثلج و السواد للقار و قد لا يكون و حينئذ إما أن يمتنع خلو المحل عنهما كالصحة و المرض للإنسان - أو يمكن كالثقل و الخفة للفلك و على هذا الاصطلاح لا تضاد حقيقياً بين الجواهر إلا باعتبار ما يعرض لها من المتضادات و أما على اصطلاح المتقدمين - ففي الماديات من الصور المتخالفة المتعاقبة على محل واحد متضاد حقيقي و كذا يجوز عندهم أن يكون لشيء واحد أضداد كثيرة حيث لا يشترطون في التضاد غاية الخلاف فالسواد عندهم كما يضاد البياض يضاد الحمرة أيضاً لأن اصطلاحهم يحتمل ذلك.

شك و تحقيق:

و هاهنا إشكال قوي و هو أن المقولات العالية قد علمت أن لا تضاد بينهما لاجتماع بعضهما مع بعض في جوهر واحد جسماني - و كذا الاشتراك في الجنس البعيد لا يكفي في امتناع الاجتماع فإن الطعم يجتمع مع السواد مع كونهما من مقولة واحدة فلا بد من كون المتضادين تحت جنس قريب و من كونهما مختلفين بالفصل فحينئذ إن كان بينهما تضاد فلا يكون تضادهما من حيث الجنس بل من حيث الفصل فالمتضادان بالذات هما الفصلان على أن الفصلين لا يشتركان في الجنس القريب لكونه خارجاً عن حقيقتيهما كما سبق و قد شرط كون المتضادين تحت جنس قريب هذا خلف و أيضاً تعاقب الفصول في أنفسها على موضوع واحد كما هو شرط التضاد غير متصور إذ لا استقلال لها في الوجود حتى

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ١١٦

ينسب إلى الموضوع الواحد ولا يمكن تعاقبها على جنس واحد كما علمت - ويمكن التفصي عنه بأن الجنس والفصل متحدان في الوجود والجعل وهما موجودان بوجود واحد بلا تغاير بينهما في الخارج وهما عين النوع في الخارج فصفاً الفصول في الأعيان بعينها صفات الأنواع المتقومة بها في نحو ملاحظة العقل ولما كان التضاد من الأحكام الخارجية للتضادات فلا محالة يكون الموصوف بها الأنواع بذواتها دون الفصول بما هي فصول والحاصل أن التضاد بين المتضادين - وإن كان باعتبار فصل كل منهما ولكن التعاقب في الحلول في موضوع باعتبار نوعيتهما لأن الحلول في شيء نحو من الوجود والوجود لا يتعلق إلا بما يستقل في التحصل الخارجي والفصول لا استقلال لها في الخارج واتصاف كل من النوع والفصل - المقوم بالصفات الخارجية للآخر إنما هو بالذات لا بالعرض لاتحادهما في الوجود الخارجي دون الصفات الذهنية التي تعرض لكل منهما باعتبار مغايرتهما في الذهن -

و مما عد في المتقابلين الملكة والعدم

وهما أمران يكون أحدهما وجوديا والآخر عدميا أي عدما لذلك الوجودي سواء كان بحسب شخصه في الوقت أو

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ١١٧

في غير الوقت أو بحسب النوع أو بحسب الجنس قريبا كان أو بعيدا فالعمى والظلمة وانتثار الشعر بداء الثعلب الذي هو بعد الملكة والمرودية التي هي قبلها - وعدم البصر الممكن في حق الشخص الأعمى وانتفاء اللحية للمرأة الممكن لنوعها - كل هذه عدميات في التحقيق مشروط فيها بالإمكان والقوة ولذا لم يصدق على المعدوم - وأما في المشهور فالملكة هي القدرة للشيء على ما من شأنه أن يكون له متى شاء - كالقدرة على الإبصار والعدم انتفاء هذه القدرة مع بطلان التهيؤ في الوقت الذي من شأنه أن يكون كالأعمى لا كالجرو قبل فتح البصر واصطلاح المنطقيين في العدم والملكة هو المعنى الأول وكذا اصطلاحهم في المتضادين مجرد كونهما

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ١١٨

غير مجتمعين في موضوع واحد وأما الإلهيون فقد اعتبروا في كل منهما قيدا آخر أما في المتضادين فكونهما في غاية التباعد وفي الملكة والعدم أن يكون العدمي سلبا للوجودي عما من شأنه أن يكون في ذلك الوقت فكل من قسمي التقابل بالمعنى الأول أعم منه بالمعنى الثاني عموم المطلق من المقيد إلا أن المطلق من التضاد يسمى بالمشهوري لكونه المشهور فيما بين عوام الفلاسفة والمقيد بالحقيقي لكونه المعتمد في علومهم الحقيقية والملكة والعدم بالعكس من ذلك حيث يسمون المطلق بالحقيقي والمقيد بالمشهوري والقدح الذي يلزم في انحصار التقابل في الأقسام الأربعة من تقابل الالتقاء والمرودة وتقابل البصر وعدمه عن العقرب أو الشجر لكونه خارجا عن التضاد وعن الملكة والعدم على التفسير الأنحصر تفصوا عنه بأن الحصر إنما هو باعتبار المعنى الأعم أعني المشهوري من التضاد والحقيقي من الملكة والعدم ليدخل أمثال ذلك فيه

بحث ومخلص:

و هاهنا إشكال من وجهين -

الأول أن الضدين في اصطلاح المنطق كما صرح به الشيخ الرئيس و غيره لا يلزم أن يكون كلاهما

وجوديين

بل قد يكون أحدهما عدما للآخر

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ١١٩

كالسكون للحركة و الظلمة للنور و العجمة للنطق و الأنوثة للذكورة و الفردية للزوجية و في كلام بعضهم أن التضاد بالمعنى المشهوري اسم يقع على التضاد الحقيقي و على بعض أقسام الملكة و العدم أعني ما يوجد فيه التعاقب على موضوع واحد بناء على اشتراطهم ذلك في التضاد المشهوري و الحق أنه أعم من ذلك - لعدم إمكان الانتقال في بعض هذه الأمور كالذكورة و الأنوثة و الزوجية و الفردية - على أن تقابل الزوجية و الفردية راجع عند التحقيق إلى الإيجاب و السلب - فعلى أي تقدير لا يكون قسيما لتقابل الملكة و العدم و تقابل الإيجاب و السلب -

الثاني أن غاية الخلاف شرط في التضاد المشهوري أيضا

كما هو مصرح به في كلام الحكماء كالشيخ و غيره فيلزم خروج تقابل السواد و الحمرة و كذا تقابل الحمرة و الصفرة مثلا عن الأقسام.

و قد التزمه بعضهم و سموا مثل ذلك بالتعاند فيزيد عندهم قسم خامس في أقسام التقابل. و قد تخلص بعض آخر عنه ببيان أن تقابل الأوساط تقابل حقيقي أيضا كتقابل الأطراف فإن كل مرتبة من السواد مثلا مشتمل على طبيعة السواد المطلق الذي لا يقبل الأشد و الأضعف عند المشاءين و على خصوصية كونه على هذا الحد من السواد - و هو بالنسبة إلى مرتبة أخرى تحتها سواد و بالنسبة إلى مرتبة أخرى فوقها بياض - و لذا قال الشيخ في قاطيغورياس الشفاء السواد الحق لا يقبل الشدة و الضعف بل الشيء الذي هو سواد بالقياس إلى آخر فإذا ثبت ذلك فكل وسط من أوساط السواد - باعتبار نفسه في حكم الطرف إذ لا تفاوت بينهما عندهم باعتبار الطبيعة المشتركة - و كذلك باعتبار مقايسته إلى سواد دونه في المرتبة أو إلى البياض الطرف أو البياض

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ١٢٠

الوسط إذ كونه سوادا ضعيفا إنما يتحصل إذا قيس إلى سواد أشد لكن إذا قيس إليه كان ذلك سوادا بالنسبة إلى هذا و هذا لا يكون سوادا بالنسبة إليه بل بياضا لا فرق بينه و بين بياض الطرف في هذه الملاحظة و كذا حكم أوساط البياض فثبت أن التضاد الحقيقي كما يوجد بين الأطراف يوجد بين الأوساط فإن لها جهتي الاختلاف و التوافق و التقابل إنما هو باعتبار الأول فلا يزيد في التقابل قسم خامس.

هذا خلاصة ما ذكره بعض أجلة المتأخرين و هو لا يستقيم على ما اخترناه - من طريقة أسلاف الحكماء في الأشد و الأضعف.

و يرد عليه أيضا أن لكل شيء ماهية متحصلة في ذاتها لا بالقياس إلى ما عداها - اللهم إلا أن يكون مضافا حقيقيا يقترب مع تعقله و وجوده تعقل شيء آخر و وجوده - و لا شك أن الألوان من مقولة الكيف لا من مقولة المضاف فلكل منها

ماهية متحصلة - لا بالقياس إلى غيره و التضاد من الأمور التي تعرض للمتضادين بحسب ذاتيهما لا بمقايضة أحدهما للآخر و لا لغيرهما و إن كان مفهوم التضاد من جزئيات الإضافة فالمقابلة بين الحمرة و الصفرة مع قطع النظر عن قياسهما إلى الأطراف ثابتة جزما و ليست من أقسامهما شيئا إلا التضاد.

مخلص:

فالحق أن يقال في وجه التفصي عن هذا الإشكال - أما عن قبل المشاءين فبأن التضاد إنما ثبت بالذات بين طبيعتي السواد و البياض مع قطع النظر عن خصوصيات الأفراد فكل مرتبة من مراتب السواد - يضاد لكل مرتبة من مراتب البياض باعتبار اشتغال هذه على طبيعة أحد الضدين - و تلك على طبيعة الضد الآخر لا باعتبار الخصوصيات فالتضاد بين الوسطين كالحمرة

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ١٢١

و الصفرة باعتبار كون أحدهما سوادا و الآخر بياضا تضاد بالذات و أما باعتبار الخصوصيتين من كون أحدهما حمرة و الآخر صفرة فبالعرض فالتضاد بين الأوساط - يرجع إلى ما يرجع إليه التضاد بين الأطراف فلم يزد التقابل على الأربعة. و أما من قبل الأقدمين فبأن التقابل بين مراتب كيفية واحدة تقابل في الكمال و النقص كما في مراتب الكمية من نوع واحد و أما تقابل مرتبة ضعيفة من السواد - مع مرتبة ضعيفة من البياض فعلى قياس ما ذكر في الطريقة الأخرى من أن التضاد بالذات إنما هو بين سنجيهما مع قطع النظر عن الخصوصيات لكن بقي الكلام في أن جميع الألوان من مراتب السواد و البياض أم ليس كذلك و ما ذكرناه كما ذكره يتم على الأول لا على الثاني و بناء الإشكال على مجرد الاصطلاح و هو أمر هين في العقليات و العلوم الحقيقية.

نكتة:

لما تبين اتصاف كل واحد من الموجودات بإضافة و سلب إذ ما من موجود إلا و له إضافة إلى غيره بالعلية أو المعلولية أو غيرهما - و يسلب عنه أشياء و لا أقل ما هو نقيضه فتقابل التضاييف لا يخلو عن جنسه شيء من الأشياء - حتى واجب الوجود فإنه مبدأ للأشياء و إن خلا عن آحاد جزئياته كالأبوة و البنوة و المجاورة - و كذا تقابل الإيجاب و السلب لا يخرج منه مطلقا و لا من كل واحد من جزئياته كالحجرية و اللاحجرية شيء من الأشياء و أما القسمان الأخيران من التقابل أعني العدم و الملكة و التضاد فكما يخلو بعض الموجودات عن خاصتهما [خاصهما] كالبرودة و الحرارة و العمى و البصر فكذلك يخلو عن مطلق تقابلهما أشياء فإن المفارقات لا تقبل الضدين - و لا العدم المقابل للملكة إذ كل ما يمكن لها بالإمكان العام فهو حاصل لها فلا يصح فيها هذان القسمان من التقابل لا عاما و لا خاصا

فصل (٧) في التقابل بين الواحد و الكثير

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ١٢٢

كيفية التقابل بين الواحد و الكثير من العلوم الربانية

التي حارت فيه عقول أهل النظر و أصحاب الفكر و إنما خص بمعرفتها الراسخون في العلم لأن تقابلهما ليس بتقابل العدم و الملكة و لا السلب و الإيجاب لأنهما وجوديان فلا يكون أحدهما سلبا للآخر و لا تقابل المتضادين لعدم غاية

الخلاف المعتبرة في التضاد بينهما إذ ما من عدد إلا ويتصور أكثر منه ولعدم التعاقب على موضوع واحد عددي ووحدة الهيولى المتعاقبة عليها الاتصالات والانفصالات وحدة بهمة ظلية ثم الكثرة تتقوم بالوحدة ولا يمكن تقويم ماهية أحد المتضادين بشيء من نوع الآخر وليس بينهما تقابل التضاييف وإلا لكان ماهية كل منهما معقولة بالقياس إلى الأخرى وليس كذلك أما من جانب الوحدة فبين أن معقوليتها كوجود ذاتها يمكن أن ينفك ويتجرد عن وجود الكثرة ومعقوليتها وأما من جانب الكثرة فإن الكثرة كثرة في ذاتها بسبب الوحدة لا بالقياس إلى الوحدة والفرق بين المعنيين واضح وقياسها إلى الوحدة من جهة كونها معلولة لها لا من جهة كونها هي الكثرة إذ كون الكثرة كثرة غير كونها معلولة وليست الكثرة نفس المعلولة على قاعدة القوم ثم إنا نجد التقابل بينهما من جهة تمانعهما لا من جهة عليتهما وارتباطهما.

وأيضا كون الشيء بحسب جوهره و ماهيته مضافا إلى شيء يوجب كون ذلك الشيء أيضا كذلك فلو كانت الكثرة جوهرية الإضافة لكانت الوحدة أيضا جوهرية الإضافة كما هو شأن المتضاييفين في الانعكاس.

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ١٢٣

وأيضا يلزم كونهما متكافئين في التحقق وجودا وتعقلا من حيث هذه هذه وتلك تلك وليس كذلك.

و من الناس من ظن أن التقابل بينهما ليس تقابلا ذاتيا

لكنهما مما عرض لهما تقابل التضاييف من جهة أن الوحدة مقومة للكثرة والكثرة معلولة متقومة بها - وهذا الكلام لا يخلو من خلط لأننا نفهم تقابلا بين الواحد والكثير اللذين كل منهما ينافي الآخر ويبطله عند حدوثه وجوده والوحدة التي يزيلها ويبطلها - الكثرة الطارئة ليست بعلّة لتلك الكثرة لأنها تتقوم بوحدة أخرى من نوعها والمتقومة بها مقابلة لنوع آخر من الوحدة غير ما يتقوم بها كوحدة الاتصال وكثرته فإننا إذا قسمنا الجسم بنصفين فهناك وحدتان وحدة كانت قبل القسمة عارضة للمتصل الوحداني وهي ليست جزء للاثينية العارضة لمجموع النصفين ووحدة أخرى هي عارضة لأحد النصفين هي المقومة للاثينية ولا شبهة في عروض تقابل التضاييف بين الوحدة الحادثة والاثينية لكن الكلام في تقابل الوحدة [السابقة] والاثينية الطارئة أنه من أي قسم من التقابل.

فإن قلت نفس مفهوم التقابل من باب الإضافة فثبت أن تقابل الوحدة والكثرة هو التقابل التضاييفي.

قلت هذا المفهوم من الطبائع العامة العقلية التي لا يمكن تحققها إلا في ضمن شيء من أقسامها وكلامنا في تحقيق التقابل بين الواحد والكثير أنه بأي

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ١٢٤

نحو من الأنحاء فما لم يتحقق أولا أحد أقسامه المعينة لم يتحقق هذا المفهوم في نفسه حتى يصدق عليه أنه جزئي من جزئيات مفهوم الإضافة على الوجه الذي مر.

و منهم من زعم أن التقابل بين الواحد والكثير ليس بالذات

و احتج عليه بأن موضوع المتقابلين يجب أن يكون واحدا بالشخص وموضوع الوحدة والكثرة ليس كذلك لأن طريان الوحدة إما على نفس الكثرة أو على الأشياء المتعددة التي صارت بالاجتماع شيئا واحدا هو المجموع من حيث

المجموع أو على شيء غيرها يحدث عند زوالها بحدوث الاتصال الوجداني و على أي تقدير ليس موضوع أحدهما هو بعينه موضوع الآخر و قس على ذلك طريان الكثرة على الوحدة نفسها أو موضوعها.

و فيه بحث من وجوه الأول النقض بأن الدليل لو تم لدل على نفي التقابل بين الوحدة و اللاوحدة و الكثرة و اللاكثرة و هو بين الفساد.

و الثاني أن موضوع المتقابلين لا يلزم أن يكون واحدا شخصيا بل قد يكون وحدته نوعية أو جنسية قريبة أو بعيدة كالرجولية و المرئية للإنسان - و الذكورية و الأنثوية للحيوان و الحركة و السكون للجسم أو بحسب أمر أعم من هذه الأمور كلها كالخيرية و الشرية للشيء كيف و لو كان كذلك للزم أن لا يكون للذاتيات و اللوازم تقابل مع سلوب و نقائص لها لعدم بقاء الشخص عند زوالها.

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ١٢٥

الثالث أن ما ذكره على تقدير تمامه إنما يتم في الوحدة الشخصية و الكثرة المقابلة لا في غيرها فإن الواحد بالمحمول أو الموضوع أو بالمناسبة مثلا قد يتكرر فيها مع بقاءه.

الرابع أن بقاء الموضوع بأي وجه كان ليس من شرائط مطلق التقابل بل لبعضها كالتضاد كما صرح به شيخ الرئيس في قاطيغورياس الشفاء حيث قال و أما المتضايغان فليس يجب فيهما التعاقب على موضوع واحد أو اشتراكهما في موضوع واحد حتى يكون الموضوع الذي هو علة لأمر يلزمه لا محالة إمكان أن يصير معلولا - أو يكون هناك موضوع مشترك و إن كانت العلية و المعلولية من المضاف.

و منهم من رأى أن التقابل بينهما بالذات من باب التضاد

و استدل أما على أن التقابل بينهما بالذات فبأننا إذا نظرنا إلى مجرد مفهوميهما و قطعنا النظر عن كون أحدهما علة أو مكيالا للآخر جزمنا بعدم اجتماعهما في ذات واحدة في زمان واحد من جهة واحدة و أما على أن التقابل بينهما بالتضاد فلأنه ليس بشيء من الأقسام الثلاثة الباقية للتقابل أما التضايف فلعدم كون الوحدة و الكثرة متكافئين - وجودا و تعقلا كما مر و المتضايغان يجب أن يكونا كذلك و أما القسمان الآخران - فلكون أحد المتقابلين فيهما سلبا للآخر و الوحدة لكونها مقومة للكثرة ليست سلبا لها و الكثرة لكونها مما يتقوم بالوحدة لا يكون سلبا لها و إلا لكان الشيء علة لعدمه و ما يقال من أن الضد لا يتقوم بضده فمجرد دعوى بلا دليل مع أن الواقع بخلافه ألا ترى أن البلقة ضد لكل واحد من السواد و البياض مع أنه يتقوم بهما.

بحث و تقويم:

كلام هذا القائل لا يخلو من تزلزل و اضطراب لأن الحكم على هذا التقابل بالتضاد بنفي كونه أحد الأقسام الباقية مع انتفاء شرط التضاد من جواز التعاقب على موضوع واحد و كون الطرفين على غاية

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ١٢٦

التباعد ليس أولى من الحكم عليه بكونه أحد البواقي فيكون تخصيصا من غير مخصص و أما قوله امتناع تقويم الضد بال ضد مجرد دعوى بلا دليل فهو افتراء لأن دليلهم أن الضدين متفاسدان فلا يمكن حصول ماهية حقيقية من ضدها و لا

من الضدين و الأبلق ليست له ماهية وحدانية بل وحدته بمجرد الفرض و الاعتبار فظهر أن لا حاصل لما ذكروا في بيان
تحصيل قسم من التقابل في تقابل الواحد و الكثير فيجب عليهم أن يجعلوا له قسما خامسا إلا أن المشهور ما ذكرناه من
الأقسام الأربعة مع خواصها و لوازمها

المرحلة السادسة في العلة و المعلول و فيه فصول

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ١٢٧

فصل (١) في تفسير العلة و تقسيمها

فنقول العلة لها مفهومان

أحدهما هو الشيء الذي يحصل من وجوده وجود شيء آخر و من عدمه عدم شيء آخر و ثانيهما هو ما يتوقف عليه
وجود الشيء - فيمتنع بعدمه و لا يجب بوجوده و العلة بالمعنى الثاني تنقسم إلى علة تامة و هي التي لا علة غيرها على
الاصطلاح الأول و إلى علة غير تامة تنقسم إلى صورة

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ١٢٨

و مادة و غاية و فاعل.

و القائل بأن إطلاق اسم العلة على هذه الأربعة بالاشتراك مخط لا سيما و يذكر - أن العلة تنقسم إلى كذا و إلى كذا بل
الحق أنها مقولة على الكل بالمعنى الثاني.

و ربما يقولون إن العلة إما أن يكون جزءا للشيء أو لا يكون و الجزء ينقسم إلى ما به يكون الشيء بالفعل و هي الصورة
و إلى ما به يكون الشيء بالقوة و هي المادة - و التي ليست بجزء إما أن يكون ما لأجله الشيء و هي الغاية أو ما يكون
به الشيء و هو الفاعل و قد يخص الفاعل بما منه الشيء المباين من حيث هو مباين و يسمى ما منه الشيء المقارن
باسم العنصر و المادة أيضا يختلف اعتبار عليتها إلى ما منها كالنوع العنصري و إلى ما فيها كالهيات فربما يجمع الجميع
في اسم العلة المادية لاشتراكها في معنى القوة و الاستعداد فيكون العلل أربعا.

و ربما يفصل فيكون خمسا و الصورة أيضا يختلف نحو تقويمها للمادة - و للمجموع منها و الأولى إرجاعها بالاعتبار
الأول إلى الفاعلية و إن كانت مع شريك غير مقارن موجب لإفادة هذه العلة و إقامة قرينها بها كما سيتضح بيانه في
بحث كيفية

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ١٢٩

التلازم بين المادة و الصورة فالصورة و إن كانت صورة للمادة لكن ليست علة صورية لها بل علة فاعلية لها فعلم من
ها هنا أيضا فساد ظن من خصص الفاعل بالغير المقارن و القابل أيضا إذا كان مبدءا لما فيه لا يكون مبدءا للصورة لتقدمها
عليه بل للعرض لتقومه أولا بالصورة بالفعل لأنه باعتبار ذاته إنما يكون بالقوة و ما بالقوة من جهة ما هو بالقوة لا يكون
مبدءا البتة و لكن يكون مبدءا لماهية المركب أو لوجود العرض بعد ما تقوم بالصورة.

و اتضح بما ذكرناه أن كل واحدة من المادة و الصورة مما يكون علة قريبة و بعيدة للمركب منهما باعتبارين أما الصورة

فإذا كانت صورة حقيقية مقولة من الجوهر - تكون مقومة للمادة بالفعل و المادة علة للمركب فيكون الصورة علة لعله المركب - بهذا الاعتبار و لكنه من حيث هي جزء صوري للمركب علة صورية له فلا واسطة بينهما - و أما المادة فإذا كان المركب ماهية صنفية و كانت الصورة هيئة عرضية تكون المادة موضوعا مقوما لذلك العرض الذي هو علة صورية للمركب الصنفي فكانت المادة علة المركب من هذه الجهة على أنها من حيث كونها جزءا للمركب علة مادية له فلا واسطة بينهما.

و بالجملة المادة و الصورة علتان قريبتان للمعلول من حيث هما جزءان له فيكون إحداهما علة صورية و الأخرى علة مادية و إذا كانت إحداهما علة المركب فليس نحو تقويمها للمركب هذا النحو بل المادة في تقويمها التوسيطي للمركب ليست علة مادية له و كذا الصورة في تقويمها التوسيطي للمركب ليست سببا صوريا.

ثم اعلم أن هذه العلل الأربع يوجد بينها مناسبات و ارتباطات كثيرة.

منها أن كل واحد من الفاعل و الغاية سبب للآخر

من جهة فالفاعل من جهة سبب للغاية و كيف لا و هو الذي يحصلها في الخارج و الغاية من جهة سبب

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ١٣٠

للفاعل و كيف لا و هي التي يفعل الفاعل لأجلها و لذلك إذا قيل لك لم تتراض فتقول لأصح و إذا قيل لم صححت فتقول لأنني ارتضت فالرياضة سبب فاعلي للصحة و الصحة سبب غائي للرياضة و الفاعل علة لوجود ماهية الغاية في العين - لا لكون الغاية غاية و لا لماهيتها و الغاية علة لكون الفاعل فاعلا.

و منها أن كل وحدات من المادة و الصورة سبب للآخرى بوجه آخر

كما أشير إليه.

و منها أن بعض هذه العلل مما يتحد مع بعض آخر

كما سيجيء أن فاعل الكل هو غاية الكل وجودا و عقلا و ربما يتفق أن يكون ماهية ثلاث منها و هي الفاعل و الصورة و الغاية ماهية واحدة فإن في الأب مبدءا لتكون الصورة الأدمية من النطفة و هو صورة الأدمية لا شيء آخر منه و ليس الحاصل في النطفة إلا صورة آدمية و هي أيضا الغاية التي يتحرك إليها النطفة لكنها من حيث تقوم مع المادة نوع الإنسان فهي صورة و من حيث يبتدي تحريكها منه فهي فاعلة و من حيث ينتهي تحريكها إليه فهي غاية فإذا قيست تلك الوحدة إلى المادة و المركب - كانت صورة و علة صورية باعتبارين و إذا قيست إلى الحركة كانت فاعلة مرة و غاية مرة فاعلة باعتبار ابتداء الحركة و هي صورة الأب و غاية باعتبار انتهاء الحركة - و هي صورة الابن كما فصل في كتاب الشفاء

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ١٣١

فصل (٢) في وجوب وجود العلة عند وجود معلولها و في وجوب وجود المعلول عند وجود علته

أما الأول فالمعلول لما كان في ذاته ممكن الوجود و العدم لما عرفت أن الوجوب و الامتناع يغنيان الشيء عن الحاجة إلى العلة فلا بد في رجحان أحد طرفيه على الآخر - من الاحتياج إلى المرجح و لا بد أن يكون ذلك المرجح حاصلًا

حال حصول ذلك الترجيح وإلا لكان غنيا عنه ثم المرجح للوجود لما امتنع أن يكون عديميا وجب أن يكون وجوديا فإذن لا بد من وجود المرجح حال حصول الراجح وهو المطلوب وأما الثاني فقال المحصلون إن واجب الوجود إذا كان مرجحا لوجود غيره فإما أن يكون لذاته المخصوصة - مرجحا لوجود ما سواه فلا يتقدم على وجود الممكنات غير ذاته أو لأمر لازم له كما يفرض صفة لذاته على ما يتوهمه العامة من أن له صفات واجبة الوجود فالمرجح دائم فيدوم الترجيح إذ لو حصل هو ولا يفرض معه من الصفات الدائمة ولم يحصل الشيء فليس مؤثر الوجود الممكنات بحيث لم يتوقف تأثيره على غيره وذلك لأن ما به يكون المؤثر مؤثرا متى تحقق فصدور الأثر عنه إما ممكن أو واجب فإن كان ممكنا استدعى سببا آخر مرجحا فحينئذ لا يصير المرجح مرجحا إلا مع ذلك المرجح الآخر وقد فرضنا أن مؤثره غير محتاج إلى شيء آخر هذا خلف ثم الكلام في صدور الأثر بعد انضمام ذلك المرجح باق فإما أن يلزم التسلسل أو يثبت أنه متى وجد المؤثر بتمامه وجب الأثر ودام بدوامه وأما إن كانت مؤثرته لا لذاته المخصوصة ولا لشيء من لوازم ذاته كانت لأمر منفصل وهو إن كان حادثا فالكلام فيه كالكلام في المعلول الأول ولا يتسلسل بل لا بد وأن ينتهي إلى واجب الوجود - فيعود الكلام إلى أنه يلزم دوامه بدوام علته وذلك لا يختلف بأن يسمى ذلك الحادث - وقتا أو مصلحة أو داعيا أو إرادة أو أي شيء كان.

فإن قيل الباري تعالى فاعل مختار ويجوز أن يختار باختيار قديم إحداث

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ١٣٢

شيء معين في زمان معين دون غيره من الأزمنة.

قلنا وهل أمكنه أن يختار الإيجاد في غير ذلك الوقت أم لم يمكن فإن لم يمكن ذلك فهو موجب لا مختار.

وأيضا وجب حينئذ تحقق الفعل مع كونه في ذلك الوقت في الأزل.

وأيضا عند وقوع ذلك الفعل يبطل الاختيار لإيقاعه فذلك الاختيار لا يكون واجبا وإلا لم يبطل عند وقوعه ولا من لوازم ذاته لما ذكرناه فلا بد وأن يكون وجوبه بعله أخرى لأن الذات لو كفت في وجوبه لما بطل عند وقوع الفعل بل دام بدوامها وليس كذلك وكونه واجبا بعله أخرى أيضا محال لأن ما عدا ذاته يستند إلى اختياره فلو كان اختياره مستندا إلى ما عدا ذاته يلزم الدور وإن كان يمكنه أن يختار إيقاع العالم في غير ذلك الوقت الذي اختار إيقاعه فيه لم يترجح أحد الاختيارين على الآخر إلا لمرجح وننقل الكلام إلى ذلك المرجح فهو إن كان اختيار آخر تسلسلت الاختيارات وانتهت إلى ذاته فعاد الكلام في صدور أول الصوادر عن ذاته سواء كان

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ١٣٣

اختيارا أو شيئا آخر فعند ذلك افترق الناس و تحزبوا أحزابا.

فمنهم من قال بجواز أن يختار المختار أحد الأمرين متساويين دون الآخر لا لأمر أوجب عليه ذلك كما أن الهارب من السبع إذا عن له طريقان متساويان من جميع الوجوه فإنه يسلك أحدهما باختياره دون الآخر لا لمرجح.

و منهم من قال شأن الإرادة تخصيص أحد الجانبين المتساويين بالوقوع - لا بناء على أولوية أو داع أو لمية بل لأن خاصية الإرادة أن ترجح أحد المتماثلين - من دون الحاجة إلى مرجح و لمية لأن كونها صفة مرجحة من الصفات

النفسية لها- و من لوازم الماهية و هي غير معللة فإن كون الإنسان حيوانا لا يعلل و لا كون المثلث ذا الزوايا بعلّة. و منهم من قال إنه تعالى عالم بجميع المعلومات فيعلم أنه أي المعلومات يقع و أيها لا يقع فما علم منه أنه سيقع يكون واجب الوقوع لأنه لو لم يقع كان علمه جهلا و إذا كان ذلك مختصا بالوقوع و غيره ممتنع الوقوع فلا جرم يريد ما يعلم أنه يقع و لا يريد غيره لأن إرادة المحال محال.

و منهم من قال إن أفعاله تعالى غير خالية عن المصالح و إن كنا لا نعلم تلك المصالح فتخصيص الباري بإيجاده بوقت معين لأجل كونه عالما بأن وقوعه في ذلك الوقت متضمن مصلحة يفوت إن وقع في غيره.

و منهم من قال عدم صدور الفعل عنه في الأزل ليس لأمر يرجع إلى الفاعل

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ١٣٤

بل لأمر يرجع إلى الفعل من حيث إن الفعل ما له أول و الأزل ما لا أول له و الجمع بينهما متناقض ممتنع.

أقول هذا القول مما له وجه صحيح لو تفتن قائله به كما سيظهر لك في حدوث عالم الأجسام.

و منهم من أثبت على واجب الوجود إرادات متجددة غير متناهية سابقة و لاحقة- و زعم أنه يفعل شيئا ثم يريد بعده شيئا آخر فيفعل ثم يريد.

و لنشرع في هدم بنیان هذه الأقوال و بيان الخلل فيها.

أما القول بأنه لم لا يجوز ترجيح أحد الاختيارين لا لمرجح فدفعه بوجهين - الأول أن الطريق إلى إثبات الصانع ينسد بسببه فإن الطريق إليه هو أن الجائز لا يستغني عن المؤثر فلو أبطنا هذه القاعدة لم يمكننا إثبات واجب الوجود.

الثاني ما سبق من بيان حاجة الممكن الوجود و العدم إلى السبب مع أنه معلوم بالبداهة و من أنكره عانده لسانا و أقر به ضميرا و ما أورده من الصور فما لم يتحقق هناك مرجح استحالة حصول أحد الجانبين فإن وجود المرجح غير العلم بوجوده و الضروري هو وجوده لا العلم به و ربما ينفك أحدهما عن الآخر و هذا مما يجده العاقل من نفسه أحيانا فإنه عند تساوي الدواعي للجهات يقف في موضعه و لا يتحرك ما لم يظهر مرجح.

و أما قول من قال كون الإرادة مرجحة صفة ذاتية و هي من خاصيتها فلا حاصل له فإن الإرادة إذا كان الجانبان بالنسبة إليها سواء لا يتخصص أحدهما إلا بمرجح

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ١٣٥

إذا لا يقع الممكن إلا بمرجح و أما الخاصية التي يدعونها فهو هوس ليس لو اختير الجانب الآخر الذي فرض مساويا لهذا الجانب كانت تلك الخاصية حاصلة معه أيضا- ثم تعلق الإرادة بشيء مع أن نسبتها إلى الجانبين متساوية غير معقول فإن الإرادة ما حصلت أولا إرادة بشيء ثم تعلقت فإن المرید لا يريد أي شيء اتفق و لا شيئا ما مطلقا فإنها من الصفات الإضافية و لا يعقل إرادة غير مضافة إلى شيء و لا أيضا مضافة إلى شيء ما على الإطلاق ثم يعرض لتلك الإرادة التخصيص ببعض جهات الإمكان- بل إذا وقع تصور و حصل إدراك مرجح لأحد الجانبين يحصل إرادة متخصصة بأحدهما- فالترجح متقدم على الإرادة و أما الذي ذكره ثالثا أنه يريد ما علم أنه سيقع فنقول علمه بوقوعه في وقت كذا إذا كان تابعا لوقوعه في ذلك الوقت المعين و لا شك أن تخصيص وقوعه- في ذلك الوقت تبع لقصد

إلى إيقاعه فيه فلو كان القصد إلى إيقاعه فيه تابعا لعلمه بوقوعه فيه لزم الدور.
و أيضا قد علمت بطلان شيئية المعدومات و أن الماهيات تابعة للوجودات

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ١٣٦

و ستعلم أن علمه تعالى سبب لتحصل الممكنات متقدم عليها لا أنه تابع لحصولها.
و أما الذي ذكره رابعا من رعاية مصالح العباد فنقول المصلحة المرتبة على وقوع الفعل في وقت معين إما أن يكون من لوازم وجود ذلك الفعل فحينئذ يترتب عليه متى وجد و ما يكون كذلك لا يكون مرجحا لوقت دون وقت و إما أن لا يكون من لوازم وجود ذلك الفعل فحينئذ ترتب تلك المصلحة على حصوله في ذلك الوقت دون سائر الأوقات من قبيل الجائزات فننقل الكلام إلى سبب التخصيص به دون غيره من الأوقات اللهم إلا أن يكون المؤثر في التخصيص بذلك الوقت ذات الوقت فيكون الوقت أمرا وجوديا - و لا وقت إلا و قبله وقت آخر فإذا كانت الأوقات موجودة و هي مترتبة لا محالة و ممكنة الوجود و صادرة عن البارئ تعالى فمؤثرته تعالى تكون دائما و هو المطلوب - و أيضا فكيف يقنع العاقل من عقله بأن يقول لو زاد في مقدار هذا العالم بما لا يحصى أضعاف أضعافه بطلت مصالح العباد و لو قدم خلقه على الوقت المعين زمانا لا يحصى أضعاف أضعافه بطلت مصالحهم.
و أيضا يلزم أن يكون فعل الله المطلق معللا بغيره و أما قولهم إنما يحصل سابقا لامتناع الفعل فهذا و إن كان له وجه في جزئيات الأفعال و خصوصيات الطبائع المتجددة بهوياتها الشخصية لكن يمتنع القول به في مطلق الصنع و الإيجاد

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ١٣٧

لما سنبنين أن الممكن إنما يفتقر إلى العلة لإمكانه لا لحدوثه و أنه لا يجب في الفعل المطلق سبق عدم و أن كون العالم ممكن الحدوث ليس له ابتداء إذ لا وقت يفرض لأن يكون أول أوقات الإمكان للشيء إلا و هو ممكن الحدوث قبله - ثم تخصيص الشيء بوقته و كونه مسبقا بعدم الخاص الزماني إنما يوجد و يحصل بعد وجود الزمان كما أن تخصيصه بمكان خاص دون غيره إنما يتحقق بعد وجود المكان.

وهم وإزالة:

قال بعضهم إن العالم سواء كانت قديم الذات أو لم يكن فلا يخلو عن صفات حادثة و تغيرات و استحالات لا ينفك عن زوال شيء و حدوث آخر فبأي طريق وقع الاستناد إلى الواجب تعالى في هذه الحوادث - فليقع في استناد أصل العالم إليه مع أن يكون محدثا و دفع بأن العلة قد تكون معدة و قد تكون مؤثرة أما المعدة فيجوز تقدمها على المعلول إذ هي غير مؤثرة في وجود المعلول بل هي تقرب الأثر إلى المعلول و أما المؤثرة فإنها يجب أن تكون مقارنة للأثر موجودة معه مثاله في الأفعال الطبيعية هو أن الثقل علة للهوى فكما وصل الثقل منتها إلى حد من حدود المسافة في هوية يصير ذلك الانتهاء سببا لاستعداد - أن يهوى منه إلى الحد الذي يليه فالعلة المؤثرة في الوصول إلى كل حد هي الثقل - و المعدة هي الحركة السابقة على ذلك الوصول فهذه الطريقة يمكن استناد الحوادث - بواسطة حركة يقرب العلة إلى المعلول و يجعل المادة مستعدة لقبول التأثير إلى سبب قديم مؤثر في وجود العالم بجميع أفراد و أجزائه السابقة و اللاحقة فإن كل شيء فرض أول الحوادث أو ابتداءها فلا بد و أن يكون قبله حركة و تغير ليكون سببا لحدوث

الاستعداد و قرب المناسبة لذلك الحادث من المفيض.

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ١٣٨

و من هاهنا يحصل مبدأ برهان آخر على دوام الفاعلية و عدم انقطاع الفيض و الوجود على الممكنات و بيانه أن هذه الحوادث لا بد لها من أسباب و لا بد و أن يكون أسبابها حادثة أو بمداخلة أمور حادثة فيما أن يكون حدوثها لحدوث علتها المؤثرة دفعة أو لحدوث علتها المعدة المقربة لعلتها منها و الأول يوجب وجود علل - و معلولات غير متناهية دفعة و هو محال فإذن حدوثها لأجل حدوث قرب من علتها - و ذلك القرب لأجل علة معدة يصير الحادث بها مستعدا لقبول الفيض عن واهب الصور - فتلك الأمور المتعاقبة إما أن يكون إنيات الوجود و هو محال كما ستعلم و مع محاليته لا يكون بينها اتصال فلا يحصل المواصلة و الارتباط بين الحادث و بينها فلم يكن السابق ضروري الانتهاء إلى اللاحق فلم تكن معدة فيبقى أن تلك الأمور المتعاقبة كشيء واحد متصل لا حدود له بالفعل و ذلك الشيء إما هوية اتصالية متدرجة الوجود لذاته أو ما يتعلق بها كالزمان و الحركة فثبت أن السبب القريب لحدوث الحوادث أمر متقضى متجدد على نعت الاتصال غير مركب من أمور آنية غير منقسمة و هذا من مبادي العلم الطبيعي - به تثبت مسألة إبطال الجزء الذي لا يتجزى و اتصال الجوهر الجسماني فظهر أنه يمتنع حدوث حادث إلا و قبله حادث آخر لا إلى نهاية و للمخالفين لهذا الأصل مسلكان الأول أن الفعل لا يكون إلا بعد سبق العدم و الأزل ما لا أول له و الجمع بينها تناقض و الآخر أن كون الحركات و الحوادث لا أول لها ممتنع من وجوه سيأتي بيانها و بيان دفعها

فصل (٣) في أن ما مع العلة هل يكون متقدما على المعلول

ذكر الشيخ في النهج السادس من الإشارات أن ما مع العلة المتقدمة على المعلول

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ١٣٩

لا يجب تقدمه على المعلول لأن تقدم العلة على المعلول ليس بالزمان حتى يجب أن يكون ما معه متقدما عليه أيضا بالزمان بل ذلك التقدم لأجل العلية و الذي مع العلة إذا لم يكن علة لم يكن له تقدم بالعية و إذا لم يكن تقدم بالزمان و لا بالعية فليس هناك تقدم أصلا.

قال بعض العلماء و فيه بحث و هو أنه ليس كل تقدم إما بالعية و إما بالزمان حتى يلزم من عدمهما عدم التقدم أصلا بل من أقسام التقدم ما يكون بالطبع - كتقدم الواحد على الاثنين فيجوز أن يكون تقدم ما مع العلة للشيء تقدما آخر غير تقدم ما بالعية و الزمان.

أقول ليس غرض الشيخ نفي سائر التقدّمات عن الذي مع التقدم بالعية بل التقدم الذي بإزاء المعية فإن المراد من ما مع العلة ما يكون معيته هذه المعية التي بالقياس إلى التقدم بالعية فأشار إلى قاعدة كلية و هي أن ما مع الشيء المتقدم في بعض التقدّمات يكون متقدما أيضا كتقدم المعلول الآخر و في بعضها ليس كذلك - فمن قبيل الأول ما مع المتقدم بالزمان فإنه لا بد و أن يكون متقدما أيضا بالزمان - و من قبيل الثاني ما مع المتقدم بالعية على شيء إذ لا يتقدم هذا التقدم على ذلك الشيء

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ١٤٠

و كذا الحال فيما مع المتقدم بالطبع كالجنس و خاصته كالحيوان و الماشي فإن الأول متقدم بالطبع على الإنسان دون الآخر و هما متأخران جميعا عن الجنس العالي كالجوهر و كذا من قبيل الأول أيضا ما مع المتقدم بالشرف لأنه الذي له فضيلة كفضيلة ذلك المتقدم فيكون ذا تقدم في الفضيلة مثل تقدمه و كذا إذا كان أحدهما متأخرا في الفضيلة عن واحد و هكذا المتقدم بالرتبة كتقدم الحيوان و ما معه فصلا مقوما أو خاصة بالرتبة على الإنسان مثلا إذا كان المبدأ هو الجنس العالي و على الجوهر إذا كان المبدأ زيدا مثلا.

ثم إن هاهنا بحثا آخر مع الشيخ قد توهمه الإمام الرازي و ذكر في سائر كتبه - من أنه حكم بأن الفلك الحاوي مع علة الفلك المحوي إذا صدرا عن علة واحدة فيكونان معين ثم إن علة المحوي متقدمة عليه و لا يمكن للحاوي تقدم عليه - لأن وجود المحوي و عدم الخلا في الحاوي متلازمان معا فلو احتاج وجود المحوي إلى الحاوي لاحتاج عدم الخلا إليه فيكون عدم الخلا محتاجا إلى الغير و ما يحتاج إلى الغير كان ممكنا لذاته فعدم الخلا ممكن لذاته هذا خلف ثم ذكر الشيخ في السماء و العالم من الشفاء في بيان تأخر الأجرام العنصرية - عن الإبداعات بالطبع فقال ثبت أن الإبداعات علل لتحدد أحيائها و أحيائها معها بالذات و المتقدم على المعلول متقدم فلما كان الإبداعات متقدمة على أحياء العنصریات - وجب تقدمها على العنصریات.

قال هذا الكلام تصريح بأن المتقدم على المعلول متقدم و الكلام الأول

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ١٤١

تصريح بأن ما مع المتقدم ليس بمتقدم و لا بد من فرق بين الموضوعين يدفع به التناقض و هو مشكل جدا. أقول لا تناقض أصلا و الفرق بين الموضوعين في غاية الوضوح و الانجلاء فإن المعية بالعلية عبارة عن معية أمرين هما معلولا علة واحدة و التقدم بالعلة إما نفس كون الشيء علة أو ما يلزم ذلك ثم إن ذلك الشيء الواحد لا يكون له علتان و قد يكون له معلولان فالمعلولان هما معان و هما متأخران عن علتتهما فما مع المتأخر متأخر لا محالة و لكن إذا كان أحد المعين علة لشيء متقدما عليه فيمتنع أن يكون المعلول الآخر علة له أيضا و إلا لزم اجتماع علتين على معلول واحد فلا إشكال.

و العجب أن المحقق الطوسي ذهل عن هذا الفرق الواضح الجلي و تكلف في الجواب شيئا آخر مما لا وجه له و هو أن المعية قد تكون بالذات و قد تكون لا بالذات و بالطبع بل بمجرد الاتفاق و لا شك أن وقوع اسم المعلول في الموضوعين - ليس بمعنى واحد فلعل الفرق هو تلك المبينة المعنوية

فصل (٤) في إبطال الدور و التسلسل في العلل و المعلولات

و يمكن التعبير عنهما بعبارة جامعة و هي أن يتراعى عروض العلية و المعلولية

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ١٤٢

لا إلى نهاية بأن يكون كل ما هو معروض للعلية معروضا للمعلولية فإن كانت المعروضات متناهية العدد فهو الدور بمرتبة إن كانت اثنين أو بمراتب إن كانت فوق الاثنين و إلا فهو التسلسل

أما بطلان الدور

فلأنه يستلزم تقدم الشيء على نفسه - و تأخره عن نفسه و حاجته إلى نفسه و الكل ضروري الاستحالة لأن الشيء إذا كان علة لشيء كان مقدما عليه بمرتبة و إذا كان الآخر مقدما عليه كان الشيء مقدما على نفسه بمرتبتين هذا في الدور المصرح ثم كلما يزيد عدد الواسطة يزيد عدد مراتب تقدم الشيء على نفسه مع مرتبة أخرى يزيد عليها. و أيضا ربما يستدل بأن التقدم و التأخر أو التوقف أو الاحتياج نسب - لا تعقل إلا بين شيئين و بأن نسبة المحتاج إليه إلى المحتاج بالوجوب و عكسها بالإمكان.

و الكل ضعيف أما حكاية النسب فليس كل نسبة مما يقتضي التغير الخارجي - بل ربما يكفي التغير الاعتباري كالعاقلية و المعقولية و أما حكاية الإمكان و الوجوب فالوجوب لا ينافي الإمكان في التحقق فإن نسبة الإمكان إلى الوجوب

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ١٤٣

نسبة النقص إلى الكمال نعم هما مختلفان بحسب الاعتبار فالمصير إلى ما ذكر أولا. فإن قلت إن أريد بتقدم الشيء على نفسه التقدم بالزمان فغير لازم في العلة - أو التقدم بالعلة فهو نفس المدعى لأن قولنا الشيء لا يتقدم على نفسه بمنزلة قولنا الشيء لا يكون علة لنفسه. قلنا المراد بالتقدم المعنى المصحح لقولنا وجد فوجد على ما هو اللازم في كون الشيء علة لشيء بمعنى أنه ما لم يوجد العلة لم يوجد المعلول ألا ترى أنه يصح أن يقال - وجدت حركة اليد فوجدت حركة الخاتم - و لا يصح أن يقال وجدت حركة الخاتم فوجدت حركة اليد و هذا المعنى بديهي الاستحالة - بالنظر إلى الشيء و نفسه - فإن قلت يجوز أن يكون الشيء علة لما هو علة له من غير لزوم تقدمه على نفسه و سند المنع وجهان. أحدهما أن المحتاج إلى المحتاج إلى الشيء لا يلزم أن يكون محتاجا إلى ذلك الشيء - فإن العلة القريبة للشيء كافية في تحقيقه من غير احتياج إلى البعيدة و إلا لزم تخلف الشيء عن علته القريبة. و ثانيهما أن يكون الشيء بماهيته علة لشيء هو علة لوجود ذلك الشيء. قلنا اللزوم ضروري و السند مدفوع لأنه ما لم يوجد العلة البعيد للشيء لم يوجد القريبة و ما لم يوجد القريبة لم يوجد ذلك الشيء و هو معنى الاحتياج و التخلف إنما يلزم لو وجدت القريبة بدون البعيدة من غير وجود المعلول و لأن كون ماهية الشيء علة لما هو علة لوجوده مع أنه ظاهر الاستحالة لما فيه من وجود المعلول

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ١٤٤

قبل وجود العلة ليس مما نحن فيه أعني الدور المفسر بتوقف الشيء على ما يتوقف عليه لتعدد الجهات في الموقوف عليه كما أن الصورة تتوقف على المادة بجهة و توقفت عليها المادة بجهة أخرى.

و أما بيان استحالة التسلسل فلو جوه كثيرة

الأول ما أفاده الشيخ في الهيئات الشفاء

و هو أنه بعد ما حقق أن علة الشيء بالحقيقة هي التي تكون موجودة معه - نقول إذا فرضنا معلولا و فرضنا له علة و لعلته علة فليس يمكن أن يكون لكل علة بغير نهاية لأن المعلول و علته و علة علته إذا اعتبرت جملتها في القياس الذي

لبعضها إلى بعض كانت علة العلة علة أولى مطلقة للآخرين و كان للآخرين نسبة المعلولية إليها وإن اختلفا في أن أحدهما معلول بالواسطة و الآخر معلول بلا واسطة و لم يكونا كذلك لا الأخير و لا المتوسط لأن المتوسط الذي هو العلة المماسية للمعلول علة لشيء واحد فقط و المعلول ليس علة لشيء و لكل واحد من الثلاثة خاصية فكانت خاصية الطرف المعلول أنه ليس علة لشيء و خاصية الطرف الآخر أنه علة لكل غيره و خاصية الوسط أنه علة لطرف و معلول لطرف سواء كان الوسط واحداً أو فوق واحد و إن كان فوق واحد فسواء ترتب ترتيباً متناهيًا أو غير متناه فإنه إن ترتب كثرة متناهية كانت جملة عدد ما بين الطرفين كواسطة واحدة - يشترك في خاصية الواسطة بالقياس إلى الطرفين فيكون لكل من الطرفين خاصية - و كذلك إن ترتب في كثرة غير متناهية فلم يحصل الطرف كان جميع الغير المتناهي في خاصية الواسطة لأنك أي جملة أخذت كانت علة لوجود المعلول الأخير و كانت معلولة إذ كل واحد منها معلول و الجملة متعلقة الوجود بها و متعلقة الوجود

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ١٤٥

بالمعلول معلول إلا أن تلك الجملة شرط في وجود المعلول الأخير و علة له و كلما زدت في الحصر و الأخذ كان الحكم إلى غير النهاية باقياً فليس يجوز أن يكون جملة علل موجودة و ليس فيها علة غير معلولة و علة أولى فإن جميع غير المتناهي كواسطة بلا طرف و هذا محال انتهت عبارته و هذا أسد البراهين في هذا الباب.

و الثاني برهان التطبيق

و عليه التعويل في كل عدد ذي ترتيب موجود سواء كان من قبيل العلل و المعلولات أو من قبيل المقادير و الأبعاد أو الأعداد الوضعية هو أنه لو وجدت سلسلة غير متناهية ينقص من طرفها المتناهي شيئاً واحداً أو متناهيًا - فيحصل جملتان إحداها يبتدي من المفروض جزءاً أخيراً و الأخرى من الذي فوقه - ثم يطبق بينهما فإن وقع بإزاء كل جزء من التامة جزء من الناقصة لزم تساوي الكل و الجزء و هو محال و إن لم يقع كذلك فلا يتصور ذلك إلا بأن يوجد جزء من التامة لا يكون بإزائه جزء من الناقصة فلزم منه انقطاع الناقصة بالضرورة و التامة لا تزيد عليها إلا بواحد أو متناه كما هو المفروض فلزم تناهيها أيضاً ضرورة أن الزائد على المتناهي بالمتناهي متناه.

و اعترض عليه بوجهين

أحدهما نقض أصل الدليل

بأنه لو صح لزم أن تكون الأعداد متناهية لأننا نفرض جملة من الواحد إلى غير النهاية و أخرى من الاثنين إلى غير النهاية ثم نطبق بينهما فيلزم تناهي الأعداد و تناهي الأعداد باطل بالاتفاق و أن تكون معلومات الله تعالى متناهية إذا نطبق بينها و بين الناقصة منها بواحدة و أن تكون الحركات الفلكية متناهية لتطبيق بين سلسلة من هذه الدورة

الحكمة المتعالية في الاسفار العقلية الاربعة، ج ٢، ص ١٤٦

و أخرى من الدورة التي قبلها و تناهيها باطل عند الفلاسفة

و ثانيهما نقض المقدمة القائلة بأن إحدى الجملتين إذا كانت أنقص من الأخرى لزم انقطاعهما

